

Human Virtue.

Divine Virtue.

Social Virtue.

Christian Virtue.

J. Munde. Sc.

THE
CHRISTIAN LIFE,
FROM ITS BEGINNING TO ITS CONSUMMATION in GLORY WITH Proper and Useful INDEXES.

BY

JOHN SCOTT, D. D.

Rector of St. Giles's in the Fields.

The NINTH EDITION.

L O N D O N :

Printed for JAMES and JOHN KNAPTON, JOHN DARBY, ARTHUR BLETESWORTH, FRANCIS FAYRAM, JOHN PEMBERTON, JOHN • OSBORN and THOMAS LONGMAN, CHARLES RIVINGTON, BENJAMIN MOTTL, FRANCIS CLAY, JEREMIAH BATLEY, and AARON WARD.

M. DCC. XXIX.

T O T H E
Right Honourable

A N D

Right Reverend Father in GOD,
H E N R Y
Lord Bishop of L O N D O N,

And one of His Majesty's most Honourable Privy-Council; &c.

My LORD,

THAT I presume to lay these Papers at your Lordship's feet, is not because I imagine they deserve, but because I am conscious they need so great a Patronage. Not but that, were the Discourses they contain as great and meritorious as their Argument, they might safely shelter themselves under their own Deserts, and challenge Homage, instead of begging Protection: But tho I have done my best Endeavour to treat this great Theme suitably to its own Native Majesty, yet I am very sensible it hath not escaped the too common Fate of all such sublime and excellent Subjects, which is to be foul'd and sully'd by coarse handling. But my Lot falling in this unhappy Age, wherein the best Church and Religion in the World are in such apparent Danger of being Crucified, like that blessed Author, between those Two Thieves (and both, alas, impenitent ones) Superstition and Enthusiasm, I thought myself obliged not to sit still, as an unconcern'd Spectator of the Tragedy, but in my little Sphere, and according to my poor Ability, to endeavour its Prevention: And considering that the most effectual Means the Romanists have used to subvert this Church, which they so much envy, and all the Reformation do so much admire and depend on, hath been to divide her own Children from her, and arm them against her, by starting new Opinions among them, and engaging their Zeal (which was wont to be imploy'd to better Purposes) in hot Disputes about the Modes and Circumstances of her Worship:

The Epistle Dedicatory.

I thought a Discourse of the Christian Life, which is the proper Sphere of Christian Zeal, might be a good Expedient to take Men off from those dangerous Contentions which were kindled and are fed and blown by such as design our common Ruin. For sure, did our People thorowly understand what 'tis to be Christians indeed, and how much Duty that implies, they could never find so much Leisure as they do to quarrel and wrangle about Trifles.

This, my Lord, is the sincere Design of what I here present to your Lordship; and however it may succeed, I have this Satisfaction, that I meant well, and have express'd my Goodwill to this poor envied Church, whose truly primitive Constitution, pure and undefiled Religion, I shall always admire and reverence; and whatsoever her Fate may be, I am chain'd to her Fortunes by my Reason and Conscience, and shall ever esteem it more eligible to be crush'd by her Fall, which God avert, than to flourish and triumph on her Ruins.

But among the many ill Omens that threaten our Church, there is one which seems to presage its Prosperity; and that is that such Eminent Stations in it, as your Lordship's, are so excellently supplied. For altho whether the Part you are designed for, be to grace her Triumphs or her Funeral, is known only to the Sovereign Disposer of Events; yet this, my Lord, all that wish well to our Church conclude, that God bestow'd You upon her as a Token of Love. For which they have sufficient Warrant even from the Daily Experience they have of the Prudence and Vigilance of your Government; the Piety, Integrity, and Generosity of your Temper; of your invincible Loyalty to your Prince; your undaunted Zeal for the Reformed Religion, and your grave and obliging Deportment towards all you converse with. I shall trouble your Lordship no farther, but conclude this Address with that which I am sure is the hearty Prayer of all your honest Clergy, That the God of Heaven would long continue your Lordship a Blessing to the Church, and to this Diocese, an Honour to your Sacred Order, and the Noble Stock you descend from; and if what I here present, prove but so prosperous as to do some Good in the World, and obtain your Lordship's Acceptance, it will be a noble Compensation of this well-meant Endeavour. I am,

Your Lordship's most Humble and most Obedient Servant,

JOHN SCOTT.

THE PREFACE.

I Shall not trouble the Reader with a long Apology for the Publication of the ensuing Treatise, tho I might plead (as other Authors do) the Importunity of Friends, whose Judgments I very much reverence. For to say the Truth, I do by no means think that in an Affair of this Nature, it is safe or fit for a Man to be over-borne by the Persuasions of those, whose Judgments he hath just cause to suspect may be brib'd by their Friendships: And therefore had I not hoped that in such an Age as this, (wherein, thro' our own Divisions and Debaucheries, both in Opinion and Practice, and the Hellish Contrivances of our Enemies, we have such a dismal Prospect of Things before us) these Papers might be of some Use to Religion and the Souls of Men, I would never have troubled the World with them; but hoping they might, I have ventured upon that reason to publish them.

I have for some Years been a sorrowful Spectator of the black Cloud that is gathering over my Native Country, and I must confess have not been without my share of the Fears and Anxieties of the Age: but being at last quite sick of looking downwards upon this uncomfortable Scene of Things, I had no other way to relieve my oppressed Thoughts, but to raise them above this miserable World, and entertain them with the Comforts of Religion, and the Hopes of a better State beyond the Grave; wherein, I thank God, I have found such Rest and Satisfaction of Mind, as render'd my blackest Apprehensions of the ensuing Storm very tolerable. And now because I would not eat my Morsel alone, and enjoy my Satisfaction to myself, I have endeavour'd, by this following Treatise of Heaven, and the Way thither, to break and distribute it among my distressed Neighbours; that so by carrying their Minds from these dismal Expectations into the quiet and happy Regions above, and directing their Lives and Actions thither, I might communicate to them the blessed Art how to live happily in a distracted World. And methinks, when our present State is so perplex'd and uncertain, we should be more than ordinarily concern'd to make sure of something, and to provide for a future Well-being, that so we may not be miserable in both Worlds.. As for the Argument I have undertaken, I may, without breach of Modesty, say, it is a great and a noble one; it is the Christian Life, which, next to the Angelical, approaches nearest to the Life of God. But as for the Management of it, all that I can say, is this, I have employ'd my best Thoughts and Skill about it; and if, after this, I have any where wrong'd or misrepresented it, it is more my Unhappiness than my Fault. Perhaps it may be thought that in the First Three Chapters, I have discours'd more speculatively than 'tis fit in a Book that is design'd for common Use and Edification; but it may be, when the Reader hath considered the Nature of the Arguments I have there handled, and how necessarily they fall in with my Design, he will be convinc'd that 'twas unavoidable. And yet I doubt not, but with a little Diligence and Attention of Mind, the plainest Reader may be able to comprehend the main Reason and Evidence of what I drive at.

The P R E F A C E.

In the First Place, I thought 'twould be necessary, in treating of the Christian Life, to give some Account of the blessed End it refers to, that so from the Nature of that, we might be the better able to judge of the Necessity and Usefulness of those Means which Christianity prescribes in order to it. And this I have endeavour'd in the First Chapter; where I have only so far explain'd the Nature of the Heavenly State and Felicities, as 'was necessary to light and conduct us thro' the ensuing Design.

In the Second Place, I judg'd it would be no less expedient to give some general Account of what kinds of Means are necessary to our obtaining this End; that so we might be convinced how requisite both the principal and instrumental Parts of the Christian Life are to our Everlasting Happiness. And this I have attempted in the Second Chapter; wherein, from the Consideration of the vast Distance there is between the pure and blessed State of Heaven, and this corrupt and degenerate State of Human Nature, I have endeavour'd to shew that 'tis not only necessary for us to practise and acquire those Christian Virtues, in the Perfection whereof the Heavenly Bliss consists; but that to enable us to practise, acquire and improve them, there are sundry other instrumental Duties indispensibly necessary; which Duties, as I have there proved, are of no other Use or

2

Signi-

The P R E F A C E.

Significancy in Religion, than as they are Means of Virtue and Piety.

And having thus distributed the Means into their proper Kinds and Order, I have in the Third Chapter treated largely of the First Kind, to wit, the Practice of the Christian Virtues; in which, I confess, I have neither handled the particular Virtues in their full Extent and Latitude, nor enforc'd them with all their moral Reasons; that being done already to excellent purpose in those Two incomparable Treatises of Holy Living and Dying, and of The Whole Duty of Man. Nor could I have done it without swelling this Discourse, which is large enough already, into a Volume too large for common Use. And indeed, all that was necessary to my Purpose, was only so far to explain the Nature of each particular Virtue, as that the Reader might thereby understand what is meant by them: But that which most concern'd me in pursuance of my main Design, was to prove, that the Practice of every Virtue is an essential Part of the Christian Life, and a necessary Means to the blessed End of it. And accordingly, as I have shewn from the exprefs Commands of our Religion, our indispensable Obligation to practice every Virtue; so I have endeavour'd to shew how in the Practice of it we do naturally grow up to the Heavenly State: as, on the contrary, how in the course of a sinful Life, we do by a necessary Inefficiency gradually sink ourselves into the State of the Damned. For I have proved at large, that there is something of Heaven and Hell in the very Nature of each particular Virtue and Vice, and that in the Perfection of these Two opposite Qualities consists the main Happiness and Misery of those Two opposite States. From whence it will necessarily follow, that as in the Practice of the one or t'other we grow more Virtuous or Vicious; so proportionably we rise up towards Heaven, or sink down towards Hell, by a fatal Tendency of Nature. The Truth of which is not only acknowledged by the generality of Christian Writers, but also by the best and wisest of the Heathen Philosophers; tho' this I think, is the First Attempt that hath been made to derive the Heavenly and the Hellish States from the nature of the particular Virtues and Vices. I pray God that what I have said may but engage some more skilful Pen in the Prosecution of this noble Argument. For I know nothing in the World that can be more effectual to engage Men to be substantially Religious, to take them off from Hypocrisy and Formality, from all presumptuous Hopes, and false false Dependencies, than their being thorowly convinc'd of this Truth, That the Eternal Happiness or Misery of Souls, is founded in their Virtue or Vice; and that there is as inseparable a Connexion between Grace and Glory, Sin and Hell, as there is between Fire and Heat, Frost and Cold, or any other necessary Cause and its Effect. For if they were but thorowly perswaded of this, they would easily discern what wretched Nonsense it is, to think of going to Heaven, or escaping Hell, whilst they continue in any wilful Course of Disobedience to the Laws of Virtue.

The P R E F A C E.

Having thus treated at large of the First Sort of Means by which the End of our Christian Life is to be obtained, I proceed in the Fourth Chapter, which is the largest of all, to give an Account of the Second, viz. the Instrumental Duties of Christianity, which are injoin'd us as Means subservient to our Practice, Acquisition and Improvement of those Heavenly Virtues in the Perfection whereof our chief Happiness consists. And for the more distinct handling of these, I have considered Men under a Threecfold State, with respect to the Christian Life; First, as entering into it; Secondly, as actually engaged in it; Thirdly, as perfecting and improving themselves by Perseverance in it; to each of which I have appropriated such of the Instrumental Duties as I conceive did more especially belong to them. 'Tis true, some of the Duties here treated of, are not purely instrumental, but of a mix'd Nature, such as Faith, Prayer, actual Dedication of our good Works to God, &c. which are essential Parts of Divine Worship, and, as such, do belong to those Divine Virtues, the Perfection whereof makes a Principal Part of the everlasting Happiness of Souls. But here I have considered them only as Means and Instruments in the Use of which we are to acquire and perfect those Beatifical Virtues. And of this sort of Means, I do not remember any one Particular recommended in Holy Scripture, but what hath been here treated of. Upon some, indeed, I have insisted much more briefly than upon others, because I find them already largely accounted for in other Practical Books, and especially in those Two excellent Treatises above-named; but those which they either cursorily touch, or take no notice of at all, I thought myself obliged to give a larger Account of.

From

The P R E F A C E.

From the whole, I would recommend to the pious Reader the Consideration of the admirable Structure and Contrivance of the Practical Part of Christianity, which having proposed to us an End so great and sublime, and so highly worthy of our most vigorous Prosecutions, hath also furnish'd us with such choice and effectual Means of all sorts to attain it. The Consideration of which would be in itself a great Inducement to me to believe Christianity a Divine Religion, tho I were utterly unacquainted with its External Evidence and Motives of Credibility. For it can never enter into my Head, that such a rare and exquisite Contrivance to make Men good and happy, could ever owe its Original to the mere Invention of a Carpenter's Son, and a Company of illiterate Fishermen. Especially considering how far it excels the Moral Precepts even of those Divine Philosophers who believed a future State of a blessed Immortality, and exercised their best Wit, in prescribing Rules to guide and direct Men thither.

And having given this large Account of the Instrumental Duties of the Christian Life, and also enforced the several Divisions of them with proper Arguments and Motives, I thought fit to add a Fifth Chapter, wherein I have given some Rules for the more profitable reading of this Practical Discourse, and also some general Directions for the Exercise of our private Religion, in all the different States of the Christian Life, together with certain Forms of private Devotion, fitted for each State. In which I have supposed, what I doubt is a very deplorable Truth, viz. That the generality of Christians, after their Initiation by Baptism into the Publick Profession of Christianity, are so unhappy as to be seduced either thro' bad Example or Education into a vicious State of Life; and that consequently from thence they must take their First start into the thorow Practice of Christianity. Not that I make the least doubt, but that there are a great many excellent Christians, who, by the blessing of God upon their pious Education, have been secured from this Calamity, and trained up from their Infancy under a prevailing Sense of God and Religion; and therefore for such as these, as there is no need of that solemn Method of Repentance, prescribed in the First Section of the Fourth Chapter, so neither is there of those First Penitential Prayers in this Fifth Chapter, which is accommodated to that State. For these Persons have long since been actually engaged in the Christian Life, and, as 'tis to be supposed, have made considerable siderable Improvements in it, and therefore as they are only concern'd in the Duties of the Second and Third States of the Christian Life, so they are only to use the Prayers which are fitted to those States, which with some variation of those Phrases, which suppose the past Course of our Life to have been vicious, they may easily accommodate to their own Condition. But the Design of this Discourse is not only to conduct them onwards in their Way, who have already entered upon the Christian Life, but also to reduce those to it, who have been so unhappy as to wander into vicious Courses; or rather, tho it serves both Purposes, 'tis wholly designed for the same Persons, viz. to seek and bring back those lost Sheep who have stray'd from the Paths of Christian Piety and Virtue, and then to lead them on thro' all the intermediate Stages to the happy State of immortal Pleasures at the end of them. And now if what hath been said, should by the Blessing of God, obtain its designed Effect upon any Person, I ask no other Requital for all the Pains it hath cost me, but his earnest Prayers to God for me, that after my best Endeavours to guide and direct him to Heaven, I may not fall short of it myself.

The P R E F A C E.

The CONTENTS.

PART I.

CHAP. I. Concerning the ultimate End of the Christian Life.	Page 1
Chap. II. Concerning the Means by which this Great End of the Christian Life is to be attained.	10
Chap. III. Concerning the Heavenly Part of the Christian Life, which is the Proximate Means of obtaining Heaven; shewing what Virtues it consists of, and how much every Virtue contributes to the Happiness of Heaven.	18
SECT. 1. Concerning those Human Virtues which belong to a Man as he is a Reasonable Animal, shewing that they are all included in the heavenly Part of the Christian Life, and that the Practice of them effectually conduces to our future Happiness.	ibid.
SECT. 2. Concerning those Divine Virtues which belong to a Man, considered as a reasonable Creature, related to God; shewing that these also are comprehended in the heavenly Part of the Christian Life, and that the Practice of them effectually conduces to our future Happiness.	33
SECT. 3. Concerning the Social Virtues, shewing that these also are included in the heavenly Part of the Christian Life, and that in their Natures they very much contribute to our heavenly Happiness.	53
SECT. 4. Wherein for a Conclusion of this Chapter, some Motives and Considerations are proposed to persuade Men to the Practice of those heavenly Virtues.	67
Chap. IV. Concerning the Militant or Warfaring Part of the Christian Life, by which we are to acquire and perfect the heavenly Virtues; shewing how effectually all the Duties of it conduce thereunto.	75
SECT. 1. Concerning the Duties that are proper to our Beginning and Entrance into this warfaring Part of our Christian Life, shewing how they all conduce to the subduing of Sin, and acquiring the heavenly Virtues.	ibid.
SECT. 2. Wherein some Motives are urged to persuade Men to the Practice of those Duties that are proper to the Beginning of the Christian Warfare.	85
SECT. 3. Concerning the Second Part of the Christian Warfare, with a particular Account of the Duties thereunto appertaining.	90
SECT. 4. Containing certain Motives to animate Men against the Difficulty of these Duties, which appertain to the Course of our Christian Warfare.	117
SECT. 5. Concerning those Duties which appertain to the Perfection and Consummation of the Christian Warfare, shewing what they are, and how effectually they conduce to the perfecting us in the Virtues of the Heavenly Life.	125
SECT. 6. Containing certain Motives to press Men to the Practice of these Duties of Perseverance in the Christian Warfare.	147
Chap. V. Containing some short Directions for the more profitable reading the preceding Discourse, and also for the Conduct and regular Exercise of our Closet Religion in all the different States of a Christian Life; together with Forms of Private Devotion fitted to each State.	155

PART II.

CHAP. I. Concerning the Being and Nature of Moral Goodness.	179
SECT. 1. That there is such an Intrinsick Good in some human Actions, as renders them for ever necessary and obliging to us.	181
SECT. 2. That God hath sufficiently discovered to us what those human Actions are, which are morally Good, and upon that Account perpetually obliging.	186
SECT. 3. That those Actions, which carry with them this perpetual Obligation, are the Main and Principal Parts of Religion.	194
Chap. II. Concerning Religion; what it is, and what Things are necessary for the founding and securing its Obligations.	205
Chap. III. Of the Necessity of believing that God is, in order to Mens being truly religious.	208
SECT. 1. Of the Causes of Atheism; shewing the great Absurdity and Unreasonableness of them.	209
SECT. 2. Of the inexcusable Folly and Unreasonableness of Atheism.	223
Chap. IV. Of the Necessity of acknowledging the Divine Providence, to oblige us to be truly Religious.	235
SECT. 1. What it is we are to believe of the Divine Providence.	236

Sect. 3. The Objections against Providence considered and answered.	Page 268
Chap. V. Of the Necessity of believing divine Rewards and Punishments, in order to our being truly Religious.	280
Sect. 1. How far it is necessary that our Belief of Divine Rewards and Punishments should extend.	281
Sect. 2. What Evidence there is to induce us to believe these future Rewards and Punishments.	285
Sect. 3. By what Means this Belief of divine Rewards and Punishments is to be gotten and confirmed in us.	293
Chap. VI. Of the Necessity of having right Apprehensions of God, in order to our being truly Religious.	298
Sect. 1. In what Respects right Apprehensions of God are necessary to our being truly Religious.	ibid.
Sect. 2. Rules for the forming right Apprehensions of God.	306
Sect. 3. Of the Causes of our Misapprehensions of God.	317
Chap. VII. Of the Necessity of acknowledging Jesus Christ to be the One and Only Mediator between God and Man, in order to our leading a truly Christian Life.	326
Sect. 1. What it is that we are to believe in General, concerning the Person and Office of this Mediator.	327
Sect. 2. Concerning the particular Offices of Christ's Mediation.	363
Sect. 3. Of the Prophetick Office of Jesus Christ.	364
Sect. 4. Of Christ's Priestly Office.	375
Sect. 5. Concerning the Sacrifice of our Saviour.	382
Sect. 6. Of Christ's Intercession, or presenting his Sacrifice to God in Heaven, by way of Advocacion for us.	395
Sect. 7. Of the Kingly Office of our Saviour.	410
Sect. 8. Of the Rise and Progress of Christ's Kingdom.	412
Sect. 9. Of the Nature and Constitution of Christ's Kingdom.	430
Sect. 10. Concerning the Ministers of the Kingdom of Christ.	445
Sect. 11. Of Christ's Regal Acts in his Kingdom.	495
Sect. 12. Concerning the Conclusion and Surrender of the Kingdom of Christ.	536
Sect. 13. Of the Reason and Wisdom of this Method of God's governing sinful Men by his own Eternal Son in our Nature.	540
Sect. 14. That Jesus Christ is this Mediator, of whom we have been treating.	549

P A R T III.

CHAP. I. Of Justice, as it preserves the national Rights of Men, and particularly in Reference to their Bodies.	571
Chap. II. Of Justice in preserving the Rights of Men, consider'd as Rational Creatures.	574
Chap. III. Of Justice in preserving the Rights of Men, as united together by Natural Relations; and as joined together in Society.	579
Chap. IV. Of Justice, as it preserves the Acquired Rights of Men; and particularly those which arise from Sacred and Civil Relations.	586
Chap. V. Of Justice, as it preserves the Rights of Men acquired by Legal Possession.	594
Chap. VI. Of Justice, in Reference to the Rights acquired by Personal Endowments, or outward Rank.	596
Chap. VII. Of Justice, in Reference to the Rights acquired by Compact.	598
Chap. VIII. Of the eternal Reasons of Justice.	600
Chap. IX. Of the Sinfulness, and Unreasonableness of Injustice.	603
Chap. I. Of Mercy, as it relieves the Miseries of the Soul.	613
Chap. II. Of Mercy, as it relieves the Miseries of the Body.	623
Chap. III. Of Almsgiving, as to the Manner of performing it; and some Motives thereunto.	630
Chap. IV. Of the eternal Reasons and Grounds of Mercy.	640
Chap. I. Of the Nature of Mortification.	647
Chap. II. Of the Means, and Instruments of Mortification.	650
Chap. III. Of some Motives to Mortification, taken from the Mischiefs of Sin.	660
Chap. IV. Of Helps to Mortification, given us by the Spirit of God.	670
Chap. V. Of the Eternal Reward of Mortification and Holiness.	678
Chap. VI. Of the Necessity of Mortification, to the obtaining of eternal Life.	686

OF THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

CHAP. I.

Concerning the ultimate End of the Christian Life.

IN order to our understanding what is the Nature, Use, and Excellency of any Means, it is necessary we should have a true and genuine Notion of those peculiar Ends which they drive at: For the Nature of them, as they are Means, consists in being serviceable to some End; but to what they are particularly serviceable, must be collected from the Nature of those particular Ends whereunto they are directed. And therefore till we know what those particular Ends are, it is impossible we should know whether they are Means or no; or, which is the same thing, whether they are serviceable to any End or Purpose.

It being, therefore, the Design of this Work to explain the Nature of the Christian Life, it will be necessary (for the clearing of our way) to give some Account of the blessed End for which it is intended; which will very much contribute to our right understanding of the great usefulness and subserviency of each Part of it thereunto. Therefore,

- I. I shall endeavour to shew what is the peculiar End of the Christian Life.
- II. Wherein the true Nature of this End consists.

I. As for the End of the Christian Life, we are assured from Scripture, That it is no other but Heaven itself, that State of endless Bliss and Happiness which God hath prepared in the World above, for the reception of all those, who by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory and honour and immortality. That this is the End of the Christian Life, is evident from hence, because 'tis every where proposed by our Saviour and his Apostles, as the Chief Good of a Christian, and the Supreme Motive to all Christian Virtue. For so St. John, that Bosom-Favourite of our Saviour, assures us, that This is the Promise which Christ hath promised us, even Eternal Life, 1 John ii. 25. And if we look into the Gospel of St. John, who hath more largely recorded our Saviour's Sermons and Discourses than any other Evangelist, we shall find Eternal Life still proposed by him as the super-eminent Promise, to encourage and persuade Men to the Profession and Practice of Christianity. For so, John iv. 36. 'tis proposed by our Saviour, as that which is the Harvest of a Christian, to which, like the Husband-man's Plowing and Sowing, all our Care and Endeavour is to be directed; He that reapeth receiveth Wages, and gathereth Fruit unto Eternal Life. Consonantly whereunto St. Paul tells us, that he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap Life everlasting, Gal. vi. 8. And this, as our Saviour tells us, is the great Reward which he gives to all those that hear and follow him, John x. 27, 28. and this is the great Argument which he every where insists on, That he that believeth hath Life Everlasting, that whosoever heareth his Word hath Life Everlasting, and that his Commandment is Life Everlasting. And Rom. vi. 22. Everlasting Life is expressly said to be the End of having our Fruit unto Holiness; and as such we are bid to direct our Actions unto it; to believe in Christ unto Everlasting Life, 1 Tim. i. 16. to do good, to this end, that we may lay hold upon Eternal Life, 1 Tim. vi. 18, 19. to look unto Jesus the Author and Finisher of our Faith, who for the joy that was set before him endured the Cross, &c. Heb. xii. 2. And therefore Heaven is described to be the Christian Canaan, to which we are to direct all our steps, whilst we are travelling thro' this World, Heb. xii. 14, 15, 16. And the whole Life of a Christian is expressed by seeking it: Matth. vi. 33. Heb. xiii. 14. Col. iii. 1. And the incorruptible Crown is affirmed to be as much the End of the Race of the Christian Life, as those corruptible Crowns were of the Races in the Olympick Games, 1 Cor. ix. 25. For it is to Eternal Glory that we are called, 1 Pet. v. 10. 2 Thess. ii. 14. And in the discharge of all that Duty whereunto we are called, we are to look to this blessed Hope, as our great End and Encouragement, Tit. ii. 13.

This I have the more largely insisted upon, because of a great mistake that many Persons have lain under in this matter; which is, that the Glory of God is the only ultimate End of a Christian, and that this is a distinct End from Heaven: The first of which, I confess, is very true, but the last absolutely false. That the Glory of God is the last End of a Christian, is evident from those Texts which bid us do all to the Glory of God, 1 Cor. x. 13. and which make the Glory of God to be the point in which all the Fruits of Righteousness do concenter, Phil. i. 11. which propose this as the End of all Religious Performances, That God in all Things may be glorified, 1 Pet. iv. 11. and affirm, that 'tis to this purpose that we are chosen to be Christians, that we should be to the Praise of his Glory, Eph. i. 12. But that the Glory of God is no distinct End from our being made Partakers of the Happiness of Heaven, is as evident from hence, that this Glory consists not in any thing that we can add or contribute to him, whose essential Glory is so immense and secure, that there is nothing we can do, can either increase or diminish it; and there is no other Glory can redound to him from any thing without, but what is the Reflection of his own natural Rays. He understands himself too well, to value himself either the more or the less for the Praises or Dispraises of his Creatures. For he is enough of Stage and Theatre to himself, and hath the same satisfying Prospect of his own Glory, in the midst of all the loud Blasphemies of Hell, as among the perpetual Hallelujahs of Heaven. And having so, it cannot be supposed that he should enjoin us to praise and glorify him, for the sake of any Good or Advantage that can accrue to Himself by it, or out of any other Pleasure he takes in hearing himself applauded and commended by us, than he doth in any other Act that is decent and reasonable in its own Nature; but 'tis therefore, he will have us praise him, because he knows 'tis for Our Good, and highly conduces, as it is a most reasonable Action, to the Perfection and Happiness of our reasonable Natures; because our praising him, naturally excites us to imitate him, and to transcribe into our own Natures, those Adorable Perfections which we do so admire and extol in his. So that to pursue our own Perfection and Happiness, is to glorify God according to his own design and intention; who requires us to glorify him for no other purpose, but that thereby we may glorify ourselves. And indeed our Happiness is God's Glory, even as all other worthy Effects are the Glory of their Causes. 'Tis He that gives being to it, and consequently He that is glorified by it. It being nothing but the resplendency of his own Almighty Goodness, or his own outstretched Rays shining back upon Himself. And therefore we aim at God's Glory just as He himself doth, when we aim to be as happy as He would have us; that is, when we pursue Heaven, and cooperate with his Infinite Goodness, whose great design is to advance us to that blessed Condition, in which we shall glorify him for ever, and be everlasting Monuments of his overflowing Benignity. So that whether we call our last End Heaven, or the Glory of God, it is all but one and the same thing; since by obtaining Heaven, we shall glorify him according to his own Design and Intention. And this, I think, may suffice to shew what is the true ultimate End of the Christian Life. But then,

II. It will be yet farther necessary, for our clearing the way to the Design in hand, to enquire what kind of Happiness this is ? Which when we understand, we shall be the better able to comprehend what Duties or Means are necessary for the obtaining it. And this Enquiry will be easily resolved, by considering the Nature of Those for whom it was prepared and intended. For all Happiness consists in the free and vigorous Exercise of the Faculties of Nature about Objects that are suitable to themselves. There is, indeed, a privative Happiness, which is nothing but Indolence, or Freedom from Pain and Misery ; and this consists not so much in the Exercise, as in the Rest and Quiet of the Faculties. And herein the soft and restive Epicureans placed the whole Happiness of a Man : In which, I confess, they would not be very much mistaken, if there were no Happiness belonging to a Man, beyond that Animal and Sensual one, in which the Disciples of this Atheistical Philosopher placed their chief Good. For the greatest part of the Pleasures of Sense, indeed, are merely Privations of Misery, and short Reprieves from the Grievs and Troubles of a wretched Life. For what else is our Ease and Rest, but only the removal of our Pain and Weariness ? which being removed, the Pleasure is presently over, and then we grow weary again of our Rest and Ease ; till Pain and Weariness return and sweeten them, and give them a fresh and new Relish. For when we are weary of Rest, we are fain to recreate our selves with Action ; and when we are weary of Action, to refresh ourselves with Rest ; and so round again in the same Circle. Thus the greatest part of the Pleasure of Eating and Drinking consists in asswaging the pain of our Hunger and Thirst. For when this is over, you see the Pleasure ceases ; and till it returns again, every fresh Morfel is but a new load to a tired Digestion. So that, in short, the greatest part of those sensual Felicities which we do here enjoy, are only short intermissions of the Pains and Uneasinesses of a wretched Life. But if there were no other Happiness belonging to a Man, but what consists in not being sensible of Misery, it were much more desirable to be a Stone than a Man ; and the only way for him to be perfectly Happy, would be to deprive himself of all Sense and Perception.

'Tis true, That which is positive in our Happiness can never be perfectly enjoyed by us, without a perfect Indolence and Insensibility of Pain ; it being impossible for us to have a perfect Sense of any thing, whilst we have the least touch or feeling of its Contrary. But were Happiness nothing else but a nonperception of Misery, it would have no positive Essence of Reality of its own, which is directly contrary to all humane Experience. For we plainly feel, that our Happiness hath in it, not only a Rest from Evil, but a grateful Motion to Good : and that as our Pain and Misery consist in an acute and sensible Perception of such Things as are most ungrateful to our Natures ; so Pleasure and Satisfaction consist in a vigorous Perception of the contrary. So that besides the not being miserable, (which is not so properly an Essential Part of Happiness, as a necessary Disposition to it, without which the Faculties of our Natures will be indisposed to relish and perceive it) there is a positive Happiness, which (as I said before) consists in a constant, free and vigorous Exercise of the Faculties about such Objects as are most convenient and suitable to their Natures. For Happiness in the general includes Perfection and Pleasure, both which are necessarily included in such an Exercise of the Faculties. For then the Faculties are Perfect, when they are freely, constantly and vigorously employed about such Objects as are most congruous to their several Natures ; when they are recovered from all Indispositions, whether natural or moral, to those proper Motions and Exercises for which they were framed ; and do freely, constantly, and without any Clog or Interruption direct all their Courses towards such Objects as are their natural Centers. And then the Faculties are most pleas'd and delighted too, when they are most vigorously exercised about that which is most suitable to them ; when they are not only determined to such Objects as are most agreeable to their Natures, but do also act upon and exert themselves towards them with the greatest Sprightliness and Vigour.

These Things I thought meet to premise concerning Happiness in the general, as being very needful to the clearer Resolution of the present Enquiry, viz. Wherein consists the Heaven or Happiness of a Man? In short therefore, the proper Heaven and Happiness of a Man, considered as a rational Being, consists in the constant, free, and sprightly Exercise of his Faculties, about such Objects as are most convenient to his rational Nature; which consisting wholly of Understanding, and Will, that is, of a Faculty of Knowing, and a Faculty of Choosing, the most suitable Objects of it are such as are most worthy to be known, and most worthy to be chosen. When therefore the Understanding is always vigorously exercised in seeing and contemplating the most glorious and excellent Truths, and the Will is always vigorously employed in choosing and embracing the most desirable Goods, then is the whole rational Nature Happy. Now if you cast abroad your Thoughts over the whole extent of Being, you will presently find that there is nothing in it so worthy to be known and chosen as God; whose Power being the Source and Fountain of all Truth, that is, of all that either is or is possible, and whose Nature being the Subject of all rational Perfection, wherein it originally resides, and from whence 'tis derived to all the rational Creation; you must upon these accounts necessarily allow Him to be infinitely the most worthy Object in all the World of Beings, for our Understanding to contemplate, and our Will to choose. And if so, then the very Life and Quintessence of the Heaven of a Man, considered as a reasonable Being, must needs consist in a close and intimate Knowledge of God, and a free and uncontroverted Choice of him.

But that we may more fully comprehend the Nature of this Happiness, it will be needful that we should more distinctly explain what these two Essential Acts of it do import, and what Happiness is included in them. And,

I. The Happiness of a Man consists in a free and intimate Knowledge of God. For our Understanding hath naturally as strong an Appetite to Truth, as our Stomach hath to Food, and as grateful a Relish of it, when 'it hath once discover'd it, as an hungry Man hath of a pleasant Morsel. And tho in this Life its Appetite is many times pall'd and deadned, partly thro' the Difficulty of knowing, occasion'd either by the natural Indispositions of its Organs, or the inveterate Prejudices of a bad Education; and partly by being continually employed in secular Cares and Pursuits, which do perpetually divert, and so by degrees wean it from its natural Inclination to Truth: Yet when we go from this World, and leave these Causes behind us, which give such a check to its Appetite, doubtless its hunger after Knowledge will immediately revive, and there will be no possibility of ever satisfying it without it.

Suppose we then the future World to be inhabited with a Company of Intellectual Beings, that do all most vehemently gasp after the Knowledge of Truth: What can there be imagined more grateful to them, than to be admitted to the very Fountain of all Truth and Reality, there to quench their Thirst, and satisfy their infinite Desires, with the free and easy, but still fresh Discoveries of his infinite Glories and Perfections? Where will they be able to fix their greedy Eyes with comparably that Pleasure and Delight, as upon the mysterious Tri-une Divinity, which is the eternal Author of all Being, the Root of all Good, and the Rule and Source of all Perfection? But then supposing, what is the Case of these Blessed Contemplators, that their Minds are so raised, and their Apprehensions are rendred so unspeakably quick and sagacious, as that they can All know whatsoever they have a mind to, without the difficulty of Study; and presently discern the Dependance and Connexion of Things, without any puzzling Discourse, or laborious Deduction: With what incomparable Satisfaction must they needs peruse that infinite Volume of the Divine Being and Perfections?

Now that in that blessed State they have unspeakably clearer and more perspicuous Apprehensions of Things than ever they had here, that noble Passage of St. Paul assures us, 1 Cor. xiii. 12. For now we see thro' a glass darkly, but then face to face; now I know in part, but then shall I know even also as I am known:

that

that is, now our Knowledge of Divine Things is very obscure and imperfect, they being shewn us, as it were, thro' a Glass, on purpose to give us but a glimpse of them; but when we come to Heaven, we shall look close upon them, and have a far clearer, and more distinct Apprehension of them. Then we shall know God as truly as He knows us, and have as real and certain Apprehensions of his All-glorious Being, as He hath of ours. So that in Heaven, you see, the Eyes of those Blessed Minds, that inhabit it, are so invigorated, that they can gaze upon the Sun without dazzling; contemplate the pure and immaculate Glories of the Deity, without being confounded with their Brightness: and their Understanding being thus exalted, they must needs apprehend more at one single view, than we can do in Volumes of Discourse, and tedious long Trains of Deduction.

And then enjoying, as they do, a most perfect Repose, both from within and without them, they are never disturbed in their eager Contemplations; which having such a vast Horizon of Truth and Glory round about them, are still discovering farther and farther, and so continually entertain'd with fresh Wonders and Delights. What an infinite deal of Pleasure then must that All-glorious Object afford to such raised and elevated Minds, which, like transparent Windows let in, without any Labour or Difficulty, all that Divine and Heavenly Light, which freely offers itself unto, and shines for ever round about them; and which, by every new Discovery of God, and of these bottomless Secrets and Mysteries of his Nature, are still enlarged to discover more, and still have new Discoveries offering themselves, as fast as they are enlarged to receive them. This, of itself, is 'so great a Part of Heaven, that St. John himself seems to be at a loss how to imagine any Heaven beyond it; 1 John iii. 2. Beloved, now we are the Sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know, that when He shall appear, we shall be like him, that is, in Glory and Happiness, for we shall see him as he is. But then,

II. The Heaven or Happiness of a Man consists also in a free and undistracted choice of God; that is, in choosing him for the Rule and Pattern of our Natures, and for the Object of our Love, Adoration and Dependance; all which (as I shall shew hereafter) are Beatifical Acts, and do abundantly contribute to the Happiness of Reasonable Creatures. For Happiness (as hath been premised) consists not in Rest, but in Motion; and there is no Motion can contribute to the Happiness of any Being, but what is suitable to its own Nature. Now, what Motion can be more suitable to the Nature of a Reasonable Creature, than to love and adore the Author of its Being and Well-being; to bow to the Will of the Almighty Sovereign; and to imitate the Perfections of the supreme Standard and Pattern of all Reasonable Beings; to rely and depend on his infinite Power, that is always conducted by his infinite Wisdom and Goodness? all which are founded upon so many strong, evident and undeniable Reasons, that the very naming of them is sufficient to justify them to our Faculties, and demonstrate them to be infinitely agreeable to the most fundamental Principles of our Reasonable Nature. And being so, it is impossible but that of themselves they should be exceeding joyous and blissful: For as the Sensitive Nature is most gratified with those Acts that have most of Sense in them, so is the Rational with those that have most of Reason in them. And certainly those have most Reason in them, which are terminated upon Objects which most deserve them; and what Objects can so well deserve to be acted upon by Reasonable Beings, as God? Or what Acts can they so reasonably exert upon him, as those of Love and Adoration, Homage and Imitation, Trust and Dependance? But as no Acts of Sense can be very grateful to our Sensitive Nature, so long as we exert them either with Repugnance, or Indifferency, so neither can any Acts of Reason be to our Rational; the Pleasure of all Acts, whether Sensitive or Rational, consisting (as I shew'd before) in the Sprightfulness and Vigour of them. And this is the Cause why Men now find so little Felicity in these most Rational Acts of Godliness, because by their own bad Customs they have rendered themselves averse, or at least very cold and indifferent to them; which necessarily renders us dead and listless in the Exercise of them; and consequently causes them to go off with little gust, if not with an ungrateful relish. But even in this imperfect State, we find by Experience, that the more our corrupted Nature discharges and disburdens itself of those vicious Indispositions, which do so cramp and arrest it in these its heavenly Operations, the more it is pleased still and delighted in them: Yea, and that when it is so far inured to a Godly Life, as to be able to practise the several Virtues of it, but with the same degree of Activity and Vigour, as 'twas wont to do its most beloved Lusts, it is unspeakably more pleased and satisfied; and finds more Sweetness by a thousand Degrees, in its Love and Adoration, Obedience and Imitation of God, than ever it did in the highest Relishes of Epicurism and Sensuality; that the more perfectly we Love and Adore, &c. the more of Heaven we taste in these Blessed Acts; and that, when by a long and constant Practice of them, we have once render'd them natural to us, we enjoy such an Heaven upon Earth, in the easy, free and vigorous Exercise of them, as we would not exchange for all the Pleasures and Felicities which the World can afford us. And yet, God knows, the most perfect State of Godliness which we attain to here, hath so many Degrees of Imperfection in it, and in this we are so disturbed and interrupted by bodily Indispositions, and the Troubles and Necessities of this present Life, that from the Joy and Pleasure which results from it here, we can hardly guess at those ravishing Felicities which will spring out of it hereafter: When we shall be perfectly released from all the Encumbrances of Flesh and Blood, and Sin; when we shall be translated into a free and quiet State, wherein we shall have nothing else to do, but only to know and love, obey and imitate, and have no Imperfection either natural or vicious, to clog or disturb us in this our Beatifical Employment: Wherein we shall act with all our Vigour and Might, and thrust forth the whole Strength of our Souls in every Love, and every Obedience; so that every Motion of our Souls towards God, shall have the Vehemence of a Rapture in it, without the Violence: When, I say, we shall be eternally fixed in a State of such perfect Freedom and Activity, our Happiness must needs be as large as our Desires, and as great as our utmost Capacity or Power of acting upon God. For now we shall imitate the most Perfect, and adore the most Adorable, as much as ever we are able; that is, we shall perform with all our Might and Vigour the Acts that are most agreeable to our Reasonable Nature: And in the utmost Vigour of such Acts (as I have already shewed) consists our utmost Happiness.

Suppose we then a Society of Rational Beings placed in such a State, wherein they have an Object of infinite Perfections always before them, and no Evil from without or within to check or divert them from exerting all their Powers upon him in the most reasonable Actions: Suppose them now to be moving with unspeakable Vigour and Agility, like so many ever-living Orbs about this their everlasting Center; to be as full of Love and Duty to him as ever their Hearts can hold; to be copying his Perfections, and adoring his Excellencies with an uncontroulable Freedom and Alacrity, and breathing forth themselves to him in cheerful Praises, and rapturous Hallelujah's; in a word, to be exercising themselves about him to their utmost Strength and Power, in all those blessed Offices which his Nature and their Relation to him call for: Suppose, I say, all this, and you have before ye that which is the very Top and Flower of the Heaven of a reasonable Creature; who in this blessed State is fixed, as it were, in his own proper Element, where, without any Lett or Disturbance, he freely moves and acts according to his most natural Tendency and Inclination.

And now, by this time, I think it is clear enough, that the main and principal Part of the Heaven of a Man, considered as a reasonable Creature, consists in Knowing and Choosing of God. But besides this, there are other blessed Ingredients of Heaven; the Principal whereof is, the knowing and choosing those that are most like unto God; namely, the blessed Jesus in his human Nature, ture, and the Holy Angels and Saints, who are all in their several Measures and Degrees, the express and lively Images of God. And therefore if to know and choose God be the supreme Felicity of Heaven, then doubtless the next to that, is, to know and be acquainted with these blessed Images of him, and freely to choose their Company and Conversation, and be entirely united to them in Affection; without which, it would be no Felicity to dwell in the same Place with them. For to cohabit with Jesus, and with Saints and Angels, and not be acquainted with and united to them in Heart and Affection, would be rather a Burden than a Pleasure. The Happiness therefore of being in their Society, consists in knowing and choosing them. And this is every where implied, where our being in them is mention'd as a Part of our Heaven. Thus, 1 Thess. iv. 17. to be ever with the Lord, is the same Thing with being ever in Heaven: But then, 'tis to be ever with him upon Choice; for so those Words imply, Phil. i. 23. I desire to depart and to be with Christ; which is far better. And accordingly this is mention'd by the Apostle, as a dear Privilege of our being Members of the Christian Church, whereby we are entituled to the Society of Holy Myriads of Angels; of the general Assembly and Church of the First-born; of God the Judge of all; of the Spirits of Just Men made perfect, and of Jesus the Mediator of the New Covenant, Heb. xii. 22, 23, 24. And indeed this must needs be an inestimable Happiness, not only to cohabit, but be acquainted with, and in Heart and Will united to this blessed and glorious Company. For what Soul that has any Spark of Cordial Love to Jesus, the best Friend of Souls that ever was, any grateful Remembrance of what he did and suffer'd for our sakes, would not esteem it a mighty Felicity to be admitted into his Presence, and to be an Eye-witness of the happy Change of his past woful Circumstances? To see him that was so cruelly treated, so barbarously vilified, tortured and butchered for our sakes, raised to the highest pitch of Splendour and Dignity, to be Head and Prince of all the Hierarchy of Heaven, to be worshipped and celebrated thro'out all the noble Choir of Arch-Angels and Angels, and Spirits of just Men made perfect? Verily methinks had I only the Privilege to look in and see my dear and blessed Lord surrounded with all this Circle of Glories, it would be a most heavenly Consolation to me, tho I were sure never to partake of it. The very Communion I should have in the Joys of my Master, would be a kind of Heaven at Second-hand to me, and my Soul would be wondrous Happy by Sympathizing with him in his Felicity and Advancement. But, Oh! when that Blessed Person shall not only permit me to see his Glory, but introduce me into it, and make me Partaker of it; when I shall not only behold his beloved Face, but be admitted into his dear Conversation, and dwell in his Arms and Embraces for ever; when I shall hear him record the wondrous Adventures of his Love, thro' how many woful Stages he pass'd to rescue me from Misery, and make me Happy, and in the mean time shall have a most ravishing Feeling of that Happiness; how will my Heart spring with Joy, and burn with Love, and my Mouth overflow with Praises and Thanksgiving to him!

And as our Acquaintance with, and Choice of the Blessed Jesus must needs contribute vastly to our Happiness; so must also (tho not in so high a Degree) our being intimately acquainted and united with Saints and Angels; who being not only endowed with large and comprehensive Understandings, but also with perfect good Nature, and most generous Charity, must needs make excellent Company. For as their Goodness cannot but render their Conversation infinitely free and benign, so their great Knowledge must necessarily render it equally profitable and delightful. And then being so Knowing as they are, they must needs be supposed to understand all the wise Arts of Endearment; and being so Good, they must be also supposed to be continually practising them. And if so, what a heavenly Conversation must theirs be, the Scope whereof is the most glorious Knowledge, and the Law whereof is the most perfect Friendship? Who would not be willing to leave a foolish, froward, and ill-natur'd World, for the blessed Society of these wise Friends, and perfect Lovers? And what a Felicity must it be, to spend an Eternity in such a noble Conversation! where we shall hear the deep Philosophy of Heaven communicated with mutual Freedom in the wise and amicable Discourses of Angels and glorified Spirits; who without any Reserve, or Affectation of Mystery, without Passion or Interest, or peevish Contention for Victory, do freely Philosophize, and mutually impart the Treasures of each other's Knowledge. For since all Saints there are great Philosophers, and all Philosophers perfect Saints, we must needs suppose Knowledge and Goodness, Wisdom and Charity, to be equally intermingled thro'out all their Conversation; and being so, what can be imagined more delightful! When therefore we shall leave this impertinent and unsociable World; and all our good old Friends that are gone to Heaven before us, shall meet us as soon as we are landed upon the Shore of Eternity, and with infinite Congratulations for our safe Arrival, shall conduct us into the Company of the Patriarchs and Prophets, Apostles and Martyrs, and introduce us into an intimate Acquaintance with them, and with all those brave and generous Souls, who by their glorious Examples have recommended themselves to the World; when we shall be familiar Friends with Angels and Arch-Angels, and all the Courtiers of Heaven, shall call us Brethren, and bid us Welcome to their Master's Joy, and we shall be received into their glorious Society with all the tender Endearments and Caresses of those heavenly Lovers; what a mighty Addition to our Happiness will this be!

There are indeed some other Additions to the Happiness of Heaven; such as the Glory and Magnificence of the Place, which is the highest Heaven, or the upper and purer Tracts of the Æther, which our Saviour calls Paradise, Luke xxiii. 43. and St. Paul the Third Heaven, 2 Cor. xii. 2. both which, in the Phrase of that Age, bespeak it to be a Place of unspeakable Glory; for so the Jews do commonly call this blessed Seat, the Third or Angel-bearing Region of Heaven, by which they denote it to be the Place of the King of the whole World, where his most glorious Courtiers do reside; and they also call it Paradise, in allusion to the earthly Paradise of Eden; because as that was the Garden of this lower World, so this is of the whole Creation. And tho we have no exact Description of this Place in Scripture, and that perhaps because no human Language can describe it; yet since God hath chosen it for the Everlasting Theatre of Bliss and Happiness, we may thence reasonably conclude, that he hath most exquisitely furnish'd it with all Accommodations requisite to a most happy and blissful Life.

Besides which also, there is the Everlasting Duration of it, which is another great Accession to its Happiness. That such is the Nature of its Enjoyments, as that they do not, like all other Pleasures, spend and waste in the Fruition; that tho it will be always feeding our Faculties with new Delights, yet it will never be exhausted, but be always equally, because infinitely, distant from a Period. So that its Happiness consisting of an infinite Variety of Pleasure extended to an infinite Duration, it will be impossible for those that enjoy it to be either cloy'd with the Repetition of it, or tormented with the Fear of losing it.

But these Two last I only mention, because they do not so properly belong to our present Argument; which is only to explain the Nature of Heaven so far as is necessary to the right understanding of the Nature of those Means by which it is to be attained.

Now from what hath been said concerning this great End of the Christian Life, these Two Things are to be inferred concerning the Nature of it.

I. That the main of Heaven consists not so much in any outward Possession, as in an inward State and Temper. For tho Heaven be, doubtless, a most glorious Place, and all its blessed Inhabitants do possess and hold it by an everlasting Tenure; yet 'tis a great Mistake to imagine that the main Happiness of Heaven consists in living for ever in a glorious Place, which, separated from all the rest of Heaven, would be but a poor and hungry kind of Happiness.

For Life is no otherwise a Happiness, than as it is the Principal of all our pleasant and grateful Perceptions ; and if we could live for ever without perceiving, it would be the same Thing to us, as if we were nothing but a Company of everlasting Stones and Trees ; and what great matter would it signify to live for ever in a glorious Place, unless we could be for ever affected by it with a delightful Sense and Perception ? which is impossible ; because all delightful Sense (as hath already been proved) arises out of the vigorous Exercise of our Faculties about such Objects as are suitable to them ; but what can there be in the most glorious Place so suitable to a Rational Mind and Will, as to keep them for ever vigorously employed and exercised about it ? It may, indeed, for a while, employ the Mind in an eager Contemplation of its new and surprizing Beauties ; but how soon would the Mind dis-relish it, were it to be its only Entertainment for Eternity ? And as for the Will, what would a fine Place signify to it, if it were not replenish'd with such Objects as are suitable to its own Options ? And indeed, there is nothing that can everlastingly gratify a rational Mind and Will, but what has in it such an Infinity of Truth as is everlastingly Knowable, and such an Infinity of Goodness as is everlastingly Desirable ; or, which is the same Thing, nothing but what hath Truth enough in it for the one to be vigorously contemplating for ever ; and nothing but what hath Goodness enough in it for the other to be as vigorously loving, adoring, and imitating for ever. And such an Infinitude of Truth and Goodness is no where to be found but in God. But God, as well as the Place, and Duration of Heaven, being an Object that is external to us, neither is, nor can be a Happiness to us, unless we act upon him, and freely exercise our Faculties about him ; unless we Know him, and Love him, &c. So that that which felicitates all, is our own Internal Act ; 'tis by this that we enjoy Heaven, and perceive all the Pleasures of it. 'Tis not by being in Heaven that Men are constituted Happy, but by vigorously exerting their Faculties upon the heavenly Objects : For without this, to be in Heaven or out of it, would be indifferent to us. The Happiness of Heaven therefore consists in a State of heavenly Action ; in being so attempered and connaturalis'd to the Objects of Heaven, as to be always acting upon, and cheerfully employing our Faculties about them. For as there is no Pleasure in Acting coldly upon suitable Objects, so there is Pain and Trouble in acting vigorously upon unsuitable ones. And therefore to make Heaven itself a Happiness to us, 'tis necessary not only that we should act vigorously upon the Objects of it, but that we should so act from a Suitableness of Temper to them : That we should contemplate God, submit to his Will, adore and imitate his Perfections from a God-like Temper and Disposition. For otherwise these Acts will be Penances instead of Pleasures to us ; and the more intensely we exert them, the more painful they will be. And if we were in Heaven, all that heavenly Exercise in which the Happiness of it consists, would be but a Torment and Vexation to us, unless we had a heavenly Temper. For as the Parts of Matter can never rest, but do move about in a perpetual Whirl-pool, till they hit into a Place or Interstice that is of the same Form and Figure with them ; so there is nothing can rest in Heaven but what is Heavenly. All that is otherwise rebounds and flies off of its own accord, and can never acquiesce there, till 'tis of the same Form, and Temper, and Disposition with it. From hence therefore it's evident, that the Happiness of a Man in Heaven consists not so much in the outward Glory of the Place, as in the inward State of his own Mind, which, from a Suitableness of Temper to the heavenly Objects, doth always freely employ and exercise its Faculties about them.

II. That the heavenly State is nothing else but the Perfection of all heavenly Virtue. For it hath been already proved, That Heaven consists in a clear and intimate Knowledge, and a free and uncontested Choice of God, and of those Blessed Beings that resemble him ; and these Two comprehend all heavenly heavenly Virtue. So that the Difference between the State of Grace and Glory is not in Kind, but in Degree: For Grace is the Seed of Glory, and Glory is the Maturity of Grace. 'Tis Knowledge exalted above all Error and Prejudice, above all Difficulty or Obscurity of Apprehension; 'tis Love strained from all Repugnancies of Flesh and Spirit, and refined into a pure Celestial Flame; 'tis Obedience to, and Imitation of God, perfectly separated from all sinful Defects, and freed from the Clog of counter-striving Principles; 'tis Adoration of, and Dependency upon him, without the least degree of Indisposition or Despondency; in a word, 'tis a free and uncontrouled Motion of all the heavenly Virtues together, in which they are every one most vigorously exerted, without the least Check or Impediment. This therefore being the State of Heaven, as is evident from what hath been discoursed, it hence follows, that the main Difference between Virtue and Heaven, is only gradual; that Virtue is the Beginning of Heaven, and Heaven is the Perfection of Virtue. And if so, then as the lowest Degree of true Virtue is a step Heaven-wards, so every farther Degree is a nearer Approach towards the heavenly State. So that as we grow in Grace, and proceed from one Degree of Virtue to another, we draw nearer and nearer to that blessed Condition in which we shall be all pure Virtue, without any sinful Alloy or Intermixture. And this is the true State and Condition of Heaven.

C H A P. II.

Concerning the Means by which this Great End of the Christian Life is to be attained.

IT is to be consider'd, That the great Design of Christianity being to advance our Natures to such a sublime Degree of Purity and Perfection, as is requisite to capacitate us for the Enjoyment of a heavenly Bliss, it was necessitated, in order hereunto, to strain our Duty to a greater height than any preceding Law had done before it. For the End of all God's Laws is the Happiness of his Subjects; and therefore that they may be effectual Means to promote this End, it's necessary that the Duties they enjoin should be such as the Nature of our Happiness requires. Now in the first State of our Nature, which was that of Innocence; we seem to have been design'd only for a Terrestrial Paradise, that is, to enjoy the Pleasures of a pure Mind inhabiting a sensitive and animal Body; and therefore had we stood, (which God foresaw we should not, and therefore design'd us for a more raised and heavenly Condition) our Happiness would have been what it is now in this World, tho in a higher Degree, viz. a Compound of spiritual and bodily Delights, to be enjoy'd in a State of earthly Immortality, which would have been of a much inferior Nature to that pure State of spiritual Happiness whereunto we are now designed and directed: And to serve this former End, in the Possession of which Man was placed in the State of Innocence, God gave him the Law of Nature, which seems to have been nothing else but only Right Reason dictating to us what is necessary to be done, in order to this our earthly Happiness. And accordingly the Duties of this Law were of a much lower Strain than the Duties of Christianity; they being intended for the Means and Instruments of a much lower Happiness. For in this our Earthly and Animal State, right Reason could require nothing of us but what was subservient to our Earthly and Animal Felicity; which was only a mixture of bodily and mental, sensitive and rational Pleasure; and nothing could be good for us but what tended thereunto, nothing thing evil but what did obstruct and oppose it. But now that our Happiness is placed in another World, and in such vastly different Enjoyments from those of a Terrestrial Paradise, we must proceed upon other Principles: For now every Action is Good or Bad, Wise or Foolish, as it serves or hinders our Happiness in the World to come. And therefore it is highly reasonable that now we should live at a different rate than what we were obliged to in that Animal State wherein we were first created; that we should submit our earthly to our heavenly Interest, and renounce the Joys and Pleasures of this Life, whensoever they stand in Competition with the spiritual Felicities of the Life to come. Now we are no longer to look upon this World as our Native Country, but as a Foreign Land; and so we are to reckon ourselves Strangers and Pilgrims upon Earth; and accordingly to use the Conveniences of this Life as Strangers do their Inns, not to abide or take up our Habitation in them, but only to bait and away, and refresh our selves, that so we may be the better enabled to perform our Journey to the Eternal World. For the Scene of our Happiness being shifted from an earthly Immortality, to an Heavenly; and consequently the Happiness itself being now much more sublime and pure and spiritual than it would have been, had it continued Earthly; it's necessary that our Nature should be exalted with it, and that we should be raised as high above the Condition of mere earthly Creatures, as that is above the Rank and Quality of an earthly Happiness; otherwise it will be impossible for us to relish and enjoy it.

Now every Agent hath need of more or fewer Means proportionably as he is farther off, or nearer to the End he drives at. As for Instance, the Husbandman that hath a fat and fruitful Soil to sow his Seed in, is nearer to the attaining of a good Harvest, than he that hath a barren or stony Ground to work upon; and therefore hath much less to do. For whereas the latter, before he can plough and sow, must manure his Ground, and gather out the Stones of it; the former needs only plough up the fertile Earth, and cast his Seed into it. Or to come closer to the Case in hand; a Man that is merely ignorant is in a much nearer Capacity of true Knowledge, than he whose Mind is altogether prejudiced with erroneous Principles; and therefore needs much fewer Helps and Means to attain it: For his Mind being perfectly disengaged, is like a fair Paper, on which as there is nothing writ, so there is nothing to be blotted out; so that all that he hath to do, is to enquire after and receive the Truth when it is fairly proposed to him. But as for the Prejudiced Man, he hath a great deal to unlearn, before he can be capable of Learning; a great many false Principles to be expunged, before ever the true Notions of Things can be imprinted on his Understanding.

If therefore we would take a true Account of all those Means that are necessary to our attaining of Heaven, we must consider what a vast Distance we are from it in this corrupt and degenerate State of our Nature. If we were in a State of Indifference between Virtue and Vice, we should be much nearer Heaven than we are: For then, as we should be without those heavenly Virtues, in the free Exercise whereof the State of Heaven consists; so we should be without all that Repugnance and Aversion to them which renders them so difficultly attainable; and our Nature being already in an Æquilibrium, would by the least over-weight of Motion be presently inclined to Virtue and Goodness. But, alas! in this corrupt State whereinto we are sunk, our Nature runs Evil-wards with a very strong and prevailing Bias; and is not only void of Virtue, but averse to it: And this sets us at a far greater Distance from the blessed End of our Religion, than otherwise we should be: For every degree of vicious Inclination that is in us, is a Remove from Heaven, a Descent from that Perfection of Virtue wherein the heavenly Blessedness consists. And if so, how remote from Heaven are the Generality of Men in the beginning of their Progress thither; when to their natural Corruption they have super-added by their sinful Courses so many inordinate Inclinations, and inveterate, sinful Habits; when by a long Series of wicked Actions, they have raised and blown up their Concupiscence into such raging Flames of Lust as generally they do! And being thus far gone back from our End, there are sundry Means, which otherwise would have been perfectly needless and superfluous, that are now become absolutely necessary thereunto. For had we begun our Progress towards Heaven from a State of Indifferency between Virtue and Vice, we had had no more to do but to practise those several Virtues of Religion, of which the heavenly Life and State consists; to love and to contemplate, to adore and to obey God, and behave ourselves justly and charitably towards one another; all which would have been so easy, that we should have had no occasion of any Instrumental Duties to facilitate them to us. Whereas now starting Heaven-wards, as we generally do, from a most corrupt and degenerate State, there are sundry other Means which we must use as Instruments that are necessary to our acquiring and persevering in the Virtues of the heavenly Life; to our conquering the Difficulties, and killing the vicious Aversations of our Natures against them: All which would have been needless, at least in a great measure, had not our Nature been so depraved and corrupt as it is.

So that as the Case now stands with us, there are Two sorts of Means that are necessary to our obtaining of Heaven; The First is, the Practice of those heavenly Virtues, in the Perfection whereof consists the State of Heaven; the Second is, the Practice of certain Instrumental Duties, which are necessary to our acquiring those heavenly Virtues, and overcoming the Difficulties of them. The first sort of these are the proximate Means, those which directly and immediately respect the great and ultimate End; the Second, the more remote Means, which immediately respect those Means that immediately respect the End. The First is like the Art of the Builder, which immediately respects the House; the Second, like the Art of the Smith, which immediately respects the Means and Instruments of Building.

I. One sort of Means necessary to the obtaining of Heaven, and that which more directly and immediately respects it, is the Practice of those Virtues in the Perfection whereof the heavenly Life consists: For we find by Experience, that all heavenly Virtues are to be acquired and perfected only by Practice; That as all bad Dispositions are acquired and improved into Habits by bad Practices and Customs, so are all the contrary virtuous ones by the contrary Practices. For Religion proceeds in the Methods of Nature, and carries us on from the Acts to the Dispositions, and from the Dispositions to the Habits of Virtue. And by the same Method the Divine Grace which accompanies Religion, does ordinarily work its Effects upon the Spirits of Men, not by an instantaneous Infusion of virtuous Habits into the Will, but by persuading them to the Practice of those Virtues that are contrary to their vicious Habits, and to persist in the Practice of them till they have mortified those Habits, and thorowly habituated and inured themselves to these. So that the Grace of God is like a Graft, which tho it is put into a Stock which is quite of another kind, doth yet make use of the Faculties and Juices of the Stock, and so by co-operating with them, converts it by degrees into its own Nature. And this is exactly agreeable to the common Experience of Men, who, in the Beginning of their Reformation, are so far from acting virtuously from Habit and Inclination, that it goes against the very Grain of their Nature, and they would much rather return to their vicious Courses, if they were not chased and pursued by the Terrors of an awakened Conscience; and when afterwards they come to act upon a more ingenuous Principle, yet still they find in themselves a great Averseness and Reluctancy to it, and 'tis a great while usually ere they arrive to a Habit or Facility of acting virtuously. But then by Perseverance in the Practice of Virtue, they are more and more inclined and disposed to it, and so by degrees it becomes easy and natural to them. If therefore we would ever arrive to that Perfection of Virtue which the Heavenly State implies, it must be by the Practice of Virtue, by a continual training and exercising ourselves in all the Parts of the Heavenly Life, which, by degrees, will wear off the Difficulty of it, and adapt and familiarize our Nature to it. "Α γὰρ οὐ μαθήσονται ποιεῖν, τὰτα ποιεῖντες μαθήσονται. Those Things which they that learn ought to do, they learn by doing them. Thus we learn Devotion by Prayer, Submission to God by Denying ourselves, Charity by giving Alms, and Meekness by Forgiving Injuries. And we may as reasonably expect to commence Learned without Study, as Virtuous without the Practice of Virtue. Since therefore the Formal Happiness of our Reasonable Natures consists in the Perfection of all the Heavenly Virtues, and 'tis by these alone that we can relish and enjoy the blissful Objects of Heaven; it hence follows, that the Practice of those Virtues is the most direct and immediate Means to obtain the Blessed End of our Religion. But then,

II. Another sort of Means necessary to our obtaining of Heaven, consists of certain Instrumental Duties, by which we are to acquire, improve, and perfect these Heavenly Virtues. What these Means are, will be hereafter largely shown: All that I shall say of them at present, is, That they are such as are no farther good and useful, than as they are the Means of Heavenly Virtue, and do tend towards the acquiring, improving, and perfecting it. For the whole Duty of Man may be distributed into these Two Generals, viz. The Religion of the End, and the Religion of the Means. • The Religion of the End, contains all that Heavenly Virtue wherein the Perfection and Happiness of Human Nature consists; and this the Apostle distributes into Three Particulars, viz. Sobriety, Righteousness, and Godliness. The Religion of the Means comprehends all that Duty which does either naturally, or by Institution, respect and drive at this Religion of the End; and that all other Duty, that is not itself a Natural Branch and Part of it, doth respect and drive at it, the Apostle assures us, when he tells us, that the Gospel, or Grace of God, was revealed from Heaven for this very Purpose, to teach us to deny all Ungodliness and worldly Lusts, and to live soberly, and righteously and godly in this present World. And if we do not use the Religion of the Means to this purpose, it is altogether useless and insignificant. For the Purpose of all Religious Duties, is either,

1. To reconcile Men to God, and God to them; or,
2. To perfect the Human Nature; or,
3. To intitle Men to Heaven; or,
4. To qualify and dispose them for the Heavenly Life. To neither of which the Religion of the Means is any farther useful, than as it produces and promotes in us those Heavenly Virtues which are implied in the Religion of the End. For,

I. It is no farther useful towards the reconciling Us to God, and God to us. For there can be no hearty Reconciliation between adverse Parties, without there be a mutual Likeness, and Agreement of Natures. Now the Carnal Mind, (which includes all that is repugnant to the Heavenly Virtues) the Apostle tells us, is Enmity against God, Rom. viii. 7. that is, hath a natural Antipathy to the Purity and Goodness of the Divine Nature. And this Antipathy, the same Apostle tells us, is founded in our wicked Works, Colos. i. 21. So that tho we should practise never so diligently all that is contained in the Religion of the Means, tho we should pray, and hear, and receive Sacraments, &c. with never so much Zeal and Constancy; yet all this will be insignificant, as to the reconciling our Natures to God, unless it destroy in us that Carnal Mind and those wicked Works which render us so averse to his Goodness. And tho God bears a heartly Good-will to all that are capable of Good, and embraces his whole Creation with the out-stretched Arms of his Benevolence; yet he cannot be supposed to be pleased with, or delighted in any but such as resemble Him in those amiable Graces of Purity and Goodness for which he loves Himself. For he loves not Himself merely because he is Himself (which would would be a blind Instinct rather than a Reasonable Love) but because he is Good: and he loves Himself above all other Things, because he knows Himself to be the Highest and most Perfect Good: and consequently He loves all other Things proportionably as they approach and resemble Him in Goodness. And indeed, if He loved Us for any other Reason besides that for which he loves Himself, he would not have infinite Reason to love Himself; because he would not have that Reason to love Himself, for which he loves and takes delight in Us. Since therefore there is nothing but our Resemblance of God can reconcile Him to Us; and since our Resemblance of Him consists in Virtue and true Goodness, it hence follows, that all the Religion of the Means is insignificant to our Reconciliation with God, if it doth not render us truly Virtuous. So that till this is effected, there is so vast a Gulph between God and Us, that neither We can go to Him, nor He come to Us; and unless he alter his Nature by becoming impure as we are impure, or we alter ours by becoming pure as He is pure, there will be so immense a Distance between Him and Us, as that it is impossible we should ever meet and agree. So that what the Prophet saith of Sacrifice, may be truly affirm'd of all Religion of the Means, Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of Rams, or with ten thousands of Rivers of Oil? Will he be reconciled upon our bare Believing, Praying, or Receiving Sacraments? &c. No, no; He hath shewed thee, O Man, what is good: And what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love Mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? Micah vi. 7, 8.

II. This Religion of the Means is of no farther use as to the perfecting our Natures, than as it is instrumental to produce and promote in us those Heavenly Virtues which are implied in the Religion of the End. For doubtless, to be a perfect Man, is to live up to the highest Principle of Human Nature, which is Reason; and till we are once released from the Slavery of Sense and Passion, and all our Powers of Action are so subdued to this superior Principle as to be wholly regulated by it, and we choose and refuse, and love and hate, and hope and fear, and desire and delight, according as right Reason directs, we are in a maimed and imperfect Condition. Now what else is Virtue, but a Habit of Living according to the Laws of Reason, or of demeaning ourselves towards God, ourselves, and all the World, as best becomes Rational Beings placed in our Condition and Circumstances? And till we are in some measure arrived to this, our Nature is so far from being perfect, that it is the most wretched and confused Thing in the whole World; a mere undistinguish'd Chaos, where Frigida cum Calidis, Sense and Reason, Brute and Man, are shuffled together without any order, like a confounded Heap of Ruins. And therefore as for this Religion of the Means, it will be altogether insignificant to the Perfection of our Natures, unless by the Practice of it we do acquire a Habit of Acting according to the Law of our Reason, which Habit includes all Heavenly Virtue. For constantly to know and do what is best and most reasonable, is the very Crown and Perfection of every reasonable Nature; and therefore so far as our Faith and Consideration, our Sorrow for Sin, and the other Instrumentals of Religion, promote this Heavenly Habit in us, so far are they perfective of our Nature, and no farther.

III. This Religion of the Means is of no farther use to Us, as to the Entitling us to Heaven, than as it is productive of those Heavenly Virtues which the Religion of the End implies. For our Title to Heaven depending wholly upon God's Promise, must immediately result from our Performance of those Conditions upon which he hath promised it; which till we have done, we can have no more Claim or Title to it than if he had never promised it at all. But the sole Condition upon which he hath promised it, is Universal Righteousness and Goodness; for so, without Holiness, we are assured that no Man shall see God; and Matth. v. our Saviour intails all the Beatitudes of Heaven upon those Heavenly Virtues of Purity of Heart, Benignity of Temper, &c. So also, Rom. ii. 7. the Promise of Eternal Life is limited to our patient Continuance in well-doing.

well-doing. And that we may know before-hand what to trust to, our Saviour plainly tells us, That not every one that cries, Lord, Lord, that make Solemn Prayers and Addresses to me, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven; but he that doth the Will of my Father which is in Heaven: And, this is the Will of God, saith the Apostle, even our Sanctification; that is, our being purged from all Impurities of Flesh and Spirit, and inspired with all heavenly Virtues. And the Apostle expressly enumerates those Virtues upon which our Entrance into eternal Life is promised, 2 Pet. i. 5, 6, 7, 8. Add to your Faith Virtue, and to Virtue Knowledge, and to Knowledge Temperance, and to Temperance Patience, and to Patience Godliness, and to Godliness Brotherly Kindness, and to Brotherly Kindness Charity; for if these Things be in you, and abound, saith he, they make you that you shall neither be barren or unfruitful in the Knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ; that is, That you shall receive the proper Fruit of that Knowledge, which is eternal Life; for thus, ver. 11. he goes on, For so, or upon this Condition, an Entrance shall be ministred unto you abundantly into the Everlasting Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. So that unless our Faith purifies our Hearts, and works by Love; unless our Sorrow for Sin works in us Repentance, or a Change of Mind; unless our Prayers raise in us divine and heavenly Affections, that is, unless we so practise the Duties of the Religion of the Means, as thereby to acquire the Virtues of the Religion of the End, it will be all as insignificant to our Title to Heaven, as the most indifferent Actions in the World.

IV. This Religion of the Means is of no farther Use to the disposing and qualifying us for Heaven, than as it is an effectual Means of the Religion of the End; which is a perfectly distinct Consideration from the former: For it would be no Advantage to us to have a Right to Heaven, unless we were antecedently qualified and disposed for it: Because Pleasure, which is a relative Thing, implies a Correspondence and Agreement between the Object and the Faculty that tastes and enjoys it. But in the Temper of every wicked Mind there is a strong Antipathy to the Pleasures of Heaven; which being all chaste, and pure, and spiritual, can never agree with the vitiated Palate of a base and degenerate Soul. For what Concord can there be between a spiteful and devilish Spirit, and the Fountain of all Love and Goodness? between a sensual and carnalized one, that understands no other Pleasures but only those of the Flesh, and those Pure and Virgin-Spirits that neither eat nor drink, but live for ever upon Wisdom, and Holiness, and Love, and Contemplation? Certainly, till our Mind is contempered to the heavenly State, and we are of the same Disposition with God, and Angels, and Saints, there is no Pleasure in Heaven that can be agreeable to us. For, as for the main, we shall be of the same Temper and Disposition when we come into the other World, as we are when we leave this; it being unimaginable how a Total Change should be wrought in us merely by passing out of one World into another. And therefore as in this World it is Likeness that does congregate and associate Beings together, so, doubtless, it is in the other too. So that if we carry with us thither our wicked and devilish Dispositions, (as we shall doubtless do, unless we subdue and mortify them here) there will be no Company fit for us to associate with, but only the devilish and damned Ghosts of wicked Men, with whom our wretched Spirits being already joined, by a Likeness of Nature, will mingle themselves, as soon as ever they are excommunicated from the Society of Mortals. For whither should they flock, but to the Birds of their own Feather? With whom should they associate, but with those malignant Spirits to whom they are already joined by a Community of Nature? So that supposing that when they land in Eternity, it were left to their own Liberty to go to Heaven or Hell, into the Society of the Blessed or the Damned, it is plain that Heaven would be no Place for them, that the Air of that Bright Region of Eternal Day would never agree with their black and bellish Natures. For, alas! what should they do among those Blessed Beings that that inhabit it, to whose God-like Natures, Divine Contemplations, and heavenly Employments, they have so great a Repugnancy and Aversion? So that besides the having a Right to Heaven, it is necessary to our enjoying it, that we should be antecedently disposed and qualified for it. And it being thus, God hath been graciously pleased to make those very Virtues the Conditions of our Right to Heaven, which are the proper Dispositions and Qualifications of our Spirits for it; that so with one and the same Labour we might entitle ourselves to, and qualify ourselves to enjoy it.

Now (as we shewed you before) the Condition of our Right to Heaven, is our practising those heavenly Virtues which are implied in the Religion of the End; and as the Religion of the Means no farther entitles us to Heaven, than as it produces and promotes in us those heavenly Virtues, so it no farther qualifies us for it. For when the Soul goes into Eternity, it leaves the Religion of the Means behind it, and carries nothing with it but only those heavenly Virtues and Dispositions which it here acquired by those Means. For as for Faith and Consideration, Hearing of God's Word, and Receiving of Sacraments, &c. they are all but Scaffolds to that heavenly Building of inward Purity and Goodness; and when this is once finished for Eternity, then must those Scaffolds all go down, as Things of no farther Use or Necessity. But as for the Graces of the Mind, they are to stand for ever, to be the Receptacles and Habitations of all heavenly Pleasure. And hence the Apostle tells us, that of those Three Christian Graces, Faith, Hope, and Charity, Charity (which, in the largest Sense of it, comprehends all heavenly Virtue) is the greatest; because the Two former, being but Means of Charity, shall cease in Heaven, and be swallowed up for ever in Vision and Enjoyment; but Charity, saith he, never faileth, 1 Cor. xii. 13.

By all which, it is apparent, that the Religion of the Means is no farther useful to us, than as it is apt to produce and promote in us those heavenly Virtues, the Practice of which is the most direct and immediate Means to the ultimate End of a Christian. Wherefore, as a Man may knock and file, and yet be no Mechanick, tho the Hammer and File with which he does it are very useful Tools to the making of any curious Machine; so a Man may Pray, and Hear, and Receive Sacraments, &c. and yet be a very Bungler in the blessed Trade of a heavenly Life. For tho it is true, these are excellent Means of heavenly Living, yet as the Art of the Mechanick consists not in using his Tools, but in using them in such a manner as is necessary to the perfecting and accomplishing his Work: So the Art of one that pretends to the heavenly Life, consists not barely in praying and hearing, &c. but in using those Means with that Religious Skill and Artifice, which is necessary to render them effectually subservient to the Ends of Piety and Virtue.

And thus I have given a general Account of the Means which are necessary to our obtaining of Heaven, and which (as I have shewed) are either such as tend more directly and immediately to it, or such as more remotely respect it. The First is, the Practice of those heavenly Virtues in the Perfection whereof the Happiness of Heaven consists; the Second is, the practising of those Duties which are necessary to our acquiring and perfecting those heavenly Virtues. And of these Two Parts consists the whole Christian Life; which takes in not only all those Virtues that are to be practised by us in Heaven, but also all those Duties by which we are to overcome the Difficulty of those Virtues, and to acquire and perfect them. The First of these, for Distinction sake, we will call the heavenly Part of the Christian Life; it being that Part of it which we shall lead in Heaven, after we have learn'd it here upon Earth; the Second I shall call the Warfaring, or Militant Part of the Christian Life, which is peculiar to our earthly State, wherein we are to contend and strive with the manifold Difficulties which attend us in the Exercise of those heavenly Virtues. Both which, I conceive, are implied in those Words of the Apostle, Phil. i. 27. Only let your Conversation be as becometh the Gospel:

Gospel: where the Greek Word πολιτεύειν, which we render, Let your Conversation be, strictly signifies, behaving yourselves as Citizens; or which, if we may have leave to coin a Word, may be fitly render'd, Citizen it as becometh the Gospel. For the Word implies, that those of whom he speaks, were Denizens of some Free City; for so the Word πολιτευμα, which, Phil. iii. 20. is render'd Conversation, strictly denotes a Citizenship, from πολίται, Citizens; and is of the same Import with πολιτεία, which, Acts xxii. 28. is translated a Freedom, i. e. of the City of Rome; which denotes the State and Condition of those, who, tho they dwelt out of that City, and sometimes remote from it, had yet the Jus Civitatis Romanæ, the Privileges of it belonging to them. For thus Cicero describes it, Omnibus Municipibus duas esse Patrias, unam Naturæ, alteram Juris, Catonis Exemplo, qui Tusculi natus, in Populi Romani Societatem susceptus est: i. e. "All such as are made Free of the City have Two Countries, one of Nature, the other of Law; as Cato, for Instance, who was born at Tusculum and afterwards admitted a Citizen of Rome." Which exactly agrees with the Nature of this heavenly πολιτευμα, or Citizenship, which the Apostle here attributes to Christians, who, tho they belong at present to another Country, and live a great way off from the heavenly City, have as yet no Domicilium in Urbe, no actual Possession of any of its blessed Mansions; are notwithstanding Free Denizens of it, and have, by Covenant, a Right to all those blessed Privileges which its Inhabitants do actually enjoy. From whence it is evident, that the πολίτευε in that Text, refers to their being Citizens of Heaven, and as such it earnestly exhorteth them to behave themselves; to live as those who being now in a remote Country, are yet συμπολίται τῷ ἁγίῳ, as the Apostle expresses it, Eph. ii. 19. i. e. Fellow-Citizens with the Saints above; that are connaturalized with them into that heavenly Commonwealth. And being thus understood, the Apostle's Advice will comprehend in it both those kinds of Means which I have before described. For, to live as Citizens of Heaven, is, First, To live like those who are the Inhabitants of Heaven, to imitate their blessed Manners and Behaviour, in doing the Will of God upon Earth, as it is done by them in Heaven; and this takes in the Practice of all those heavenly Virtues of which the Religion of the End consists: Secondly, To live like those that have a πολιτευμα or Citizenship in Heaven, that are intituled by the Covenant to the Privileges and Immunities of it, but are as yet to win its Possession by a continual Warfare and Contention with those manifold Difficulties and Oppositions which lie in our way to it: and this takes in the Practice of all those Duties in which the Religion of the Means consists. To live like Christians therefore, or, as becomes the Gospel, is to live in the continual Use of both kinds of the Means of Happiness. So that the Christian Conversation consisting of these Two, is the only full and adequate Means by which Heaven can be obtained.

But that I may make this more fully appear, I shall consider these Two Parts of it distinctly, and endeavour to shew how effectually each of them doth contribute in its kind, to our obtaining the Happiness of Heaven. And, First, I shall begin with the Proximate Means, viz. The Practice of all those heavenly Virtues which are implied in the Religion of the End, and do make the heavenly Part of the Christian Life.

C H A P. III.

Concerning the Heavenly Part of the Christian Life, which is the Proximate Means of obtaining Heaven; shewing what Virtues it consists of, and how much every Virtue contributes to the Happiness of Heaven.

VIRTUE in the General, consists in a suitable Behaviour to the State and Capacities in which we are placed. Now Man who is the Subject of that Virtue we are here discoursing of, is to be considered under a Three-fold Capacity. The

First, is, Of a Rational Animal: The Second, Of a Rational Animal related to God: The Third, Of a Rational Animal related to all other Creatures.

And these are the only Capacities of Virtue that are in Human Nature: So that all the Virtues we are obliged to, and capable of, consist in behaving ourselves suitably to the State and Condition of Rational Animals, that are related to God and their Fellow-Creatures.

By which Three Capacities of our Nature, the Virtue or Suitableness of Behaviour which we stand obliged to, is distinguished into Three kinds, viz.

The Human,

The Divine, and

The Social.

Human Virtue consists in behaving ourselves suitably to the State and Capacity of mere Rational Animals.

Divine Virtue consists in behaving ourselves suitably to the Condition of Rational Animals related to God.

Social Virtue consists in behaving ourselves suitably to the Capacity of Rational Animals related to their Fellow-Creatures, but especially to Rational Creatures that are of the same Class and Society with us.

That I may therefore proceed more distinctly in this Argument, I shall endeavour to shew what those Virtues of the Christian Life are, which are proper to a Man in each of those Capacities; and how much each of those Virtues contributes to the Happiness of Heaven.

S E C T. I.

Concerning those Human Virtues which belong to a Man as he is a Reasonable Animal, shewing that they are all included in the Heavenly Part of the Christian Life, and that the Practice of them effectually conduces to our future Happiness.

FIRST, We will consider Man in the Capacity of a mere Rational Animal, that is compounded of contrary Principles, viz. Spirit and Matter, or a Rational Soul and Human Body; by which Composition he is, as it were, the Buckle of both Worlds, in whom the Spiritual and Material World are clasped and united together; and partaking as he does, of both Extremes, of Spirit and of Matter, of Angel and Brute, there arise within him, from those contrary Natures, contrary Propensions, viz. Rational and Sensual, or Angelical and Brutish: And in the due Subordination of these, his Sensual to his Rational Propensions, consists all Human Virtue.

For his Reason being the noblest Principle of his Nature, must be supposed to be implanted in him by God, to rule and govern him, to be an Eye to his blind and brutish Affections, to correct the Errors of his Imagination, to bound the Extravagancies of his Appetites, and regulate the whole Course of his Actions, so as that he may do nothing that is destructive or injurious to this excellent Frame and Structure of his Nature. But now in this compounded Nature of Man, there are his Concupiscible and Irascible Affections; with the First of which he desires and pursues his Pleasures, and with the Second he shuns and avoids his Dangers; and there are also bodily Appetites, such as Hunger, Thirst, and Carnal Concupiscence; and, together with these, a Self-Esteem and Valuation; all which are the natural Subjects of his Reason, and indeed the only Subjects upon which it is to exercise its Dominion: So that in the well and ill Government of these, consists all human Virtue and Vice. To the perfect well-governing therefore of a Man's self, there are Five Things indispensably necessary.

1. That he should impartially consult his Reason, what is absolutely best for him, and by what means it is best attainable; and then constantly pursue what it proposes and directs him to. For so far as he is wanting in this, he casts off the Government of his Reason.

2. That he should proportion his Concupiscible Affections to the just Value which his Reason sets upon those Things which he affects: For every-Degree of Affection which exceeds the Merit of Things, is Irrational, and consequently injurious to our Rational Nature.

3. That he should not suffer his Irascible Affections to exceed those Evils and Dangers which he would avoid: For if he doth, they will prove greater Evils to him, than those Evils or Dangers are which raise and provoke them.

4. That he should not indulge his bodily Appetite to the Hurt and Prejudice of his Rational Nature: For if he does, he will violate the nobler, for the sake of the viler Part of himself. And,

5. That upon the whole, he should maintain a modest Opinion of himself; and not think better of his own Conduct and Management of himself than it deserves: For by so doing, he will be apt to over-look his own Misgovernments, and so incapacitate himself for any farther Improvements. And in these Five Particulars consists all that Virtue which belongs to a Man, considered merely in the Capacity of a Rational Animal:

The First is the Virtue of Prudence,

The Second is the Virtue of Moderation,

The Third is the Virtue of Fortitude,

The Fourth is the Virtue of Temperance,

The Fifth is the Virtue of Humility.

All which, as I shall shew, are Essential Parts of the Christian Life, and such as do effectually contribute to our heavenly Happiness.

I. Prudence. And this is the Root and Ground-work of all other Virtues; 'Tis this that gives Law and Scope to all our Motions, that proposes the Ends, and prescribes the Measures of our Actions. For Prudence consists in being guided and directed by Right Reason, as it proposes to us the worthiest Ends, and directs us to the fittest and most effectual Means of obtaining them. So that to live prudently, is to live in the constant Exercise of our Reason, and to be continually pursuing such Ends as Right Reason proposes, by such Means as Right Reason directs us to, which is the proper Business of all the Virtues of Religion. And hence Religion, in the Scripture, is frequently called by the Name of Wisdom or Prudence; The Fear of the Lord, that is Wisdom, saith Job; and to depart from Evil, that is Understanding, Job xxviii. 28. And, The Fear of the Lord is the Beginning of Wisdom, saith David, Psal. cxi. 10. where the Fear of the Lord comprehends all the Acts of Religion; which are therefore wise and prudent, because they are the fittest Means to those worthiest Ends which Right Reason proposes. So that to exercise our Reason in the Search and Discovery of what is absolutely best for us, and to follow our Reason in the Pursuit and Acquest of what it discovers to be so, is that Virtue of Prudence whereunto we stand obliged, as we are Rational Animals.

For our Reason being the noblest Principle of our Nature, that by which we are raised above the Level of Brutes, yea, by which we are allied to Angels, and do border upon God himself, ought, upon that Account, to be submitted to, as the supreme Regent and Directress of all our other Powers, and to be looked upon as the Rule of our Will, and the Guide of all our Animal Motions. And when, to gratify our sensual Appetites, or unreasonable Passions we either neglect those Ends which our Reason proposes to us, or pursue them by such Means as our Reason disallows of, we reverse the very Order of our Natures, and tread Antipodes to ourselves; and, while we do so, it is impossible we should be happy, either here, or hereafter: For every Thing, you see, is diseased, while it is in an unnatural State and Condition, while its Parts are displaced, or put into a Disorder, or distorted into an unnatural Figure. And so it is with a Man, who, while he preserves his Faculties in their natural Station and Subordination to each other, while he keeps his Affections and Appetites in subjection to his Will, and his Will to his Reason, he is calm and quiet, and enjoys within himself perpetual Ease and Tranquillity: But when once he breaks this Order, and suffers his Passions or his Appetites to usurp the Place of his Reason; to impose contrary Ends to it, or prescribe contrary Means; his Faculties, like dis-jointed Members, are in perpetual Anguish and Anxiety. And hence it is, that in the Course of a wicked Life, we feel such restless Contentions between our Spirit and Flesh, between the Law in our Minds, and the Law in our Members; because our Nature is out of Tune, and its Faculties are displaced and disordered, and that sovereign Principle of Reason which should sway and govern us, is desposed and made a Vassal to our Appetites and Passions: For in all our evil Courses we choose and refuse, resolve and act, not as Reason directs us, but as Sense and Passion byasses us; and our Reason having nothing to do in all this Brutish Scene of Action, either sleeps it out, without minding or regarding, or else sits by as an idle Spectator of it, and only censures and condemns it. And it is this that causes all that Tumult and Contest that is in our Natures; and till, by the Exercise of Prudence, our Faculties are reduced, and set in order again, our Mind will be like our Body, while its Bones are out of Joint, continually restless and unquiet. And therefore to remove this great Indisposition of our Nature to Happiness, Prudence is required of us, as one of the principal Virtues of the heavenly Part of the Christian Life.

For thus our Saviour enjoins, that we should be wise as Serpents, as well as harmless as Doves, Mat. x. 16. which tho it be here prescribed in a particular Case only, viz. that of Persecution; yet since the Reason of it extends to all other Cases, and it is fit we should be Prudent in all our Undertakings, as well as in suffering Persecution, it is upon that Account equivalent to an Universal Command. So also, Ephes. v. 15. See that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, i. e. in the whole Course of your Actions, take heed that ye follow the Guidance of your Reason, and do not suffer your selves to be seduced by your blind Passions and Appetites, which are mere Ignes fatui, or the Guides of Fools. And accordingly the Apostle prays for his Christian Colossians, That they might be filled with the Knowledge of God in all Wisdom and spiritual Understanding, Col. i. 9. i. e. That they might have such a Knowledge of God's Will as might render them truly prudent, and cause them to pursue the best Ends by the best Means. And tho this Virtue seldom occurs in the New Testament, under its own Name; yet, as in the above-named Places, it is expressed by Wisdom, so it is elsewhere by Knowledge, as particularly, 2 Cor. vi. 6. where he commands the Ministers of the Church to approve themselves such by several Virtues, and particularly by Pureness, i. e. Continence; and by Knowledge, i. e. by Prudence: For, besides that Knowledge, as it signifies an Understanding of Divine Things, was not a Virtue in the Apostles, but a Gift of God, and so not proper to be enumerated amongst these Virtues; there is hardly any Account can be given why the Apostle should place Knowledge in the midst of so many Moral Virtues, if he did not thereby mean the Virtue of Prudence, which is, as it were, the Eye and Guide of all the other Virtues. So again, 2 Pet. i. 6. where he bids us add to Faith Virtue, i. e. Fortitude, or Constancy of Mind; and to Virtue Knowledge; and to Knowledge Temperance: By Knowledge, it is highly probable, he means Prudence, because he places it in the midst of those Two Virtues which border nearest upon Prudence.

Now that the Practice of this Virtue is a most proper and effectual Means of our Everlasting Happiness, is evident from hence; because the Practice of it is a constant Exercise of Reason: For to act prudently in Religion, is to follow the best Reason; to aim at Heaven, which is the best End, and direct our Actions thither by the best Rules: 'Tis to consult what is best for ourselves, and how it may be most effectually obtained. In a Word, it is to intend the chiefest Good above All, and to level our Lives and Actions most directly towards it: This is Religious Prudence in the General; and as for those Particulars of it, which we are obliged to exercise in the several States, Relations, and Circumstances wherein we are placed, they all consist in doing what is most fit and reasonable, with respect to that Great and Blessed End.

For by living in the continual Practice of Religious Prudence, we shall by degrees habituate ourselves to a Life of Reason, and shake off that drowsy Charm of Sense and Passion which hangs upon our Minds, and renders our Faculties so dull and unactive: And having disused ourselves a while to obey their blind and imperious Dictates, our Reason will re-assume its Throne in us, and direct all our Aims and Endeavours to what is fittest and most reasonable. For we being finite and limited Beings, cannot operate divers ways with equal Vigour at once; and our rational and sensitive Propensions are made in such a regular and æquilibrium Order, that proportionably as the one does increase in Activity, the other always decay; and so accordingly as we abate in the Strength of our Brutish, we shall improve in the Vigour of our Rational Faculties. But to act suitably to their Natures, being the End of all our Faculties and Powers of Action, the God of Nature, to excite them thereto, has founded all their Pleasure in the vigorous Exercise of them upon suitable Objects. Since therefore our Reason is the best and noblest of all Powers of Action, to be sure the greatest Pleasure we are capable of, must spring out of the Exercise of our Reason. Wherefore since Prudence consists in the Use of our Reason, the Practice thereof must needs effectually contribute to our Pleasure and Happiness: For Use and Exercise will mightily strengthen and improve our Reason, and render it not only more apprehensive of what is fit and reasonable, but also more persuasive and prevalent; and when once it is improved into a prevailing Principle of Action, and hath acquired not only Skill enough to prescribe what is right to us, but also Power enough to persuade us to comply with its Prescriptions; to choose and refuse, to love and hate, to hope and fear, desire and delight, and regulate all our Actions by its Laws and Dictates, then are we entering upon our Heaven and Happiness.

For that which makes us unhappy, is, that our sinful and unreasonable Affections do so hamper and intangle us, that we cannot freely exercise our Faculties upon such Objects as are most suitable to them; that our Minds and Wills are so fettered by our vicious Inclinations, that we cannot exert them upon that which is most worthy to be Known and Chosen, without a great deal of Difficulty and Distraction? But now under the Conduct of our Reason, our Faculties will, by Degrees, recover their Freedom, and disengage themselves from those vicious Encumbrances, which do so clog and interrupt them in their Rational Motions: And when this is thorowly effected, we are in full Possession of the heavenly State, which (as I have shewed) consists in the free and and vigorous Exercise of our Rational Faculties upon the best and worthiest Objects: For when once our Passions and Appetites are perfectly subdued to our Reason, all our Rational Faculties will be free, and every one will move towards its proper Object, without any Lett or Hindrance; our Understanding will be swallow'd up in a fix'd Contemplation of the sublimest Truths; our Wills entirely resigned to the Choice and Embraces of the truest Good; our Affections unalterably devoted to the Love and Fruition of the most excellent Beauty and Perfection; and in this consists the happy State of Heaven: So that to live prudently, or, which is the same, to govern ourselves by our best Reason, is both a necessary and effectual Means of attaining to the Heavenly State.

II. Another Virtue which appertains to a Man, considered merely as a Rational Animal, is Moderation; which consists in proportioning our concupiscible Affections to the just worth and value of Things; so as neither to spend our Affections too prodigally upon Trifles, nor yet be oversparing or niggardly of them to real and substantial Goods: But to love, desire and expect Things more or less, according to the Estimate which our best and most impartial Reason makes of their Worth and Goodness. For he that affects Things more than in the Esteem of Reason they deserve, affects them irrationally, and regulates his Passion by his wild and extravagant Imagination, and not by his Reason and Judgment. And while Men do thus neglect their Reason, and accustom themselves to desire, and love, and affect without it, they necessarily disable themselves to enjoy a Rational Happiness. For, besides that their Rational Faculties being thus laid by, and unemployed, will naturally contract Rust, and grow every Day more weak and restive; besides, that their unexercised Reason will melt away in Sloth and Idleness, and all its vital Powers freeze for want of motion, and, like standing Water, stagnate and gather mire, and by degrees corrupt and putrify, till at last it will be impossible to revive them to the vigorous Exercise and Motion wherein their Pleasure and Happiness consists: Besides this, I say, by habituating ourselves to affect Things irrationally, i. e. to love the least Goods most, and the greatest least, we shall disable ourselves from enjoying any Goods, but only such as cannot make us happy. For he that loves any Good more than it is worth, can never be happy in the enjoyment of it; because he thinks there is more in it than he finds, and so is always disappointed in the Fruition of it. And the Grief of being disappointed of what he expects, does commonly countervail the Pleasure of what he finds and enjoys. While he is in the pursuit of any Good which he inordinately dotes upon, he is wild and imaginative; he swells with Fantastick Joys, and juggles himself into Expectations, that are as large and boundless as his Desires: But when once he is seiz'd of it, and finds how vastly the Enjoyment falls short of his Expectation, his Pleasure is presently lost in his Disappointment, and so he remains as unsatisfied as ever. And thus if he were to spend an Eternity in such Pursuits and Enjoyments, his Life would be nothing but an Everlasting Succession of Expectations and Disappointments. So that all inordinate Affection destroys its own Satisfaction, and necessarily renders us by so many Degrees miserable, as it exceeds the real Worth and Value of Things.

Besides which, also, it is to be considered, that all these lesser Goods which are the Objects of our Extravagant Affections, are Things which we must ere long be for ever deprived of: For the lesser Goods are those, which are only good for the worser part of us, that is, for our Body and Animal Life; the proper Goods whereof are the Outward Sensitive Enjoyments of this World; all which, when we leave this World, we must leave for ever, and go away into Eternity, with nothing about us, but only the good or bad Dispositions of our Souls. So that if our Soul be carnaliz'd thro' our immoderate Affection to the Things of this World, we shall carry that Affection with us, but leave the Things which we thus vehemently affect behind us for ever.

For that which is the prevailing Temper of Souls in this Life, will doubtless be so in the other too ; so far is that of the Poet true,

— Quæ gratia currûm

Amorûmque fuit vivis, quæ cura nitentes

Pascere equos, eadem sequitur tellure repôstos.

For tho the coming into the other World, will questionless improve those Souls which are really good before ; yet it is not to be imagined how it should create those good, who are habitually bad ; and if we retain in the other World that prevailing Affection to these sensitive Goods which we contracted in this, it must necessarily render us unspeakably miserable there. For every Lust the Soul carries into the other World, will, by being eternally separated from its Pleasures, convert into an Hopeless Desire, and upon that account grow more furios and impatient. For of all the Torments of the Mind, I know none that is comparable to that of an outrageous Desire joined with Despair of Satisfaction ; which is just the Case of Sensual and Worldly-minded Souls in the other Life, where they are full of sharp and unrebated Desires, and, like starving Men, that are shut up between two dead Walls, are tormented with a fierce but hopeless Hunger, which, having nothing else to feed on, preys and quarries on themselves ; and in this desolate Condition they are forced to wander to and fro, tormented with a restless Rage, an hungry and unsatisfied Desire, craving Food, but neither finding nor expecting any ; and so in unexpressible Anguish they pine away a long Eternity. And tho they might find Content and Satisfaction, could they but divert their Affections another way, and reconcile them to the heavenly Enjoyments ; yet being irrecoverably pre-engaged to sensual Goods, they have no savour or relish of any thing else, but are like Feverish Tongues that disgust and nauseate the most grateful Liquors, by reason of their own over-flowing Gall : So impossible is it for Men to be happy, either here or hereafter, so long as their Affections to the lesser Goods of this World do so immoderately exceed the worth and value of them.

One Essential Part therefore of the Christian Life, which is the Great Means of our Happiness, is the Virtue of Moderation ; the peculiar Office whereof is to bound our Concupiscible Affections, and proportion them to the Intrinsic Worth of those outward Goods which we affect and desire : For tho the word Moderation, according to our present acceptation of it, be no where to be found in the New Testament, yet the Virtue expressed by it is frequently enjoined ; as particularly where we are forbid to set our Affections upon the Things of the Earth, Col. iii. 2. To love the World, or the Things that are in the World, 1 John ii. 15. Which Phrases are not to be so understood, as if we were not to love the Enjoyments of the World at all ; for they are the Blessings of God, and such as he has proposed to us in his Promises, as the Rewards and Encouragements of our Obedience ; and to be sure, he would never encourage us to obey him by the Hope of such Rewards as are unlawful for us to desire and love : The meaning therefore of these Prohibitions, is, that we should so moderate our Affections to the World, as not to permit them to exceed the real Worth and Value of its Enjoyments. For it is not simply our loving it, but our loving it to such a degree as is inconsistent with our Love of God, that is here forbidden : For he that loveth the World (saith St. John) the love of the Father is not in him ; i. e. he that loves it to such a degree, as to prefer the Riches, Honours and Pleasures of it, before God, and his Duty to him, hath no real Love to God, i. e. he loves not God as God, as the chiefest Good, and supreme Beauty and Perfection. And hence Covetousness, which is an immoderate Desire of the World, is called Idolatry, Col. iii. 5. because it sets the World in the place of God, and gives it that supreme Degree of Affection, which is only due to Him ; and this the Apostle there calls Inordinate Affection, because it extravagantly exceeds the intrinsic Worth and Value of its Objects. Wherefore we are strictly enjoined to take heed and be- ware of Covetousness, Lukè xii. 15. And to let our Conversation be without Covetousness, Heb. xiii. 5. By all which, and sundry other Commands and Prohibitions of the Gospel, the Moderation of our Concupiscible Affections is made a necessary part of the Christian Life.

Now that this also mightily contributes to our acquisition of the heavenly Happiness, is evident, not only from what hath been already said, but also from hence, that till our Affections are thus moderated, we can have no Savour or Relish of the heavenly Enjoyments. For in this corrupt State of our Nature, we generally understand by our Affections, which, like coloured Glass, represent all Objects to us in their own Hue and Complexion. When therefore a Man's Affections are immoderately carried out towards worldly Things, they will be sure by degrees to corrupt and deprave his Judgment, and render him as unfit to judge of Divine and Spiritual Enjoyments, as a Plowman is to be a Moderator in the Schools. For when a Man's Thoughts have been employed another way, and the Delights of Sense have for a long while pre-occupied his Understanding, he will judge Things to be Good or Evil, according as they disgust or gratify his lower Appetites: And this being the Standard by which he measures Things, 'tis impossible he should have any Savour of those Spiritual Goods in which the Happiness of Heaven consists. For tho in his Nature there is a Tendency to Rational Pleasures, yet this he may, and very frequently does, stifle and extinguish, by addicting himself wholly to the Delights and Gratifications of his Sense, which by degrees will so melt down his Rational Inclinations into his Sensual, and confound and mingle them with his Carnal Appetites, that his Soul will wholly sympathize with his Body, and have all Likes and Dislikes in common with it; and there is nothing will be capable of pleasing the one, but what does gratify the unbounded Liquorishness of the other.

Now to such a Soul the spiritual World must needs be a barren Wilderness, where no Good grows that it can live upon, none but what is nauseous and distasteful to its coarse and vitiating Palate; where there are noble Entertainments, indeed, for Minds that are contempered to them, that have already tasted and experienced them, but not one drop of Water to cool the Tip of a Sensual Tongue, or gratify the Thirst of a Carnal Desire. So that were we admitted to that heavenly Place where the Blessed dwell, yet unless we had acquired their heavenly Disposition and Temper, we could never participate with them in their Pleasures. For so great would be the Antipathy of our sensual Affections to them, that we should doubtless fly away from them, and rather choose to be for ever Insensible, than be condemned to an everlasting Perception of what is so ungrateful to our Natures. So that till we have in some measure moderated our Concupiscible Affections, and weaned them from their excessive Dotages upon sensual Good, it is impossible we should enjoy the Happiness of Heaven: For such perfect Opposites are a Spiritual Heaven and a Carnal Mind, that unless This be Spiritualized, or That be Carnalized, it is impossible they should ever meet and agree.

III. Another Virtue that belongs to a Man, considered merely as a Rational Animal, is Fortitude; which in the largest Sense, consists in not permitting our Irrascible Affections, to exceed those Evils or Dangers which we seek to repel or avoid; in keeping our Fear and Anger, our Malice, Envy and Revenge, in such due subjection, as not to let them exceed those Bounds, which Reason, and the Nature of Things, prescribe them: For I do not take Fortitude here in the narrow sense of the Moralists, as it is a Medium between Irrational Fear and Fool-hardiness; but as it is the Rule by which all those Irrascible Passions in us, which arise from the sense of any Evil or Danger, ought to be guided and directed; that by which we are to guard and defend ourselves, against all those troublesome and disquieting Impressions, which outward Evils and Dangers are apt to make upon our Minds. And in this Latitude, Fortitude comprehends not only Courage, as it is opposed to Fear; but also Gentleness, tleness, as it is opposed to Fierceness; Sufferance, as it is opposed to Impatience; Contentedness, as it is opposed to Envy; and Meekness, as it is opposed to Malice and Revenge: All which are the Passions of weak and pusillanimous Minds, that are not able to withstand an Evil, nor endure the least Touch of it, without being startled and disordered; that are so softened with Baseness and Cowardice, that they cannot resist the most gentle Impressions of Injury. For as sick Persons are offended with the Light of the Sun, and the Freshness of the Air, which are highly pleasant and delightful to such as are well and in Health; even so Persons of weak and feeble Minds are easily offended, their Spirits are so tender and effeminate, that they cannot endure the least Air of Evil should blow upon them; and what would be only a Diversion to a courageous Soul, troubles and incommodes them. And whatsoever Courage such Persons may pretend to, it's merely a Heat and Ferment of their Blood and Spirits; a Courage, wherein Game-Cocks and Mastiffs out-vie the greatest Heroes of them all. But as to that which is truly Rational and Manly, which consists in a firm Composedness of Mind, in the midst of evil or dangerous Accidents, they are the most wretched Cowards in Nature. For the true Fortitude of the Mind consists in being hardened against Evil upon Rational Principles; in being so fenced and guarded with Reason and Consideration, as that no dolorous Accident from without is able to invade it, or raise any violent Commotions in it: In a word, in having such a constant Power over its irascible Affections, as not to be over-prone, either to be timorous in Danger, or envious in Want, or impatient in Suffering, or angry at Contempt, or malicious and revengeful under Injuries and Provocations. And till we have in some Measure acquired this Virtue, we can never be happy either here or hereafter.

For whilst we are in this World, we must expect to be encompassed with continual Clouds of evil Accidents, some or other of which will be always pressing upon and justling against us: So that if our Minds are fore and uneasy, and over-apt to be affected with the Evil, we shall be continually pained and disquieted. For whereas were our Minds but calm and easy, all the evil Accidents that befall us, would be but like a Shower of Hail upon the Tiles of a Musick-House, which with all its Clatter and Noise, disturbs not the Harmony that is within; our being too apt to be moved into Passion by them, uncovers our Mind to them, and lays it open to the Tempest. And commonly the greatest Hurt which these outward Evils do us, is, the disturbing our Minds into violent Passions; and this they will never cease doing, till we have thorowly fortified our Reason against them: For if our Reason commands not our Passions, to be sure outward Accidents will; and while they do so, we are Tenants at will to them for all our Peace and Happiness; and according as they happen to be Good or Bad, so must we be sure still to be Happy and Miserable. And in this Condition, like a Ship without a Pilot, in the midst of a Tempestuous Sea, we are the sport of every Wind and Wave, and know not, till the Event hath determin'd it, how the next Billow will dispose of us; whether it will dash us against a Rock, or drive us into a quiet Harbour.

So miserable is our Condition here, while we are utterly destitute of this Virtue of Fortitude: But much more miserable will the want of it necessarily render us hereafter. For all those Affections which fall under the Inspection and Government of Fortitude, are, in their Excesses, naturally vexatious to the Mind, and do always disturb and raise Tumults in it: For so Wrath and Impatience distracts and alienates it from itself, and confounds its Thoughts, and shuffles them together into a heap of wild and disorderly Fancies; so Malice, Envy, and Revenge, do fill it with anxious biring Thoughts, that, like young Vipers, gnaw the Womb that bears them, and fret and gall the wretched Mind that forms and gives them Entertainment. And tho in this World we are not so sensible of the mischief which these black and rancorous Passions do us; partly, because our sense of them is abated with the intermixture of our bodily Pleasures; and partly, because while we operate as we do, by these unwieldy Organs of Flesh, our Reflections cannot be comparably so quick, nor our Passions so violent, nor our Perceptions so brisk and exquisite as they will doubtless be, when we are stript into naked Spirits; yet if we go away into the other World with these Affections unmortified in us, they will not only be far more violent and outrageous than now, and we shall not only have a far quicker Sense of them than now; but this our sharp Sense of them shall be pure and simple, without any intermixture of Pleasure to soften and allay it. And if so, Good Lord! What exquisite Devils and Tormenters will they prove, when an extreme Rage and Hate, Envy and Revenge shall be all together, like so many hungry Vultures preying on our Hearts; and our Mind shall be continually baited and worried, with all the furious Thoughts which these outrageous Passions can suggest to us. When with the meagre Eyes of Envy we shall look up towards the Regions of Happiness, and incessantly pine and grieve at the Felicities of those that inhabit them; when, thro' a Sense of our own Follies, and of the miserable effects of them, our Rage and Impatience shall be heightened, and boiled up into a diabolical Fury; and when, at the same Time, an inveterate Malice against all that we converse with, and a fierce desire of Revenging ourselves upon those who have contributed to our Ruin, shall, like a Wolf in our Breasts, be continually gnawing and feeding upon our Souls, what an insupportable Hell shall we be to ourselves! Doubtless, that outward Hell to which bad Spirits are condemned is very terrible; but I cannot imagine, but that the worst of their Hell is within themselves, and that their own devilish Passions are severer Furies to them than all those Devils, that are without them. For Wrath and Envy, Malice and Revenge, are both the Nature and the Plague of Devils; and tho, as Angels, they are the Creatures of God; yet, as Devils, they are the Creatures of these their devilish Affections; they were these that transformed them from blessed Angels into cursed Fiends; and could they but once cease to be envious and malicious, they would cease to be Devils, and turn blessed Angels again. If then these rancorous Affections have such a malignant Influence, as to blacken Angels into Devils, and make them the most miserable, who were once the most happy Creatures; how can we ever expect to be happy, so long as we indulge and harbour them?

Wherefore, to remove this great Impediment of our Happiness, Christianity strictly enjoins us to practise this necessary Virtue of Fortitude, which consists in the due Regulation of all these our Irascible Affections; in moderating our Anger and Impatience, suppressing our Envy, and extinguishing all our unreasonable Hatred and desire of Revenge. For hitherto tend all those Evangelical Precepts, which require us to put away all bitterness and wrath, all clamour and evil-speaking, and malice, Eph. iv. 31. to lay aside all malice, and to be Children in malice, 1 Pet. ii. 1. 1 Cor. xiv. 20. to be strengthened with all might unto all patience and long-suffering, Col. i. 11. And accordingly all the Virtues which are comprehended in this of Fortitude, are reckoned among the Fruits of that Blessed Spirit, by which we are to be guided and directed: Gal. v. 22. But the fruit of the Spirit is peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, and meekness; all which are nothing but this great Virtue of Fortitude, severally exerting itself upon those several Irascible Affections, that are in us, and guiding and regulating them according to those Laws and Directions which Right Reason severally prescribes them; and setting such Bounds and Limits to each of them, as are necessary to the Peace and Happiness of our Rational Natures; that so when outward Dangers or Evils do excite them, they may not start out into such wild Excesses as to become Plagues and Diseases to our Minds.

Now how much the Practice of this Virtue conduces to our heavenly Happiness, is evident from hence, That all the Diseases and Distemperatures which our Mind is capable of, are nothing else but the Excesses of its Concupiscible and Irascible Affections; nothing but its being affected with Good and Evil beyond those Limits and Measures which Right Reason prescribes. Did we but love outward Goods according to the Value, at which true Reason rates them, we should neither be vexed with an impatient Desire of them, while we want, nor disappointed of our Expectation, while we enjoy them. And when our Desires towards these outward Goods are reduced to that Coolness and Moderation, as neither to be impatient in the Pursuit, nor dissatisfied in the Enjoyment of them, it is impossible they should give any Disturbance to our Minds. And so on the other hand, did we but take care to regulate our Resentments of outward Evils and Dangers as Right Reason advises, they would never be able to hurt or discompose our Minds: For Right Reason advises, that we should not so resent them, as to increase and aggravate them; that we should not add the Disquietude of an anxious Fear to the Dangers that threaten us; nor the Torment of an outrageous Anger, to the Indignities that are offered us; nor the Smart of a peevish Impatience to the Sufferings that befall us; in a word, that we should not aggravate our Want thro' an invidious pining at another's Fulness, nor sharpen the Injuries that are offered us by a malicious and revengeful Resentment of them. And he that follows the Advices of Reason, and conducts his Irrascible Affections by them, has a Mind that is elevated above the Reach of Injury; that sits above the Clouds in a calm and quiet Æther, and with a brave Indifferency hears the rowling Thunders grumble and burst under its feet. And whilst outward Evils fall upon timorous and peevish and malicious Spirits, like Sparks of Fire upon a heap of Gunpowder, and do presently blow them up, and put them all in Combustion; when they happen to a dispassionate Mind, they fall like Stones on a Bed of Down, where they sit easily and quietly, and are received with a calm and soft Compliance. When therefore by the continual Practice of Moderation and Fortitude, we have tamed and civilized our Concupiscible and Irrascible Affections, and reduced them under the Government of Reason, our Minds will be free from all Disease and Disturbance, and we shall be liable to no other Evil but that of bodily Sense and Passion. So that when we leave our Bodies, and go into the World of Spirits, we shall presently feel ourselves in perfect Health and Ease: For the Health of a Reasonable Soul consists in being perfectly Reasonable, in having all its Affections perfectly subdued to a well-inform'd Mind, and clothed in the Livery of its Reason. And while it is thus, it cannot be diseased in that Spiritual State, wherein it will be wholly separated from all bodily Sense and Passion; because it has no Affection in it that can any way disturb or ruffle its calm and gentle Thoughts. And then feeling all within it self to be well, and as it should be; every String tuned into a perfect Harmony; every Motion and Affection corresponding with the most perfect draughts and models of its own Reason, it must needs highly approve of, and be perfectly satisfied with itself; and while it surveys its own Motions and Actions, it must necessarily have a most delicious Gust and Relish of them, they being all such as its best and purest Reason approves of, with a full and ungain saying Judgment. And thus the Soul being cured of all irregular Affection, and removed from all corporeal Passion, will live in perfect Health and Vigour, and for ever enjoy within itself a Heaven of Content and Peace.

IV. Another Virtue which appertains to a Man, considered merely as a Rational Animal, is Temperance; which consists in not indulging our bodily Appetites, to the hurt and prejudice of our Rational Nature; or, in refraining from all those Excesses of bodily Pleasure, of Eating, Drinking, and Venery, which do either disorder our Reason, or indispose us to enjoy the pure and spiritual Pleasures of the Mind. For besides that all Excesses of bodily Pleasures are naturally prejudicial to our Reason, as they indispose those bodily Organs by which it operates, (for so Drunkenness dilutes the Brain, which is the Mint of the Understanding, and drowns those Images it stamps upon it, in a Flood of unwholesome Rheums and Moistures; and Gluttony clogs the Animal Spirits, which are, as it were, the Wings of the Mind, and indisposes them for the highest and noblest Flights of Reason; so Wantonneſs chafes the Blood into feveriſh Heats, and by cauſing it to boil up too faſt into the Brain, diſorders the Motions of the Spirits there, and ſo confounds the Phantaſms, that the Mind can have no clear or diſtinct Perception of them; by which means our Intellectual Faculties are very often interrupted, and forced to ſit ſtill for want of proper Tools to work with; and ſo, by often loitering, grow, by degrees, liſtleſs and unactive, and at the laſt are utterly indispoſed to any Rational Operations;) beſides this, I ſay, (which muſt needs be a mighty prejudice to our Rational Nature) by too much familiarizing ourſelves to bodily Pleaſures, we ſhall break off all our acquaintance with ſpiritual ones; and grow, by degrees, ſuch utter Strangers to them, that we ſhall never be able to reliſh and enjoy them; and our Soul will contract ſuch an Uxorious Fondneſs of the Body (that being the Shop of all the Pleaſure it was ever acquainted with) that 'twill never be able to live happily without it: For tho in its ſeparate State it cannot be ſuppoſed that the Soul will retain the Appetites of the Body; yet, if while it is in the Body, it wholly abandons itſelf to Corporeal Pleaſures, it may, and doubtleſs will retain a vehement hankering after it, and longing to be re-united to it; which, I conceive, is the only ſenſuality that a ſeparated Soul is capable of: For when ſuch a Soul arrives into the Spiritual World, her having wholly accuſtom'd herſelf to bodily Pleaſures, and never experienc'd any other, will neceſſarily render her incapable of enjoying the Pleaſures of Pure and Bleſſed Spirits. So that being left utterly deſtitute of all her dear Delights and Satisfaction, which are ſuch as ſhe knows ſhe can never enjoy but in Conjunction with the Body, all her Appetite and Longing muſt neceſſarily be an outrageous Deſire of being Embodied again, that ſo ſhe may be capable of repeating her old ſenſual Pleaſures, and acting over the brutiſh Scene anew.

And this, as ſome think, is the Reason why ſuch groſs and ſenſual Souls have appeared ſo often, after their Separation, in the Church-yards, or Charnel-Houſes, where their Bodies were laid; becauſe they cannot pleaſe themſelves without Plat. Phæd. p. 398. them: Ἡ δὲ (Ψυχὴ) ἐπιθυμητικῶς τῷ σώματι ἔχουσα, περὶ ἐκείνο πολὺν χρόνον ἐπισημένη, καὶ πρὶν τὸ ὄρατον τόπον πολλὰ ἀνιſſείνασα, καὶ πολλὰ παθεῖσα, βίβη καὶ μόλις ὑπὸ τῷ περιεſταμένῳ δαίμονος οἰχέται ἀγόμενη. The Soul that is infected with a great Luſt to the Body, continues ſo, for a great while after Death; and ſuffering great Reſiſtances, hovers about this viſible Place, and is hardly drawn from thence by force, by the Dæmon that hath the Guard and Care of it. Where, by Ibid. 386. the viſible Place, he means, περὶ τὰ μνῆματά τε καὶ τὰς τάφους, περὶ ἃ δὴ καὶ ἄρδην ἄτλα ψυχῶν σκιοειδῆ φαντάσματα. That is, About their Monuments and Sepulchres, where the ſhadowy Phantaſms of ſuch Souls have ſometimes appeared. For being utterly unacquainted with the Pleaſures of Spirits, they have nothing in all the Spiritual World to feed their hungry Deſire; which makes them, when they are permitted to wander, to hover about, and linger after their Bodies; the Impoſſibility of being re-united to them, not being able to cure them of their impotent Deſire of it, but ſtill they would fain be alive again, and reſume their old Inſtruments of Pleaſure;

———— Iterumque ad tarda reverti

Corpora : —————

———— Quæ lucis miſeris tam dira Cupido?

And hence, among other Reasons, it was, that the Primitive Chriſtians did ſo ſeverely abſtain from bodily Pleaſures, that by this means they might gently wean the Soul from the Body, and teach it before-hand to live upon the Delights of ſeparated Spirits; that ſo, upon its Separation, it might drop into Eternity, like ripe Fruit from the Tree, with Eaſe and Willingneſs; and that by accuſtoming it before to ſpiritual Pleaſures and Delights, it might acquire ſuch a ſavoury Senſe and Reliſh of them, as to be able, when it came into the ſpiritual World, to live wholly upon them; and to be ſo intirely ſatified tified with them, as not to be endlessly vex'd with a tormenting Desire of returning to the Body again. For so Clemens Alexandrinus, Ἡμῖν ὅ τοῖς θνητομένοις τὴν βρώσιν τὴν ἐπιγῆνιον, ἀρχαίαν ἀνάγκη τῆς ὑπὸ τῆ ἐξουδὸν γαστρὸς, ἐπὶ τε μᾶλλον καὶ τὴ ταύτῃ περιφιλῶν. We that are hunting after the heavenly Food, must take heed that we keep our earthly Belly in subjection, and to keep a strict Government over those Things that are pleasant to it: For saith he, a little before, Οὐτε γὰρ ἔργον ἡμῖν ἡ τροφή, ἕτε σκοπὸς ἡ δυνή. ὡς δὲ τὸ ἐν ταύτῃ διαμονῆς. ἢ ὁ λόγος εἰς ἀφθαρσίαν παιδαγωγεί. Neither (saith he) is Food our Work, nor Pleasure our Aim; but we use them only as Necessaries to our present Abode, in which our Reason is instituting, and training us up to a Life incorruptible: i. e. They did so use them, as that, as much as in them lay, they might wean their Souls from the Pleasures of them, that so they might have the better Appetite to that Spiritual Food upon which they were to live for ever,

Pædag. l. 2. c. i. p. 141.

Ibid p. 139.

And therefore thus to temperate and restrain ourselves in the Use of bodily Pleasures, is one of the necessary Virtues of the Christian Life: For hitherto tend all those Precepts concerning Abstaining from fleshly Lusts which war against our Souls, 1 Pet. ii. 11. and mortifying the Deeds of the Body, Rom. viii. 13. and keeping under the Body, 1 Cor. ix. 27. and putting off the Body of the Sins of the Flesh, Col. ii. 11. And we are strictly enjoined to be temperate in all Things, to watch and be sober, and walk honestly as in the Day, not in Rioting and Drunkenness; not in Chambering and Wantonness, not in excess of Wine, Revellings and Banquettings. The sense of all which, is, That we should not indulge our bodily Appetites, to the vitiating and depraving of our Spiritual; that we should not plunge ourselves so far in the Pleasures of the Flesh, as to drown our Sense and Perception of divine and heavenly Enjoyments; but that we should so far subdue and mortify our Sensuality, as that it may not have the Dominion over us, nor be the prevaleant Delight and Complacency of our Souls; but that the commanding Bias, and swaying Propension within us, may be towards divine and heavenly Enjoyments; that so, when we leave this Body, we may not be so wedded to the Pleasures of it, as not to be able to be happy without them; but that we may carry with us into Eternity such a quick Sense and lively Relish of the Pleasures above, as to be able to live upon, and be for ever satisfied with them.

So that at first view it is evident how much the Practice of this Virtue conduces to our Future Happiness: For by taking us off from all Excess of bodily Pleasure, it disposes us to enjoy the Pleasures of Heaven, and con-naturalizes our Souls to them: So that when after a long Exercise of Temperance, we come to leave the Body, our Soul will be so loosened from it before-hand, and rendered so indifferent to the Delights of it, that we shall be able to part both with It and Them, without any great Regret or Reluctancy, and to live from them for ever, without any disquieting Longings or Hankerings after them. For, as when we are grown up by Age and Experience, to a sense of more Manly Pleasures, we despise Nuts and Rattles, which, when we were Children we accounted our Happiness, and should have reckoned ourselves undone, had we been deprived of them: So when by the Practice of a severe Temperance, we have acquired a thorow sense of the Pleasures of Virtue and Religion, we shall look upon all our bodily Pleasures as the little Toys and Fooleries of our Infant-State, with which we pleased our Childish Fancies, when we knew no better. And whereas had we been deprived of them then, we should have cried and bemoaned ourselves, as little Children do when they lose their Play-Games, and reckon ourselves undone and miserable; upon the Experience we have had of the Nobler and more Generous Pleasures of Religion, we shall be able to despise these little, poor Entertainments of our Infancy; to take our leave of them without a Tear in our Eyes, and to live Eternally without missing them: For our Minds being for the main reconciled to Rational and Spiritual Pleasures, we shall put off all Remains of bodily Lust with with our Bodies, and so fly away into the spiritual World, with none but Pure and Spiritual Appetites about us; where meeting with an infinite Fulness of Spiritual Joys and Pleasures, of which we had many a foretaste in the Body, our predisposed Mind will presently close with, and feed upon them, with such an unspeakable Content and Satisfaction, as will ravish it for ever from the Thoughts of all other Pleasures. So that now we shall not only be able to subsist without fleshly Delights, but to despise and scorn them; our Faculties being treated every Moment with far nobler Fare, and better Joys.

V. Another of those Virtues which belong to a Man considered merely as a Rational Animal, is Humility; which consists in a modest and lowly Opinion of ourselves, and of our own Acquisitions, Merits, or Endowments; or, in not valuing ourselves beyond what is due and just, upon the account of any Good we are possessed of, whether it be Internal or External. For Pride, or an over-weaning Self-conceit, is the Bane of all our Virtue and Happiness: It causes us to overlook our Defects, and thereby hinders us from making farther Improvement; and it possesses us with an Opinion, that we deserve more than we have, and thereby renders us dissatisfied with our present Enjoyments. For by how much any Man over-values himself, by so much he under-values what he enjoys; because while he compares what he enjoys, with the fond Opinion that he hath of himself, he always finds it short of his Desert; and so can never be satisfied with it. Yea, such is the cross and capricious Humour of a proud Spirit, that the more it possesses, the bigger it swells with the Opinion of its own Desert; and the more it is opinionated of its own Desert, the less it is satisfied with that which it possesses and enjoys; For when a Man is exceeding apt to flatter and coaks himself, he will catch at any Pretence to exalt his own Merit and Desert, and be ready to measure it not only by what he is, but by what he has too; and then reckoning his outward Possessions to be the Rewards or Products of his inward Worth, the more he has, the more he will still imagine he deserves to have: So that his Opinion of his own Desert will still run on so fast before his Enjoyments, that tho' they should follow it never so close, as the hinder Wheels of a Chariot do the fore ones, yet it would be impossible for them to overtake it: And so long as he conceives his Enjoyments to be behind his Desert, he will be always discontented and dissatisfied with them; and while he continues of this Humour, the utmost Bliss and Glory that Heaven affords would not be able to satisfy him. For if he were set equal in Glory with the biggest Saint, he would be so puffed and exalted by it, in his Own Conceit, that he would fancy he merited the Glory of an Angel; and if from thence he were advanced to the Throne of an Arch-Angel, he would flatter himself into a Conceit, that he deserved the Glory and Dignity of a God: And so long as he fancied his Advancement to be below his Merit, he would never be contented with it, how high soever it were; but be continually vexing and repining that he was raised no higher.

And this, I verily believe, was the Temper of the Devil, and that which finally ruined and undid him. For when he was an Angel of Light, he was doubtless placed by the Father of Spirits, in such an Order or Degree of Dignity, as became the Perfection of his Nature: But he, reflecting on his own Endowments, and the glorious Condition wherein he was placed, began first to swell with an arrogant and over-weaning Conceit of himself, and to set too high a Value upon his own Angelical Graces and Perfections; and as the natural Effect of this, to imagine, that he was not high enough advanced in the Scale of the heavenly Hierarchy; and that his Station, in the Commonwealth of Angels, was beneath the Grandeur and Dignity of his Nature. This made him look up with envious Eyes upon the glorious Orders above him, into whose sublime Rank he being forbid to aspire by God, the Prince of Spirits, he proceeded, by degrees, to malign and hate both Him and Them. And this he first expressed, by entering into a Conspiracy against him, with some of his Fellow-Angels, whom he found most apt to be wrought upon by him; together with whom he made an open Revolt, forsook the blessed Abodes, as not enduring to abide any longer amongst those Blessed Orders whom he so inveterately bated and envied: And so, with his revolted Legions, descends into this Airy Region; where ever since he hath persisted in open Hostility against God and Heaven. And accordingly it is said of him and his Accomplices, That they kept not their first Station; that is, they would needs have a higher Station in Heaven than that wherein God had placed them; which because they could not obtain, they left their own Habitation, i. e. forsook Heaven, their Native Country and Abode, and came down into these lower Parts of the World, upon Design to strengthen the Party against Heaven, by seducing Mankind into the same Revolt with themselves, Jude 6.

Thus 'twas the Devil's Pride, you see, that made him Envious, his Envy that made him Spiteful and Malicious, all which together made him a Devil. And thus it would be with us, if we could be admitted into Heaven, whilst we are under the Power and Prevalence of Pride and Self-conceit. For while we think better of ourselves than God does, we shall never be contented with his Retributions, who will be sure to deal with every Man according to his Works; and that excessive Value we shall have of ourselves, will cause us to under-value the Degree and Rank of Glory and Happiness, wherein we shall be placed by the Just Rewarder of Souls, as a Station much beneath our imagined Excellency and Perfection. And hence we shall proceed to think hardly of God, and to repine against Him as a partial and unequal Distributer of his Favours, and to envy and malign those that were placed higher in Glory than ourselves; and so at last, out of an implacable Vexation and Discontent, to leave our Habitations, as the Devils did, and fly away to their revolted Party: So impossible is it for a Soul that is under a prevailing Habit of Pride and Self-conceit, to be Happy either here or hereafter.

And therefore to remove this Obstacle, Christianity imposes the Practice of Humility, as a necessary Means of our Happiness; and requires us to put on humbleness of mind, Col. iii. 12. to be clothed with humility, 1 Pet. v. 5. to walk with all lowliness and meekness, Eph. iv. 1, 2. and in lowliness of Mind, to esteem others better than ourselves, Phil. ii. 3. In a Word, to follow the Example of our Blessed Lord, who was meek and lowly, Mat. xi. 29. and in Honour to prefer one another, Rom. xii. 10. The Sense of all which is, that we should labour, as much as in us lies, to think very meanly and modestly of ourselves, and not to be discontented if others think meanly of us too; i. e. that we should neither be proud nor vain-glorious; neither too much exalted in our own Opinions, nor endeavour to insinuate into others a higher Opinion of us than we do really deserve: In short, that we should so effectually represent to ourselves the little Reason we have to be proud of any Personal Accomplishment, whether it be of Body or Mind, to strut, like Æsop's Crow in these borrowed Feathers, which we could neither give to ourselves, nor merit of God, but are wholly owing for to, the Divine Bounty; so to inculcate upon our Minds the Folly and Ridiculousness of being proud of any outward Goods we possess; such as fine Clothes, great Estates, or popular Reputation, all which are so far from either making or speaking us wiser or better Men, that they are too often the Fruits and Testimonies of our Folly and Knavery: And, in fine, That we should so impartially reflect upon the many Follies and Indiscretions, Errors, and Ignorances, Irregularities of Temper, Defects of Manners, and Deviations from Right Reason, that we are guilty of, as to shame ourselves out of all those proud and arrogant Conceits, that do so swell and imposthume our Minds.

And when by these, and such like humbling Reflections, we have laid our selves low in our own Eyes, and so far abased our Pride and Self-Conceit as to be effectually convinced of the Folly of it, and thorowly persuaded to abhor and hate it, to watch and strive against it, and to be habituated for the main to mean and lowly Thoughts of ourselves; tho we should not here arrive to an absolute Perfection in Humility (having none here to converse or compare ourselves with, but such as ourselves, such as are many of them our Inferiors, many our Equals, and many but few degrees our Superiors,) yet as soon as we go off from this lower Form, in which we may seem so considerable, into the Class and Society of those Glorious Inhabitants above (in whose bright Presence we shall appear but like so many Glow-worms, in the midst of a Firmament of Stars) all the little Remains of Pride and Self-Conceit in us, will immediately vanish from our Minds: For if at the sight of an Angel the beloved Apostle could not forbear prostrating himself; how prostrate and lowly must we be, when we see not only the whole Choir of Angels together, but God himself too, the Prince and Father of Spirits! For even here we find, that the nearer we approach God, the more we shrink and lessen in our own Eyes; and if in the Presence of Angels we are but Dwarfs, in the Presence of GOD, we shall be Notthings. But, Oh! when we shall not only discern, how infinitely he outshines us in Glory, but shall also continually feel, by the most sensible Communications of his Goodness, how we hang upon Him, and derive every Breath, and Joy, and Glory from Him; how our Being and Well-being are the mere Alms and Pensions of his Bounty; how every Grace and Beauty in us, is but the Reflection, and that a faint one too, of his out-stretched Rays; when, I say, we shall feel all this, as we shall do in Heaven every moment, by a quick and sensible Experience, how must it needs wean us from all self-arrogating Thoughts, and perfectly abase and humble us in our own Eyes! And when this is done, our Minds will be perfectly tempered and prepared for the Enjoyment of a perfect Happiness: For now, such a modest Opinion we shall have of ourselves, that whatsoever degree of Glory we are placed in, we shall look upon it as far beyond our desert, and, upon that account, be unspeakably satisfied and contented with it, and freely acknowledge it to be a Thousand Degrees beyond what we could desire or hope for. And so far shall we be from grudging at, or envying those above us, that out of an humble sense of our own Unworthiness, we shall readily prefer them before ourselves, and freely acknowledge that we are only so many Degrees inferior to them in Glory, as they are superior to us in Divine Graces and Perfections. Upon which we shall not only acquiesce, but heartily rejoice in their Advancement, and be abundantly pleased that their Reward is as much greater than ours, as we do acknowledge their Virtue to be. In a word, so far shall we be from repining and murmuring at God, for not rewarding us as liberally as others, that we shall be thoroughly sensible that He hath been bountiful to us infinitely beyond our Desert or Expectation; that 'twas not out of a fond Partiality, or blind Respect of Persons, that He raised others to higher Degrees of Glory than our-selves, but out of a Principle of strict Justice that exactly balances and adjusts its Rewards according to the Degrees of our Desert and Improvement. The sense of which will not only compose our Minds into a perfect Satisfaction, but also continually excite us to those beatifical Acts of Love and Praise, Thanksgiving and Adoration. Thus Humility, you see, tunes and composes us for Heaven, and only casts us down, like Balls, that we may rebound the higher in Glory and Happiness.

Thus you see how all those Virtues, which appertain to a Man, considered as a Reasonable Animal, conduce to the Great Christian End, viz. The Happiness of Heaven. 'Tis true, indeed, the immediate product of this sort of Virtue, is only, at least chiefly privative Happiness, or, the Happiness of Rest and Indolence, which consists in not being miserable, or, in a perfect Cessation from all such Acts and Motions as are hurtful and injurious to a Rational Spirit. For, as I have shewed you in the beginning of this Section, the proper Office of human Virtue consists in so regulating all our Powers of Action, as that we do nothing that is hurtful or injurious to our Rational Nature; and this you plainly see, these Five afore-named Virtues do most effectually perform. But besides this Privative, there is, as I shewed you, a Positive Part of Happiness which consists not in Rest, but in Motion; in the Vigorous Exercise of our Rational Faculties, upon such Objects as are most suitable to them: And to the obtaining of this Part of our Happiness, there are other kinds of Virtues necessary to be practised by us, of which I shall discourse in the two following Sections. But tho the immediate Effect of these Human Virtues we have been discoursing of, be only the Happiness of Rest, yet do they tend a great deal farther, even to the Happiness of Motion and Exercise. For it is impossible so to suppress that Active Principle within us, as to make it totally surcease from Motion; and therefore as every intermission of its sober and regular Actings does but make way for wild and extravagant ones; so every abatement of its hurtful and injurious Motions, makes way for beatifical ones; and so the human Virtues, by giving us Rest from those Motions that are afflictive to our Natures, incline and dispose us to such Motions and Exercise as are most pleasant and grateful to it.

S E C T. II.

Concerning those Divine Virtues which belong to a Man considered as a Reasonable Creature, related to God; shewing that these also are comprehended in the heavenly Part of the Christian Life, and that the Practice of them effectually conduces to our future Happiness.

I Proceed now to the Second kind of Virtues, viz. Divine; to which I told you, we are obliged in the capacity of reasonable Creatures related to God, who being not only endowed with all possible Perfections, with infinite Truth and Justice, Wisdom and Power, with all that can render any Being most highly reverenced, admired, loved, and adored; who being not only the Author of our Being and Well-being, as he is Creator and Preserver of all Things, but also our Sovereign Lord and King, as He is God Almighty, the Supreme and Overruling Power of Heaven and Earth, hath upon all these Accounts a just and unalienable claim to sundry Duties and Homages from his Creatures: All which I shall reduce to these Six Particulars;

1. That we should frequently think of, and contemplate the Beauty and Perfection of His Nature.

2. That upon the account of these Perfections, we should humbly worship and adore Him.

3. That we should ardently love and take complacency in Him.

4. That we should attentively and unweariedly imitate him in all his imitable Perfections and Actions.

5. That we should entirely resign up our-selves to his conduct and disposal.

6. That we should chearfully rely and depend upon him. All which, as I shall shew, are included in the heavenly Part of the Christian Life, and do most effectually contribute to our future Happiness.

I. As we are Rational Creatures related to God, we are obliged to be often contemplating and thinking upon him: For the natural Use of our Understanding is to contemplate Truth; and therefore the more of Truth and Reality there is in any knowable Object, and the farther it is removed from Falshood and Non-entity, the more the Understanding is concerned to contemplate and think upon it. God therefore being the most true and real Object, as he stands removed by the Necessity of his Existence from all possibility of not-being, must needs be the most perfect Theme of our Understanding, the best and greatest Subject on which it can employ its Meditations; and besides that he is the most true and real of all Beings, he is also the Source and Spring of all Truth and Reality; his Power, conducted by his Wisdom and Goodness, being the Cause not only of all that is, but of all that either shall be, or can be. And is it fit, that our Understanding, which was made to contemplate, should wholly over-look the Fountain of it? But besides this too, that he is the greatest Truth himself, and the Cause of every Thing else that is true and real; he is the Sovereign of Beings, and the most amiable and perfect, as he includes in his infinite Essence all possible Perfections both in kind and degree. And what a monstrous Irreverence is it, for Minds that were framed to the Contemplation of Truth, to pass by such a great and glorious one without any Regard or Observance, as if he stood for a Cypher in the World, and were not worthy to be thought upon? Nay, and besides all this (which one would think were enough to oblige our Understandings to the strictest Attendance to him) he is a Truth, in which, above all others, we are most nearly concern'd; as he is not only the Father and Prop of our Beings, and the Consolation of our Lives, but the sole Arbiter of our Fate too, upon whom our everlasting well or ill-being depends: And what can we be more concerned to think and meditate upon than this great Being, from whom we sprang, in whom we live and breathe, and of whom we are to expect all that Evil or Good that we can fear or hope for. All which considered, there is no doubt to be made, but that our Understanding was chiefly made for God, to look up to Him, and contemplate his Being and Perfections. And tho in this Imperfect State it is too often averted from him, by this vast variety of sensual things that surround it, and intercept his Prospect; yet, as our Soul recovers out of this sensual Condition into a Life of Reason, we find, by Experience, that its Understanding presently looks upwards, by a natural Instinct, and directs itself to God, as to its proper Pole and Center; and as it grows more and more indifferent to the Objects of Sense, so it becomes more and more vigorous in its Tendency towards God and Divine Things: And 'tis no wonder it doth so, since it is God only, who is an infinite Truth, that is able to satisfy its infinite Thirst after Truth. And hence it is, that till we have thorowly fixed our Minds and Wills upon God, we do naturally affect such an Infinity of Objects, that our Desires are always reaching at new Pleasures, and carried forth after new Possessions; that our Fancy is always entertaining our Mind with new Ideas, and our Understanding continually calling for new Scenes of Contemplation; by which, as one hath well observed, the Soul declares that it is not to be perfectly pleased with finite Truth or Good; which possibly may be the Reason of that Delight we take in Fables, and Pictures of Anticks and Monsters, because they exceed the Limits of Truth, and so do enlarge, as it were, the Prospect of the Soul, which, by its unconfined Motions, shews that it is of a Divine Extract, and that it can never be perfectly satisfied but in Union with God, who is an infinite Ocean of Truth and Goodness: For as for all other Beings, they are so very shallow, that we quickly see (or at least shall do, when we see after the manner of Spirits) to the very Bottom of their Truth and Reality; and when we have done that, they have no more in them to feed and entertain our Understandings. So that when we have exhausted the Truth of infinite Beings, we must either cease to understand any more, which would be to deprive our noblest Faculty of any farther Pleasure, or we must at last fix our Mind upon God, in whom it will find such infinite Truth, as will be sufficient to exercise it thro'out all its infinite Duration. But unless we do now acquaint our Minds with God, by frequent thinking and meditating upon him, we shall, by degrees, grow such Strangers to him, that by that Time we go into the other World, we shall be so far from being pleased with contemplating him, that we shall look upon him as an uncouth Object, and out of distaste avert and turn our Eyes from him: For the Mind of Man must be familiariz'd to its Objects, before it will be able to contemplate them with Pleasure; and tho the Objects themselves be never so amiable, yet while the Mind is unus'd to them, its Thoughts will start and fly off from them, and, without a great deal of Violence, will never be reduced to a fix'd and and serious Attention to them. So that if we go into Eternity with Minds unaccustom'd to the Thoughts of God, we shall be continually flying away from him, as Bats and Owls do from the Light of the Sun, and never be able to compose our awkward Thoughts into a fixed Contemplation of his Glory. And when we have thus banish'd ourselves from the only Object that can for ever bless and satisfy our Understanding, that can keep it in everlasting Exercise and Motion, and feed its greedy Thoughts eternally with fresh and glorious discoveries, we have utterly lost one of the sweetest Pleasures that Human Nature is capable of; and so must necessarily pine and languish, under an eternal Discontentedness. To prevent which, the Gospel enjoins us to train up our Minds to Divine Contemplation, and to be frequently thinking and meditating upon God; to mind those Things that are above, for so the Greek Word is to be rendred, Col. iii. 1. To sanctify the Lord God in our Hearts, 1 Pet. iii. 15. that is, by entertaining great and worthy Thoughts of him: And therefore the Gospel is set before us as a Glass, that therein we may contemplate and behold the Glory of God, 2 Cor. iii. 18. namely, that Divine Glory which is therein discovered and revealed to us; that we may set him always before our Minds, and gather up our Thoughts about him, and force them to dwell and stay upon him, that so they may taste and relish his heavenly Beauties, and please and satisfy themselves with the View and Contemplation of them: For tho' to meditate closely upon God, may at first be irksom and tedious to our unexperienc'd Minds; yet when by the constant Practice of it, we have worn off that Strangeness towards God, which renders the Thoughts of him so troublesome to us, and by frequent Converses are grown better acquainted with him, we shall grow, by degrees, so pleased and satisfied with the Thoughts of him, that we shall not know how to live without them; and our Minds at last will be touch'd with such a lively Sense of his attractive Beauties, that we shall never be well but while we are with him; so that he will become the constant Companion of our Thoughts, and the daily Theme of our Meditations; and nothing in the World will be so grateful and acceptable to us, as to retire now and then from the World, and converse with God in holy Contemplations. And tho', by reason of our present Circumstances and Necessities; there is no Remedy but our Thoughts must be often diverted from him, and forced to attend to our secular Occasions; yet, after they have been used a while to God, we shall find they will never be so well pleased, nor so much at ease, as when they are retired from every Thing but God, and compos'd and settled into Divine Meditations. So that when we go away into the other World, where we shall be removed from those troublesome Circumstances and Necessities, which did here so often divert our Thoughts from God, our Minds which have been so long accustomed and habituated to him, will immediately fasten upon him, and entirely devote themselves to the Contemplation of his Nature and Glory: For our Minds being already strongly inclined and biassed towards God, by those grateful Foretastes we have had of him in the Warmths of our Meditation; when we come into the still and quiet Regions of the Blessed, where we shall immediately have a more close and intimate View of him than ever, all our Thoughts will naturally run towards him, and be so captivated with the first sight of his Glory, that we shall never be able to look off again, as long as Eternity endures; but one View will invite us to another, and what we see will so transport and ravish us, that we shall still desire to see farther and farther. And because our finite Mind will never be able fully to comprehend all that is knowable in his infinite Being, we shall be so delighted in every farther Knowledge of him, that we shall still desire to know farther; and that Desire, as fast as it springs, shall still be satisfied with a farther Knowledge, and so to eternal Ages, each new Satisfaction shall immediately spring a new Desire, and each new Desire immediately terminate in a new Satisfaction. And now, O happy Mind! what Tongue can express thy Joys and Raptures ! that being thus in conjunction with God, art always filled with glorious Ideas, and compassed round with the Wonders of his Perfection ; so that at every glance thou seest some new Charm, and with every Thought makest some vast Discovery. O the transporting Pleasure of that blessed Vision, which now I can hardly think of without an Extasy ; when my poor longing Mind, which here gropes about for Truth in a dark Dungeon of Error and Ignorance, shall be let forth into the heavenly Light, to see as it is seen, and know as it is known ; how will it fix its greedy Eyes upon God, of whose Acquaintance it is now so desirous ! With what infinite delight will its winged and active Thoughts hover in the Light of his Countenance, which, thro' every Moment of Eternity, will be still revealing new Beauties to us, such as will not only for ever employ, but for ever inflame our Meditations.

II. As we are Rational Creatures related to God, we are obliged humbly to Worship and Adore him ; that is, that out of a most awful Esteem and profound Reverence of his super-excellent Majesty, and boundless Perfections, we should bow down our Souls before him, and address ourselves to him by Invocation and Prayer, by Praise and Thanksgiving, as to the All-sufficient, Independent and sole Disposer of every good and perfect Gift ; and that in these our Addresses we should outwardly express this our reverential Esteem of him, by such humble Gestures of Body, as are most apt to testify it to others : For all this is but a just and due Acknowledgment of what he is in Himself, and to Us, and all his Creation. The profoundest Reverence and Veneration we can pay him, is but a just Acknowledgment of his infinite Majesty and Power ; the most fervent Invocations and Prayers we can offer him, are but a due owning of him to be what he is, the supreme Disposer and Author of all Things ; the most ample and glorious Praises we can give him, are incomparably short of what is owing to his infinite Excellencies and Perfections ; the most thankful Acknowledgments we can make him, are but poor Compositions for those vast Sums which we owe to his Bounty and Liberality : So that all our Worship is a most just Due arising from what he is in himself, and from what he doth to us, and to all his Creatures. And till we are made thorowly sensible of both, we are utterly incapable of Eternal Happiness ; which consisting (as I shewed you before) in the vigorous Exercise of our Rational Faculties upon God, doth necessarily require that we should be duly affected with his Perfections and Actions ; for unless we are so, we shall never be able to engage our Faculties vigorously to employ and exercise themselves about him : Unless our Minds be over-awed with an habitual Sense of his infinite Majesty and Power, we shall be apt to neglect him as an Object too mean for our great Faculties to converse with ; unless our Minds be strongly disposed to esteem and admire his Glory and Excellencies, we shall never be able to excite our Understanding and Will to act upon him with any Life and Vigor : In a Word, unless we are possessed with a constant Sense that he is the Spring of all those Goods which we enjoy or hope for, we shall be apt to look upon him as one with whom we are very little concerned, and so to neglect and disregard him. So that unless we do now acquire an habitual Devotion of Mind towards God, when we go from hence into the other World, we shall find our Faculties so averse and listless to all that heavenly Motion and Exercise wherein the Happiness above consists, that we shall be utterly incapable to taste and enjoy it : For in Eternity our Souls will run according to the prevailing Bias which they carry thither with them ; but 'tis impossible they should run towards God with Life and Freedom, unless they are constantly drawn and inclined to him by a devout Veneration of his Majesty, and Admiration of his Glory and Perfection. And hence it is that the Gospel doth so strictly oblige us to adore and worship God, Rev. xxii. 9. To worship him in Spirit and in Truth, John iv. 24. To pray without ceasing, 1 Thess. v. 17. and pray always with all Prayer and Supplication, plication, that is, earnestly to supplicate God upon every fit Opportunity, and Time of need, Ephes, vi. 18. in a Word, to offer to God the Sacrifice of Praise, that is, the Fruit of our Lips, giving Thanks to his Name, Heb. xiii. 15. and to thank God without ceasing, 1 Thess. ii. 13. The meaning of all which, is, that out of a deep and quick Sense of the infinite Majesty and Power, All-sufficiency and Beneficence of God, we should be frequently bowing ourselves before him, and offering up our Prayers and Praises, and Thanksgivings to him: And in the constant Practice of these, we shall be growing up, by degrees, to that blisful State of Heaven: For all these Acts of Divine Worship being immediate Addresses of our Minds to God, do so unite us to him, that in every hearty Prayer, Praise, or Thanksgiving, we do in a manner touch and feel him: For so while we humbly adore his Majesty, we are sensibly struck with the Rays of it; while we earnestly invoke his Goodness and Mercy, we are touched with a strong attractive Virtue from him, whereby we plainly feel ourselves drawn up to him, and rapt into a real Enjoyment of him: In a Word, while we are offering our hearty Praises and Thanksgivings to him, we are under a captivating Sense of his infinite Glory and Beneficence, and with a sensible Touch of this his Heavenly Fire, our Hearts are kindled and inflamed; insomuch, that while we are upon our Knees in a Warmth and Fervor of Devotion, our Minds have many times as quick a Perception, as strong and lively a Relish of God, as ever our bodily Palate had of the most gustful Meats or Liquors. So that by frequently repeating these our Devotions, we frequently repeat these our Sensations of God; which being often renewed, will grow more vigorous and constant, and so at last improve into an active, permanent, and habitual Sense of him. And having thus acquired, by our frequent and devout Worship, a lively, constant Feeling and Perception of the Majesty and Glory, of the Bounty and Benignity of God, whenever we go into Eternity, this, like a vital Spring, will give a perpetual Motion to our Faculties, and vigorously exert and employ them upon God for ever: The quick and lively Sense we shall have of his Infinite Majesty and Power will for ever awe our Understandings and Wills into a strict Attention and Submission to him; and have such a commanding Power over us, as will even constrain us to regard him with the profoundest Reverence and Veneration: For there we shall have far greater and clearer Apprehensions of his Majesty, than ever we had in this imperfect State; which will improve our pre-acquired Sense of it to such a degree of Respect and Veneration, as will for ever over-rule our Faculties, and keep our Understandings, Wills and Affections, in close and strict Attendance to him. And as our Sense of his Majesty will sweetly command, so our Sense of his infinite Beauty and Beneficence will invincibly allure us to exert and exercise our Faculties upon him: For he that hath an affectionate Sense of the Beauty, and Goodness, and Bounty of God, hath a Heart ready tuned for the Musick of Heaven, ready set and composed for Everlasting Praises and Hallelujahs. So that when he goes away from hence into the other World, and is there admitted to a more intimate View of the Perfections, and a more abundant Participation of the Blessings of God than ever, his pre-disposed Mind will immediately be seized with such a strong pathetick Sense of both, as that he will not be able to withhold expressing and venting it in the most rapturous Strains of Admiration, and Praise, and Thanksgiving: And this will be his Business and Employment for ever, to admire and extol the Perfections of God, of which he will every Moment make new and glorious Discoveries; and to celebrate with grateful Acknowledgments the infinite Riches of his Bounty, of which we will every Moment have fresh and sweet Experiences. So that whilst by continual Acts of Praise and Thanksgiving, we endeavour to affect our Minds with a due Sense of the Goodness and Bounty of God, we are practising before-hand the Musick of Heaven, and taking out the Songs of Zion; that so when we go from hence, we may be qualified and prepared to bear a part in the Celestial Choir: So that true Devotion (you see) which consists in a quick and lively Sense of the infinite Majesty, Beauty and Benignity of God, doth most effectually dispose the Mind to all those Divine and Heavenly Exercises wherein the State of Heaven consists.

III. As we are Rational Creatures related to God, we are obliged to an unfeigned Love of, and Complacency in, him: And that both upon the Account of what he is in himself, as he is the most lovely and amiable of Beings, in whom there is an harmonious Concurrence of all imaginable Beauties and Perfections, of Wisdom and Goodness, and Justice and Mercy, and every other amiable Thing that can claim or attract a reasonable Affection; all which, in infinite Degrees, are contempered together in his Nature; and also upon the Account of his infinite Kindness and Beneficence to us: For, besides that, he hath compassed us round, like so many fortunate Islands, with a vast Ocean of external Blessings, in which there is all that is either necessary, convenient or pleasant for our bodily Use and Enjoyment; besides that, he hath inspired us with immortal Minds, and stamped them with those fair Impresses of his own Divinity, the Knowledge of Truth, and the Love of Goodness, which are both of them very forward Capacities of the highest Perfection, and most exalted Happiness: In a Word, besides that, to supply and gratify these our noble Capacities, he hath prepared for us an immortal Heaven, and furnish'd it with all the Pleasures and Delights that a Heaven-born Mind can desire or enjoy; besides all this, I say, he hath sent his own Son from Heaven to reveal to us the Way thither, and to encourage us to return into it, by dying for our Sins, and thereby obtaining for us a publick Grant and Charter of Mercy and Pardon, upon Condition of our Return; yea, and as if all this were too little, he hath sent his Spirit to us, in the room of his Son, to abide amongst us, and as his Vice-gerent, to drive on this vast Design of his Love to us, to excite and persuade us to return into that sure Way to Heaven, which he hath described to us, and to assist us all along in our Travel thither: So wondrous careful hath he been, not to be defeated of this his kind Intention to make us everlastingly happy. And now what Heart can be so hard and impenetrable, as to resist such powerful Charms and Endearments! Methinks, if we had but the common Sense and Ingenuity of Men in us, it would be impossible for us to reflect upon such Miracles of Beauty and Love, without being intimately touched and affected with them; but till we are so, it will be impossible for us to enjoy Heaven: For how can we freely exert our Faculties upon an Object that we do not love; and if we cannot, how can we, without loving God, enjoy Heaven; which consists in the free and chearful Out-goings of all our Faculties upon him? For if when we go into Eternity we love him not, either he will be indifferent, or hateful to us; if the former, we shall altogether neglect and take no notice of him; if the latter, we shall either fly away from him, and banish our selves from his Presence, or be forced to abide and endure it with extreme Regret and Torment: For whilst our Minds are averse and repugnant to him, whatsoever we see in him, will but the more enrage and canker our Malice against him; and even the sight of those his glorious Perfections, which so enravish the Hearts of the blessed Inhabitants of Heaven, will only provoke and boil up our Dislike of him to a higher degree of Hatred and Aversion: For so we find by Experience, in this Life, that while our Minds are unreconciled to God, it is a Penance to us to come near him, to admit any Thoughts of, or Conversation with him. And this is the Reason why we take so much Pains as we do to mis-represent him to ourselves, to draw such Pictures and Ideas of him upon our Minds, as best correspond with our own Tempers, that so having thus transform'd our Notion of him into the Image of ourselves, Narcissus-like, we may fall in Love with him, or at least more easily endure his blessed Presence and Conversation. When therefore we shall go into the other World, where all these Disguises of the Divine Idea shall be taken taken off, and we shall see him as he is, circled about with his own Rays of unstained and immaculate Glory, we shall never be able to abide him; but being all affrighted and confounded at the Glory of his Presence, we shall be, forced to run away, and, if possible, to hide ourselves from him in everlasting Darkness and Despair: For our Wills being poison'd and infected with an habitual Enmity against him, it must needs be torment to us to see him, because we must always see him happy; which is so great an Eye-sore to those damned Spirits that hate him, that I am apt to think, that next to being delivered out of their own Misery, the chiefest Good they desire or wish for, is to be delivered from the tormenting Sense of his Happiness: For what greater Torment can our Mind endure, than to be an everlasting Spectator of the Bliss and Happiness of one whom it hates? How then will it fret and gall our meagre and envious Spirits, to see that Blessed Being, whom we cannot endure, surrounded with an infinite Happiness; with a Happiness so vast, as that it can admit of no Increase, and yet so secure, as that it can never suffer a Diminution? So that 'tis impossible, you see, for the Mind of Man to live happily upon God in the other Life, unless it be inspired before-hand, with an hearty Love and Affection to him.

And hence it is, that our holy Religion doth so strictly require us to love the Lord our God with all our Heart, with all our Soul, and with all our Mind, Mat. xxii. 37. to love him, because he loved us first; to delight ourselves in the Lord, Psal. xxxvii. 4. and to rejoice in the Lord, Phil. iii. 1. and to rejoice in the Lord always, Phil. iv. 4. i. e. to be habitually complacent or well-pleased with the infinite Beauty, Goodness and Perfection of the Divine Nature. Nay, of such vast Import is the Love of God in the Account of the Gospel, that 'tis there recommended as the proper Principle of Christian Life: For so, Rom. xiii. 10. we are told, that Love is the fulfilling of the Law; that is, the adequate Principle of all Christian Obedience; and Gal. v. 6. we are told, that neither Circumcision nor Uncircumcision availeth any thing in Christ Jesus, but Faith which worketh by Love; that is, there is nothing of any Account with Christ, but such a Belief of the Gospel, as begets in us a hearty Love to God, and doth thereby work and exert itself, as by that which is the only genuine Principle of Christian Life and Action. 'Tis true, beside this Principle of Love, the Gospel acts us both by our Fear and Hope, exciting the one by Threatnings of the greatest Evils, and animating the other with Promises of the greatest Goods; but yet it is certain, that neither these, nor any other Principles of Religious Action can be acceptable to God, whilst they are totally separated from Love to him: For there is no Principle of Obedience can be acceptable to God, that is not a Principle of Universal Obedience; but to love God, being a great and main Instance of Obedience, that can be no Principle of Universal Obedience, which doth not effectually excite us to love him.

'Tis true, the Religion of most Men begins upon the Principles of Hope and Fear, and it cannot be denied but these are good Beginnings; but yet till by these we are excited to love God, as well as to do the other Parts of our Duty, our Obedience is lame and partial, and consequently unacceptable: So that tho Hope and Fear are good Ingredients to compound an acceptable Principle of Obedience, yet, without an Intermixture of Love, they are by no means sufficient. There may be, indeed, and at first there generally is, much less of Love in this internal Spring of our Obedience, than of Hope or Fear, whilst yet the whole Composition is truly pleasing and acceptable to God: For the lowest Degree of cordial Love intermixed with our Hope and Fear, is sufficient to leaven and consecrate them into an acceptable Principle of Obedience; but still the less of Love there is in it, the more weak, and languid, and imperfect it is; and in all its Progresses towards Perfection, its Ripeness and Maturity is to be measured by the Degrees of Love that are in it: And till our Love is arrived to that Degree of Fervour and Ardency, as to become become the predominant Motive and Master-Ingredient of this our compounded Principle of Obedience, our State in Goodness is very low and imperfect. So that, in short, the Principle that acts and moves us in Religion, is still more and more perfect, the more of Love there is in it, and the less of Hope and Fear; and when Hope and Fear are both swallowed up in Love, and this is become the sole Spring of Action in us, then 'tis the Principle of Heaven, the Soul that acts and animates the Religion of just Men made perfect.

So that if ever we design to grow up to their blessed State, we must endeavour to kindle and blow up the Love of God in our Hearts. And in order hereunto, we must be frequently representing to our Minds, the infinite Reasons we have to love him, and pressing ourselves with the vast Obligations he hath laid upon us; spreading them fairly before our Thoughts in all their endearing Circumstances: We must ever and anon set our cold and frozen Souls before those melting Flames of his Love and Beauty, and never leave chafing them at 'em, urging and pressing them with the Consideration of them, till we feel the heavenly Fire begin to kindle in our Bosoms. And above all Things, we must take care, by the constant Practice of what is agreeable to God's Nature, to reconcile our Minds and Tempers to him; for till this is done, we can never be habitually pleased or delighted in him; but when once, by the Practice of those Eternal Rules of Goodness that are founded in his blessed Nature, we have so far reconciled our Natures to him, as that our Hearts and his stand bent the same way, and are for the main alike inclined and disposed, then we are prepared for, and made proper and convenient Fuel to receive this heavenly Flame of Love to him; and when this is once so thoroughly kindled in our Hearts, as that we are habitually well-pleased and delighted in him, so as to rejoice in his Happiness, acquiesce in his Will, and meditate on his Beauty and Goodness, with an unfeigned Complacency of Soul, we are then in the same State (that is, in Kind, tho not in Degree) with the blessed People of Heaven. And tho in this Life we may not be able to raise ourselves to that height of Love as we desire, and much less as that blessed Object deserves; our present Knowledge being short, our Thoughts unsteady, and our Affections entangled in Sense and sensual Things; yet when we go from hence into the other World, and are there admitted to a more intimate View of his Nature, Works and Perfections, our imperfect Love will be immediately improved into an high Seraphick Flame: For now we shall not only know him better, having him always in our View, and continually shining full in our Eyes; but we shall be removed from all other Objects that are apt to divert our Thoughts, and divide our Affections from him. So that now our Love being kindled and fed with the purest Light, with the ever out-streaming Rays of the most perfect Beauty and Goodness, will always exert its utmost Vigour, and spend itself without Decay in one continued everlasting Rapture!

And then how unconceivably Happy will our State be, when we shall always live in view of the most lovely Object, and always love him as much as we are able, and be able to love him a thousand times more than we can now imagine! For the longer we view, the more we shall know him: and the more we know, the better we shall love him; and so thro' everlasting Ages our Love shall be stretching and extending itself upon this infinite Beauty and Loveliness. Now Love is naturally a most sweet and grateful Passion, a Passion that sooths and ravishes the Heart, and puts the Spirits into a brisk and generous Motion: For it wholly consists in a fixed Complacency or Well-pleasedness of Mind, arising from the apprehended Goodness and Congruity of the Thing beloved; and it is merely by Accident that it hath any disquieting or ungrateful Emotion mingled with it; either the Person beloved is absent, which fills it with unquiet Desire; or he is unhappy, or unkind, which mingles it with Grief and Sorrow; or he is fickle and unconstant, which imbitters it with Rage and Jealousy: But consider it separately from all these Accidents, and it is nothing but pure Delight and Complacency: But now in Heaven our Love of God will have none of these disquieting Accidents attending it; for there he will never be absent from us, but continually entertaining our amorous Minds with the Prospect of his infinite Beauties; there we shall ever feel his Love to us in the most sensible and endearing Effects, even in the Glory of that Crown which he will set upon our Heads, and in the ravishing Sweetness of those Joys he will infuse into our Hearts; there we shall experience the Continuation of his Love, in the continued Fruition of all that an everlasting Heaven means, and be convinced as well by the Perpetuity of his Goodness to us, as by the Immutability of his Nature, that he is an unchangeable Lover: In a Word, there we shall find him a most happy Being, happy beyond the vastest Wishes of our Love; so that we shall not only delight in him as he is infinitely lovely and amiable, but rejoice and triumph in him too, as he is infinitely blessed and happy: For Love unites the Interests as well as the Hearts of Lovers, and mutually appropriates to each, each others Joys and Felicities. So that in that blessed State we shall share in the Felicity of God, proportionably to the Degree of our Love to him: For the more we love him, the more we shall still espouse his happy Interest; and the more we are interested in his Happiness, the happier we must be, and the more we must enjoy of it. Thus Love gives us a real Possession and Enjoyment of God; it makes us Co-partners with him in himself, and derives his Happiness upon us, and makes it as really ours as his: So that God's Happiness is, as it were, the common Bank and Treasury of all Divine Lovers, in which they have every one a Share, and of which, proportionably to the Degrees of their Love to him, they do actually participate to all Eternity: And could they but love him as much as he deserves, that is, infinitely, they would be as infinitely blessed and happy as he: For then all his Happiness would be theirs; and they would have the same delightful Sense and Feeling of it all, as if it were all transfused into their own Bosoms. God therefore being an infinitely lovely, infinitely loving, and infinitely happy Being, when once we are admitted to dwell forever in his blessed Presence, our Love to him can be productive of none but lovely and ravishing Emotions; for the immense Perfections it will then find in its Object, must necessarily refine it from all those Fears and Jealousies, Grievances and Discontents, that are mingled with our carnal Loves, and render it a pure Delight and Complacency: So that when once it is grown up to the Perfection of the heavenly State, 'twill be all Heaven, 'twill be an eternal Paradise of Delights within us, a living Spring, whence Rivers of Pleasures will issue for evermore. O blessed State, in which my Heart shall be brim-full of Love, and my Love shall triumph alone with me, and be all Joy and Ravishment, being removed for ever out of the Noise and Neighbourhood of all those disquieting Affections, which here are wont to mingle with, and continually disturb and incommode it!

IV. As we are Rational Creatures related to God, we are obliged attentively to imitate him in all his imitable Perfections and Actions; For this is an allowed Maxim, Perfectissimum in suo genere est mensura reliquorum; that is, That which is most Perfect in its kind, is to be the Rule and Measure of all those Individual Natures that are contained under it: For Perfection is the measure of Imperfection, even as a straight Line is of a crooked; and every Individual of a kind must needs be so far defective in its Nature, as it falls short of that which is most perfect in its kind. God therefore being the most Perfect of all in the whole kind of Reasonable Beings, must needs be the Supreme Pattern of all those Individuals that are under him; and so far as any of them disagree with him, so far they are defective in their Natures.

Ἀρχέτυπον φύσεως λογικῆς ὁ θεὸς ἐστίν, μέτρον δὲ καὶ ἀποκρίνισμα ἀνθρώπου, Phil. lib. 2. pag. 132. i. e. God is the Archetype of every Reasonable Nature, and Man is his Imitation and Image: For he is a Being that is infinitely Reasonable in all his Volitions and Actions, that hath not the least Intermixture either of Humour, or Folly, or Prejudice in his Choices; but is always, and in every Thing governed by his own Pure and All-comprehending Wisdom: Upon which Account he ought to be owned and looked upon by every Reasonable Being, as the Sovereign Standard and Pattern of their Natures; and so far as any Reasonable Nature moves or acts counter to his, which is the most perfectly reasonable, so far it ought to be looked upon as monstrous and unnatural in its kind: For as it is monstrous in a human Body to have its Parts displaced, its Mouth opened in its Belly, or its Legs growing out of its Shoulders, because these are unnatural Positions, that are directly contrary to the true Idea, Form and Figure of a human Body; so every reasonable Nature that doth not imitate and take after God's, but chooseth and acts contrary to him, is so far monstrous and mis-shapen, because 'tis writhed and distorted into a Figure that is directly contrary to its natural Pattern and Exemplar: and while it continues so, it is not capable of true Happiness: For that which renders God so infinitely happy in himself, is not so much the Almighty Power he hath to defend himself from foreign Hurts and Injuries, as the exact Agreement of all his Motions and Actions, with the all-comprehending Reason of his own Mind: For he always sees what is best; and what he sees is best, he always chooses and affects; and this makes him perfectly satisfied with himself, and fills him with infinite Joy and Complacency; because whenever he surveys himself in the glorious Mirrour of his own Mind, he discerns nothing in himself but what is infinitely lovely, nothing but what exactly corresponds with the fairest Ideas of his own infinite Reason. Whereas if, upon an impossible Supposal, it were otherwise, there would arise a Civil War within his own Bosom, against which Omnipotence itself could not protect or defend him: For in despite of himself he would be continually exposed to the just Reproaches of his own Mind; and his own All-seeing Eye would every Moment detect, and libel, and upbraid him, and render him a most inglorious Spectacle to himself: So that he would be so far from being infinitely pleased and satisfied with himself, that his own infallible Reason would be an everlasting Vexation to him.

And so will ours be to us, unless we take care to imitate God in those his Divine Perfections, from whence his infinite Self-satisfaction arises: For so long as we are conscious to ourselves, that we wilfully swerve and deviate from the great Exemplar of our Rational Natures, we cannot but be ashamed of and condemn ourselves, and be highly dissatisfied with our own Actions: Our Conscience must necessarily reproach our Will, and our Reason upbraid our base Inclinations. Now what an intolerable Plague is it, for a Man to be forced to make Invectives against himself, and continually to carry his own Satyrs in his Bosom? In this Life, indeed, what by disguising our Faults with specious Names, or colouring them over with plausible Pretences; what by bribing our Consciences with false Presumptions, or diverting ourselves from listening to their Reproaches, by hurrying into Vice or Business, we may happily make a shift to deal well enough with ourselves: But alas! what shall we do when we come into the other World, where all fair Colour and Pretence shall be wiped off, and our Vices and We shall appear to ourselves in our own naked and undisguised Ugliness; where all our false Presumption shall be baffled by a woful Experience, and all the Dip of worldly Pleasure and Business, in which we were wont to drown the Clamours of our Conscience, shall be for ever silenced; so that we shall be exposed without Fence or Guard to the furious Reflections of our own Mind, and lie stark naked under the Lash of an enraged Conscience for ever! O good God! what Tongue can express the intolerable Anguish of such a State, wherein our own Deformities shall be continually objected to our Eyes, and we shall have nothing to palliate or excuse them, but be always forced to condemn, and hate, and curse ourselves for them, and yet not be able to correct and reform them; wherein we shall still be hurried on to such Actions by our own furious Inclinations, as, when we have done them, will startle and amaze us, set on our Reason and Conscience to worry us with their reproachful Reflections, yet in despite of all their Reproaches, we shall still reiterate and repeat them! Like a desperate Murderer, who having killed an innocent Person, reflects with Horror upon his own Act, tears his Hair, beats his Breast, curses and calls himself a thousand Villains: but being hereby chafed into a greater Fury, instead of reforming, grows more mischievous, and so murders another, and then rages afresh; but still the more he rages, the more he murders. And this will necessarily be our State in the other World, if, thro' our Neglect of imitating God, we go away thither under an habitual Contrariety of Nature to him: Besides that we shall be wholly indisposed to those beatifical Acts of Divine Love, Worship and Contemplation, in which, as I have shewed, a great Part of the Pleasure of Heaven consists: For since all Love is founded in Likeness, and Likeness is the Effect of Imitation, how is it possible we should love God, unless we imitate him? and if we do not love him, what Pleasure can we take in contemplating and adoring him?

Wherefore in Prosecution of its great Design, which is to make us happy, the Gospel strictly requires us to be always imitating, so far as they are imitable, the Perfections and Actions of our heavenly Father; to endeavour to form our Natures to his, to rectify the Features and Lineaments of our Souls by his most amiable Idea; to be continually framing our Tempers by the noble Pattern of his Mercy and Goodness, his Justice, Purity, and Wisdom; that so being new-cast, as it were, in the perfect Mould of his Nature, we may be transformed into living Images of him: So Ephes. v. 1. Be ye therefore imitators, Imitators, or Followers of God, as dear Children; i.e. that so you may resemble him in the Qualities of your Minds, as Children do their Parents in the Lineaments of their Bodies. And this is the Sense of all those Evangelical Injunctions, which require us to be pure, as God is pure; merciful, as he is merciful; and perfect, as our heavenly Father is perfect; that is, to take Example by God in the whole Course of our Lives, and trace and follow him in all his imitable Perfections, by putting on that new, that God-like Man, that Divine Temper and Disposition, which, after God, that is, according to the Pattern of his Nature, is created in Righteousness and true Holiness, Ephes. iv. 24. This therefore is an essential Part of our Christian Life, to set God always before our Eyes, as the great Pattern of our Lives and Actions, and to endeavour constantly to write after him, and transcribe his Graces into our Natures; that so when we go away into the other World, we may carry with us, at least, a rude and imperfect Draught of his blessed Image upon our Minds, such as, when we are removed from the manifold Impediments of Flesh and Blood, and the perpetual Diversions of this sensible World, and admitted to a nearer View of God, may be a prevailing Bias upon our Wills, and incline us to imitate him for ever: For if for the main we are here transformed, by imitating God, into a God-like Temper and Disposition, all those involuntary Contrarieties to him, which, by reason of our Ignorance of his Nature, of our Bodily Temper, and the manifold Temptations we are here exposed to, are still remaining in our Natures, will be immediately extinguished, upon our Arrival into the other World; where being freed from all our Misconceptions of God, from all the Repugnancies of our bodily Temper to him, and from all those Temptations that were wont to avert us from him, we shall have no involuntary Disposition or Inclination in us; and then our Wills being already predominantly inclined to follow God, and take Example by him, and having no contrary Inclination to contend with, we shall presently attend to and imitate his Perfections with the greatest Vigor, Freedom, and Alacrity of Soul: So that now we shall be so intensely fixed to choose and act like God, who is the Example and Pattern of our Natures, that we shall everlastingly regulate all our Motions by those very eternal Laws of Reason, whereby he everlastingly wills and acts; and there is nothing will be so abhorrent horrent to our Natures, as an ungod-like Will or Action: For if, as the Apostle tells us, by beholding now the Glory of God in a Glass, we are changed into the same Image from Glory to Glory, 2 Cor. iii. 18. then doubtless much more shall we be so, when we behold him Face to Face. 'Tis true, as our Knowledge of God, who is an infinite Truth, can never be absolutely perfect, because if it were, it would be an infinite Knowledge; so neither can our Resemblance of him be, who is an infinite Goodness, because, if it were, we should be infinitely Good; both which are Contradictions of the State of a Creature; yet as we shall be knowing him farther and farther, so proportionably we shall be imitating him too thro' infinite Ages of Duration, and still every Act of our Imitation shall be so attentive and vigorous, that it shall leave a farther Impression of his infinite Perfection on our Natures: So that tho our finite Nature can never arrive to a perfect Likeness of that infinitely lovely and amiable Being, because it can never be infinitely amiable: yet it shall be everlastingly approaching nearer and nearer to him, proportionably as it discovers more and more of his infinite Beauty and Amabilities, and be still growing more wise and pure, more righteous and benign, according as its Prospect of the Wisdom, Purity, Justice and Goodness of his Nature is enlarged and extended: So that as his Beauty shines into us, it will still imprint itself upon us, and transform us into blessed Images of itself; and then, according as we are assimilated to the Divine Nature, we shall still partake of those Joys and Pleasures which are inseparable to it, and resemble it in Bliss as much as we do in Perfection: For as God's infinite Perfection is the Spring of his infinite Self-satisfaction, so from our finite Perfection there shall ever redound to us a Satisfaction equal to our finite Capacities: For tho we shall never attain to absolute Perfection, that is, to all the possible Degrees of Wisdom and Goodness, which is the Peculiar of God; yet to Eternity we shall be growing on to it, and in every Period of our Growth we shall be perfectly what we ought to be, that is, we shall ever know as much of God as is possible for us, our present State and Circumstances considered; and so far as we know of him, we shall, to our utmost Power continually imitate and resemble him. And thus in our Eternal Race to Perfection, our Wills shall always follow our Understanding, and our Understandings shall always follow God with their utmost Vigor and Activity; so that neither the one nor the other shall ever be deficient of any Degree of Knowledge and Goodness, which pro hic & nunc is possible to them.

Now what an unspeakable Satisfaction must this give to the Mind, when surveying itself round about, it shall find every Thing within itself exactly as it ought to be; every Faculty to its utmost Power and Capacity, perfectly corresponding with its original Pattern and Exemplar; when upon the strictest Scrutiny, it will discover nothing within itself, but what the most critical Conscience will be forced to approve of; no Motion or Action, but what will endure the Test of its severest Reason: In a Word, when it shall interchangeably turn its Eyes from God to itself, and compare Grace with Grace, and Feature with Feature, and perceive what an amiable Consent and Agreement there is between its own Copy and his fair Original; what a pure Imitation of God its Life is, and how exactly Deiform all its Motions and Actions are: when, I say, our blessed Minds shall always find themselves in this God-like Posture and Condition, O! what incomparable Content and Satisfaction will they take in themselves! With what enravishing Pleasure will they ever review their own Motions, which being immediately copied from the Nature of God, will be such as its severest Reason will be always forced to commend and approve of! So that now the happy Mind will be always triumphing in its own Purity, and enjoy within itself an Everlasting Heaven of Content and Peace; now 'twill continually be crowned with the Applauses of its own Reason, and all its Actions will have the joyful Echoes of a well-pleased Conscience continually resounding after them. And thus by imitating God's Perfections, we shall imitate his Happiness too, and shall for ever take after him, not only in respect of the Rectitude of our Natures, but also in the most blessed and comfortable Enjoyment of ourselves: Besides that, our Resemblance of God will everlastingly dispose us to Love, and our Love to contemplate and adore him: For all these blessed Acts do reciprocally further and promote each other; just like contiguous Bodies that are placed in a Circle, the First of which being moved, thrusts on the Second, the Second the Third, the Third the Last, if there be no more between; and then the Last thrusts on the First; and so round again in the same Order: So that if we carry with us into Eternity a Frame and Disposition of Nature like God's, we shall always so imitate as still to love him, so love as still to contemplate him, so contemplate as still to adore him, so adore as still to imitate, and love and contemplate him a-new; and in this blessed Circle we shall move round for ever, with unspeakable Vigor and Alacrity.

V. As we are Reasonable Creatures related to God, we are bound to resign up, and submit ourselves to his blessed Will and Disposal: For God hath a just Dominion over all, founded in his own infinite Power, that doth not, like other Dominions, result to him from any external Acts or Achievements, but is the eternal Prerogative of his own Nature: For he, as well as all other Beings, hath a Freedom to exercise his own Abilities, so far as it is just and lawful; but being infinitely paramount to all other Powers whatsoever, he can be subject to no superior Authority, nor consequently be obliged by any other Law, but that of his own Nature: So that whatsoever he can do, he can justly do, if it be not contrary to the infinite Perfections of his Nature: For his Power being infinite and unconfined, as well as his Wisdom, Justice and Goodness, doth sufficiently warrant him to do whatsoever is consistent with them; otherwise he would be infinitely Powerful in vain: And therefore since he can exercise a Dominion over All, he must needs have an eternal Right to do it, so far as his own Wisdom, Goodness and Justice will permit, which are the only Laws by which he can be bounded in the Exercise of his infinite Power and Ability: So that while he governs us by such Rules and Laws as are convenient to his own Nature, his own Greatness and Power, which exalts him above all other Law or Authority, sufficiently warrants him so to do. And being thus rightfully enthroned by the infinite Pre-eminence of his own Power and Majesty, all other Beings, so far as they are capable, stand immutably obliged to submit and resign themselves up to his Government.

But besides that we are obliged to him as he is God, we are also bound to him as he is our Creator: For there is always a Power acquired by Benefits, where there is none antecedently; especially where the Benefit conferr'd is no less than that of our Being, which is the Case between us and God. And this is such a Benefit as is sufficient to intitle him to us, by an absolute and unalienable Propriety, tho he had no antecedent Right of Dominion over us, by Virtue of his own infinite Greatness: So that tho before he created us, or any other Being, he had free Power to act any Thing that lay within the Compass of just and lawful, which just and lawful was not definable by any other Law, but that of his own Nature; and tho, since his Creation, his Power is no more, (so that he hath not acquired to himself any new Power by creating us, but only made new Subjects whereon to exercise that antient Power and Dominion, which was eternally inherent in him) yet doubtless, by giving us our Beings, he hath laid new Obligations upon us to obey him: For now deriving ourselves, as we do, from him, we are bound by all the Ties of Equity and Justice to render back ourselves to him, and to submit those Powers to his Dominion, which are the Effects and Offspring of his Bounty: For what can be more just and equal, than that that Will which is the Cause of our Beings, should be the Law and Rule of our Actions; than that we should serve him with those Powers we derived from him, and render him back the Fruits of his own Plantation? For now we are not our own, but God's, and He alone hath Power to dispose of us; and whensoever we dispose of ourselves contrary to his Will and Pleasure, we do not only invade his Property, but employ the spoils of it against him. And whilst we continue thus doing, is it possible we should ever be happy? For besides that, while we continue in Rebellion against him, we are in an actual Confederacy with Hell; for so when we are told, that Rebellion is as the Sin of Witchcraft, that is, Rebellion against God; the meaning is, that, like Witches, we are in League with the Devil, and are listed Volunteers under those infernal Powers, who, for blowing the Trumpet of Rebellion in Heaven, were banished thence Six Thousand Years ago, and have ever since been raising Forces in this lower World, against God; so that whilst we continue with them in Defiance to God, we are in the Devil's Muster-Roll, who is Captain-General of all the revolted Legions, and so are of the quite opposite Party to the Loyal People of Heaven, and consequently can never hope, while we continue such, to be admitted to their Society and Happiness; besides all this, I say, Rebellion against God, doth naturally draw a Hell of Miseries after it: For it cannot be supposed that the Wise Sovereign of the World should be so unconcerned for his own Authority, as to suffer his Creatures to spurn at and affront it, without ever manifesting his Displeasure against them in some dire and sensible Effects. And therefore tho in this Life, which is the Time of our Trial and Probation, he mercifully forbears to lead us to Repentance; yet if we leave this Life with our Wills unsubdued and unresigned to him, we must not expect to be thus gently dealt with in the other. For it is as easy for him who is the Father of our Spirits, to correct our Spirits, as 'tis for the Parents of our Flesh to correct our Flesh. And tho our Souls are no more impressible with material stripes, than Sun-beams are with the blows of a Hammer; yet are they liable to have horrid and dismal Thoughts impressed upon them, and to be as much aggrieved by them, as sensible Bodies are with the most exquisite Torments. So that if God be displeased with us, there is no doubt but he can imprint his Wrath upon our Minds, in black and ghastly Thoughts, and cause it perpetually to drop like burning Sulphur on our Souls. And it being in his Power thus to lash our Spirits; to be sure, when once he is implacably incens'd against us, (as he will be in the other World, if we go Rebels thither) he will more or less let loose his Power upon us, and make us feel his wrathful Resentments, by infusing supernatural Horrors into our Souls, and scourging our guilty and defenceless Spirits with Inspirations of dire and frightful Thoughts. Now tho this be not a natural and necessary Effect of our Rebellion against God, because it depends upon his Will who is a Free Agent; yet considering that he is a wise Agent, and that as such it is necessary he should one way or other manifest his Displeasure against such as are unreclaimable Rebels to his Authority, it is next to a natural one; and at least the fearful Expectation of it in such rebellious Spirits (which is a misery next to the enduring it) is necessary and unavoidable. For God hath imprinted a dread of his own Power and Majesty so deeply on our Natures, that we are not able, with all our Arts of Self-deceit, wholly to obliterate and deface it; and tho in this Life we may sometimes suppress and stupidify our Sense of God; yet even here, in spite of ourselves, 'twill ever and anon return upon us. And if when we have done what we know is offensive to that Invisible Majesty we stand in awe of, we do not suffer ourselves seriously to reflect upon it, there presently arises in our Minds a swarm of horrid Thoughts, and dismal Expectations; and if in this present State in which we have so many Salvo's for our wounded Spirits, so many Pleasures and Self-delusions to charm our natural dread of God, our over-charged Consciences do notwithstanding so often recoil upon us, and alarm us with such dismal abodings; what will they do hereafter, when all those Pleasures are removed, and all those Self-delusions baffled, with which we were wont to sooth and divert them. Then doubtless we shall be continually stung with sharp and dire Reflections, and our Consciences, like tragick Scenes, be all hung round with the Ensigns of Horror; then shall the Dread of God perpetually haunt us like a grim Fury, and the terror of his offended Majesty strike us into an everlasting Trembling and Agony. For so St. James tells us, that the Devils themselves do believe and tremble, Jam. ii. 19. they believe that there is an Almighty Being above them, and are conscious that they are in actual Rebellion against him, which makes them horribly afraid of his Vengeance; and yet such is the inveterate devilishness of their Natures, that they will by no means hearken to a Submission but in despite of their own Dread and Horror, do still persist in an open Defiance to their Almighty Enemy, and so tremble and sin, and sin and tremble for ever. And so shall we, if we go into the other World habitual Rebels to God; our deep and inveterate Malice against him will still hurry us on to incense and provoke him, and then our natural Dread of his Power and Majesty will break into frightful and horrible Thoughts, and so be continually revenging upon us those our continual Provocations of him: For then our Soul will be nakedly exposed to the lash of its own furious Thoughts, and have no shield to defend itself against the terrors of its guilty Conscience, which being rouzed up and kept awake by the unintermitting sense of our Misery, will be always clamouring upon us, and continually torturing us with black and horrid Reflections. So that whilst we are wandering among wretched Ghosts, thro' those dismal shades below, we shall be perpetually meditating Horrors, and never leave lashing ourselves with our own sharp and terrible Thoughts, till we have chafed ourselves into Furies, and boiled up our self-condemning Rage into an everlasting Madness. Thus as our sense of our unlikeness to God will ever fill us with Shame and Confusion, so will the sense of our Rebellion against him continually strike us into Fear and Amazement.

To prevent which, our holy Religion, which doth so industriously consult our Happiness, requires us now to submit ourselves to God, Jam. iv. 7. to live to God, Gal. ii. 19. to present ourselves living Sacrifices, holy and acceptable to God, Rom. xii. 1. to yield ourselves unto God, and our Members as instruments of righteousness unto God, Rom. vi. 13. The sense of all which, is, that we should endeavour so to affect our Minds with the sense of God's Authority over us, and with the manifold Reasons of our Obedience to him, as to be firmly and constantly resolved within ourselves, neither to choose any thing that he forbids, nor to refuse any thing that he commands; that we should set him up a Throne in our Hearts, a fix'd and prevailing Resolution of Obedience, that therein he may sit and reign, and have the absolute Empire and Command of all our inward Motions, and outward Actions; in a word, that we should acquire such an habitual Respect to, and Reverence of his Sovereign Authority, that no Temptation from within or without us, may be able to countermand it, or to seduce us from our Duty into any wilful course of Rebellion against him. And when once we have framed our Minds into this obediential Temper, we are in a forward Preparation for Heaven. And tho by reason of those Remains and Reliques of corrupt Nature that are in us, which are here continually excited by the many Temptations among which we live, we may find reluctant and counter-striving Principles within us; a stubborn Appetite contending against an obedient Will, and sometimes upon Surprise or Inadvertence over-powering it; yet if we heartily bewail this as our Unhappiness, and if when we thus fall, we weep and rise again, and take more care of our Steps for the future, we shall carry with us when we go from hence into the other World, a Will that is habitually resigned to God; and so being there removed from all the Temptations that were wont to excite in us those contrary Appetites and Inclinations, we shall immediately become all Duty and Obedience, and freely give up our selves to God, without the least shadow of Contest or Reluctancy. And in this blessed State we shall continue for ever, so entirely devoted to God, that between him and us there shall ever be one common Will, and End, and Interest; and our Hearts, which before were in a great measure set and tuned to the Heart of God, will be instantly such perfect Unisons with it, that whensoever, or whatsoever he speaks, we shall still resound and echo to him, from our inmost Bowels, with unspeakable Chearfulness and Alacrity.

And being thus reduced to a perfect Submission to the Will of God, we shall therein find ourselves incomparably happy: For now our Wills being always determined by the Will of God, we shall be perfectly eased of all the Trouble and Distraction of Choosing. Now our Minds will no longer hover in Suspence, nor be divided between contrary Reasons; but all its Thoughts will glide gently on in a calm and even Current, without ever being tossed and bandied to and fro by cross and opposite Deliberations: For now it no sooner knows the Will of God, but it rests in it immediately with a free Assent, and uncontrouled Approbation; so that upon new Occasions it's free from the trouble of forming new Choices and Resolutions, being already fix'd, under all Events, to one steady Course of Motion, and immoveably resolved, whatever befalls, ever to do what God would have it. And its Will thus perfectly acquiescing in God, as in its proper Place and Element, it will no longer dispute as it was wont to do, no longer waver between two Loadstones, but always obey upon the first Motion, and follow him for ever without Deliberation. In which happy State we shall be no longer ground between those counter-moving Millstones, the Law in our Minds, and the Law in our Members: but being entirely resigned to God, we shall ever obey him secundo flumine, with a full Current of Inclination, and Nature. And what a mighty Ease must this be to the Soul; especially considering that by being thus entirely subject to God, it will not only be released from the Trouble of Choosing and Deliberating, but also thorowly warranted of the Goodness and Rectitude of its own Choices? For so far as we are subject unto God, our Wills are his, and so are our Actions too; and whilst they are so, we can have no reason to mistrust, either that they are bad in themselves, or that he is angry and displeased at them. For his Will, we know, is governed by his Nature, which is the Standard of Good and Evil, the Law and Measure of Right or Wrong; so that while we will and act as he would have us, we have a sufficient warrant for what we do; a warrant that will for ever bear us out, and justify us to our own Minds, and always render us abundantly satisfied with ourselves; so that we shall not only always acquit, but always reverence ourselves; and our Conscience will not only cease to shame us, but be continually applauding and smiling upon us, and instead of those importunate Clamours, with which it was wont to entertain us, its constant echo to all our Actions will be, Well done, good and profitable Servant. So that being entirely determined by the Will of God, which never varies from the Law of his Nature, we shall be perfectly satisfied with ourselves, and for ever choose and act without the least Mistrust or Hesitance. And then our Wills being perfectly subject to his, and all our Powers of Action entirely at his Devotion, we shall never have the least ground to fear or suspect his Displeasure, but be always fully satisfied that he loves us, that we are dear and precious in his Eyes, and that to Eternity he will respect and look upon us with the Smiles of an unchangeable Complacency. The sense of which will ravish our Hearts, and for ever fill us with joy unspeakable and full of Glory. So that whereas rebellious Souls are perpetually haunted with two restless Furies, viz. the shame of their Guilt, and the fear of their Danger, which even here do give them more disturbance than all their Sins can pleasure and delights; when once we are perfectly subjected to God, we shall be for ever discharged of them both; and then will our happy Minds be always as couragious as Truth, and as confident as Innocence it self.

And as by our perfect Submission to God, we shall be wholly released from the trouble of choosing, and sufficiently warranted in our own Choices, so we shall be abundantly satisfied both of the Wisdom and Success of them: For then we shall be assured, even by a sweet and happy Experience, that whatsoever God commands us to do, he most certainly knows that it is for our good, and that that is the reason why he commands it. So that when we are entirely subjected to God; our Choices and Actions will be all directed by an infallible Wisdom to our own good. For while we choose what God would have us, our Wills are guided by God's Wisdom; and so in every genuine Act of Obedience we are as infallible as Omniscience itself. When therefore we are perfectly resigned to God, we shall always will and act with as much Confidence and Assurance of a happy and prosperous Success, as if we ourselves were infinitely wise, and had a perfect comprehension of all possible Issues and Events. And whilst wretched Rebels grope about under the Conduct of their own blind Wills, and for the most part do they know not what, and go they know not where themselves, but live by chance, and act at random: our Wills and Actions being wholly steered by an All-wise Will, that never fails to measure them by the best Rules, and point them to the best Ends, we shall be always sure of our hands, and know infallibly before-hand, that every thing we will or do shall conspire to our own good. And this will enable us to perform the everlasting Race of our Obedience, with an unspeakable Freedom and Alacrity, and always render us wondrous light and nimble, and expedite in our Operations. For whereas when Men know not what may happen upon such an Action, and are not able to pry out all those hidden Events that lurk in the Womb of their own Designs, they always act with Caution and Anxiety, and are doubtful and tremulous in their Motions; when once we are sure of a good Event, we still go on with Courage and Chearfulness: and so we shall ever do, when we ever perfectly will and act under the Command of God. For now we shall always see good Issues before us, and be firmly assured from that infallible Wisdom which governs his Will, and by his ours, that every thing we Will or Do, shall be crowned with a happy Effect. And this will for ever wing our Souls with an unwearied Vigor and Activity, and render each Act of our Obedience unspeakably sweet and delightful to us. And now, O blessed Mind! what Tongue or Thought can reach thy Happiness; who living in a most perfect Subjection to an All-good and All-wise Will, art never in the least concerned or troubled to debate and deliberate what to choose, but dost everlastingly embrace and follow what an infinite Goodness and an infinite Wisdom hath chosen for thee!

VI. As we are reasonable Creatures related to God, we are also obliged chearfully to trust in, and depend upon him: For as he is the Prop and Center of all the mouldring Creation, the Almighty Atlas, that bears it upon his Shoulders, and keeps it from sinking into Ruin, we and every Creature in Heaven and Earth do hang upon him, and draw our breath from him, and if he shake us off but for a Moment, we presently drop into nothing, and perish: For could we exist of ourselves this present Moment, we might as well have done so the Moment before, and may as well do so the Moment after, and so backwards and forwards to all Eternity; and unless we had such a Fulness of Essence in us, as to exist of ourselves, from all Eternity past, to all Eternity to come, it is impossible we should exist so much as one Moment without new supplies from the infinite and independent Fountain of Being. And what can be more fit or reasonable, than that we who are thus born up by him, should freely trust in, and depend upon him? than that we should build our Hope upon the Prop of our Existence, and make him the Stay of our Confidence, in whom we live, and move, and have our being? Especially considering what a proper Object of Trust and Dependence he is; and that not only as he is the Sovereign Disposer of all those Issues and Events which concern us, but also as he is infinitely Wise, and always understands what is good or hurtful to us, and as he stands engaged both by his own essential Goodness, and free Promise never to fail those that put their Trust in him; but to manage all their Affairs to their everlasting Interest and Advantage. And in whom can we more rationally confide, than in a Being of infinite Wisdom, Goodness, and Power? that always knows what is best for us, that always will what he knows so, and always does what he will? All which considered, it's certainly incomparably more to our Interest and Advantage, that our Concerns should lie in his Hands, and be managed as he sees best, than that every thing should happen to us according to our own Will and Desire: For there are innumerable Things which in the natural Series and Order of Causes are Concomitant and Consequent to every Event, the greatest part of which are out of the Sphere of our Cognizance; by reason of which it is impossible for us to make an infallible Judgment of the good or evil of any Event that befalls us; because tho we may be secure that such an Event singly and apart by itself may be good or evil for us; yet for all we know, there may be such Concomitants or Consequents inseparable to it, as may quite alter its Nature, and render that evil, which considered singly may be good for us; or that good which considered singly may be evil. We earnestly wish for such an Event, and are very confident it would be mighty advantageous to us: But alas! if it should befall us, according to the Series of Things a thousand others must, and what they will prove we are not able to prognosticate; but for all we know, the Mischief of them may abundantly outweigh the Benefit of this. And this being so, how extremely unfit are we to make Choices for ourselves, since in most Particulars 'tis almost an equal lay, whether what we choose will prove our Food or our Poison? But now God being the Supreme Orderer and Disposer of Things, and having the first Link of every Chain of Causes in his own Hands, must needs have an entire Comprehension of all the intermediate ones, from the beginning to the end; and his Power being not only the cause of all actual Events, but also of the possibility of those that shall never be actual, he must needs discern the utmost Issues and Concomitants of every possible, as well as of every future Event, and perfectly understand not only what will be beneficial or injurious to us, but also what might be so. So that 'tis impossible for him to be mistaken in his Choices, because he knows as well before-hand what Things would be to us if they were, as what they are when they do actually exist. Upon the whole therefore, 'tis doubtless of inestimable advantage to us, to be in the Hands of God, and verily, next to Hell itself, I know nothing that is more formidable, than for God to let us alone, and give us up to our own Wills and Desires. And should he call to us from Heaven, and tell us, that he was resolved to cross our Desires no more, but to comply with all our Wishes, let the Event prove good or bad, we should have just reason to look upon ourselves as the most forlorn and abandoned Creatures on this side Hell, as Persons excluded from the greatest Blessing that belongs to a Creature; and if we had any hope of his re-acceptance of us, it would be infinitely our Interest to resign back ourselves, and all our Concerns to him, and on our benighted Knees to beseech him, above all Things, not to leave us to ourselves, or throw us from his Care and Conduct. It being therefore upon all accounts so highly fit and reasonable, and so much to our Interest and Advantage, that we should freely trust ourselves, and all our Affairs, into the Hands of God, and depend upon him for the good success of all our honest Endeavours and Undertakings; that we should acquiesce in his Disposal of Things, and under all outward Events be pleased and satisfied with his Conduct, as knowing that howsoever Things may happen to us, they cannot be otherwise than as the wise and good God is pleased either to permit, or to order and determine them; this, I say, being so fit in itself, and so much for our Interest, it is impossible that without it we can be happy either here or hereafter: For since both our Being and Well-being are wholly dependent on the will of God, and we can neither be, nor be happy one Moment longer than he pleases, how is it possible we should ever be quiet, and satisfied in our own Minds, without a great Assurance of, and Confidence in, him? When we consider what a mighty Stake we have in his Hands, how all our Fortunes lie at his Feet, and how easily he can frown us into nothing, or spurn us into a Condition Ten Thousand Times worse than nothing, whenever he pleases, how can we be otherwise secure in our own Minds, or avoid being externally anxious and solicitous, but by firmly relying on his Truth, and Goodness; to the want of which is to be attributed all that carking Care, tormenting Fear, and disquieting Thoughtfulness, which perpetually haunts the Minds of Men. They are sensible that their Condition is dependent, and that it is not in their own Power either to make it what they would have it, or to secure and continue it when it is made so; they know that by a Thousand Chances, which, in despite of their Foresight or Power, may happen, the next Moment either themselves may be snatch'd from what they possess, or what they possess may be snatched from them; they find that their most probable Designs are liable to innumerable Miscarriages; and that when they have formed their Projects never so wisely, there are infinite cross Accidents may intercur and dash them in pieces: and in this uncertain State of their Affairs, they either think not of God at all, but live at the courtesy of a fickle Chance, and leave themselves to be toss'd and bandied to and fro at the pleasure of a blind and undesigning Fortune, upon whose ever-moving Wheel their wearied Thoughts can never rest; or if they think of God, it is with great Mistrust and Despondency; they fear he will not be regardful enough of them, nor prove so kind to them as they could wish; and are possess'd with an obstinate Opinion, that 'twould be much better for them to be their own Carvers, than to live at his Disposal and Allowance. And hence proceed all those Anxieties and Discontents, those fretting Cares, dismaying Fears, perplexing and misgiving Thoughts, which do continually gall and disquiet them; and from these their thorny Disquietudes, it is impossible they should ever be wholly free, no not in Heaven itself, till they have wrought their Minds to a perfect Trust and Confidence in God: For we shall be altogether as dependent upon God for our Heavenly, as we are for our Earthly Happiness; because tho' all those Acts of heavenly Virtue, in which our heavenly Happiness consists, will be much more in our own Power, than any of these Worldly Goods are; yet they will be no longer in our Power than God shall think fit to enable us to choose and act, and to support us in our Being and Existence, which then we shall sensibly perceive entirely depends upon the All-enlivening vigour of his vital Breath. And therefore tho' he hath promised to continue our being in that most blessed State for ever; yet unless we perfectly trust in his Veracity, our Minds will be continually disturbed with anxious and misgiving Thoughts; we shall be afraid lest one Time or other he should forget his Promise, and upon some unknown Reason or Emergency, withdraw from us that influence of his All-upholding Power, upon which our Being and Well-being depends, and let us drop into Nothing. And the greater our Happiness is, the more we should be afraid of losing it; because we should be always sensible that it entirely depends upon the Pleasure of God, whose Truth and Goodness we cannot perfectly confide in. So that were we placed in the midst of Heaven with a misgiving, distrustful Mind of God, that would imbitter all the Joys of it, and give them a harsh and ungrateful Farewel. For the fearful Apprehensions we should continually have, of being thrust out of Heaven again, and tumbled headlong from all our Glory, would be such a continual Affliction to us, that we should even pine away our happy Eternity, for fear of being eternally deprived of it: So impossible it is for any dependent Being to be happy, without an entire Trust and Confidence in God, upon whom its Being and Happiness depends.

And therefore the Gospel, to render our future Happiness compleat, endeavours to train us up before-hand to a firm and perfect Confidence in God, by making it an essential part of our Duty to commit the keeping of our Souls to God in well-doing, 1 Pet. iv. 19. To trust in the living God, who gives us all Things richly to enjoy, 1 Tim. vi. 17. Not to trust in ourselves, but in God, who raiseth the dead, 2 Cor. i. 9. To believe in God, and not to be troubled at any Events which happen to us in this World, John xiv. 1. and not to cast away our Confidence, Heb. x. 35. and the like. The sense of all which is, to press and engage us to a constant and chearful Reliance upon God, and to endeavour to affect our Minds with a deep sense of his over-ruling Providence, and a full Assurance of the Goodness of all those great Designs he is driving on in the World; and accordingly to acquiesce in, and embrace all Events as the Tokens of his Love and Favour, and always to live upon this persuasion, that it is infinitely better for us to be in God's Hands than in our own; and that he knows much better how to dispose of us, and our Affairs than we do; and that he will take care to dispose of them as much to our Advantage as we ourselves should, if we knew as much as he doth. Now though by reason of those strong Impressions which sensible Things in this Life of Sense make upon us, we should not always be able so firmly to rely upon, and repose ourselves in God's invisible Power, as not to be at all disquieted about the Issues and Events of Things; yet if by frequent Acts of Trust and Reliance on him, we have so disposed our Minds to confide in him, as that by looking up to his over-ruling Providence, we can ordinarily stay and support ourselves, amidst the Changes and Revolutions of this World; if when a storm of Adversity hangs lowring over, or showers down upon us, we can fly to God for shelter, and promise ourselves Safety and Protection under the out-stretched Wings of his Providence: in a word, if when we smart, we can ordinarily hope in him, and rest persuaded, that under his gracious Conduct and Disposal, all Things shall work together for our good; this our imperfect wavering Hope and Dependance, shall in the other Life be immediately ripened into a most perfect Confidence and Assurance: For there we shall be wholly removed from this Life of Sense, by which our Trust in God's invisible Providence is very much weakned and distracted; and besides we shall have much quicker apprehensions of his Nature, and of the infinite Reasons we have to confide in him. And then when after all the threats of a tempestuous Voyage, we shall find ourselves landed in a blessed World, and possessed of all its promised Glories, this mighty Experiment of God's Fidelity and Goodness will immediately settle our predisposed Minds, into such an immovable Confidence in him, as that from thenceforth no Fear or Distrust will ever find the least access to our Thoughts, but we shall be so perfectly assured of his Truth and Goodness, that tho we shall feel ourselves sustained and blest every Moment by the Arbitrary Influences of his Benignity and Power, yet we shall be as confident for ever of the continuance of our Bliss, as we could be, if we did self-exist, and held the Eternity of our Being and Happiness as independently as God doth his. For tho our Condition will be ever dependent, yet 'twill be ever dependent upon such a Foundation as can no more fail than God's own Life and Being; viz. upon his Veracity and Goodness, both which are so essential to him, as that he cannot exist without them. And knowing ourselves so firmly secured in this our dependent State, as that we can never sink, unless God himself sink under us, we shall be to all Eternity not only as safe, but as satisfied in it, as if we were every one a God to himself, and in this blessed Security we shall quietly enjoy God and ourselves for ever. So that our Trust and Confidence in God will crown the Pleasure of all our other Virtues, by giving us full Security of an everlasting Fruition of it. For now the ravished mind will have no Fear or Distrust to cramp or arrest it, in its blessed Operations; no anxious Thoughts of a sad futurity to sour its present Enjoyments; but 'twill enjoy all Heaven every Moment, in a fearless Security of enjoying it all for ever ; and when it shall perfectly love, contemplate and adore God, with a sure and certain Confidence of contemplating, loving and adoring him perfectly for ever, O ! how unspeakably will this inhanche the Pleasure of those Beatifical Acts ! For now in every Moment of all our blessed Eternity, we shall still have the Joy of a blessed Eternity to come ; and besides all those Pleasures, which each present Moment of our heavenly Life shall abound with, we shall still have the Pleasure of a Prospect of infinite Ages of Pleasure. And thus the blessed Mind, you see, by its perfect Dependance upon God, consummates its own Heaven, and secures itself for ever in a most quiet and undisturbed Enjoyment of it.

By all which, I think it sufficiently appears, how much each of these Divine Virtues, which, as rational Creatures, we are obliged to exert, and exercise upon God, contributes to our heavenly Happiness ; and consequently, how indispensibly necessary our present Practice of them is to dispose and capacitate us to enjoy it.

S E C T. III.

Concerning the Social Virtues, shewing that these also are included in the heavenly Part of the Christian Life, and that in their Natures they very much contribute to our heavenly Happiness.

MAN, of all sublunary Creatures, is the most adapted for Society : For tho' the greatest Part of other Creatures do covet Society, as well as he, yet he alone is furnished with that Gift of Nature, which renders Society most pleasant and useful, and that is the Gift of Speech ; by Means of which we can express our Thoughts, and maintain a mutual Intelligence of Minds, with one another ; and thereby divert our Sorrows, mingle our Mirth, impart our Secrets, communicate our Counsels, and make mutual Compacts and Agreements to supply and assist each other : And in these Things consists the greatest Use and Pleasure of Society. And, as of all Creatures, we are the best fitted for Society, so we stand in the greatest need of it : For, as for other Creatures, after they come into the World, they are much sooner able to help themselves than we ; and after we are most able to help ourselves, there are a World of Necessaries and Conveniencies, without which we cannot be happy, and with which we cannot be supplied without each other's Aid and Assistance ; which in an unsociable State of Life, we should, of all Creatures in the World, be the most indisposed to render to one another : For as Aristotle de Repub. lib. i. p. 298. hath observed, ὡς περ γὰρ τελευτῶν βέλτισον τῶν ζώων ἀνθρώπος ἐστίν, ὅτῳ καὶ χωρεῖν νόμου καὶ δίκης χρείαν πάντων. As Man in his perfect State is the best of all Animals ; so separated from Law and Right, he is the worst : For out of Society we see his Nature presently degenerates, and instead of being inclined to assist, grows always most salvage and barbarous to his own kind. Since therefore we have ~~so much~~ need of each other's Help, Society is absolutely necessary to cherish and preserve in us our natural Benevolence towards one another, without which, instead of being mutually helpful, we should be mutually mischievous : For as the same Philosopher hath observed, ὁ δὲ μὴ δυνάμενος κοινωνεῖν, ἢ μηδὲν δέόμενος δὲ ἀνίσταται, καὶ μὲν μένος πύλως, ὥς τε ἢ θνητὸν ἢ θεός, Id. Ibid. He that cannot contract Society with others, or thro' his own Self-sufficiency, doth not need it, belongs not to any Commonwealth, but is either a wild Beast, or a God. We being therefore so framed for Society, and under such Necessities of entering into it, it hence necessarily follows, that being associated together, we are all obliged in our several Ranks and Stations, so to behave ourselves towards one another, as is most for the Common Good of All ; and that since the Happiness of each particular Member of our Society redounds from the Welfare of the Whole, and is involved in it, we ought to esteem nothing good for ourselves that is a Nuisance to the Publick: Because whatsoever this suffers, I and every Man suffer; and unless I could be happy alone, that can never be for my Interest in particular, that is against my Interest in common. Now in such a mutual Behaviour, as most conduces to our common Benefit and Happiness, as we are in Society with one another, consists all Social Virtue; the proper Use and Design of which is to preserve our Society with one another, and to render it a common Blessing to us all. And hereunto Five Things are necessary, viz.
the

1. That we be charitably disposed toward one another.
2. That we be just and righteous in all our Intercourses with each other.
3. That we behave ourselves peaceably in our respective States and Relations.
4. That we be very modest towards those that are Superior to us in our Society, whether it be in Desert or Dignity.

5. That we be very treatable and condescending to all that are Inferior to us. Under these Particulars are comprehended all those Social Virtues upon which the Welfare and Happiness of human Society depends. Now that the Practice of all these is included in the Christian Life, and doth effectually conduce to our everlasting Happiness, I shall endeavour particularly to prove. And,

I. As Rational Creatures associated, and so related to one another, we are obliged to be kindly and charitably disposed towards each other: For the End of our Society being mutually to aid and assist one another; it is necessary, in order hereunto, that we should every one be kind and benevolent to every one, that so we may be continually inclined mutually to aid and do good Offices to one another. And so far as we fall short of this, we fall short of the End of our Society; for, to be sure, the less we love one another, the less prone we shall be to promote and further each other's Welfare, and consequently the less Advantage we shall reap from our mutual Society: But if, instead of loving, we malign and bate each other, our Society will be so far from contributing to our Happiness, that it will be only a Means of rendering us more miserable: For it will only furnish us with fairer Opportunities of doing Mischief to one another, and that mutual Intercourse we shall have, by being united together in Society, will supply us with greater Means and Occasions to wreak our Spight upon each other: For Society, puts us within each other's Reach, and by that Means (if we are Enemies) renders us more dangerous to one another; like Two adverse Armies, which when they are at a Distance, can do but little hurt, but when they are joined and mingled, never want Opportunities to destroy and butcher one another: So that Hatred and Malice, you see, renders our Society a Plague, and we were much better live apart poorly and solitarily, and withdraw from one another, as Beasts of Prey do into their separate Dens, than continue in one another's Reach, and be always liable, as we must be while we are in Society, to be baited and worried by one another.

And as Hatred and Malice spoils all our Society in this Life, and renders it worse than the most dismal Solitude, so it will also in the other: For whenever the Souls of Men do leave their Bodies, they doubtless flock to the Birds of their own Feather, and consort themselves with such separate Spirits, as are of their own Genius and Temper: For, besides that good and bad Spirits are, by the eternal Laws of the other World, distributed into Two separate Nations, and there live apart from one another, having no other Communication or Intercourse, but what is between Two Hostile Countries, that are continually designing and attempting one against another; so that when wicked Souls do leave this Terrestrial Abode, and pass into Eternity, they are presently incorporated, by the Laws of that invisible State, into the Nation of wicked Spirits, and confined for ever to their most wretched Society and Converse; besides this, I say, Likeness doth naturally congregate Beings, and incline them to associate with those of their own Kind. Now Rancour and Malice is the proper Character of the Devil, and the natural Genius of Hell; and consequently 'tis by a malicious Temper of Mind, that we are naturalized before-hand Subjects of the Kingdom of Darkneſs, and qualified for the Conversation of Furies: So that when we go from hence into Eternity, this our malignant Genius will render us utterly averſe to the Friendly Society of Heaven, and naturally preſs and incline us to conſort with that wretched Nation of ſpiteful and rancorous Spirits, with whom we are already joined by a Likeneſs and Communion of Natures. But O! much better were it for us, to be ſhut up all alone for ever in ſome dark Hole of the World, where we might converſe only with our melancholy Thoughts, and never hear of any other being but ourſelves, than to be continually plagued with ſuch vexatious Company: For tho we, who are Spectators only of Corporeal Action, cannot diſcern the manner how one Spirit acts upon another; yet there is no doubt but Spiritual Agents can ſtrike us immediately upon Spirits, as bodily Agents can upon Bodies; and ſuppoſing that theſe can mutually act upon one another, there is no more doubt, but they can mutually make each other feel each other's Pleasures and Diſpleasures, and that according as they are more or leſs powerful, they can, more or leſs, aggrieve and afflict one another: And if ſo, what can be expected from a Company of ſpiteful and malicious Spirits joined in Society together, but that their Converſation ſhould be a continual Intercourſe of mutual Miſchiefs and Vexations? Eſpecially conſidering how they here laid the Foundation of an eternal Quarrel againſt one another: For there all thoſe Companions in Sin will meet, who by their ill Counſels, wicked Inſinuations, and bad Examples, did mutually contribute to each other's Ruin; and being met in ſuch a woful State, how will the tormenting Senſe of thoſe irreparable Injuries they have done each other, whet their Fury againſt, and incite them to play the Devils with one another? And what can be expected from ſuch a Company of waſpiſh Beings, ſo implacably incenſed againſt one another, but that being ſhut up together in the infernal Den, they ſhould be perpetually hiſſing at, and ſtinging each other? But then beſides thoſe mutual Plagues, which theſe furious Spirits muſt be ſuppoſed to inflict upon one another, they will be alſo nakedly expoſed to the powerful Malice of the Devils, thoſe fierce Executioners of God's righteous Vengeance, who, as we now find by Experience, have Power to ſuggeſt black and horrid Thoughts to us, and to torture our Souls with ſuch dreadful Imaginations, as are far more ſharp and exquisite than any bodily Torments: And if now they have ſuch Power over us, when God thinks fit to let them looſe, what will they have hereafter, when our wretched Spirits ſhall be wholly abandoned to their Mercy, and they ſhall have free Scope to exerciſe their Fury upon us, and glut their hungry Malice with our Griefs and Vexations? It ſeems at leaſt a mighty probable Notion, that that horrid Agony of our Saviour in the Garden, which cauſed him to ſhriek and groan, and ſweat, as it were, great Drops of Blood, was chiefly the Effect of thoſe preternatural Terrors, which the Devils, with whom he was then conteſting, impreſſed upon his innocent Mind: And if they had ſo much Power over his pure and mighty Soul, that was ſo ſtrongly guarded with the moſt perfect and unſpotted Virtues, what will they have over ours, when we are abandoned to them, and thrown as Preys into their Mouths? With what an Hellish Rage will they fly upon our guilty and timorous Souls, in which there is ſo much Tinder for their injected Sparks of Horror to take fire on?

Since therefore Rancour and Malice doth ſo naturally incline and hurry our Souls towards the wretched Society of Devils and damned Spirits, the Goſpel, which ſo induſtriouſly conſults our Happineſs, takes all poſſible Care to train us up in Charity and mutual Love; and makes it a principal, as well as necessary Part of our Christian Life, heartily to love one another: For this, as our Saviour tells us, is the darling Precept which lay next to his Heart, this is my Commandment, that ye love one another, John xv. 12. And accordingly we are bid, not only to follow after Charity, 1 Cor. xiv. 1. and to do all Things with Charity, 1 Cor. xvi. 14. but also to put on Charity, above all Things, Col. iii. 14. and to dwell in Love, which the Apostle tells us, is to dwell in God, who is Love, 1 John iv. 16. The Intent of all which is, to oblige us to bear an universal Good-will to all, and to take an hearty Complacency in all that are truly lovely; to be ready to contribute to and rejoice in every one's Good and Welfare, and, in a Word, to live in the continual Exercise of all those charitable Offices, which our present State and Condition requires and calls for. To be courteous and affable, and to treat all those we converse with, with an obliging Look, a gentle Deportment, and endearing Language: To be long-suffering, mild and easy to be intreated; not to break forth into Rage and Storm upon every petty Provocation; and when we are justly provoked, not to suffer our Displeasure to fester into Malice and Rancor, but to be forward and easy to be reconciled: To be of a compassionate and sympathizing Temper, and to rejoice with those that rejoice, and weep with those that weep: To be candid Interpreters of Men and their Actions; to be ready to mitigate and excuse, their Faults; and put fair Comments on their Actions; and to be so far from making malicious Glosses on their innocent Meaning, from proclaiming their Miscarriages, and rejoicing in their Falls, as not to believe ill of them, but upon undeniable Evidence; and when we are forced to do so, to pity and lament them, and endeavour, and pray, and hope for their Reformation. In short, to be benign and bountiful to the necessitous and distressed, and to endeavour, according to our Ability, to allay their Sorrows, remove their Oppressions, support them under their Calamities, and counsel them in their Doubts; to be ready to every good Work, and, like Fields of Spices, to be scattering our Perfumes thro' all the Neighbourhood; and all this out of an honest and sincere Purpose to promote their Good, and not merely to acquire to ourselves a popular Vogue and Reputation: All which are essential Parts of that Charity which the Gospel enjoins us to exercise towards one another: For so the Apostle assures us, 1 Cor. xiii. 4, 5, 6, 7. Charity suffereth long, and is kind; Charity envieth not; Charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no Evil, rejoiceth not in Iniquity, but rejoiceth in the Truth; beareth all Things, believeth all Things, hopeth all Things, endureth all Things.

Now tho there be several Acts of Charity that will cease for ever in Heaven, such as long-suffering, giving of Alms, and forgiving of Injuries, and the like; because, among the People of Heaven, there will be none of the Faults or Miseries about which these Acts are conversant; yet even the Practice of these is indispensably necessary to temper and dispose our Minds to heavenly Charity, which till we are disposed to by universal Love, we shall never be capable of exercising; but since all virtuous Dispositions are acquired by Acts, it is impossible we should acquire the Disposition of universal Love, unless we universally practise it. 'Tis by giving Alms that we must acquire cordial Charity to the poor and needy; and by forgiving Injuries, that we must dispose ourselves to love those that offend us: For these Acts are Causes as well as Signs of a charitable Temper, and are necessary, not only to signify it where it is, but also to produce it where it is not. When therefore, by acting all those Parts of Charity, which are proper to this as well as the other State, we have acquired this blessed Disposition of universal Charity, our Minds are fairly framed and tempered for the Society of Heaven. And tho in the perpetual Jumble and Tumult of this World, some little Piques and Displeasures should now and then arise in our Minds, yet, if in the cool and standing Temper of our Souls, we are hearty Well-wishers to all Men, and hearty heartly Lovers of all that do in any measure love and resemble God, we are in a natural Tendency to Heaven, that perfect Element of Love ; and when we go from hence, shall comfort ourselves with unspeakable Joy and Alacrity, with those great and blessed Lovers that inhabit it ; who being all of them most amiable and God-like Souls, that are every one of the same Temper with ourselves, being touched at the same Loadstone, and made Partakers of the same Divine Nature, we shall immediately close and join with them in the strictest Unions of Love : For those heavenly People being all of them most flagrant Lovers of God, are so united in him, who is the common Center of Love, that no Saint or Angel can enjoy his Love, without possessing a proportionate Degree of theirs ; and their Love of one another being all subordinate to their common Love to God, and grounded upon it, tho' their strongest Inclination, like that of excited Needles, be still towards him the blessed Magnet, at which they have every one been touched, yet do they all stick fast to one another, being clung inseparably together, by those attractive Virtues, which they have all derived from him : And in this State of perfect Friendship they converse together with unspeakable Pleasure, and all their Conversation is a perpetual Intercourse of wise and holy Endearments : And now what a blessed Society must this be, wherein perfect Love and Friendship reigns, and hath an All-commanding Empire ; where every Heart mingles with every one ; and all like precious Dusts of Gold, are melted together into one solid Ingot ; where infinite Myriads of blessed Spirits, by interchangeably clapping and twining with one another, are so inseparably united and grown together ; that they are all but one compounded Soul ; and when, from the highest Angel to the lowest Saint, they are all so tied together by the Heart-strings, that every one is every one's dear Friend, what inexpressible Content and Complacency must they needs take in one another ! When I shall pass all Heaven over, thro' Ten Thousand Millions of blessed Beings, and meet none but such as I most dearly love, and am as dearly beloved by. O what unspeakable Rejoycing and Congratulations will there be between us ! Especially when I shall find no Defect either of Goodness or Happiness in them, nor they in me, to damp our mutual Joy and Delight in each other ; but every one shall be what every one wishes him, a perfect and a blessed Friend : For perfect Lovers have all their Joys and Griefs in common between them ; but the Heavenly Lovers having no Griefs among them, do only communicate their Joys to one another : For where they love so perfectly as they do in Heaven, there can be no such Thing as a private or particular Happiness, but every one must have a share in every one's ; and consequently in this their mutual Communication of Bliss, every one's Happiness will, by his Friendship to every one, be multiplied into as many Happinesses as there are Saints and Angels in Heaven ; and so every Joy of every Member of the Church Triumphant runs round the whole Body in an eternal Circulation : For that blessed Body being all composed of consenting Hearts, that like perfect Unisons, are tuned up to the same Key, when any one is touched, every one echoes and resounds the same Note ; and whilst they thus mutually strike upon each other, and all are affected with every one's Joys, it is impossible but that in a State where there is nothing but Joy, there should be a continual Consort of ravishing Harmony among them : For such is their dear Concern for one another, that every one's Joy not only pays to, but receives Tribute from every one's ; so that when any one blessed Spirit rejoyces, his Joy goes round the whole Society ; and then all their Rejoycings in his Joy reflow upon, and swell and multiply it ; and so as they mutually borrow one another's Joys, they always pay them back with Interest ; and by thus reciprocating, do everlastingly increase them.

II. As we are rational Creatures, related to one another, we are obliged to be just and righteous in all our Intercourses with each other : To yield to every one whatsoever by any kind of Right, whether natural or acquired, he can demand demand or challenge of us : For there are some Things to which every Man hath a Right by Nature, as he is a Part or Member of Human Society. As for Instance, Life, which is the Principle of all our Actions and Perceptions, is freely lent us by God, who is the Source and Fountain of Life ; and consequently till God resumes his Loan, or we forfeit it by our own Actions, we have all a natural Right to live ; and for any Man to attempt to deprive us of our Life, or of our Means of living, is the highest Injury and Injustice. Again, Words being instituted for no other End, but to signify our Meaning, and to be the Instrument of our Intercourse and Society, with one another ; every one who is a Member of Human Society, hath a Right to have our Meaning truly signified to him by our Words ; and whosoever lies or equivocates to another, doth injuriously deprive him of the natural Right of Society. Again, a good name being the Ground of Trust and Credit, and Credit the main Sinew of Society, till Men have forfeited their good Name, they have a natural Right to be well-reputed and spoken of ; and whosoever either by false Witness, publick Slander, or private Whisperings, endeavours to taint an innocent Man's Reputation, doth thereby injuriously attempt to exclude him from the Conversation of Men, and shut the Door of Human Society against him. Once more, Promises being the great Security of our mutual Intercourse, and Society with one another, every Man that hath a Right to Society, hath a Right to what another promiseth him, provided it be but lawful and possible ; and therefore for any Man to promise what he intends not to perform, or to go back from his Promise, when he lawfully may or can perform it, is an Act of unjust Rapine ; and I may every whit as honestly rob another Man of what is his, without my Promise, as of what I have made his by it ; he having an equal Right to both, by the fundamental Laws of Society. In fine, the great Design of our Society being to help and assist one another ; every Man has a Right to be aided and assisted by every one with whom he hath any Dealing or Intercourse ; to have some Share of the Benefit of all that Exchange, Traffick, and Commerce, which passes between him and others ; and therefore for any Man in his Dealings with others, to take Advantage from their Necessity or Ignorance ; to oppress or over-reach them, or to deal so hardly by them, as either not to allow them any Share of the Profit which accrues from their Dealings, or not a sufficient Share for them to subsist and live by, is an injurious Invasion of that natural Right, which the very End and Design of Society gives them : But then, besides these natural, there are also acquired Rights ; and such are those, which either by legal Constitution, or by mutual Compacts and Agreements we are seized and vested with ; which Constitutions and Compacts being absolutely necessary to the upholding and regulating of Human Societies, it is no less necessary, that all those Rights which they confer should be inviolably preserved ; and whosoever knowingly or wilfully takes away or detains from another what he is thus intitled to by Law or Agreement, is guilty either of a Fraud or a Robbery, either of which is an unjust Violation of the Rights of Human Society : So that the Practice of Justice and Righteousness, as it is confined to Human Society, consists in not intrenching either upon the natural or acquired Rights of those with whom we have any Dealing or Intercourse ; in not endeavouring to deprive them either of their Lives or Livelihoods, unless by their own Actions they forfeit them to us ; in imparting our true Meaning to them by our Words, and neither hiding it under Lyes and Falshoods, nor disguising it with equivocal Reservations ; in making good to them all our lawful and possible Promises ; in not falsely aspersing their good Names and Reputations, nor suffering them to be falsely aspersed, when we are able to vindicate them ; in neither using them cruelly in our Dealings, so as wilfully to damnify them, nor hardly, so as either to take all the Advantage to ourselves, or not to allow them such a competent Share of it, as is necessary to support and maintain them : In a Word, not to defraud or rob them of any Thing, which either

either by Constitution of Law, or by Compact and Agreement, they have a Right to: This is civil Righteousness, and without this it is impossible that any Society should be happy: For how can any one be secure in a Society, where Violence and Rapine, Falshood and Oppression reign; where Causes are decided, not by Rules of Justice, but by Dint of Power, and the strongest Arm is the sole Arbitrator of Right and Wrong; where Promises and Professions are only Traps and Snares; and every Man lays Ambushes in his Words, and lurks behind them in reserved Meanings, only to await an Opportunity to surprize and ruin every one he converses with? It would, doubtless, be far more eligible for Men to disperse and disband their Society, and live apart as Vermin do, and subsist by robbing and filching from one another, than live together, as they must in such a State of Injustice, like Bundles of Briars and Thorns, and out of their mutual Jealousies and Distrusts, be continually tearing and scratching one another.

Now, as I shewed you before, what Mens Tempers are here, such will their Company be hereafter: So that if we go out of this World with an unrighteous Temper, we must expect to be confined in the other to an unrighteous Society; and if Unrighteousness be such a Nuisance to our Society in this Life, what a Plague will it be to it in the Life to come? For the most barbarous Societies of Men in this Life, have some Remains of Justice and Equity among them; and tho the best of them have many corrupt Members that are bad in the main, yet whether it be by their natural Temper, or their Fear of Punishment or Disgrace, or by their Sense of Honour, or Checks of Conscience, they are frequently restrained from many bad Things, and particularly from Dishonesty and Injustice; by which Means their Society is rendred much more tolerable: But in the other Life, as they are all perfectly good that are in the Society of the Good, so they are all perfectly wicked that are in the Society of the Wicked; and whatsoever Checks there may be in their Natures to any particular Acts of Wickedness, they are there all borne down by their inveterate Malice against God, and outrageous Despair of ever being reconciled to him. So that in all their Society with one another, there is not the least Intermixture of just and righteous Intercourse, but all their Conversation is Falshood and Treachery, Violence and Oppression, and whatsoever else is hurtful and injurious to one another: For the Devil, who is the sovereign Prince of their Society, is described in Scripture to be the Father of Lyes, and a Murderer from the Beginning; that is, a most outrageously unjust and unrighteous Being, one whose whole Trade hath been to cheat and deceive, to rook Men of their Happiness, and mask his murderous Intentions against them with dissembled Smiles, and fawning Endearments, and doubtless, Regis ad exemplum, is true there as well as here, the miserable Vassals of his dark Kingdom do all imitate his Manners, and tread in his Footsteps; and if so, O good Lord, what woful Society must they have with one another, when by reason of their continual Experience of each other's Falshood and Insincerity, all mutual Trust and Confidence is banished from among them, and every one is forced to stand upon his own Guard in continual Expectance of Mischief from every one: When all their Life is a Trade of Diabolical Knaveries, and their whole Study is to do and retaliate Injuries; and the main Business of this their hellish Society is to circumvent and play the Devils with one another: Doubtless, this alone, is enough to make Hell a most dreadful State, tho there were nothing else dreadful in it; and I verily believe, if it were left to my own Option, I should much rather choose to languish out an Eternity in some dismal Dungeon alone, and there converse only with my own silent Grievs, than to dwell for ever in the Garden of the World accompanied with such false and villainous Creatures.

That this therefore may not be our Fate hereafter, it is a great Part of the Business of our Holy Religion, to train us up for better Company, by inuring us before-hand to the Practice of Righteousness and Justice: For so it obliges us to ~~do~~ unto Men whatsoever we would that Men should do unto us, Mat. vii. 12. that is, so to deal with every Man as if we had exchanged Persons with him, and he were in our Place, and we in his: And in particular, it enjoins us to be harmless as Doves, as well as wise as Serpents, Mat. x. 16. to converse in the World with Simplicity and godly Sincerity, 2 Cor. i. 12. to keep up an honest Conversation in the World, 1 Pet. ii. 12. not to lye to one another, Col. iii. 9. not to go beyond or defraud our Brother in any Matter, 1 Thes. iv. 6. The Sense of all which is, to oblige us to maintain a strict Integrity in all our Professions and Intercourses with Men, and not to allow ourselves in any Course of Action, which the Laws of Justice and Sincerity disapprove; to measure our Words by our Meaning, and our Meaning so far as we are able, by the Truth and Reality of Things; to converse among Men with a generous Openness and Freedom, and with as little Reserve and Disguise as is possible and prudent, considering what a treacherous and ill-natured World we have to deal with; to be what we seem, and not to paint ill Meanings with smiling Looks and smooth Pretences; to notify our Intentions, and unfold our Hearts, and, so far as innocent Prudence will admit, to turn ourselves inside-outwards to all we converse with; to give to every one his due, and not to intrench upon other Mens Rights, whether it be to their Lives or Liberties, Reputations or Estates: In a Word, to weigh to our Neighbours and ourselves in the same Balance, and to do to them whatsoever we could reasonably wish they should do to us, if we were in their Persons and Circumstances: By the Practice of which excellent Rules, our Mind will, by degrees, be refined and purified from all Disposition to Fraud and Injustice; and then when we go from hence into Eternity, we shall carry thither with us such a just and righteous Frame of Mind, such an honest Plainness and Integrity of Temper, as will immediately qualify and dispose us for the Society of just Men made perfect, who finding us already united to them in Disposition and Nature, will joyfully receive us into their blessed Communion. And now, O the blessed State we shall be in, when being stripped of all Partiality and unjust Desire, of all Insincerity and Craftiness of Temper, we shall be admitted into a Nation of just and righteous People, where every one has his appropriate Seat and Mansion of Glory, and is so perfectly contented with it, that he never covets what another enjoys, so that every one possesses what is his own, without the least Suspicion of being ejected by a subtler or more powerful Neighbour; where being perfectly assured of each other's Integrity, they converse together with the greatest Openness and Freedom; and in all their Language, whatsoever it be, do read their Hearts, and convey their Intentions to one another; where their Souls converse Face to Face, and do freely unbosom themselves to one another, without the least Disguise or Dissimulation; so that in all their Society, there is no such Thing as a Secret or Mystery, but they are all Bosom-Friends to one another, and every one has a Window into every one's Breast! O blessed God, what a most happy Conversation must such just Souls as these enjoy with one another, from whose Society all Fraud and Falshood, Violence and Oppression is for ever banished! For whilst they live together, as they do, in the continual Exercise of perfect Righteousness and Integrity, they can neither design upon, nor suspect one another, and so consequently must needs converse together with infinite Security and Freedom: And being all of them thus inviolably safe in each other's Sincerity and Justice, every one enjoys his proper Rank and Degree of Glory, without Fear or Disturbance, and freely communicates his wise and excellent Thoughts to every one, without any Strangeness or Reserve. Thus all Heaven over there is a most perfect Freedom of Conversation among those righteous People that inhabit it, and every one is every one's Neighbour, and every one's Neighbour is as Himself: For in all their Communication and Intercourse, they mutually exchange Persons with one another, and there is no one doth that to another, which he would not gladly have done to himself in the same Condition and Circumstances:

stances : So that none of them all can possibly be aggrieved because they are every one dealt by just as they would be, most fairly, most righteously and faithfully. And hence there can be no Grudges among them, no Whisperings, Backbitings, or spiteful Misrepresentations, because every one likes what every one does, and so they are all perfectly satisfied with one another. And thus you see in the Exercise of perfect Righteousness and Integrity all the Society of Heaven is render'd perfectly happy.

III. As we are rational Creatures related to one another, we are obliged to behave ourselves peaceably in our respective States and Relations. For Society being nothing but an united Multitude, it is indispensibly necessary to the preservation of its Union, that every individual Member of it should peaceably comport himself towards every one in that Degree and Order wherein he is placed : Because, as the Health of natural Bodies depend upon the Harmony and Agreement of their Parts, so doth the Prosperity of Societies or political ones. For 'tis Peace and mutual Accord which is the Soul that doth both animate and unite Society, and keep the Parts of it from dispersing and flying abroad into Atoms, which nothing but Force and Violence can hinder them from, when once they are broken into Discords and Dissensions. So true is that of our Saviour, A Kingdom divided against itself cannot stand. For besides that Division impairs the strength of a Society, which like an impetuous Stream, being parted into several Currents, runs with far less force, and is much more easily forded ; for the several Factions that are in it, are like the several Nations in a Confederate Army, which tho they be all united into one Body, have several contrary Interests and Designs, which divides their Councils, and sows Jealousies among them, and so renders them not only less able to withstand the Force of an unanimous Enemy, but also less willing to aid and assist one another ; besides this, I say, Faction and Discord naturally dis-unites and separates Society, as it dissolves the Bond of Peace which holds it together. For a Society without Peace is but an aggregated Body, whose Parts lie together in a confused heap, but have no Joints or Sinews to fasten them to one another ; for want of which, instead of mutually assisting, they do but mutually load and oppress each other ; which must necessarily divide their Wills and their Interests, and when that is done, 'tis only external Force that hinders them from dividing and separating their Persons. Upon this account, therefore, every Man is obliged, as he is a Member of Human Society, to comport himself peaceably with all Men ; because otherwise he will necessarily render himself a Publick Pest and Nuisance. For so long as he is of an unquiet and turbulent Spirit, instead of being an Help he must necessarily be a Disease to every Community, of which he is a Member ; and if those, with whom he is joined, were all of his Humour and Spirit, it would be much better for them all to live asunder in the most solitary Condition, than to continue in Society together ; because instead of helping and assisting, they would be sure to be continually vexing and plaguing one another.

If therefore we go into the other World with an unquiet and quarrelsome Temper, we shall be thereby inclined to and prepared for the most wretched and miserable Society ; even the Society of those factious Fiends, that could not be quiet even in Heaven itself, but raised a Mutiny before the Throne of God, and for so doing were driven thence, and damned to keep one another Company in endless Misery and Despair. The Souls of Men therefore being by the Law of the invisible State always assigned to that Society of Spirits whereunto they are most con-naturalized in their Temper, we must expect, if we go into Eternity with turbulent and contentious Minds, to be thrust into the Society of Devils and damned Ghosts, with whom we are already joined in a strict Communion of Natures. And O ! what a dreadful thing must it be, to be forced to spend an Eternity in such wretched Company ! Verily methinks the most horrid and frightful Idea I can form in my own Mind, is, that of a Company of snarling and quarrelsome Spirits, crowded like so many Scorpions and Adders into a Den together, and there forced by the Venomousness of their Temper to live in continual Mutiny, and be perpetually bissing and spitting Poison at one another. For tho' those Words of our Saviour, Mat. xii. 25, 26. imply that Satan's Kingdom is not divided, yet they are not to be so understood as if there were any such thing as Peace or Concord among those rancorous Spirits; for that is impossible to be imagined: No, doubtless they would be divided eternally if they could, being such continual Plagues as they are to one another, and think it a mighty Happiness to be shut up all alone in separate Dens, where they might never see nor hear of one another more; but being chained together as they are by an Adamantine Fate, which they cannot withstand, they consent in this, and in this only, to oppose all good Designs, and do the utmost Mischief they are able. But as to all their other Intercourses they are continually embroiled, and do live in an eternal Variance with one another. So that their Society is like that Monster Scylla, whom the Poets talk of, whose inferior Parts were a Company of Dogs, that were perpetually snarling and quarrelling among themselves, and yet were inseparable from one another, as being all of them Parts of the same Substance.

Wherefore since to be united by indissoluble Ligaments to this wretched Society will be the certain Fate of all factious and contentious Souls, our blessed Religion, whose great Design is to advance our Happiness, hath taken abundant care to educate our Minds in Quietness and Peace. For hither tend all those Precepts of it which require us to follow Peace with all Men, Heb. xii. 14. to be at Peace among ourselves, 1 Thess. v. 13. to follow after the Things that make for Peace, Rom. xiv. 19. to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of Peace, Ephes. iv. 3. to be of one mind, and to live in Peace, 2 Cor. xiii. 11. and if it be possible, and as much as in us lies, to live peaceably with all Men, Rom. xii. 18. In a word, to mark them that cause Divisions among us, and avoid them, Rom. xvi. 17. and to do our Part, that there be no Divisions among us, but that we be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment, 1 Cor. i. 10. The Design of all which is to bind us over to the Study and Practice of Unity and Concord, and restrain us by the strictest Obligations from all schismatical, factious, and turbulent Behaviour in those sacred or civil Societies whereof we are Members. And unless we do sincerely endeavour to fulfil these Obligations, however we may monopolize Godliness to our own Party, and claw and canonize one another, we are Saints of a quite different strain from those blessed ones above, and are acted by the factious Spirit of the Devil, whose Business it is to foment Divisions, and kindle Disturbances and Commotions where-ever he comes. This therefore must be our great Care if we design for Heaven, to root out of our Tempers all inclination to Contention and Discord, and to compose ourselves into a sedate and peaceable, calm and gentle frame of Spirit; and not only to avoid all unnecessary Quarrels and Contentions ourselves, but so far as in us lies to be Peace-makers between others, and preserve a friendly Union with and among our Fellow-Members. And if thro' human Frailty and Infirmity, thro' our own Ignorance or the plausible Pretences of Seducers, thro' the too great Prevalence of our worldly Interest, or the Principles of a bad Education, it should be our Misfortune to be insensibly mis-led into unwarrantable Dissents and Divisions, yet still to keep our Minds in a teachable Temper, and our Ears open to Truth and Conviction; to be desirous of Accommodation, and willing to hear the Reason on both sides, and as soon as we are convinced of our Error, to repent of our Division, and immediately return to Unity and Peace.

Which if it be our constant Practice and Endeavour, we shall by Degrees form our Minds into such a peaceable and amicable Temper, that when we go into the other World, where we shall be perfectly disengaged from all temporal Interests, and thorowly convinced of all our erroneous Prejudice, our Souls will will be effectually contempered to the quiet and peaceable Society of the Blessed ; who having no private Interests to pursue, no particular Affections to gratify, no Ends or Aims but what are common to them all, which is to adore, and imitate, and love that never-failing Spring whence all their Felicity flows, it is impossible there should be any Occasion administered by any of them of any Schism or Rupture of Communion. And so those happy People live in the most perfect Unity and Concord, as being all united in their Ends, and tied together by their Heart-strings. For they having no counter Opinions or cross Interest to divide them, nothing but Truth shining in their Minds, nothing but Goodness reigning in their Wills, it is impossible there should be any dissenting Brother among them, any Non-conformist to the blessed Laws of their Communion ; but conspiring together as they do in the same Mind and Interest, and in the same peaceable Intentions and Affections, they must needs walk hand in hand together, in a most perfect Uniformity. So that if we would live for ever with these blessed Folk, we must now endeavour to calm and compose ourselves into their Temper, to discharge our Minds, as much as we are able, of every froward and contentious Humour, and reduce our Wills to a perfect loathing of them ; that so being qualified for their Society, we may be admitted to it when we go away from this wrangling World. And then how unspeakably happy shall we be, when with Minds perfectly refined from all Contention and Bitterness, we shall be received into the Company of those calm and sedate Spirits, and bear our part in their sweet and placid Conversation, wherein they freely communicate their Minds to one another, without the least Fierceness or Insolence, Captiousness or Misconstruction, Clamour or Contention for Victory ; and do eternally discourse over the wise Things of Heaven, and still perfectly concenter both in their Understandings and Wills ; wherein like so many Stars in Conjunction they mingle Light with one another, and do peaceably communicate the Treasures of their Knowledge without the least bandying or Controversy : For tho some of them do doubtless know much more than others, yet there being no Intermixture of Error in the Knowledge of any, it is impossible they should oppose or contradict one another, because whatsoever is true, agrees with every thing that is true. And being thus united in Mind and Judgment, they freely communicate their Thoughts without ever disputing one another's Sentences, which renders it impossible for them ever to quarrel or disagree. So that all their Communion is a perfect Concord of Souls ; wherein there is no such thing as Schism or Division, as passing cruel Censures, or affixing hard Names or bandying Anathemas at one another ; but in Mind and Heart they are all as perfectly one as if they were all animated by one and the same Soul. And thus they live unspeakably happy in the mutual Exercise of an everlasting Peace, and all their Conversation with one another is perfect Harmony without Discords.

IV. As we are rational Creatures related to one another, we are obliged modestly to submit to our Superiors, and chearfully to condescend to our Inferiors ; in those respective Societies whereof we are Members. These Two I put together, because they are Relatives, and as such do mutually explain and contribute light to each other. Now it being necessary to the Order and End of all Societies, that their Members should be distinguished into superior and inferior Ranks and Stations ; that some should be trusted with the power of Commanding, and others reduced to the condition of Obedience, that so in this regular Subordination they may every one in their several Stations be obliged to aid and assist each other, and according to their several Capacities to contribute to the good of the Whole ; which in a state of Equality (wherein every Man would be absolute Lord of himself) cannot be expected, considering the different Humours and Interests by which Men are acted ; this, I say, being upon this account necessary, it is, upon the same account, equally necessary that they should mutually perform those Offices to one another, which which are proper to their respective Ranks and Stations! That Superiors should look upon themselves as Trustees for the publick Good, whom God hath invested with Authority over others, not to domineer and gratify their own imperious Wills, but to provide for and secure the Commonwealth; and consequently to take care that they do not prostitute their Power to their own private Avarice or Ambition, but that they employ it for the Common Good and Benefit of their Subjects and Inferiors; that they be ready to do them all good Offices, to compassionate their Infirmities, consult their Conveniencies, and comply with all their reasonable Supplications; considering that for this End they derived their Authority from God, who is the Fountain of Authority, to whom they are accountable for their good and bad Administration of it. And so for the Inferiors, it is no less necessary for the Common Good, that they perform their Parts towards those that are above them; that they behave themselves towards them, with all that Loyalty and Modesty, Respect and Submission, which their Place and Authority calls for; that they reverence them as the Vice-gerents of God, and address to them as to sacred Persons, and render a chearful Obedience to that divine Authority that is stamp'd upon all their just Laws and Commands, considering that in their several Degrees, they represent the Person of the great Sovereign of the World, to whom we owe an intire Subjection, and consequently are in every thing to be obeyed and submitted to, that he hath not expressly countermanded. For that Subjects and Superiors should thus behave themselves towards one another is indispensably necessary to the Welfare of all Societies. For whilst the Inferiors of any Society do obstinately refuse to submit to the Will of their Superiors, and the Superiors to condescend to the Common Good of their Inferiors, they are contending together, either for a Confusion or a Tyranny; and if the Superiors prevail, Tyranny follows; if the Inferiors, Confusion; either of which is extremely mischievous, not only to the Society in general, but to each of the contending Parties: For if Confusion follows, 'tis not only the Superior Party suffers by being deposed from his Authority, but the Inferior too by being deprived of Protection, and exposed to one anothers Rapine and Violence; and if Tyranny follows, 'tis not only the Inferior Party suffers by being forced upon a rigorous and uneasy Obedience, but the Superior too, by being continually perplexed how to force and extort that Obedience; and thus both Parties suffer under the bad effects of each others Misdemeanor. So that to make our Society happy, it is necessary, that whether we be Superiors or Inferiors, we should be of a gentle, yielding and treatable Temper, that so which Rank soever we are placed in, we may be pliable either way, to a fair Condescension, or a just Submission. For whilst we are of obstinate, perverse and untreatable Tempers, we are neither fit to be Superiors nor Inferiors; but must necessarily be Plagues and Grievances to our Society, which Rank or Order soever we are placed in. And tho in this Life we have not always such a sensible experience of the Evil and Mischief of this malignant Temper, because now it is counter-influenced by those more meek and auspicious ones that are in Conjunction with it; yet when we go into Eternity, we shall be confined to such a Society of Spirits as are all thorough out of our Genius and Temper. For as in the Society of the Blessed there is a Conjunction of every Virtue in every Member; so there is of every Vice in the Society of the Wicked; who do not only retain those Vices in their Natures, which they were here inclined and addicted to, but are also continually excited to all other Vices they are capable of, by their inveterate Enmity against God, which in that miserable Estate is perpetually enraged, by their Despair of being ever reconciled to him. So that whatsoever wicked Temper we carry with us into Eternity, we shall be sure to meet with it in every individual Member of the Society of the Wicked; and consequently if we carry thither with us a perverse and untreatable Temper, that will not endure either to submit or condescend, we shall be sure to find the same Humour reigning reigning thro'out all the Society of the Wicked. And then being eternally united to it, (as we must expect to be if we are allied to it by Nature) in what a miserable State shall we be, when every Member of our Society shall be of the same unconversable Temper with ourselves, and we shall find none that will comply with, or endeavour to sooth and mollify our Obstinacy; when all our whole Society shall consist of a Company of stiff and stubborn Spirits, that will neither submit to, nor bear with one another, but every one will have his will upon every one, so far as he is able to force and extort it; when those that are superior in Might and Power, do all rule with a fierce and tyrannical Will, and will condescend to nothing that is beneficial for their Subjects; and those that are inferior do obey with a perverse and stubborn Heart, and will submit to nothing but what they are forced and compelled to, and 'tis nothing but mere Power and Dread by which they rule and are ruled: In a word, when they all mutually hate and abominate each other, and those that command are a Company of cruel and imperious Devils, that impose nothing but Grievances and Plagues, and those that obey are a Company of surly and untractable Slaves, that submit to nothing but what they are driven to by Plagues; so that Plagues and Grievances, are both the Matter and the Motive of all their Obedience and Subjection; when this, I say, is the State of their Society with one another, how is it possible but that they should be all of them in a most wretched and miserable Condition? For where all is transacted by Force and Compulsion. (as to be sure all is among such a Company of perverse and self-willed Spirits,) there every one must be supposed to be, so far as he is able, a Fury and a Devil to every one; and those that do compel are like so many salvage Tyrants, continually vexed and enraged with stubborn Oppositions and Resistances, and those that are compelled, like so many obstinate Gally-Slaves, are continually lashed into an insufferable Obedience, and forced by one Torment to submit to another; and thus all their Society with one another is a perpetual Intercourse of mutual Outrage and Violence.

This being therefore the miserable Fate and Issue of a perverse and stubborn, and untractable Temper, the Gospel, whose great Design is to direct us to our Happiness, doth industriously endeavour to root it out of our Minds, and to plant in its room a gentle, obsequious and condescending Disposition: For hither tend all those Evangelical Precepts, which require us to become weak to the weak that we may gain them, 1 Cor. ix. 22. *to bear with their Infirmitie*s, Rom. xv. 2. and support them, and be patient towards them, 1 Thess. v. 14. And on the other hand, to submit our-selves to our Elders, 1 Pet. v. 5. and to those that have the rule over us, Heb. xiii. 17. to obey our Magistrates, our Parents, and our Masters, to be subject to Principalities, and not speak evil of Dignities, to honour Kings, and submit to their Laws and Governors, 1 Pet. ii. 13, 14. In a word, to honour all Men as they deserve, 1 Pet. ii. 17. and to hold good Men in Reputation, Phil. ii. 19. and in honour to prefer one another, Rom. xii. 10. The sense of all which is, to oblige us to treat all Men as becomes us, in the Rank and Station we are placed in; to honour those that are our Superiors, whether in Place or Virtue; to give that modest Deference to their Judgments, that Reverence to their Persons, that Respect to their Virtues, and Homage to their Desires or Commands, which the degree or kind of their Superiority requires; to con- descend to those that are our Inferiors, and treat them with all that Candour and Ingenuity, Sweetness and Affability, that the respective distances of our State will allow; to consult their Conveniencies, and do them all good Offices, and pity and bear with their Infirmitie's, so far as they are safely and wisely tolerable. By the constant Practice of which, our Minds will be gradually cured of all that perverseness and surlinefs of Temper, which indisposes us to the respective Duties of our Relations; of all that Contempt and Selfishness which renders us averse to the proper Duty of Superiors, and of all that Self-Conceit, and Impatience of Command, which indisposes us to the Duty of Inferiors. And our Wills being once wrought into an easy Pliableness, either to Submission or Condescension, we are in a forward Preparation of Mind to live under the Government of Heaven, where doubtless, under God the Supreme Lord and Sovereign, there are numberless degrees of Superiority and Inferiority. For some are said to reap sparingly and some abundantly; some to be Rulers of Five Cities, and some of Ten; some to be the least, and some the greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven: all which implies, that in that blessed State, there is a great Variety of degrees of Glory and Advancement. And, indeed, it cannot be otherwise in the Nature of the Thing; for our Happiness consisting in the Perfection of our Natures, the more or less perfect we are, the more or less happy we must necessarily be; for every farther degree of Goodness we attain to, is a widening and enlargement of our Souls for farther degrees of Glory and Beatitude. And accordingly when we arrive at Heaven, which is the Element of Beatitude, we shall all be filled according to the Content and Measure of our Capacities, and drink in more or less of its Rivers of Pleasure, as we are more or less enlarged to contain them. So that according as we do more and more improve ourselves in true Goodness, we do naturally make more and more room in our Souls for Heaven, which doth always fill the Vessels of Glory of all sizes, and pour in Happiness upon them till they all overflow and can contain no more. Since therefore they are all of them entirely resigned to, and guided by right Reason, there is no doubt but in these their different degrees of Glory and Dignity, they mutually behave themselves towards one another, as is most fit and becoming; and that since under God the Head and King of their Society, there is from the highest to the lowest, a most exact and regular Subordination of Members, they do every one perform their Parts and Duties towards every one, in all those different Stations of Glory they are placed in, and consequently do submit and condescend to each other, according as they are of a superior or inferior Class and Order. So that if when we go from hence into the other World, we carry along with us a submissive and condescending Frame of Spirit, we shall be trained up, and pre-disposed to live under the blessed Hierarchy of Heaven; to yield a chearful Conformity to the Laws and Customs of it; and to render all the Honours to those above, and all the Condescensions to those beneath us in Glory, which the Statutes of that Heavenly Regiment do require; in doing whereof we shall all of us enjoy a most unspeakable Content and Felicity. For tho in the Kingdom of Heaven, as well as the Kingdoms of the Earth, there are numberless Degrees of Advancement, and Dignity, and one Star there, as well as here, differeth from another Star in Glory; yet so freely and chearfully do they all condescend and submit to each other, in these their respective differences of Rank and Station, that in the widest distances of their State, and Degrees of Glory, they all maintain the dearest Intimacies and Familiarities with each other; and neither those that are Superior, are either envied for their Height, or contemned for their Familiarity, nor those that are Inferior despised for their Meanness, or oppressed for their Weakness. For in that blessed State, every one being best pleased with what best becomes him, it is every one's joy to behave himself towards every one as best becomes the Rank and Degree he is placed in; and those that are above, do glory in condescending to those that are below them; and those that are below, do triumph in submitting to those that are above them: and thus in all those differences of Glory and Dignity between them, they alternately revere their Superiors, and condescend to their Inferiors, with the same unforced Freedom and Alacrity; and so do eternally converse with one another (notwithstanding all their distances) with the greatest Freedom, and most endearing Familiarity.

And thus I have endeavoured to give you an account of the first sort of Means, by which Heaven the great End of a Christian is to be obtained: viz. the proximate and immediate ones, which comprehend the Practice of all those Virtues, which, as Rational Creatures related to God and one another, we stand eternally eternally obliged to; and shewed how they are all of them essential Parts of the Christian Life, and how Heaven it self consists in the Perfection of them.

So that upon the whole, the best Definition I can give of the state of Heaven, is this, That it is the everlasting, perfect Exercise of all those Human, Divine, and Social Virtues, which as Rational Animals, related to God, and all his Rational Creation, we are indispensibly and everlastingly obliged to. And therefore since the only natural way, by which we can acquire and perfect these Virtues, is Use and Practice, it hence necessarily follows, that the Practice of them is the only direct and immediate Means, by which that heavenly State is to be purchased and obtained.

S E C T. IV.

Wherein for a Conclusion of this Chapter, some Motives and Considerations are proposed to perswade Men to the Practice of these heavenly Virtues.

IT having been largely shewed in the foregoing Sections, that the Practice of all those Virtues which are included in the heavenly Part of the Christian Life tends directly towards the heavenly State, and naturally grows up into it; I shall now briefly conclude this Argument with some Motives to perswade Men to the Practice of them. And these I shall deduce,

1. From the Suitableness of them to our present State and Relation.
2. From the Dignity.
3. From the Freedom.
4. From the Pleasure.
5. From the Ease.
6. And Lastly, from the Necessity of them.

I. Therefore, let us consider the Suitableness of these Virtues to our present State and Relation: For in our Baptism, wherein we gave up our Names to Christ, we became Denizens and Freemen of Heaven, and were received into a Covenant, that upon Performance of our Part of it, actually intituled us to all its blessed Privileges and Immunities. So that in that sacred Solemnity of our Initiation into the Christian Covenant, we contracted a strict Alliance with the blessed People of Heaven, and became their Brethren and Fellow-Citizens: For so the Apostle tells us, Ephes. ii. 19. Now therefore ye are no more Strangers and Foreigners, but Fellow-Citizens with the Saints, and of the Household of God; and the Household of God consists of the whole Congregation of the Saints, whether militant upon Earth, or triumphant in Heaven. For so, Eph. iii. 15. it is called the whole Family of Heaven and Earth. So that we are Confederates with them in the same Covenant, even that by which they hold all the Joys and Glories they are possessed of; and if we will do as they have done, that is, perform the Conditions of it, we shall be Co-habitants with them in the same Glory. We are adopted Children of the same Father with them, Members of the same Family, Co-heirs of the Promise of the same Glory, Brethren of the same Confraternity and Corporation; and all the difference between them and us, is only this, that we are abroad, and they at home; we are on this, and they on the other side Jordan; we in the Acquest, and they in the Possession of the heavenly Canaan; to which we are intituled as well as they, and that by the same Grant from the supreme Proprietor. So that by calling ourselves Christians, we do in other Words call ourselves Brethren, Co-heirs, and Fellow-Citizens with the blessed Inhabitants of Heaven. And what can be more suitable to such a Profession than for us to live as they do, and the continued Practice of all these heavenly Virtues? And what a shame will it be for us, that are by Profession their Brethren, not to copy and imitate their their Behaviour; that we who are below Stairs in the same House and Family, should abandon ourselves to Sensuality and Devilishness, whilst our blessed Kindred above are entertaining themselves with those heavenly Pleasures, which result from the perfect Exercise of all heavenly Virtue; that we should be neglecting, provoking, and blaspheming God, whilst they are contemplating, and admiring, loving and praising, imitating and obeying him; that we should be cheating and defrauding, envying and despising, maligning and embroiling one another, whilst they are conversing together with the greatest Freedom and Integrity, with the most obliging Respects and Condescensions, and in the strictest Unity and dearest Friendship? What a vile Reproach are our wicked Lives to the Conversation of these our Fellow-Citizens above? For while we profess ourselves their Brethren, those who understand no better will be prone to suspect that they live as we do; and how would such a suspicion tempt an honest Heathen to renounce Heaven, as the Indian King did, when he was told, that the bloody Spaniards went thither; and rather choose to go down to the darkest Hell, than to Heaven that is peopled with such Diabolical Company? So that by our wicked and unsaint-like Lives, we take an effectual Course to bring Heaven itself into disgrace, and to cast such a slander on its blessed Inhabitants, as may justly expose them to the Scorn and Hatred of all those honest Minds that know them no otherwise than by us their unworthy and degenerate Fellow-Citizens; and could those blessed Spirits look down from their Thrones of Bliss, and see what a Company of wretched Christians there are that claim Kindred with them, they would doubtless be ashamed of the Relation, and count themselves highly dishonoured and disgraced by it, and heartily wish, that we would disown our Sins or our Baptism, and openly renounce their Alliance, or more strictly imitate their Manners. And really 'tis a burning shame, that we should profess ourselves Fellow-Citizens with them for no other purpose but to scandalize and reproach them; and it were heartily to be wished, even for the Credit of Heaven, and of our blessed Brethren that inhabit it, that if we will not be so generous as to follow their Example, we would at least be so honest as to renounce their Kindred, and not claim a Relation to their Family, merely to shame and disgrace them.

II. Consider the Honour and Dignity of the heavenly Life: For if we may estimate Actions by the Examples from whence they are copied, as in other Cases we are wont to do, doubtless the most noble and honourable are such as are copied from the Lives of the glorious Inhabitants of Heaven: For besides that sublime Rank of Dignity whereunto they are advanced, as being the Courtiers and immediate Attendants of the Almighty Sovereign of Heaven and Earth; a Dignity which by how much more it excels that of the greatest Potentate of this World, by so much more it authorizes the Examples of those that wear it; besides this, I say, their Examples being the most perfect Copies and Imitations of the Life of God, are thereby render'd not only more eminent and glorious, but also more obliging and authoritative. For by following them, we follow God, who is the Standard of all rational Perfection, and who by being the first and best in the whole kind of Rational Entities, is the supreme Rule and Measure of them all. So that in imitating the blessed People above, we imitate those who in their Place and Station do live at the same Rate, as the great God doth in his, and regulate themselves by the same infallible Reason. We do what God himself would do if he were in our Place, and what the Son of God himself did do when he was in our Natures; and there is no other difference between his Life and ours, but what necessarily arises out of our different States and Relations. And what more glorious thing can we do, than to live by the Pattern of their Lives, who live so exactly by the Pattern of God's? For the Example of living which those blessed People set us, is the Example of God at second-hand; 'tis his most rational Life transcribed, so far as it is rationally imitable, that is, so far as it is honourable and glorious for a rational Creature to transcribe it. For in the State of finite Creatures they live in a perfect Conformity to the same immutable Reason, whereby God regulates himself in the State of an infinite Creator. So that their Example is an imitation in kind of all those particular Excellencies in him, which they may and ought to imitate; and 'tis an Imitation in general of that eternal Decorum with respect to Conditions and States, which he constantly observes in all his Transactions with his Creatures. And as their Example is a perfect Copy of God's, so 'tis a Copy fitted in all Particulars for our Use and Imitation. For it doth not only describe to us all those particular Excellencies in him which are to be imitated by us, but all those particular Duties to which that Eternal Law of Equity and Goodness by which he governs himself in his State, requires of us in ours; and shews not only wherein we are to imitate him in kind, but also wherein we are to follow him in general, in doing what is most fit for us in the State and Relation of Creatures, even as he doth what is most fit for him in the State and Relation of a God and Creator. So that the Example of those Heavenly Inhabitants is the example of God himself, exactly fitted and attuned to the State and Condition of Creatures. For just as they live, the All-wise and All-good God himself would live, if he were in their State and Relation. Wherefore by imitating their Heavenly Lives and Manners we do ourselves the greatest Right, and do most effectually contribute to the Glory and Honour of our own Natures. For whilst we tread in theirs, we tread in the Footsteps of God, and have his glorious Example to warrant and justify our Actions; we behave ourselves as it becomes the Children of the King of Heaven, and so far as it consists with the Condition of Creatures, we live like so many Gods in the World; which is doubtless the utmost height of Honour and Glory that any rational Ambition can aspire to. So that methinks had we any Spark of true Gallantry and Bravery of Mind in us, we should despise all other kinds of Life but this, and pity those gilded Bubbles that have nothing to boast of but their fine Clothes, and great Estates, and empty Titles of Honour; we should look upon all other Dignities as the trifling Play-games of Children in comparison with this, of living like the great Nobility of Heaven, that do all live by the Pattern of the Life of God.

III. Consider the great Freedom and Liberty of a Heavenly Life. So long as we live earthly and sensual Lives, our free-born Souls are imprisoned in Sense, and all their Motions are circumscribed and bounded within the narrow Sphere of sensitive Goods and Enjoyments. So that when we would follow our Reason, and do as that prescribes and dictates, we find ourselves miserably hampered and intangled; the Lusts of our Flesh do hang like gyves so heavily upon us, that whenever our Reason and Conscience call, we cannot move with any Freedom, but are fain to labour at every step, and after a few faint essays are utterly tired under the weight of our reluctant Inclinations. So that the good which many Times we would, we do not, the Law in our Minds being counter-voted by the Law in our Members. Our Reason and Conscience tell us, that we ought to love God above all, to adore and worship him, and surrender up ourselves to his Command and Disposal; and we are many Times strongly inclined to follow its Dictates and Directions; but, alas! when we come to put them in Execution, we find so many pull-backs within us, so many strong and stubborn Aversions to our good Inclinations, that we have not the Power to do as we would, or to dispose of ourselves according to our own most reasonable Desires; but like miserable Slaves that are chained to the Oar, we are fain to row on whithersoever our imperious Lusts do command us, tho' we plainly see we are running on a Rock, and invading our own Destruction. And as we are not free in this ill state of Life to follow our Reason, so neither are we free to follow our Lusts. For as when we would follow our Reason, our Lusts cling about and intangle us; so when when we would follow our Lust, our Reason clogs and restrains us; and by objecting to us the Indecency and Danger, the infinite Turpitude and Hazard of our sinful Courses, lays so many rubs in our way, that we cannot sin with any Freedom, but whithersoever we go we walk like Prisoners with the Shackles of Shame and Fear on our Heels; so that which way soever we turn ourselves, we find that our Power to dispose of ourselves is under a great Restraint and Confinement, and we can neither get leave of our Lusts to follow our Reason, nor of our Reason to follow our Lusts. For when we attempt the latter, our Reason curbs us with Shame and Fear; and when we endeavour the former, our Appetite bridles us with Dislike and Aversion. In this Extremity, therefore, what is to be done that we may be free? Why, the Case is plain; we must resolve to conquer either our Reason or our Lusts; if we conquer our Reason (which we shall find by far the harder Task of the Two) we shall acquire the Freedom of Devils and Brutes, the Freedom to do Mischief, and wallow in the Mire without Shame or Remorse; but if we conquer our Lusts, we acquire the Freedom of Men; yea, of Saints and of Angels; the Freedom to act reasonably without Reluctance or Aversion: and this being much more easily to be acquired than the former, I dare appeal to any Man's Reason, which of the Two is in itself most eligible. If therefore we would vindicate our rational Freedom, we must resolve to shake off those slavish Fetters, our brutish and our devilish Appetites, that do so perpetually turmoil and incumber us in all our virtuous Attempts and rational Operations; we must tie up ourselves from executing their Commands, and serving their wicked Wills and Pleasures, and heartily resolve to act as it becomes us in the Capacity of rational Creatures related to God and one another: And then, tho' at first we must expect to find ourselves confined and straitned by our vicious Aversions, we shall be immediately released from all that Shame and Fear which did so continually curb us in the Career of our Wickedness; and even our vicious Aversion (if we courageously persist in our good Resolution) will grow weaker and weaker, and be every Day less and less cumbersome to us, till it is totally extinguished. And then we shall feel ourselves entirely restored into our own Power, and be able, without Check or Controul, to dispose of ourselves and all our Motions, according as it shall seem to us most fit and reasonable; then we shall act with the greatest Vigour and Freedom, having no counter-striving Principles to restrain or retard us, no vicious Aversions on the one side, or guilty Shame or Fear on the other, to counterpoize us in our rational Motions; then we shall move without Check or Confinement in a large and noble Sphere; for we shall be pleased with what is fit, and wise, and good, without any Reserve or Exception, and we shall do what we please without any Lett or Hindrance. So that by engaging ourselves in the Heavenly Life, we enter into a state of glorious Liberty; and if we constantly persist in it, and do still prevalently list to live as becomes us, we shall be more and more free to live as we list, till at last we are arrived into a perfect Liberty, wherein we shall live without Restraint or Controul, without Check of Conscience, or Reluctance of Inclination, which are the Two main Bars that confine and straiten Men in their Operations. If therefore we would ever be free, let us immediately come off from our Vicious Courses to the practice of this Divine and Heavenly Life, wherein by degrees, if we courageously hold on, we shall wear off those Shackles that do so miserably hamper and intangle us; and then we shall be entirely free to do whatsoever our Reason dictates to us; then we shall run the ways of God's Commandments, and, like our blessed Brethren above, be all Life and Spirit and Wing, in the discharge of our Duty to him.

IV. Consider the pleasure of this Heavenly Life: 'Tis true, there is a sort of Pleasure that results from all the Acts of a sensual and earthly Conversation; but we find by Experience, that though in the Pursuit it strangely allures lures and enchants us, yet in the Fruition it always disappoints our Expectation, and scarce performs in the Enjoyment one half of what it promised to our Hopes; and, at the best, 'tis but a present and transient Satisfaction of our brutish Sense, a Satisfaction that dims the Light, fullies the Beauty, impairs the Vigor, and restrains the Activity of the Mind; diverting it from better Operations, and indisposing it to the Fruition of purser Delights; leaving no comfortable Relish, or gladsome Memory behind it, but oftentimes going out in a stink, and determining in Bitterness, Regret and Disgrace. But in each Act of this Divine and Celestial Life, there is something of the Pleasure of Heaven, something of those Divine Refreshments and Consolations upon which the good People of Heaven do live: For the greatest Part of their Heaven springs from within their own Bosoms, even from the Conformity of their Souls to the heavenly State, and the sprightly Out-goings of their Minds and Affections towards the heavenly Objects; from their contemplating and loving, their praising and adoring the most high God; from their Imitation of his Perfections, their Subjection to his Will, and Dependance on his Veracity; all which Acts, as I have already shewed, have the most ravishing Pleasures appendant to them, and are so necessary to the Felicity of Rational Creatures, that the Wit of Man cannot fancy a rational Heaven without them: For the Heaven of a rational Creature consisting in the most intense and vigorous Exercise of its rational Faculties about the most suitable and convenient Objects, what Object can be more convenient to such Faculties, than that Almighty Sovereign of Beings, whose Power is the Spring of all Truth, and whose Nature is the Pattern of all Goodness? So, that without a perfect Union of our Minds, and Wills, and Affections with God, there can be no possible Idea of a perfect Heaven of Rational Pleasures; but in this blessed Union lies the very Soul and Quintessence of Heaven. Since therefore in every Act of every Virtue of the Divine Life, there is, at least, an imperfect Union of the Soul with God, it necessarily follows, that there must be some Degree of the Pleasure of Heaven in every one: So that if we do not experience much greater Joy and Delight in the Acts of this Divine Life, than ever we did in the highest Epicurisms, and Sensualities, 'tis not because there are not much greater in them, but because we never exerted them with that Sprightliness and Vigor, as we do our sensual Appetites and Perceptions; because we are clogg'd in the Exercise of them, either by false Principles, or bodily Indispositions, or sinful Aversations: But if we would take the Pains to inure and accustom ourselves to these heavenly Acts, we should find, by degrees, they would grow natural and easy to us; and our Souls would be so habituated, contempered, and disposed to them, that we should upon all Occasions exert them with great Freedom and Enlargement: And then we should begin to feel and relish the Pleasure of them; then we should perceive a Heaven of Delight springing up from within us, and unfolding it self in each beatifical Act of our heavenly Conversation; then we should find ourselves under the central Force of Heaven, most sweetly drawn along and attracted thither by the powerful Magnetism of its Joys and Pleasures; and in every Act of our celestial Behaviour, we should have some Foretaste of the celestial Happiness: So that now we should no longer need external Arguments to convince us of the Truth and Reality of that blessed State; for we should feel it within ourselves, and be able to penetrate into its blessed Mysteries by the Light of an infallible Experience. Now we should have no Occasion to search the Records of Heaven to assure ourselves of our Interest in it; for by a most sensible Earnest of Heaven within us, we should be as fully satisfied of our Title to it, as if one of the winged Messengers of Heaven should come down from thence, and tell us that he saw our Names inrolled in the Book of Life: And with this sweet Experience of Heaven within us, we should go on to Heaven with unspeakable Triumph and Alacrity, being tolled all along from Step to Step, with the alluring Relishes of its Joys and Pleasures; and and in every vigorous Exercise of every Virtue of the heavenly Life, we should have such lively Tastes and Sensations of Heaven, as would continually excite us to exercise them more vigorously; and still the more vigorously we exerted them, the more of Heaven we should taste in them; and so the Vigour of our Virtue would increase the Pleasure of it, and the Pleasure of it increase its Vigour, till both are perfected and grown up into the blessed State of Heaven. Wherefore as we do love Pleasure, which is the great Invitation to Action, let us be persuaded once for all, to make a thorow Experiment of the heavenly Life; and if upon a sufficient Trial, you do not find it the most pleasant kind of Life that ever you led, if you do not experience a far more noble Satisfaction in it, than ever you did in all your studied and artificial Luxuries, I give you leave to brand me for an Impostor.

V. Consider the great Repose and Ease of a heavenly Life and Conversation. In every sensual and devilish Course of Life, we find, by Experience, there is a great deal of Uneasiness and Disquiet: For the Mind is disturbed, the Conscience galled, the Affections divided into opposite Factions, and the whole Soul in a most diseased and restless Posture. And, indeed, it is no Wonder it should be so, since 'tis in an unnatural State and Condition: For whilst 'tis in any unreasonable Course of Action, the very Frame and Constitution of it, as it is a rational Being, suffers an unnatural Violence, and is all unjointed and disordered. And therefore, as a Body, when its Bones are out, is never at rest till they are set again; so a rational Soul, when its Faculties and Powers are dislocated and put out of their natural, i. e. rational Course of Action, is continually restless and disturbed, and always tossing to and fro, shifting from one Posture to another, turning itself from this to t'other Object and Enjoyment, but finding no Ease or Satisfaction in any, till 'tis restored again to its own rational Course of Motion, and that it is to act and move towards God, for whom it was made, and in whom alone it can be happy: And if its Reason were not strangely dozed and stupified with Sense and sensitive Pleasure, it would doubtless be a thousand times more restless and dissatisfied in this its preter-natural State than it is; it would feel much more Distraction of Mind, Anguish of Conscience, and Tumult of Affections than 'tis now capable of, amidst the numerous Enjoyments and Diversions of this World: For as a musical Instrument, were it a living Thing, would doubtless be sensible of Harmony as its proper State (as a great Author of our own ingeniously discourses) and abhor Discord and Dissonancy, as a Thing preternatural to it; even so were our Reason but alive and awake within us, our Souls, which according to their natural Frame, were made Unison with God, would be exquisitely sensible of those Divine Virtues, wherein its Consonancy consists, as of that which is its proper State and native Complexion; and complain as sadly of the vicious Distempers of its Faculties, as the Body doth of Wounds and Diseases; 'twould be perfectly sick of every unreasonable Motion, and never be able to rest till its disjointed Faculties were rectified, and all its disordered Strings set in tune again; which being once effected (as it will quickly be in a continued Course of heavenly Action) we shall presently find our Souls disburthened of all those malignant Humours that do so perpetually disease, disquiet, and disturb us: For by relying upon God, we shall totally quit and discharge ourselves of all those restless Cares and Anxieties, which circle and prick us like a Crown of Thorns; by our hearty Submission to his heavenly Will, we shall ease our Consciences of all that Horror, Rage, and Anguish which proceeds from the invenomed Stings of our Guilt; by loving, admiring, and adoring Him, our Affections will be cured of all that Inconsistence and Inordinacy, that render them so tumultuous and disquieting. And these Things being once accomplished, the sick and restless Soul will presently find itself in perfect Health and Ease: For now all her jarring Faculties being tuned to the musical Laws of Reason, there will be a perfect Harmony in her Nature, and she will have no disquieting Principle within her; her; nothing but calm and gentle Thoughts, soft and sweet Reflections, tame and manageable Affections; nothing but what abundantly contributes to her Repose and Satisfaction. So that do but imagine what an Ease the Body enjoys, when after a lingering Sickness it recovers a sound Constitution, and feels a lively Vigor possessing every Part, and actuating the Whole; such and much more is the Ease and Quiet of the Soul, when, by the diligent Practice of the heavenly Life, it feels itself recovered from the languishing Sickness of a sensual and devilish Nature: Now she is no more tossed and agitated in a stormy Sea of restless Thoughts and guilty Reflections, no more scorched with Impatience, or drowned with Grief, or shook with Fear, or bloated with Pride or Ambition; but all her Affections are resigned to the blessed Empire of a spiritual Mind, and cloathed in the Livery of her Reason. Now all the War and Contest between the Law in her Members, and the Law in her Mind, is ended in a glorious Victory and happy Peace; and those divided Streams, her Will and Conscience, her Passions and her Reason, are united in one Channel, and flow towards one and the same Ocean: And being thus jointed and knit together by the Ties and Ligaments of Virtue, the Soul is perfectly well and easy, and enjoys a most sweet Repose within itself. Wherefore as you value your own Rest and Ease, and would not be endlessly turmoiled and disquieted, be persuaded heartily to engage yourselves in the Course of a heavenly Conversation; and then, tho at first you must expect to find some Difficulty in it, by reason of its Contrariety to your corrupt Natures, yet if you vigorously persist in it, you will find the Difficulty will soon wear off, and then 'twill be all Ease and Pleasure: For when our Nature is depraved, either by Sensuality or Devilishness, 'tis like a Bone out of joint, full of Pain while it is out, and much more painful while it is setting, but as soon as that is done, 'tis immediately well and easy.

VI. And Lastly, Consider the absolute Necessity of this heavenly Life and Conversation: For besides that, God exacts it of us as an indispensable Condition of our Happiness, and hath assured us, that if we live after the Flesh, we shall die, and that without Holiness we shall never see the Lord; besides this, I say, an heavenly Conversation is in the Nature of the Thing necessary to qualify us for Heaven; or, as the Apostle expresses it, to make us meet to be Partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in Light: For Happiness being a relative Thing, implies, in the very Nature of it, a mutual Correspondence between the Objects which present us with Happiness, and the Faculties which taste and enjoy them; and be the Objects never so good in themselves, never so pregnant with Pleasure and Bliss, yet if they do not agree with the Faculties whereunto they are objected, instead of blessing, they will but afflict and torment them; and if a Man were placed in the midst of Heaven, among all the ravishing Fruitions with which that blessed Place abounds, yet unless his Mind and Temper did suit and agree with them, they would be so many Miseries and Vexations to him, and he would be afflicted even in Abraham's Bosom, and grope for Heaven in the midst of Paradise: So that supposing that God were so unreasonably fond of the Happiness of wicked Souls, as to prefer it before the Honour of his Government, and the Purity of his Nature, and the Sanction of his Laws, yet still there is an invincible Obstacle behind, that must render their future Felicity impossible: and that is, that it cannot be without a plain Contradiction to the Nature of Things, the Temper of wicked Souls being wholly repugnant to all the Felicities of the other World: So that if they were all set before them, they would not be able to enjoy them, but must be forced to pine and famish amidst all that Plenty of Delights, there being no Viand in all that Heavenly Entertainment that they would relish any Sweetness in: And therefore if God should so far pardon them, as not to punish them himself by any immediate Stroke of Vengeance, that would be the utmost Favour that his Omnipotent Goodness could do for them whilst they continued in their Sins; which, notwithstanding such a Pardon, would for ever continue them extremely miserable. And what great matter doth a Pardon signify to a Malefactor, that is dying of the Stone or Strangury? He could but have died, tho he had not been pardoned, and die he must tho he be. And just as little almost would it signify to a depraved Soul to be pardoned and absolved by God, whilst it hath a Disease within that preys upon its Vitals, and hastens it on to a certain Ruin: For it could have been but miserable in the future Life, if it had not been pardoned; and miserable it must be, if it continue wicked, whether it be pardoned or no: For it is not so much the Place as the State that makes either Heaven or Hell; and the State of Heaven and Hell consists in perfect Holiness and Wickedness; and proportionably as we do improve in either of these, so we do approach towards the one State or the other: For as Heaven is the Center of all that is virtuous, pure, and holy, and all that is good, tends thither by a natural Sympathy: so Hell is the Center of all Impiety and Wickedness, and all that is bad doth naturally press and sink down thither, as towards its proper Place and Element; and should not the Divine Vengeance concern itself to exclude wicked Souls out of Heaven, yet their own Wickedness would do it: For that is a Place of such inaccessible Light and Purity, that no Impurity or Wickedness can approach it, but must of Necessity be beaten off with the dreadful Lightnings of its Glory, and tumbled headlong down as oft as it essays to climb up thither; as on the other hand, should not God by an immediate Vengeance precipitate wicked Souls into Hell, yet their own Wickedness, by the mighty Weight of its own Nature, would inevitably press and sink them down into that miserable Condition. What egregious Nonsense therefore is it, for wicked Men to talk of going to Heaven? Alas! poor Creatures, what would you do there? There are no wanton Amours among those heavenly Lovers; no Rivers of Wine among their Rivers of Pleasure, to gratify your unbounded Sensuality; no Parasites to flatter your lofty Pride; no Miseries to feed your meagre Envy; no Mischiefs to tickle your devilish Revenge; nothing but chaste and divine, pure and spiritual Enjoyments, such as your brutish and devilish Appetites will eternally loath and nauseate. Wherefore if we mean to go to Heaven, and to be happy there, we must now endeavour to dispose and temper our Minds to it, which is no other way to be done, but by leading a heavenly Life and Conversation; which, by degrees, will habituate, and naturalize our Souls to the heavenly Virtues, and so work and inlay them into the Frame and Temper of our Minds, that 'twill be our greatest Pleasure to be exerting and exercising them: And then our Souls will be dressed and made ready for Heaven; and when we go from hence to take Possession of its Joys, they will be all so agreeable to our prepared Appetites, that we shall presently fall to and feed upon them with infinite Gust and Relish: But till by living a heavenly Life, we have disposed ourselves for Heaven, we utterly are incapable of enjoying it: So that now Things are reduced to this Issue, that either our Sins or our Souls must die, and we must necessarily shake Hands either with Heaven or our Lusts. And therefore unless we value eternal Happiness so little, as to exchange it for the sordid and trifling Pleasures of Sin, and unless we love our Sins so well, as to ransom them with the Blood of our Immortal Souls, it concerns us speedily to engage ourselves in this heavenly Life and Conversation: For this is an eternal and immutable Law, That if we will be wicked, we must be miserable.

C H A P. IV.

Concerning the Militant or Warfaring Part of the Christian Life, by which we are to acquire and perfect the heavenly Virtues ; shewing how effectually all the Duties of it conduce thereunto.

HAVING, in the former Chapter, given a large Account of the heavenly Part of the Christian Life, and shewn how directly and immediately the Practice of all the Virtues that are comprehended in it tends to the heavenly State, and how naturally they all grow into eternal Happiness ; I shall, in the next Place, endeavour to give some brief Account of that Part of the Christian Life, which is purely Militant, and which wholly consists of those Instrumental Duties, by the Use of which we are to conquer the Difficulties of those heavenly Virtues, and to acquire and perfect them ; which Difficulties, as I shewed before, Chap. 2. are the inbred Corruptions of our own Nature, together with those manifold Temptations from without, by which they are continually provoked and excited : and so to subdue and conquer these, as that they may neither take us off from, nor clog and indispose us in the Exercise of the heavenly Virtues, is the great Design and Business of this warfaring Part of the Christian Life.

That I may therefore handle it distinctly, I shall divide it into Three Parts, and endeavour with as much Brevity as I can ; First, To explain the Duties of each Part, and to shew how they all conduce to our conquering the Difficulties of the heavenly Virtues ; and to the acquiring and perfecting them ; and, Secondly, To press the Duties of each Part with proper and suitable Arguments.

In this Part of our Christian Life therefore, there is,

1. Our Beginning or Entrance into it ; which is in Scripture called Repentance from dead Works.
2. Our Course and Progress in it ; and this is nothing but a holy Life.
3. Our Perfecting and Consummation of it ; and this is final Perseverance in well-doing ; each of which have their proper and peculiar Duties, which I shall endeavour in this Chapter to explain and inforce.

S E C T. I.

Concerning those Duties that are proper to our Beginning and Entrance into this Warfaring Part of our Christian Life, shewing how they all conduce to the subduing of Sin, and acquiring the heavenly Virtues.

THIS first Part of our Militant Life being nothing but our Initial Repentance, or the first turning of our Souls to God from a State of wilful Sin and Rebellion, the Duties that are proper to it, and by which this Turn of our Souls is to be introduced and performed, may be reduced to these six Heads ;

1. A hearty and firm Belief of the Truth of our Religion.
2. A due Consideration of its Motives, and a balancing of them with the Hardships and Difficulties we are to undergo.
3. A deep and thorow Conviction of our great need of a Mediator, to render us acceptable to God.
4. A hearty Sorrow, Shame, and Remorse for our Sins past.

5. Earnest Prayer to God for Aid and Assistance to enable us effectually to renounce them.

6. A serious and well-weighed Resolution to forsake and abandon them for ever.

I. It is necessary to our good Beginning of this our Christian Warfare, that we should heartily believe the Truth and Reality of our Religion: For our hearty Belief of the Gospel is in Scripture represented as the main and principal Weapon by which we are to combat against the world and our own Lusts. And hence it is called the Shield of Faith, and the Breast-plate of Faith, which are the Two principal Parts of Armour of Defence, denoting that an hearty Belief of the Gospel is the principal Defence of a Christian against all the fiery Darts of Temptation; the Armour of Proof that guards our Innocence, and renders us invulnerable in all our spiritual Conflicts: For, above all Things, saith the Apostle, take the Shield of Faith, whereby ye shall be able to quench the fiery Darts of the wicked one, Eph. vi. 16. And as it is the principal Part of our defensive, so it is also of our offensive Armour: For so we find all the Victories and Triumphs of those glorious Heroes, Heb. xi. attributed to this irresistible Weapon of their Faith: 'Twas by Faith that they despised Crowns, confronted the Anger of Kings, and triumphed over the bitterest Torments and Afflictions; by Faith that they wrought Righteously, obtained Promises, stopped the Mouths of Lions, quenched the Violence of Fire, escaped the Edge of the Sword, and out of Weakness were made strong. Nay, so great a Share hath Faith in the Successes of our Christian Warfare, that it is called by the Apostle, the good Fight of Faith, 1 Tim. vi. 12. and St. John assures us, that this is the Victory that overcometh the World, even our Faith, 1 John v. 4.

For if we firmly believe the Gospel, that will furnish us with undeniable Answers to return to all Temptations, and enable us infinitely to out-bid the World, whatsoever it should proffer us for our Innocence: For our Belief of the Gospel carries in the one Hand infinitely greater Goods, and in the other infinitely greater Evils, to allure and bind us fast to our Duty, than any the World can propose to entice or terrify us from it: For on the one hand it discovers to us those Immortal Regions of the Blessed, which are the proper Seat and pure Element of Happiness; where the blessed Inhabitants live in a continued Fruition of their utmost Wishes, being every Moment entertained with fresh and ravishing Scenes of Pleasure; where all their Happiness is eternal, and all their Eternity nothing else but one continued Act of Love, and Praise, and Joy, and Triumph; where there are no Sighs or Tears; no Intermixtures of Sorrow or Misery; but every Heart is full of Joy, and every Joy is a Quintessence, and every happy Moment is crowned with some fresh and new Enjoyment. On the other hand, it sets before our Eyes a most frightful and amazing Prospect of those dismal Shades of Horror, where mighty Numbers of condemned Ghosts perpetually wander to and fro, tormented with endless Rage and Despair; where they always burn without consuming, always faint but never die, being forced to languish out a long Eternity in unpitied Sighs and Groans: And after such a Prospect as this, what poor inconsiderable Trifles will all the Goods and Evils of this World appear to us? But yet unless we believe the Reality of them, how great soever they may be in themselves, they will signify no more to our Hope and Fear (which are the Master-springs of our Action) than if they were so many golden Dreams, or lifeless Scare-crows: For all Proposals of Good and Evil do work upon the Minds of Men proportionably as they are believed and assented to; as that which is not true, is not; so that which we do not believe, is to us as if it were not. How then is it possible we should be moved by that Good or Evil which we do not believe, and in which, by Consequence, we cannot apprehend ourselves concerned?

Wherefore in our Entrance into the Christian Warfare, it is highly necessary that we do not take up our Faith at a venture, and believe winking, without knowing knowing why or wherefore ; but that we should, so far as we are able, impartially examine the Evidences of our Religion, and search into the Grounds of its Credibility, that so we may be able to give some Reason to ourselves and others, of the Hope that is in us. For which End it will be needful that we should read, and impartially consider, some of the Apologies for the Christian Religion ; of which we have sundry excellent ones in our own Language* ; and if we will but take the pains to instruct ourselves in the plain and easy Evidences of Christianity, we shall quickly see abundant Cause to assent to it ; and then our Faith being founded on a firm Basis of Reason, will be able to bid Defiance to the World, and to out-stand the most furious Storms of Temptation.

* Dr. Stillingfleet's Origines. Dr. Patrick's Translation of Grotius. Sir Charles Wolfley.

II. To our good Beginning of this our Christian Warfare, it is also necessary that we should duly consider the Motives of our Religion, and balance them with the Hardships and Difficulties we are to undergo : For thus our Saviour makes Consideration a necessary Introduction to our Christian Warfare, Luke xiv. 28. where he compares Mens rushing headlong into the Difficulties of the Christian Life without Consideration, to a Man's resolving to build a Tower without computing the Charge of it, or a King's going to War without ever considering before-hand, whether with his Army of Ten Thousand he be able to encounter his Enemy with Twenty : By both which Comparisons he intimates to us the unprosperous Issue of Mens lifting themselves under his Banner to combat the Devil, the World, and their own Lusts, without ever considering before-hand either their own Strength or the Enemies, the Arguments with which they must fight, or the Difficulties that will cross and oppose them : So that when they come to execute their rash Resolutions, there start up so many Difficulties in their way which they never thought of, and against which they took no care to fore-arm themselves, that they have not the Heart and Courage to stand before them ; but after a few faint Attempts are presently founding a cowardly Retreat.

For indeed Consideration is the Life and Soul of Faith, that animates and actuates its Principles, and elicits and draws forth all their natural Power and Energy. And let the Truths we believe be never so weighty and momentous in themselves, never so apt to spirit and invigorate us, yet unless we seriously consider and apply them to our Wills and Affections, and take the Pains to extract out of them their native Vigour and Efficacy, and to infuse it into our Faculties and Powers, they will lie, like so many dead Notions in our Minds, and never impart to us the least Degree of Spiritual Courage and Activity. And accordingly our Saviour attributes the ill Success of God's Word in the Hearts of Men (which he compares to the High-way, the stony and thorny Ground) either to their not considering it at all, or to their not considering it deeply enough, or to their not considering it long enough : Either the Divine Truths which they heard went no farther than their Ears, and so lay openly exposed, like so many loose Corns upon the High-way, to be picked up by the Fowls of the Air ; or if it entred into their Mind and Consideration, it was so slightly and superficially, that, like Corn sown in a rocky Ground, it had not Depth enough to take root, to fasten and grow into their Minds, and digest into Principles of Action ; or if they, at present, received it into their deeper and more serious Consideration, it was but for a little while ; for by and by they permit their worldly Cares and Pleasures, like Thorns, to spring up in their Thoughts and choak it, before it was arrived to any Maturity : But that which render'd it so prosperous and fruitful in good and honest Hearts, was, that having heard the Word, they kept it, i. e. retained it in their Thoughts and Consideration, and so brought forth Fruit with Patience, Luke viii. 12, 13, 14, 15. So that to the making of a good Beginning in Religion, it is not only necessary that we should ponder the Motives and Arguments of Religion, and balance them with the Difficulties of it, but that we should revolve and repeat them in our Minds, till we have represented to our selves with the utmost Life and Reality, whatsoever makes for and against our Entrance into the Christian Warfare; and upon our having weighed them over and over in the Scales of an even and impartial Judgment, we have brought the Debate to this Result and Conclusion, that there is infinitely more Weight in the Arguments of Religion to persuade us to it, than in all the Difficulties of it to dishearten us from it. For unless we enter into Religion fore-armed with the Motives, and fore-warned of the Difficulties of it, we shall never be able to stand our Ground; but finding more Opposition than we expected, and having not a sufficient Strength of Argument to bear up against it, we shall quickly repent of our rash Undertaking, and be forced to retreat from it with Shame and Dishonour. For this is usually the Issue of those rash and unsettled Purposes which Men make in the heats of their Passion; when they have been warmed by some pathetick Discourse, or startled by some great Danger, or chased into a Displeasure against their Sins, by the sense of some very dolorous Accident whereinto they have been betrayed by them; in these or such like Cases, it's usual with Men to make hasty Resolutions of Amendment, without considering either the Matters which they resolve upon, or the Motives which should support their Resolution; and so finding when they come to Practice, more Difficulty in the Matter than they are aware of, and having not sufficient Motives to carry them thro' it, their Resolution flags in the Execution, and very often yields to the next Temptation which encounters them.

revolve

Now tho I do not deny but that those heats of Passion are good Opportunities to begin our Religion in, and if wisely improved, will very much contribute to our Voyage Heaven-wards, and like a brisk Gale of Wind, render it much more expedite and easy; yet if in these Heats we resolve too soon, without a due Consideration of all Particulars, and of the Difficulties on the one side, and the Arguments on the other, it is hardly possible that our Resolution should ever prove a lasting Principle of Goodness. For when we resolve inconsiderately, we resolve to do we know not what, and our Resolution includes a Thousand Particulars that we are not aware of; most of which being repugnant to our vicious Inclinations, will, when we come to practise them, be attended with such Difficulties as will easily startle our weak Resolution, which having not a sufficient Foundation of Reason to support it, will never be able to out-stand those boisterous Storms of Temptation whereunto it will be continually exposed. If therefore we mean our Resolution should hold out, and commence a living Principle of Goodness, we must found it in a thorow Consideration both of the Duties and Difficulties of Religion, and of the Motives which should engage us to embrace it; we must set before our Minds all the Sins we must part with, and all the Duties we must submit to, and fairly represent to ourselves all the Difficulties and Temptations wherewith we must engage; and as much as in us lies, render them actual and present to us, by supposing ourselves already engaged in our Spiritual Warfare, and surrounded with all the Temptations both from within and without, that we can reasonably expect will oppose themselves against us; and having thus placed ourselves in the midst of the Difficulties of Religion, we must never cease urging ourselves with the great Arguments and Motives of it, till we have thorowly persuaded our stubborn Wills, and obtained of them an explicate Consent to every Duty that calls for our Consent and Resolution.

III. To our good Beginning of the Christian Warfare it is also necessary that we be deeply and thorowly convinced of our great need of a Mediator to make a Propitiation for our Sins, and render us acceptable to God. 'For 'tis to convince us of this necessary Truth that the Scripture doth so expressly declare, That as there is one God, so there is one Mediator between God and Men, the Man Christ Jesus, 1 Tim. ii. 5. that if any Man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous, and that he is the Propitiation for our Sins, and not for ours only, but for the Sins of the whole World; and that 'tis for his Name sake that our Sins are forgiven, 1 John ii. 1, 2, 12. that we have Redemption thro' his Blood, Ephes. i. 7. and that without the shedding his Blood there is no Remission, and that 'twas by the Sacrifice of himself that Christ put away Sin, Heb. ix. 22, 26. that we are accepted of God thro' his beloved Son, Ephes. i. 6. that Christ is entred into Heaven now to appear in the presence of God for us, Heb. ix. 24. and that there He ever lives to make intercession for us, Heb. vii. 25. that 'tis thro' Him that we have access unto the Father, Ephes. ii. 18. and by Him that we have admittance to his Grace and Favour, Rom. v. 2. The design of all which is thorowly to convince us of this great Truth, that by our Apostasy from God and Rebellion against Him we have all render'd ourselves so very obnoxious to his Vengeance, that he would not pardon us upon any less Atonement than the precious Blood, nor admit us into favour upon any less Motive than the powerful Intercession of His own Son; that by the heinousness of our Guilt we have so highly incensed the Father of Mercies against us, that no less Consideration than the Death and Advocacy of the greatest and dearest Person in the whole World, will move Him to admit of our Repentance, and listen to our Supplications. And certainly next to exacting the Punishment due to our Sins at our own hands, the most dreadful Severity he could have expressed, was to resolve not to remit it upon any other Consideration than that of his own Son's undergoing it in our stead; by which he hath given us the greatest reason that Heaven and Earth could afford, to tremble at his Justice, even whilst we are inclosed in the Arms of his Mercy.

Name

This therefore we ought to be deeply and thorowly convinced of, that our Sins have set us at such a distance from God, that 'tis nothing but the Blood of Christ will reconcile Him to us; and that tho' without our Repentance He will never be reconciled to us, yet 'tis not for the sake of that or any thing else we can do, that He will be induced to receive us into his favour, but only for the sake of that precious Sacrifice which His Eternal Son hath offered up for us. The firm Persuasion and Consideration of which will mightily over-awe our Minds, and imprint upon them such ghastly and horrible Apprehensions of Sin, as will scare us from all Thoughts of Compliance with it; the dreadful Demonstration which God hath given us of his Righteous Severity against it in the very Reason of His pardoning it, will effectually antidote us against all our sinful Securities and Confidences: For this way of God's pardoning us upon the Sacrifice of His Son, guards his Mercy with such an awful Terror, as is sufficient to dishearten the most desperate Sinner from presuming upon it. For he that dares presume to sin on upon a Mercy that cost the Blood of the Son of God, hath courage enough to outface the Flames of Hell, and is not capable of any Mercy that the great God can indulge with safety to his own Authority. For what Mercy can be safe from that Man's Abuse and Presumption, that dares abuse a Mercy so guarded and secured as this is, by being founded upon such a dreadful Consideration.

And as a thorow Persuasion of the Necessity of Christ's Sacrifice to the Forgiveness of our Sins, will fill us with awful Apprehensions of the Divine Severity, and set before us a most dismal Prospect of the vast demerit of our Sins, both which are necessary to engage us to a thorow Reformation; so a thorow Conviction of the Necessity of his Intercession to render our Duties, our Prayers, and Persons acceptable to God, will effectually humble and abase us in our own Eyes, which, as I shall shew you by and by, is highly conducive to a good Beginning of this our Christian Warfare. For next to banishing us from his Presence for ever, the most effectual Course God could take to abase us, was to exclude us from all immediate Intercourse with him, and not to admit of any more Addresses or Supplications from us, but only thro' the Hands of a Mediator; which is a plain Demonstration how infinitely pure he is, and how base and vile our Sins have render'd us; insomuch that he will not suffer a sinful Creature to come near him, otherwise than by a Proxy; that he will not accept of a Service from a guilty Hand, nor listen to a Prayer from a sinful Mouth, till 'tis first hallowed and presented to him by a pure and holy Mediator. So that unless we are strangely inconsiderate, we cannot but be touched with a deep Sense of our own Vileness, when we think at what a distance the Pure and Holy God keeps us; how he stands off at the Stench of our Abominations; and notwithstanding all his Benignity towards us, will neither bear us, nor have any thing to do with us, without the powerful Intercession of his own Son.

a sinful

And as our Conviction of the Necessity we have of Christ's Sacrifice and Intercession is very apt to affect us with holy Sorrow and Fear, both which are very powerful Instruments of our Reformation; so our Persuasion of the Reality and Excellency of his Mediation is no less apt to inspire us with a mighty Hope and Assurance of Acceptance with God, if we reform and amend: For it seems that upon propitiatory Sacrifices and interceding Spirits, guilty Minds have been always inclined to place their confidence of Acceptance with God. Hence it was a Principle generally received by Men of all Nations and Religions, (however it came to pass I know not) that for sinful Men to appease the incensed Divinity, it was necessary, first, that some Life should be sacrificed to him by way of Satisfaction for there Sins; and that the nobler it was, the more propitious it render'd him. 2. That some high Favourite of his should be prevail'd with to interceed with him in their behalf. Whereupon, understanding by universal Tradition, that there were a sort of middle Beings (whom they call Dæmons, and we Angels) between the Sovereign God and Men, they began to address to These, and to bribe them with sacred Honours to interpose with God in their behalf. And if they could make a shift to rely upon Sacrifices, the most precious of which were the Lives of sinful Men; and to depend upon Intercessors, of whose Interest with God they had little or no Security; what a mighty ground of Confidence and assurance have we, for whom the Son of God once offered such a meritorious Sacrifice upon Earth, and continues to make such a powerful Intercession in Heaven? For besides that, as he was a spotless and innocent Person, His Sacrifice was wholly meritorious for guilty Offenders; and besides that, as he was a Person of infinite Value and Dignity, his Sacrifice was meritorious for a World of guilty Offenders. God, upon whose good Pleasure the Admission or Refusal of it intirely depended, has openly declared His Acceptation thereof as a Propitiation for the Sins of the World, and engaged Himself by a publick Grant and Charter of Mercy, to indemnify, for the sake of it, every Sinner in the World that will but return to Him by a serious and hearty Repentance; neither of which great Things could ever be said of any other Sacrifice. And in the Virtue of this Sacrifice, as well as his own Personal Interest with His Father, He now interceeds in our behalf; and pleading our Cause, as He doth, with the price of our Souls in his Hand, even in his precious Blood by which He redeemed them, we may be sure that with that powerful Oratory He cannot fail of succeeding in our behalf. For having purchased for us, by his Blood, all those Favours which He interceeds for, He is invested with the Right and Power of bestowing them upon us. So that now, for our greater Security, all those Favours, which God hath promised us, are actually deposited in the Hands of our Mediator: And though His bare Promise is in itself as great an Assurance as can be given us: yet it is to be considered that guilty Minds are naturally anxious and full of unreasonable Jealousies, and consequently whilst they looked upon God as their adverse Party, and a Party infinitely offended by them, would have been very prone to suspect the worst, had they had nothing but his bare Word to depend on. And therefore in Condescension to this pitiable Infirmary of his sinful Creatures, he hath not only promised them his Acceptance and Favour upon Condition of their Return to him, but hath also put the Performance of his Promise into a third Hand, even into the Hand of a Mediator, who by the nature of his Office is equally concerned for both Parties; as well that God should perform his Promise, if we performed our Duty; as that we should perform our Duty, if we received the Benefit of his Promise. And hence, Heb. vii. 22. our Mediator is called the Sponsor, or Surety of a better Covenant. So that now we have no longer to do with God immediately as our adverse Party, but by a Mediator, who by his Office is obliged to be on our side as well as God's, and to take care that neither receive the others Part of the Covenant, without performing his own. Thus as he hath been sometimes pleased in Compliance with human Weakness to enforce his Promise with his Oath; not that the one is in its own Nature a greater Security from God than the other, but because with Men an Oath is more obliging than a Promise; so in great Condescension to the unreasonable Diffidence of our guilty Minds, he hath not only promised us Pardon and Acceptance upon our Repentance, but he hath also given us a collateral Security for the performance of it, even the Security of a Mediator, in whose Hands he hath deposited whatsoever he hath promised us. Not that in itself this is a greater Security than his own bare Word and Promise, which he cannot falsify without renouncing his Being; but because this way of giving Security by a third Person is more accommodate to the Method of our Covenants and Agreements with one another, and consequently more apt to satisfy our anxious and diffident Minds.

And thus the Conviction of our need of a Mediator, and the Persuasion of the Reality and Excellency of his Mediation, will powerfully work both on our Hope and Fear, which are the main Springs of all our Religious Endeavours; and give us at once the most horrible Prospect of the Evil of Sin, and the most comfortable Assurance of Pardon and Acceptance with God upon our Repentance and Amendment; both which are absolutely necessary to our successful Entrance into the Christian Warfare. •

IV. To our Beginning of this Holy Warfare, it is also necessary that we should be affected with a deep Sorrow and Shame and Remorse for our past Iniquities: For this the Apostle calls, sorrowing to Repentance; and tells us that godly Sorrow worketh Repentance to Salvation not to be repented of, 2 Cor. vii. 9, 10. and accordingly it is recorded of St. Peter's Converts, that the beginning of their Repentance was their being pricked at the heart, Acts ii. 37. and even Repentance itself is in Scripture called a broken and contrite Heart; this being the most immediate Preparation to a true Repentance or Change of Mind, Psal. li. 17. And hence the ancient Penitents are described in Scripture as girding themselves with Sackcloth, and Repenting in Dust and Ashes; in Allusion to the ancient manner of great and solemn Mournings, which was to put on Sackcloth, cover the Head with Ashes, and sit in the Dust. And in the Primitive and Purest Ages of Christianity, it is evident, that the bitterest Sorrows and Remorses were looked upon as necessary Preparations to Repentance; for the Penitents, in those Days as Tertullian and Nazianzen describe them, " Lay prostrate at " the Church Doors in Sackcloth and Ashes, supplicating the Prayers of the " Presbyters and Widows, hanging on the Garments and Knees of those that " entred into the Church, kissing their Foot-steps, and with Rivers of Tears
" in their Eyes, beseeching their Prayers to God for their Pardon." Now tho we are not under the Severities of such an Ecclesiastical Discipline, yet we are equally obliged with those ancient Penitents to exercise it internally in our Hearts. For Sin is as bad now as it was then, and as great an evil in us, as it was in them; and therefore ought to be lamented by us with an equal Sorrow and Remorse. And, indeed, if we ever mean to wage War with it with Success, it is necessary we should acquire before-hand a thorow Sense and Feeling of the Evil of it; that we should chastise our Souls with some degree of that bitter Sorrow and Regret it deserves, and inflict upon ourselves some part of that Hell of infinite Horror and Anguish that is ingendring in its Womb; that so being the more sensible of its Malignity, we may be the more enraged against it, and enter the Lists with it with the greater Resolution and Animosity. For our Sorrow and Remorse for our Sins, if it be serious and heartly, will convert into Hatred and Indignation against them, and that Hatred will animate us in all our Conflicts with them, and render us more obstinate against their Terrors and Allurements. So that when in the After-course of our Warfare against them, we are tempted afresh to yield and comply with them, the Remembrance of the past Shame and Sorrow, Remorse and Confusion we have undergone for their sakes, will render us far more deaf and incororable, than otherwise we should be to their Solicitations.

If therefore we would engage in this Spiritual Warfare with Success, we must be often reflecting upon our past Sins, and representing them to ourselves in all their aggravating Circumstances. And when we have surveyed them round about, and considered them in all their natural Turpitude, Disingenuity, and Indecency, and applied them to ourselves in all their appendent Stings, shameful Effects, and dismal Circumstances, so that our Hearts begin to feel them, and to smart and bleed under the dolorous Sense of them; then must we pour them out before God, in sad and mournful Confessions. For the very Confession of our Sins before so pure and great a Being, is in itself an effectual Means to increase our Shame and Sorrow for them; and he must have a very hard Heart that can ingenuously, and without any Reserve, lay open his Crimes before the God of Heaven and Earth, in all their black Aggravations, without being stung with a sensible Regret and Confusion; especially if he frequently repeat his Confessions as he ought to do.

V. To our successful Beginning of this our Christian Warfare, it is also necessary that we earnestly implore the divine Aid and Assistance, to enable us to go thro' with it. For God knowing how unable we are of ourselves to engage in this great Enterprize, with that good Conduct that is necessary to give us any probability of Success, hath promised us his own Presence and Assistance even from the Beginning to the End of it; and if in any Part of it his Assistance be necessary, 'tis doubtless in the Entrance, which, as I shall shew you by and by, is by far the most difficult and hazardous. If therefore we presume to enter upon it without supplicating God to second us with his Grace and Assistance, we shall quickly find ourselves shamefully foiled and defeated. For tho' he hath promised to assist us, yet 'tis upon Condition that we earnestly beg and seek him; he will give his Spirit, but it is to those that ask it, Luke xi. 13. he will draw near unto us, but first, we must draw near unto him, James iv. 8. and we are assured that we shall have if we ask, that we shall find if we seek, and that it shall be opened to us if we knock, Mat. vii. 7. And therefore we are bid to go boldly to the Throne of Grace that we may obtain Mercy, and find Grace to help us in the Time of Need, Heb. iv. 16. and not only to pray without ceasing, 1 Thes. v. 17. but in every thing by Prayer and Supplication to let our Requests be made known unto God, Phil. iv. 6. and if in every thing we ought to make known our Wants to him, then much more in this great and difficult Undertaking, in which it will be impossible for us to succeed without his heavenly Aid and Assistance.

Wherefore, as we hope for Victory in this our Spiritual Warfare, we must earnestly implore his Concurrence with us, and beseech him to second us in all our weak Efforts and Endeavours: We must lay open our woful Case before him, and remonstrate to him, that we are heartily willing to do what we are able, but that without him we are abundantly sensible all will be in vain. We must tell him that our Dependence is upon him; and that all our Hope of Success is in him, and that we dare not stir one step without him; and beseech him, that he will not stand by, and see us spend ourselves in ineffectual Strugglings; but that he will graciously stretch forth his helping Hand to us, and not suffer us to miscarry for want of his necessary Assistance. Which, if we do, we may assure ourselves that the merciful God, who is the Father of our Spirits, will never abandon his own Offspring, whilst it cries out to him, and with pitiful and bemoaning Looks implores his Aid and gracious Cooperation.

Whilst,

Whilst, therefore, we are thus endeavouring to prepare ourselves for our Spiritual Warfare, we ought in every Act of Preparation to look up to God, and earnestly supplicate the Concurrence of his Grace and Spirit. While we are endeavouring to believe, we must beg him to help our unbelief, to remove all Prejudices from our Minds, and present the Evidences of our Religion to our Understandings, in a clear and convincing Light. When we are setting ourselves to a serious Consideration, we must beseech him to fix our Thoughts, to suggest to, and repeat his Heavenly Motives and Arguments so fast and thick upon, our Minds, that no sinful or worldly Thought may be able to croud in to disturb or divert our Meditations. When we are labouring to persuade ourselves of our Need, and the Reality of our Saviour's Mediation, we must earnestly intreat him to open our Eyes and convince us effectually of the horrible Danger of our Sin, and of the infallible Efficacy of that Blessed Remedy. When we are attempting to affect ourselves with the bitter Sense of our past Transgressions, we must implore him to strike in with us, and to inspire our Minds with such piercing and powerful Convictions of the infinite Shame, Baseness, and Danger of them, as may sting our brawny Consciences to the quick, and dissolve our frozen Souls into a sorrowful Repentance; that so when we enter the Lists and proceed to Resolution, which is the Beginning of our Spiritual Warfare, we may be armed against our Sins, with such a lively Faith, such puissant Considerations, such Horror and Animosity against them, and such an assured Hope of being rescued from the fatal Issues and Effects of them, as that we may be able to promise ourselves a happy Success in the ensuing Course of our Warfare against them. And having thus fitted and accoutred ourselves for this great and momentous Enterprize, VI. We are to enter into a serious and solemn Resolution of Amendment, of forsaking and renouncing all our Sins, and never returning to them more whatsoever Temptations may invite, or Difficulties encounter and oppose us. Which Resolution is in Scripture called μετάνοια, which we translate Repentance, but in strictness signifies a Change of Mind or of Purpose and Resolution; a renouncing our sinful Purposes, and solemnly engaging ourselves in a contrary Resolution of living soberly and righteously and godly in this present World. So that wheresoever the Precept of Repentance is expressed by this Word, the meaning of it is, to oblige us to change the Wicked Purposes of our Hearts into a firm and serious Resolution of forsaking all Ungodliness and worldly Lusts, and intirely resigning up ourselves to the Will and Disposal of God. And hence it is that μετάνοιαν and ἐπιστρέφειν, i. e. to change our Minds, and convert or turn, are in Scripture so often put together; the one denoting the inward Change of our Resolution, the other the outward Change of our Practice pursuant to it. So Acts iii. 19. Repent and be Converted, and Acts xxvi. 20. that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for Repentance; that is, That they should resolve to forsake their Sins, and submit to their Duty, and put their Resolution into Practice. And so that other Word μεταμέλεια, which we also render Repentance, strictly signifies an after-care, that is pursuant unto this μετάνοια, or Change of Resolution.

Now this Repentance or Change of Resolution is the Initial Act of the Religion of Sinners, whereby they resume their inward Man from the Service of Sin, and submit and resign their Wills to God; whereby in Heart and Will they forsake the Devil's Colours, and list themselves Volunteers under the Banner of Christ. And being so, it ought to be performed with so much the more Care and Preparation. For the Beginning of all great Enterprizes is the Ground and Foundation of them; which if it be not firmly laid, will be apt to sink under the Superstructures, and to endanger their Ruin and Downfall. Now all the foregoing Duties being necessary Preparations to a good Resolution, we ought, before we resolve, to spend a considerable portion of Time in the diligent Practice of them, and not to resolve hand over head, till we are duly and truly prepared for it; till by exercising our Faith and Consideration, &c.

we have broken and tamed our perverse and obstinate Wills, and thorowly persuaded them to part with every Sin, and to approve of, and consent to, every Duty that is comprehended in a thorow Resolution of Amendment. And if when we are about to resolve, we find, upon a strict Examination, any secret Reserve or Exception in our Wills, if there be any Lust which they are not thorowly persuaded to part with, or any Duty to which they are not fully reconciled, we ought for that Time to forbear resolving, and to go on in the Exercise of the preparatory Duties, till we find our reluctant Wills thorowly conquered and persuaded by them. For if there be any Leak left open in our Resolution for any Sin to creep in at, that will be sure to insinuate in the next Storm of Temptation; and if it should not let in other Sins after it, as 'tis a thousand to one but it will, 'twill by its own single Weight sink us into eternal Perdition. Wherefore before ever we enter into the Resolution of Amendments, we ought to be very careful that our Wills be thorowly prepared for it; that they be reduced to a fair Compliance with the matter we are resolving upon, and effectually dissuaded out of all Resolution to the contrary; and when this is done, we may chearfully proceed to the forming of our good Resolution.

Which ought to be performed by us, between God and ourselves, with the greatest Seriousness and Solemnity. For now our Hearts being ready, we are to betake ourselves to our Knees, and in these, or such like Words, to devote ourselves to God; O thou blessed Author of my Being, I am now fully convinced that I owe myself to thee by a thousand Ties and Obligations, and am infinitely sorry and ashamed, that I have so long sequestered and withdrawn myself from thee to serve my own base Lusts and Affections. Wherefore now in thy dread Presence, and in that of thy Holy Angels, I here entirely resign up myself unto thee, and do resolve, without any Reserve or Exception, that whatsoever Temptations I may meet with for the future, I will never wilfully withdraw or alienate myself from thee more. From henceforth I heartily renounce all my Sins, and particularly those that have been most dear and pleasant to me, and do faithfully promise to continue thy true and loyal Subject as long as I breathe, and that whatsoever Invitations I may have to the contrary, I will never revoke the Resolution I now make, or any part of it. So help me, O my God.

And having thus solemnly resolved, it will be highly necessary that for the farther Ratification of it, we should yet more solemnly repeat it in the Holy Sacrament; wherein, according to the Custom of Fasts upon Sacrifices, God and every faithful Communicant do mutually re-oblige themselves to one another, and upon the Sacred Symbols of the Body and Blood of Jesus, do ratify to each other each other's Part of that everlasting Covenant which by the Federal Rite of his meritorious Death and Sacrifice was inviolably sealed and confirmed. So that when we take those Holy Elements into our Hands, which the Priest in God's stead presents and offers to us, we do in effect make this Solemn Dedication of ourselves to God; Here we offer and present unto thee, O Lord, Ourselves, our Souls and Bodies, to be a reasonable, holy and lively Sacrifice unto thee, and here we call to witness his sacred Blood that redeemed us, and those vocal Wounds which do now interceed for us, that from henceforth we oblige ourselves never to start from thy Service, what Difficulties soever we may encounter in it, or what Temptations soever we may have to forsake it. And having thus resolved and confirmed our Resolution by the Body and Blood of our Saviour, and taken the Sacrament upon it not to depart from what we have resolved, we have actually listed and engaged ourselves in a Warfare against Sin, the World, and the Devil, upon the final Success whereof our everlasting Fate depends. And thus you see what Duty is implied in the Beginning or Entrance of this Warfaring Part of the Life of a Christian.

S E C T. II.

Wherein some Motives are urged to persuade Men to the Practice of those Duties that are proper to the Beginning of the Christian Warfare.

HAVING, in the former Section, given a brief Account of those Duties which are necessary to the well Beginning of our Christian Warfare, I shall now, for a close of that Argument, endeavour to press and persuade those who have not as yet begun to enter immediately upon it, by putting in Practice these Initial Duties of it: You who have been hitherto warring against God, and striving against your Duty and your Happiness, be at last persuaded to make a Stand for a while, and to listen to the voice of Reason and Religion, which do both call aloud to you to face about, to desert the Party wherein you are engaged, and come over to the side of Virtue. And that I may, if possible, prevail, I do here earnestly beseech you, even by all that is dear and precious to you, by the Love of God, and by the Lives of your Souls, and by all your Hopes of Happiness in the World to come, seriously to consider with me these following Motives.

1. That there is a vast Necessity of beginning this our Spiritual Warfare one time or other.

2. That 'tis unspeakably most secure and advantageous for us to begin it now.

3. That the final Success of it doth very much depend upon the well Beginning of it.

4. That when once we have well begun it, the main Difficulty of it is conquered.

I. Consider the vast Necessity there is of beginning this Spiritual Warfare one time or other: For that which is necessary for us to accomplish at last, is necessary to be undertaken by us one time or other. Now it is as necessary for us to oppose and vanquish the Temptations of the World, and the Corruptions of our own Nature, as it is not to go to Hell, or not to miss of Heaven: For in this great Battle the everlasting Fate of our Souls is to be decided; and if we come off Victors, we are made; if vanquished, we are undone to Eternity. So that in this Spiritual Warfare we do not contend, like the Warriors of this World, for a Triumphal Wreath that will wither upon our Brows, or for Fame and Renown, which is nothing but the Breath of a Company of talking People, or for the enlarging of our Empire over the next handful of a Turf; but we are contending with Enemies that are pursuing us to Hell, and binding us in Chains of everlasting Darknefs. We are to fight for our Immortality, for all our Hopes of Happiness and Well-being in a never-ending Life; and when so much depends upon the Success of our Conflict, and we must conquer and be crowned, or die; win the Field, and Heaven, or yield ourselves Captives to Eternal Misery, I leave you to judge, whether we are not obliged, under the vastest Necessity, one time or other, to begin. And if we must begin one time or other, why not now as well as hereafter? And to what purpose should we defer entering upon that Work, which we all confess we must, at last, not only begin, but accomplish? For to have accomplished a necessary Work, especially when it is difficult and important, is a great Satisfaction to the Mind; and whereas while it is yet to do, the Prospect of the Pain and Labour of it creates in us a great deal of Trouble and Anxiety; when once it is done, or the main Difficulty of it is over, every Reflection on our past Pains, sweetens our present Repose, and crowns it with Joy and Triumph. And thus it is in our Entrance into the Christian Life, which we all confess to be both necessary and difficult; and it being so, what do we else by our delaying it, but only prolong the Pain and Trouble of it? And whereas by one brave Attempt we might ease ourselves, and set our Souls at Rest for ever; we languish away our Life in Misery, and are sick with the Fear of our Remedy; just like poor Men that are under the Torment of the Stone, they know they must be cut or die; but out of a frightful Apprehension of their Remedy, they put it off from time to time; they promise they will endure it, rather than lose their Lives; but when they come to the Trial, their Hearts fail, and they must needs have a little longer Respite; but all the while, they endure not only the Pain of their Disease, but also the Apprehensions of their Cure, which, at last, they must also actually endure, or Death, which is much more terrible to them: Whereas, had they been cut at first, they might have saved themselves all that Torment, and Fear of farther Torment, which they endured in the Time of their Delay. And just thus it is with those who defer their Repentance, which had they begun, at first, when they fell into their sinful Courses, their Hearts might have been at Ease a great while ago, and they might have saved themselves all those Gripes and Twinges of Conscience, and all those painful Apprehensions of the Smart and Difficulty of repenting at last, which they had been forced to endure in the several Periods of their Delay. But, alas! Repentance is a sad Remedy! Well, be it never so sad, you know you must endure it, or that which is a thousand times worse. Why then, you will endure it, that you are resolved upon, but fain you would have a little longer Respite: Ah, Foolish Souls! why will you prolong your Misery, and linger out your Lives in Torment, when, as by enduring now, what you must endure at last, you might be presently at Ease, not only from the Pain of your past Guilt, but from the Fear of your future Repentance.

II. Consider that 'tis unspeakably more secure and advantageous for us to begin our Christian Warfare now: For this Life is the only Time of our Trial and Probation, the Field in which our Spiritual Warfare is to be fought, and from which we must all go off triumphing Conquerors, or eternal Slaves. And, alas! such a slippery and uncertain Thing is this our present Existence, that there is no one Part of it we can call our own, but what is present: For all our Futurity is in God's Hand and Disposal, and how he will shorten or prolong it, we are not able to prognosticate: So that, for ought we know, the next Moment may finally determine our everlasting Fate; and the Hopes of Eternity, which are now in our Hands, may slip thro' our Fingers before to morrow Morning, and leave us desperate for ever. What a dreadful Venture therefore do those Men run, that delay, from time to time, the securing their Salvation by a timely Repentance? When 'tis now in their own Power, would they but lay hold on the present Opportunity, to secure their Victory and Crown, they rather choose to go to cross or pile for them, and to stake them upon a Contingency that is not in their Power to dispose of.

But suppose they could secure that hereafter to themselves, to which they do so venturously defer their Repentance, yet still there is another Venture, of which they can never be secure; and that is, whether when that hereafter comes, God will not out of a just Resentment of their present Despise to, and Contempt of, his Grace, withdraw it from them; which if he should, they would be left in as great an Incapacity of Repenting, as if he had withdrawn their Lives from them; it being as possible for us to repent without Life when we are dead, as without God's Grace whilst we are living: So that promising that we will repent hereafter, we promise not only for ourselves, but for God too; we promise that He shall wait our leisure, and dance Attendance after us thro' all the tedious Stages of our Delays and Procrastinations; that he shall tamely put up, all the Affronts and Provocations, which between this and our hereafter, we are resolved to offer him, and in the End be as much at our beck, and as ready to come into our Assistance, when when we shall think fit to call for him, as if we had never given him the least Offence or Provocation to the contrary: For unless we can secure ourselves of this, it will be every whit as uncertain, whether we repent hereafter if we live, as whether we live to hereafter to repent. And what a Madness is it for Men, that have now their Lives and Souls in their own Hands, to stake and venture them upon Two such contingent Issues, that are both of them so far out of their Power and Disposal?

But suppose there were no Hazard in either of these, that we were as secure both of our own Lives and God's Grace, as we are of the Present Moment, yet we can never hope to begin our Christian Warfare so advantageously as now: For all the Time we are deferring it, our Enemies are gathering Strength, and mustering up their Forces against us; our bad Inclinations are ripening and improving, and our evil Habits are growing more inveterate; and so many Degrees of Strength as these get, we lose; and so proportionably as their Power to offend us increases, ours to defend ourselves against them decreases. What a Madness therefore is it for Men, who pretend to be resolved to engage in the Christian Warfare to defer it, as they do, from time to time, when they cannot but be sensible, if they take any notice of themselves, how much every farther Delay improves their Lusts, and impairs their Reason; how it fortifies their Enemy, and weakens themselves. You say you are convinced of the Necessity of this Warfare, and resolved to undertake it one time or other, tho' as yet you cannot prevail with yourselves to enter upon it: And why not yet; why, for some Reason or other, forsooth, you find yourselves averse to it; and do you imagine, that if you are averse to it to Day, you will be less averse to it to Morrow or next Day? No, fond Men, do not abuse yourselves, for if you will not enter upon it now, be assured of this, you will never find yourselves either so willing to it, or so fit and able for it again as long as you live: For your Lusts will grow every Day dearer and dearer to you, and so twine and wrap themselves, by degrees, about your Hearts and Affections, that you will every Day find yourselves more and more unwilling to part with them; and at last they will cling so fast that there will be no pulling them from ye, without pulling away your Souls with them. Wherefore talk no more, I beseech you, of repenting hereafter, but resolve once for all, that you will repent now or never.

III. Consider the final Success of this your Spiritual Warfare, doth very much depend upon your well-beginning of it. By what hath been said, you plainly see, there is an absolute Necessity of beginning it one time or other, and that you can never begin it so securely and advantageously as now; but unless you begin it well now, that is, with a thorow Preparation of Heart, you were e'en as good sit still and not begin at all: For when once you come to the Trial, to encounter the Oppositions of a corrupt Nature, and contend with the Difficulties of a holy Life, you will then quickly find your sappy Resolutions sink, and, like so many rotten Banks, yield and give way at every Spring-tide of Temptation. But as the well-laying the Foundations of a House secures the Superstructures against the Violences of all future Storms and foul Weather, so the first settling of your Resolution upon a firm and stedfast Basis, will be a mighty Safeguard to it against all ensuing Storms of Temptation. That well-grounded Faith and thorow Consideration, which induced us to it, will go along with it, and guard it thro' the Enemy's Quarters with such invincible Reasons, as no sinful Motive will be able to disprove or cope with. That hearty Shame and bitter Sorrow and Regret, which we felt in the forming our Resolution, will animate and render it more firm and inexorable against all the Solicitations of Sin for the future. Those fervent and earnest Prayers which preceded and accompanied it, will not only engage us to take the more Care and Regard of it but engage God also to contribute more Aid and Assistance to it in all its ensuing Conflicts and Encounters. And when in the framing of our Resolution we have taken effectual Care before-hand not to resolve upon any Thing, but what we have considered the Difficulty of; or against any Thing, but what we have felt the Shame and Smart of, or upon any Reason, but what we have thorowly pondered, and do firmly believe; and together with all this, have engaged by our earnest Prayers the God of all Grace to aid and assist us, we may, with some Assurance, promise ourselves a blessed Issue and Success: For now we are fore-warned of and fore-armed against all that can happen to us in our Spiritual Warfare; now there is no Difficulty can arise in our way which we did not foresee and provide against, when we first set forward to Heaven. So that if from henceforth we do but take an honest Care to watch the Motions of our Enemy, and to keep up our own Hearts and Courage, we cannot miss of a glorious Victory, and after that an everlasting Triumph.

But if we make a rash Beginning, and resolve precipitantly, without observing the above-named Rules and Directions, in all probability our hasty Purposes will end in a leisurely Repentance. So that unless we intend to take a great deal of Pains in Religion to no purpose, to weave a Penelope's Web, and do, and undo as long as we live, and only to dance round in an eternal Circle of sinning and resolving against it, resolving and sinning again, without ever making a Step forward, but still wheeling about to the same Point; let us now at last resolve to begin in that prudent Method which God hath prescribed us.

IV. Consider, that when once we have begun it well, we have conquered the main Difficulty of this our Spiritual Warfare: For tho it be an easy Matter to begin ill, to resolve against our Sins in a sudden Pet, or transient Heat of Passion; yet it must be confessed, that to resolve well, and wisely, that is, with that firm Belief and thorow Consideration of Things, with that Shame and Sorrow, and those earnest Cries to Heaven for Aid and Assistance, which are necessary to the founding of a strong and lasting Resolution, is not so easy a Matter: For in all those preparatory Exercises, we have a roving Mind, a hard Heart, and a perverse Nature to contend with; and we shall find it a very hard Matter to call in our wandering Thoughts, and unite them together into a fixt and steady Consideration of the Evidences of the Truth of Religion, and of the Duties and Motives and Difficulties of it. And whilst we are entertaining them with this unwonted Argument there are a thousand Objects with which they are better acquainted, that will be calling them away; so that without a great deal of Violence to ourselves, we shall never be able to keep them together so long, as is necessary to the forming a firm Assent to the Truth, and the passing a true and impartial Judgment upon the Proposals of Religion. And when we have fixt our Thoughts into a serious Consideration of the Evidences of Religion, we shall find, that our Lusts will object much more against them than our Reason; that they will be casting Mists before our Eyes and bribing and byassing our Understanding the other way; and that thereupon 'twill be more difficult than we are aware, to convince ourselves thorowly of the Truth of a Religion that is so diametrically opposite to our vicious Inclinations: But when this is done, and we proceed to consider the Duties of Religion, and to balance the Motives with the Difficulties of them, in order to the obtaining of ourselves a full and free Consent to them; here again we shall find ourselves at a mighty Plunge: For tho the Motives to our Duty are, at first View, infinitely greater and more considerable than the Difficulties of it; tho it be unspeakably more intolerable to lose the Joys of Heaven, and incur the Pains of Hell, than to endure the sharpest Brunts of this Spiritual Warfare; yet these being present and sensible, have a more immediate Access to us, and consequently are apter to move us than either of those Motives, which are both of them future and invisible. So that unless we do earnestly press and urge ourselves with those Motives, and imprint them upon our Minds in the most lively and real Characters, we shall find ourselves over-ruled in despite of them, by these present and sensible Difficulties that are before us. But when we have effectually convinced ourselves, that those Difficulties of our Duty are much less considerable than the Motives to them, we shall find it a hard Task to persuade our Wills into a free and explicit Consent to all the Particulars of it : For now we shall find a strong Aversion in our Natures to sundry of those Duties that call for our Approbation, and there will be a mighty Counter-striving between our Reason and Inclinations. Our darling Lusts, those Bosom-Orators within us, will now employ all their Rhetorick to dissuade us from parting with them ; they will clasp about our Souls, like departing Lovers, and use all their Charms and Allurements to hold us fast, and reconcile themselves to us ; and under these Circumstances, tho we have all the Reason in the World on our side, we shall find it will be no such easy matter effectually to dispose our Wills to close with so many offensive Duties, and part with so many beloved Sins : But when this is done, which, to be sure, will cost us many a violent Struggle and Contention with ourselves, there are other Difficulties to be mastered : For now we must reflect upon our past ill Life, and expose it to our own Eyes in all its natural Horror, Turpitude, and Infamy, and never leave reproaching ourselves with the Foulness and Disingenuity, the Madness and Folly of it, till we find our Hearts affected with Shame and Sorrow for, and Indignation against it. And for us that have been so long used to cokes and flatter ourselves, to paint and varnish our Deformities, and crown our Brows with forced and undeserved Applauses ; for us to condemn and upbraid ourselves, to strip our Actions of all their artificial Beauty, and set ourselves before our own Eyes in all our naked, undisguised Uglinefs, and not look off till we have lookt ourselves into Shame and Horror, and Hatred of ourselves, will be, at first especially, a very ungrateful Employment ; and yet it may be a good while, perhaps, before our hard and unmalleable Hearts will yield to the Impressions of Godly Sorrow and Remorse : But when this Difficulty is conquered, our Work is not yet totally finished : For now we must come off from ourselves, and all our presumptuous Dependences upon our own Ability and Power, and in a deep Sense of our own most wretched Weakness and Impotency, throw ourselves wholly upon God, and with earnest and importunate Out-cries, implore his gracious Aid and Assistance. And let me tell ye, to Men that have been all along inured to such glorious Conceits of themselves, such mighty Confidences in their own Abilities ; that have promised themselves, from time to time, that at such and such a Time, they would repent and amend, as if, without God's Help, 'twere in their Power to repent when they pleased ; for such Men as these, I say, to come out of themselves and their own Self-confidences, and wholly cast themselves upon a foreign Help ; so sensibly to feel, and ingenuously to own their own Inability, as to fly to God, and confess themselves lost and undone without him, is a much harder Matter than we can well imagine, till we come to make the Experiment : And yet this, all this, must be done, before we can be well prepared to resolve upon the Christian Warfare.

This I have the longer insisted on, because I would deal plainly with you, and shew you the worst of Things : For whether you are told of it or no, you will find it, if ever you make the Experiment, that all your good Resolutions, without these Preparations, will soon unravel in the Execution ; and that after you have resolv'd a thousand times over, you will be just where you are, and not one Step farther in Religion. But for your Encouragement, know, that when, with these necessary Preparations, you have solemnized your Resolution, you have won the main and toughest Victory in all your Spiritual Warfare ; a Victory by which you have pulled down your Sin from its Throne, and broken and disarrayed its Power and Forces ; so that now you are upon the Pursuit of a flying Enemy ; and if you do but diligently follow your Blow, and pursue your brave Resolution thro' all Temptations to the contrary, and do not suffer your vanquished Enemy to rally and re-inforce himself against ye, you will sensibly perceive his Strength decay ; and those Lusts which seemed at first invincible, will languish away, by degrees, from weak to weaker, till at last they expire into the Habits of their contrary Virtues; and so proportionably those Virtues, which thro' our vicious Aversations to them, seemed at first impossible, will grow on by degrees, from possible to easy, and from easy to necessary; and then the Sins will be more impossible to us than the Virtues.

Now what a mighty Encouragement is this to make a good Beginning of the Christian Warfare; that in so doing, we are sure to conquer the main Difficulty of it; that 'when we have broke thro' all those Oppositions that lie in the way to a wise and good Resolution, we are past the Frontiers of Religion, and having gotten over those steep Alps, at its Entrance shall be sure to find the Region round about a plain and easy Champaign, in which, the farther we go, the smoother 'twill be, and so smoother and smoother, till at last 'twill be all sweet and delightful, like the flowery Walks of Paradise. Let us therefore be persuaded, without any farther delay, to enter immediately upon this our Holy Warfare, and by Faith and Consideration, &c. to lay the Foundation of a Religious Resolution; that so when we are actually engaged against our Spiritual Enemies, we may be able to stand our ground, against all Temptations, and that having finally conquered and subdued them, we may receive that Immortal Crown, which God, the Righteous Judge, hath laid up for the victorious.

And so I have done with the First Part of our Christian Warfare, viz. our Entrance into it.

S E C T. III.

Concerning the Second Part of the Christian Warfare; with a particular Account of the Duties thereunto appertaining.

I Shall now proceed to the Second Part of our Christian Warfare, viz. The Course and Progress of it, which consists in Holy Living: For when once we have reduced our Wills to a firm and well-grounded Resolution of entering into this militant State, that which is next incumbent upon us, is, to pursue our Resolution in the future Course of our Lives and Actions; that is, to abstain from all Sin, and endeavour to mortify our Inclination to it, and to practise all the contrary Graces and Virtues, and endeavour to improve them to farther and farther Degrees of Perfection; or, as the Scripture expresses it, to cease to do evil, and to learn to do well; to strive against Sin, and to die to it, and to grow in Grace and perfect Holiness in the Fear of God. In this consists the Course and Progress of our Christian Warfare. In order whereunto, it's indispensably necessary, that we should still repeat the Practice of those Duties by which we were first prepared to enter into it: All those Means by which our good Resolution was produced, being naturally conducive to maintain and support it. And therefore we find, that Faith and Consideration, &c. are not enjoined as temporary Duties, that are only to be practised in the Beginning of our Warfare, but as Means that will be always necessary for us thro'out our whole Progress to Heaven: For so we are commanded not only to acquire a sincere Faith or Belief of the Gospel, but to continue and be established in it, Col. i. 2, 3. compared with Chap. ii. 7. And so again, we are enjoined not only to admit the Proposals of Religion into our Consideration, but to keep them there, Luke viii. 15. and suffer them to dwell richly in us, Col. iii. 16. And so for all those other preparatory Duties: For that from a hearty Conviction of our need of Christ, we should beg all Mercies of God in his Name, and for his sake, is a standing Precept of Christian Devotion, John xvi. 24. and so is also Confession of our Sins to God, 1 John i. 9. and Prayer for his Grace and Assistance, Col. iv. 2. Nor is it only required that we should once repent or change our bad Resolution for a good one, but that we should also repeat and confirm our good Resolution; that we should stablish our Hearts, that is, keep our Wills fixed and determined to all good Intentions and Purposes, James v. 8. and stand fast in the Lord, that is, adhere to the Profession and Practice of Christianity; with a firm and constant Resolution, Phil. iv. 1. For to proceed in our Christian Warfare, is constantly to live up to our good Resolution, which will require a continued Application of those Means by which we were first prepared and disposed to enter into it. Thus Faith is no less necessary to enable us to perform, than it was to prepare us to make our good Resolution; and still the more we believe our Religion, the more we shall think ourselves concerned in its Proposals, and consequently the more firmly we shall be resolved to close with, and embrace them; and so still as our Faith improves in degrees of Certainty, our Resolution will proportionably grow stronger and stronger. Again, if it were necessary to the Birth of our Resolution, that we should first duly weigh and consider the Motives and the Difficulties of the Duties we were resolving on, then it will be no less necessary to the Growth and Improvement of it, that we should frequently consider over these Motives and Difficulties again, and balance them one against another. And at first especially, while our good Resolution is yet in its Infancy, it will be very necessary that we should, every Day, before we go abroad into the World, spend some Portion of Time in fore-thinking of the many Temptations that do lie in wait for us, whether in our Business or Company, or necessary Refreshments and Diversions; and fore-arming ourselves against them with the Motives and Arguments of our Religion; that so we may have our Weapons ready when-ever they shall assault us, and be always provided to resist them. Again, if it were necessary to the forming our Resolution, that we should be convinced of the Necessity and Reality of our Saviour's Mediation, then it will be no less necessary to the Performance of it, that our Hope and Fear, which are the Springs of our Action, should still be excited by the glorious Assurance of Mercy, and horrid Prospect of Sin, which this Conviction implies. Once more, was it necessary to the well-making of our Resolution, that we should affect ourselves before-hand with a hearty Shame and Sorrow for our past Transgressions, then will it be no less necessary for the strengthening and confirming it, that we should ever and anon revive this our Shame or Grief, by reflecting on the Filthiness of our past State, and the Weakness and Imperfection of our present, and by an ingenuous Confession of both to the high and holy God; that so our Shame and Sorrow for our Sins being digested into Anger and Displeasure, may sharpen our Resolution, and animate it more and more against them. In short, if it be necessary to the founding of our Resolution, that we should first earnestly implore the Divine Grace and Assistance, then it will be no less necessary for the Continuance of it, that for the same purpose we should continually apply ourselves to the Throne of Grace; that we should every Morning commit ourselves to God's Grace and Protection, and never presume to venture among the Snares of the World without him; that we shall count it as unsafe for us to go out of our Chambers, without being armed with God's Aid, as 'tis to rush naked into a Battle amongst Swords and Spears: In a Word, that we should every Morning and Evening, at least, recommend ourselves to God, and beseech him to defend us against all those Terrors and Allurements, which either the Devil or our own Lusts shall propose to withdraw us from our good Resolution. And if upon all these preparatory Exercises of our Faith, Consideration, &c. it was at first necessary for us to enter into a solemn Resolution, it will be no less necessary, that with the same continued Preparations we should frequently iterate and renew it, especially at first, till the Strength of our bad Inclinations is in some measure broken and abated. Now we should take care to go every Day out of our Chambers, fresh armed, as Men that expect an Enemy at the Threshold; and not to trust our weak Souls among the Temptations of the World, till we have first chained up our Inclinations with new Vows of Fidelity: So that you see the Duties of our Entrance into the Christian Warfare are not so peculiar to that State, but that they are also to be practised in the Course and Progress of it.

But then besides these, there are sundry others that are necessary to our successful Progress therein: All which I shall reduce to these following Heads:

1. That we take care to arm ourselves with Patience and Courage to undergo and encounter the Trouble and Difficulty of it.
2. That we propose to ourselves the most excellent Examples.
3. That we apply ourselves to our Spiritual Guides for Direction.
4. That we be very curious of our Aims and Intentions.
5. That we should possess our Minds with a lively Sense and awful Apprehension of God's Presence with, and Inspection over us.
6. That we frequently examine and review our own Actions.
7. That we be very watchful and circumspect in the Conduct and Management of ourselves.
8. That we should betake ourselves to some honest Calling, and behave ourselves diligently and industriously therein.
9. That we should endeavour after a cheerful Frame of Spirit.
10. That we should maintain in our Minds a constant Sense, and Expectation of Heaven.
11. That we should live in the constant Use of the external Ordinances and Institutions of our Religion.

I. To the Course and Progress of our Christian Warfare, it is necessary that we arm ourselves with Patience and Courage to undergo and encounter the Troubles and Difficulties of it: For so we are commanded to be strong in the Lord, Ephes. vi. 10. and to be strong in the Grace which is in Christ Jesus, 2 Tim. ii. 1. that is, To fortify ourselves with the Grace of God and the Motives of Religion, against all those Hardships and Oppositions which may rise up against us in our March to Heaven; for we are assured beforehand, that we have need of Patience; that after we have done the Will of God, we may receive the Promise, Heb. x. 36. and therefore we are bid to strengthen ourselves, with all Patience and Long-suffering with Joyfulness, Col. i. 11. and to run with Patience the Race that is set before us, Heb. xi. 1.

For tho it is certain, that when we have well and wisely resolved, the greatest Difficulty of our Spiritual Warfare is over, yet it cannot be dissimbled, that even when this is performed, and we proceed from hence to Execution, there will, at first especially, arise such Difficulties and Oppositions in our way, as will sufficiently try our Courage and Patience. And tho if when we were forming our Resolution, we considered the whole Matter, we could not but foresee great Difficulties in the Execution of it, And be very sensible what strong Inclinations from within, and Temptations from without we were to struggle and contend with; yet, alas! the Difficulties of all Undertakings are usually much less in our Fore-sight, than in our Sense and Experience of them: For while they are in our Fore-sight, we have only the Notions and Ideas of them to encounter, and these being not so stubborn as the Things themselves, are much more easily conquered by us. So that when instead of our own easy and compliant Notions we come to contend with the Difficulties themselves, we very often find the Face of Things quite changed, and those Difficulties which did so easily submit to our Apprehensions, do many times make an obstinate Resistance to our Endeavours. And thus many times it is in the Matter in hand: So that when we are fore-casting the Difficulties of Religion in our Minds, we must always allow for the Distance of them, which usually lessens their Appearance; and conclude with ourselves, that when we are actually engaged with them, we find them much more stiff and incompliant to our Endeavours than they are now to our Thoughts; and accordingly prepare and arm ourselves against them: For when from considering we proceed to encounter them, we must expect to find, that to discourse and execute,

execute, are Things of a widely different Nature; and that those Difficulties which we so easily vanquished in our Thoughts and Discourses, will, when we are actually contending with them put us to a much harder Trial of our Valour and Constancy than we were aware of.

For if we would have nothing but our own bad Inclinations, and the ordinary Temptations of the World to struggle with, yet even these we shall find sufficient to exercise our utmost Patience and Constancy: For we must not expect that our bad Inclinations, especially after they have been pampered and improved by a long and frequent Repetition of forbidden Enjoyments, will be presently subdued and mortified, when there are so many Temptations all around us continually exciting and provoking them. No, you may be assured they will struggle for their Lives before they give up the Ghost; and if they are deeply radicated, will not be torn from their Roots without a great deal of Time and Labour. So that unless you have a great Stock of Patience and Courage to endure and outstand their tedious Resistances to your pious Endeavours, and to deny them those vicious Satisfaction which they feed and live upon, till you have starved them out; you will quickly be weary of contending with them, and rather choose to yield them their Desires, than be plagued with their restless Importunities.

But then, besides these ordinary Difficulties of denying your sinful Desires and Inclinations, it may be your Lot to take up the Cross too, and to follow your Saviour thro' a dark Lane of Sufferings, and Persecutions; and then you will need a world of Patience and Courage to undergo all that Shame and Reproach, Loss and Pain, Fear and Suffering, thro' which you must fight your way to Heaven if ever you come there. Since therefore this may happen to ye, and is not altogether unlikely, it concerns ye, as ye hope for Heaven, to fore-arm and prepare yourselves against it. So that our Christian Warfare exposing us, as it doth, to so many certain and probable Difficulties, it is not without reason that the Apostle exhorts us to be stedfast and immoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as we know that our labour shall not be in vain in the Lord.

II. To the Course and Progress of our Christian Warfare, it is necessary that we propose to ourselves the most excellent Examples: For Experience tells us, that good Example hath a stronger Influence upon Men than good Precepts or Counsels; and the reason is plain, because he that only gives others good Advice or Instructions, doth not give them that Security that he believes himself, as he that seconds his Counsel with his own Example. For they who are instructed do, in a great measure, depend upon the Judgment and Authority of their Teachers, and therefore must have a reasonable Security that their Teachers do believe themselves before they will be induced to believe and comply with what they are taught; and such a Security is not to be fetcht so much from their Words as from their Actions. But when by their Examples they transcribe their own Doctrines, it is visible they are in earnest, and that is a probable Argument to their Disciples that their Doctrine is true. So that good Example teaches with greater Force and Authority than good Doctrine can do, because it more sensibly confirms what it teaches, and doth at the same Time direct us what to do, and by a very popular Argument prove, that we ought to do it. Besides, when the matter which the Teacher advises or enjoins is hard and difficult, he ought, for the Encouragement of those whom he teaches, to give them a full Assurance that 'tis practicable; which no Argument will so effectually do as his own Example. For when they see that he himself practises what he teaches, that is an ocular Demonstration to them that 'tis practicable. So that good Example carries in it this strong Encouragement to Goodness, that there is nothing in it but what is possible, and that the greatest Difficulties that attend it are such as may be conquered by Diligence and sincere Endeavour. And as it gives us the most sensible Direction and Encouragement to Virtue, so it also represents it to us to the greatest Advantage.

tage. And whereas Precepts and Discourses of Virtue are only the Pictures and Artificial Descriptions of it, a virtuous Example is Virtue animated and exposed to our view in all its living Charms and Attractions. And therefore by how much Nature exceeds Art, and the most accomplished Beauties excel their Statues and Pictures, by so much is Virtue in Examples more amiable and attractive than in Precepts and Discourses. Since therefore in good Examples we see Virtue alive and in Motion; exerting itself in the most comely Actions and grateful Gestures, this must much more effectually recommend and indear it to our Minds and Affections than the most pressing Discourses or lively Descriptions of it.

This therefore is one of those great Means of holy Living, which the Gospel hath prescribed us, viz. That we should propose to ourselves the best and most excellent Examples; That we should be followers of them who thro' Faith and Patience inherit the Promises, Heb. vi. 12. and that we should be Followers of the Apostles, and Leaders of the Flock of Christ as they were of Christ himself, 1 Cor. xi. 1. But because the Examples of the best of Men have a great many Imperfections in them, and are very often intermixt either with Excesses or Defects, and tainted with Superstition and Enthusiasm, by reason whereof they frequently mislead those that tread too close upon the Heels of them; therefore we are more particularly directed to the Example of the great Master of our Religion; which, tho it consists of an unspotted Innocence and perfect Virtue, yet is every way accommodated to the State and Condition of Human Nature and Conversation. For he conversed among Men with a modest Virtue, and such as was every way consistent with an ordinary Course of Life. His Piety was even and constant, and unblameable, but such as fairly complied with civil Society and a secular Conversation. It affected not high Transports, and Raptures of Devotion, but was such as was both fit and easy for Mortals to imitate. His Virtue consisted not in prodigious Fastings, or severe and unpracticable Abstractions from Sense, but in a Life of Justice and Temperance, of Humility, and Charity, and Patience and the like; that is, in such a Life as is not only proper but possible for us to transcribe. So that in his glorious Example he hath transmitted to us an imitable Virtue; for he took care not to out-run the Capacities of Men in imitable Expressions of Sanctity and Virtue, but so far as he could innocently, complied with our Weakness, and kept pace with our Strength; that so he might entertain us all along with the Comforts of his Company, and the Influence of a perpetual Guide. And as that Rule of Faith which he hath propounded to us, is fitted to our Understandings, being very short, easy, and intelligible; so, as an excellent Writer of our own hath observed, that Copy of Manners which he hath set before us, is not fitted with Excellencies worthy, but also with Compliances possible to be imitated by us.

And as his Example is all imitable, so it is all thro'out substantially good. For it consisted in a modest Piety, a simple and unaffected Goodness. His Devotions to God never affected the Stage, nor did they ever evaporate in Enthusiastick Rants, or unaccountable Raptures of Passion; but were always secret and serious, calm and manly, animated with a seraphick Fervor, and yet conducted with Reason and Sobriety. His Government of himself was exact and regular, his Affections were always fixt to their proper Objects, and never exceeded the just Limits of Reason; and his Appetites were always moderated by his Understanding, and never transgressed the bounds of Temperance and Nature. His Conversation among Men was most innocent and candid, free and ingenious; neither vain, nor morose, haughty nor sordid, but equally poised between all Extremes. He was just without Partiality, humble without Affectation, charitable and beneficent without Noise or Respect of Persons. His Zeal was wise, temperate, and substantial, such as did not spend itself in a furious Contention for, or Opposition to Things of an indifferent Nature, but it quietly submitted to the Customs of his Country, and of the Church in which he was born and educated; and all his Invectives were against Hypocrisy and Immorality, which were the only Things to which his noble and generous Temper could never be reconciled. In a word, his whole Religion was modest and serious, and affected rather to be seen than to be heard, and to be than to be seen. His Heavenly-mindedness was such as render'd him neither too slow, nor too talkative; and his Patience was always equally distant from Stupidity and Effeminacy. For so when he endured that miserable Death of the Cross, he suffered like a Man that was sensible of Pain, and yet very well knew how to undergo it as became him. For as, on the one hand, he did not breathe out his Soul like an effeminate Epicure, in whining Complaints and wretched Lamentations; so neither, on the other hand, did he give up the Ghost like a flaming Stoick in a buffing Contempt of Death, or an affected Insensibility of Pain, and Misery. But from the beginning to the end he acted his Part in that bloody Tragedy, as one that was neither Insensible of Torment, nor conquered by it. For the last Words which he breathed, which were a hearty Prayer for his Murmurers, manifested his Soul to be calm and serene under all the Agonies of his Body. Thus is his great Example entirely composed of those excellent Virtues, that are the proper Graces and Ornaments of human Nature. Now tho there be some Actions of our Saviour's Life, which were never intended for our Imitation, viz. such wherein he either exercised or proved and asserted his Divine Authority; yet whatsoever he did of precise Morality, and in pursuance to his own Laws he designed and intended for our Imitation. So that in all such Matters, as his Law is to be our Map and Rule, so his Practice is to be our Guide and President.

For this is the great End of our Religion, to which God hath predestinated us, namely to be conformable to the Image of his Son, Rom. viii. 29. and in this consists our putting on of the Lord Jesus Christ, namely, in imitating his Manners, and following the Garb and Fashion of his Conversation; and accordingly our Saviour tells his Disciples, John xiii. 15. I have given you an Example (that is, of Humility and Charity) that you should do as I have done to you; and 'tis one of his great Commands that we should learn of him who was meek and lowly of heart, with a promise, that in so doing, we should find rest unto our Souls, Mat. xi. 29.

Wherefore if we would lead a Holy Life, pursuant to our Holy Resolution, we must set holy Examples before our Eyes, and especially that most holy one of our blessed Saviour. We must peruse the History of his sacred Life, and diligently observe his Carriage and Demeanour in all those Capacities and Circumstances wherein he was placed, and closely apply it all to ourselves as a perfect Pattern of Action. Thus and thus did my Saviour, Sic ille manus, sic ora——— so he demeaned himself when he was in my Circumstances, after this manner he acted, and thus he suffered; and can I follow a more glorious Example; nay, would it not be a burning Shame for me not to imitate his Manners whilst I profess myself his Disciple? Think, O my Soul, what would he have now done, if he were in thy Condition, and had thy Temptations before him. Would he have pawned his Innocence for such a Trifle, or prostituted himself to such a base, infamous Action, to avoid such an inconsiderable Inconvenience? No, doubtless he would not; and art thou not ashamed to comply with such a Temptation, knowing with what Indignation thy Saviour would have rejected it? If we would but thus inure ourselves to reflect upon our Saviour's Example, and apply it to, and compare it with our own Actions, we cannot imagine with what a divine Emulation it would inspire us; how it would animate our Weaknesses, and shame our Irregularities, and enamour our Souls with true Virtue and Goodness.

III. To the Course and Progress of our Christian Warfare, it is also necessary that we should frequently apply ourselves for Advice and Direction to our Spiritual Guides: For it is to be considered, that Men of a secular Life and Conversation are generally, so engaged in the Business and Affairs of this World, that they very rarely acquire Skill enough in Religion to conduct themselves safely to Heaven thro' all those Difficulties and Temptations that lie in their way. For before they can be capable to guide themselves safely, they must in all points of great moment be able to distinguish between Truth and Falshood, and to make a difference between good and evil, which in many Instances do border so near upon one another, that it requires much greater Skill and Knowledge, than the Generality of Men are Masters of, to discern the Point and Boundary that parts them. And supposing their Understandings to be so well instructed as to be able to resolve them truly in all those doubtful Cases wherein they are or may be concerned, yet still there is generally such a fault in their Wills, as renders them incompetent Judges for themselves; and that is, That thro' an Excess of Self-love they are prone to be partial in their own Concerns; and consequently, unless the Case be very plain, to vote that true that is most for their Interest, and determine on that side they are most inclined to. For when a Man's Judgment is before in Suspence, a very small weight of Interest on the wrong side of the Question, usually turns the Scale against the greater probability on the right. And whilst Interest fees Mens Affections, and their Affections bribe their Judgments, it will be almost impossible for them to secure their Innocence whilst they determine all Cases of Right and Wrong, at the Tribunal of their own Reason. For when once they have determined falsly (as many Times to be sure they will) besides the many single Miscarriages in Practice that will be consequent thereunto; by practising on upon their false Determinations, they will intangle themselves in such evil Customs and Habits, as by that time they have discovered the Error of their Judgment, will render it very difficult for them to correct the Error of their Practice. And therefore to secure ourselves in our Innocence and Duty, it is mighty necessary, that in all doubtful Cases we should appeal from ourselves to the Judgment of others, who having no Interest to bias them one way or t'other, will be much more impartial, and therefore (if they have but equal understanding) more competent Judges of our Case than ourselves.

World,

Upon both which Accounts the Christian Religion hath wisely separated an Order of Men from the World, to be the Guides and Conductors of Souls, to over-see and direct the secular Flock, who upon the above-mentioned Accounts cannot be supposed to be in all Cases competent Guides for themselves. For 'twas to this purpose that our Saviour before his Ascension, commissioned his Disciples, Mat. xxviii. 18, 19, 20. All Power is given unto me in Heaven and in Earth. Go ye therefore and teach all Nations, baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all Things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the World. And that he did not intend this merely for a temporary Commission which was to expire with the first Bishops and Propagators of the Gospel, but designed to have it derived from their Hands to all the succeeding Ages of Christianity, is evident not only from the Promise annexed to it, that he would be with them to the end of the World, which plainly shews that 'twas to continue in force till then; but also from hence, that they to whom this Commission was immediately given, did actually derive it to others, 2 Tim. i. 6. with a strict Charge that these also should successively derive it to others, Tit. i. 5.

And as by this perpetual Commission Christ hath established a Succession of Men to be the Guides of Souls to the end of the World, so he hath obliged all Christian People to attend to and respect them as such. For he that beareth you, saith he, beareth me, and he that despiseth you, despiseth me, and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me, Luke x. 16. And 1 Cor. iv. 1. the Apostle enjoins all Christians to account of these spiritual Guides as of the Ministers of Christ, and Stewards of the Mysteries of God; so also, 1 Thes. v. 12, 13. he earnestly beseeches them, as a matter of vast importance, that they would know them which labour among them, and are over them in the Lord, and were to admonish them, and esteem them very highly in love for their works sake; and Heb. xiii. 17. he gives this Injunction, Obeys them which have the rule over you, and submit yourselves; for they watch for your Souls, as they that must give account, that they may do it with joy and not with grief, for that is unprofitable for you.

There being therefore an Order of Men that are thus sanctified and set apart from the World, by the Commission of our Saviour, to consult the various Necessities of Souls, and administer to them in all their religious Concerns; it would doubtless mightily contribute to their successful Progress in the Christian Warfare, if in all their Streights and Difficulties Men would apply themselves to them for Counsel and Direction, with such Modesty and Sincerity as they ought to do. For besides that they might reasonably expect a greater Blessing upon their Counsels than other Mens, they being commissioned Guides under the great Shepherd of Souls, who, we must needs suppose, will more especially cooperate with the Means of his own Ordination; besides this, I say, they being Persons that are wholly devoted to the Study and Ministries of Religion, must needs be supposed, cæteris paribus, to have a farther Insight into the Cases of Souls, into their Dangers and Refuges, Diseases and Remedies, and consequently to be better able to counsel and direct them, than Men of a secular Life and Conversation. If therefore Men would be but so kind to themselves, as to apply themselves, in all their spiritual Exigences, to a holy, wise, and well-instructed Guide; to uncover their Sores, lay open their Cases, and reveal the Secrets of their Souls to him, so far as it is necessary to enable him to make proper Applications; it is not to be expressed what a vast Advantage they might make of him. He would be instead of a good Genius or Tutelar Angel to their Souls, to suggest many a good Thought to them, and feed their Meditations with many an useful Notion; to enable them to extract from the Articles of their Belief, their just and proper Inferences, and reduce them to practical Principles, to rectify their Wandring, and extricate them from their Doubts; to comfort them in their Sorrows, and quicken them in their Indispositions; to warm their Indifferences, and moderate their Zeal, so as that they may neither be becalmed by the one, nor over-born by the too violent Gusts of the other; and, in a word, to direct them to the proper Methods of Mortifying their bad Inclinations, and conducting their Religion so, as to render it more easy and delightful to them. These and a great many other good Offices a wise and well-experienced Guide would be able to do Men, if they would but take him along with them in their Journey to Heaven, and modestly submit themselves to his Conduct and Direction. And in thus doing they would act not only with greater Security to their Innocence, but with greater Satisfaction to their Consciences; because then their Actions would be warranted, not only by their private Sentiments, which in many Cases they will have just cause to suspect, but also by the better and more impartial Judgment of an authorized Guide. For if under his Conduct they should happen in any doubtful Instance to err from the way of Truth or Righteousness, they will have this Satisfaction, that they have used the best Means to prevent it, the Means to which God himself hath remitted them, to whom alone they are accountable for their Actions, and who, as they may well imagine, will very much compassionate such Miscarriages as may follow upon their Submission to his own Appointments. But if notwithstanding the great Care that he hath taken of their Souls, in appointing them Pilots to steer them safely to Heaven, they will embark without them, and presume so far upon their own Skill, as to venture to their eternal Port, thro' all those Rocks and Quicksands that lie in their way; they must needs be in great danger of miscarrying, which if they do, they may thank themselves for it, and can expect no Pity from God, whose careful provision for their eternal Safety they have so ungratefully contemned and neglected.

IV. To our prosperous Course and Progress in the Christian Warfare, it is also necessary that, as often as we can, we should actually intend and aim at God in the Course of our Lives and Actions. For it is of mighty Advantage to the Conduct of a Man's Life to have his Intentions united, and continually to act with one steady Drift and Aim. Because while he intends but one thing, he unites the whole Vigour of his Nature in the pursuit of it, and is continually driving at it with all the Force and Activity of his Faculties. 'Tis an Italian Proverb, From the Man of one Business, good Lord deliver me; because, minding that only, he must needs be supposed to be more expert and sagacious in it, and consequently the more able to exceed and over-reach another Man who hath only minded it by the bye; but when a Man acts with a multifarious Intention, he must needs be distracted in his Operations, and the force of his Faculties being divided by the multiplicity of his Aims, must needs be so weakned, that 'twill be impossible for him to pursue any one of them with Vigour and Activity. 'Tis one of Pythagoras's Maxims, $\Delta\epsilon\iota\ \chi\epsilon\ \tau\ \alpha\upsilon\theta\epsilon\alpha\iota\sigma\tau\omicron\nu\ \epsilon\nu\alpha\ \chi\iota\nu\epsilon\theta\alpha\iota$, a Man ought to be one, i. e. so far as he is able, to fix all his Aims upon one End, and unite them in one Center, and not to suffer himself to be tossed hither and thither by Independent Designs and Intentions; because this will unavoidably distract him in his Prosecutions, and so divide and weaken his Principles of Action, that he will be able to do nothing to any Purpose. God therefore being the great Object of Religion, it is necessary, in order to our progress therein, that we should, as much as in us lies, respect and aim at him in the whole Course of our Actions; that we should continually look up to him as to the directing Star by which we are to steer our Motions, and conduct our whole Lives under a fixt Intention to obey his Will, and imitate his Nature.

And, indeed, unless we do this, we are not good Men in the Sense and Judgment of Religion. For Religion, as such, is a Rule of Divine Worship; and under this Notion the Christian Religion, in particular, enjoys all its Duties, viz. of Homage and Worship, to God. For it requires us to do all as unto God, Col. iii. 23. and to do all to the glory of God, 1 Cor. x. 31. that is, to do all in Obedience to him, and Imitation of him, from a sincere Acknowledgment of the Perfections of his Nature, of his Sovereign Authority over us, and an immutable Right to rule and command us. Not that an actual, explicit Intention of obeying or imitating God is necessary to every good Action; for our occasions of doing good, being so infinite, and so often occurring in our secular Affairs, and our Minds being so incapable, as they are, of attending many Things at once; it is impossible for us actually to intend Obedience to God in every good thing we perform; but that, in the general, we should heartily intend it, is indispensably necessary to the consecrating our best Actions, and adopting them into the Family of Religion. For that we must obey God, is the Fundamental Law of Religion, from whence all the particular Commands and Prohibitions of it do receive their Force and Obligation. So that unless we do what he commands with a general Intention of Mind to obey him, we do not act upon a Religious Obligation, and consequently tho our Actions should be materially Good, yet are they not formally Religious.

Now to the fixing and settling such a general Intention in our Minds, it is necessary that in the particular Exercises of our Religion we should, so far as we are able, actually intend and aim at God; that we should throw by all other Ends, so far as we are able, and refer our Actions directly and immediately to him; in a word, that we should formally devote and dedicate them to his blessed Will and Pleasure, so as to be able to say, this and this I do purely to please God, with a single Intention of Soul, to resemble and please him, to transcribe his Nature, and comply with his Will. For which end we must take care, as oft as we can, to perform our Religious Actions in such a manner, as that no secular Ends may interpose between God and our Intentions; to be as private and as modest as we can in our Religion, and not expose it any more than needs must to the Eye of the World, lest Applause and Reputation tation should intrude themselves upon us, and carry away our Intention from God. For thus our Saviour advises in the Case of Charity and Prayer, Mat. vi. 1, 7. That we should not do our Alms before Men, to be seen of them, nor sound a Trumpet before them, to make the Street ring of our Charity; nay, if possible, that we should not let our left Hand know what our right Hand doth; but that our Alms should be secret, and known only to God and ourselves; and that when we pray, we should not affect to make a pompous shew of it, in the Synagogues and corners of the Streets, but that we should enter into our Closets and shut our Door, and in the most private manner unbosom our Souls to God; the sense of all which is, that we should endeavour, as far as in us lies, so to circumstantiate our Charity and Devotion, as not to give any Opportunity to secular Ends and Aims to obtrude themselves upon us, to minge with our pious Intentions, and deflower the Purity of them.

Not that I think it unlawful for a Man to intend any thing but God in the Discharge of his Duty, or that our Intention is bad, when it immediately respects any worldly End, such as Pleasure, or Profit, or Honour, which are proposed by God himself as Arguments to persuade Men to their Duty; and what hurt can it be for Men to aim at that in the Discharge of their Duty, which God hath proposed to them as an Encouragement to it? 'Tis true, if worldly Advantage be the only or chief End we aim at, our Intention is naught, and so are all the Actions thence proceeding; but if, together with that, we do heartily intend and aim to please God, and conform ourselves to his blessed Will and Nature, as to continue in the path of our Duty to him, not only when we have no prospect of outward Advantages to induce us to it, but when outward Evils and Inconveniencies lie in our way, we need not doubt but our Intention is truly good and sincere, notwithstanding those immediate Respects which it many Times hath to secular Ends and Inducements. But yet it is certain that the more it respects these, the more imperfect it is, and the more liable to be vanquished by outward Temptations. For it's a plain sign that 'tis conscious of its own Weakness, when it dares not stand alone, but is fain to call in to it the Assistance of these worldly Ends to support and defend it; and the less of worldly Aim there is in our Religious Intention, to be sure the more pure and simple it is, and the more of substantial Piety there is in it; and tho it may be truly sincere notwithstanding its being compounded with secular Aims and Respects, yet the more of these there is in it, the weaker and more unstable it must necessarily be. For our Mind being finite, cannot possibly intend many Things, with equal Strength and Vigour, as it can do one; and when its Intention is dispersed among various Objects, it must necessarily be more languid than when 'tis collected, united, and fixt upon one; and consequently, the more a Man's Intention respects the World, the less, in proportion, it must respect God; and so on the contrary. And then the less a Man respects God in his Duty, and the more he respects the World, the more liable he will be to the Temptations of worldly Loss or Advantage. For when those Advantages which he so much respects lie on the opposite side to his Duty, to be sure he will be so much the more inclined to desert it; and as often as Fortune shifts sides, and carries with it the Advantages of Pleasure, Profit, or Honour, from Virtue to Vice, or from Vice to Virtue, he will still be ready to face about with it, and be always veering like a Weather-cock to a contrary Point upon every Change of Wind. Whereas when a Man's Intention purely respects God, 'twill be immoveably fixt among all the Changes and Alterations from without. For there is no outward Change or Capricio of Fortune can hinder a Man from pleasing God, whose Love to us depends not upon our being poor or rich, pleased or pained, depressed or advanced, but upon our being truly Virtuous and Religious. And therefore if our Aim be purely to please him, we shall be sure to continue so, which side soever Fortune smiles upon.

Wherefore to our successful Progress in Religion it is highly necessary that, so far as in us lies, we should abstract and separate our Religious Intentions from all these worldly Respects; and this must be done by looking frequently up to God, and actually referring and dedicating our Actions to him; by shutting our Eyes, when we are entering upon any Duty, to all worldly Considerations, and determining with ourselves, this I will do purely because 'tis Godlike, or because God hath commanded it; whether I shall be commended or disgraced for it, whether I shall get or lose by it, I will not now regard; it is sufficient that it is good, and that God hath commanded it, and therefore for this Reason only I will do it, without any other Respect or Consideration. By which Means we shall by degrees so purify our Intentions, and refine them from worldly Aims, that we shall be able to act vigorously in Religion, without any other Respect but that of pleasing God, and conforming ourselves to his Will and Nature. And when once we can do thus, we are in a great forwardness in Religion. For now the Will of God hath got such an Ascendant over ours, that as we can chearfully obey him without external Inducements, so we can freely contemn all Inducements to the contrary, and it being our great and chief Aim to please and be like him, the Things that are without us will have very little Power to move us one way or t'other. Because now our great Aim is above them, and our Eyes are so stedfastly fixt upon God, that we are not at leisure to regard them. And our Mind being thus indisposed to listen to the restless Importunities of external Goods and Evils, our Innocence is safe, and we may pass triumphantly thro' all their Temptations. 'Tis a noble Saying of Epicetus, lib. 2. c. 19. ἐκ ἐστὶν ἄλλως ἐκβαλεῖν λυπὴν, φόβον, ἐπιθυμίαν, &c. εἰ μὴ πρὸς μόνον τὸ Θεὸν ἀπεβλέποντας, ἐκείνῳ μόνῳ προσσπειροῦντά, τοῖς ἐκείνου προσάγμασι καθωσιτωμένους. i. e. "There is no other way for a Man to eject Sorrow, and Fear, and Lust from his Soul, but by looking up to God alone, and resigning ourselves to him only, and devoting our Lives to the Obedience of his Commandments." And elsewhere he tells his Scholars, that the main thing which he drove at was, Ἀποβλέσαι ὑμᾶς ἐλευθέρους, εὐδαιμονοῦντας, εἰς Θεὸν ἀφορῶντας, ἐν παντί μικρῷ καὶ μεγάλῳ, i. e. "To make them free and blessed, by persuading them to look up to God in every thing whether it be small or great, lib. 2. c. 19." For whilst in our religious Intentions we do too much respect the Things that are without us, we do, in a great measure, intrust them with our Virtue and Religion; and so far as we make them Inducements to our Duties, so far it is in their Power to secure or betray it. As for Instance, so much as I am at Profit in any religious Action, so much Power Profit hath over my Religion; and if the same Profit should invite me to a wicked Action, it will have as much Power to betray my Religion, as it had to secure it; for the same Gain will have the same Influence on me when it tempts me to sin, as it hath when it tempts me to obey. What a dangerous thing therefore is it for Men to intrust such a Treasure as their Innocence and Religion in such irresponsible Hands, and to give those outward Things which are the Temptations of Vice, a power to dispose of their Virtue? What is this but to commit the keeping of our Sheep to a Wolf, or of our Chastity to a Goat? Wherefore as we would be safe in our religious Progress, it highly concerns us to purify our good Intentions, so far as we are able, from all worldly Respects, and to level them directly and immediately at God. And in order hereunto,

V. To render the Course and Progress of our Christian Warfare successful, it is also necessary that we possess our Minds with an awful Apprehension of God's Presence with, and Inspection over us. Among the many excellent Rules which the Heathen Moralists have given for the Conduct of Men's Lives, this is one, That in the whole Course of their Lives they should imagine some excellent Person, for whom they have a great Veneration, to be present with 'em, as a Witness and Spectator of all their Actions. And it was wholesom Advice that one gave his lewd Friend, that he should hang the Picture of his grave and serious Father in the Room where he was wont to celebrate his Debauches; imagining that the severe Eye of the good old Man, tho' but in Effigy, would give a check to the wanton Sallies of the intemperate Youth. And if the bare Fiction of a Man's being present with us, or his being present only in a dead Picture, may be rationally supposed to have so strong an Influence on our Actions; of how much greater Force must our firm Belief and Sense of God's Presence with us be to regulate our Lives and Actions; and that he is thus present with us, we have sufficient Reason to conclude, not only from the infinite Plenitude of his Essence, which being self-existent, could not be bounded or limited by any Cause from without, and therefore must necessarily be boundless and immense; but also from express Assertions of Scripture, which assures us, that his Eyes are in every Place, beholding the Evil and the Good, Prov. xv. 3. That he is a God at hand, and not a God afar off; and that no Man can hide himself in secret Places that he shall not see him; and that he fills Heaven and Earth, Jer. xxiii. 23, 24. and that we can go no whither from his Presence, Psal. cxxxix. 7, 8. and that all Things are naked and open to his Eyes, Heb. iv. 13. that is, That the world is surrounded and filled with his Being, which is both the Womb that contains, and the Soul that pervades the Creation; and that being thus present with us where-ever we are, he must needs be supposed to have a constant Inspection over us, and a clear Sense and Perception of whatsoever we do.

And he being thus present with us in Reality, and not in Fiction or Picture, it must doubtless be of mighty avail to the Well-government of our Lives, to be continually inspired with an actual and vigorous Sense of it. And therefore our Saviour commands us to do good from a lively Sense, that God's Eye is upon us, Mat. vi. 4, 6. That our Father, who sees us in secret, shall reward us openly. And this I conceive to be the meaning of that comprehensive Precept which God gave to Abraham, Walk before me, and be thou perfect, Gen. xvii. 1. i. e. behave thyself as one that art sensible thou art always in my Presence, and under my Eye; and in the Sense of this, see thou beest upright and sincere, and that thou dost not vainly attempt to impose upon me by any demure Shews or hypocritical Pretences. And the same is implied in that of the Apostle, Col. iii. 22. Servants obey in all Things your Masters, according to the Flesh, not with Eye-service, as Men-pleasers, but in singleness of Heart, fearing God, i. e. be not like those Servants that do their Duty for no other end but to ingratiate themselves with their Masters, and accordingly do it no longer than while their Master's Eye is upon them; but do you it with all Sincerity, out of an awful Respect to God, considering that when Man's Eye is off, his Eye is upon you. The Sense of all which is, that after the Example of Holy David, Psal. xvi. 8. we should endeavour to set the Lord always before us, and to possess our minds with a quick and lively Sense of his being continually present with us, wheresoever we are, and whatsoever we are about, and a constant Witness and Spectator of all our Actions.

And this we shall find will be of unspeakable Use to us in the whole Course and Progress of our Christian Warfare. For,

1. It will mightily restrain us from all sinful Actions: For as St Austin observes the greatest Part of Sin is taken away, if a Man hath but a Witness of his Conversation; and much more, if he be sensible that he hath such a Witness as God, with whom he is infinitely more concerned than with all the World besides; who is the Judge of all his Actions, the Rewarder of Virtue; and Punisher of Vice, the eternal Source of all those Evils or Goods that he can fear or hope for. And who but a Man that is desperately wicked, dares do an evil Action in the Presence and Sight of such a formidable Witness? For suppose you beheld this Almighty Being sitting upon a Cloud in some visible Form, with a Thunder-bolt in his Hand; and from thence looking down upon you, curiously observing how you demean yourselves, and closely pursuing you with his awful Eye thro' all your dark Retreats and Privacies; cies; would not the Thought of any Action that is displeasing to him, be ready to strike you into Trembling and Horror? Could you imagine yourselves to be any where secure in your Wickedness, while you saw yourselves uncovered to his All-seeing Eyes, to which your Closets lie as open as your Halls, and your Hearts as the High-ways? Doubtless you could not. Why now, the lively Belief and Apprehension of a Thing, is equivalent to a sensible Perception. If I were thoroughly assured that the King were listening behind the Curtain, and heard every Word that is spoken in the Room, I should, doubtless, be as much afraid of talking Treason against him, tho I saw him not, as if he stood just before me. And so tho God be with me in an invisible Manner, and I am not able to see him thro' that thick Curtain of Matter which is drawn between me and his Spiritual Essence, yet if I firmly believe that he is behind it, and am constantly aware that he is listening to what I say, and prying into what I do, that he keeps Intelligence with my Thoughts, and is intimately acquainted with all my Designs and Intentions, it will render me as cautious of my Thoughts, and Words, and Actions, as if I saw him standing by me in a visible Shechinah or Glory, to record every Passage of my Life, and enter into his Debt-Books every Item of my Guilt, against the great Day of Accounts: But how much the want of such a due Apprehension of God's Presence with us, lets Men loose to all Wickedness, may be collected from that of the Prophet, Ezek. ix. 9. The Iniquity of the House of Judah is exceeding great, and the Land is full of Blood, and the City full of Perverseness: and how comes this to pass? Why, they say, The Lord hath forsaken the Earth, and the Lord seeth not; whereas, on the contrary, David attributes his keeping God's Precepts and Testimonies, to the lively Sense he had, that his Ways were always before God, i. e. lay open to his Sight and Inspection, Psal. cxix. 161. But then,

2. Such a lively Sense of God's Presence with, and Inspection over us, will be of mighty Use to keep us sincere and upright in the whole Course of our Actions: For, alas! To what purpose should we dissemble and conceal our Wickedness from the Eye of the World, so long as we lie open to the Eye of God? Would you not think it very strange, to see a Company of Prisoners, that, within a few Hours, are to be tried for their Lives, solicitously concerning themselves how to appear lovely and innocent to one another, hiding their Deformities, and disguising their Crimes with artificial Pretexts and Apologies, that so they may cheat and juggle one another into a 'mutual good Opinion of themselves; but in the mean time take no notice of their Judge, who sits before them upon the Bench, observing all their Tricks and Impostures, and holds their Lives in his Hands, being commissioned to discharge or condemn them, according as he finds them innocent or guilty. And yet just thus do those Men act, whose Religion is nothing but a vain Ostentation and Ambition of popular Applause; they skrew their Looks, study their Actions, force their Inclinations, and all, to compose themselves into an outward Seemance of Religion; they imploy a World of Care and Art to disguise themselves, and with the Colours of Sanctity to varnish their unhallowed Natures, they openly deny themselves their dearest Pleasures, and in the View of the World, are many times forced to act against the Grain of their strongest Inclinations; and all this to mask their depraved Tempers, that they may appear what they are not, in the View of the World, and juggle themselves into a Saint-like Reputation; but whilst they are thus industriously courting the good Opinion of their Fellow-Prisoners, their All-seeing Judge, upon whose final Sentence their everlasting Fate depends, is present with them; and tho they take no more notice of him than if he were a Cypher in the World, is perfectly conscious to all their Artifice, and sees thro' all their hypocritical Disguises, and will ere long unmask and expose them to the View and Scorn of all the World. And this considered, what a ridiculous Folly is Hypocrisy, that bides us only from those that have little or nothing to do with us, but leaves us bare

bare and naked to his Eye, with whom we are most concerned. Alas! what a poor Project is it to take so much Pains as we do, to recommend ourselves to Men, to Men that must stand at the same Tribunal, and undergo the same Judgment with ourselves? For what will their good Opinion avail us, if the Judge disapprove us, in whose Hands our Lives and Souls are? If he think well of us, we are safe tho all the World should condemn us, but if he condemn us, tho every Creature should acquit, they cannot rescue us from his Sentence. But alas! how differently soever God and Men may think of us now, yet when he comes to discover his Thoughts of us, in his publick Judgment and Sentence, all the World will be of his Mind; and if we stand right in his Opinion, we shall be applauded by the whole Universe, howsoever we may be villified now; as on the contrary, if he condemn us, we shall be sure to be hissed at thro'out all the Congregation of Spirits, how gloriously soever we may be thought of at present. And by how much the better we are esteemed of now, by so much the more we shall be hissed at then, when the Cheat is discovered, and the hypocritical Vizor is pluckt from our Devils Faces.

This, if Men duly considered, and fixt it in their Minds, would effectually cure them of all their Hypocrisy: For, alas! what Hypocrisy can so cunningly disguise them, as to conceal 'em from Omniscience? If Men will be wicked therefore, they were e'en as good put on a bold Face, and be wicked openly; for 'tis to very little purpose for them to sneak into Corners, unless they could find one dark enough to conceal them from God, and cover them from his All-seeing Eye: For why should that Man be ashamed or afraid to let a Boy or Neighbour be conscious to his Wickedness, that never scruples to commit it in the open View of the dreadful Majesty of Heaven, by whose final Sentence his Everlasting Fate must be decided?

And so, on the other hand, to what purpose should we study to be more dervout and temperate, sober and charitable in the View of the World, than we are in our Retirements, when we have no other Eye but God's upon us? That which we are mainly concerned in, is to approve ourselves to him, and if we can do this, what great matter is it, tho our Closet be all our Stage, and Heaven our only Spectator? God hears the softest Whispers of our Souls, and sees thro' all our honest Intentions, and our most secret Virtues are as legible to his Eye, as if they were written on our Foreheads with a Sun-beam. We need no Trumpet to proclaim our Alms in his Ears, for he knows by whom such a poor Man was relieved, such a starving Family succoured, tho we should not superscribe our Names upon our Charity, nor let our left hand know what our right Hand hath done. And if, by the sincere Discharge of our Duty, we have approved ourselves to God, what need we concern ourselves any farther? since 'tis not from Men, but from God, that we expect the Recompense of our Obedience: No, doubtless, did we but live under the constant Sense of God's Presence with, and Inspection over us, we should regard him much more in every good Action, and the good Opinion of the World much less than we do; and the more secret our good Deeds were the more we should rejoice in them, because they would give us a stronger Testimony of our Simplicity and Sincerity: For what should move us to be good, when God only sees us, but pure Respect to his Authority, and an honest Intention of obeying him? And if Obedience be our Design, the more private our good Deeds are, the more Pleasure they will afford us, because those good Deeds have most of Obedience in them, that have least of the Theatre.

VI. To prosper our Course and Progress in the Christian Warfare, it is also necessary, that we should frequently examine and review our own Actions, for this our Religion enjoins as a necessary Part of the militant Life of a Christian: So 2 Cor. xiii. 5. Examine yourselves whether you be in the Faith, prove your own selves; and particularly, it is enjoined as a proper Preparation to the Sacra-

Sacrament, Let a Man examine himself, and so let him eat, 1 Cor. xi. 28. So also Gal. vi. 4. Let a Man prove, or examine, his own Work; where the Greek Word δοκιμαζέτω, which in all these Texts we render to prove or examine, hath Two Significations. First, To call ourselves to Account, to try our past Actions by the Rule, whether they be good or evil; Secondly, To take such a due Care of our Actions, as that upon a strict Trial of them, we may be able to approve them to God and our own Consciences. In the First of which Senses the New Testament doth most commonly understand it; namely, to call ourselves to Account, and make a strict Survey of our Actions, and pass an impartial Judgment upon them, whether they are good or evil, and accordingly, 1 Cor. xi. 31. instead of δοκιμαζέτω, in Verse 28. i. e. Let a Man examine himself, the Apostle uses, as a Synonymous Phrase, διακρίνομεν, i. e. if we judge ourselves, if we summon our past Actions before the Tribunal of our Consciences, and try and examine them by the Rule, whether they are good or evil, and according as we find them, to approve or condemn ourselves for them.

And this is a Duty of great Necessity to the successful Prosecution of our Christian Warfare: For unless we do frequently reflect upon ourselves, and take a strict Account of our past Actions and Behaviour, we shall incur a thousand Errors and Immoralities in the Hurry of our secular Occasions, without taking any notice of them; and those Sins which we heedlessly commit, and never think of afterwards, tho at first, perhaps, they may have little or no Malice in them, do yet leave a malicious Infusion behind them, and infect the Will with bad Inclinations, and insensibly dispose it to wilful and deliberate Sins: For the Pleasure of one bad Action will be still inviting us to another, and that to a third, and so we shall be inconsiderately tolled on from Sin to Sin in the Course of a heedless and unreflecting Life, till, before ever we are aware, our Inclination to the Sin which we have so heedlessly repeated, becomes too strong for our pious Resolution: For when we have carelessly permitted one Sin to break thro' our Fence, that will open a Gap for another to follow; and if this be not presently stopt by Repentance, 'twill make the Breach yet wider for others, and those again for others, till at last they have quite trod down our good Resolution, and made a Thorow-fare in our Wills for a Custom of sinning: But if we frequently reflect upon, and examine ourselves, 'tis impossible our Faults should long escape our Discovery, and we shall be sure to see them time enough to correct and amend them, before they are too deeply rooted in our Natures, and have wound themselves too far into our Inclinations; and a Wound in our Innocence, as well as our Bodies, may be easily cured if it be taken in time, but if it be neglected too long, it will rankle, by degrees, into an incurable Gangrene.

And as frequent Self-Examination is a great Bridle to our Sin, so it is also an effectual Spur to our Virtue: For as when a Man reflects upon his Sins and Miscarriages, and considers how and where he hath done amiss, his Conscience will be presently urging and exciting him to Repentance and Amendment; so when he reflects upon his own Virtue and Sincerity, his Conscience will smile upon and crown him with Applauses, and give him such a sweet and grateful Relish of his own Actions, as will mightily encourage him to persevere in Well-doing: For in all our Self-Examinations, we taste this Difference between Good and Evil, the Sweetness of that, and the Bitterness of this, and consequently, the oftner we do so, the more we shall be sure to like and approve of the one, and to dislike and nauseate the other.

Wherefore to secure a good Success to this our Christian Warfare, as it is necessary, especially at first, that we should every Morning, before we go into the World, repeat and enforce our good Resolution; so it is no less requisite, especially till we have made some considerable Progress, that we should every Night, when we are withdrawn from the World, strictly examine the Performances of the Day, whether they are such as do comport with our solemn Engagements. And if upon an impartial Survey, it appear that they do, tho as yet it be but weakly and imperfectly, let us attend to the Sense of our own Minds, to that silent Melody that resounds from our Consciences to our Actions, and so lie down in Peace, blessing and adoring that Grace, by which we have been assisted and preserved. Or if it appear that we have been unwarily faulty, for want of due Care and Watchfulness, let us resolve to take more Care for the future, and thereby to put a timely Stop to our Sin, before it hath too far insinuated into our Will and Inclinations; but if we are conscious of any wilful Breach upon our Morning Vows of Obedience, let us lament and bewail it with Shame and Indignation. What have I done, O wretched Traitor that I am, to God and my own Soul! I have falsified my Vows to Heaven, and broke those Sacred Bands, by which I was tied up from my Lusts and my Ruin. What can I plead for myself, base and unworthy that I am? With what Face can I go into his dreadful Presence, whom I have so often mocked with my treacherous Promises of Amendment? Yet, go I will, tho I am all ashamed and confounded, and confess and bewail mine Iniquity before him.

If we would but take care thus to call ourselves to Account every Night, and impartially to censure the Actions of the Day, it is not to be imagined how fast 'twould set us forward in our Christian Warfare; how much the Reflection on a well-spent Day would cheer and enliven us; how the grateful Sense of it would spirit our Faculties, and encourage us to go on against all Oppositions; how much the Review of the Day would contribute to make our Reason more vigilant, and our Consciences more tender for the future; how much the Pleasure of our Sins would be allayed and abated, by the stinging Reflections we should make upon them, and how much the Dread of having the same Reflections repeated to us at Night, would secure us against the Temptations of the Day.

VII. To prosper the Course of our Christian Warfare, it is also necessary that we should be very watchful and circumspect: For this also is one of those militant Duties which the Gospel enjoins us. Thus Mat. xxvi. 41. Watch and pray that ye enter not into Temptation, and Mark xiii. 37. What I say unto you, I say unto all, watch; so also, 1 Cor. xvi. 13. Watch ye, stand fast in the Faith, quit yourselves like Men; and 1 Thess. v. 6. Wherefore let us not sleep, as do others, but let us watch and be sober, where the Nature of the Duty is plainly discovered by its Opposite or Contrary, Let us not sleep, but watch, i. e. do not behave yourselves like Men that are asleep, that take no Notice or Regard of what is done by, to, or about them; but be sure you exercise a faithful, prudent, and constant Care over your own Actions, and those manifold Temptations that assault and surround you. And therefore elsewhere 'tis express'd by walking circumspectly, Eph. v. 15. i. e. looking round about you, weighing the Nature and Circumstances of your Actions, and using all honest Care, either to prevent the Temptations that threaten you, or to provide against them; so that in short, the Sense of this Duty is this, that we carefully avoid acting rashly and precipitantly, without considering before-hand the Nature of our Action, whether it be good or evil; that in all doubtful and suspicious Cases, we impartially consult our Rule and Conscience, and look before we leap, and take care to satisfy ourselves of the Goodness of our Designs, before we put them into Execution; in a Word, that we do not carelessly run ourselves into Temptations, but, if possible, to avoid them; if not, to be sure to arm ourselves against them, and keep as far off from all Sin, especially from that we are most inclined to, as is consistent with our necessary Occasions; or, in fewer Words, 'tis to be always well-advised in what we do, whether it be good or evil; and if it be evil, to remove, so far as we can, from all Occasions that lead to it, and provide ourselves with Considerations against it, and to keep them always awake in our Minds, that we may not be surprized by it unawares;

Which is a Duty indispensably necessary for us in the whole Course of our Christian Warfare: For whilst we accustom ourselves to act rashly and inconsiderately, without bethinking before-hand what we say or do, we wander like blind Men in a Field, that is full of Pits and Quagmires, and are every moment in danger of stumbling into one Mischief or other, and shall certainly plunge ourselves in many an evil Custom, before ever we have bethought ourselves of the Evil of it; and so instead of conquering our old Sins, we shall be ever and anon running ourselves into new ones; and while we are running away from one evil, shall many times stumble into another, and to avoid the Defects of Virtue, leap headlong into the Excesses of it: For in most moral Actions, the Transition from the utmost of what is lawful, into the nearest of what is sinful is indiscernable; and that Line which parts this Virtue from that neighbouring Vice, is generally so small, that 'tis hard to distinguish where they are separated, and to fix the just Boundary, whitherto we may go, and no farther: But then considering that almost every Virtue lies in the middle between Two sinful Extremes, neither of which are separated from it by any plain or visible Land-mark; how is it possible for us, without great Care of our Steps, to keep on steadfastly in the right Path, when there are so many wrong ones bordering upon it? For when we perceive we have wandered too far towards either Extreme, and are endeavouring to retrieve ourselves, if we do not take great Care of our Steps, we shall be apt to wander as far the other way, and so stumble out of one extreme into another: For he who lives heedlessly and incuriously, regards not how near he approaches to any Sin, provided he doth but keep himself out of it; and when once a Man takes the Liberty to go as near to any Sin, as he thinks he lawfully may, it is a thousand to one but he will be transported by his Inclination a great deal farther than he should. So true is that of Clem. Alex. Pædag. lib. 2. c. 1. Ταχὺ γὰρ καὶ ἀπαίτητον ἐστὶ τὸ δεῦν τὸ μὴ ἐξόν, διὰ πάντα δεόντες αὖ ἐξόν, i. e. They who will do all things that are lawful, will quickly be induced to do what is unlawful; especially if they be strongly inclined to it; because the very Nearness of what a Man loves, doth always render it more tempting and alluring to him. Thus he that hath a strong Inclination to Lying, can never be safe, so long as he allows himself to be excessive talkative; he that is vehemently propense to fleshy Lust, must needs endanger his Innocence if he come too near the farthest Limits of a modest Freedom; and he whose Nature is prone to Malice and Revenge, cannot but run a mighty Hazard, if he indulge to himself the utmost Degree of a just and lawful Resentment: For bad Inclinations are never so impatient of Restraint, as when they are within Prospect of their proper Satisfactions, and the Objects which attract them are near and easy to be enjoyed. Upon which Account it must needs be a very dangerous Thing for such as are engaged in the Christian Warfare, to live within Sight of the Temptations they are most inclined to; because the nearer they are to them, the more they will court and importune them; and while a Man comes near a beloved Lust, and doth not enjoy it, he doth but tantalize himself, and enrage his Appetite after those vicious Satisfactions, whose alluring Relishes he had almost forgotten. If therefore he would obtain a perfect Victory over his Lust, he must not only forbear to act, but also to approach it; at least, till he hath so far weaned his Inclination from it, as that its Nearness ceases to be a Temptation to him: For Inclination, like all other Motion, is always swiftest when it is nearest its Centre, and when once 'tis within the Reach and Attraction of it, it hurries towards it with Fury and Impatience; and if in this its violent Rage, it happen to break out to its beloved Sin, and to taste the forbidden Pleasure of it, 'twill thereby immediately recover all its impaired Strength, and become as headstrong and outrageous as ever; and so all that Ground which we get in a Month's Abstinence from our Sin, we shall lose in a Moment's Enjoyment of it. Upon this Account therefore it highly concerns us, if we would succeed in our Christian Warfare, fare, to be very watchful and circumspect, to look well to our Steps, and not approach too near to any Sin, but especially to any that we are strongly inclined to.

VIII. To give us good Success in this our Christian Warfare, it is also necessary that we be diligent and industrious in our particular Callings. This is one of those Instrumental Duties which our Religion prescribes thro'out the whole Course and Progress of our Christian Warfare. Thus 1 Thess. iv. 10, 11. We beseech you, Brethren, that you increase more and more, and that ye study to be quiet, and to do your own Business, and work with your own Hands, as we commanded ye; and this, 2 Thess. iii. 10. he backs with another, that if any would not work, they should not eat, i. e. That they should not be maintained in their Sloth and Idleness; and, like Drones, be permitted to dwell at Ease in the Hive, and devour the Labours of the more industrious Bees; and this, ver. 11. he calls walking disorderly; and ver. 8 and 9, he tells us, that 'twas for this Cause that he rather chose to work with his own Hands for his Livelihood, than to be maintained by them, as he might justly have demanded; that he might make himself an Example of Diligence for them to follow. So also, Eph. iv. 28. Let him that stole steal no more, but rather let him labour, working with his Hands the Thing which is good, i. e. employing himself in some honest Calling, that he may have to give to him that needs; the Sense of all which is to oblige us to engage ourselves in some honest Calling or Employment, and to be diligent and industrious in it.

And how necessary this is to secure us in the whole Course and Progress of our Religion, appears from hence, that we are naturally a sort of very active Beings, that must be employed one way or other; that we have a Mind within us, that will be always in Motion; that being a Spiritual Subsistence, and as such, of a quite different Nature from dull and sluggish Matter, will never admit of Rest and Inactivity; that derives all its Pleasures from Action, and hath nothing to live upon but the grateful Relish of its own Motions. And this being the State of that active Principle within us, that constitutes us Men, we had need take great Care to keep it honestly busied and employed: For it being naturally such an exceeding busy Thing, 'twill be sure to find something or other to work upon; and if it be not constantly employed about honest and lawful Things, 'twill quickly divert the current of its Motion another way, and exert its Activity upon dishonest and unlawful ones. And hence it is, that, since the Apostasy of human Nature, God hath placed the Generality of Men in such Circumstances, wherein some honest Calling, and their Diligence and Industry therein, is indispensably necessary to their comfortable Subsistence: For he wisely considered, that such was the Indisposition of our degenerate Natures, to the Divine and Spiritual Exercises of Religion, that 'twould be impossible for us, in this imperfect State, to keep our Minds always intent upon them, to fix our Thoughts continually upon him, and exert our Powers without any Pause or Interruption, in perpetual Acts of Love, Adoration and Imitation of him; that there is such a Repugnance in our Tempers to these blessed Operations, that, if we had nothing else to do, they would soon grow irksome and intolerable to us; and therefore, lest being quite tired out with these Spiritual Acts of Religion, we should bate them, and so turn the Current of our Activity into the contrary Channel; he hath placed us in such Circumstances, wherein we have frequent Opportunities to rest our wearied Minds from these abstracted Exercises in such innocent Employments, as are necessary to our comfortable Subsistence in this World: So that by putting us under the Necessity of employing ourselves in secular Trades and Callings, he hath taken care to intercept our Minds, that they may not fly off from the pure Acts of Religion into the contrary Impieties; and that when they are not divinely, they may be innocently employed; and by diverting our Activity with honest, when it is weary of Spiritual Exercise, he hath taken a wise Course to confine and bound it, and leave it less Scope and Liberty to rove and make Incurfions into finful and prohibited Actions. And therefore, as Aristotle commends Archytus for his Invention of Rattles, because Children, by playing with them, are kept from breaking Veffels of ufe; fo ought we to admire the Wifdom and Goodnefs of God, for thus neceffitating us to exert our Activity in fecular Arts and Trades, because by thus innocently imploing our corrupt and busy Natures, he hath taken an admirable Courfe to divert us from mifchievous Actions.

And he having thus obliged us, by our Neceffities, to follow fome honest Calling for a comfortable Livelihood, he expects that we fhould be diligent and industrious in that particular Calling wherein his Providence hath placed us: For otherwife he lofes his End; which was to reftain us from being finfully active, by neceffitating us to be innocently fo. And now that by putting us into thofe Neceffities, by which we are put upon furnifhing one another with thofe feveral Conveniences of Life, for the Supply of which our refpective Trades and Callings are intended, we, by being diligent therein, approve ourfelves faithful Servants in the great Family of God, and by industrioufly difcharging thofe particular Offices wherein he hath placed us, we act as dutiful Minifters of his Providence towards one another: Because by fo doing, we fupply thofe Wants and Neceffities which God hath made, and which he hath made to be fupplied by our Office and Miniftries; fo that now to mind our own Bufinefs, is a Part of our Religion, and 'tis that particular Part to which God's Providence hath called us. If therefore we are idle and neglective in this, we are undutiful Servants to the common Mafter of the World, how officious foever we may be in other Matters: For this is the proper Work of our Office, and therefore if we are unfaithful in this, we can be faithful in nothing. Should the Bailiff of a Family neglect letting his Mafter's Lands, and gathering in his Rents, he would be thought a bad Servant, how diligent foever he might be in the Kitchin or the Stables; and fo if we are remifs in our particular Offices and Employments, we are bad Servants to God, how fedulous foever we may be, either in the Offices of other Men, or in the common Services which we all owe him; and he that neglects his own Calling to ferve God in his Clofet, or in the Church, is like an unfaithful Steward, that neglects providing for the Family, to drefs the Garden, and water the Flowers.

'Tis true, as we ought not to devote to the common Service of God, that Time and Attendance, which, by the Rules of Prudence and good Husbandry, are appropriated to our particular Callings; fo neither ought we to permit our particular Calling fo to ingross our Time and Attendance, as to leave none for our Prayers and thofe common Services, whether private or publick, which, as Creatures and Christians, we are obliged to render to our Creator: For as he, that to serve God neglects his Calling, is a religious Truant; fo he that to attend his Calling neglects to ferve God, is a profane Drudge: But for a truly pious and industrious Man, it is not at all difficult fo to keep his Bufinefs and his Religion apart, as that they may not interfere with one another; and faithfully to difcharge whatfoever his Calling exacts of him, and yet leave void Spaces enough in his Time to do all that his Religion requires.

Neither are we obliged to be fo industrious in our Calling as to deny ourfelves any moderate Refreshments or Recreations, which are not only ufeful, but fometimes neceffary to breathe our Spirits after they have been almoft ftifled in a Croud of Bufinefs, and divert our wearied Thoughts, which like the ftrings of a Lute, by being slackened now and then, will found the fweeter when they are wound up again. But then we ought to take care that we do not turn our Phyſick into Food, and make that our Bufinefs which fhould be only our Diverſion; that our Recreations be ſhort, and apt to refresh, but not to ſteal away our Minds from feever Employments. For long Sports and Recreations are like a large Entry to a little Houſe, they take up fo much Room in the narrow Compafs of our Time, that there is not Space enough left in it for the more useful Apartments; and so far as our Sports do exceed the Measures of necessary and convenient Recreation, they are unwarrantable Encroachments upon our Calling and Religion, 'Tis true, as for the Measures of Convenience, they are not alike to all; for, as for those whose large Fortunes have placed them beyond the Necessities of the World, they may conveniently allow themselves larger Portions of Recreation than those of meaner Circumstances, who having not yet made a competent provision for their Families, are obliged in Justice to a more constant Industry, lest they fall under St. Paul's Censure of being worse than Infidels. But how plentiful soever our outward Condition may be, it will by no means warrant us either to live idly, or to make our Recreations our continual Employments; but the more Leisure we have from secular Business, the greater Portions of our Time we ought to consecrate to Religion, and since our Bodies and our Families are so liberally provided for, to be so much the more industrious in supplying the Necessities of our Souls, that so these may not be the only miserable Things about us. But then our Natures being so depraved, as that they cannot dwell long on the severe Exercises of Religion, and yet so active, as that, if in the Intervals of our Religion they be not innocently employed, they will be apt to run into Mischief, 'tis in our own Defence necessary, how prosperous soever our outward Condition may be, that we should find out some honest Business or other to keep our Activity regularly exercised. And this will be no hard matter for us to do, considering how many generous, liberal, and ingenious Employments there are fit for Persons of the highest Rank and Condition. They may dedicate such Portions of their Time to the useful Studies of Philosophy or History, or of the Laws and Customs of their own Country; and such, to the Inspection of their own Estates, or to overlook and govern their Families; and such, to examine the Complaints of their Tenants, or the Necessities of their Neighbours, or to reconcile Differences, or conciliate Love and good Neighbourhood among those that are near or under them; in these, and such like Employments, they may innocently exercise their active Minds, and thereby not only divert themselves from sinful Courses, but also render themselves very useful to the World.
for

But whatsoever our Condition in the World may be, it must doubtless be of very dangerous Consequence to our Religion, not to be innocently and usefully employed. For as the wise Cato hath observed, Nihil agendo male agere discas, i. e. by accustoming yourself to do nothing, you will most certainly learn to do ill. For your busy Mind, like Nature, will admit of no vacuum, but must be always full of one thing or other; and it can no sooner dismiss its pious or honest Thoughts, but vicious and unlawful ones will be swarming about it. For religious, lawful, and sinful Objects, are the only Companions our Minds have to converse with, and therefore since they must and will be conversing with one thing or other, we ought to take great care, that as soon as ever they have done entertaining religious Objects, they be presently supplied and presented with lawful ones, with some honest Business or innocent Diversion; that so we may not be at leisure to attend to those sinful Objects; which, in the others Absence, will be perpetually crowding and thrusting themselves upon us. For when we are neither honestly nor religiously employed, we shall be perfectly at leisure to attend to any Invitation to Sin; and since we must still be doing one thing or other, our having nothing else to do, will be a strong inducement to do that which is evil, and to spend our restless Activity in some irregular Course or other, accordingly as we are tempted and inclined. If we are of a busy and pragmatical Temper, our Leisure will presently invite us to be intermeddling with other Folks Business, to be tampering with State Affairs, and casting new Models of Government, and censuring the Wisdom of those publick Administrations of which we do not understand the Reasons; if we are of a froward, peevish, and untractable Temper, we shall be apt, when we have nothing else to do, to be venting our our Activity in factious and turbulent Zeal, in sedition Pratings and Conspiracies, in backbiting our Adversaries, and fetching and carrying scandalous Reports to create Jealousies and Animosities between Neighbour and Neighbour. In a word, if we are of a sanguine and joyful Disposition, our idle Hours will be so many tempting Opportunities to Intemperance and Wantonness, Profaneness and Scurrility, and all the other Wickednesses of a lewd and dissolute Conversation. If therefore we mean to be secured from sinful Actions, we must allow ourselves no leisure from religious or honest ones, which for the above-named Reason, we shall find utterly unpracticable, if we be not diligent and industrious in some honest Calling.

But whilst Mens Minds are honestly imployed, they will not be at leisure to listen to Temptation; and 'twill be difficult for any of those Inducements to Sin, which the Devil and outward Objects do perpetually suggest to us, to obtain Admittance to speake with our Thoughts, whilst they are thus taken up with wiser and better Company. But as soon as we dismiss these, we do in effect beckon Temptations to ourselves, and invite the Devil and the World to invite us to be wicked. For, as we say, Opportunity makes the Thief, i. e. it tempts him to steal; so when we give the Devil the Opportunity of an idle Hour, we do thereby tempt him to tempt us, and importunately invite him to steal away the Treasure of our Innocence, by putting the Key of it into his hand, and giving him a free Access to it. And tho we should be firmly resolved not to sin, yet 'tis impossible we should be safe so long as we are at leisure to be tempted; because while we are at leisure we shall be very often disputing and holding Arguments with the Tempter, who by his Quirks and Sophistries, will many Times circumvent such Novices as we, before we are aware. But when we are not only resolved against him, but are also so imployed as that we are not at leisure to attend to him, it is past his Skill to fasten any Temptation upon us. Wherefore if we would be secure in the Course of our Christian Warfare, we must follow St. Jerom's Counsel to his Friend Rusticus, Semper boni aliquid operis facito, ut Diabolus te semper inveniat occupatum; be always doing one good Work or other, that so the Devil may always find thee busy.

IX. To our Course and Progress in the Christian Warfare, it is also necessary that we should endeavour, so far as in us lies, to keep up a constant Cheerfulness of Spirit in our Religion. It is doubtless a great Disgrace to our Religion to imagine (as too many superstitious Christians do) that it is an Enemy to Mirth and Cheerfulness, and a severe Exactor of pensive Looks and solemn Faces; that Men are never serious enough till they are moped into Statues, and cloistered from all Society, but that of their own melancholy Thoughts: That 'tis a Gospel-Duty to whine or to be silent, and retire themselves from the most innocent Pleasures and Festivities of Conversation; and, in a word, that all kind of Mirth and facetious Humour is to be rank'd among those Idle words which our Saviour tells us, shall be brought to Judgment. As if Religion were a Caput mortuum, a heavy, stark, insipid thing, that had neither Heat, nor Life, nor Motion in it; or were intended for a Medusa's Head to transform Men into Monuments of Stone. By which false Conceptions of it, they render it much more burdensome than it is in its own Nature. For to make Religion forbid us any thing that is human and natural, is to render it a real Grievance unto human Nature; 'tis to make our Duty run a tilt at the Principles of our Being, and set our Conscience and our Nature at Variance with one another. And therefore, since to be risible and sociable, is as natural to us as to be reasonable, to make our Religion an Enemy to our Mirth and Conversation, is to represent it as a tyrannical Invader of the essential Liberties and Properties of human Nature. 'Tis true, indeed, tho it denies us not the freedom of an innocent Humour, nor disallows those little Plaisances and inoffensive Railleries of Fancy which are sometimes requisite to sauce our Conversation, and give it a quicker Relish; yet hath it taken care to bound our Merriments with the necessary Precepts of Sobriety and Gravity; that so by too much whiffling up and down in the little Levities of Fancy, our Minds may not grow vain, and light, and trifling, and be thereby indisposed to serious Thoughts and Reflections: But so long as we keep within the Bounds of Sobriety, and do not fall out into malicious or scurrilous or profane Jestings, our Religion doth not only connive at our Mirth, but commend and approve it: and so remote is it from cramping those Strings and Sinews of the Mind, Chearfulness and Action, that it recollects their scatter'd Vigor, and winds up their Slackness to a true Harmony.

For it requires that our speech should be alway with grace, Col. iv. 6. i. e. as some Expositors understand the Phrase, that it should not be whining and melancholy, but sprightly and cheerful; it bids us rejoice evermore, 1 Thes. v. 16. and rejoice in the Lord alway, and again rejoice, Phil. iv. 4. that is, To endeavour to be cheerful in all Conditions, and to bear all Events with a serene and lightsome Mind. And therefore the Apostle reckons this among the blessed Fruits and Effects of that Divine Spirit which accompanies and animates Christianity, viz. Joy, or Chearfulness, Gal. v. 22. and this is one of the Particulars in which the same Apostle makes the Christian Laws to consist, as they stand opposed to the Ritual Laws of the Jews; the Kingdom of Heaven, i. e. The Laws of the Christian Church, is not meat and drink, i. e. Consists not of Injunctions or Prohibitions of Things that are of a Ritual or Indifferent Nature; but Righteousness, and Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghost, Rom. xiv. 17. which Three Particulars being opposed to Things that are unnecessary must, by the Law of Oppositions, denote Things that are necessary; and therefore as by Righteousness and Peace, must be meant Justice and Peaceableness, so by Joy in the Holy Ghost, must be meant Chearfulness and Alacrity in doing the Will of God; because Joy can be in no other Sense Matter of Necessary Duty. By all which it is evident, That Chearfulness of Temper is so far from being discountenanced by our Religion, that 'tis required and injoyned by it, so far as 'tis in our Power and Choice. And indeed it highly becomes us, who serve so good a Master, to be free and cheerful, and thereby to express a grateful Sense of his Goodness, and of those glorious Rewards, which we expect from his inexhaustible Bounty; but as for a gloomy Look and dejected Countenance, it better becomes a Gally-Slave than a Servant of God. And as Chearfulness is a Duty that very well becomes our State, so it is highly necessary to support and carry us on in our Christian Warfare.

For Chearfulness is Nature's best Friend; it removes its Oppressions, enlivens its Faculties, and keeps its Spirits in a brisk, and regular Motion, and hereby renders it easy to itself, and useful and serviceable to God and Man. It dispels Clouds from the Mind, and Fears from the Heart, and kindles and cherishes in us brave and generous Affections, and composes our Natures into such a regular Temper, as is of all others the most fit to receive religious Impressions, and the Breathings of the Spirit of God. For what the Jews do observe of the Spirit of Prophecy, is as true of the Spirit of Holiness; that it dwells not with Sadness, but with Chearfulness; that being itself of a calm and gentle Nature, it loves not to reside with black and melancholy Passions, but requires a composed and serene Temper to act upon. And hence Tertul. in his de Spectac. Deus præcepit Spiritum Sanctum, utpote pro Naturæ suæ bono tenerum & delicatum, Tranquillitate & Lenitate & Quiete & Pace tractare; non Furore, non Bile, non Ira, non Dolore inquietare: i. e. God hath commanded that the Holy Spirit, who is of a tender and delicate Nature, should be entertained by us with Tranquillity and Mildness, with Quietness and Peace, and that we should take care not to disturb him with Fury and Choler, or with Anger and Grief. And indeed Melancholy naturally infects the Holy Spirit, and disturbs him in all his Operations; it overwhelms the Fancy with black Recks and Vapours, and thereby clouds and darkens the Understanding, and interrupts the Holy Spirit's Illuminations; and, like red coloured Glais before the eye, causes the most lovely and attractive Objects to look bloody and terrible. It distracts the Thoughts, and renders them wild, roving and incoherent; and thereby utterly indisposes them to Prayer and Consideration, and renders them deaf and unattentive to all good Motions and Inspirations. It freezes up the Heart with despairing Fears and Despondencies, and represents easy Things as difficult to us, and difficult as impossible, and thereby discourages us from all those virtuous Attempts, to which the blessed Spirit doth so importunately excite and provoke us. In a word, it naturally benumbs and stupifies the Soul, obstructs its Motions, and makes it listless and unactive, and so, by indisposing it to cooperate with the Holy Spirit, renders it an incapable Subject of his Divine Grace and Influence. Thus Melancholy, you see, by its fullen and malevolent Aspects, doth obstinately resist and counter-influence the Holy Spirit, without whose Aid and assistance we can never hope to prosper in our Spiritual Warfare.

Wherefore, if we mean to succeed in this great Affair, it concerns us to use all honest and innocent Means to dispel this black and mischievous Humour, and to beget and maintain in our Minds a constant Serenity and Chearfulness of Temper; and whenever our Spirits begin to droop and languish, to betake ourselves to such natural Remedies, such harmless Diversions, Refreshments and Recreations, as are fit and proper to raise them up again; and not to suffer them to sink into a Bog of melancholy Humours, whilst 'tis in our Power by any honest Art or Invention to support them. Which, if we can but effect, will be of vast advantage to us in the whole Course of our Religion. For in an even Chearfulness of Temper, our Spirits will be always lively, strong, and active, and fit for the best and noblest Operations; they will give Light to our Understandings, Courage to our Hearts, and Wings to our Affections; so that we shall be able more clearly to discern Divine and Heavenly Things, more resolutely to practise, and more vehemently to aspire after them; and our Considerations will be more fixt, our Devotions more intent, and all our spiritual Endeavours more active and vivacious. For a cheerful Temper will represent every thing cheerfully to us; 'twill represent God so lovely, Religion so attractive, the Rewards of it so immense, and the Difficulties of it so inconsiderable, and thereby inspire us with so much Life and Courage, as that none of all those spiritual Enemies, we war and contend against, will be able to withstand our Resolution.

X. To our Course and Progress in this our Spiritual Warfare, it is also necessary that we maintain in our Minds a constant Sense and Expectation of Heaven; that since Things of the other World are future and invisible, and consequently less apt to touch and affect us than these worldly things which are continually pressing upon our Senses, we should, as oft as we have Opportunity, withdraw our Thoughts from these sensible Objects, and retire into the immaterial World, and there entertain ourselves with the close View and Contemplation of the Joys and Glories it abounds with. For we are a sort of Beings, that being compounded of Flesh and Spirit, are by these opposite Principles of our Nature ally'd to Two opposite Worlds, and placed in the middle between Heaven and Earth, as the common Centre wherein those distant Regions meet. By our spiritual Nature we hold Communion with the spiritual World, and by our corporeal with this earthly and sensible one; whose Objects being always present with us, and striking as they do immediately upon our Senses, we lie much more bare and open to them, than to those of the Spiritual World. So that, unless we now and then withdraw ourselves from these sensible Things, which hang like the Cloud between, we can never have a free Prospect into that clear Heaven above them. And hence it becomes necessary that we should now and then make a solemn Retirement of our Thoughts from earthly Objects and Enjoyments, that so we may approach near enough to Heaven, to touch and feel the Joy and Pleasures of it, which, while we transiently behold in this Crowd of Worldly Objects, is placed at such a distance from us, that it looks like a thin, blue Landskip, next to nothing; and hath not apparent Reality enough in it to raise our Desires and Expectations.
such

And hence we are commanded to set our Affections upon, or as it is in the Original, to mind those Things that are above, Col. iii. 2. and that by these Things above, he means the Enjoyments of Heaven, it's plain from ver. 1. where he expressly tells us, that by the above, in which these Things are, he means Heaven, where Christ sits at the right Hand of God. So that the Sense of the Precept is this, that we should fix in our Minds such lively Representations of the Glory and Reality of the Celestial State, as may raise in our Hearts a longing Desire and earnest Expectation of being made Partakers of it. * Which Hope and Expectation he elsewhere enjoins us to put on for an Helmet, i. e. for a necessary piece of defensive Armour, against the Difficulties and Discouragements of our Christian Warfare, 1 Thes. v. 8. and Heb. vi. 19. This hope which enters into that within the veil, i. e. into Heaven, is said to be the Anchor of the Soul both sure and stedfast, i. e. 'Tis that which stays and secures the Soul in the midst of those many Storms of Temptation it meets withal in its Voyage to Heaven; and it being so, we are bid to look to, and imitate our Blessed Lord, who for the joy that was set before him endured the Cross, despising the Shame, and is now sat down at the right Hand of God, Heb. xii. 2. The meaning of all which is, that we should earnestly endeavour to fix in our Minds a vigorous Sense and Expectation of that immortal Happiness with which God hath promised to crown all that come off Conquerors from this Spiritual Warfare; that all along as we march we should keep Heaven in our Eye, and encourage ourselves with the Hope of it to charge thro' all those Difficulties and Temptations, that oppose us in the way; in a word, that we should frequently awaken in our Minds the glorious Thoughts of a blessed Immortality, and possess ourselves with a lively Expectation of enjoying it, if we hold out to the End.

Which is a Duty of a vast Consequence to us in the Course of our Spiritual Warfare. For Heaven being the End and Reward of our Warfare, must needs be the grand Encouragement thereunto; and consequently if once we lose Sight of Heaven, and suffer earthly Things to Interpose and Eclipse the Glory and Reality of it, our Courage will never be able to bear up against those manifold Temptations that do continually assault us. But whilst we continue under a lively Sense of that blessed Recompense of Reward, that will so spirit and invigorate our Resolution, that nothing will be able to withstand it; and all the Terrors and Allurements that Sin can propose, will be forced to fly before it, and to retreat like so many impotent Waves, that dash against a Rock of Adamant. For while we are under a lively Sense and Expectance of the Happiness above, we live as it were in the Mid-way between Heaven and Earth, where we have an open Prospect of the Glories of both, and do plainly see how faint and dim these below are in comparison with those above; how they are forced to sneak and disappear in the Presence of those eternal Splendors, and to shrowd their vanquish'd Beauties, as the Stars do when the Sun appears. And whilst we interchangeably turn our Eyes from one to t'other how fruitlessly do the Pleasures, Profits and Honours below, importune us to abandon the Joys and Glories above, and with what Indignation do we listen to the Proposals of such a senseless and ridiculous Exchange? And could we but always keep ourselves at this stand, we should be so fortified with the Sight of those happy Regions above, that no Temptation from below would ever be able to approach us; and the Sense that we are going on to that blessed State would carry us thro' all the weary Stages of our Duty, with an indefatigable Vigour. For what may a Man not do with Heaven in his Eye, with that potent, I had almost said omnipotent, Encouragement before him? To pull out a right Eye, to cut off a right Hand, to tear a darling Lust from from his Heart, even when 'tis wrapt about it, and twisted with its Strings, what an easy Atchievement is it to a Man that hath a Heaven of immortal Glories in his View? The Hope of which is enough to recommend even Racks and Torments, and turn the Flames of Martyrdom into a Bed of Roses. For 'twas this blessed Prospect that enabled the good old Martyrs to triumph so gloriously as they did in the midst of their Sufferings; they knew that a few Moments would put an End to their Miseries, and that when once they had weather'd those short Storms, they should arrive at a most blessed Harbour, and be crowned at their Landing; and that from thence they should look back with infinite Joy and Delight upon the dangerous Sea they had escaped, and for ever bless those Storms and Winds that drove them to that happy Port; for as the Author to the Hebrews tells us, they sought a heavenly Country, Heb. xi. 14, 16.

XI. And Lastly, To the successful Progress of our Christian Warfare, it is also necessary that we should live in the frequent Use of the Publick Ordinances and Institutions of our Religion; namely, in the religious Observation of the Lord's Day, and in frequent Communion with one another in the Holy Sacrament, both which are of great Use to us in the Course and Progress of our spiritual Warfare. For as for the Lord's Day, it is instituted, and ever since the Apostle's Time hath been observed in the Christian Church, as a Day of Publick Worship and Weekly Thanksgiving for our Saviour's Resurrection, in which the great Work of our Redemption was consummated. And certainly it must needs be of vast Advantage to be one Day in seven sequestred from the World, and imployed in divine Offices, in solemn Prayers, Praises, and Thanksgivings, and to be obliged to assist and edify one another by the mutual Example and Union of our Devotions; to hear the Duties of our Religion explained, the Sins against it reprehended, and the Doctrines of it unfolded and reduced to plain and easy Principles of Practice; what a mighty advantage might we reap from all these blessed Ministries, if we would but attend to them with that Concern and Seriousness which the matter of them requires and deserves? Especially, if when the Publick Offices are over, we would not let loose ourselves all the rest of the Day, as we too frequently do, to our secular Cares and Diversions, and thereby choak those good Instructions we have heard, and stifle those devout and pious Affections which have been raised and excited in us; but instead of so doing, we would devote at least some good Portion of it to the Instruction of our Families, and to the private Exercise of our Religion, to Meditation and Prayer, to the Examination of ourselves concerning our past Behaviour, and the re-inforcing our Resolution to behave ourselves better for the future; if, I say, we would thus spend our Lord's Day, we should doubtless find ourselves better Men for it all the Week after; we should go into the World again with much better Affections, and stronger Resolutions, with our Graces more vigorous, and our bad Inclinations more reduced and tamed: and whereas the Jews were to gather Manna enough on their sixth Day, to feed their Bodies on the ensuing Sabbath, we should gather Manna enough upon our Sabbath, to feed and strengthen our Souls all the six Days after.

But to this we must also add frequent Communions with one another in the Holy Sacrament, which is an Ordinance instituted on purpose by our blessed Saviour, for the improving and furthering us in our Christian Warfare. For besides that herein we have one of the most puissant Arguments against Sin represented by visible Signs to our Sense, viz. The bloody Sacrifice of our blessed Lord to expiate and make Atonement for it; besides that those bleeding Wounds of his which are here represented by the breaking of the Bread, and pouring out of the Wine, do proclaim our Sins his Assassins and Murderers, the thought of which, if we had any ingenuity in us, were enough to incense in us the most implacable Indignation against them; besides that, his Sufferings ings for our Sins, of which this sacred Solemnity is a lively Picture, do horribly remonstrate God's Displeasure against them, who would not be induced to pardon them upon any meaner Expiation than the Blood of his Son, than which Hell itself is not a more dreadful Argument to scare and terrify us from them; in a word, besides that, his so freely submitting and offering up himself to be a Propitiation for us, of which this Holy Festival is a solemn Commemoration, is an Expression of Kindness sufficient to captivate the most ungrateful Souls, and extort Obedience from them; besides all this, I say, as it is a Feast upon the Sacrifice of his Body and Blood, it is a Federal Rite, whereby God and we, by feasting together, do, according to the antient Customs both of Jews and Heathens mutually oblige ourselves to one another; whereby God, by giving us the mystical Bread and Wine, and we by receiving them, do mutually engage ourselves to one another upon those sacred Pledges of Christ's Body and Blood, that we will faithfully perform each other's Part of that everlasting Covenant which was purchased by him. And what can be a greater Restraint to us when we are solicited to any Sin, than the sense of being under such a dreadful Vow and Obligation? With what face dare we listen to any Temptation to Evil, when we remember how lately we solemnly engaged ourselves to the contrary, and took the Sacrament upon it? And verily I doubt 'tis this that lies at the bottom of that seeming modest pretence of Unworthiness, which Men are wont to urge in Excuse for their Neglect of the Sacrament; namely, That they love their Lusts, and cannot resolve to part with them, and therefore are afraid to make such a solemn Abjuration of them, as the eating and drinking the Consecrated Elements implies. And I confess, if this be their Reason, they are unworthy indeed, the more shame for them; but 'tis such an Unworthiness as is so far from excusing, that it only aggravates their neglect. For, for any Man to plead that he dares not receive the Sacrament, because he is resolved to sin on, is to make that which is his Fault, his Apology, and to excuse one Sin with another. Wherefore if we are heartily resolved by the Grace of God to reform and amend, let us abstain no longer from this great Federal Rite, upon Pretence of Unworthiness. For 'tis by the use of this, among other Means, that we are to improve and grow more and more worthy. For the very Repetition of our Resolution, as I have shewed above, is a proper Means of strengthening and confirming it; and certainly it must needs be much more so, when 'tis renewed and repeated with the Solemnity of a Sacrament. And therefore it is worth observing, how much Care our Lord hath taken in the very Constitution of our Religion, to oblige us to a constant, solemn Repetition of our good Resolutions. For at our first entrance into Covenant with him, we are to be baptized, in which Solemnity we do openly renounce the Devil and all his Works, and religiously devote ourselves to his Service. But because we are apt to forget this our Baptifinal Vow, and the Matter of it is continually to be performed, and more than one World depends upon it, therefore he hath thought fit not to trust wholly to this first Engagement, but hath so methodized our Religion, as that we are ever and anon obliged to give him new Security. For which End, he hath instituted this other Sacrament, which is not like that of Baptism, to be received by us once for all, but to be often reiterated and repeated, that so upon the frequent Returns of it, we might still be obliged to repeat over our old Vows of Obedience. For he hath not only enjoined us that we should do this in remembrance of him, Luke xxii. 19. i. e. That we should celebrate this sacred Festival in the Memory of his Passion; but by thus doing the Apostle tells us, we are to continue the Memorial of it to the end of the World, or to show his Death till he comes, 1 Cor. xi. 26. And that this doth not, like the Precept of Baptism, oblige us for once only and no more, is evident from the foregoing Words of this last received Text, as often as ye eat this Bread and drink this Cup, which plainly shews, that these Sacramental Elements are to be more than once received by us. 'Tis true, how often 'tis to be done neither Christ nor his Apostles have any where defined, but if we consult Primitive Example (which in the Absence of express Precept is the best Rule to determine ourselves by) we shall find that it was very frequently received. For from some Passages in the Acts of the Apostles, it seems probable that Christians did then communicate every Day, as particularly Acts ii. 46. where they are said to continue Daily with one accord in the Temple, and breaking Bread, καὶ ἄριστον, in the House, that is, as it seems probable, in some upper Room of the Temple; tho' perhaps this Daily may refer only to the Lord's Day, agreeably to that, Acts xx. 7. On the first Day of the Week when the Disciples came together to break Bread, Paul preached unto them. But it's certain that whensoever they assembled to the Publick Worship, they closed it with the Lord's Supper; which they did for a great while in the Western Churches every Day in the Week, and in the Eastern as St. Basil tells us, Epist. 289. four times a Week, besides Festivals. So that allowing for our Declensions from the Primitive Zeal and Devotion, one would think that to communicate now once in four Weeks should be a very moderate Proportion. But as for those that wholly neglect this sacred Institution, for my own part I see not how they can excuse themselves from being guilty of a wilful Rebellion against their Saviour; or with what Confidence they can expect either that he should assist them with his Grace on the Way, or crown them with his Salvation in the End, when they so perversely turn their backs upon an Ordinance which he hath solemnly instituted for a Conveyance of the one, and a Seal of the other.

But would we take that Care that becomes us, to prepare ourselves for, and frequent this holy Institution, there is no doubt but we should find it of mighty Advantage to us in the whole Course of our Religion. For till we are arrived to a confirmed State of Good, our holy Fervours will be very apt to cool, our good Purposes to slacken and unwind, and our virtuous Endeavours to languish and tire; and therefore unless we take care frequently to revive our Religion with this spiritual Repast and Restorative, and still to add new Fuel to it as the Flame decays, it will quickly pine away and expire. But if upon the solemn Returns of this sacred Festival, we would constantly come with due Preparation to our Master's Table, and here renew our Vows, re-invigorate our Resolutions, repair our Decays, and put our sluggish Graces into a new Fermentation, we should find our Religion not only live but thrive, and be still acquiring new Degrees of Strength and Activity. But because this Argument hath been already so fully handled in our Practical Treatises, particularly by the Reverend Dr. Patrick in his Mensa Mystica, and Christian Sacrifice, I shall refer the Reader thither for the farther Consideration of it.

And thus, with all the Brevity I could, I have endeavoured to give an Account of those Duties which are necessary in the Course and Progress of our Christian Warfare.

S E C T. IV.

Containing certain Motives to animate Men against the Difficulty of these Duties which appertain to the Course of our Christian Warfare.

HOW necessary and useful to us those afore-named Duties are in the Course of our Christian Warfare, hath been sufficiently shewn. So that now there is nothing that our Sloth and Unwillingness can object against them, but only this, that they are very difficult, and do require more of our Time, and Care, and Pains, than we can conveniently spare from our other necessary Occasions; that the Practice of them is so unpleasant and severe, and attended with so much Cumber and Trouble, that we very much doubt we shall never be able to go thro' with them. And therefore to remove this Objection out of Mens way, and to excite them to the Practice of these necessary Duties, I shall for a Conclusion of this Argument add, to what hath been said of it, these following Considerations,

1. That whatsoever Difficulty there is in the Practice of them, we may thank ourselves for it.

2. That in the Course of our Sin there is a great deal of Difficulty, as well as in our Warfare against it.

3. That how difficult soever this Warfare may be, it must be endured, or that which is a great deal worse.

4. That tho it be difficult, yet there is nothing in it but what the Grace of God will render possible to us, if we be not wanting to ourselves.

5. That the Practice of these Duties is not so difficult, but that it is fairly consistent with all our other necessary Occasions and Diversions.

6. That the Difficulty is such as will certainly abate and wear off by Degrees, if we constantly practise them.

7. That with the difficulty of them, there is a world of present Peace and Satisfaction intermingled.

8. That their Difficulty is abundantly compensated by the final Reward of them.

I. Consider, That whatsoever Difficulty there is in the Practice of them, we may thank ourselves for it. For if we had betaken ourselves to the Practice of Religion as soon as we were capable of it, before we had entered ourselves into sinful Courses, and had therein contracted sinful Habits and Inclinations, we might have prevented those Difficulties which we now complain of. For our Religion was made for and adapted to our Nature, and would have sweetly accorded with all its Affections and Propensions, had we not vitiated them by our own wilful Sin, and clapt a preternatural Bias upon them. But tho the Light be naturally congruous to the Eye, yet if thro' a Distillation of ill Humours into it the Eye grows sore and weak, there is nothing more grievous and offensive to it. And so it is with Religion, which to the pure and uncontaminated Nature of a Man, is the most grateful and agreeable thing in the World; but if by our own ill Government, we disease our Nature, and deprave its Primitive Constitution, it is no wonder that Religion which was so well proportioned to it in its Purity, should sit hard and uneasy upon it, in its Apostasy and Corruption. For to a Man that is in a Fever, every thing is bitter, even Honey, which when he is well, is exceeding sweet and grateful; but the Bitterness which he tastes is not in the Honey, but in the Gall which overflows his own Palate; and so to a Nature that is diseased with any unnatural Lust, that which is most congruous to itself, will will be most nauseous to its Disease; and those Duties which in its Health, 'twould have embraced with the greatest Pleasure, will in its Sickness be the greatest Burden and Oppression to it. And when we have spoiled the Purity of our Constitution, and are degenerated from the human Nature into the brutal or diabolical, it is no great wonder that the Religion of a Man should be a Burden to the Nature of a Beast or a Devil. So that whatsoever Difficulties there are in Religion, they arise not out of the Nature of the Things it requires, but out of the perverse Indispositions of our Natures to them; and these were for the most part contracted by ourselves; so that instead of complaining of the Difficulty, we ought to strive and contend the more earnestly against it, because we may thank ourselves for it. When a Man hath play'd the Fool, and set his House on Fire, the Sense of his own Folly ought to make him more industrious to extinguish it; but if, instead of so doing, he should sit with his Hands in his Bosom, and complain of the Mischief, and the Difficulty of stopping it, what would Folks say of him? Mischievous Creature, doth it become thee to sit here idly complaining of the Effect of thy own Villany, whilst 'tis yet in thy Power, wouldst thou but bestir thy self, to quench the Flame, and prevent the spreading of it? For shame get up, and do thy utmost Endeavour to repair thy own Act, and to extinguish this spreading Mischief, of which thou art the Author. Since therefore we have been so obstinately foolish, as to set fire to our own Souls, and kindle in them by our vicious Courses, such destructive Flames of unnatural Lust, how monstrously ridiculous is it, whilst 'tis yet in our Power to extinguish them, to sit robining and complaining of the Difficulty of it, and in the mean time permit them to rage and burn on without Interruption? O miserable Men, if they are so hard to be quenched who may ye thank for it? Was it not you that kindled them, and do you sit idly complaining of your own Act, when you should be the more industrious to repair the Mischief of it, because it is your own: For shame arise and bestir yourselves, and since you are conscious that the Difficulties of your Religion are of your own creating, and that those Lusts, which indispose ye to it, are the Products of your own Actions; let this excite you to a more vigorous Endeavour to subdue and conquer them.

II. Consider, that in the Course of your Sins there is a great deal of Difficulty, as well as in your Warfare against them: For I dare appeal to your own Experience, whether you have not found a great deal of Hardship in Wickedness, especially while you were educating and training up your Natures to it? Did not your Nature oftentimes recoil and start and boggle at your vicious Actions; and were you not fain sometimes to curb, and sometimes to spur it, to commit many Outrages and Violences upon it, whilst you were backing and managing it, before you could reduce it to a Thorow-pace in Iniquity; how often have you put your modest Nature to the Blush, at the Sense of a silly and uncomely Action, whilst your wicked Will hath been dragging it along like a timorous Virgin to an Adulterer's Bed; and what terrible Shrieks have your Consciences many times given in the midst of your sinful Commisions, when you were acting the first Rapes upon your Innocence; how many a pensive Mood hath the Review of your sinful Pleasures cost ye, and what Swarms of Horror and dreadful Expectation hath the Reflection on your past Guilt raised in your Minds? and then with what excessive Difficulty have you been fain to practise some Vices, only to get an Habit of practising them more easily; how often have you been forced to swallow Sickness, to drink dead Palpies and foaming Epilepsies, to render your Intemperances familiar to you, and in what Qualms, and fainting Sweats, and stittish Confusions have you many times awaked, before ever you could connaturalize your midnight Revels to your Temper? And when, with so much Labour and Violence you have pretty well trained and exercised yourselves in this hellish Warfare, and thereby render'd it natural and habitual to you, to how many Inconveniences conveniences hath it daily exposed you, and what base and unmanly Shifts hath it put you upon, to extricate yourselves out of those Difficulties wherein it hath involved you? What violent Passions and Perturbations doth it raise in your Minds, and into what wild Tumults of Action doth it frequently hurry you? In a Word, how doth it perplex and intrigue the whole Course of your Lives, and intangle ye in a Labyrinth of Knaveish Tricks and Collusions; so that many times you are at your Wits end, and know not which way to turn yourselves? All these Difficulties, and a great many more, which I cannot presently think of, you must have contended with in a sinful Course of Action, if you have made any considerable Experiment of it.

And do you complain of the Difficulty of persevering in Religion; you that have so courageously persevered in a worse Way against Difficulties that are as great, all Things considered, if not greater; you that have hitherto sinn'd on so industriously, that have broke thro' so many strong Barricadoes to come at and enjoy your Lusts, are you not ashamed to start and boggle, as you do, at the Difficulties of Virtue and Religion? Look but how the industrious Sinner upbraids you? His Way leads directly to Ruin, and he knows it, and yet he presses on courageously, as if he were ambitious to be a Heroe in Iniquity, and charges thro' all the Modesty of Human Nature, thro' all his native Sense of a God and a Divine Vengeance; he marches forward thro' Infamy and Diseases, thro' Dangers, and a world of Inconveniences, and offers a kind of Violence to Hell, as if he meant to force open its brazen Portal, and enter headlong into it, before 'tis ready to receive him, whilst you, in the mean time, like a Company of Crest-fallen Creatures, stand shivering at a few trifling Difficulties in your Way, tho' you have Heaven for your End, and a Crown of Glory for your Reward.

In short therefore, This is the true State of your Case; choose which side you please, whether to march under Christ's or the Devil's Banner; you must expect before-hand to encounter some Difficulties, yea, and perhaps as great on the one side as on the other; and if so, then you have little else to do but to compare their Ends, and to consider which of the Two is most eligible, a Crown of Glory, or Eternal Torment.

III. Consider that how difficult soever this your Spiritual Warfare may be, it must be endured, or that which is much more intolerable. I confess, were it not absolutely necessary, we might, with some colour of Reason, urge the Difficulty of it to excuse ourselves from undertaking and prosecuting it; but when our Case is such as that we must either conquer or perish, swim thro', or sink under the Difficulties we complain of, the Matter will admit of no farther Debate, but we must e'en resolve of the Two Evils, to choose that which is the least. When the Ship hath sprung a Leak, 'tis a madness for the Mariners to sit still and complain of the Pains and Labour of Pumping; for in the Extremity they are in, there is no more to be said, they must pump or perish; and it is not to be debated, where there is so vast an Inequality between the Objects of their Choice, which of the Two they were best to fix upon; whether to take Pains for the present to secure the Ship, or to sit still and suffer themselves to be swallowed up in the Ocean. And thus it is in the Case before us; our Soul hath sprung a Leak, and let into its Holds those Stygian Waters of Sensual and Diabolical Lust, which will sink us down to Hell, if they be not pumpt out again; and this is not to be done without a great deal of Labour and Difficulty: But what then; were we not better labour for a while than perish for ever? Do we talk of Labour, when our Souls are at Stake, and our immortal Life is upon the Brink of an everlasting well or ill Being? In other Cases we never think much to endure a present Inconvenience for the Prevention of a future Mischief; we are content to fast, when we perceive it's necessary to obviate an approaching Fever; to be cuppd and scarified with all the Artifice of Pain to prevent or remove a dangerous Disease;

Disease; and in all other Cases, are generally willing to prolong our Torment, that we may be the longer a dying; except where the Prescription is Virtue, and the Death prescribed against is eternal; tho' this be the most formidable Mischief of all, as being the utmost Consummation of human Misery, and compared with which all the Labours and Difficulties of Religion have not the Proportion of a gentle Flea-biting to the acutest Torments of the Rack or Stone: For I beseech you to consider, Will it not be easier for you to endure the short Agonies of a bitter Repentance, than the horrid Despair of a damned Ghost for ever; to thwart a foolish and unreasonable Lust, than to lie roaring to Eternity upon the Rack of a guilty Conscience? Is there any Proportion between your abstaining from the Pleasures of Sin, that are but for a Moment, and your being excluded from Heaven and all Hope of Happiness for ever? Alas! if it be so difficult to you to contend with an' evil Habit, to struggle with a stiff and obstinate Inclination, how difficult will it be to dwell with everlasting Burnings, and suffer the dire Effects of an unappeasable Vengeance to Eternity? Wherefore, since we are under an absolute Necessity of enduring the one or the other, in the Name of God, let us act like Men, and of the Two Evils choose that which is most tolerable.

IV. Consider, That tho' it be difficult, yet there is nothing in it, but what the Grace of God will render possible to us, if we be not wanting to ourselves. I confess the Necessity of it would be no Argument to engage us to undertake it, were it not a possible Undertaking; yea and readily acknowledge, that it very far exceeds our poor Possibility singly and nakedly considered: So that if we were left to struggle with the Difficulty of it in our own single Strength, we might justly despair of Success, and so tamely lie down and yield ourselves foild and defeated. But, God be praised, this is not our Case; for tho' when we cast our Eyes upon the many violent Inclinations to evil that are within us, and upon the numberless Temptations to evil that are about us; when we seriously reflect upon the Weakness of our Reason, and the Strength of our Lust, and the Number and Nearness and Prevalency of those Objects from without, that are continually pressing upon and assaulting our good Resolutions; tho', I say, when we reflect upon all this, we are ready to cry out as Elisha's Servant did, when he beheld the City compassed with Horses and with Chariots, Alas Master, how shall we do? How shall we be able to withstand all this mighty Army of Enemies? Yet if we turn our Eyes from our own Weakness, and our Enemies Strength, to those gracious Promises of Assistance, which the Father of Mercies hath made to us, we shall quickly be able to answer ourselves, as Elisha did him, Fear not, O my Soul, for they that are with us are more, and more powerful, than they that are against us: For we have with us not only the outward Arguments of Religion, which are of Infinite more Force than any outward Inducement to Vice whatsoever; we have with us not only the holy Angels of God, who are as willing, and more able to direct and strengthen us, than all the infernal Furies to insnare and captive us; but we have with us also the Almighty Spirit of God, who by the Oeconomy of Heaven, and the Promise of our Lord, is obliged to minister to us in all our Necessities, and to aid and assist us against all those Difficulties, which would be otherwise too hard for us, if we were left to ourselves. So that if we do but hold true to our own Interest, and take care that we do not drive him away from us, by siding wilfully with our own Enemies against him, we shall not, no, we cannot miscarry; unless (which is impossible) some such Temptation should befall us, as neither we nor he can resist and cope with: For till by our wilful Sin we have forfeited our Title to the Promise of his Assistance, we are as sure of his Help in all Things that are necessary, as we can be of our own Endeavour; and 'tis not more in our Power to do what we can by the Strength of our own Faculties, than 'tis to engage him to enable us to do what we cannot without his Aid and Assistance: For by faithfully

fully endeavouring to persevere in well-doing, we intitle ourselves to all the necessary Assistance of his Grace; and so long as this Title continues, we are Masters not only of our own Strength, but of his too, and can do not only whatsoever is within our own Power without him, but also whatsoever is in his Power concurring with ours.

So that tho our Warfare be difficult, it cannot be impossible, unless we will have it so: For to be sure there is nothing in it that can be too hard for God's Grace Cooperating with the Powers of our Nature; and therefore there can be nothing in it too hard for us, whilst 'tis in our Power to secure ourselves of that his gracious Cooperation.

Wherefore let us stand boggling no longer at the Difficulty of our Progress in Religion, since, God be praised, there is nothing required of us beyond what we are able; do but your Part, which is only what you can, and then doubt not but God will do his; put forth but your honest hearty Endeavour, and earnestly implore his Aid and Assistance, and if then you miscarry, let Heaven answer for it: But if upon a Pretence that your Work is too difficult, and your Energies too mighty for you, you lay down your Arms, and resolve to contend with them no longer, let Heaven and Earth judge between God and you, which is to be charged with your Ruin; God that so graciously offered you his Help, that stretched out his Hand to raise ye up, tendered you his Spirit to guard and conduct ye thro' all Oppositions to eternal Happiness; or you that would not be persuaded to do any thing for yourselves, but rather chose to perish with Ease, than take any Pains to be saved.

V. Consider that the Practice of these Duties is not so difficult, but that it is fairly consistent with all your other necessary Occasions. When Men are told how many Duties are necessary to their successful Progress in Religion, what Patience and Constancy, what frequent Examinations and Trials of themselves, what lively Thoughts and Expectations of Heaven, &c. they are apt to conclude, that if they should engage to do all this, they must resolve to do nothing else, but even shake Hands with all their secular Business, and Diversions, and cloyster up themselves from all other Affairs; which is a very great Mistake, proceeding either from their not considering, or not understanding the Nature of these Religious Exercises, the greatest Part of which are such as are to be wholly transacted in the Mind, whose Motions and Operations are much more nimble and expedite than those of the Body, and so may be very well intermixt with our secular Employments, without any Lett or Hindrance to them: For what great Time is there required for a Man now and then to revolve a few wise and useful Thoughts in his Mind, to consider the Nature of an Action when it occurs, and reflect upon an Error when it's past and hath escaped him? I can consider a Temptation when it's approaching me, and with a Thought or two of Heaven or Hell, arm my Resolution against it in the twinkling of an Eye; I can look up to Heaven with an Eye of earnest Expectance, and send my Soul thither in a short Ejaculation, without interrupting my Business; and yet these, and such as these, do make up a great Part of those Religious Exercises, wherein the proper Duty of our Christian Warfare consists. And tho to the due Performance of these Duties, it will be sometimes necessary that our Minds should dwell longer upon them, yet it is to be considered, that when once we are entred upon the Practice of them, our Mind will be much more at leisure to attend to them; for then 'twill be in a great Measure taken off from its wild and unreasonable Vagaries, from its sinful Designs and lewd Contrivances, from its Phantastick Complacencies in the Pleasures of Sin, and anxious Reflections on the Guilt and Danger of it; and when all this Rubbish is thrown out of the Mind, there will be room enough for good Thoughts to dwell in it, without interfering with any of our necessary Cares and Diversions. For would we but give these our Religious Exercises as much room in our Minds, as we did heretofore freely allow to our Sins; they would ask no more, but leave us as much at leisure for our other Affairs as ever.

I confess there are some of these Duties that exact of us their fixt and stated Portions of Time, such as our Morning Consideration and Prayer, our Evening Examination and Prayer, our religious Observation of the Lord's Day, and our preparing for and receiving the Holy Sacrament; but all this may be very well spared without any Prejudice to any of our lawful Occasions: For what great matter of Time doth it ask for a Man to think over a few good Thoughts in the Morning, and fore-arm his Mind with them against the Temptations of the Day; to recommend himself to God in a short, pithy, and affectionate Prayer, and repeat his Purpose and Resolution of Obedience; what an easy Matter were it for you to borrow so many Moments as would suffice for this Purpose from your Bed, and your Comb and Looking-glass? And as for the Evening, when your Business is over, it's a very hard Case, if you cannot spare so much Time either from your Company or Refreshments, as to make a short Review of the Actions of the Day; to confess and beg Pardon for the Evils you have fallen into, or to bless God for the Good you have done, and the Evils you have avoided; and then to recommend yourselves to his Grace and Protection for the future. And as for your Religious Observation of the Lord's Day, it is only the seventh part of your Time; and can you think much to devote that, or at least the greatest Part of that, to him who gives you your Being and Duration? And lastly, as for your receiving the Lord's Supper, 'tis, at most, but once a Month that you are invited to it, and 'tis a hard Case, if out of so great a Proportion of Time, you cannot afford a few Hours to examine your Defects, and to quicken your Graces, and to dress and prepare yourselves for that blessed Commemoration. Alas! how easy were all this to a willing Mind? And if we had but half that Concern for our Souls and everlasting Interest that we have for our Bodies, we should count such Things as these not worth our mentioning. How disingenuous therefore is it for Men to make such tragical Out-cries, as they do of the Hardship and Difficulty of this Spiritual Warfare, when there is nothing at all in it that intrenches either on their secular Callings, or necessary Diversions; when they may be going onward to Heaven, while they are doing their Business, and mortifying their Lusts, even in the Enjoyment of their Recreations, and so take their Pleasure both here and hereafter.

VI. Consider that the Difficulty of these Duties is such, as will certainly abate and wear off, by Degrees, if we constantly practise them: For in all Undertakings whatsoever, it is Use that makes Perfection, and that which is exceeding hard to us at first, either thro' want of Skill to manage, or Inclination to practise it, will, by Degrees, grow easier and easier, as we are more and more accustomed and familiarized to it. And this we shall find by Experience, if we constantly exercise ourselves in these Progressive Duties of our Religion, which, to a Mind that hath been altogether unacquainted with them, will, at first, be very difficult. 'Twill go against the Grain of a wild and ungoverned Nature, to be confined from its extravagant Ranges by the strict Ties of a Religious Discipline; and to reduce a roving Mind to severe Consideration, or a fickle one to Constancy and Resolution; or an unreflecting one to Self-examination; to raise up an earthly Mind to heavenly Thoughts and Expectations; and confine a listless and regardless one to strict Watchfulness and Circumspection; to confine a carnal Mind to frequent Sacraments; or an indivout and careless one to its daily and weekly Periods of Devotion, will, at the first, no doubt, be very painful and tedious; but after we have persisted in, and for a while accustomed ourselves to it, we shall find it quickly grow more natural and easy to us, and from being grievous, it will become tolerable, from being tolerable easy, and from being easy delightful: For when once we come to feel the good Effects of those Duties in our Natures, how fast our Lusts do decline, our Dispositions mend, and all our Graces improve in the Use of them, the Sense of this will mightily indear and ingratiate them to us: Just as is it with a Scholar, when he first enters upon the Methods of Learning, they are very tedious and irksome to him; the Pains of reading, observing, and recollecting, the Confinement to a Study, and the racking his Brains with severe Reasoning and Discourse, are Things that he cannot easily away with, till he hath been inured and accustomed to them a while, and then they grow more natural and easy to him; but when he comes to be sensible of the great Advantages he reaps by his Labour, how it raises and improves his Understanding, enlarges its Prospect, and furnishes its Conception with brave and useful Notions; then do his Labours, which were formerly so grievous, become not only easy, but delectable to him. And even so it is with these spiritual Exercises of Religion, which to unexperienced Persons, that are yet but newly entered upon them, will be very painful and troublesome; but if they have but Patience and Courage to hold on, Custom will quickly render them more tolerable, and when they have practised them so long, as to find and perceive the blessed Effects of them, how much they have contributed to the reforming their Tempers, reducing their Inclinations, filig and polishing their rough and mishapen Natures; with what amiable Graces, divine and god-like Dispositions they have adorned and beautified them; their Sense and Feeling of this will convert them all into delightful Recreations. Thus as the Custom of them will render them easy, so the blessed Fruits of them will make them delectable; the former will render them facil as Nature, the latter eligible as Reward. And if so, why should we be discouraged, faint-hearted Creatures that we are, at those little present Difficulties, which our Diligence will soon wear off and convert into Ease and Pleasure?

VII. Consider, that with the Difficulty of them there is a World of present Peace and Satisfaction intermingled. If you fall back again to your old Lusts, instead of these present Difficulties you start at, you must expect to have the Trouble of a guilty Soul to contend with; which, if you have any Sense of God, and of Good and Evil, will be much more grievous to you than they: But if you go on, you will carry with you a quiet and a satisfied Mind, a Conscience that will entertain you all along with such sweet and calm Reflections, as will abundantly compensate you for all the Hardships and Difficulties you encounter on the Way; that with innumerable Iterations will be always resounding to your honest Endeavours those best and sweetest Echoes, Well done good and profitable Servant, how bravely hast thou acquitted thyself, how manfully hast thou stood to thy Duty against all Oppositions, and with what a gallant Resolution hast thou repulsed those Temptations that bore up against thee? Now for a Man to have his own Mind continually applauding him, and crowning his Actions with the Approbations of his Conscience, is Encouragement enough to balance a thousand Difficulties; and the Sense that he hath done his Duty, and that the God above, and the Vice-God within him, are both satisfied and pleased with him, will give him such a grateful Relish of each Action of his Warfare, that the Difficulty will only serve to enhance the Pleasure of it.

And as he will have great Peace and Satisfaction whilst he is contending with these Difficulties, so when he hath so far conquered them, as that they are no longer able to curb and with-hold him from the free and vigorous Exercise of the heavenly Virtues, but in despite of them, he can easily moderate his Passions and Appetites by the Laws of his Reason, and freely love, adore and imitate, submit to, and confide in the ever-blessed God, and chearfully exert an unforced Plainness and Simplicity, Good-will and Charity, Submission and Condescension, Peace and Concord towards all Men; when, I say, he hath so far surmounted the Difficulties of his Warfare, as that with any Measure of Freedom and Vigor he can put forth all these heavenly Virtues, he will find himself not only in a quiet, but in a heavenly Condition. For these heavenly Graces are the Palate by which the immortal Mind tastes and relishes its Heaven, the blessed Organs and Sensories by which it feels and perceives the Joys of the World to come, and without which it can no more relish and enjoy them, than the senseless Hive can the Sweetness of the Honey that is in it. And consequently the more quick and vivacious these heavenly Organs of the Mind are, and the more they are disburden'd of those carnal and devilish Lusts that blunt their Sense and Perception, the more accurately they will taste the Joys and Pleasures of Heaven. So that when by the constant Practice of the Warfaring Duties of Religion, we have conquered those bad Inclinations of our Natures, which render the heavenly Virtues so difficult to us, and do so clog and incumber us in the Exercise of them, we shall find ourselves in a Heaven upon Earth, and each Act of Virtue will be a Presension and Foretaste of the Joys of the Celestial Life : And being arrived at this blessed State in which all heavenly Virtue is so connaturalized to us, the sweet Experience we shall have of the unspeakable Joys and Pleasures it abounds with, will cause us to look back with wondrous Content and Satisfaction upon all those Difficulties we contended with in our Way to it, and bless those Prayers and Tears, and Strivings with ourselves, those tedious Watchings and Self-examinations, &c. by which we have now at last conquered and subdued them.

Wherefore; since the Practice of these our Warfaring Duties hath so much present Peace going along with it, and since by its natural Drift and Tendency, it is leading us forward to a State of so much Pleasure and Satisfaction, what a Madness is it, for a Man to be beaten off from it, by those present little Difficulties that attend it ! What Man that consults his own Interest, would ever desist from the prosecuting such a gainful Warfare, in which, to make him amends for the present Pains it puts him to, he is not only possess'd of Peace of Conscience for the present, but assured of a happy Life for the future, when he hath conquered the Difficulties he contends with.

VIII. Consider that the Difficulty of these Duties is abundantly compensated by the Reward of them. A generous Mind will think no Means too hard, which tend to noble and worthy Ends; in the Prosecution of which, Opposition only whets its Courage and Resolution. So that doubtless had we any Spark of Generosity in us, the Vastness and Excellency of the End we pursue, would make us despise all Difficulties in the Way to it. What a Meanness of Spirit therefore doth it argue in us to stand boggling, as we do, at the Difficulties of Religion; to think much of spending a few Days or Years in this World in striving and contending with our Inclinations, in Consideration and Watchfulness, in earnest Prayer and severe Reflections on ourselves, when we are assured before-hand, that at the Conclusion of this short Conflict we shall be carried off by Angels in Triumph to Heaven, and there receive, from the Captain of our Salvation, a Crown of everlasting Joys and Pleasures; when, after a few Moments Pains and Labour, we shall live Millions of Millions of most happy Ages, in the ravishing Fruition of a boundless Good, and after these are expired, have as many Millions of Millions more to live ? What an unconscionable Thing is it for us to complain of any Difficulty, who have such a vast Recompence of Reward in our View ? In the Name of God, Sirs, what would you have ? Why, we would have Heaven drop down into our Mouths, and not put us to all this Trouble of reaching and climbing after it : Would you so ? 'Tis a very modest Desire indeed ; that is, you would have the God of Heaven thrust his Favours upon you, while you scorn and despise them, and prostitute his Heaven to a Company of Drones that don't think it worth their while to go out of their Hives to gather it. O ! for shame, look once more upon Heaven, and consider again what it is to dwell in the Paradise of the World with God, and Angels, and Saints, and in their blessed Company to live out an Eternity in the most rapturous Contemplations, and Loves, and Joys ;

Joys; to bathe our dilated Faculties in an over-flowing River of Pleasures, and in perfect Ease, Health and Vigour of Mind, to feed upon a Happiness that is as large as our Capacities, and as lasting as our Beings. Is this a Reward of that inconsiderable Nature, that we should think much to labour and contend for it; is not the Hope of being satisfied for ever, a sufficient Encouragement to induce us to deny our Lusts and Appetites a few Moments; or is there not Good enough in an everlasting Rest, to countervail a few Days and Years Labour and Contention? What tho' you pant and labour now while you are climbing the everlasting Hills, God be praised, 'tis not so far to the Top, but that the pleasant Gales and glorious Prospects you shall everlastingly enjoy there, will so abundantly compensate for the Difficulty of the Ascent, as that instead of complaining of it, you will, to eternal Ages, reflect upon it with Pleasure and Delight. Wherefore when your Courage begins to shrink at the Difficulty of your Warfare, do but lift up your Eyes to the Recompence of Reward; and to be sure, if you have any Heart, that will inspire you with such a brave Resolution, as nothing will be too hard for you, but what is absolutely impossible. For how can we be disheartned at any superable Difficulty, so long as we are animated with the Perswasion, that if we have our Fruit unto Holiness, our End shall be Everlasting Life.

S E C T. V.

Concerning those Duties which appertain to the Perfection and Consummation of our Christian Warfare, shewing what they are, and how effectually they conduce to the perfecting us in the Virtues of the Heavenly Life.

I Proceed now to the Third and last Part of our Christian Warfare, viz. the Consummation of it; which is final Perseverance: For after we have actually engaged, and made some Progress in it, our next Care and Duty is, that we do not relapse, and basely retreat from what we have so prosperously undertaken, and hitherto so effectually prosecuted, but that so long as we live we persist in an open Defiance to our Sins, and endeavour to pursue and mortify our Inclinations to them, and persevere in the Practice of all Virtue; still endeavouring thereby to improve and grow on to Perfection, that so we may die as we have hitherto lived, and consummate our Warfare in a final Victory; and that when our Lord shall come or send his Herald, Death, to summon us off from the Field, we may be found fighting under his Banner against Sin, the World, and the Devil, and finally die as we have lived, his faithful Soldiers and Followers. For this he indispensably exacts of us, viz. That we should be faithful unto Death, Rev. ii. 10. that we should patiently continue in well-doing, Rom. ii. 7. that we should endure to the End, Mat. x. 22. and hold the Beginning of our Confidence stedfast to the End, Heb. iii. 14. that we should keep his Works to the End, and finally overcome as well as fight, Rev. ii. 26. In a Word, that having set our Hands to the Plough, we should not look back, Luke xvi. 26. but that we should be always abounding in the Work of the Lord, forasmuch as we know that our Labour is not in vain in the Lord, 1 Cor. xv. 58. The Sense of all which is, that we should not only begin this our Christian Warfare, and prosecute it for a while, but that we should proceed and persevere in it as long as we breathe, and never lay down our Arms till we lay down our Lives. In order to which, as we must still persevere in the Practice of those Duties which appertain to the Course and Progress of our Warfare, so there are sundry other Duties which we must practise, and which have a more direct and immediate Influence upon the final Success and Consummation of it. All which I shall reduce to the following Particulars:

1. That while we stand, we should not be over-confident of ourselves, but still keep a jealous Eye upon the Weakness and Inconstancy of our own Natures.

2. That if at any time we wilfully fall and miscarry, we should immediately arise again by Repentance.

3. That to prevent the like Falls and Miscarriages for the future, we should endeavour to withdraw our Affections from the Temptations of the World, but more especially from those which were the Occasions of our Fall.

4. That we should more curiously search into the smaller Defects and Indencies of our Nature, in order to our reforming and correcting them.

5. That, so far as lawfully we can, we should live in a close Communion with the Church, whereof we are Members.

6. That we should not, out of a fond Opinion, that we are good enough already, stint our Progress in Religion, to any determinate Degree or Measure of Goodness.

7. That we should frequently entertain ourselves with the Prospect of our Mortality, and endeavour to compose ourselves before-hand into a good Posture of Dying.

8. That, in order thereunto, we would be wondrous careful to discharge our Consciences of all the Relicks and Remains of our past Guilt.

9. That to compensate for these, so far as we are able, we should take care to redeem the Time we have formerly spent in sinful Courses, by being doubly diligent in the Exercise of all the contrary Virtues, and the doing all the contrary Good we are able.

10. That we should labour after a rational and well-grounded Assurance of Heaven.

I. To the Perfection and Consummation of our Christian Warfare, it is necessary that while we stand, we should not be over-confident of ourselves, but still keep a jealous Eye upon the Weakness and Inconstancy of our own Natures. For thus the Apostle declares it to be the Will of God, that we should not trust in ourselves, i. e. rely too much upon our own Strength and Ability, 2 Cor. i. 9. and elsewhere he admonishes let him that thinks he stands (or, the present being put for the future, as it is very frequently, let him that thinks he shall stand) take heed lest he fall, 1 Cor. x. 12. so also, Rom. xi. 20. Thou standest by Faith, be not high-minded, but fear, i. e. it is thy Faith that upholds thee, but be not too secure of thy Support, lest thou also fall and perish as thy Brethren, the Jews, have done before thee. And hence we are bid to work out our Salvation with fear and trembling, Phil. ii. 12. i. e. with a Holy Solicitude and Jealousy, lest one time or other we should be tempted and overcome, and, at the last, finally miscarry. And, indeed, there is nothing doth more expose Men to the hazard of falling, than too much Confidence in their own Strength. This makes them venture upon a Thousand Temptations which they might have fairly, and much more prudently avoided; and hurries them head over head into such inviting Occasions and Opportunities of sinning, as do too often inveagle and betray them, in despite of all their good Resolutions to the contrary. Whereas, had they but suspected themselves, and not presumed too much upon their own Stedfastness, they would many a time have kept out of harm's-way, and avoided the Snares that did intangle them; but by venturing, like Sampson, to lay down their Heads in a Dalilah's Lap, in Confidence of the Strength of their own Resolution, they have been insensibly inticed, after some coy Refusals, to betray themselves into the Snare of the Devil.

And as, thro' an over-weaning Confidence of our own Strength, we expose ourselves to many needless Temptations, so we do also, too often, provoke God to withdraw his Grace and Assistance from us, and to leave us to contend alone with those Temptations whereunto we do so confidently expose ourselves.

ourselves. For as he is always ready to assist us, so he always expects that we should acknowledge our Need of, and Dependence upon him, and not presume too much upon our own Strength, which, without his gracious Concurrence, is Weakness and Impotence. When therefore without God's Call and Warrant we will needs rush into Temptations, in Confidence of our own Ability to resist and conquer them, he many Times leaves us without his Aid and Assistance, that so he may chastise our Presumption, by permitting us to be defeated, and convince us by the woful Experiment of our Fall, how unable we are to stand without his Aid and Support. It is our daily Prayer that God would not lead us into Temptation; but if for our Trial he thinks meet to do so, we have all Assurance, that if we be not wanting to our selves, He will not suffer us to be tempted above what we are able, but will with the Temptation also make a way to escape, that we may be able to bear it, 1 Cor. x. 13. But if we will lead ourselves into Temptation, in Confidence of our own Ability to contend with, and break thro' it, God is so far from being obliged to second us in our Folly and unwarrantable Rashness, that he is justly provoked by it to abandon us to ourselves, and, as a certain Consequence of that, to permit us to be vanquish'd and led captive. Wherefore as we hope to persevere to the End, and to bring our Warfare to a happy Conclusion; it is highly necessary, that we should always keep a jealous Eye upon ourselves, and not confide too much in our own Strength and Ability.

II. To our final Perseverance in the Christian Warfare, it is also necessary, that if at any time we wilfully fall and miscarry in it, we should immediately arise again by Repentance. For what is forbidden us as to one Sin, equally extends to all, let not the Sun go down upon your wrath, Eph. iv. 26. that is, if you have wilfully given the Reins to your Wrath, suffer it not to break forth into contumelious Behaviour, but repent of it immediately, before the Sun sets; according to that old Practice of the Pythagoreans, mentioned by Plutarch, who when at any Time they fell into reproachful Language out of Anger, τὰς δειξίας ἐμβάλλοντες ἀλλήλοις καὶ ἀσπαζόμενοι πρὶν ἢ ὅτι ἥλιον δύναι διαλύνειν, i. e. before ever the Sun set they always took care to be reconciled, and constantly shook Hands with, and embraced one another; and the reason of the Prohibition, which you have in the next Verse, viz. neither give place to the Devil, that is, by suffering your Wrath to grow into inveterate Malice, equally extends to all other Sins, which if they be not immediately rooted out by Repentance, will quickly improve into Habits. So that we have as much reason to repent of our Lust before the Sun rises on it, and of our Fraud and Oppression before it hath run its course on it, as of our Wrath before it goes down upon it. And consequently, by a parity of Reason, the Prohibition must extend to all other Sins as well as this, and oblige us, whenever we have wilfully firm'd in any Particular, to revoke and expiate it by an immediate Act of Repentance.

For he that hath finn'd wilfully and not repented of it, doth all the while continue an obstinate Rebel against God, and is so far from persevering in the Christian Warfare, that he is actually list'd a Voluntier in the adverse Party. And if after we have thus sinn'd, Death should interpose between us and our Repentance, (as who knows but it may if we repent not immediately) we shall be so far from consummating our Christian Warfare in Victory, that we shall die Vassals to the Devil. But then, as by sinning wilfully we do desert God, so by continuing impenitent under it we still run farther and farther from him, and thereby make so wide a Gap and Interruption in our Religious Progress, as will not be easily repaired again; and whereas had we repented and come back without Delay as soon as we had strayed from our Duty, we might have soon recovered the Ground we had lost by it, and by a little more Diligence have gotten as far onward as if we had never interrupted our Progress gress at all; by deferring our Repentance we set ourselves farther and farther back, and shall every Day be more and more indisposed to return. For in the course of our Religion there is no standing still, but either we are progressive or retrograde, going backward or forward as long as we live; so that when once we are out of our Way, we are still going farther out, till such time as we return again; and consequently the longer we are out, the harder 'twill be to return, and the farther we shall have to the end of our Way. For when I first sin, and the Wound of my Innocence is yet green, and fresh, it may easily be cured by the timely Application of a sorrowful Confession and new Resolution of Amendment; but if I neglect it, 'twill rot and putrify; my Sense of it will be hardned, and my Inclination to it grow every Day more inveterate, and then if it be not lanc'd and corroded by a sharp, long, and a painful Repentance, it will turn into an incurable Gangrene. Hence the Apostle bids us exhort one another daily, while it is called to Day, that is, to repent while it is called to Day, lest any of us be hardened thro' the deceitfulness of sin, Heb. iii. 13. So that when we have wilfully sinn'd, we run a mighty Hazard of our final Perseverance, if we don't repent immediately. For all the while we delay, our Conscience grows more seared, and our Lust grows more confirmed, and God knows where it will end; but 'tis fearfully to be suspected that that neglected Bruise which we got by our Fall will grow worse and worse, and determine at last in final Impenitency. Wherefore as we intend to persevere in well-doing, it concerns us in the first place to take all possible Care not to give way to any wilful Sin, nor suffer ourselves by any Hopes or Fears to be tempted from our good Resolution; but if at any Time our wicked Inclinations should prevail against it, to betake ourselves immediately to a serious Repentance, to make a sorrowful Confession of it to our offended God, and solemnly renew our Resolution against it, that so we may stop the growing evil betimes, before it's capable of endangering our final Apostasy.

III. To our final Perseverance, it's necessary that to prevent the like Falls and Miscarriages for the future, we should endeavour to withdraw our Affections from the Temptations of the World, but more especially from those Temptations which were the Occasions of our Fall. For thus we are strictly prohibited to set our Affections upon Things on the Earth, Col. iii. 21. to love the World, and the Things that are in the World, 1 John ii. 15. to lay up for our selves Treasures upon Earth, Mat. vi. 19. and it is the proper Character of a true Christian to be crucified to the World, Gal. iv. 14. and to converse as a Stranger and a Pilgrim in it, Heb. xi. 13. As on the contrary, to mind earthly Things, and to be lovers of Pleasures more than lovers of God, are made the proper Characters of Infidels and Apostates, Phil. iii. 19. compared with 2 Tim. ii. 4. And so inconsistent is an inordinate Affection to the World, with our Perseverance in the Christian Warfare, that St. James expressly tells us, That the Friendship of the World is Enmity with God, Jam. iv. 4. and 'tis to the Excess of our Friendship to it that the Scripture frequently attributes our Apostasy, 2 Tim. iv. 10. And the Apostle tells us, That they that will be rich, that is, immoderately covet to be so, fall into Temptation and a Snare, and into many foolish and hurtful Lusts, which drown Men in Perdition and Destruction; and that the love of Money is the root of all Evil, 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10. From all which it's apparent, how necessary it is, in the Accounts of Christianity, in order to our Perseverance, that we should endeavour to wear and abstract ourselves from the World.

For this World is the Magazine of all those Temptations by which our Virtue and Innocence is importuned and assaulted; and 'tis either the Hope of some worldly Pleasure, Profit, or Honour that allures, or the Fear of some of the contrary Evils which are incident to us in the Course of Religion that affrights us from our Duty. Whilst therefore we immoderately love those Goods and and Evils which are the Solicitors of Vice, we are in very great danger of being conquered and led captive by it. For 'tis not for the sake of sinning that Men sin, but for the sake of those Goods, or to avoid those Evils which are appendent to their sinning or not sinning; and consequently, the more a Man loves those Goods which cling and adhere to a sinful Action, the more prone he will be to the Commission of it; and the more he dreads those Evils which he can most easily avoid by a sinful Action, the more prone and inclinable he will be to it. Wherefore to secure our perseverance in this Warfare against Sin, it is absolutely necessary that we rectify our Opinion of the Goods and Evils of this World, and moderate and abate our Affection towards them, especially towards those that have been most prevalent with us. For the Temptation that prevails upon us discovers the weak side of our Nature, and instructs the Devil what Good or Evil it is that is most apt to allure or affright us; and to be sure that subtle Tempter, who hath been so many Thousand Years studying the Arts of seducing us, will not fail to assault us again where he hath been already successful; and therefore it concerns us to fortify ourselves there, where we have so much reason to expect the Enemy will assault us, and to rectify our Opinions of, and mortify our Affections to those Things which have already so much imposed upon our Virtue and Innocence. For 'tis our Imagination that gives Life and Efficacy to the Charms and Terrors of the World, and renders them so successful against us; we fancy that to be in them which is not, and so are affected, not so much with the Things themselves, as with the false Representations we make of them.

For it's plain the Goods of the World are beholden to ourselves, for the greatest part of those Beauties with which they tempt and allure us; and 'tis our Fancy that gives the Paint and Fucus with which they charm and inamour our Affections; and so for the Evils of the World, 'tis our own Imagination that disguises them into such Bugs and Scare-crows, and puts those ghastly Vizors on them with which they fright and amaze us. If therefore we would but take care to rectify our Opinions of them both, and to strip them out of their imaginary Terrors and Allurements, we should thereby disarm them of their main Strength, and render them much less able to seduce us for the future. And this, methinks, we might easily do, if we would but fairly represent to ourselves the present State and Posture of our Affairs. For we are a sort of Beings, that are every Moment travelling from hence to an eternal World, where an unexpressible Happiness or Misery attends us; and all that we enjoy or suffer in this Life, is only the Convenience or Inconvenience of a short Journey to a long Home, but can have no other Influence upon our everlasting Condition, than as it is the Occasion either of our Virtue or Vice, which are the only Goods and Evils that will accompany us to Eternity, and make us happy or miserable there for ever. But as for Poverty or Riches, Pain or Pleasure, Disgrace or Reputation, they are Things which probably within these Ten or Twenty Years, will be as perfectly indifferent to us as our last Night's Dream was when we awoke in the Morning. And this, methinks, duly considered, were enough to render us very unconcerned at any Good or Evil that can happen to us here. For what a mighty Matter is it whether I fare well or ill for Twenty or Thirty Years, who when that is expired must be happy or miserable for Millions of Millions of Ages; and what will these little Goods or Evils signify to me, when my Body is in the Grave, and my Soul in Eternity? When I am strip'd into a naked Spirit, and set ashore upon the invisible World, then all these Things will be as if they never were, and in the twinkling of an Eye I shall lose Sight of them for ever; and of all that I enjoyed or suffered in this Life, I shall have nothing remaining but my Virtue or Vice, whose Issues will prove my eternal Happiness or Misery. Doubtless, would we but accustom our Minds to such Reflections as these, they would effectually restrain us from the immoderate Love or Fear of the Things of this World, and reduce us to a constant and efficacious Persuasion, that there is no Good in this World comparable to that of doing our Duty; nor any Evil incident to us in this Life, that is not infinitely less formidable than Sin. And when once our Affection to this World, and our Opinion of the Goods and Evils of it, are thus moderated and rectified, the Temptations to Sin will quite lose their hold of us, and be no more able to fasten upon our Resolution. So that now we may pass safely thro' them whilst they are sparkling about us, there being no Tinder in our Breasts for them to catch fire and kindle upon. Now they will be no longer capable to allure or affright us, those bosom Orators being silenced that were wont to contend for them, and to magnify their Charms and Terrors; and when we neither immoderately love nor fear them, 'twill be no hard matter to defend our Virtue and Innocence against all their Assaults and Importunities.

IV. To our final Perseverance, it is necessary that we should more curiously search into the smaller Defects and Indecencies of our Nature, in order to our reforming and correcting them. Hence we are commanded to bate even the Garments spotted by the flesh, Jude 23. i. e. to take care of the Beginnings of Sin, of any thing that hath the least Spot or Infection of it; and accordingly we are obliged not only to take care to rub out the greater Stains of our Nature, but to be diligent that we may be found of our Lord in peace without spot and blameless, 2 Pet. iii. 14. i. e. to endeavour to reform those smaller and more indiscernable Defects of our Nature, which tho they do not totally stain, yet very much spot and blemish it; that so at the coming of our Lord we may be found not only sincere and upright, but, as near as may be, innocent and blameless. For so Phil. ii. 15. we are bid to be blameless, harmless, and without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse Generation, i. e. to endeavour so to demean ourselves in this World, as that we may appear, not only honest for the main, but, so near as is possible, spotless and unreprovable. And, indeed, there is nothing doth more frequently occasion Mens final Mis-carriage in Religion, than their not being careful and diligent in this matter. When they first enter into the Christian Warfare, they very industriously set themselves against that Course of wilful Sin in which they formerly lived; and this were wondrous well, if they did not stop here, and go no farther; but, alas! in the mean Time, while they are thus industriously busied in subduing their old Sins, there are a great many lesser Flaws and Defects in their Nature, which by a timely Care and Inspection, they might easily correct; but these they take no notice of, but quietly permit them to grow and increase, till at last they become as hurtful and dangerous to them as their old Sins were, against which they have all this while so zealously contended. As, for Instance, when they first entered upon a Resolution of Amendment, they were profane, it may be, or sensual, or vehemently addicted to Fraud and Oppression; and against these they opposed themselves with great Zeal and Animosity; and so far they did well; but in the mean Time, perhaps there was Pride and Ostentation, Envy and Peevishness, Self-will and Censoriousness, secretly budding and sprouting up in their Natures, all which they might have easily cured by timely Applications; but, alas! in the heat of their Contest, against their other Sins, they never so much as minded or regarded these, but e'en let them alone till they grew up into obstinate and inveterate Habits, and became every whit as fatal and destructive to their Souls, as those were which they have been all this while subduing and mortifying. So that, after all, they have only changed their Sins, and have been conjuring up one Devil while they have been laying another; and whilst the Tide of their Wickedness hath been ebbing on this Shore, it hath been flowing on the contrary, and as it hath sunk in Sensuality, it hath swelled into Devilishness. Perhaps whilst you are zealously carrying on your Warfare Warfare against your old Sins, you may find yourselves too apt to be tickled with Applause, and puffed with vain Ostentation; have a Care now, that while you are starving one Vice, you do not pamper another. For if you do not correct this little Irregularity of your Nature betimes, 'twill soon be as dangerous and mischievous to you, as ever any of those Vices were, against which you are contending; 'twill by degrees, so insinuate into your good Intentions, and so sophisticate the Purity of them, that at last you will intend nothing else but Applause; and so your whole Religion will be converted into dead Shew and empty Pageantry, and your Spiritual Warfare will prove only a passage out of Profaneness into Hypocrisy. It may be, whilst you are contending against those fleshly Inclinations, by which you have formerly been captivated, your Hearts will begin to swell with an over-weaning Conceit of your own Virtue and Godliness; and as a Consequence of that, to entertain contemptuous and cenforious Thoughts of your Brethren; beware now, that whilst you are struggling with your old fleshly Lusts, you do not over-look these little Defects and Indecencies of your Nature; lest while you are conquering one sort of Sins, you be captivated by another. For if you do not take care to nip them in their Buds, and to check these little Essays and Beginnings of them, they will soon spring up into Habits of Pride and Insolence, Rancour and Uncharitableness, and so your Warfare against Sin will be only a Transition from one Evil into another, from the Pollutions of the Flesh into the Pollutions of the Spirit, and from the Nature of Beasts into the Nature of Devils. Wherefore, if you would be finally successful in the Christian Warfare, you must take great care, that while you are contending with the grosser and more inveterate Vices of your Nature, you do not neglect its lesser Defects and Irregularities; for whilst they are lesser they may be easily corrected, but if they are not, they will soon grow greater, and, in the end, prove as dangerous as those you are now contending with. For every Vice is small in the Beginning, and easy to be cured, but if it be neglected, like a scratch in the Flesh, it will corrupt and rankle into a spreading Gangrene.

V. To our Persistence to the End in this our Christian Warfare, it is also necessary, that, so far as lawfully we can, we should live in close Communion with the Church, whereof we are Members. 'Tis true, a particular Church may be so corrupted, as that its Members may be obliged to dis-unite themselves from it. For every Man is obliged by Virtue of his being in any Society, not to agree to any thing which tends to the apparent Ruin of it. Now the main End of Christian Society being the Honour of God, and the Salvation of Souls, every Man that enters into it is thereby obliged in his own Station to advance this End; and consequently, as to join in all Acts of the Christian Society he is united to, so far as they tend thereunto, so to refuse all such Acts of that Society, if any such should be enjoined, as do apparently oppose, and are directly repugnant to it. So that if any Act that is apparently sinful, be enjoined by the particular Church, whereof I am a Member, as a necessary Condition of my Communion with her, I am bound to abstain from it, for the sake of the general End of Christian Society. As, for Instance, suppose the Church, whereof I am a Member, require it as a Condition of my Communion, that I should transgress any just Law of the Commonwealth, whereof I am a Subject; in this Case I am bound rather to desert that Church's Communion, than live in wilful Disobedience to the Civil Authority. And this is the Case of those Men, who, tho they live in a Christian Commonwealth, have been Baptized into, and bred up in the Communion of particular Congregations, that, contrary to Law, have separated themselves from the Establish'd, National Church; for if in this National Church there be nothing imposed on them, by the Laws of the Commonwealth, that is apparently contradictory to the Laws of Christ, they are bound in Conscience to desert those separate Congregations (allowing them to be true Churches) and to join themselves with the Church National; and if they do not, they are wilful Offenders against the Law of Christ, which requires us to obey all human Ordinances for the Lord's sake. And again, supposing one National Church to be subject to another, that which is subject is bound to refuse the Communion of that which is superior, if it cannot enjoy it without complying with Impositions that are apparently sinful. Which is evidently the Case between us and the Church of Rome, supposing that de jure we were once her Subjects and Members; for had we been so, we should doubtless never have separated ourselves from her, could we but have separated her Sins from her Communion; could we have profest her Creed without implicitly believing all her Cheats and Impostures, or submitted ourselves to her Guides without apparent Danger of being misled by them into the Pit of Destruction, or join'd with her publick Services without worshipping of Creatures, or received her Sacraments, without practising the grossest Superstitions and Idolatries. But when she had made it necessary for us either to sin with, or separate from her, we could have no other honest Remedy but only to withdraw; and if in this our Separation there had been a sinful Schism on either side, we could have appealed to Heaven and Earth, whose the Guilt of it was; theirs that forced us upon it, or ours that were forced to it. But yet the Case of our Separation from the Church of Rome, is vastly different from that of the Separation of private Members from their own particular Churches. For we affirm that the Church of Rome is but a particular Church, whose Authority extends no farther than to its own native Members, and consequently hath no more Power to impose Laws of Communion upon us, than we have upon her; our particular Church being altogether as distinct and independent from her, as she is from ours. So that tho the Terms of Communion she imposes upon her own Members, were all of them lawful and innocent, yet do they no more oblige us as we are Christians of the Church of England, than the lawful Commands of the Great Mogul do, as we are Subjects of the Kingdom of England.

But the Case of private Members, whether of ours, or any other particular Church, is vastly different. For if we will allow particular Churches to be so many formed Societies of Christians; (as we must do, or else degrade them into so many confused Multitudes) we must necessarily allow them to have a just Authority (even as all other formed Societies have) over their own Members. And that they have so, is evident, not only from the Nature of the thing, but also from Scripture, where the Bishops and Pastors of particular Churches are said to be constituted by the Holy Ghost Overseers of their particular Flocks, Acts xx. 28. which word, both in sacred and profane Writ, denotes a ruling Power. And accordingly these Overseers are elsewhere called Ruling-Elders, 1 Tim. v. 17. and the Subjects and Members of their Churches are required to obey them, as those that have the rule over them, Heb. xiii. 17. and elsewhere the Apostle exhorts them to know, i. e. submissively to own the Authority of those that were over them in the Lord, 1 Thes. v. 12. By all which it's evident, that the Members of particular Churches are by divine Institution subjected to the Authority of their Spiritual Governors, and obliged in all Things to obey them, wherein they are not countersmanded by Christ himself. So that tho one particular Church may refuse the Impositions of another, and that not only as they are sinful, but as they are Impositions, because the other hath no lawful Authority over it; yet it is by no means lawful for the Subjects of any particular Church to disobey their Church-Governors in any lawful Matter; because being subjected to their Authority by Christ the Supreme Head of the Church-Catholick, they are obliged to submit to them as to his Substitutes and Viceregents in every thing which he hath not antecedently prohibited. And if rather than do so, they shall choose to revolt from the Communion of their Church, they are Schismatics, or, which is the same thing, they are Rebels to Christ's Authority in that particular Church they revolt from. For what Faction is in the State, that is Schism in the Church, viz. an unjust Opposition to Authority; the one to Christ's Civil Authority derived upon our Magistrates, the other to his spiritual Authority derived upon our Bishops and Ecclesiastical Governors.
revolt

'Tis true, in some Cases, as I hinted before, withdrawing from the Communion of a Church may be so far from being a Rebellion against Christ, that it may be an Act of Duty and Obedience to him; for where Christ, who is my supreme Lord, and my Ecclesiastical Governors who are in Authority under him, command Things that are directly inconsistent, I am, doubtless, bound to obey him rather than them; yea tho their Commands are not inconsistent in themselves, yet if I am fully persuaded they are, it is all one to me. For when I do what I falsely believe Christ hath forbidden, I am in Will as much a Rebel against his Authority, as when I do what I truly believe he hath forbidden. And so, by not complying with my Spiritual Governors out of an innocent Mis-persuasion, that what they command is unlawful, I do formally, and in Will as much obey Christ in so doing, at if it were really unlawful. So that, in short, when the Governours of the Church, whereof I am a Member, do impose as the Conditions of my Communion, Things that are either unlawful in themselves, or that, after due Examination, I verily believe are unlawful, I am bound in Obedience to the Authority of Christ, rather to desert that Communion, than to comply with the Terms and Conditions of it.

But since to desert the Communion of a Church, is a matter of vast Moment, (as I shall prove by and by) it ought not to be done without the greatest Caution and Tenderness. For he that rejects sinful Terms of Communion without just Enquiry and sufficient Examination, is formally as much a Schismatick, i. e. he is as much a Rebel in Will, to Christ's Spiritual Authority in his Church Delegates and Vicegerents, as he that rashly rejects innocent and lawful ones. For had it been only the Sinfulness of the Condition that displeased him, he would have made Conscience before he presumed to reject it, duly to inform himself whether it were sinful or no; but by thus rejecting it at a venture, without a due Enquiry into the nature of it, he plainly shews that 'twas not so much the Sin that displeased him, as the Authority that imposed it; and that 'twas not his Conscience that took offence at it, but his Humour; and consequently, that he would have had the same Dislike of it, tho it had been lawful and innocent. For Conscience being an Act of the Judgment and Reason, cannot be offended without Reason, either real or apparent? and without making a due Enquiry into the Nature of the thing we are offended at, we can have no Reason that will either warrant or excuse our Offence.

Now to a due Enquiry, it is necessary that we should impartially examine both sides of the Question; and that while we are doing so, we should keep both our Ears open to the Matter in Debate, and equally attend to what can be said for, as well as to what can be said against it; and then that upon a full hearing of both we should determine, as near as we can, on which side the Truth lies, without Favour or Affection. For he that enquires only what can be said against the Matter he is offended at, doth thereby give a plain Indication that he is resolved to be offended at it right or wrong; and that the End of his Enquiry is not so much to satisfy his Conscience, as to fortify his unreasonable Prejudice. Wherefore before we do reject the Conditions of our Church's Communion as sinful, we are obliged, under the Penalty of wilful Schism, impartially to enquire what is to be said for as well as against them; and for this End to apply ourselves to our Spiritual Governors and Pastors, and propose our Doubts to them, and attend to their Resolutions with with an honest, teachable Mind, that is willing to be informed; and where we are capable of judging, faithfully to peruse those Books and Arguments that make for the one side as well as the other. For unless we do thus, it's plain that we are biased by a factious Inclination, and that we have a great Mind to separate from the Church's Communion. For if we were not prejudiced against her Authority, by a Schismatical Temper of Mind, we should be as forward at least to consult what may be said for her Impositions, as what is said against them.

But then if the Matters she imposes are such as a plain and illiterate Communicant cannot judge of, nor comprehend the Force of the Reasons that make for, or against them, such Persons in such Cases are obliged humbly to acquiesce in the Church's Authority, and not blindly to separate from her they know not why. As for Instance, suppose the Matter imposed should be such a Form of Government, or such Modes of Discipline, or Rites and Circumstances of Divine Worship, as carry no such apparent Evil in them, or express Contradiction to any Command of our Saviour, as to enable an illiterate Christian rationally to pronounce them unlawful; and whether they be unlawful or no, is not to be determined perhaps without some Skill in the Original Languages, and the critical Acceptations of Phrases, or insight into Ecclesiastical History, or Metaphysical Niceties and Speculations: and 'tis by some of these that most of the Controversies between us and our dissenting Brethren, are to be judged and decided. Now, in such Matters as these, where he cannot judge for himself, what should an unlearned Communicant do? Why, this he knows well enough, that 'tis his Duty in all lawful Things to submit to the Governors of his Church, and reverence Christ's Authority in them; but whether the above-named Matters they impose be lawful or no, he neither doth nor can know. So that if upon the score of those Impositions, he rejects the Church's Communion, he rejects it he knows not why; and to avoid doing that which he doth not know is a Sin, he refuses to do that which he knows is a Duty: So that whether that which the Church imposes be lawful or no, 'tis apparent Rebellion in him to refuse it; because for all that he knows it is lawful, and tho it should be unlawful, yet that cannot be the Motive of his Non-compliance with it, who doth not understand the Reasons that make it so. He therefore that separates from the Communion of the Church, for Causes that he cannot judge of, must necessarily separate without Cause or Reason; he can have neither true nor false Pretence for his Separation; because the Arguments pro and con are beyond the Sphere of his Cognizance; and consequently, if he thereupon withdraw from the Church's Communion, 'tis not because he cannot comply with her sinful Impositions, but because he will not submit to her just Authority. Whereas by modestly submitting our Judgment to the Church's, in Cases where we cannot judge for ourselves, we take an effectual Course to secure our Innocence. For tho that which the Church enjoins us should be materially sinful, yet to us who neither do nor can understand it to be so, it will be imputed only as an innocent Error, because by following the Church's Reason where our own cannot guide us, we take the best Course we can not to be mistaken; and if we should be mistaken, we have this to excuse us, that 'twas by following an Authority which God Himself hath set over us; whereas if we are mistaken on the other side, we are left altogether inexcusable.

But then there may be other Conditions of Church-Communion, of whose unlawfulness a Communicant may be very doubtful, tho he be not confidently persuaded of it; and what is to be done in this Case? To which I answer; First, that 'tis doubtless our duty not rashly to determine any thing to be false or unlawful which our Spiritual Governors have determined to be true or lawful. For we are bound by the Law of Christian Modesty to conclude, that they having a larger Prospect of Things than we, and greater

Advantages

Advantages of inquiring into them, are far more capable Judges of what is true and lawful; and consequently, tho we may possibly have some little Probability that their Opinion is false, or their Command unlawful, yet we ought not to determine it so, unless it be in such plain and evident Cases, as do not only out-weigh the Probability of their Opinions, but the Authority of them too. Wherefore in Cases of a doubtful Nature, 'tis both modest and safe to subscribe to the Judgment of our Superiors; because in so doing, we have not only our own Ignorance to excuse, but their Authority to warrant us; and if we should happen to be in the Wrong, thro' our Modesty and Humility, 'twill be safer for us, than to be in the Right thro' our Pride and Self-conceit. But perhaps the Probability of our side may be so great, or at least seem so to us, that notwithstanding we give all due Respect and Deference to her Authority, we cannot forbear doubting of the Lawfulness of her Conditions of Communion. If so, then, Secondly, 'tis to be considered, that 'tis as much our Duty to obey her Commands in Things that are lawful, as not to obey them in Things that are unlawful; and therefore if we only doubt whether her Commands be lawful or no, our Doubt ought to make us as fearful of disobeying as it doth of obeying them, because the Danger of sinning is on both sides equal. And therefore in this Case, wherein I am necessitated to determine myself one way or the other, it is, doubtless, my Duty, to determine on that side which makes most for the Church's Security and Peace, which, next to the Honour of God, and the Salvation of Souls, ought to be preferred above all Things; and which consequently, if it be of any Weight with me, must necessarily turn the Scale of my Choice, when it is before in Æquilibrio; and whether to obey or disobey, be most for the Church's Peace, is very easy to be determined.

The Sum of all therefore is this, That 'tis our Duty to continue in strict Obedience to, and Communion with, that Particular Church whereof we are Members, so long as it enjoins us nothing that is plainly and apparently sinful; that if either we cannot judge of the Sinfulness or Lawfulness of her Conditions of Communion, or do only doubt of their Lawfulness, we are obliged to submit to her Judgment and Authority, and not to separate from her, till upon an impartial Enquiry into the Reasons of both sides, we are fully convinced that they are sinful.

Now that this is an indispensable Duty of our Religion, is evident, not only from the above-named Scriptures, by which the Bishops of particular Churches are constituted the Overseers and Governors of them, and the Subjects and Members of those Churches are required to yield them Obedience; but also from those Texts which forbid Divisions in the particular Churches, such as 1 Cor. i. 10. I beseech you, by the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ, that there be no Divisions among you; and which bid us mark them that cause Divisions among us, and avoid them, Rom. xvi. 17. and also which declare Schisms and Divisions to be Fruits of the Flesh, as particularly, 1 Cor. iii. 3. and St. Jude 19. and in a Word, which require us to endeavour to keep the Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace, Eph. iv. 3. to be of one Mind, 2 Cor. xiii. 11. and to stand fast in one Spirit, with one Mind, Phil. i. 27. all which was spoke to Christians, as they were Members of particular Churches, to oblige them by no means to dissent and separate from those Churches, unless they were forced to it by just and manifest Reasons, and methinks 'tis a most pathetical Conjunction of the Apostle, If there be any Consolation in Christ, if any Comfort of Love, if any Fellowship of the Spirit, if any Bowels and Mercies; fulfil ye my Joy, that ye be like-minded, being of one accord, and of one Mind, Phil. ii. 1, 2. which Exhortation he gives them, as they were a particular Corporation of Christians under Epaphroditus, their Head and Bishop, by whom he sent this Epistle to them. The Sense of all which is, to oblige us not to disunite ourselves from the Church, of which we are Members, so long as we are permitted to continue in her

Communion,

Communion, without doing any thing that is apparently unlawful. Or if we suppose those Divisions which the Apostle speaks of, and forbids, to be meant of Factions within the Church, without actual Separation, then much more is Separation, which is the biggest Faction and Breach of Unity, to be lookt upon as wicked and unlawful. So that for Men to separate from the Church's Communion upon little Piques, uncertain Scruples, and blind Prejudices, is a very great and dangerous Sin against the Gospel; 'tis a manifest Violation of the Laws of Union, and an open Rebellion against Christ's Authority in his Church. And being so, it is no wonder, that in the purest Ages of Christianity, 'twas branded with such an infamous Character: For thus in the 31st Canon of the Apostles, 'tis called Ambition and Tyranny, and condemn'd by Ignatius, the Disciple of St. John, as the Ἀρχὴ κακῶν, or Original of Evils, Ep. ad Smyrn. as a Sin that shuts Men out of the Kingdom of Heaven, Ep. ad Philad. and by the African Code 'tis stiled a destructive, sacrilegious Sin, Con. Carth. &c. Can. 100. and St. Cyprian makes it to be more Heinous than the Sin of the Lapsi, that offered Sacrifice to Idols to avoid Persecution, and to be such a Sin, as Martyrdom itself would not expiate, de Unit. Eccles. and Dionysius Alexandrinus affirms, That to suffer Martyrdom, rather than make a Schism in the Church, is as glorious an Act to die refusing to offer Sacrifice to Idols, Euseb. Eccl. Hist. lib. 6. And as they thus decry Schism, so on the contrary they extol Union, as the Nurse of Piety, the Fence of Religion, the Quintessence and Extract of all Christian Virtue.

And indeed, 'tis to the Unity of the Members of the Church among themselves, that the Scripture attributes their Growth and Improvement in Piety and Virture: For thus the Apostle tells us, not only that Charity (or a mutual Agreement among Church-Members) edifies, 1 Cor. viii. 1. but also assures us, that the whole Church or Collection of Members becomes an holy Temple, and an Habitation of God, by being συναρμολογημένη, compacted, and closely united together in all its Parts, Eph. ii. 21, 22. and Eph. iv. 16. he tells us, that the Church increases or improves unto the edifying itself in love, by being closely compacted and united in all its Parts and Members; and Col. ii. 19. he tells us, that 'tis not only from its Union with Christ, and those nourishing Influences that are thereby conveyed from him, that the Church increases with the Increase of God, but also from its being knit together, or firmly united in all its Parts. And if Union be so necessary to the Growth and Perfection of the Church, it can be no less necessary to the Improvement of each particular Member of it. For,

1. Schisms and unnecessary Breaches of Church-Communion do naturally sour the Tempers of Men, and render them peevish and uncharitable towards one another. For the separating Party must, in their own Vindication be forced to accuse those they separate from of something that may be foul enough to justify their Separation, and what they want in Reality, they must make up in Pretence, otherwise they will be lookt upon as peevish and obstinate Schismatics; and then the Party they separate from, will be sure to deem itself injured, and in its own Defence be forced to recriminate, and this will alarm the Separatists into greater Heats and Animosities, and so like two Flints dash'd together, they will be continually sparkling and spitting Fire at one another, till they have kindled the Quarrel into an unquenchable Flame. Whereas had the Dividers but continued their Communion, all this might have been prevented, and they might have easily continued their Charity, tho they had retained the Opinions upon which they separated: For had they but exercised that Modesty and Goodness, as not to prefer their own private Sentiments before the Reason and Peace of the whole Church, they would either have kept their Opinions to themselves, or at least not have advanced them into Principles of Separation; and so by continuing in Communion with that Party of the Church from whence they dissented in Opinion, they would have declared clared, that they judged their Errors to be tolerable: For by not separating from them, they would have plainly manifested that they saw Reason enough to unite upon the Score of those Points in which they were agreed, but none to disunite upon the Score of these in which they differed; and consequently, that they had a great deal of Reason to love, but none to bate, and persecute one another; and whilst they mutually retained this good Opinion of one another, 'tis very unlikely that their little Differences should cause any great Breaches in their Charity. Schism therefore being so destructive to our Charity, which is one of the leading Virtues of our Religion, must needs have a very malevolent Aspect upon our Perseverance: For he that from a charitable Temper, relapses into a spiteful and rancorous one, is Apostatized from one half of the Religion of a Christian, and hath exchanged one of the fairest Graces of a Saint, for one of the blackest Characters of a Devil. And then,

2. Schisms, or unnecessary Breaches of Church-Communion, do naturally lead to the foulest Hypocrisies: For he that separates from a Church is a very bad Man, if he hath not a great Opinion of, and Zeal for those Things upon which he separates; which Zeal of his, when once he is actually separated, will be much more inflamed, and that both by the Opposition of the Church he is separated from, and the Instigation of the Sect he is separated to; and so by Degrees that holy Fervour which should animate him in the plain and unquestionable Duties of Religion, will blaze into a fierce Contention for those little Opinions that constitute the Sect he is engaged in. For our Nature being finite and limited in all its Operations, it is impossible we should operate divers ways at once with equal Force and Vigour; but whatsoever Time and Attendance we bestow upon one Thing, we must necessarily subtract from another. Now whilst we continue in a peacable Communion with the Church, we have no other Use for our Zeal, but to inspire our Devotions, to quicken our Virtues, and to fight against our Sins with it, and this all Men agree, is the best Use it can be put to; but when once we are entered into a schismatical Separation, we shall find other Employment for it; namely, to quarrel at Ecclesiastical Constitutions, to wrangle about Modes and Circumstances of Worship, and contend for our trifling Speculations, and Opinions: which must necessarily weaken it in its nobler Operations, and render it more remiss and indifferent in the great and indispensible Duties of Religion; and whilst 'tis thus impertinently busied in picking Straws, and contending about Mint and Cummin, to be sure it must more or less neglect the great and weighty Things of the Law; and so proportionably as it grows warmer and warmer about little Opinions and Circumstances of Religion, it will be continually waxing cooler and cooler in the necessary and essential Duties of it; till at last 'tis wholly degenerated into Peevishness and Faction, and dwindled away into a fierce Contention about Trifles. That this is the natural Effect of Schism, appears by too many woful Experiments. For how many Instances of Men are there among themselves, who had once an honest Zeal for the Life and Substance of Religion, and made great Conscience of living soberly, righteously, and godly in this present World, but afterwards becoming Bigots to such a Sect or Party, have diverted the Stream of their Zeal into another Channel, where its irregular Current hath only made a Noise, and fill'd the World with a loud and turbulent Clamour about little Things, but as to those great and important Duties upon which their Happiness depends, hath been profoundly mute and indifferent; and so their Religion, like an Heetick Body, hath, by degrees, been consumed by its own Heats, whilst that Zeal and Fervour, which should move and animate it, hath been converted into its Disease, and wholly evaporated into Faction and Turbulency; and whilst their Zeal is thus misemployed about the little Trifles of their Sect, and they are ready to start at an innocent Ceremony, and to swoon at the sight of an indifferent Mode and Appendage of Religion, as if they were afraid lest it should infect them at a distance, they can swallow Camels, tho they strain at these Gnats, and glibly digest the grossest Immoralities.

3. And lastly, Schisms and unnecessary Breaches of Church-Communion, do naturally lead to down-right Irreligion. For when once a Man departeth from an established Church without a just Warrant, there is nothing can confine or set Shores to him, he hath no Principles that can stay him any where, or set any Measures of Changing to him: For when upon a meer Humour or Fancy he hath run from the Church to such a Sect, what should hinder him from running from that Sect to another, and so on from Sect to Sect, till he hath run himself out of all Religion? He is rolling down a steep Hill, and hath no Principles to stay him, so that 'tis impossible to determine whither he will go, or where he will stop; he may perhaps stay at such an Opinion, but if he doth, it is by chance, and if he doth not, he will be endlessly rolling from one Opinion to another, and shifting his Church as often as his Almanack: For Schism is a large Labyrinth, that naturally divides and subdivides into infinite Paths and Allies, wherein a Man may wander to Eternity, and the farther he goes, the more he may lose himself; and then when he hath wandred a while out of one wild Opinion into another, and still perceives that the farther he goes, the more he is dissatisfied, 'tis a thousand to one, if he doth not at last suspect and question all Religion, as if the whole were an intricate maze of absurd or doubtful Opinions, contriv'd on purpose to amuse Mens Minds, and intangle them in endless Perplexities. For the Schismatick, as I shewed before, doth commonly place a great Part of his Religion in that Opinion upon which he divides and separates, so that if once he be dissatisfied with this, as in all Probability he will quickly be, having begun already to ring Changes, he will be under a great Temptation to mistrust the whole Religion to be as great an Imposture as he finds this darling Opinion is, especially after he hath run thro' several Sets of Opinions, and finds them at last to be all Delusions: For as weak Heads, when they perceive the Battlements shake, are apt to suspect that the Foundations are infirm; so weak Understandings will be ready to suspect even the fundamental Principles of Religion, when once they perceive those darling Notions totter, which they have confidently presum'd to superstruct upon it. Upon this Account therefore I make no doubt, but that the Atheism of this present Age, is very much owing to its Sects and Divisions. For how many woful Examples have we of Persons, who had once a great deal of Zeal for, and Satisfaction in Religion, that upon their causeless Defection from the Church's Communion, have run from Sect to Sect, and from one extravagant Opinion to another, till being at last convinced of the Cheats and Impostures of them all, they have discarded Religion itself, and made their last Resort into Atheism and Infidelity; since therefore Schism hath so many Mischiefs attending it, and such as do manifestly endanger our Perseverance in Religion, it highly concerns us, as we would hold out to the End in the Course of our Christian Warfare, to keep close to the Communion of the Church.

VI. To our final Perseverance in the Christian Warfare, it is also necessary that we should not stint our Progress in Religion (out of a fond Opinion that we are good enough already) to any determinate Degrees or Measures of Goodness: For thus we are enjoined not only to have Grace, but still to be growing in it, 2 Pet. iii. 18. and not only to do the Work of the Word, but to abound in the doing it, 1 Cor. xv. 58. and not only to walk in all well-pleasing to God, but to abound in so doing more and more, 1 Thess. iv. 1. to forget what is behind, i. e. the Degrees of Virtue and Goodness we have already attained, and to be still pressing forward to the Mark of our high Calling, Phil. iii. 13, 14. The Sense of all which is, that we should not limit ourselves to our present Attainments, out of a slothful Opinion that we are good enough already, but that we should still be proceeding on to farther and farther Degrees of Perfection. For Holiness ness is every where enjoined in the Gospel in unlimited and indefinite Measures, and our Progress in it had no other Boundary than the farthestmost Degree of possible Perfection. An Injunction which will keep us for ever sufficiently employed, and to oblige us to Eternity to be still aspiring beyond our present Attainments; and the Neglect of this is doubtless the Occasion of many a Man's final Miscarriage. They aim at no more than what is absolutely necessary to remove them from the Brink of Eternal Perdition; and if they can but so far prevail against their Sin, as to arrive at the lowermost Degree of sincere Obedience, and but just pass the Line which separates between a bad and good State, that so if they die as they are, they may hope to escape Hell, and arrive at some Degree of Happiness, they think they have very fairly acquitted themselves. But now besides, that Line which parts those Two States of Sin and Grace is not so easily discernible, but that you may very probably be deceived, and imagine that you are got over it into the State of Grace, whilst you are yet upon the Frontiers of the Dominion of Sin, and so may perish at last at the very Mouth of your Harbour; besides that, 'tis a fearful Sign that you are yet in your Sins, that you design no farther but just to escape that Everlasting Ruin that attends them, which plainly shews that the Fear of Hell is the Soul of your Religion, and that there is not the least Degree of true Love to God intermingled with it, without which your Religion will be altogether insignificant; besides all this, I say, while you rest in such an imperfect State of Goodness, you dwell in the next Neighbourhood to a sinful State, and so are in continual Danger of returning thither again. For how is it possible you should be safe, while you stay upon the Brink of that miserable State, out of which you are but just emerged and recovered, and have so many strong Inclinations within you, concurring with the numberless Temptations without you, to thrust you headlong back again into it? So that if you would be secure, it is not sufficient for you just to get out of your sinful State, and stay there, but you must still be removing farther and farther from it, by proceeding on still to farther Degrees of Perfection: For you must consider that there is a vast Distance between a State of sincere, and of confirmed Goodness, and that all the while you are passing on from the one to the other, you are more or less in Danger of Relapsing. For you have been sincerely Good, ever since your first Entrance into a firm and heartly Resolution of Amendment; but, alas! since that, how many times have you been in danger of relapsing into your old sinful Courses again? What strong Contentions have there been between your Flesh and your Spirit, your bad Inclinations, and your pious Resolutions? And tho the latter hath been most commonly victorious, yet how often hath it been yielding, yea, how often hath it been vanquish'd? Inasmuch, that if you had not by a quick Repentance reviv'd it immediately, it had been dead long since, and you had been as much enslaved to your Lusts as ever. And from these Dangers you will never be wholly free, till you have utterly extinguish'd your vicious Inclinations, and inwrought all the Virtues of Religion into your Natures; and then you will be arrived to that confirmed State of Goodness from which it will be morally impossible for you to revolt. If therefore you would secure your Perseverance to the End beware you do not limit yourselves in the Way; for tho if you die but just sincerely Good, you shall certainly escape Hell; yet, in all probability you will not be long sincerely Good, unless you be something more; that is, unless you proceed in the Degrees of Virtue, and do more and more suppress your evil, and improve your good Dispositions and Inclinations: For so long as there remains in you any Lust to evil, you will be in Danger of being betrayed by it; and the stronger that Lust is, the more it threatens your Destruction. So that you can never be safe, so long as you have an Enemy alive in your Breast and whilst you rest in any Attainment on this side the confirmed State of Virtue, in which there is an utter Extinction of all evil Inclinations, you are more or less in Danger, proportionably as you are more or less distant from that happy Period.

VII. To our final Perseverance, it is also necessary that we should frequently entertain ourselves with the Prospect of our Mortality, and endeavour to compose ourselves before-hand into a good Posture of dying. For thus we are called upon in this our militant State, to consider our latter End, Deut. xxxii. 29. and by the Examples of the best Men, are invited to number our Days, that we may apply our Hearts unto Wisdom, Psal. xc. 12. and to wait till our Change comes, Job xiv. 14. to which End we are put in Mind, that here we have no abiding City, Heb. xiii. 14. and that 'tis appointed for all Men once to die, Heb. ix. 27. and that our Life is even as a Vapour, that appears for a little time, and then vanishes away, James iv. 14. and to this Purpose the Apostle applies this Consideration, 1 Cor. vii. 29, 30, 31. Now this I say, Brethren, (that is, of our Abode and Continuance here, upon which he exhorts us to compose ourselves to a great Indifferency, as to the Things of this World) it remains that both they that have Wives, be as tho they had none: and they that weep, as tho they wept not; and they that rejoice, as tho they rejoiced not; and they that buy, as tho they possessed not; and they that use this World as not abusing it; for the Fashion of this World passes away, i. e. since your Time is here very short, endeavour before-hand to loosen yourselves from this World, and to put yourselves into a fit Posture of leaving it; for 'tis but a short Scene that will quickly be shifted, and then there will an eternal State of things succeed.

And indeed, since to die well, is the last Act and final Consummation of our Christian Warfare, it must needs highly concern us to arm and prepare ourselves for it before-hand, lest we lose the blessed Prizes, by stumbling just at the Goal, and, after a long Voyage, miscarry for ever within Sight of Harbour. For in the Hour of Death, we throw our last Cast for an Eternity of Happiness or Misery; and how much are we concerned to throw that well, upon which so vast a Stake depends? O! 'Tis a serious Thing to die; to pass this dark Entry of Eternity, thro' which, as we go, right or wrong, we are made or undone for ever: For to carry us right thro', 'tis not not a few Death-bed Sorrows, or good Wishes, a few extorted Promises, or forced Resolutions, or frightful Prayers, or Lord have Mercy upon us, will serve the Turn; O! no, it is an expensive Passage, which we shall never be able to defray, unless we carry along with us a large Stock of spiritual Preparations. We shall have need of a strong and active Faith, of a Mind well furnished with wise Considerations, of a deep, a large, and a tried Repentance, an unrestrained Charity, a confirmed Patience, a profound Submission to the Will of God, and a well-grounded Hope of a blessed Eternity: For without all these together, we shall be very ill-accounted to die, and run a dreadful Hazard of miscarrying for ever. And these are such Things as do not usually spring up like Mushrooms in a Night, or in the few disturbed Moments of a dying Time, but do ask a much larger and serener Season to grow and ripen in. So that if we mean to die well, and so come off victoriously in this last Act of our spiritual Warfare, we must now, while we are well, be frequently entertaining our Meditations in the Charnel-house, and read Lectures to ourselves upon the Skeletons and Death-heads there, those Emblems and Representations of our approaching Mortality; and from them take such lively Pictures of the King of Terrors, as may render his grim Visage and fearful Addresses so familiar to us, as that our Thoughts may be before-hand accustomed to the manner of his Approaches; with what an Army of diseases he is wont to lay Siege to the Fort of our Life, how in Despight of all the Resistances of Nature, he plants and quarters them in our Veins or our Arteries, our Stomachs or our Bowels, and from thence infests us all over with continual Anguish and Pain; how when he hath tired and exhausted us with his continued Batteries, and worn out our Strength with a Succession of wearisom Nights to sorrowful Days, he at last storms the Soul out of all the Out-works of Nature, and forces it to retire into the Heart; and how when he hath marked us for dead, with a Baptism of clammy and fatal Sweats, he summons our weeping Friends to assist him, to grieve and vex us with their parting Kisses and sorrowful Adieus; and how at length, when he is weary of Tormenting us any more, he rushes into our Hearts, and with a few mortal Pangs and Convulsions, tears the Soul from thence, and turns it out to seek its Fortune in the wide World of Spirits; where 'tis either seized on by Devils, and carried away to their dark Prisons of Sorrow and Despair, there to languish out its Life in a dismal Expectation of that dreadful Day, wherein it must change its bad Condition for a worse; or be conducted by Angels to some blest Abode, there to remain in unspeakable Pleasure and Tranquillity, till 'tis crowned with a glorious Resurrection. Now since 'tis most certain that we must all one time or other experience these Things, but most uncertain how soon; how much doth it concern us to think of them before-hand, and to fore-cast such Provisions and Preparations for them, as that whensoever they happen, we may not be surprized: For besides that, the frequent Meditation of Death will familiarize its Terrors to us; so that whenever it comes, our Minds, which have been so long accustomed to converse with it, will be much less startled and amazed at it; besides that, it will wean us from the inordinate Desire and over-eager Prosecution of the Things of this World, which, as I told you before, are the Snares with which our Vices do too often intangle us; besides all this, I say, it will put us upon laying in a Store of spiritual Provisions against that great Day of Expenditure. For he that often considers the dreadful Approaches, the concomitant Terrors, and the momentous Issues and Consequents of Death, must be strangely stupified, if he be not thereby vigorously excited to fore-arm and fortify himself with all those Graces and Defences that are necessary to render it easy, safe and prosperous.

storms

VIII. To our final Perseverance in the Christian Warfare, it is also necessary, that in order to the putting ourselves into a good Posture to die, we should discharge our Consciences of all the Reliques and Remains of our past Guilt: For so we are commanded to take care that our Hearts be sprinkled from an evil Conscience, Heb. x. 22. and to hold Faith and a good Conscience, 1 Tim. i. 19. and to make this our Rejoicing, the Testimony of our Conscience, that in Simplicity and godly Sincerity, we have had our Conversation in the World, 2 Cor. i. 12. In a Word, to live in all good Conscience, Acts xxiii. 1. and to have a Conscience void of Offence, towards God, and towards Men, Acts xxiv. 16. which, tho they are General Duties, do necessarily imply this Particular, that we should very nicely and curiously examine our Consciences, those faithful Records and Registers of our Actions, and where-ever we find the least Item of an uncancelled Guilt, immediately cross it out by a hearty Sorrow for, and moral Revocation of it: For notwithstanding, we may have in the general repented of all our past Sins; yet there are some Sins, which, notwithstanding we re-act no more, do leave a lasting Guilt upon the Mind, which nothing can cancel but our actual revoking and unsinning them. As supposing that I have heretofore, either by my bad Counsels or Example, seduced other Men into wicked Courses; it is not sufficient for the Expiation of my Fault, that I myself abstain from those wicked Courses for the future, but I must endeavour to undo the Mischief which I have done to others by them, and by a solemn Recantation of my past Follies, by Persuasion and good Counsel, and the Application of all other pious and prudent Means, endeavour to reduce those whom I have formerly perverted. For till I have done this, I wilfully permit the mischievous Effects of my Sin to remain; and if when I have wounded another, I suffer him to perish, without taking any Care of his Cure, I am guilty of his Murder, tho I never wound him more. Suppose again, that I have injured another by any malicious Slander or Calumny; it is not enough to acquit me of the

Guilt

Guilt of it, that I cease to scandalize him for the future, but I must also endeavour by a free Retraction to vindicate his injured Name from the ill Surmises of those to whom I have asperst him; for so long as his Reputation suffers thro' my not Retracting the Calumnies I have cast upon it, I wilfully persist to defame and calumniate him, and so long the Guilt of it must stick and abide upon my Conscience. Once more, suppose I have injured another in his Estate, either by Theft or Fraud, or Oppression, it will not be sufficient to acquit me, that for the future I forbear defrauding, forcing, or stealing from him any more, but, if it be in my Power, I must make Restitution of all that I have wrongfully deprived him of; and that to himself, if he be living, or if not, to those that succeed him in his Rights; and for want of such, to the Poor, who, by God's Donation, have the Propriety of all such Wests and Strays, as have no other Owner surviving: For it's certain that my wrongful Seizure of what is another Man's, doth not alienate his Right to it, so that he hath the same Right to it while I keep it from him, as he had at first, when I took it from him, and consequently, till I restore it back to him, I continue to wrong him of it; and my detaining it is a continued Repetition of that Fraud, or Theft, or Oppression, by which I wrongfully seized it; and whilst I thus continue the Sin, 'tis impossible but the Guilt of it must still abide upon me. In these Cases therefore it concerns us to be very nice and curious in examining our Accounts, to see if there be any of these Scores yet uncancelled, any of these bad Effects of our Sin yet remaining: For if any such Matter appear in our Accounts, it concerns us as much as our everlasting Interest amounts to, to use all present Care and Diligence to discharge it, that so before Death summons us to give up our Accounts to the great Auditor of the World, all Scores between him and us may be even'd and adjusted. And indeed if we would be safe, it vastly imports us to leave as little as may be to do upon a Death-bed; for that is most commonly a very improper State for religious Action; since, for all we know, we may be distracted in it by a Fever, or stupified by an Apoplexy, or deprived of the Use of Reason by the insufferable Torments of a Stone; either of which will render us incapable of every Thing but Dying. Or, if neither of these should happen, yet to be sure a dying State will bring Work enough with it; Sorrows and Care enough, Fears and Impatiencies enough to exercise all our Virtue, and employ all our Reason. So that if we carry with us to our Death-bed any Item or Relique of uncancell'd Guilt, 'tis a thousand to one, but in the Hurry of dying, we shall leave it uncancell'd, and be arrested for it by the Divine Justice, when we come into Eternity. Wherefore, as we would prevent this fatal Issue of our Christian Warfare, it concerns us now we are well, to make a diligent Inspection into our Consciences, to see if there yet remains any old Reckonings of Guilt undischarged by us; and if there be, not to give rest to our Eyes, nor slumber to our Eye-lids, till by an actual unsinning and Revocation of the Facts; we have totally crossed and discharged them. But then because many of these may slip out of our Mind, and so be past Recovery;

IX. To the happy Conclusion of this our Christian Warfare, 'tis also necessary, that to compensate, so far as we are able, for these Reliques of Guilt in us, we should take care to redeem the Time we have formerly mispent in sinful Courses, by being doubly diligent in the Exercise of all the contrary Virtues, and the doing all the contrary Good we are able: For of all the outward Blessings that God affords us, our Time is incomparably the most precious and inestimable; and therefore tho he gives us his other Blessings in great Variety, and provides for us a plentiful Choice of Meats, Drinks, and Raiment, yet in the Distribution of our Time, he seems to be more sparing and strait-handed; for he gives it not to us in Rivers, but Drop by Drop, and Minute after Minute, so that we can never enjoy two Moments together, but when ever he gives us one, he always takes away another. And yet, good God! what Waste do we make of these precious Drops of which thou art so nice and sparing? How great a Part of it do we consume in our Childhood, upon the indifferent Vanities of Nuts and Rattles, and afterwards upon the much more ridiculous and unreasonable ones of our vicious, profuse and extravagant Appetites? So that by that time we come to a serious Prosecution of the great End of our Beings, the main Part of our Time is usually elapsed beyond Revocation. How much therefore doth it concern us, after we have so prodigally squandered away the greatest Part of the Treasure of our Time, to make the best Improvement of the small Remainder? that so we may at least morally recover that which is Physically irrecoverable: For tho we cannot cause the past Minutes we have ill spent to be present again, yet we can redouble our Diligence for the future, and thereby render every one Minute to come equivalent to every two that are past: For by a double Diligence we may live as much in one Day, as we can in two by a single; and consequently, by doubly improving that Part of our Time, which is yet good and to come, we may morally retrieve that Part which is lost and gone.

This therefore the Gospel requires at our Hands, that after we have lived out a great Part of our Time to no purpose, we should from thenceforth live much in a little while, and retrieve our past Negligence by our future Diligence, and redeem the Time we have spent upon our Lusts; by exerting the contrary Virtues more vigorously for the future; that the more profane we have been for the Time past, the more devout we should be for the Time to come; that the more we have abounded heretofore in Frauds and Oppressions, the more we should abound hereafter in Charity and Alms; that the more industrious we have been to seduce and debauch Men, the more zealous we should be to reduce and reclaim them; and by our future Candour and Charitable Construction of Men, endeavour to compensate for the Malice of our past Slanders and Defamations. Thus Eph. v. 28. Let him that stole, steal no more; ay, but that is not enough, but he must also endeavour to redeem his past Thefts by a more vigorous Exercise of the contrary Virtue for the future; but rather let him labour, working with his own Hands the Thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needs. So also, Dan. iv. 27. Break off thy Sins by Righteousness, and thine Iniquities, by shewing Mercy to the Poor, i. e. whereas for the Time past, the Course of thy Life hath very much abounded with Cruelty and Injustice, do thou now endeavour to redeem the Guilt of it (for so the Hebrew Verb signifies) by exerting more vigorously the contrary Virtues, viz. of Justice to all, and of Mercy to the poor and afflicted. And to this purpose St. Paul's Example is proposed to our Imitation, who, because for the Time past he had been a great Persecutor of Christianity, did, for the future, labour more abundantly than any other Apostle, to advance and propagate it, 1 Cor. xv. 9, 10. The Observance of which Rule is highly necessary to the reducing this our Warfare to a prosperous Issue: For, as I told you before, there are many Sins, which, after we have forsaken the Practice of them, do stick such a Guilt upon the Conscience, as without our undoing them, so far as we are able, is not to be wiped off; such as wicked Counsel, malicious Detraction, and unjust Gain, all which we are bound, so far as 'tis in our Power, not only to avoid, but actually to revoke. But alas! there are many of these, which, in a long Course of Sin, are utterly forgotten by us, and consequently are past Revocation, and in this Case, all we can do to take off the Guilt of them, is, in the general Course of our Lives to abound in the Practice of the contrary Virtues, and to do the utmost Service we are able to the Souls and good Names, and Bodies of Men. For Charity, saith the Apostle, shall cover a multitude of Sins, 1 Pet. iv. 8. that is, when it appears by the abundance of our Charity, that we would abolish and repair all the Injuries we have done, if it were in our Power, God in this Case will accept the Will for the Deed, and deal as mercifully by us as if we had actually done it. For if it appear in his Sight that we would do it if we could, we are in his Account as truly obedient to him, as if we had actually performed it, and consequently shall be dealt with by the same Proportions of Mercy. But 'tis only an extraordinary Charity that can evidence this; since what is ordinary we are obliged to, tho we had no past Injuries to abolish; but to insure our Reconciliation with God, it is requisite that we should evidence to him our sincere Willingness, to do not only what we should have been obliged to, if we had not been injurious, but also what we are obliged to since we have been injurious. Now as actual Reparation, so far as we are able, is necessary to evidence this, when we remember the Injuries we have done, so an extraordinary Charity is no less necessary to evidence this, when we have forgotten them. And this I suppose is the meaning of that Parallel Passage of St. James, chap. v. 20. He that converteth a Sinner from the Error of his Way, shall save a Soul from Death, and shall hide a multitude of Sins; i. e. by such an illustrious Act of Charity to the Soul of his Brother, he shall obtain Pardon of God for many of those forgotten Injuries which he hath formerly done, and is now no otherwise able to repair. So that if we would make sure Work of our Christian Warfare, and ascertain its being finally crowned with Success; as in general we must endeavour to redeem the past Time we have spent in vicious Courses, by abounding in the Practice of the contrary Virtues; so in particular, if for the Time past we have lived in any of those injurious Courses which do naturally fix a more lasting Guilt upon the Mind, we must take care not only to repair, so far as we are able, those Injuries we remember, but also to wipe off the Guilt of those we have forgotten, by an extraordinary Charity and Beneficence, by laying hold of all Opportunities to do Good, and endeavouring in our several Stations, according as God hath enabled us, to reduce the Souls, relieve the Bodies, and vindicate the Reputation of our Brethren.

X. And Lastly, To our final Perseverance in well-doing, it is also necessary that we should labour after a rational and well-grounded Assurance of Heaven. I put this in the last Place, because 'tis usually the last attained, and is not to be presently expected and catch'd at, as soon as we are entered into a Religious State: For there are a great many Stages of Religion to be past, before we can modestly expect to arrive at Assurance. In the Beginning of our Religion, when we are just recovered out of a vicious State, we cannot but be sensible, if we do at all understand ourselves, that we are as yet in a great deal of Danger, and do border so very near upon that bad State we are escaped from, that 'tis almost impossible to distinguish whether we are in or out of it: For tho we are fully purposed and resolved against it; yet we cannot well divine what will be the Issue of it. Our Resolution is yet so young, so raw and unexperienced, and besieged with so many powerful counter-striving Inclinations, that we cannot confide in it without great Folly and Presumption: For till sufficient Trial hath been made of it, for all that we know, it may prove to be only a Godly Mood, or a short Lucid Interval between the raving Fits of our Lust and extravagant Affections, which, in a few Days perhaps, may return again, and utterly alienate and distract us from all our sober Counsels and Purposes. And if it should so happen, that which we now look upon as our Cure and Recovery, will prove but an Intermission of our Disease. And when for some time we have tried our Resolution; and found that it hath bravely resisted those Temptations that have hitherto assaulted it, yet we cannot presently be reasonably assured of it, considering the Fickleness and Inconstancy of our Nature: For it may be, it hath not been yet assaulted on the weak side, or it hath not been nick'd with a seasonable Temptation, or it may be, we may be more remiss and careless another Time, or more vehemently inclined to a vicious Compliance; and then those Temptations which we have hitherto conquered, may captive and subdue us. And if it thus happen, that which we now look upon as an everlasting Breach between us and our Lusts, may may prove only a Pet or short Distaste, and, like the falling out of Lovers, end in the renewing of Love. And till we have made some considerable Progress in the mortification of our sinful Inclinations, and the Acquisition of their contrary Habits, our Religion will have so many Flaws, Defects, and Imperfections in it, as will give us great Reason, if we have any modesty in us, to be very fearful and jealous of it. But since without Sincerity in Religion we can have no Title to Heaven, it hence follows, that without a clear Sense of our Sincerity, we can have no Assurance of our Title to it; and such a clear Sense as is necessary to found such an Assurance on, is not to be acquired, you see, without a thorow Trial of our Resolution in a long and vigorous Course of Religion. So that for Men to be immediately snatching at Assurance, as soon as ever they are entred into a good Life, argues them not to be so sensible, as they should be, of their own Imperfection and Frailty; they ought in Modesty to expect a while and not conclude too soon for themselves, till they have made a thorow Trial of their Resolution; and in the mean time to strive on, in Hope that by the Blessing of God concurring with their Endeavours, they shall at last attain such a certain Sense and Feeling of their own Sincerity, as will be sufficient to infer a firm and rational Assurance. For Assurance being the Top of Christian Attainment, we must ascend to it gradually, by the intermediate Staves and Rounds of a tried and lasting Obedience, and not leap up in an Instant before we have taken all the Steps and Degrees that lead thither.

But tho we ought not to be too forward in our Assurance, yet we are bound to labour after it in a due and regular Way; that is, To persist in our Obedience till we have reduced our inward and outward Motions to such a Degree of Conformity to the Standard of the Gospel, as that upon comparing ourselves with it, we may be able, without Flattery or Presumption, to conclude our own Sincerity and Uprightness. I know there is a much shorter Passage to Assurance, which some of late have pretended to; and that is, by certain unaccountable Incomes and Manifestations of God's Spirit, who, as they pretend, doth immediately whisper and reveal to them their Title and Interest in Heaven. But this, alas! is too much like the North-East Passage to the Indies, which is shorter indeed, if it could be found, but so very dangerous, that I doubt there are but few that attempt it but miscarry, and 'tis well if they do not finally perish in the Discovery. Not that I do in the least doubt but God doth many Times suggest and whisper unspeakable Comforts and Assurances to the Minds of good Men; but then it is to be considered, that this is an arbitrary Gift, which he seldom, if ever, bestows but in extraordinary Cases, when 'tis necessary to encourage us to some great Work, or to support us under some extraordinary Suffering. For he is a wise and careful Father of his Children, and knows 'tis much more necessary for us to be good, than to be ravished and transported; and that such high Cordials are neither proper nor safe for us but in great Extremities; and therefore for us to expect that he should make them our ordinary Food and Entertainment is an Argument of our childish Ignorance and Presumption. But tho such immediate Whispers and Revelations may serve to good Purposes in a Pinch of Extremity, yet are they by no means to be built upon as the Foundations of our ordinary, standing Assurance. For so long as there is an evil Spirit without, and a disordered Fancy within us, that can imitate these Whispers, we shall be continually liable, so long as we put Confidence in them, to all the Cheats and Impostures of natural and diabolical Enthusiasm, and unavoidably mistake many an Injection of the Devil, and many a warm Flush of Fanfy, or brisk Fermentation of Melancholy Humour, for a Whisper and Testimony of the Spirit of God, and by this means be often lull'd into false Confidences and Assurances, which, like Golden Dreams, will vanish when we awake, and leave us miserably disappointed. That Assurance therefore therefore which we are to aim at, must be founded in the Testimony of a good Conscience, and inferred from the Sense of our own Integrity and Uprightness.

And this we are commanded to endeavour after; so Heb. x. 22. we are bid to draw near unto God, ἐν πληροφορίᾳ πίστεως, in Confidence, or full assurance of Faith, that is, in a firm Persuasion of God's Love to us, and our Interest in his Promises; which Persuasion is to be founded upon an inward Sense of our having our Hearts sprinkled from an evil Conscience, and our Bodies wash'd with pure Water; and accordingly, Heb. vi. 11. to be diligent in good Works, to the full assurance of hope unto the end, i. e. to be so diligent in our Duty as that we may thereby acquire such a full Assurance of our Reward as may enable us to continue and hold out to the End. For St. John tells us, that 'tis by the Integrity of our Virtue, and particularly of our love to one another, that we are to assure our Hearts before God, 1 John iii. 14, 19. for, saith he, ver. 21. If our Hearts condemn us not, then have we confidence towards God; and for this purpose among others, the same Apostle tells us, he wrote this Catholick Epistle, that true Christians might know and be assured that they had eternal Life, 1 John v. 13.

From all which 'tis evident, That 'tis our Duty to labour after such an Assurance of Heaven, as naturally ariseth from the clear and certain Sense of our Sincerity towards God, and the firm Belief of the Promise of eternal Life, to which our Sincerity intitles us. For when we are so far improved in Religion, as that upon an impartial Survey of ourselves, we can feel our own Integrity, and sensibly perceive that our Intention is pure, our Resolution fix'd, and our Heart intirely devoted to God, we may from thence most certainly infer our Title and Interest to the Promise of Heaven. So that to the obtaining this Assurance, all that we have to do is, so far to purify our Intentions from sinister Aims, and subdue our bad Inclination to our Resolution and Obedience, as that whenever we reflect upon, and compare ourselves with the Rule, our Conscience may be able without any Diffidence to pronounce us sincere; and then we may as certainly conclude our Interest in Heaven, as we can, that God's Promises are true; and if after we are thus far improved in Religion, we still remain unassured, it proceeds not from the Want of sufficient Evidence, but either from a melancholy Temper, or a weak Faith, or a misinformed Conscience; and which soever of these is the Cause of it, when that is once removed, we shall as plainly feel our own Sincerity, and therein our Interest in Heaven, as we do now our bodily Passions. And having once attained this Assurance, 'twill animate our Hearts with an Heroick Courage against all Temptations, and carry us on with unspeakable Alacrity thro' all the remaining Stages of our Duty; it will invigorate our Endeavours, and wing our Activity, and make us all Life and Spirit in the Exercises of our holy Religion. And as when the Christian Army, after a tedious March towards the Land of Canaan, came within view of the holy City, and beheld afar off the Towers and Turrets of Jerusalem, they were so exstasied with Joy, that they made the Heavens ring with triumphant Shouts and Acclamations, and as if that Sight had given new Souls to them, ran on upon their Enemies with a Courage that forced Victory where-ever they came: So when a good Man after a long Progress from one Degree of Virtue to another, is got so far as that from a certain Sense and Feeling of his own Sincerity he can discern the new Jerusalem above, and his own Interest in it, that blessed Sight will fill him with so much Joy, Courage and Alacrity, that no Temptation for the future will be able to withstand or interrupt him. So that his Conscience will be always ringing with Acclamations of Victory, and the remainder of the March will be all a Triumphal Progress to him; and when he comes to the Conclusion of it, to die, and pass the Gate of this blessed City, the firm Assurance which he hath of Admittance, will dispel the Fears, sweeten the Troubles, Troubles, and assuage the Pangs and Agonies of the dolorous Passage. So that he will die, not only with Peace, but with Joy, and go away into Eternity with Hallelujahs in his Mouth. If therefore we mean to bring this our Spiritual Warfare to a happy Conclusion, it concerns us now, while we have Opportunity, to labour after a wise and well-grounded Assurance of Heaven.

S E C T. VI.

Containing certain Motives to press Men to the Practice of these Duties of Perseverance in the Christian Warfare.

HAVING in the foregoing Section described all those Duties which appertain to the last Part of our Christian Warfare, to wit, final Perseverance; and shewn how effectually they all contribute thereunto, I shall now, according to my former Method, conclude with some Motives to press and persuade Men to the Practice of them; all which I shall deduce from the Consideration of the great and urgent Necessity of our final Perseverance, to which those Duties are such necessary Helps and Means. For unless we take in the Assistance of these Duties, in all Probability we shall never be able to hold out to the End; and unless we persevere to the End, we are guilty of the most fatal and mischievous piece of Folly in the World. For consider,

1. If after we have made some progress in Religion, we wilfully relapse, we shall go back much faster than ever we have proceeded.

2. If once we totally relapse, we shall thereby forfeit all the Fruit of our past Labour.

3. We shall forfeit the Fruit of our Labour after we have undergone the greatest Difficulty of it.

4. We shall not only forfeit the Fruit of our past Labour, but also render our Recovery more hazardous and difficult than ever.

5. We shall not only render our future Recovery more difficult, but also plunge ourselves for the present into a far more Guilty and Criminal Condition than ever.

6. We shall not only render ourselves for the present more guilty, but as a certain Consequence of that, expose ourselves, if we die in our Apostasy, to a Deeper and more Dreadful Ruin.

I. Consider, When once we have wilfully relapsed, unless we immediately recover, we shall go much faster back, than ever we went forward: For in the Beginning of our religious Progress, we are fain to sail for a great while against Wind and Tide, against a strong Gale of Temptation from without, and a rapid Stream of Inclination from within, and while we do thus, we must be contented to get our ground by Inches, and move forward by slow and insensible Degrees; but in all our wilful Apostasies, we are carried on secundo flumine, with a full Drift of Temptation and Inclination: So that if when once we have wilfully sinn'd we do not immediately check ourselves by Repentance, in all Probability we shall be driven farther back in a Day, than we shall be able to get forward in a Week. For your Progress in Religion lying up Hill, but your Apostasy down, you must expect, when once you are falling, to descend much faster than ever you ascended, and to get far sooner to the Bottom again than you can to the Top, tho you should happen to fall just in the mid-way, and have no farther to the one than to the other. For 'tis hardly to be imagined, what strength a bad Inclination gets by a short Repast and Gratification; how when it hath been almost pined away by a long Abstinence, a Taste of sinful Pleasure will raise and revive it, and render it as brisk and vigorous as ever ; insomuch, that it usually requires a great many Acts of Mortification, to re-extinguish that Life and Strength it acquires in one short Gratification. For as the fierce Tiger, after a long Confinement, will lie down tamely in his Den, and by Degrees lose all his Fierceness, and grow manageable and obsequious ; but let him take but one warm Draught of Blood, and his own savage Nature immediately revives, and he grows as cruel and outrageous as ever ; just so it is with our wicked Inclinations, which being reduced from their Excesses, and kept under the close Confinement of a holy Resolution, will by Degrees grow tame and gentle, and forget the alluring Relishes of Sin, but if once we suffer them to break loose again, and to come at those sinful Pleasures from which they have been a long while alienated, they will soon recover their natural Wildness, and become as head-strong and violent as ever : Wherefore it mightily concerns us to have a great Care of all wilful Apostasies ; for to be sure your first Slip will vehemently incline you to a second, and that more vehemently to a third, and so, like Men that are running head-long down Hill, the farther you go, the more you will be prest forward by your own Weight, and the harder 'twill be for you to stop and recover yourselves. So that if you do not immediately stop, you will by a few Days Sin, lose back all the ground you have got by many a Year's Warfare ; you will pull down more of your Religion by one wilful Sin, than you will be able to repair again by many a virtuous Action ; and like some prodigal Drudges, spend more in one mad Frolick, than you have earn'd by many a hard Day's Labour. And if you do thus, 'tis impossible you should ever improve ; for what you do in a Week, you will undo again in a Day ; and so instead of pressing forward, you will dance in a Circle, and always end where you begun. So that unless you go on and persevere in well-doing, all your Strife and Warfare against Sin will be but like rolling of a Sisyphus's Stone, which after you have been a long while raising to the Top of the Hill, will in a moment tumble down again upon you ; so that either you must undergo the same Pains to raise it again, or lie down under it, and tamely suffer your selves to be crush'd into eternal Ruin by it.

II. Consider, If after we have made some Progress in Religion we totally relapse, we thereby forfeit the Fruit of all our past Labour. For so God himself by the Prophet pronounces in the Case, Ezek. xviii. 24. When the Righteous turn away from his Righteousness, and commits Iniquity, and doth according to all the Abominations that the wicked Men doth, shall he live? all his Righteousness that he hath done shall not be mentioned ; in the Trespasses that he hath Trespassted, and in the Sin that he hath Sinned, in them he shall die, i. e. how good soever he may have been for the Time past, if he doth not persevere to the End, but wilfully relapse into Folly and Wickedness, all the Virtue he hath exercised, and all the Good he hath done, shall be quite struck off from his Accounts, and be never so much as mentioned to his Benefit and Advantage ; but in that Wickedness whereinto he is fallen, he shall as certainly perish as if all his Life had been a continued Act, or uninterrupted Course of Iniquity. So also, Heb. x. 38. If any shall draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him. And, indeed, this is a most necessary Effect of our Apostasy ; for by falling off from our Christian Course, we put ourselves back into the same State and Condition wherein we were before we enter'd upon it ; and the Effect of all those good Things which we did from the Time we enter'd upon, to the Time we deserted it, will be so voided and abolished, that there will not remain the least Trace or Footstep of it in our Natures, but our Will will become as obstinate again, our Affections and Appetites as wild and extravagant, as if we had all along permitted them to run on in an uninterrupted Course of Iniquity. And having thus extinguish'd all the good Effects of our past Warfare, and render'd by our wilful Apostasy our Natures as corrupt and depraved as ever, we shall thereby be exposed again to the Wrath and Displeasure of God. For God's Love and Hatred are unvariably unvariably determined to the same Grounds and Reasons, and herein consists their Immutability, not that he always loves, or always hates the same Persons, out of a blind Fondness to the one, or unreasonable Prejudice to the other, but that he always loves and always hates them for the same Reasons; and he hath expressly declared, that Goodness and Wickedness are the contrary Reasons of this his contrary Affection to his Creatures; which if it be, 'twill hence necessarily follow, that as his Hatred must convert into Love to us, when from wicked we become good, so his Love must convert into Hatred of us when from good we degenerate into wicked. Which Alteration of his Affection towards us, proceeds not from any change in his Nature, but from a change in ours, he always proceeds upon steady and unchangeable Principles, and is for ever fixt and constant to the Reasons of his Love and Hatred; which he could not be, if he did not alter his Affection to us, when the Reason of it is alter'd; if he did not abominate us when he sees us fallen and degenerated from that State of Goodness, for the sake of which he loved us, and took pleasure in us. So that, by wilfully retreating from our religious Progress, we do not only extinguish all those good Effects which it had produced in our Natures, not only revive those inveterate Lusts we had almost mortified, and blast those tender Graces which we had therein acquired and improved, but as a Consequence of this, we run out of God's Arms and Embraces, and throw ourselves headlong from those glorious Hopes to which we have been all this while striving with so much Labour and Difficulty. What a madness therefore is it for Men to think of retreating, that have once actually engaged in the Christian Warfare, to surrender themselves back into Captivity to their Lusts, after they have fought so many Combats against, and obtained so many Victories over them! O consider but the great Pains you have been at, the many Prayers and Tears, Abstinences and Self-denials, Struggles and Contentions with yourselves, that it hath cost you to retrieve yourselves from the Dominion of Sin, and the just Vengeance of God; and is it not a thousand Pities that all this should prove lost labour in the End, and be render'd as fruitless and insignificant to us as if it had never been? That after you have taken so much Pains to stem the difficult Tide, and are, at last, got within sight of Shore, you should now faint and yield to the Fury of it, and suffer yourselves to be borne down by it again into that Ocean of Sin and Guilt, out of which you were so lately recovered? Wherefore as you would not render your labour in vain in the Lord, and utterly defeat yourselves of all the Fruit of your Religious Endeavours, be still persuaded to struggle and contend, to strive and press forward to the mark of your high-calling: For if you now slacken or remit your Endeavours, and yield to the Current of Temptation, you will soon be driven down by it again as far from the Love of God, and from the Hope of Heaven as ever you were in the most degenerate State of your Natures.

III. Consider, That if, by wilfully sinning, we retreat from our Christian Warfare, we shall forfeit the Fruit of our Labour after we have undergone the greatest Difficulty of it. For, as I shewed above, the main Difficulty of the Christian Warfare lies in the Entrance of it, and this I suppose you to have already past. You have already endured those sharp Pangs and Throws that are wont to accompany the Birth of a new Resolution; you have undergone the hard Penance of a deep and thorow Consideration, the sharp Stings and Remorses of a solemn and sorrowful Repentance; you have forc'd your most importunate Inclinations, and withstood the most violent Counter-struggling of a perverse and degenerate Nature; you have conquered your Will in the Height of all its Obstinacy and Resistance, and rescued it from the Arms of your Lusts when 'twas most enslaved and captivated by them: all this you did, if you did any thing to any purpose, when you first entered upon this holy Warfare; and ever since you have been bredding the Strength of your evil Inclinations, and conquering the Antipathies of your Nature to your Religion; in which, which, if you have made any Progress, you must by this Time, have broken the Heart of the Difficulty of your Warfare, and have much less Opposition to contend with than ever. So that now, in all Probability, there is nothing so difficult between you and Heaven, as that which you have already ingaged with and surmounted; and will you now turn your backs upon your Enemy, when his main Strength is spent, and you have already sustained the most violent Shocks of his Power? If you had retreated at the first Onset, when your Sin was seated in its Dominion, and you were yet but raising your Forces, and arming your Resolution against it, it had been much more excusable; for then you had the sharpest part of your Conflict to undergo, being to contend with a flushed and a victorious Enemy, who having as yet all his Strength about him, could not fail to put your Courage to a mighty Trial; but now to retreat, when you are past the worst, and have gotten above half way thro', when you have pulled down your Lust from its Throne and Dominion, and so far subdued it to your Religion and your Reason, that you have henceforward no more to do but to pursue a Victory, which tho you got with a great deal of Toil, you may finish with a great deal of Ease and Pleasure; now, I say, to retreat in such a prosperous juncture, and give up the blessed Prize, which you have been so long contending for, what desperate Madness is it! If you had never begun this Warfare, or yielded in the first Conflict of it, what a deal of Pains might you have saved? How many Prayers and Tears, Strugglings and Contentions with yourselves might you have escaped and avoided, and at last been in as good a Condition, if not a better, than that wherein your Apostasy will certainly leave you? And when a Man hath been so long taking Heaven by Storm and Violence, when he hath broken thro' so many Oppositions to come at it, and in despite of all the Darts of Temptation from without, and of all the Weights and Pressures of Inclination from within, he is gotten up, as it were, to the Top of the Scaling-Ladder, has laid his Hands on the Battlements of Heaven, and is ready to leap in and take Possession of the Joys of it, what a Madnes is it for him now to let go his Hold and tumble headlong down again into that Abyss of Sin and Misery, out of which he had recovered himself with so much Labour and Difficulty! Especially considering,

IV. That by this our Relapse we shall not only forfeit the Fruit of our past Labour, but also render our Recovery more hazardous and difficult than ever. For what the Apostle pronounces concerning Apostates from Christianity, is in a great Measure applicable to those who having engaged in the Christian Warfare, fall off from it again to their old sinful Courses; it is impossible, i. e. 'tis extremely difficult, for those that were once enlighten'd, and have tasted of the Heavenly Gift, and were made Partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the Powers of the World to come; if they fall away, to renew them again to Repentance, Heb. vi. 4, 5, 6. For besides that, by falling from his first Repentance, a Man grieves and chases the Holy Spirit from him, without whose Aid he can neither stand when he is up, nor recover when he is fallen; and having chased him away, he cannot well expect that he will be so ready to return and cooperate with him after he hath treated him so rudely by quenching his Motions, unravelling his Workmanship, and extinguishing all those Heavenly Effects which his Grace had produced in his Soul. For how can this blessed Assistant of Souls but take it in great Disdain to be thus mock'd and disappointed, when he had been so industriously labouring for a Wretch's Good, to lift him out of the Mire wherein he was sunk and perishing; and when he had succeeded so far in his Labour as to help him quite out, and was washing and cleansing his polluted Spirit, and dressing it for the Embraces of the Father of Spirits, to see this Wretch turn back after all, and plunge himself headlong into the Mire again, how can he but resent such an ungrateful Disappointment of his Labour, with unspeakable Grief and Indignation; dignation: And if, upon such Resentment, he should, as he justly may, wholly retire from him, and leave him for ever to wallow in his own Heart's Lust, his Condition will not be only dangerous but desperate. What the blessed Spirit will do, in this Case I cannot certainly determine, because he may do as he pleases, being totally released by the Sinner's Apostasy from all Obligation of Promise. But it makes my Heart ache to think, how much Reason there is to fear, that he will utterly forsake and abandon him, and not throw away any more of his Grace upon a Wretch, on whom he hath already spent so much to no purpose. And if the heinous Affront which the blessed Spirit receives by your Apostasy, should put him upon this Resolution, you are damn'd above ground, and everlastingly forsaken of all Hopes of Recovery. But besides all this, (which one would think should be sufficient to startle any sober Man from making such a desperate Experiment) by falling off from your Repentance, you must needs be supposed to offer a mighty Violence to your Consciences; which having been already awaken'd into a thorow Sense of your past Sins, must necessarily reflect upon your present Apostasy with unspeakable Horror and Affrightment; which if it doth not presently scare ye back again to Repentance, will put ye upon more desperate Courses than ever. For now if your Conscience won't be quiet, you have no other Remedy but to ruffle with it and out-brave its Horrors, by being more courageously wicked: and as those barbarous Parents that sacrificed their Children to Moloch, were fain to make Noises round the burning Idol, with Drums and Timbrels to drown their dying Sobs and Groans, lest they should move them to Compassion; so, when, by your wilful Relapses, you have sacrificed your Conscience to your Lust, and it begins to shriek out from among those Flames of Guilt whereinto you have cast it, you have no other Remedy, unless you repent immediately, but to make a Tophet round about it, and drown its Outcries in Excesses of Riot; to put yourselves into a tumultuous Hurry of Wickedness and Folly, that you may not hear those ill-boding Shrieks within; and to fear over the Wounds of your Conscience with a thick Custom of sinning, that they may neither bleed nor smart. So that, if once you turn Recreant to your Christian Warfare, you will be forced, in your own Defence, to plunge yourselves deeper into Sin than ever. For now you must sin, not only to gratify your Lusts, but to stupify your Conscience, and this last you can never do without being excessively wicked. You must now be puny Sinners no longer, if ever you intend to sin quietly, but resolve to turn Heroes in Iniquity, and out-sin your natural Sense of Good and Evil. In order whereunto you must give your wounded Spirit Gasb after Gasb, and follow the Blow till you have left it past feeling; you must heap on Loads of Guilt upon your Conscience, till, with the continued Pressure you have render'd it callous and insensible; and when, by this means, you have sunk yourselves deeper into Sin than ever (as you will, doubtless, soon do) how much more difficult and hazardous must your Recovery be? For now you will need much more Assistance than ever you did in your first Repentance, and have much less reason to expect it. So that tho I dare not say your Condition will be desperate; yet, I must tell ye, 'twill be so fearfully dangerous, that unless God, out of a peculiar Mercy to ye, awake ye by some extraordinary Providence, and at the same time cooperate with ye by an extraordinary Grace, you must certainly miscarry for ever.

V. Consider, that by your deserting of the Christian Warfare, you will not only render your future Recovery more difficult, but you will also plunge yourselves, for the present, into a far more guilty and criminal Condition than ever. For thus St. Peter determines in the Case, 2 Pet. ii. 20, 21. If, after they have escaped the Pollutions of the World, thro' the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again intangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning. For it had been better for them not to have have known the way of Righteousness, than after they have known it, to turn from the Holy Commandment; that is, by relapsing into those sinful Pollutions out of which they had been rescued by the Belief and Knowledge of Christianity, they have rendered themselves much more guilty, than they were before when they were Infidels; so that if they had never been acquainted with the Gospel, nor taken one Step in the Paths of its holy Commandments, it had been much better for them, and God would have been much less angry and displeased with them. For by our Apostasy into a wicked Life, we do not only return back into as bad, at least, if not a worse Condition than ever; but,

First, We do also make void all those Operations of the Spirit of God, by which we were so effectually persuaded to undertake, and hitherto to prosecute the Christian Warfare. By relapsing into a State of Sin again, we wilfully undo all that he hath been doing, we revive those Lusts which he hath been mortifying, and root up those Graces which he hath been planting and watering within us; and when with great Contrivance and Industry he hath dressed and cultivated our Nature, pluck'd up the Weeds of it, and planted it with the Flowers of Heaven, we wilfully spoil and lay it waste again, and turn his growing Sharon into a barren Wilderness. So that besides all that Guilt which arises from those sinful Courses whereinto we are relaps'd, we are now become guilty of the greatest Outrage to the Spirit of God; we are guilty of destroying the dearest Fruits of his Labour, of laying waste his Inclosures, quenching his Motions, extinguishing his Graces, and strangling all those Heavenly Effects which he by his powerful Goodness had produced in our Natures. And what a black Aggravation of our Guilt must it be, thus to baffle and disappoint the Spirit of God? But then,

Secondly; As by our Apostasy we offer the rudest Affront to the Holy Spirit, so we commit the greatest Violence both upon our Conscience and Experience. For in all Apostasies we sin with an awakened Conscience, with the Convictions of our Guilt glaring in our Eyes, and are fain to contend and struggle with our own Mind, before we can break thro' those Checks and Restraints it lays upon us, which must needs be a great Aggravation of our Guilt. For the more Light and Persuasion a Man sins against, the more of Will and Malice there is in his Sin, and consequently the more of Guilt. For what can be more Malicious, than for a Man to dare and defy his own Convictions, and charge into the very Mouth of them, while they are spitting fire, and roaring everlasting Ruin against him? This plainly shews him to be acted by a desperate Resolution, when for the sake of his Lusts he dares confront the Terrors of his Conscience, and rather than be barred the Enjoyment of them, he will plunge himself headlong into a foreseen Ruin, and leap after them into Hell with his Eyes open. And yet thus we do in all our wilful Apostasies; we sin against the quickest Sense of our Danger, the loudest Warnings of our Conscience, and the clearest Convictions of our Reason; which being all most horrid Aggravations, must needs swell up our Guilt to a monstrous Proportion. Neither do we sin only against our Conscience, but also against our Experience. For it is to be supposed that we have made some Proof and Trial of Religion, and having done so, we must needs be sensible that there is nothing in it but what is reasonable, and practicable, and highly for our Good, nothing but what tends to the Tranquillity of our Minds, the Peace of our Consciences, and the Perfection of our Natures; and being thorowly assured of all this, and that not so much by Discourse as by our Sense and Experience, what a horrid baseness would it be, if notwithstanding this, we should renounce and desert it? If we had never tried it, we might have urged our Ignorance or Want of Experience as an Apology for our Refusal to submit to it; we might have pretended, that for want of a more intimate Acquaintance with it, we look'd upon its Commands as impossible, or at least as very difficult and and altogether fruitless and ungrateful to human Nature ; and that if we had once complied with it, we must have presently renounced every thing that is pleasant and desirable, and from thenceforth have been contented to figh away our Lives in unsufferable Severities, and a melancholy Retirement from all the Joys and Festivities of human Conversation : For such frightful Representations Men that are unexperienced in Religion are apt to make of it ; which tho it be far from justifying, may in some Measure extenuate their Enmity to it. But you that have tried Religion, must needs have experienced that all this is false ; that its Commands are easy enough to a willing Mind, and that the many Advantages they bring with them do abundantly compensate for their Difficulty ; that they are so far from barring Men any innocent Pleasure, or Comfort of human Life, that they purify the pleasures of it, and render them more grateful and generous ; that besides this, they bring mighty Pleasures of their own along with them, the pleasures of a glorious Hope, a serene Mind, a calm and undisturbed Conscience, which are such as do far out-relish the most studied and artificial Luxuries ; all this you cannot but know, if you have made any considerable Trial of a sober and well-advised Religion. So that if now you apostatize, you will not only affront your Conscience, but your Experience too ; and the past Sense you have had of the Goodness of Religion, will rise up in Judgment against ye, and for ever silence all the Excuses you can urge for yourselves, and leave ye nothing to say, but that you were sick of your Ease, and tired with the Refreshments of Religion. But then,

Thirdly, As your Apostasy will be a grievous Affront to the Spirit of God, and to your own Conscience and Experience, so 'twill be one of the foulest Dishonours that you can cast upon Religion. If you had never been engaged in the Christian Warfare, the Honour of Religion could never have been so nearly touched by your wicked Courses, and all considering Men would have attributed your Enmity to it, to your Ignorance and want of Experience, and never have thought the worse of it when they saw it so contemptuously treated by one that was never acquainted with it. But if now you revolt into wicked Courses, after you have made Trial of it, what will the World say ? Look ye, here is one that hath made an Experiment of the Religion you so much celebrate, and which you extol and cry up for such a pleasant and amiable thing ; if it were what you pretend, how comes it to pass that after so long Trial and Experience of it, this Man should now at last renounce and forsake it ? Which is such an Objection, as can be no otherwise solv'd but by demonstrating the Man, whose Apostasy started it, to be forsaken and abandoned of his Reason. For if upon the Trial he hath made of Religion, he had experienced it to be that good and grateful thing it is represented, it is not to be imagined he would ever have revolted from it, had he been capable to deliberate of his own Choices and Actions. And how can they that are Strangers to Religion forbear suspecting the Goodness of it, when they see a Man, after Trial, and in his right Senses, declare by his Actions that Vice is better and more eligible than Virtue, and to behold the Pleasures of Sin preferr'd before the Joys and Satisfactions of Religion, by one that hath made a thorow Experiment of them both ? So that by Apostatizing into sinful Courses after a thorow Trial of Religion, we take an effectual Course to defame and scandalize it, to render it a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence to those that have had but little or no Acquaintance with it ; and if by our Example any should be disheartned either from entering into, or proceeding in the Christian Warfare, their Blood will be one Day required at our Hands, and so we shall raise a most fearful Cry upon ourselves, and have not only the Spirit of God and our own Conscience and Experience, but also the Blood of all those Souls who have stumbled at our Apostasy, lifting up their Cries together to the Tribunal of God for a dire and speedy Vengeance against us.

VI. Consider, If after you have made some Progress in Religion you revert into sinful Courses, you will not only render yourselves for the present more guilty, but, as a Consequence of that, you will certainly expose yourselves, if you die before your Recovery, to a deeper and more dreadful Ruin. For this we may depend upon, that the Judge of all the World will do righteously, and consequently, that as on the one hand he will proportion his Rewards to our Services, so on the other he will measure his Punishments by our GUILTS and Demerits; and if he thus proceed (as he most certainly will) how horrible is it to think of the black and dismal Fate that hangs over the Heads of Apostates, whose Guilt being aggravated by those above-named Circumstances to such a prodigious Bulk and Magnitude, must be supposed to draw after it a Punishment proportionable? And if so, then doubtless the Portion of Apostates, among wicked and miserable Spirits will be the most wretched and deplorable. For besides those supernumerary Stripes they must expect to receive from God, as being Servants that have known their Master's Will, and experienced the Goodness of it, and yet have finally refused to comply with it; their Reflections on their own Apostasy, and the Folly and Madness of it, will doubtless gall and torment them a thousand Times more than all the other Stings of their Conscience together. For how must it enrage them against themselves, to ruminate on their own Follies, as they are wandering thro' the Infernal Shades? O desperate Creatures! from what glorious Hopes have we precipitated ourselves into this dismal State? We had once got a fair Way onwards to Heaven, and were arrived within Sight of its blessed Shores: we had shaken off our Lufts, mastered our Inclinations, and subdued our Wills to the Will of God; and in so doing had conquered the most difficult Part of our Voyage; we had weathered the cross Winds of Temptation from without, and stemm'd the Tide of corrupt Nature within; so that had we but bore up courageously a little farther, we that are now howling among damned Ghosts, might have been triumphing with blessed Spirits. But O abominable Fools and Traitors to ourselves! after all the successful Pains we had taken to be happy, we have shipwrack'd our Souls at the Mouth of our Harbour, and to gratify a base Lust, have leapt headlong from the Brink of the Rivers of Pleasure, into this Lake of Fire and Brimstone. And have we thus undone ourselves, thus madly, thus without Pretence or Temptation! O curst be our Folly, curst be our Lufts, and for ever curst be we for harbouring and entertaining them! Thus will these miserable People incessantly rave against themselves, and with dire Reflections on their desperate Follies for ever enrage and multiply their own Torments. So that were I descending to the bottomless Pit, and had but so much Time before I came there, as to make one Prayer more in my own Behalf, next to that of being wholly delivered thence, I know none I should sooner pitch upon, than this, O Lord deliver me from that Portion of Hell, which thou hast reserved for Apostates.

So that if now, that we have so far engaged ourselves in the Christian Warfare, we should be so mad as to retreat into our own sinful Courses, it had been a thousand Times better for us that we had never engaged in it at all. For unless we repent of our Retreat, and come on again, we have taken a great deal of Pains in Religion to no other Purpose, but only to treasure up to ourselves Wrath against the Day of Wrath, and heat the Furnace of our future Torments yet seven Times hotter. Wherefore since the Matter is now reduced to this Issue, that if we revert from our Christian Warfare, we shall not only defeat our selves of all the Fruit of our past Labour and Contentions, but also enhance our future Punishment; so that we must either resolve to win Heaven by our Perseverance, or sink ourselves into the nethermost Hell by our Apostasy; let us pull up our Courage and maugre all Temptations to the contrary, continue stedfast and immoveable in our Christian Resolution, remembering what the Captain of our Salvation hath promised, Rev. iii. 21. To him that overcomes, will I grant to sit with me in my Throne, even as I also overcame, and am sat down with my Father in his Throne.

C H A P. V.

Containing some short Directions for the more profitable reading the preceding Discourse, and also for the Conduct and regular Exercise of our Closet Religion in all the different States of the Christian Life; together with Forms of Private Devotion fitted to each State.

IN the foregoing Chapter I have endeavoured a full Account of all those Instrumental Duties of Christianity, by which we are to acquire, improve, and perfect the principal Virtues of it, in the Perfection of which Virtues, Heaven, which is the great End of Christianity, consists. And for the more distinct management thereof, I considered Men under a threefold State; First, as entering into the Christian Life; Secondly, as actually engaged in the Course of it; Thirdly, as improving towards Perfection by Perseverance in it; and gave a distinct Account of all those Instrumental Duties that are proper to each of these States. And now that what hath been said in that and the preceding Chapters may have its due Effect upon the Reader's Mind, I have thought fit to reduce it to Practice, by directing Men,

First, How to read and apply the several Parts of it to their own particular States.

Secondly, By furnishing them with some short Rules, for the more profitable Exercise of their Private Religion in each of those different States, together with Forms of Private Devotion, fitted to each State.

I. As to the first of these, it is to be considered, that to the making Men sincere and heartty Christians, it is highly necessary that they should have a right Understanding, First, of the Nature of the great and chief End which Christianity proposes to them; Secondly, of the Means, by which that End is to be obtained; Thirdly, of the natural Tendency of all the Virtues of Christianity towards this blessed End, and of the contrary Tendency of the opposite Vices towards their eternal Misery and Ruin. Of all which I have endeavoured to give an Account in the Three First Chapters of this Book. Wherefore I would advise the Reader,

1. Carefully and seriously to peruse those Chapters, wherein (because I have been sometimes forced by the sublimity of my Argument, to discourse a little more abstrusely than in any of the following Parts) it will be necessary for him to imploy more of his Thoughts and Considerations, and not to content himself with a slight and cursorry Perusal. And when, by a serious Consideration of what hath been there discoursed, his Mind is fully convinced what a kind of Heaven he is to expect hereafter, what kinds of Means are necessary to obtain it, how naturally all the Virtues of Religion do raise up Mens Souls to Heaven, and how all the contrary Vices do as naturally sink and press them down to Hell, it is to be hoped he will be fully persuaded of the indispensable Necessity of entering into the Christian Life; which if he be, I would advise him,

2. Seriously to read over and consider the First and Second Sections of the Fourth Chapter, wherein are contained the several Duties which are proper to his State of Entrance into the Christian Life, and also proper Arguments and Motives to engage him to the Practice of them; which if he would read to good Effect, he must by no means content himself with a single Perusal, but read them over at least once a Week whilst he continues in that State, till he fully comprehends the Meaning and Use of all those Duties, and the Force and Cogency of those Arguments; which if he do, it is to be hoped he will, at last, be reduced to a thorow and well-weighed Resolution of forsaking his Sins, and actually engaging in the Christian Life. Which being done, I would advise him,

3. With the same Care and Fervency, to peruse the Third and Fourth Sections of the Fourth Chapter, wherein are contained all the several Duties proper to this Second State of actual Engagement in the Christian Life, as also sundry Arguments or Motives to press and inforce them; and when, by the Assistance of these Duties he hath continued for some time faithful and constant to his good Resolution,

4. Together with the Third and Fourth Section, let him often peruse and consider the Fifth and Sixth, wherein are contained the Duties appertaining to the Third State of Improvement and Preservation in the Christian Life, together with some Considerations to inforce the Practice of them. All which I would earnestly persuade the pious Reader to read and consider over and over again, till his Mind is fully instructed in the Nature and Use of each Duty, and hath thorowly digested the Force and Evidence of every Argument. And this may suffice for the first thing proposed, concerning the profitable Method of reading this practical Treatise.

II. As for the Second Part of it, which is that which I mainly design in this Chapter, viz. the Rules and Directions for the private Exercise of our Religion, in each State of the Christian Life, together with the Forms of Private Prayer, fitted for each, take them in their following Order.

DIRECTIONS for the more profitable Exercise of our Private Religion in the State of our Entrance into the Christian Life.

In the Morning, before you go into the World, enter into your Closet, and there consider with yourself a while the miserable State you have reduced yourself to by your past sinful Courses, the absolute Necessity of your forsaking them, and the possibility of your Recovery, if you heartily endeavour it; and then address yourself to God in this following PRAYER.

O Most Glorious and Eternal God, Thou art the Fountain of Beings, the Father of Angels and Men, the Righteous and Almighty Governor of Heaven and Earth, from Thy Throne Thou beholdest all the Children of Men, and their most secret Actions are open and naked to thy All-seeing Eye; and such is the Purity of Thy Nature, that Thou lovest Righteousness and hatest Iniquity wheresoever Thou beholdest it; with what Face can I, a most miserable polluted Wretch, appear in thy Presence, who, by the past course of my Wickedness and Rebellion against Thee, have not only rendred myself guilty and justly obnoxious to thy eternal Displeasure, but have also contracted such obstinate Dispositions and Inclinations to sin on, as, without thy Grace and Assistance, I shall never be able to conquer! O desperate, vile, and ungrateful Wretch that I have been! I have renounced the God of my Being, and the Fountain of my Mercies; I have despised Thy Goodness, trampled upon Thy Authority, mock'd and abused Thy Patience and Long-suffering, and, in particular, I must confess, to my own Shame and Confusion, I have been wofully guilty guilty of *. And now by these my manifold Abominations, I have utterly undone myself, unless thou take pity upon me. I confess I have forfeited my Soul into thy Hands, and if thou so pleatest, thou mayest justly cast me away from thy Presence, and make me a dire Example of thy Vengeance for ever. But, I know, O Lord, that thou desirest not the Death of a Sinner, but rather that he should repent and live, and upon the Propitiation of thine own Son's Blood Thou hast declared Thyself willing to receive returning Prodigals, and to be heartily reconciled to them, notwithstanding all their past Provocations. O that I could return, that I could but shake off those corrupt Inclinations which detain my wretched Soul in Captivity! I am willing to contribute towards it whatsoever I am able; but, alas! without Thee all that I can do, will be utterly ineffectual. Wherefore, for Thy tender Mercy's sake, for thy dear Son's and my Saviour's sake, have pity upon a miserable Wretch, that, without Thy helping hand, is lost for ever. And, since Thou hast given me Thy Gospel as an outward means to save and recover me, O do Thou enable me, by Thy blessed Spirit, heartily to believe, and thorowly to consider it. For which end, I beseech Thee to remove all sinful Prejudices from my Mind, that so I may impartially weigh those Evidences Thou hast given me of the Truth of it; and do thou suggest them to my Mind with such a clear and convincing Light, as that they may at last conquer my Infidelity, and beget in me a firm and lively Faith. And forasmuch as my Mind is vain and roving, and utterly averse to all serious Considerations, O do Thou, who art the Father of Spirits, and canst turn the Hearts of Men which way Thou pleatest, inspire good Thoughts into me, and imprint them upon me with such a Power and Efficacy, as that my wandring Mind may be reduced by them to a thorow Consideration, and my stubborn Will to a firm Resolution of Amendment. Particularly, I beseech Thee to give me a right Understanding of the urgent need I have of a Saviour, and of all those Things which he hath done and suffered, and is still doing at thy right hand, in order to the cleansing my guilty and polluted Nature, and restoring me to thy Grace and Favour; that so hereby I may be fully convinced how odious my Sins are in thy sight, how base and vile they have rendred me, and at what a mighty Distance they have set me from Thee, and that, being convinced of this, I may put on a holy Shame and Confusion, and abhor myself in Dust and Ashes before thee. Thou knowest, O Lord, it is not in my Power to soften this hard and unrelenting Heart, and affect it with that Godly Sorrow which is requisite to work a true Repentance. O do Thou smite it with such a sharp and piercing sense of my Sins, as may cause the Floods of unfeigned Grief and Contrition to gush forth from it. Cause me to bleed for my Sins now, that I may not bleed for them for ever; and that having felt the smart and anguish of them, I may utterly detest and abhor them, and never be reconciled to them more. Thus do Thou assist me, O good God, in the exercise of all these Duties, till thou hast thorowly conquered my Will by them, and prepared it for a firm Resolution to forsake all Ungodliness and Worldly Lusts, and to live Soberly, Righteously, and Godly, in this present World. And now that I am going into the World among those very Temptations that have hitherto so miserably captivated and enslaved me, O let Thy Blessed Spirit be present with me, to keep my drowsy Conscience awake, and arm me against them with His Holy Inspirations, that so those good Thoughts and Desires which Thou hast at present excited in me, may stick fast upon my Soul, in the midst of my worldly Occasions, and never cease importuning my Conscience, Will, and Affections, till they have produced in me the happy Effects of a serious and hearty heartly Repentance. All which I most earnestly beseech of Thee, even for pity sake, to a poor perishing Soul, and for Jesus Christ his sake, in whose Name and Words I farther Pray,

* Here make a particular Confession of all those sinful Courses you have lived in, together with all their aggravating Circumstances of Impudence, Obstinacy and Ingratitude, &c.

Our Father which art in Heaven, &c.

In the Evening, when you find your self most fit for serious Thoughts; go into your Closet again, and consider coolly with yourself, whether you are heartily willing to part with every Sin, and particularly with your beloved Sin, and to submit to every Duty, and even to those that are most contrary to your vicious Inclination; if you are not (as it's very probable you will not for some Time) or if you find the least reason to suspect you are not, press yourself anew with such Divine Reasons as are most apt to affect you with the Hope of Heaven, and the Fear of Hell, with the Love of God and of your Saviour; represent your Obstinacy to yourself, with all its Baseness and Disingenuity, Madness and Folly, till you find yourself affected with a sorrowful sense of it, and then offer up this following PRAYER.

O Father of Mercies, and God of all Grace and Consolation, who art a ready help in Time of Need, look down upon me, I beseech Thee, a miserable and forlorn Wretch, that have wilfully sold myself Captive to the Devil, and am now struggling to get loose from this my wretched Bondage into the glorious Liberty of the Sons of God. I know, O Lord, that I am striving for my immortal Life, and accordingly as I succeed, I expect to be happy or miserable for ever. I have seriously considered the Reasons on both Sides, and am fully satisfied in my Mind, that there is infinitely more Force in Thy Promises and Threats, than in all the Difficulties of my Duty and the Pleasures of my Sin. But after all this, I find a Law in my Members, warring against the Law in my Mind, a perverse Will that rejects the Counsels of my Reason, that makes obstinate Reservations of some beloved Sins, and Exceptions to some particular Duties, in despite of all the persuasion of my Reason and Religion. So that, after all my Endeavour, I am still detained in Captivity to the Law of Sin that is in my Members, and am not able to incline myself to an intire Resolution of Amendment. O wretched Man that I am, who shall deliver me from this Body of Sin and Death! I know, O Lord, tho I am weak and impotent, and of myself unable to shake off the Chains and Fetters of my Lusts, yet Thy Grace is abundantly sufficient to rescue and deliver me from them; and Thou hast promised to assist with it my honest Endeavours, and crown them with a blessed Success. Wherefore, for Thy Truth and Mercy's sake, suffer not Thy poor Creature, who, with pitiful and bemoaning Looks, cries out for help to Thee, to spend himself in weary and fruitless strugglings against this violent Torrent of my sinful Nature, which without Thy Aid, will quicky overcome my poor Endeavours, and drive me down into eternal perdition. My sole Dependence is upon Thee, my Hope of Success is wholly in Thee; help, Lord, help, or else I perish; stretch forth Thy powerful Arm to my sinking Soul, and let not this Deep swallow me up; but do Thou so quicken my faint Endeavours, so strengthen my weak and doubting Faith, so enliven my cold and languid Considerations, so clear up my Convictions of my Need of a Saviour, and of the Danger and Odiousness of my Sins, and thereby so increase my penitential Sorrows and Remorses, as that by all these Means together my obstinate Will may at last be conquered, and effectually persuaded to part with every Sin, be it never so dear to me, and to comply with every Duty, be it never so cross to my vile Inclination. Then shall I freely resign up myself unto Thee, and with a firm Resolution devote all my Powers to thy Service. And that I may do so, and by so doing be reconciled to Thee, O my offended God, before I go hence and be no more seen: Receive me, I beseech Thee, into Thy Protection this Night, that I may yet see the Light of another Day, and have a longer space to finish my Repentance. All which I humbly implore even for Jesus Christ's sake, in whose Name and Words I farther Pray,
and

Our Father which art in Heaven, &c.

If upon searching your own Heart, you find, that after you have fairly represented to yourself what sinful Pleasures you must part with, what Duties you must submit to, and what Difficulties you must engage with, you are willing, without any Reserve or Exception, to submit yourself to God, beware you be not too hasty to form your Resolution, but take some little time to try yourself; see whether you will continue to Morrow of the same Mind you are in now, and if then you perceive you have reason to suspect yourself, try a little longer, and at the present endeavour as much as in you lies to confirm and settle yourself in the good Mind you are in, by pressing and urging yourself with all those Arguments of your Religion by which you have been thus far convinced and persuaded; and while you are thus trying yourself, instead of the former, let this be your Evening Prayer.

O Blessed Lord, and most Merciful Father, thou art a God hearing Prayer, and to Thee shall all Flesh come; I admire thy Goodness, I adore thy Grace, that after so many heinous Provocations I have given Thee, for which thou mightest have justly shut thine Ears against me for ever, thou hast heard my Cries, and pitied my Misery, and thus far contributed towards my Recovery. I acknowledge 'tis by thy Grace that I am what I am, that this stubborn Heart begins at last to relent, this perverse Will to bow and stoop, these lewd Affections to hunger and thirst after Righteousness; that now at last my foolish Soul is persuaded to part with those Sins which are its Plagues and Infelicities, and to embrace those blessed Duties by which thou hast designed to raise me to immortal Glory. By these good Beginnings thou hast given me some Reason to hope for a happy Success upon my poor Endeavours. Praised be thy Grace, I am at present heartily willing to be thine, and were I but sure to continue thus minded and disposed, I would immediately make over my Heart and Will to Thee by the most solemn Engagement. But, O Lord, I am afraid of myself, I dread my own Inconstancy, and thou knowest I have too much Reason for it. I have mocked Thee too often already with my deceitful Promises and Engagements; I have sinn'd and then promised Amendment, I have promised Amendment and then sinn'd again, as if all that I meant by my Promises, were only to ask leave of Thee to sin against Thee anew: and now after so many Falsifications I would not for all the World deal treacherously with Thee any more; wherefore before I solemnly resign and devote myself to Thee by a new Purpose and Engagement, I desire to make some farther Trial of my own Stedfastness, to see whether this present Inclination of my Will be the effect of Passion or a settled Judgment. In the mean time therefore, I do most humbly beseech Thee, to be present with me in all my Ways, and continually to influence my Mind with thy Grace and Spirit; to strengthen my Faith, to fix my Consideration, to persuade my Will, and feed and cherish these my holy Desires with good Thoughts and Inspirations, that so I may remain stedfast and immoveable, and no Temptation whatsoever may be able to alter the Temper of my Mind, or divert it from its good Inclination; and that having had a sufficient Experience of the fixed Disposition of my Soul to obey Thee, I may devote devote myself to Thee with a chearful Heart, and an assured Hope of my own Sincerity and Constancy. O Lord hear and help me for thy Mercies sake, and for Jesus Christ his sake, in whose most perfect Form of Prayer I farther Pray,

Our Father which art in Heaven, &c.

If after a sufficient Trial of yourself, you find you are constantly inclined to submit to God, to part with every Sin, and comply with every Duty, consider, that now it is high Time for you to devote yourself to God, and what abundant Reason you have for it, and what a powerful Obligation you must lay upon yourself by so doing : and when you have seriously considered these Things, give up yourself to God in this following Form of Prayer ; which for the greater Sanction and more awful Solemnity of your good Resolution, you would do well to repeat at the next Sacrament.

O Most Merciful Father, so infinite is the Goodness of thy Nature, that thou art always ready to pity and relieve the Poor and Needy, and to extend thy timely Succours to us helpless Sinners whensoever we cry unto thee. Of the truth whereof thou hast given me, who am the vilest of Sinners, a most sensible Proof and Experiment. For not long ago I was so dead in Trespasses and Sins, that hadst not thou took pity upon me, and quickened me by thy Grace, I had died for ever ; my Understanding was so blind that I saw not my Danger ; my Conscience so fear'd that I felt not my Guilt ; my Will so enslaved to my Lusts that I could not endure to think of parting with them ; but now, blessed be thy Grace which first excited my Endeavours, and hath hitherto prospered them, I do not only see the danger my Sins have exposed me to, and sensibly feel the Guilt of them, but am freely willing to renounce them for ever, and to part even with those darling Lusts that have heretofore been as dear to me as my right Eye. And now, O Lord, I am come before thee, and I hope with a true loyal and sincere Heart, to offer up my Soul and Body to thee, and vow an everlasting Obedience to thy blessed Will. For Jesus sake refuse not this poor Oblation, which tho it be infinitely unworthy of thine Acceptance, is the best thing I am able to present thee. To thee, O glorious Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, I do from henceforth eternally devote myself and all my Faculties [* And here at the Table of my blessed Saviour, and upon these Sacred Memorials of his Wounds and Blood] I utterly abjure all known and wilful Sins and Rebellions, and particularly all such as have been heretofore most dear to me ; faithfully promising by thy gracious Assistance from henceforth to observe thy Law without any Reserve or Exception. This in the Sincerity of my Soul I do here vow to thy Divine Majesty, and however I may be hereafter tempted, I will never wilfully depart from it, or from any Part of it, so help me, O my God, for Jesus Christ his sake, in whose own Words I farther Pray,

* When you renew your Vow in the Sacrament, add,

Our Father which art in Heaven, &c.

DIRECTIONS for the more profitable Exercise of our Private Religion, in the State of our actual Engagement in the Christian Life.

When you go into your Closet in the Morning, consider seriously with yourself the solemn Engagement you lie under ; what a crying Guilt it would be to violate it ; what Madnefs and Folly to recede from it, after you have taken so much Pains to reduce yourself to it ; what mighty Reasons you have to persist in it, and what powerful Assistance is promised you, if you be not wanting to yourself ; and then offer up this following PRAYER.

O Eternal God, who art the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and dost thro' him bestow so many good and perfect Gifts upon thy Creatures, I desire for ever to remember and adore thy Goodness towards me, whom thou hast snatched as a Firebrand out of the Fire, and at length reduced to a serious purpose of Amendment after a long and obstinate course of Disobedience, in which if I had still persisted, I must have perished everlastingly. O blessed be thy great Name, that after so many Years Rebellion against Thee, for which I have long ago deserved to be banished into utter Darknefs, I do yet behold the Light of another Day, and am allowed a farther space to repent and execute my purpose of Amendment. And now, O Lord, as thou hast wrought my Will into a good Resolution, in despite of all the corrupt Inclinations of my Nature, leave not, I beseech Thee, thy Workmanship unfinished, but by the mighty Operation of thy Grace, excite and enable me faithfully to perform what I have so seriously resolved. It is a mighty Work that I have undertaken, to cleanse a base polluted Nature, and root up all its filthy Lusts and Affections, and plant it with all the heavenly Dispositions, and improve them into everlasting Happiness ; and thou know'st what strong Oppositions will be made against me, and with what powerful Temptations I must struggle thro'out the whole Course of my future Endeavour. So that unless thou wilt still go along with me, and still quicken and animate me by thy blessed Spirit, my Work is so great, and my Strength so little, that it will be in vain for me to proceed any farther. These importunate Temptations that surround me, will quickly conquer my present Resolution, and I shall do, as I have too often done already, resolve and sin, and sin and resolve, and so increase my Guilt by the Treachery of my Vows and Engagements. Wherefore for Jesus Christ (his sake, withdraw not thyself from me, but continue to assist my weak Endeavours by thy powerful Grace, till thou hast crown'd them with a perfect Victory. For which End, I beseech Thee, inspire me more and more with Patience and Constancy of Mind, that I may stand fast in my good Resolution, in despite of all Temptations to the contrary. Suggest to my Mind those holy Examples thou hast set before me, especially that of my blessed Saviour, and incline my Heart to copy and imitate them. Direct me to some wise and faithful Guide that may be willing, and able to assist me in all my Spiritual Necessities ; and by frequently exciting me to dedicate my Actions to Thee, thou dost purify my Intentions from sinful and from carnal Aims, that so I may always live to thy Glory. And since thou art present with me where-ever I am, and dost always behold me whatsoever I am doing ; O do thou inspire me with such a strong continual and actual Sense of it, as may be a constant Check to sinful Inclinations, and render me afraid of offending Thee. Let Thy blessed Spirit be my constant Monitor, to put me in mind to consider my Ways, and frequently to examine my Actions, that so whenever I go astray, I may be immediately diately convinced of it, and by my speedy Repentance recover myself before I have wandered too far from my Duty. And grant, I beseech Thee, that the sense of my past Failings may still render me more watchful and circumspect for the future; that whensoever I have been carelessly or wilfully faulty, I may from thenceforth be more cautious of my Actions, and more vigilant against the Temptations that betrayed me. And that I may not run myself unnecessarily into Temptation for the future, preserve me, O Lord, from Sloth and Idleness, and from intermeddling with Matters that do not belong to me; and do thou still put me in mind to do my own Business, and to be faithful and diligent in the State and Calling wherein thou hast placed me. And that I may always serve thee with Freedom and Alacrity, remove from me, I beseech thee, all unprofitable Sadness and Melancholy, and help me to acquire an equal Tranquillity of Mind, and a becoming Cheerfulness of Spirit. For which end, Good Lord, do thou inspire me with a lively Sense, and earnest Expectation of that blissful State towards which I am travelling; that having this glorious Prospect always in my Eye, I may go on with Joy and Triumph over all the Difficulties and Temptations that oppose me. And that by all these Means I may be more and more strengthened and confirmed in the good Resolution I have made, do thou stir up my slothful Mind to a diligent Attendance on thy publick Ordinances, that so, in the solemn Assemblies of thy Saints, I may constantly hear thy Word with Reverence and Attention, offer up my Prayers with Fervency and Devotion, and approach thy Table with all that Humility and Love, Gratitude and Resignation of Soul that becomes this solemn Remembrance and Representation of my dying Saviour. In these Things, and whatsoever else is needful to secure my Resolution of Obedience, assist me, O Lord, for Jesus Christ his sake, to whom with thy self and eternal Spirit, be render'd all Honour, Glory and Power, from this Time forth for evermore.

After this Prayer bethink yourself a little, what Temptations you are like to meet with in the ensuing Business of the Day, and briefly recollect those powerful Arguments which the Gospel urges to fortify you against them, and apply them particularly to the Sin or Sins you are most inclined to, and then renew your Resolution to God in the following PRAYER.

O God, who art my Hope and Strength, upon whose Aid and Assistance I depend, look down, I beseech thee, upon a poor helpless Creature, who am going forth into a busy World, that is full of Snares and Temptations. Blessed be thy Name, my Heart continues still resolved upon a thorough Course of Amendment; and therefore, here in thy dreadful Presence, I do again most solemnly promise and engage myself, that whatsoever Temptations I meet with this Day, I will not wilfully commit any Sin, no not the Sin I am most inclined to; nor omit any Duty, how contrary soever it may be to my Nature; and that I will faithfully endeavour to keep such a constant Guard upon myself, as that I may not be surprized and overtaken thro' my own Inadvertence and Unwariness. But this, O Lord, I promise not out of any Confidence in my own Strength, but in Dependence upon thee, and in Hope, that out of thy tender Pity to a poor impotent Wretch, thou wilt not be wanting to me in any necessary Assistance, but that either thou wilt remove from me all great and importunate Temptations, or enable me, by thy Grace, to repel and vanquish them; and this I do most earnestly beseech, in the Name and Mediation of Jesus Christ, with whose Prayer I conclude this my Morning Sacrifice.

Our Father which art in Heaven, &c.

In the Evening when you find yourself best disposed for religious Exercise, set apart such Portions of your Time, as you can conveniently spare, from your necessary Refreshment and Diversion, to call yourself to Account concerning the Actions of the Day; and enquire whether they have been agreeable to your Morning Promise and Resolution: and upon Enquiry, you will find either that you have faithfully discharged what you promised, or that you have sinned unawares, or thro' Carelessness and Self-neglect, or that you have sinned wilfully, and against your own Conscience.

If upon Enquiry it appear that you have been faithful to your Morning Engagement, represent to yourself the great Reason you have to rejoice in it, and to praise God for it, and then offer up this following Thanksgiving.

Blessed be thy Name, O most gracious and merciful Father, for those great and numberless Favours, which from time to time thou hast heaped upon me, who am less than the least of all thy Mercies; particularly for the signal Mercies of this Day, for that thou hast not shut thine Ears against my Prayers, nor withdrawn thy self from me, but hast accompanied me with thy Grace thro' all those Snares and Temptations to which I have been exposed. Praised be thy Name, that thou hast not suffered me to be tempted above what I was able, that thou hast so powerfully assisted me against those Temptations I have been engaged with, and by putting so many good Thoughts into my Mind, hast strengthened my Resolution, and rendered it so successful and victorious. 'Tis to thy Grace that I owe all the Good I have done, and 'tis by thy Aid that I have escaped all the Evils I have been tempted to; wherefore not unto me, O Lord, not unto my Strength or Endeavours, but unto thy name be all the Glory and Praise of this Day's Deliverance and Preservation. O never let the Remembrance of this thy Goodness towards me depart from my Mind, but let it kindle in me such a grateful Sense, as may more and more incite me to love and obey Thee, and depend upon Thee for the future. And as thou hast been pleased to conduct me safely by thy Grace, thro' all the Dangers and Temptations of the Day, so do thou take me into thy Care and Protection this Night, and grant that I may awake in the Morning with a Heart so inflamed with the Remembrance of thy Goodness, and so encouraged with this Day's Success, and so endeared to the Practice of Virtue, by the growing Delights and Pleasures of it, as that I may persist in my religious Course with greater Courage and Alacrity; and this I humbly beg for Jesus Christ's sake, in whose Name and Words I farther Pray;

Our Father which art in Heaven, &c.

If upon Enquiry you find that you have been failing in your Duty, or that you have done any evil Action thro' meer Heedlessness or Surprise, endeavour to affect yourself with a sorrowful Sense of your own Folly, Weakness, and Carelessness, and then conclude with this Form of Humiliation.

O Most blessed Lord God, who art infinitely glorious in thy own Righteousness and Holiness, and dost for ever will and act according to thy own Nature, which is the most perfect Law and Pattern of Goodness. To thy spotless Nature no evil can approach, who art of purer Eyes than to behold Iniquity; with what Confidence then can such a polluted Creature as I am appear in thy Presence; how can I lift up my guilty Eyes to thy Throne, who, to my past Rebellions, which have been more in Number than the Hairs on my Head, have this Day added so many sinful Failings and Defects, Defects, that, shouldst thou be severe to mark what I do amiss, were sufficient to kindle thy Displeasure against me! 'Twas but this Morning that I engaged myself to thee, not only to abstain from all wilful and deliberate Sins, but also to set a Watch upon my Mouth and Actions, that I might not offend thee unawares; but to my Shame, I must acknowledge, I have been wofully careless and remiss, having this Day suffered myself, thro' my own Inadvertency, to be surpriz'd into such Actions, as nothing can render pitiable or excusable in thy Sight, but the miserable Frailty and Weakness of my Nature. What shall I say unto thee, O thou Judge of all the Earth! I am guilty, I am guilty, and have nothing to plead for myself but the Blood of Jesus, that all-sufficient Propitiation for the Sins of the whole World. O Lord, I do earnestly repent, and am heartily sorry for these my Misdoings, the Remembrance of them is grievous unto me, the Burden of them is intolerable; have Mercy upon me, have Mercy upon me, most merciful Father, and for Jesus Christ his sake, forgive me all that is past, and grant that the Sense of these my Mis-carriages may render me more careful and vigilant for the future. And let thy blessed Spirit be always present with my Mind, to recollect my Distractions, and awake my Considerations, and warn me of my Dangers, that I may no more be surprized by sudden Temptations, nor hurried into evil Actions by unexpected Hopes or Fears; but do thou so subdue my lower Appetites to my Will, my Will to my Understanding, and my Understanding to thy Spirit, as that under his blessed Conduct, I may, for the future, be prepared against all Temptations, and furnished to every good Work. And now, O Lord, let not the Failings I have been guilty of this Day, deprive me of thy gracious Protection this Night, but grant, that after a safe and comfortable Repose, I may awake in the Morning with such a sorrowful Sense of them, as may for the future, oblige me to be more watchful and resolute against them. All which I beg for Jesus Christ his sake, with whose Prayer I conclude this my Evening Sacrifice.

Our Father which art in Heaven, &c.

If upon Enquiry it appear that you have committed any wilful, deliberate Sin, endeavour to affect yourself with Horror, Shame and Compunction for it, by representing to your Conscience the monstrous Foulness and Ingratitude, the deep Malignity and desperate Madness of your own Action, and then conclude with this Form of particular Repentance.

O Thou most dreadful Majesty of Heaven and Earth who hatest Iniquity, and hast proclaimed from Heaven thy fierce Indignation against all Unrighteousness and Ungodliness of Men, look down, I beseech thee, upon me, a vile and guilty Wretch, who stand here arraigned at thy Tribunal by my own Conscience, and am so confounded with the Sense of my Sin, and of thy just Displeasure against me, that I tremble to draw near unto thee, and yet I dare not stay from thee. I acknowledge myself unworthy, infinitely unworthy, to come before thee, and am prompted by my own Horror and Shame to hide myself from thee, but yet I know I must come, or I must perish. And therefore here, O Lord, I cast myself at thy Feet and if thou shalt think meet to tread upon me, and to spurn me from thy Presence for ever, I must own that thou art just and righteous in all thy Ways. For thou hast been wonderfully good beyond what I could modestly have wish'd, or am able to express; thou tookest Pity upon me when I was all wounded and polluted, and weltring in my Blood, when I was sleeping securely upon the Brink of Perdition, and had scarce any Sense or Feeling of my Guilt and Misery; in this woful Plight didst thou visit my poor Soul, and with thy preventing Grace awake me to a Sense of my Danger, and effectually warn me to flee from that Wrath to come. And now when thou hadst brought me to myself, and to a thorow Resolution of Amendment, and my Soul was in a fair way of Recovery, like an ungrateful Wretch as I am, I have flown in the Face of my Physician, I have abused his Goodness, and baffled his Grace, and wilfully and deliberately torn open my Wounds again. And this I have done most treacherously, as well as ungratefully, not only against all the Obligations of Thy Goodness, but also against my own repeated Vows and Engagements: For 'twas but this Morning that I solemnly renewed to Thee my Promise of Obedience, and therein vowed not to offend Thee wilfully upon any Temptation whatsoever; but O vile Traitor that I am, both to Thee and to my own Soul, I have by
and

* most basely falsified this my Engagement; and this I did with the most unpardonable Circumstance, even against the Diffusions of thy Grace, the Checks of my Conscience, and the fairest Warnings of my Danger. Had I done it ignorantly, or un-awares, or under a Surprise, it had been pitiable; but, O my Guilt, my Guilt, 'twas knowingly, wilfully, basely, and maliciously that I did this Evil in thy Sight; whereby I have forfeited my Soul, my Innocence, and Thy Love, and have got nothing in exchange but the Pleasure of a Minute, and a lasting Shame and Repentance. O vile Wretch, O desperate Fool that I am, what have I done! whither am I fallen! I have grieved thy Spirit, contemned thy Authority, trampled on thy Goodness, and wounded my own Conscience, and by one base Act have thrown myself head-long from all those glorious Hopes whereunto thou hadst raised me. And now, O God, what can I say in my own Behalf, my Sin being so great, my Folly so utterly inexcusable! O I am ashamed, I am ashamed of myself, I lament and abhor the Madness and Wickedness of my own Choice; and O that it were in my Power to recall it! But wo is me, it is past into an Act, and by that Act my Innocence is already stained, my Soul forfeited, and it is no more in my Power to undo what I have done, than to recall the Hours of Yesterday. What then shall I do, or whither shall I turn myself! 'Tis against thee, O Lord, against thee I have sinned, and now I have none but thee to flee to, I have nothing of my own to plead in my own Behalf, my Conscience condemns me, and my Sin, my Sin, cries aloud against me; so that unless thou wilt be pleased to listen to the interceding Blood of thy Son, and to consult thine own Bowels and Compassions, and from thence to fetch Arguments of Mercy, I am undone for ever by my own Folly. Wherefore for Jesus Christ his sake, for thy own Goodness and Mercy's sake, have Pity, have Pity upon me, heal my Soul, for I have sinned against thee; be merciful to my Sin, for it is great. Thou hast promised to receive returning Sinners, to blot out their Iniquities, and to heal their Backslidings. I desire, O Lord, to return unto thee, I hate and renounce my Sin, and do here abhor myself in Dust and Ashes before thee. Wherefore for thy Pity's sake, O try me this once more, and do not presently cast me away from thy Presence, nor take thy Holy Spirit from me, but restrain me, by his Grace, from all presumptuous Sins, and suffer them not to have Dominion over me. And quicken me, O Lord, for thy Name's sake, that for the future I may watch more carefully, resist more vigorously, and walk more circumspectly than I have hitherto done: and that from henceforth I may be intirely devoted to thee, and serve thee without Interruption, do thou so confirm me by thy Grace in my holy Resolution, as that I may choose rather to die than to offend thee any more. And now, O Lord, tho by my Rebellion against thee this Day, I have rendered myself most unworthy of thy fatherly Care and Protection, yet I beseech thee to watch over me this Night for good, and give me a safe Repose in the Arms of thy Providence, that I may have yet

* Here name the sinful Act you have committed.

a farther Space to repent of mine Iniquity. And grant, I beseech thee, that when I awake in the Morning, I may be warned by the woful Remembrance of this Day's Fall, to take more Care of my Steps, and to shun or refuse those Snares and Temptations that lie all around me. All which I do most humbly and earnestly beg of thee, even for Jesus Christ his sake, in whose Name and Words I farther Pray,

Our Father which art in Heaven, &c.

DIRECTIONS for the Exercise of our Private Religion in the State of our Progress and Improvement in the Christian Life, with Forms of Private Devotion fitted for this State.

When you enter into your Closet in the Morning, endeavour to affect yourself with Gratitude and Thankfulness to God for his Grace, by representing to yourself the Danger and Misery of that sinful State, out of which you are recovered, and the great Incapacity you were in to recover without his Assistance; and then make this Thankful Acknowledgment to him.

O Most gracious and most merciful Father, thou art a liberal Benefactor to thy Creation, a never-failing Friend to Mankind, and a most tender Lover of Souls, for whose everlasting Welfare thou hast been always consulting, and hast left no Method of Love unattempted, to rescue them from Sin and Misery. O blessed, for ever blessed, be thy great Name, for the Experience I have had of this thy fatherly Goodness. I am a Monument of thy Goodness, a living Instance and Wonder of thy Mercy; for me hast thou quickened, who was dead in Trespasses and Sins, and who had, long ago, perished in mine Iniquities, hadst thou not been infinitely patient and long-suffering; I had forfeited my Soul to thee, and thou mightest justly have cut me off, and given me my Portion with Hypocrites; and considering how I provoked thee to it by my daily Rebellions, I cannot but admire thy Forbearance towards me: But that thou shouldest not only forbear me, but follow me with thy Kindness, and never cease importuning me to return to my Duty and Happiness, till thou hadst conquered me by thy gracious Persuasions, O incomparable Love! O amazing Goodness! never to be sufficiently admired and adored! Wherefore, praised, for ever praised, be thy Grace, which hath redeemed my Life from eternal Death, and my Soul from the nethermost Hell; which hath rescued me from the Snare of the Devil, and the pernicious Bondage of my Lusts, and implanted in my Nature these heavenly Graces and Dispositions, and hitherto improved and advanced them towards my eternal Happiness. This, O my God, all this, I owe to thy free and undeserved Goodness, that I that was dead, am now alive; that I that was lost, am found; that I that was a Slave to my Lusts, am made free from Sin, and translated into the glorious Liberty of the Sons of God, is purely the Effect of thy free Grace, and to be intirely ascribed to thy all-powerful Goodness. Go on, O Lord, go on, I beseech thee, and perfect thine own Work, that so the Glory of it may be for ever redounding to thee; and that as I have been hitherto a signal Instance of thy Goodness, so I may be an happy Instrument of thy Praise to eternal Ages. And grant, I beseech thee, that the Sense of thy unspeakable Kindness towards me, may so captivate my Soul and all my Faculties, as that I may be most intirely thine; as that my Reason and Will, my Fear and Hope, and Love and Desire, may, from henceforth, be all resigned up to thee, and for ever devoted to the Honour and Worship of thy infinite Glories and Perfections; and this I most humbly beg for Jesus Christ his sake, to whom with thyself, and thy Eternal Spirit, be render'd all Honour, Glory and Power, from this Time forth and for evermore. Amen.

After this Thanksgiving, consider briefly with yourself the indispensable Necessity of your Perseverance to the End, and how not only vain and fruitless, but also hurtful and mischievous to you, all your past Labour in Religion will be without it; and then conclude your Morning-Devotion with this Prayer for Perseverance.

O God, who art unchangeably holy and blessed, who art the same Yesterday, to Day, and for ever, and dost never swerve or vary from the essential Goodness and Purity of thine own Nature, look down, I beseech thee, upon me, a fickle, weak and mutable Creature, whom thou hast redeemed to thyself, and hitherto conducted by thy Grace and Spirit. Thou knowest, O Lord, the Weakness of my Nature, and how unable I am, without thy Strength and Assistance, to finish the Race which thou hast set before me; thou knowest what Temptations I must struggle with, and what Difficulties I must yet overcome, before I am seized of the blessed Prize I am contending for: wherefore, since thou hast hitherto been my constant Support and Defence, forsake me not now for thy Name's sake, but as thou hast begun a good Work in me, so I beseech thee to finish and compleat it; to uphold my feeble Soul by thy free Spirit, under all Temptations and Difficulties, that so by patient Continuance in well-doing, I may seek for, and at last obtain Honour and Glory, Immortality and Eternal Life: For which End, O Lord, preserve me from being over-confident of my own Abilities, and inspire me with a holy Jealousy of myself, that whilst I stand I may take heed lest I fall. And if at any Time I should be so base, and so unhappy, as to offend thee wilfully (which I beseech thee to prevent for thy Mercy and Compassion sake), O suffer me not to sleep in my Sin, but recal me instantly by the Checks of my Conscience, and the Convictions of thy Spirit, lest while I add Sin to Sin, and one Degree of Wickedness to another, my Lusts should regain their Dominion over me, and thou shouldst be angry with me, and reject me from thy Covenant for ever. And that I may every Day serve thee more freely and stedfastly, wean me, I beseech thee, more and more from those Temptations to Sin that are round about me, and give me such a true Understanding of the nature of all the Goods and Evils of this World, as that neither the Flatteries of the one, nor the Terrors of the other, may ever be able to withdraw me from my Duty. And lest while I am mortifying my old Sins, I should carelessly permit new ones to spring up in my Nature; Good God, do thou mind me to search and try my own Heart, and take a severe account even of the smallest Defects and Imperfections within me; that so I may correct and reform them in Time, before they are improved into inveterate Habits. And grant that I may be always so sensible of my own Imperfection, as that I may never rest in any present Attainment, but may still be pressing forward to the Mark of my high Calling in Jesus Christ. Suggest to me, I beseech thee, frequent Thoughts of my Mortality, that so while I have Time and Opportunity, I may be preparing for my Departure hence, and making provision for a dying Hour. In order whereunto, assist me, O Lord, I beseech thee, strictly to examine and review my past sinful Courses, that so if there be any remains of Guilt abiding upon my Conscience, I may purge them away by proper Acts of Repentance, before I go hence and be no more seen! And grant that as I have formerly abounded in Sin, so that I may now redeem that precious Time I have lost, by abounding in the contrary Virtues

that so, as far as in me lies, I may revoke and undo the multitude of my past Sins, by doing all the Good I am able for the future. And that I may hold out and persevere to the end, preserve and continue me in the Communion of thy Church, and suffer me not to be led away by the Errors of the Wicked, and to fall from my own steadfastness. And finally, I beseech thee to grant, that in the Use of these blessed Means, I may so far prevail over the Infirmities and Corruptions of my Nature, as that at last I may have a clear and certain Feeling of my own Integrity and Uprightness towards thee; that so being from thence assured of thy Love, and of my Title to eternal Happiness, I may run the Ways of thy Commandments more chearfully, and at last finish my Course with unspeakable Joy. And now, O Lord, I resign myself to thee, take me, I beseech thee, into thy Care and Protection this Day, preserve me from all Evil, but especially from Sin, and quicken me by thy Spirit unto every good work, that so I may serve thee with a free and chearful Mind, and make it my Meat and Drink to do thy blessed Will. All which I humbly beg for Jesus Christ's sake, in whose Name and Mediation I farther Pray,

Our Father which art in Heaven, &c.

In the Evening, when you enter into your Closet, consider what is the present Frame and Temper of your Mind: and upon Inquiry you will perceive, either that thro' the present Prevalency of your corrupt Nature, you are averse to Divine Offices, or that thro' bodily Infirmary, you are indisposed to them, or that thro' Worldly-mindedness and Vanity of Spirit, you are cold and apt to be distracted in them; or lastly, that your Heart is very much enlarged, and your Mind and Affections vigorously disposed towards Divine and Heavenly Things.

If upon Enquiry you find that thro' the present Prevalency of your corrupt Nature, you are averse to Divine Offices, endeavour to affect yourself with Shame and Sorrow for it, by representing to your Mind the great Impiety and Baseness, the monstrous Folly and Ingratitude of this your present Temper, and then offer up this following PRAYER.

O My most gracious God, and most kind and merciful Father, thou art the best Friend I have in all the World, and have shewn a thousand Times more Love to me than ever I shewed to myself; but after all the vast and most endearing Obligations thou hast laid upon me, this vile and ungrateful Heart of mine still retains some Dregs of its antient Enmity against thee. Had I but the common Sense and Ingenuity of a Man in me, how could I think of thee without Raptures of Love; how could I draw near unto thee without Transports of Delight and Complacency! But, vile and ungrateful that I am, I can think of all thy Goodness with cold and frozen Affections, and can come into thy Presence, not only with Indifference but Reluctancy. Good God! what am I made of? what an insensible Soul do I carry about me! I am ashamed of myself, I am confounded with the sense of my own Baseness; and yet, woe is me, I cannot help it. I strive to shake off this Clog of my corrupt Nature, but still it hangs upon me, and sinks and weighs down my Soul as oft as 'tis aspiring towards thee. O my God, have pity upon me, deliver me from this Body of Sin, ease my weary and heavy laden Soul of this grievous Burden under which it labours and groans, and suffer not this spark of Divine Life, which thou hast kindled in me, to be oppressed and extinguish'd by it; but so cherish it, I beseech thee, with the continual Influences of thy Grace, as that at length it may break thro' all this Rubbish that suppresses it, and finally rise into into a glorious Flame. Then shall I always approach thee with Joy, and breathe up my Soul to thee in every Prayer; then shall my Heart be firmly united to thee in a devout and chearful Affection, and my Prayers shall come up as Incense before thee, and breathe a sweet smelling Savour into thy Nostrils. Hear me therefore, O my God, I beseech thee, and strengthen me with all might in the inward Man, that for the future I may contend more vigorously and successfully against these vile Inclinations of my Nature, which do so miserably hamper and depress my Soul, that so at last I may be a Conqueror, and more than a Conqueror, thro' Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

If thro' any bodily Infirmary, such as Melancholy, Weariness, Drowsiness, or Sickness, you find yourself indisposed to Divine Offices, endeavour to quicken your sluggish Mind with the Consideration of some one of the most moving Arguments of your Religion, such as the Love of God and of your Saviour, the Majesty of God's Presence in which you are, or the blessed Immortality you hope for; and then address yourself to God in this following PRAYER.

O Blessed God, who art a most pure and active Spirit, who dost always move with an uncontrollable Freedom, and art never hindred or wearied in thy Operations; have pity upon me, I beseech thee, thy poor infirm Creature, who am cumbred with this Body of Death, and so depressed by its manifold Frailties, that I cannot lift up my Heart unto thee. Thou knowest, O Lord, my Spirit is willing tho my Flesh is weak; my labouring Soul aspires towards thee, it stretches forth the Wings of its Desires towards thee, and would fain mount up above all Earthly Things, and unite itself with thee in eternal Love; but, alas! its Fervors are dampt, and its Endeavours tired by this clog of Flesh that hangs upon it, and perpetually sinks and weighs it down again. O my God, draw near unto me, and touch my Mind with such a powerful Sense of thee, as in despite of those my Bodily Indispositions may attract and draw up my Soul unto thee. And if it be thy blessed Will, release me from these fleshly Incumbrances, and fit my Body to my Mind, that I may serve thee, as I desire to do with a fervent and a chearful Spirit. But if it shall seem good in thine Eyes, to leave me struggling under these Bodily Oppressions, Lord give me Patience and Submission to thy Heavenly Will; that so when I cannot approach thee with that Pleasure and Satisfaction I desire, I may be heartily content to serve thee upon any Terms, and that what I want of Vigor and Chearfulness in my Religion, I may make up in Truth and in Reality. And O let the Sense of these my present Indispositions cause me more vehemently to long after that free and blessed State, wherein, with fixt and steady Thoughts, with flagrant Love and an intire Devotion of Soul, I shall for ever worship, praise, and glorify thy Name. Amen.

If thro' present Worldly-mindedness or Vanity of Spirit, you find yourself cold and apt to be distracted in your Religious Offices, endeavour to stir up your Affections by representing to yourself the Greatness and Urgency of your Spiritual Wants, the Vanity of all outward Things, and the Reality and Fulness of Heavenly Enjoyments. And do what you can to recollect your wandring Thoughts, by setting yourself in the Presence of the Great God, to whose All-seeing Eye every Thought and Motion of your Soul is open and naked. And when by thus doing you have composed your Mind into a more serious Frame, present this following PRAYER.

O Thou ever Blessed Majesty, who fillest Heaven and Earth with thy Presence, and art always listening to the Supplications of a world of Creatures that hang upon thee, open, I beseech thee, thine Ears of Mercy to me,
Z

me, who am unfit and unworthy to approach thee; who, by setting my Affections upon Things below, and plunging myself into the Cares and Pleasures of this Life, have estranged and alienated my Mind from thee, and lost that delightful Relish of thee, with which I was wont to draw near unto thee. And now that I am retired from the World to converse with thee, and spread my Wants and my Desires before thee, those worldly Cares and Delights, with which I have been too too conversant, are importunately thrusting themselves upon me, to divert my Thoughts, distract my Intentions, and carry away my Affections from thee; by reason whereof my Mind wanders, my Hope droops, and my Desires are frozen, and whilst I am drawing near thee with my Lips, my Heart is running away from thee. O my God, have pity upon me, pluck my Soul out of this deep Mire, quicken, raise, and spiritualize these my groveling Affections. Possess this Heart, which opens itself to thy gracious Influences, with such a strong and vigorous Love to thee, as may lift me up above all Earthly Things, and continually carry forth my Soul in vehement desires after thee! that so I may always approach thee with a joyful Heart, being glad to leave the company of all other Things to go to thee, my God, my exceeding Joy. Give me a sober, diligent, and collected Spirit, that is neither choaked with Cares, nor scattered with Levity, nor discomposed with Passion, nor estranged from thee with sinful prejudice or inadvertency; but fix it fast to thyself with the indissoluble Bands of an active Love and pregnant Devotion; that so, whenever I prostrate myself before thee, I may presently be borne away, far above all these sensible Goods, in a high Admiration of thee, and a passionate Longing after thee. And now, O Lord, while I am addressing to thee, gather in, I beseech thee, my wandering Thoughts, and fix and stay them upon thyself. And, O do thou touch my cold and earthly Desires with an out-stretched Ray from thyself, and cause them to rise and flame up to thee in Fervors answerable to my pressing Wants; that I may so ask as that I may receive, so seek as that I may find, so knock as that it may be opened unto me, thro' Jesus Christ my blessed Lord and Redeemer. Amen.

If after this you find your Heart is very much enlarged, and your Mind and Affections vigorously disposed towards God and Heavenly Things, fix your Mind a little while upon the Beauty and Excellency of his Nature, or upon some of the most affecting Instances of his Love, or upon the blessed State above, and then go on with this following PRAYER.

O Thou most excellent Being, thou infinitely amiable and adorable Majesty, thou Pattern of Beauty and Standard of Goodness, who art glorious beyond all Praise, and dost out-reach all Wonder, and comprehend all Perfection; blessed be thy Name, thou hast touched my Soul with a lively sense of thy Glory; I feel it shining thro' me, and like an active flame insinuating into my heart; it fires my Love, cherishes my Hope, wings my Devotion, and diffuses a vital warmth over all my Faculties; it raises me up into a Heavenly State, and fills me with Joy unspeakable and full of Glory: it captivates every thought in Obedience to thy Will, and brings every power of my Soul into subjection to thee. Blessed be thy Name, thou hast conquered me by thy Love, and I resign myself to thee with a chearful heart. I am entirely thine, I am thy Servant, truly I am thy Servant, and in this Title I glory more than in all the Honours of the World. But tho I am highly advanced and exalted by serving thee, yet thou art so infinitely happy in the boundless Perfections, of thy own Nature, that thou canst reap no other advantage from it, but only the pleasure pleasure of seeing thy poor Creature blessed and made happy by it. What then shall I render unto thee, O thou Joy of my Life, thou Treasure of my Love, thou supreme Felicity of my Nature! Alas, I have nothing but my self to give thee, nothing but this poor Heart that burns with Love to thee, that pants and breathes after thee, and desires above all Things in the World, to be eternally united to thee in perfect Love. If I had ten thousand Hearts to love thee, ten thousand Tongues to praise thee, I would devote them all to thee, as freely and chearfully as I do myself. For whom have I in Heaven but thee, and there is none upon Earth that I desire besides thee. O God, thou art my God, and my Portion for ever. In thee I am blest, and in the Light of thy Countenance I rejoice more than in all the Joys and Pleasures of the World. I am ravished with thy Beauty, I admire thy Love, and from the bottom of my Soul adore thy Wisdom and Goodness; my Heart is ready, O Lord, my Heart is ready, I will sing and give praise: Awake up my Glory, awake all the Powers of my Soul, I myself will awake and celebrate thy Praises. Praised be the God of Glory, praised be the God of Love, praised be the Father of Mercies, praised be the best Friend of Souls, for thy Goodness reaches to the Heavens, thy Glory shines thro'out the Creation; and thy Mercy is spread over all thy Works. Who can comprehend thine infinite Beauties, who can rehearse thy noble Acts! who can shew forth all thy Praise! I do confess my Thoughts are infinitely too short, my Affections too narrow, my Expressions too scanty, to comprehend and sufficiently admire and celebrate thy Glory. But, O my God, thou knowest that I love thee, and, blessed be thy Name, I feel infinite reason so to do. O that I could love thee more, that I could love thee but as much as Angels and glorified Spirits do, who yet cannot love thee as much as thou deservest, because thou deservest to be beloved infinitely. But my Soul thirsts for thee, and longs after thee. O when shall I be admitted into thy blessed Presence, there to see, and admire, and love and adore thee for ever! When shall I shake off this Clog of sinful Mortality, that sinks and depresses me, and flee to those happy Regions of perfect Love, where I shall continually feed upon thee with inexpressible Delight, and be filled with a strong and everlasting Sense of thy Goodness. O thou that art the beginner and finisher of every good Work, be pleased to assist my holy Endeavours, to withdraw my Mind more and more from these sensible Things, that it may have a clearer sight of its Heavenly Country from whence it came, and whither it desires to return; that so, having my Eye always fix'd on that blessed Recompense of Reward, I may live above this World, and, in despite of all its Terrors and Allurements, persevere to the end in a steady and even Course of Obedience. And now, O Lord, since thou hast been graciously pleased to inspire my Mind with these delightful Thoughts of thee, and, to enlarge my Heart with such sweet Transports of Love to thee; grant, I beseech thee, that they may not only please, but better me; that they may lift me up above all the Temptations of this World, and revive my Strength, and quicken my Endeavours, and compose my distrustful Heart into a steadfast Dependence upon thee, that so I may be fruitful in all good Works, and my Heart may be establish'd unblameable in Holiness before thee, unto the Coming of our Lord Jesus. Amen, Amen.

After you have used one or more of the foregoing Prayers, according as they suit with the present Temper of your Mind, take a short view of your Defects and Imperfections, and especially of those that cleave most to your Nature; and briefly represent to your Mind the intrinsick Evil and Vileness of them, and how they clog your Religion, blemish your Nature, and obstruct your Happiness, and then conclude with the following Prayer, for growth in Grace.

O God, who art the most excellent Nature, the Perfection of all Beauty, and the Fountain of all Graces, who dost infallibly understand what is best to be chosen, and invariably choose by the best and purest Reason; look down, I beseech thee, upon thy poor defective Creature, who am ashamed of myself to see how unlike thee I am; how I am laden with Imperfections, and how, after all my religious Endeavours, my Nature is still vitiated with unreasonable Lusts and Affections; how much Vanity and Impertinence there yet remains in my Mind, how much Perverseness in my Will, how much spiritual and carnal Iniquity in my Affections and Appetites. Lord, I have been long a contending with this corrupt Nature, and yet upon all Occasions I find myself too too prone to be *.

* Here name the particular Infirmities that stick closest to your Nature.

Woe is me, even my fairest Graces have their Spots and Blemishes, my purest Dispositions their sinful Intermixtures, and my best Works their Flaws and Imperfections. O my God, have pity on me, who here lie fighting at thy Feet, under a miserable diseased Nature; and as thou hast begun the blessed Cure in me, so for Christ his sake, I beseech thee to compleat it; that, being intirely recovered, and raised up unto newness of Life, I may, in the perfect Health and Vigor of my Soul, serve and glorify thee for ever. For which end, I beseech thee, confirm me more and more in the Belief of those immortal Pleasures beyond the Grave, which thou hast treasur'd up for those that love and obey thee, that by the strength of a lively Faith, and vigorous Hope, my Soul may be rais'd above this World, and learn to despise and trample upon all its gilded Vanities, whensoever they present themselves either to allure or to terrify me from pursuing the Heavenly Enjoyments. Excite in me such a vehement Thirst after those Rivers of Pleasures above, as may every Day render me more cool and indifferent towards Earthly Things, more contented and satisfied under all the Events and Issues of thy Providence, and more active and vigorous in my Heavenly Calling. And I beseech thee to inspire me with such clear and lively Apprehensions of thy essential Beauties and Perfections, and of thy bountiful Love, and boundless Benevolence to all thy Creatures, as may every Day more and more raise and improve my Love to thee; that this being the great Spring and Principle of all my Actions, may continually excite me to a chearful Obedience to thy Will, and a vigorous Imitation of thy Perfections. O cause me to love thee for thyself, and Religion for thee, and the Instruments of Religion, in order to thy Glory and my own Happiness; that so founding my Content upon thee, and the blessed Interests of a virtuous Life, I may grow in Grace, and be rich in good Works, and go on with a satisfied and triumphant Spirit from Imperfection to Strength, from Acts to Habits, and from Habits to Confirmation in Grace; and may be still more and more confirmed in all the Heavenly Graces, till they are finally consummated into everlasting Glory. And when, by thy Grace and Assistance, I have perfectly conquered the corrupt Nature within, and the Temptations without me, and am arrived into the State of everlasting Triumph, I will lay all my Victories at thy Feet, and, with Palms in my Hand, and Hallelujahs on my Lips, celebrate thy Praises to Eternity. Hear me, O my God, in this and whatever else thou knowest to be needful for me, even for Jesus Christ his sake, in whose Name and Words I farther Pray,

Our Father which art in Heaven, &c.

The End of the First PART.

T O T H E

Right Honourable

A N D

Right Reverend Father in GOD,

HENRY

Lord Bishop of LONDON,

And one of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy-Council, &c.

My LORD,

I Here present to Your Lordship the first Volume of a second Part of that Treatise of Christian Life, which I published some Years since, and which under the Protection of Your Venerable Name hath found good Acceptance with the World ; and to make an ingenuous Confession to Your Lordship, my Design in this second Dedication is not purely to render You the due Respects of a Presbyter to his Diocesan ; nor to tender those just Acknowledgments I owe to Your Lordship for the Happiness I have enjoy'd, with the rest of Your Clergy, under the auspicious Influence of Your Serene and Watchful Government ; no, nor yet to express the grateful Sense I have, and shall always retain, of the personal Obligations you have laid upon me : no, my Lord, tho' these were all of them sufficient Inducements, yet I confess, that together with these, I had a certain Politick End in my Eye. For I thank God I can truly say, my main Design

Design in composing this Treatise was to benefit the World ; but reflecting upon the manifold Defects it abounds with, after all the Pains I had bestowed upon it, I found that, to palliate its internal Blemishes, it was but needful to grace it with some external Ornament, and could think of none so proper for my Purpose, as this of affixing Your Lordship's Name to it ; a Name that carries with it Power enough to recommend any thing to the World, that is but pious, and honest, and well-designed ; and all that, I am sure, this is, how defective soever it be in other respects ; which, together with the Experience I have had of the great Candor and Benignity of your Lordship's Temper, gives me Encouragement to hope, that you will not only accept, but approve it ; and then, I am sure, Your Lordship's Approbation will give it Credit and Authority enough with the World, to enable it to effect those good and honest Ends for which it was sincerely intended by,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's

Most Humble, most Obliged,

And Faithful Servant,

JOHN SCOTT.

T H E P R E F A C E.

WHEN I wrote the Treatise of Christian Life, of which this and another Volume, now in the Press, is a second Part, I had no Design of engaging any farther in that Argument; but now I find by Experience, that Writing is like Building, wherein the Undertaker, to supply some Defect, or serve some Convenience which at first he forelaw not, is usually forced to exceed his first Model and Proposal, and many times to double the Charge and Expence of it. For after that Treatise began to be a little known in the World, I was advised from several Hands that there was one Thing wanting in it, which is the common Defect of most Practical Treatises, and that was, an Explication and Proof of those main Principles of Religion in which the Obligation of our Christian Duty is founded, which they thought might be sufficiently done within a very narrow compass, tho herein I find that either they were very much mistaken, or that I have very much exceeded the necessary Limits of my Argument, which I am not yet convinced of, but that I must submit to the Judgment of the World. I confess the Prospect of doing it in that narrow Compass they talk'd of was a great Inducement with me to undertake it, and perhaps had I foreseen at first what a large Field of Discourse it would oblige me to traverse, I shou'd never have entred on it; but when once I was in, I could not handsomly retreat.

And indeed, considering with what prodigious Rudeness and Insolence the very Foundations of Religion are struck at in this dissolute Age, he who would now treat of them to any purpose, will find himself obliged not only to give a distinct and clear Explication of them, but also to assert the Truth of them with convincing Evidence, and to answer and expose those Atheistical Cavils that are levelled against them; which latter would have been much less necessary in an Age of a more Serious and Religious Genius. And upon this account, I have been forced upon a much larger and more laborious Proof of the several Principles of Religion than I first intended. Not that I have any great Hope of reclaiming those who are professed Atheists to the Acknowledgment of the Truth; for when Men are seduced by Lust, as I verily believe most Atheists are, there is little Reason to expect they will be reduced by Reason. But that which I chiefly aimed at, is to confirm and establish those those that are wavering, and to antidote all against this spreading Contagion of Irreligion and Atheism, which in a fatal Chain, draws after it not only the Ruin of Mens Souls hereafter, but also the utter Subversion of all Human Society here: And it is this hath constrained me to enlarge this Second Part into Two Volumes, which at first View I promised my self to finish in One.

In this First Volume, I have treated only of those Principles which are common to natural Religion and Christianity together; as an Introduction to which, I have in the first Chapter explained and demonstrated the natural Distinction of Human Actions into Good and Evil, by some eternal Reasons for or against them; and having shewn at large that God hath made this Distinction sufficiently clear and evident to all Men, to enable them to conduct themselves to their own Happiness, and that those Actions of Men which fall under this natural Distinction, are the principal subject Matter of the Commands and Prohibitions of Religion; I proceed in the second Chapter, briefly to explain the Nature of Religion in general, and of Natural and Christian Religion in particular: From the Nature of both which, I have deduced those Fundamental Principles, from whence the Obligations of Religion are derived; the five first of which, being common to Natural Religion with Christianity, I have handled in this first Volume in so many distinct Chapters.

And then as for the last, viz. the Acknowledgment of Jesus Christ our Mediator, which contains under it all those Religious Principles that are peculiar to Christianity, tho I have endeavoured to treat of it with all the Brevity that is consistent with a clear and satisfactory Account of the whole Argument, yet it is run out into a Second Volume, which is now in the Press, and, I hope, within a few Weeks will be ready to follow this. And perhaps, when the Reader considers the Copiousness of the Argument it handles, he will rather blame me for being too brief than too tedious; for, in treating of those Doctrines which have been handled at large in other English Treatises of the Christian Faith, and especially in that incomparable one of our most Learned Bishop of Chester, on the Creed (a Book, which next to the Bible, I thankfully acknowledge my self more beholden to for my Instruction in the Doctrines of Religion, than to any one I ever read) I have contracted my self into as narrow a Compass as the barely necessary Explication of them would permit me; but where that renowned Pen hath insisted more Cursorily (as for instance on the particular Offices of our Blessed Mediator) I have most enlarged my self, tho even there I have for brevity sake pretermitted some Things I intended less immediate and necessary appertaining to the Argument.

Upon the whole I can truly say, that to the best of my understanding, I have herein delivered nothing but what is agreeable to the Doctrine of the Primitive Church, which, as the most faithful Comment on the Holy Writings of our Saviour and his Apostles, I have all along carefully consulted in doubtful and difficult Cases; and this is the reason why it hath stuck so long in Hand, the Pains I have taken in consulting the antient Monuments of Christianity about it, being, as I may truly say, at least double to that of composing it; and in following the Primitive Doctrine, I have followed the Doctrine of the Church of England, which in its Faith, Government, and Discipline, I believe, in my Conscience, is the most Primitive Church in the World.

As for the Method I have chosen, which is to deduce all the Doctrines of Christianity from one General Head, viz. the Doctrine of the Mediator, it is the most convenient I could think of for my Purpose, which was to represent at once to the Reader's view all the Parts of our Holy Religion in their natural Connexion with and Dependence on one another, that so he might be the better able to judge of the beautiful Contexture and admirable Contrivance of the whole, and that by seeing how regularly all the Parts of it proceed out of one common Principle, and conspire in one common End, he may be the better satisfied that Christianity is so far from being a Heap of Incoherencies, as some have injuriously represented it, that considering it merely as an Hypothesis, abstracted from all that external Evidence that accompanies it, the very Art and Contrivance of it, the Proportion, Symmetry, and Correspondence of its Parts, their Subserviency to each other, and the Concurrence and Tendency of them all together to the common Ends of Religion, are such as do apparently exceed all Human Invention, and argue it to be the Product of a divine Mind. For as he who would form a true Idea of the Beauty of a Picture, must not contemplate the Parts of it separately, but survey them all together, and consider them in their Proportions and Correspondencies with each other; so he who would frame a right Notion of Religion must not look upon it as it lies scattered and divided into single Parts and Propositions, but consider them in contexture, and as they are connected all together into one Body or Hypothesis. For it is in their apt Junctures, their mutual Dependencies and admirable Coherencies with one another, that the Beauty and Harmony of the Whole consists. And therefore to do Right to Christianity, and enable the Reader to contemplate it with the greatest Advantage, I have endeavour'd to represent to him the whole in a View, and to give him a Prospect of all the Parts of it together, in an harmonious Union and Connexion with each other. For I verily believe that the mean Opinion which some witty Men have entertained of Christianity, proceeds in a great measure from their broken and imperfect Apprehensions of it; they understand it piece-meal, and take it asunder into single Propositions, which they consider separately and apart by themselves, without ever putting them together into one regular System, and presenting them to their Thoughts in that orderly Connexion wherein the Holy Oracles have delivered them to us. For I can scarce imagine how any Man of Sense should contemplate Christianity all together, and thorowly consider the harmonious Coherence of all its Parts, and the wonderful Contrivance of the Whole, without being captivated with the Beauty and Elegancy of it.

And now I have nothing farther to add concerning this Treatise, but only to intreat the Reader not to be too severe in the perusal of it. For tho as for the Doctrine of it, I see no Reason at all to apologize for it, because I am fully persuaded of the Truth of it, yet being forced, as I was, to compose it by snatches, and in the more quiet intervals of a busy and uneasy Life, I very much suspect the Exactness both of the Stile and Method of it; and therefore all the Favour I desire is this, that where I have improperly or obscurely express'd my self, I may be construed in the most favourable Sense, and that where-ever I may seem to be confused or immethodical, it may be attributed to those frequent Interruptions which the Disorders of my Body have given to my Thoughts. And these are Requests so very just and reasonable, that I am confident none will be so peevish as to deny me, but they who read Books only to carp and find fault, and without any design to edify their own Understandings. But I hope the Reader will consider, that the Argument here treated of, is of too great moment to him to be so wretchedly trifled with, and that therefore he will not be either so disingenuous to me, or uncharitable to himself, as to peruse, with such a spiteful Design, that which I sincerely intended for his Good, and by which he, I am sure, if he pleases, may be the better for ever.

O F T H E

CHRISTIAN LIFE.

P A R T II.

C H A P. I.

Concerning the Being and Nature of Moral Goodness.

ALL human Actions are either Necessary, or Sinful, or Indifferent. The Necessary are such as are commanded, the Sinful such as are forbidden by God, the Indifferent such as are neither commanded nor forbidden, but left entirely free to our Choice and Discretion. Again, the necessary and the sinful Actions are either such as are necessary and sinful in themselves, and are commanded and forbidden upon the Account of some Good and Evil that is inseparable to their Natures; or such as are indifferent in their own Natures, as to any Good or Evil inherent in them; but are made necessary or sinful by some positive Command or Prohibition superinduc'd upon 'em. Of the first Sort are those which we call moral Actions; as being the subject Matter of the Moral Law, which commands and forbids nothing but what is essentially and immutably good and evil; and whilst there was no other Law but this, every Action which did not oblige by some eternal Reason, or which is the same, by some inseparable Good or Evil, was left free and indifferent. But in process of time God superadded to this moral Law a great many positive ones, whereby he obliged Men to do, and forbear sundry of those indifferent Things, which were left to their Liberty by the Law of Nature. For such we call the Rites and Ceremonies of the Mosaick Law; all which were indifferent before they were imposed, and as soon as ever the Imposition was taken off from them, did immediately return to their Primitive Indifferency: So that by the Abolition of their ceremonial Law, the Jews were restored to all the Liberties of the Moral; excepting only the Matter of the two Sacraments, and of maintaining a visible Communion with the Church, which are determined by positive Laws of Christianity. And of this latter Sort of necessary and sinful Actions, are, not only all those indifferent ones which God himself has commanded and forbidden immediately, but also all those which he commands and forbids by his *Viceroy*s and Representatives in this World. For whatsoever he hath not commanded or forbidden by his own immediate Dictate and Authority, he hath authorized his Vicegerents to command or forbid, as they shall judge it most expedient for the Publick. So that when they command what God hath not forbidden, or forbid what he hath not commanded, their Will is God's, who commands us by their Mouths, and stamps their Injunctions with his own Authority.

And of this Distinction between Actions that are morally and positively necessary, the Scripture frequently takes notice, and particularly, Mich. vi. 6, 7, 8. Wherewithal shall I come before the Lord, and bow my self before the high God? Shall I come before him with Burnt Offerings, with Calves of a year old, &c. No, these are not the Things that will render me acceptable in his Eyes, and procure me a welcome Admission into his Presence ; and yet it is certain that these Things were then required and commanded, and therefore were positively necessary ; but that they were not necessary in themselves upon the Account of any intrinsic Goodness that was in them, is evident from what follows, He hath shewed thee O Man what is good ; as much as if he should have said, the Things abovenamed are in their own Nature indifferent, having neither Good nor Evil in themselves ; and are made necessary merely by positive Command, upon which Account they are insufficient to recommend you to God : But there are other Things that carry an intrinsic Beauty and Goodness in their Nature by which they strictly oblige you to embrace and practise them, and do thereupon recommend you by their own native Charms to the Love and Favour of God ; and what these good Things are he hath sufficiently shewn or discovered to you, viz. To do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with your God, which are the main and principal Duties that he requires of you. Which plainly implies that there are some Actions which are morally, that is, in their own Natures, eternally good, and therefore eternally necessary, and some that are necessary only because for some present Reason God wills and commands them. For no Account can be given why he should be more pleased with Justice and Mercy and Humility, than with Sacrifice, unless we suppose the former to be good, and therefore necessary upon immutable Reasons, and upon that account to be immutably pleasing to him ; and the latter to be necessary only upon mutable Reasons, which therefore were to lose their Necessity as soon as those Reasons did alter or cease. For had Sacrifices been good in their own Nature, their Goodness had been as unalterable as their Nature ; whereas, on the contrary we find, that whereas their Nature neither is nor can be altered, yet their Goodness or Necessity is. For as, before God adopted them into the Rubrick of Religion by his own positive Institution, they were indifferent Things : so after this Institution was repealed by a contrary Command, they became unlawful. So that it is now as necessary that we should not offer them in the Worship of God, as it was before that we should. And the same may be said of all the other Rites of the Mosaick Law : Which being in their own Nature Indifferent, could no otherwise be converted either into Necessary or Sinful, but by GOD's express Command or Prohibition. Whereas Justice and Mercy, &c. are good in themselves abstractly considered from all Will and Command ; and are not good merely because they are commanded, but are commanded because they are good ; because they carry with them such unalterable Reasons as do in themselves render the Practice of them eternally necessary. For tho there be very good Reason why Men should not offer material Sacrifices, notwithstanding they were once enjoined ; yet it can never be reasonable for them to be unjust, or cruel, or proud, because the contrary Virtues carry such fixed and immutable Reasons with them as will bind and oblige us to Eternity ; insomuch, that tho we had a Dispensation to be proud under the Broad-Seal of Heaven, yet 'twould still be very absurd and unreasonable to be so. And as things that are only positively necessary or sinful, derive all their Necessity and Sinfulness from God's direct or express Command and Prohibition ; so they cannot be commanded or forbidden by Consequence. For, if the Matter of them be antecedently lawful or indifferent, it must necessarily remain so till it is directly commanded or forbidden ; there being no other Reason to bound and limit it, but only the Will of the Lawgiver in whose disposal it is ; and therefore till he directly signifies his Will either for or against it, it must remain as it is, i. e. Free and Indifferent. But you will say, suppose God hath commanded such an indifferent Thing for such a Reason, doth it not thence follow, that he thereby commands every other indifferent Thing that hath the same Reason for it ? I answer, No ; for if the Reason why he commands it be necessary and eternal, it is not a Thing indifferent, but morally necessary, and so is every Thing else that hath the same Reason for it : And consequently the Reason of the Law, tho it be applied but to one Thing, extends to every Thing of the same Nature ; because in all Moral Cases the Reason of the Law is the Law. But if the Thing commanded be in it self indifferent, the Reason why it is commanded cannot be Necessary ; and therefore tho there be the same Reason why another Thing of the same Nature should be commanded, yet it doth not necessarily oblige us unless it be commanded actually, because in such Cases it is not the Reason but the Authority of the Law that obliges ; and therefore where there is only the Reason and not the Law, it lays no Obligation on the Conscience.

From the whole therefore it is evident, what is the Difference between Things that are positively and morally necessary and sinful ; which I thought very necessary to explain at large, for the giving a fuller Light to the ensuing Discourse, in which I shall endeavour to shew,

First, That there is such an intrinsick Goodness in some Human Actions, as renders them for ever necessary and obliging to us.

Secondly, That God hath sufficiently discovered to us what those human Actions are, which carry with them this perpetual Obligation.

Thirdly, That these Actions, which carry with them this perpetual Obligation, are the main and principal Parts of Religion.

S E C T. I.

That there is such an Intrinsick Good in some Human Actions, as renders them for ever necessary and obliging to us.

GOOD is twofold, Absolute or Respective ; or the Good of the End and the Good of the Means. The Good of the End is that which is the Perfection and Happiness of any Being ; the Good of the Means is that which tends and conduces thereunto. As for Instance, the absolute Good of a brute Animal consists in the Perfection and Satisfaction of its Sense, or in having perfect Feeling and Sensation of such Things as are most grateful to its Appetite and Senses. Its Respective Good is the Means by which its Senses are perfected, or render'd lively and vigorous, and by which it is provided for with such Things as are grateful and pleasing to them. For there being in every animate Nature a Principle, whereby it is necessarily inclined to promote its own Preservation and Well-being ; that which hath in it a Fitness to promote this End is called Good, as on the contrary that which is apt to hinder it, Evil. Now Man, being not only a sensitive but a rational Creature, hath a two-fold Good, belonging to his Nature ; the first sensitive, which is the same with that of brute Animals, consisting in the Perfection and Satisfaction of his bodily Senses and Appetites, and in those Means which conduce thereunto ; and this for Distinction sake is called his natural Good ; the second rational, which consists in the Perfection and Satisfaction of his rational Faculties, and in those means which tend thereunto ; and this is stiled his Moral Good, tho in reality 'tis as much Natural as the former. For Man being naturally as well rational as sensitive, that which promotes his Rational Perfection and Happiness, is no less naturally good for him than that which promotes his sensitive : Nay, his rational Nature being the much more noble and excellent Part of him, that which naturally promotes the Perfection and Happiness of it, is in itself a much greater Good to his Nature, and ought to be preferred by him before any of those natural Goods which conduce only to the Happiness of his sensitive Nature ; and he who indulges his sensitive Part in any Pleasure which his rational disallows, doth thereby create a Torment to himself, and raise a Devil in his own Mind. For tho Reason and Religion do allow that the sensitive Nature should be gratified in all its natural Appetites and Desires ; yet neither allow, that it should be pamper'd and indulg'd in any such Excesses, as are prejudicial either to itself or to that Rational Nature whereunto it is joined ; and he who indulges his Sense in any such Excesses, renders himself obnoxious to his own Reason, and to gratify the Brute in him displeases the Man, and sets his two Natures at Variance. So that there is nothing can be naturally good for us, that is any way inconsistent with what is morally so, i. e. with what conduces to the Perfection and Happiness of our rational Nature; and tho this Natural and Moral good are no way inconsistent with one another, yet it is the moral that is the supreme Good of a Man, because it is the Good of his most excellent Nature. Having thus premised what I mean by Good in general, and particularly by Moral Good, I proceed to shew that in some human Actions there is such an intrinsick Moral Good as renders 'em for ever obliging to us. And this I shall endeavour in these following Propositions.

First, That the Happiness of human Nature is founded in its Perfection.

Secondly, That the Perfection of human Nature consists in acting suitably to the most perfect Reason.

Thirdly, That the most perfect Reason is that wherein all reasonable Beings do consent and agree.

Fourthly, That there are certain Rules of Moral Good, wherein all reasonable Beings are agreed.

Fifthly, That to act suitably to those Rules hath been always found by universal Experience conducible to the Happiness of human Nature, and the contrary mischievous thereunto.

I. That the Happiness of human Nature is founded in its Perfection. For the Perfection of Beings consists in their being completely disposed and adapted for the End whereunto they are designed. Now the End of all Beings that have Life and Sense, is that Sort of Happiness that is suitable to their Natures; for 'tis thither that they all of them naturally tend, and therein that their Faculties do all concenter. When therefore their Faculties or Powers of Action are completely disposed to enjoy the proper Happiness of their Natures, then are they perfect in their Kind. Thus for Instance, the End of Brutes, which have only bodily Sense, is sensitive and corporeal Happiness; and therefore then is the Brute Creature perfect in its Kind, when it hath not only all the Parts and Senses that are necessary to procure and enjoy its Happiness, but hath them also perfectly fitted, temper'd and qualified to pursue and relish it. And supposing that all the Pleasure or Happiness of a Beast consisted in the Taste and Smell of its Pasture, it could never be completely happy so long as the Organs of its Smell or Taste were imperfect. So that the Perfection of every sensible Nature consists in being perfectly disposed to enjoy its natural Happiness. And accordingly herein consists the Perfection of human Nature, in being perfectly fitted and disposed to enjoy and relish human Happiness. For this being its proper End, it is impossible it should ever be perfect in its Kind, till 'tis completely contempered and adapted thereunto. So that our Happiness must necessarily be founded in our Perfection, which is nothing else but the perfect Disposition of our Natures to relish and enjoy those Goods wherein the Happiness of our Nature consists; and till our Nature is perfectly disposed to enjoy them, all the good Things of Heaven and Earth will be insufficient to render us perfectly Happy.

II. That the Perfection of human Nature consists in acting suitably to the most perfect Reason. For Reason being the Top and Crown of human Nature, hath a natural Right to command and dispose of its Motions; to be the Eye of its Will, and the Guide of its Affections, and the Law of all its Powers of Action. And indeed, for what other use serves the Reason of a Man, but to prescribe Rules to his unreasonable Affections, to light and direct them to their proper Objects, and as they are moving towards them, to moderate their Excesses, and to quicken their Defects, and to lead them on to true Happiness in an even Course, thro' all the wild Mazes of popular Mistakes? And unless it be thus imployed, the Man is reasonable in vain, and his light like a Candle inclosed in a dark Lanthorn, burns out in waste, and spends itself in an useless and unprofitable Blaze. And whilst to please our Appetites and Passions we run counter to the Advice of our Reason, we forsake the Rule of our Natures, and act like Beasts and not like

Men;

Men ; in which Course of Action if we persist, we must necessarily degenerate from our selves, and sink by degrees into the most sordid Brutality. For when once our Appetites have gotten the Command of our Reason, and not only dethroned but enslaved it, the very Order of our Nature is transposed, and we are become our own Reverse and Antipodes. If therefore we would arrive at our Perfection, it must be by following our Reason, and submitting all our Affections and Appetites to its Government. For what else can be the Perfection of a rational Nature ; but to be perfectly Rational ; and what is it to be perfectly rational, but to have our Minds thorowly instructed with the Principles of right Reason, and our Will and Affections intirely regulated by them ? For herein consists the supreme Perfection not only of Men, but of Angels ; yea, and of God himself, the Crown and Glory of whose Nature it is, that he always knows, and chooses, and acts what is fittest, and best, and most Reasonable. And when once our Understanding is so far inlighten'd, as that it always dictates right Reason to us ; and our Will and Affections are so far subdued, as that they always freely and chearfully comply with it ; we have arrived to the very Top of our Nature, and are commenced perfect Men in Christ Jesus.

III. That the most perfect Reason is that wherein all reasonable Beings do consent and agree : For if there be any such matter, as True and False, Reasonable and Unreasonable, in the Nature of Things ; and if there be any such Thing as Understanding among Beings, whereby they are capable of distinguishing between the one and the other ; either that must be True and Reasonable which all Understandings do consent and agree in : Or, all the Understandings that are in the World must be under a fatal Cheat and Delusion. Which latter, being supposed, inevitably destroys all Knowledge and Certainty, and lays a Foundation for the wildest Scepticism. For supposing all Understandings to be deceived and imposed on, it is impossible for us to be certain of any Thing ; and for all we know, a Part may be bigger than the Whole, two and two may make Twenty, and both Parts of a Contradiction may be true. Nay, we can never be certain whether we are not Dreaming when we think we are Awake, and whether we are not Awake when we think we are Dreaming. Either therefore we must renounce all Certainty whatsoever, and fluctuate in eternal Scepticism ; or allow that to be true and reasonable which all Understandings do unanimously vote so.

IV. That there are certain Rules of moral Goodness, concerning the immutable Reason whereof all Understandings are agreed. For such are all those which prescribe the Dueness of Worship and Veneration to God, of Obedience and Loyalty to our Parents and Superiors, of Temperance and Fortitude to our selves, and of Justice and Charity to one another ; to the Goodness and Reasonableness of which Rules, all Understandings do as unanimously consent as to the Truth of any Proposition in the Mathematicks. Now of all the Orders of reasonable Beings, that which we most converse with, and with whose Consent and Agreement in any Matters we are best acquainted, is that of Men ; and therefore if among Men we can discover such an universal Agreement concerning the Goodness of these Rules, as will warrant us to conclude all other rational Beings to be consenting with them, this will be a sufficient Demonstration of the Truth of the Proposition. These two Things therefore I shall endeavour to make out,

1. That the Reason of Men is Universally consenting in this Matter, viz. That there is an immutable Goodness in these Rules of Morality.
2. That this universal Consent of Mens Reason in this Matter is a sufficient Demonstration, that all other reasonable Beings are consenting with them.

First, Therefore there is nothing more evident than that Men are universally agreed in this Matter, That to Worship God, to Honour their Parents and Superiors, to be Temperate in their Passions and Appetites, and just and charitable towards one another, are Things in their own Nature immutably good : That this is not an Opinion peculiar to such an Age, or to such a Nation, or to such a Sect of Religion, but the universal Judgment of all Mankind, of whatsoever Age, Nation, or Religion. For 'tis upon this Judgment that all that Conscience is founded, which approves of or condemns Mens Actions ; which Conscience is nothing else but a Sense or Feeling of moral Good and Evil ; and is every whit as natural to Mens Minds, as the Sense of pleasant or painful Touches to their Bodies. Since therefore general Effects must spring from general Causes, it necessarily follows, that that Pain and Pleasure which Mens Minds generally feel upon the Commission of bad and good Actions, must be resolved into some general Cause ; and what else can that be, but the general Consent of their Reason concerning the immutable Evil of the one and Good of the other ? I know 'tis pretended by some of our modern Navigators, that there are a Sort of People in the World who have not the least Sense of Good and Evil, and do own neither God, nor Religion, nor Morality. But considering the short Converse and imperfect Intercourse which these our new Discoverers have had with those barbarous Countries, it is fairly supposeable that the Inhabitants may have Notions both Religious and Moral, of which Strangers who understand not their Language and Customs and Manners, can make little or no Discovery. But suppose that what they report were true ; yet by their own Confession these wretched Barbarians are in all other Things so extremely Brutish, that they discover no other Token of their Humanity but their Shape. For they live altogether Regardless of Themselves, of the Conveniencies of their Lives, and of the Dignity of their Natures ; without making any Reflections on their own Minds, or any Observations from their own Experience. Since therefore all Knowledge is acquired by Attention, it is not at all impossible for Creatures, so utterly supine and negligent, to be ignorant of the most common Notions ; but for any Man to question the Truth of this general Rule, because there are a few Exceptions from it, is every whit as absurd, as if he should question whether Men are generally two legg'd Animals, because there have been some Monsters with three. And what if among Men there are some Monsters in Respect of their Minds, as well as others in Respect of their Bodies ; this is no more a Prejudice to the standing Laws of human Nature, than Prodigies are to the Regularity of the constant Course of universal Nature. Specimen naturæ cujuslibet, saith Tully, a natura optima sumendum est, i. e. The true Sample of every Nature is to be taken from the best Natures of the Kind. Since therefore the Men of all Nations and Ages and Religions, who have in any Measure attended to the Nature of Things, and made but any tolerable Use of their Reasons, are, and always have been universally agreed, That there is an immutable Good in Virtue, and Evil in Vice ; it is no Argument at all, that this is not the general Sense of Mankind, supposing it true, which is very questionable, that there are some few such inhuman Barbarians in the World as make no Distinction at all between 'em. But then,

Secondly, This universal Consent of Mens Reason in this Matter, is a sufficient Demonstration, that all other reasonable Beings are consenting with them. For it shews that God himself is of this Mind : And if He be, we may be sure that all other reasonable Beings are. For if we believe that God made us, we must believe that he made us for some End ; and if he made us for any End, he must esteem those Actions Good which promote it, and those Evil which obstruct and hinder it. And what other End can an infinitely happy and blessed Being have in making other Beings ; but only to do them Good, and according to their several Capacities, to make them Partakers of his own Happiness ? And if this be the End for which God made us, to be sure those Actions must be good in his Esteem that are beneficial, and those evil that are hurtful and mischievous to our Nature. And therefore since he hath implanted in us, not only a natural Desire of Happiness ; but also a rational Faculty to discern what Actions make for our Happiness, and what not ; we may be sure that whatsoever this Faculty doth universally determine to be good or evil for us, is good or evil in the Judgment of God : 'Tis true, when the Reason that is in one Man judges contrary to the Reason that is in another, there must be a Disagreement on one side or the other from the Reason and Judgment of God : But when all Mens Reason is agreed, that this is Good and that Evil, it is plain that this is the Judgment of the rational Faculty, which naturally makes such a Distinction of Things. For there is no Man, that uses his Reason, can possibly think that Truth and Falshood, Justice and Injustice, Mercy and Cruelty are equally good in themselves; his rational Faculty being so framed, as that at the first Glance and Reflection, it naturally distinguishes 'em into Good and Evil. When therefore God hath created us with such a Faculty, as naturally makes such a Judgment of Good and Evil, that Judgment must be God's, as well as the Faculty which made it. That therefore which is the unanimous Judgment of all Men, must be the natural Language of the rational Faculty; and that which is the natural Language of the rational Faculty must be the Language of the God of Nature. For he who created me with such a Faculty as naturally judges this Good and that Evil, must either have the same Judgment himself, or create in me a Contradiction to his own Judgment; and that Judgment which he hath created in me, he must be supposed to create in all other Beings that are capable of Judging; otherwise he would be the Author of contradictory Judgments. For, should one rational Faculty naturally judge this, and another the contrary, they must necessarily be so framed as to contradict each other; and consequently he who framed both must be the Author of the Contradiction. So that this universal Consent of Men concerning the Good and Evil of human Actions, is a plain Evidence that God and all other rational Beings are consenting with 'em.

V. And lastly, that Mens acting conformably to these Rules of moral Goodness, in which they are thus universally consenting, hath by long and constant Experience been found most conducive to Mens Welfare and Happiness. For the Proof whereof I shall need urge no other Argument than this, that the great Design of all human Laws and Constitutions hath been to secure and enforce these Rules of Morality; which is a plain Argument that Men have always found by Experience that they are naturally good, and productive of their Happiness and Welfare. For how can it be thought, that after Men have had so many thousand years Trial of Piety and Justice, and Mercy and Temperance, they should still be so solicitous to fence and guard 'em with Laws, had they not found 'em highly advantageous, and their Contraries as mischievous to Mankind. For do but suppose, that the Contraries to all Virtue were for Experiment sake imposed for some time upon Mankind, and it were made as Penal by the Laws of Nations to be Pious and Just, Merciful and Temperate, as it is now to be the contrary; is it imaginable that that, which we now call Vice, should in Process of Time acquire the same universal Reputation that Virtue hath always had among Men? Or at least, is it probable that after some thousand years Trial and Experience of such a Law, Men should still be as much concerned to guard and enforce it, as they are and always have been to secure the Laws of Piety and Virtue? No, it is most certain they would not. For the very injoyning of Impiety, Injustice, and Cruelty would be in effect to injoyn Men to render themselves most wretched and miserable: To surrender up all the Supports of their Hope, the Peace of their Consciences and the Tranquillity of their Minds; to live in everlasting Broils and Discords, and turn Robbers and Cut-throats to one another, and utterly deprive themselves of all the Comforts and Securities of human Society. So that there is no doubt but after a few Years Experience of the mischievous Consequents of such a Law, the whole World would groan under it as an insupportable Tyranny; and even the most Vicious would soon grow quite weary of it, and heartily wish that it were for ever repealed, and the good old Laws of Piety and Virtue restored and enforc'd upon Mankind. And if so, it is plain that Virtue and Vice are distinguished by their Natures into Good and Evil; and that the Obligations we lie under to practise the one, and abstain from the other, are not founded in any arbitrary Constitution, but in the essential Goodness and Malignity that inseparably adheres to them.

And if we consult the Experience of particular Men, we shall always find, that whereas Impiety and Injustice, Fraud and Malice do naturally torment Mens Minds with Anguish and Confusion, haunt their Breasts with fearful Thoughts and dire Expectations, harrass their Souls with perpetual Male-contentedness, and intricate their whole Lives with everlasting Shifts and Intrigues: Piety and Justice, Truth and Benevolence do as naturally sooth and ravish their Minds, fill 'em with blessed Hopes and cheerful Reflections; compose their Passions, strengthen and invigorate their Hearts, and render the whole Course of their Lives plain and direct, even and easy. And hereby Virtue doth sensibly recommend it self to our Natures in all its Capacities, as being suited to the Satisfaction of all its reasonable Desires; and so by Consequence designed to make up the completest and most entire Enjoyment. All which is as plain and obvious to the Reason of Mankind, as any Matter of Fact that is before us: So that 'tis not only the Reason, but also the Experience of Mankind that universally agrees and consents in this great Truth, That there is such a Good in virtuous, and such an Evil in vicious Actions, as doth eternally and inseparably cleave to their Natures.

And therefore since our Nature is to continue the same for ever; the same Virtues and Vices which are now the Perfection and Depravation and consequently the Happiness and Misery of it, will be so for ever. From whence it necessarily follows, that our eternal Happiness and Misery is founded in the Course of our own Actions; so that as in the Course of a virtuous Life, we are growing up into a State of fixed and everlasting Virtue, wherein we shall be everlastingly Perfect and Happy: So on the contrary, in a Course of vicious Actions, we are sinking into a State of everlasting Viciousness, wherein we shall be everlastingly wretched and miserable. For since Virtue is good for, and Vice evil to, us in its own Nature; it necessarily follows, that according as we remain Virtuous or Vicious for ever, our Condition must be good or evil for ever. And this being so, of what unspeakable Consequence are the Actions of Men, that thus draw after 'em a Chain of Joys or Woes as long as Eternity! And how careful ought we to be, to what Course of Life we determine our selves, considering that our eternal Fate depends upon what we are now doing: That every moral Action we perform is a Step Heaven or Hellwards; that in every bad or good Choice we make, we are planting our Tophet or our Paradise; and that in the Consequents of our present Actions we shall rue or rejoice to eternal Ages! Oh would to God Men would at last be so wise as to consider these Things before it be too late, and not live at Random as they do without any Regard to the certain and unavoidable Fate of their own Actions! For doubtless would they but thorowly weigh the Nature and Event of Things, and look before they leap into Action, they would see infinitely more Charm and Terror in that Good and Evil which inseparably adheres to virtuous and vicious Actions, than in all the Temptations in the World. Wherefore in the Name of God let us look about us, and for once resolve to act like Beings that must for ever feel the bad or good Effects of our own Doings. Which if we do, we shall not only live well and happily here, but to all Eternity experience the Blessed Consequents of it.

S E C T. II.

That God hath sufficiently discovered to us what those human Actions are, which are morally Good, and upon that Account, perpetually Obliging.

THE Truth of which will evidently appear by considering the Particulars; what it is that God hath done in order to the making this great Discovery to us; the most considerable of which are reducible to these Six Heads:

First, He hath implanted in us a natural Desire of Happiness.

Secondly, He hath given us Reason, to discern what Actions they are that make for our Happiness, and what not.

Thirdly, he hath so contrived our Natures as that we are thrust on by our own Instincts and Passions, to those Actions which make for our Happiness.

Fourthly, He hath taken care to excite and oblige us to those Actions by annexing natural Rewards to them, and entailing natural Punishments on their Contraries.

Fifthly, To strengthen and enforce this Obligation, he hath frequently superadded to these natural Rewards, and Punishments, supernatural Blessings and Judgments.

Sixthly, That to enforce all this, he hath made fundry supernatural Revelations, wherein he hath plainly told us what those Things are, that carry with 'em this intrinsic Good and Necessity.

I. God hath taken care to discover to us what is morally Good, by implanting in us a natural Desire of Happiness, which is so inseparable to human Nature, that 'tis impossible for us to forbear desiring what is good for us, or at least what appears so. For tho' thro' our own Ignorance and Inconsideration we many Times mistake Evil for Good, and Misery for Happiness; yet such is the Frame of our Nature, that we cannot desire Evil as Evil, or Misery as Misery; but whensoever we embrace a real Evil, 'tis either under the Notion of a less Evil, or of a real and substantial Good. Now by this unquenchable Thirst and Desire of Happiness which God hath implanted in our Natures, we are continually importuned and excited to search out and inquire by what Ways and Means we may arrive to be happy. So that as Hunger and Thirst and the Sense of bodily Pain and Pleasure, force Men upon the Invention of Trades and civil Occupations to supply their Necessities and Conveniences: So this vehement Hunger and Thirst after Happiness, which God hath created in our Bosoms, doth almost necessitate and constrain us to pry into the Nature of our Actions; that so we may discover what Trade and Course of Life it is, that tends most directly to our own Felicity. And by thus importuning us by our own self-love to inquire into the Nature of our Actions, and into their natural Tendencies to our Weal or Woe, he hath not only expressed his Good-will towards us, by taking Security of our selves for our own Welfare, and obliging us to be happy by the the most tender and vigorous Passion in our Natures; but hath also taken an Effectual Course to discover to us the Good and Evil of our own Actions; Considering,

II. That he hath given us Reason to discern, what Actions they are that make for our Happiness, and what not. 'Tis true, had he only implanted in our Breasts a blind Desire of Happiness, without any Eye of Reason in our Heads to guide and direct our Actions towards it, we must have wandered in the Dark for ever, till we had pined away our wretched Beings, with a hungry and unsatisfied Desire. But by giving us a quick-sighted Faculty of Reason to guide and conduct this our blind Desire, he hath taken sufficient Care, not only to excite our Inquiry after the Way to Happiness, but also to enable us to find it. For the natural Tendencies of our Actions to our Happiness, or Misery, are so very obvious and visible, that we can scarce open our Eyes and look abroad without observing them. For how can any Man, who makes any Observations upon Things, be so stupid as not to discern the vast Difference there is between Truth and Falshood, Justice and Injustice, as to their natural Tendency to the Good and Hurt, Happiness and Misery of Mankind? 'Tis true, if Men will neglect using their Reason, they may be ignorant of the plainest Propositions; but if they be 'tis their inexcusable Folly. But if Men will be so true to their own Interest, as calmly to reflect upon their Actions, their Sense cannot more readily distinguish between Honey and Gall, than their Reason will between Virtue and Vice; the fundamental Reasons of which are so legible in all the Appearances of Nature, so necessary to the Being and Preservation of Mankind, and their Equity is so apparent, and their Convenience so obvious, that a Man can hardly reflect upon any Thing either within or without him, without being convinced of their Force and Obligation. So that for a Man that hath the Use of his Reason not to observe the Difference of his Actions, as to their intrinsic Good and Evil, and necessary Tendency to his Happiness and Misery, would be as gross and unexcusable a Stupidity, as if he should pass thro' the World without ever taking notice that two and two make Four. God therefore by giving us a reasonable Faculty to discern the Nature of things, upon which the Differences of Good and Evil are so plainly and legibly imprinted, hath hereby taken sufficient Care to shew us the Difference of our own Actions. For, to inspire us with a Faculty of Reasoning, by which we can form true Notions of Things from single Experiments, and infer one Truth from another, and immediately to inspire this Faculty with divine Truth, are only two different Modes of divine Revelation; and God did as really reveal himself to us, when he gave us Reason to understand his Will, as when he sent to us his Messengers from Heaven to make known his Mind and Will to us. For God hath so framed our Understandings, as that whensoever we impartially reason about Things, we are forced to distinguish between Good and Evil, and cannot persuade our selves without doing infinite Violence to our own Faculties; that to blaspheme God or to reverence him, to lie or speak Truth, to honour our Parents, or to scorn and despise them, are Things of an indifferent Nature; but as soon as ever we open the Eye of our Reason, we discern such an essential Difference between them, as forces us to condemn the one and approve the other. And accordingly, as for the great Strokes of Iniquity, we find they have as much the universal Judgment of our Reason against them, as any false Conclusion in the Mathematicks; whilst the Goodness of their contrary Virtues is as universally acknowledged by us, as the Truth of any first Principle in Philosophy. Since therefore God hath so framed our Understanding, as that it cannot calmly reflect upon our Actions without distinguishing between the good and bad, he hath hereby sufficiently revealed to us, what that Good is that immutably binds and obliges us.

III. God hath so contrived our Natures, as that we are thrust on by our own Instincts and Passions to those Actions which are morally Good, and do make for our Happiness. For we are framed and constituted with such Passions and Affections as do naturally point and direct us unto virtuous Actions; and tho by the Constitution of our Natures, our Passions are subjected to our Reason, and all our Virtue consists in being reasonably Affected; yet in the very Nature of our Passions there is a certain Tendency and Direction to Virtue, antecedent to all our Reasoning and Discourse. Which Theognes the Pythagorean styles ἡ ἀπορρητική καὶ ἐνθουσιασμός τὰς κατὰ φύσιν ἀρετῶν, a certain natural Impetus or Enthusiasm, by which, without any previous Discourse or Deliberation, we are forcibly carried on towards virtuous Actions. For some Affections there are in our Nature, which do in the general plainly signify to us, that there is such a Thing as moral Good and Evil in human Actions; and others that do as plainly point out what those Actions are, wherein this moral Good and Evil is subjected. Of the first Sort are the Affections of Love and Hatred, Complacency and Horror, Glory and Shame, Repentance and Self-satisfaction; which plainly declare that there are answerable Objects in the Nature of Things and Actions; that there is a Good to be beloved, and an Evil to be bated; a Deformity to be abhorred, and a Beauty to be delighted in; an Excellency to be gloried in, and a Filthiness to be ashamed of; a Well-doing to be satisfied with, and an Ill-doing to be repented of. For if there were no such real Distinctions in the Nature of Things and Actions; all these Affections in us would be utterly vain and impertinent. And as these Affections of our Nature do signify in the general, that there is a moral Good and Evil in our Actions; so there are others, which do particularly point out what Actions are morally Good and what Evil. Thus for Instance, the Passions of Veneration and Disdain do plainly direct us to honour God and our Superiors, and to be constant in good Courses, out of a generous Scorn of all Temptations to the contrary. Thus Commiseration and Envy direct us to Charity and Justice, to lament and assist those who are undeservedly unfortunate, and to be displeased with the Advancement of base and undeserving People; and consequently to be just and equal in our Distributions, and to proportion them to Mens Merit and Desert. For by this Passion of Envy, Nature teaches us that there is such a Thing as just and unjust, equal and unequal, and that the former is to be Embraced, and the latter to be Shunned. And to name no more, thus Sorrow and Joy do by silent Language dissuade us from injuring, and persuade us to benefit one another. For so by the mournful Voice, the dejected Eyes and Countenance, the Sighs and Groans and Tears of the sorrowful and oppressed, (all which are the powerful Rhetorick of Nature) we are importuned not only to forbear heaping any farther Injuries upon them, but also to commiserate their Grievs, and by our timely Aids to succour and relieve them. As on the contrary the florid and chearful Looks, the pleasant and grateful Air, which we behold in those that rejoice, are so many Charms and Attractives by which Nature allures us to mutual Urbanity and Sweetness of Behaviour, and a continual Study to please and gratify one another. By these and many other Instances I might give, it is evident, that tho by our own ill Government, we too often deprave our Affections, and corrupt them into Vices; yet their natural Drift and Tendency lies towards Virtue. Thus by their own natural Light which they carry before us, they direct our Steps to the Way we are to walk in, and point out all those Tracts of eternal Goodness that lead to our Happiness. For since these Affections are in us antecedently to all our Deliberations and Choices, it is evident they were placed there by the Author of our Natures; and therefore since 'tis He, who hath inclined them to all that they naturally incline to, He doth in effect direct and guide us by their Inclinations. So that their natural Tendencies and Directions are the Voice of God in our Natures, which murmurs and whispers to us that natural Law which our Reason indeed doth more plainly and articulately promulge. And from this natural Tendency of our Affections to Good, proceeds that pleasant and painful Sense of good and bad Actions, which we experience in our selves before ever we can discourse. For thus before we are capable of Reasoning our selves into any Pleasure or Displeasure, our Nature is rejoiced in a kind or just Action either in ourselves or others; and we are sensibly pleased when we have pleased those that oblige us, and as sensibly grieved when we are conscious of having grieved and offended them. We love to see those fare well who we imagine have deserved well; and when any unjust Violence is offered them, our Nature shrinks at, and abhors it. We pity and compassionate the Miserable when we know not why? and are ready to offer at their Relief, when we can give no Reason for it: Which shews that these Things proceed not either from our Education or deliberate Choice, but from the Nature of our Affections which have a Sympathy with Virtue, and an Antipathy to Vice implanted in our very Constitution. And hence it is, that in the Beginnings of Sin, our Nature is commonly so shy of an evil Action; that it approaches it with such a modest Coyness, and goes blushing to it like a bashful Virgin to an Adulterer's Bed; that it passes into it with such Regret and Reluctancy, and looks back upon it with such Shame and Confusion; which in our tender Years, when as yet we are not arrived to the Exercise of our Understandings, cannot be supposed to proceed from Reason and Conscience, and therefore must be from the natural Sense of our Affections, which by these and such like Indications do signify that they are violated and offended. Now this natural Sense of Good and Evil which springs from the Frame and Nature of our Affections, was doubtless intended by God to be the first Guide of human Nature; that so, when as yet 'tis not capable of following Reason and Conscience, it might be directed to what is Good, and be preserved from wicked Habits and Prejudices by its own Sense and Feeling, till such Time as it is Capable of the Conduct of Reason: That so when this leading Faculty undertakes the Charge of it, it may find it pliant and obsequious to its Dictates; and be able to manage it with more Ease and Facility. And thus by the natural Drift and Tendency of our Affections, God hath plainly revealed to us what is good and what not.

IV. God hath also entailed upon our Actions natural Rewards and Punishments, and thereby plainly declared which are good and which evil. For it is easily demonstrable by an Induction of Particulars, that every Virtue hath some natural Efficacy in it to advance both our publick Good and our private Interest. That Temperance and Charity, Righteousness and Fidelity, Gratitude and Humility are not only convenient, but absolutely necessary to our Joy and Comfort, our Peace and Quietness, our Safety and Contentment; to the Health of our Body and the Satisfaction of our Mind, and the Security and Happiness of our Society with one another. Whereas on the contrary, Vice naturally teems with mischievous Effects, and is ever productive of Horror in the Conscience, Anguish in the Mind, Discord in the Affections, Diseases in the Body, and Confusions and Disturbances in human Society. Since therefore the divine Wisdom and Contrivance hath thus inseparably coupled good Effects to good Actions, and evil ones to evil, it hath hereby very plainly and sensibly declared to us, what it would have us do and what not. For seeing it hath so constituted Things, as that in the Course of Nature such Proportions of Happiness do necessarily result to us from such Actions, and such Proportions of Misery from their Contraries, what can be more evident than that its design was hereby to encourage us to the one, and affright us from the other? So that by these natural Rewards and Punishments, which in the Course of Things God hath chained to our Actions, he hath as expressly prescribed us what to do, and what not, as he could have done if he had spoken to us in an audible Voice from the Battlements of Heaven. For since the whole Train of natural Effects is to be resolved into the Providence of God, and since his Providence hath so ordered and contrived Things, as that in the ordinary Course of them good Effects do spring out of good Actions, and evil out of evil ones, what else could he intend by it but to allure us to the one, and terrify us from the other? For it is by Rewards and Punishments that all Lawgivers declare their Will and Pleasure concerning those Actions which they command and forbid? And therefore since God in his providential Government of the World, hath thought good to link natural Rewards to such Actions, and natural Punishments to such; these are to be look'd upon as the great Sanctions of the Law of Nature, whereby he commands what pleases, and prohibits what displeases him. For when God hath no otherwise revealed himself to the World than only by the establish'd Course and Nature of Things, that was the great Bible by which alone Mankind, was instructed in their Duty; and there being no revealed Threats or Promises annexed to good and bad Actions, God's Will and Pleasure concerning them was visible only in the good and bad Consequents which they drew after them; which are so plain and obvious to the Observation of Mankind, that 'twould be the most inexcusable Inadvertency not to take notice of them. So that the moral Good and Evil of all Actions finally resolves into the natural Good and Evil that is appendent to them; and therefore are our Actions morally Good, because they are naturally beneficial to us, and therefore morally Evil, because they are naturally prejudicial and hurtful; and those which in their own Nature are neither Good nor Evil, are indifferent in themselves, and left altogether undetermined by the Law of Nature, which commands and forbids nothing but under the Sanction of those natural Rewards and Punishments, which in the Course of Things are made necessary to human Actions.

V. To these natural Rewards and Punishments which God hath entailed upon good and bad Actions, he hath thought good many Times to superadd supernatural Blessings and Judgments. For tho he had before sufficiently expressed his Will concerning human Actions in the great Bible of Nature, and by their natural Effects had plainly enough distinguished the good from the bad; yet considering what heedless and inobservant Creatures we are, and how apt to overlook the ordinary Consequents of our Actions, he hath not altogether abandoned us to the easy Instructions of Nature, but out of his superabundant Care to shew us what is Good, and lead us to our Duty and Happiness, he hath from

Time

Time to Time seconded the natural Rewards and Punishments of our Actions with supernatural Favours and Judgments; that so by these he might awake our drowsy Attention, and revive in us the languishing Sense of our Duty. Of which we have infinite Instances in the several Ages of the World; there being scarce any History either Sacred or Profane that abounds not with them. Several of which, both Blessings and Judgments, do as plainly evince themselves to be intended by God for Rewards and Punishments, as if they had been attended with a Voice from Heaven, proclaiming the Reasons for which they were sent. For how many famous Instances have we of miraculous Deliverances of righteous Persons, who by an invisible Hand have been rescued from the greatest Dangers, when in all outward appearance their Condition was hopeless and desperate; and of wonderful Blessings that have happened to them, not only without but contrary to all secondary Causes; of some that have been so eminently rewarded in kind, as that the Goods which they received were most visible Significations of the Goods which they did; of others who have received the Blessings which they have asked, whilst they were praying for them, and obtained them with such distinguishing Circumstances, as plainly signified them to be the Answers and Returns of their devout Addresses to Heaven? And so on the contrary, how many notable Examples are there of such miraculous Judgments inflicted upon unrighteous Persons, as have either exceeded the Power of secondary Causes, or been caused by them contrary to their natural Tendencies? of Men that have been punished in the very Act of their Sin, and sometimes in the very Part by which they have offended; that have had the evil of their Sin retaliated upon them in a correspondent Evil of Suffering, and been struck with those very Judgments, which they have imprecated on themselves in the Justification of a known Falshood? All which supernatural Judgments and Blessings of God, are only his Comments on the Text of Nature, by which he further explains to us the Meaning of those natural Rewards and Punishments, which Virtue and Vice draw after them, and shews us what clear Indications they are of his Almighty Pleasure and Displeasure. For when he rewards Men supernaturally, it is for those Actions that carry a natural Reward with them; and when he punishes them supernaturally, it is for such Actions as do carry a natural Punishment with them: So that his supernatural Rewards and Punishments do speak the same Sense and Language with his natural, only they speak plainer and louder, to rowze and awake those stupid Souls, that are deaf to, and regardless of the soft and still Voice of natural Rewards and Punishments. Thus when the old World, by not attending to the natural Consequents of their own Actions, had almost extinguished their Sense of Good and Evil; God by a supernatural Deluge, in which he drowned the Wicked and preserved the Righteous, consigned to all future Generations a standing Monument of his Hatred of Sin, and Love of Righteousness: That so by the Remembrance of it, he might keep Mens heedless Minds more attentive to the natural Rewards and Punishments of their Actions. And when the Remembrance of this was almost worn out, and with it Mens natural Sense of Good and Evil; God by raining down Fire and Brimstone upon Sodom and Gomorrab, and rescuing the righteous Lot from that dire Conflagration, alarm'd the World with a new Declaration of the wide Distinction he makes between Virtue and Vice. And lastly, when the Virtue of these great Examples was almost spent, God raised up the People of Israel, and by the miraculous Blessings he bestowed on them when they did well, and the stupendous Judgments he inflicted when they did wickedly, exposed them to all the Nations round about for a standing Demonstration of the vast Difference he makes between Good and Evil. For so the Psalmist tells us, Psalms 98. ver. 2. compared with Psalms 102. ver. 15. The Lord hath made known his Salvation, his Righteousness hath he openly shewed in the sight of the Heathen; that the Heathen might fear the Name of the Lord, and all the Kings of the Earth his Glory. Thus by frequent Examples of supernatural Rewards and Punishments, God hath been always instructing the degenerate World in the essential Differences between Good and Evil.

VI. And lastly, To enforce all this God hath made sundry supernatural Revelations, wherein he hath plainly instructed us what Actions are Good, and what Evil. That he hath made sundry Revelations to the World is evident in the Fact, because there are sundry Revelations extant, which by those many miraculous Effects of the Divine Power that attended the Ministration of them, have been sufficiently demonstrated to be of a Divine Original. And such are those contained in the five Books of Moses, and the Prophets, which have been allmost amply confirmed, both by the Miracles which were wrought by their inspired Authors, and the exact Accomplishment of the several Predictions contained in them. And such is also the last and best Revelation contained in the New Testament; which both by the Types and Predictions of the Law and Prophets, and the infinite Miracles wrought by Jesus and his Followers, together with its own Inherent Wisdom and Goodness, hath been so effectually proved a Divine Revelation, that nothing but Ignorance or inveterate Prejudice can cause any Man to disbelieve or suspect it.

Now if you consult these several Revelations, you will find, that the main Drift and Design of them is to detect and expose what is morally Evil, and explain and recommend to us what is morally Good. For thus the several Revelations made to Abraham and his Children, were only so many Repetitions of that Covenant of Righteousness which God had struck with them, to encourage them to persevere in well-doing. Thus the Law of Moses consisted partly of Ceremonial Rites, which were either intended for Divine Hieroglyphicks to instruct that dull and stupid People in the Principles of inward Purity and Goodness, or else for Types and Figures of the holy Mysteries of the Gospel; and partly of Precepts of Morality, together with some few of Policy, suited to the Genius of that People; and partly of such Promises and Threats as were judged most apt to oblige them to the Practice of Piety. And as for the Prophets, the Substance of their Revelations was either Reprehenensions of Sin, together with severe Denunciations against it; or Invitations to Virtue and Piety, together with gracious Promises to encourage them to practise it; or Predictions of the Messias, and of that everlasting Righteousness which was to be introduced by him. And then as for the Gospel, all the Duty of it consists either in Instances, or Means and Instruments of Moral Goodness; and all the Doctrines of it are nothing but powerful Arguments to oblige us to the Practice of those Duties. Thus the great Intendment of all God's Revelations is to explain and enforce the Duties of Morality; to discover the Nature, and lead us on to the Practice of them by the most powerful Obligations. And in this most perfect Map of the Road to Happiness, all the Traacts of Piety and Virtue are so plainly described and delineated to us, that no Man can possibly miss his Way, that sincerely enquires after it. For tho in Matters of Opinion Men may be innocently misled and deceived, yet there is no Article either of Doctrine or Duty, upon which our Happiness necessarily depends, wherein it is possible for an honest and diligent Mind to be mistaken. And thus you see by how many excellent Ways God hath discovered to us which of our Actions are Good, and which Evil: So that if, after all this, we proceed in any sinful and immoral Courses, we are utterly inexcusable. For if after God hath thus plainly made known his Will to us, we still persist to contradict it in our Practice, we do thereby in effect declare, that we regard not the Almighty, and that we will do what we list, let him will what he pleases. And what an unpardonable Insolence is it for us, who depend upon his Breath, and hang upon his Providence every moment, to treat him as if he had nothing to do with us, and were the meekest Cypher and most insignificant Being in the World? For tho 'tis true he hath not made so full a Discovery of his Will to some as to others, yet he hath so sufficiently discovered it to all, that none can pretend to the Excuse either of invincible or unaffected Ignorance. For as for the Heathen, tho they have no Revelation of God's Will without them, yet they they have the Bible of Conscience within them, and the large and legible Bible of Nature that lies continually open before them, in which they may easily read the Principal Differences between Good and Evil, and all the great Principles of Morality. And if notwithstanding this they will be so regardless of God as not to attend to and comply with those natural Discoveries of his Will, what Pretence can be made for them, why they should not perish for ever in their Obstinacy? For as the Apostle tells us, tho they had not the Law, that is, the revealed Law, yet they did, or at least might have done, by nature the Things contained in the Law; and therefore as many of them, saith he, as sinned without this revealed Law, shall perish without the Law, that is, by the Sentence of the Law of Nature, Rom. 2. 12, 14. And then as for the Jews, besides those natural Indications of God's Will which they had in common with the Heathen, they had sundry supernatural Ones; they had sundry great and notorious Examples of God's rewarding good Men, and punishing bad; and besides, they had the Law of Moses, the Moral part of which was but a new Edition of the Law of Nature; as for the Ceremonial Part of it, it was thought an obscure, yet an intelligible Representation of all those sublime Motives to Piety and Virtue, which the Gospel more plainly proposes. So that would the Jews but have heedfully attended either to the spiritual Sense of their Law, or to the Sermons of their Prophets which very much cleared and explained it, they could not have been ignorant either of any material Part of their Duty, or of any considerable Motive by which it is pressed and enforced. And if notwithstanding they would be so regardless of God, as to take no notice of his Judgments and Mercies; so rude to his Authority, as not to mind either his Law within, or his Law without them, upon what reasonable Pretence can they excuse themselves? But then as for us Christians, we have not only all those natural Discoveries of our Duty which the Heathen had, and all those supernatural ones which the Jews had, but a great deal more. For in our Revelation the Laws and Motives of Virtue are set before us in a much clearer Light, and are neither wrapt up in Mystical Senses, nor overcast with Typical Representations, but laid before us in the most plain and easy Propositions. For that which was the Mystical Sense of the Jewish Law, is the Literal Sense of the Christian; in which all those Precepts, and Promises, and Threats, which were delivered to the Jews in dark Riddles, Obscure and Typical Adumbrations, are brought forth to us from behind the Curtain, and proposed in plain and popular Articles. So that if we still continue in our sinful Courses, we are of all Men the most inexcusable. The Heathen may plead against the Jews, that their Law of Nature was not so clear in its Precepts, nor yet so cogent in its Motives, as the Law of Moses: the Jews may plead against us Christians, that their Law of Moses was neither so express in the Precepts, nor yet so intelligible in its best and most powerful Motives, as our Gospel; but as for us Christians, we have nothing to plead, but by our own Obstinacy against the clearest Discoveries of our Duty, do stand condemned to everlasting Silence. So that when it shall appear, at the dread Tribunal of God, that we have persisted in our Wickedness notwithstanding all these Advantages, we must expect to be reproached by all the Reasonable World, to be exploded and hissed at, not only by Saints and Angels, but by the Jews and Gentiles, and the Devils themselves, who will all conspire with our own Consciences, to second our woful Doom with the loud Acclamation of Just and Righteous art thou, O Lord, in all thy Ways. Wherefore as we would not perish for ever without Pity and Excuse, let us make haste to forsake all Ungodliness and Worldly Lusts, and to live soberly, and righteously, and godly in this present World.

S E C T. III.

That those Actions, which carry with them this perpetual Obligation, are the Main and Principal Parts of Religion.

THE Truth of which is most evident from the above-named Text, Mic. 6. 8. And what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? Which Interrogation tho' it implies not an absolute Negation, viz. that the Lord required nothing else of them, (for under the Law he required Sacrifices, and sundry other positive Duties, as under the Gospel he requires Sacraments, and Reading and Hearing his holy Word, &c. which are positive Duties, as well as those Legal Institutions of Moses;) yet it plainly implies a comparative Negation, viz. that the Lord requires nothing else so Principally and Affectionately, so for the sake of Things themselves, and upon the account of their own Inherent Beauty and Goodness, as he doth these Moral Duties here specified. He did indeed require the Jews to offer Sacrifice to him, and to perform those other Ceremonial Rites specified in the Law of Moses; and for them wilfully to have neglected those Duties, would have been such an avowed Defiance to his Authority, as would have tender'd them justly obnoxious to all the Judgments threatened in their Law; but yet he did much more earnestly require them to be Just and Merciful and Humble, and manifested himself to be far better pleased with one Act of Moral Goodness, than with a Thousand Sacrifices. And thus he requires of us Christians, that we should communicate with him, and with one another in our Evangelical Sacraments, and dutifully conform to all those Sacred Institutions and Solemnities of Religion which are contained in the Gospel; and if we wilfully neglect them, we justly incur all that everlasting Vengeance which is there denounced; but yet our sincere Compliance with the immutable Obligations of Piety and Virtue, is a Thousandfold more acceptable to God, than our strictest Observation of these his Positive Institutions. So that the Question in the Text, What doth the Lord require of thee? plainly implies this Proposition, That tho' God doth exact of us certain Duties which are not Moral, i. e. have no Intrinsic Necessity in them, yet it is the Moral Duties, such as Justice and Mercy and Humility, which he Principally requires at our Hand. Thus concerning Sacrifice, God plainly tells us, I will have Mercy and not Sacrifice, i. e. I will have Mercy rather than Sacrifice, Hos. 6. 6. And the Wise Man assures us, that to do justice, is more acceptable to the Lord than Sacrifice, Prov. 21. 3. And to the same purpose our Saviour himself pronounceth, even before that Ceremonial Worship was abolished, That to love the Lord with all our Heart, with all our Understanding, with all our Soul, and with all our Strength, and to love our Neighbour as our selves, is more than all Burnt-offerings and Sacrifices, Mark 12. 33. But for the clearer Demonstration of this great and necessary Truth, I shall endeavour, First, To prove the Truth of it by some Scripture Arguments. Secondly, to assign the Reasons of it. As for the Proof of it, the following Particulars will be abundantly sufficient.

First, That the Scripture plainly declares, that the great Design of all the Doctrinals of Religion hath always been, to move and persuade Men to the Practice of Moral Goodness.

Secondly, That the main Drift and Scope of all the Positive Duties of Religion, hath been always to Improve and Perfect Men in Moral Goodness.

Thirdly, That God expresses in Scripture a great Contempt of all the Positive Duties of Religion, whenever they are separated from Moral Goodness.

Fourthly, That where-ever we find the Whole of Religion summ'd up in a few Particulars, they are always such as are Instances of Moral Goodness.

Fifthly, That where-ever such Persons as have been most dear and acceptable to God are described in Scripture, their Character always consists of some Instances or other of Moral Goodness.

Sixthly, That the Scripture plainly declares, that at the great Account between God and our Souls, the main Inquisition will be concerning our Moral Good or Evil.

I. The Scripture expressly declares, that the great Design of the Doctrines of Religion, is to move and persuade Men to Moral Goodness. For so the Apostle speaking of the Grace of God, i. e. the Gospel, assures us that its great Design is, to teach Men to deny all Ungodliness and worldly Lusts, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present World, Titus 2. 12. And if we consider the Doctrines in Particular, we shall find that they all conspire in this great Design. For so the Doctrine of eternal Life is proposed by God, to persuade us to cleansè our selves from all filthiness of Flesh and Spirit, and to perfect Holiness in the Fear of God, 2 Cor. 7. 1. So also the Doctrine of our future Punishment is levell'd against all Unrighteousness and Ungodliness of Men, Rom. 1. 18. And as for those Doctrines which concern the Transactions of our Saviour, they are all proposed to us as Arguments to persuade us to Piety and Virtue. For 'twas for this Cause that Christ was manifested, to destroy the Works of the Devil, 1 John 3. 8. 'Twas for this purpose that he bore our Sins in his own Body on the Tree, that we being dead to Sin should live to Righteousness, 1 Pet. 2. 24. 'Twas for this End that he rose from the Dead, that thereby he might prevail with us to walk in newness of Life, Rom. 6. 4. and 'tis for this end that he intercedes for us at the Right-hand of God, that thereby he might encourage us to come to God by him, Heb. 7. 2. and in a Word, for this Cause he hath told us, he will come to Judgment, to reward every Man according to his Works, that thereby he might stir us up to Sobriety, and Vigilance, and to all holy Conversation and Godliness, Mat. 24. 42. compared with 2 Pet. 3. ver. 11. Thus you see, all the Doctrines of Religion are only so many Topicks of Divine Persuasion, whereby God addresses himself to our Hope and Fear, and every other Affection in us that is capable of Persuasion, to excite us to comply with the eternal Obligations of Morality; and there is no one Article in all our Religion, that is matter of mere Speculation, or that entertains our Minds with dry and empty Notions that have no Influence on our Wills and Affections. For since the Design of Religion in general, is to bind and fasten our Souls to God, we may be sure that there is no Part of it but what doth in some measure contribute hereunto. Since therefore 'tis Moral Goodness that God chiefly recommends to us by the Persuasions of Religion, we may be sure that what his Arguments do chiefly persuade us to, that his Commands do chiefly oblige us to.

II. From Scripture it is also evident, that the main Drift and Scope of all the positive Duties of Religion, is to improve and perfect Men in moral Goodness. We find the Jewish Religion exceedingly abounded with positive Precepts; for such were all those sacred Rites and Solemnities of which the Bark and Outside of that Religion consisted; of all which 'tis true what the Psalmist saith of Sacrifices in particular, thou desirest not Sacrifices, thou delightest not in Burnt offerings, Psalm 51. 16. that is, thou takest no delight in them, upon the Score of any internal Goodness that is in them, but desirest them merely as they are instituted Means and Instruments of moral Goodness. For so many of the Rites of the Mosaic Law were instituted in Opposition to the Magical, Unclean and Idolatrous Rites of the Eastern Heathen. As particularly, that Prohibition of sowing their Fields with mingled Seed, Lev. 19. 19. in opposition to that magical Rite which the Heathens used as a Charm for Fructification. So also that Command of sprinkling sprinkling the Blood of their Sacrifices upon the Ground like Water, and covering it with Dust, in opposition to that idolatrous Rite of gathering the Blood into a Trench or Vessel, and then sitting round it in a Circle, whilst they imagined their Gods to be licking it up. And to name no more of this Kind, the Prohibition of seething a Kid in his Mother's Milk, Exod. 23. 19. was in Opposition to a Custom of the antient Heathens, who at the Ingathering of their Fruits were wont to take a Kid and seeth it in the Milk of its Dam, and then in a magical Procession to sprinkle all their Trees and Fields and Gardens with it, thereby to render them more fruitful the following Year. Besides all which, you may find a World of other Instances in Maimonides, More Nevach. l. 3. who tells us, that the Knowledge of the Opinions and Customs of these Eastern Heathens was, porta magna ad reddendas præceptorum causas, the great Rationale of the Mosaic Precepts; and that multarum legum rationes & causæ mihi innotuerint ex cognitione fidei rituum & cultus Zabiorum, i. e. that by being acquainted with the Opinions and Customs of those Eastern Heathens, he understood the Grounds and Reasons of many of the Laws of Moses, More Nevach. lib. 3. cap. 29. So that tho these Precepts were not Moral, yet were they set up as so many Fences by God to keep his People from straggling into those heathenish Immoralities.

Again, There are other Rites of their Religion, which were instituted to shadow out the holy Mysteries of the Gospel; the great Design of which Mysteries, was to invite and persuade Men to comply with the eternal Laws of Morality. Thus their Laws of Sackifice were instituted to represent to them the great Transactions of their future Messias; his Incarnation and immaculate Life, his Death and Resurrection, Ascension and Intercession at the Right-hand of God. So also their festival Laws, and particularly their Laws of Jubilee, were made to shadow out the Doctrines of our Redemption and eternal Life; and their pouring out Water in their Sacrifices, and their ritual Purgations from Uncleanneſs, were intended for obscure Intimations of the Effusion of the Holy Spirit, and the Doctrine of Remission of Sins; all which Doctrines carry with them the most pregnant Invitations to Piety and Virtue.

Lastly, There are other Rites of that Law, which were appointed to instruct them in moral Duties. For God finding them not only a perverse, but a dull and stupid People, as those generally are that have been born and bred in Slavery, apprehended that the most effectual way to instruct them, would be by Signs and material Representations, even as Parents do their Children by Pictures. And accordingly in Iſa. 28. 10. he tells us, that he gave them line upon line, and precept upon precept, here a little and there a little, with a stammering Tongue; i. e. he looked upon them as Children, and so condescended to their Weakneſs, and spake to them in their own Dialect. And this way of instructing them by outward and visible Signs, being much in use in the Eastern Countries, and more especially in Egypt, whose manners they were infinitely fond of, was of all others the most probable and taking. And accordingly a great Part of the Jewish Rites consisted of Hieroglyphicks, or visible Signs, by which their minds were instructed in the Precepts of Morality. Thus by Circumcision, God signified to them the Necessity of mortifying their unchaste Desires; by their Legal Washings, he intimated to them their Obligation to cleanse themselves from all Impurities of Flesh and Spirit; yea this, as St. Barnabas in his Epistle tells us, was the Intent of all that Difference of Meats in the Jewish Law, which pronounced Swine's Flesh unclean, to instruct them not to live like Hogs, that wallow in the Mire while they are full, and whine and clamour when they are empty; which forbid them to feed on Eagles and other Birds of Prey, to instruct them to live by honest Industry, and not by Rapine; which prohibits Fish without Scales, that generally live in the Mud, to teach the Evil of Sensuality and Earthly-mindedneſs, &c. From all which it is evident, that Moral Goodneſs was the constant Mark, at which all the positive Precepts of their Law were levelled.

And then as for the Christian Religion, all the positive Precepts it contains are directed to the same end. It requires us to believe in Jesus Christ, and in his Mediation diation to draw near unto God; the Design of which Faith, it expressly tells us, is to sanctify our Natures, Acts 26. 18. and to purify our Hearts, Acts 15. 9. It enjoins us to be baptized into the Name of Jesus; and, for what Purpose? but to oblige us thereby to die to sin, and to walk in newness of life, Rom. 6. 4. It requires us to commemorate our Saviour's Passion in a sacramental Communion of his Body and Blood; and to what End? but only to excite us to Love and Thankfulness to God, and Charity towards one another, 1 Cor. 5. 7, 8. In a Word, it requires us to live in Unity with the Church, and not to separate ourselves from her sacred Assemblies; and for what other Reason? but that we might become an holy Temple, and an Habitation of God, by being *compact*ed together into an uniform and regular Society, Ephes. 2. 21, 22. Since therefore, all the Precepts both of the Old and New Testament, which are purely positive, do bear a Respect to moral Goodness, and were imposed by God in subserviency thereunto, it is evident that That is the principal Mark which he designs and aims at.

III. Another Evidence from Scripture, That moral Goodness is the principal Matter of our Duty, is the great Contempt which God expresses of the positive Duties of Religion, whenever they are separated from moral Goodness. For thus, concerning the Positives of the Jewish Religion, we are told, That the Sacrifice of the Wicked is an Abomination to the Lord, Prov. 15. 8. and, concerning the Whole of their positive Religion, the Prophet thus pronounces, in the Name of God, To what purpose is the Multitude of your Sacrifices to me, saith the Lord? I am full of the Burnt-Offerings of Rams, and of the Fat of fed Beasts, i. e. so full as that I loath them; and I delight not in the Blood of Bulls, or of Lambs, or of He-Goats. When ye come to appear before me, who hath required these Things at your Hands, to tread my Courts? bring no more vain Oblations; Incense is an abomination to me; the new Moons and Sabbaths, the Calling of Assemblies I cannot away with; it is Iniquity, even the solemn Meetings. Your new Moons, and your appointed Feasts my Soul hateth, they are a Trouble to me, I am weary to bear them: And when you spread forth your Hands, I will hide mine Eyes; yea, when ye make many Prayers, I will not hear. And what, I beseech you, is the Reason that God should thus dislike his own Institutions? Why, he plainly tells you, your Hands are full of Blood, your Cruelty and Oppression doth profane your Worship, and turn it all into Impiety, Isa. 1. 11. to the 16th; for so, isa. 66. 3. he plainly tells them, He that killeth an Ox, is as if he slew a Man; he that sacrificeth a Lamb, as if he cut off a Dog's Neck; he that offereth an Oblation, as if he offered Swine's Blood; he that burneth Incense, as if he blessed an Idol; and, why so? why, they have chosen their own Ways, i. e. of Impiety and Wickedness, and their Soul delighteth in their Abominations. Nor doth God express a less Contempt of the Positives of Christianity, when separated from moral Goodness: For thus St. James tells us, even of our Faith or Belief in Jesus, that without Works it is dead; that it is a senseless, squalid Thing, that hath neither Life nor Beauty in it, James 2. 17. and St. Peter compares Baptism to the Washing of a Swine, when it is separated from Purity of Life and Manners, 2 Pet. 2. 22. and our receiving the Lord's Supper, without Charity and Devotion, is by St. Paul stiled, coming together to condemnation, 1 Cor. 11. 34. all which is a plain Demonstration, that moral Goodness is the principal Matter that God insists on; since 'twas this that sanctified the Sacrifices of the Jews, and crowned all their ceremonial Observances with the divine Acceptation, and without this, all their other Services were noisome and offensive to him; and it is this that perfumes our Faith and our Sacraments, our Prayers and religious Assemblies, and renders them a grateful and sweet-smelling Savour in the Nostrils of God, and without this, they are all a hateful Stench and Annoyance to him. Doubtless, therefore, the principal Matter of Duty which God requires of us, is that which he esteems the Grace and Fragrancy of all our other Duties.

IV. Another Evidence from Scripture, That moral Goodness is the principal Matter that God requires of us, is, that where-ever we find the Whole of Religion summ'd up in a few Particulars, they are always such as are Parts and Instances.

Instances of moral Goodness. Thus, in the above-cited Mic. 6. What doth the Lord require of thee? but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God. Thus also the Prophet Isaiab, giving an Account to his People, what they were to do, in order to their reconciliation with God, thus directs them, Wash ye, make ye clean, put away the Evil of your Doings from before mine Eyes, cease to do Evil, learn to do Well, seek Judgment, relieve the Oppressed, judge the Fatherless, plead for the Widow; come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord, Isa. 1. 16, 17, 18. So also our blessed Saviour sums up the Whole Duty of Man into two Particulars: And what are they? Why, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy Heart, with all thy Soul, and with all thy Mind; this is the first and great Commandment. And the Second is like to it, Thou shalt love thy Neighbour as thy Self; on these two Commandments hang the Law and the Prophets, Mat. 22. 37, 38, 39, 40. Thus, St James, True Religion, and undefiled before God and the Father, is this, to visit the Fatherless and Widows in their Affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the World, Jam. 1. 27. And elsewhere the Apostle sums up the whole Law into one leading Head of Morality, and that is Love; for Love, saith he, is the fulfilling of the Law, Rom. 13. 10. So this Observation generally holds true, that in all those Summaries of Duty mentioned in the Holy Scripture, only such Duties are taken notice of, as are Parts and Instances of Morality; which is a plain Demonstration, that 'tis this which God principally requires, since 'tis this which he most takes notice of; and it may be reasonably suppos'd that in those Summaries of our Duty, wherein but a few Parts are enumerated, they are such as are the Chief and Principal; it being contrary to all Rules of Language, to express the Whole of any Thing, by the meanest and most inconsiderable Parts of it.

V. Another Evidence from Scripture, that moral Goodness is the principal Matter of Duty that God requires of us, is, that wheresoever such Persons as have been most dear and acceptable to God are described, their Character is always made up of Instances of Morality. Thus the Description of Job is, that he was a Man perfect and upright, and one that feared God, and eschewed Evil, Job 1. 1. And in the 15th Psalms, the Description which David gives of the Man who should abide in the Tabernacle of the Lord, is this, that he walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart; that he backbiteth not with his Tongue, nor doth evil to his Neighbour, nor taketh up a reproach against his Neighbour, &c. He that doth these things, saith he, shall never be moved: And the greatest Character that is given of Moses, the Darling and Favourite of God, is, that he was very meek above all the men that were upon the face of the Earth, Numb. 12. 3. Thus also the Character of Cornelius, by which he was so endeared to God, is, that he was a just and devout man, one that feared God with all his house, who gave much Alms to the People, and prayed to God always, Acts 10. 2. And, in a Word, the general Character of those whom God accepts, is, in every Nation, he who doth righteousness is accepted of God, Acts 10. 35. Thus moral Goodness is the great Stamp and Impression that renders Men current in the Esteem of God; whereas, on the contrary, the common Brand by which Hypocrites and false Pretenders to Religion are stigmatiz'd, is, their being zealous for the Positives, and cold and indifferent as to the Morals of Religion. For so our Saviour characterizes the Pharisees, Wo unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, Hypocrites; for ye pay tithes of Mint, Anise, and Cummin, which yet was a positive Duty, and have omitted the weightier matters of the Law, Judgment, Mercy, and Faithfulness; these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. Ye blind Guides, ye strain at a Gnat, and swallow a Camel, Mat. 23. 23, 24, plainly implying the Morals of Religion to exceed the Positives in Weight and Moment, as much as a Camel does a Gnat in Bulk. Since, therefore, moral Goodness is always mentioned as the great Character of God's Favourites, and the Neglect of it, out of a pretended Zeal to the positive Duties of Religion, is always recorded as a Mark of the most odious Hypocrites; this is a sufficient Argument, how high a Value God sets upon the Moralities of Religion.

VI. And lastly, Another Evidence from Scripture, that moral Goodness is the principal Part of Religion, is, That at the great Account between God and us, his main Inquisition will be concerning such Actions as are morally good or evil. For so Rom. 2. 6. We are told, that God will render to every Man according to his deeds; to them who by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for honour and glory, and immortality, eternal Life. But to them who are contentious, and do not obey the Truth, but obey unrighteousness, tribulation and wrath, indignation and anguish. And accordingly Enoch, as he is quoted by St. Jude, ver. 14, 15. declares this to be the occasion of the Lord's coming with Thousands of his Saints, viz. to execute Judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them, of all their ungodly Deeds; which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard Speeches which ungodly Sinners have spoken against him; all which are Matters of Fact against the eternal Rules of Morality. And our Saviour himself, in that popular Scheme and Description he gives of the Proceedings of the Day of Judgment, plainly declares, that one of the principal Matters he will then inquire into, will be our Neglect or Observance of that great moral Duty of Charity towards the Poor and Needy, Mat. 25. 32--46. Which is a plain Evidence, that our obeying or disobeying the eternal Laws of Morality, is that by which we do most please or displease God; since 'tis upon this, that he will most insist in his final Arbitration of our eternal Fate. For since his last Judgment is only the final Execution of his Laws, we may be sure, that whatsoever it is that he will principally insist on in his Judgment, that is the principal Matter of his Laws. And now having sufficiently proved the Truth of the Proposition, I proceed to the Reasons of it; upon what Accounts it is, that God hath made moral Goodness the main and principal Part of our Religion. The chief Reasons of which, are these four.

First, Because 'tis by moral Goodness that we do most honour him.

Secondly, Because 'tis by this that we do most imitate him.

Thirdly, Because 'tis by this that we advance to our own Happiness.

Fourthly, When all our positive Duty is ceas'd, this is to be the eternal Work and Business of our Nature.

I. God hath made moral Goodness the principal Part of our Religion, because 'tis by this that we do him the greatest Honour. It is an excellent saying of Hierocles, πρωτὸ ποιεῖται τὸ ἀνενδεῦς τὴν ὥς ὑπ' ἐκείνου περιηγουμένων ἀγαθῶν ὑποδοχὴν· ἢ γὰρ πμήσης ἢ διὸν διδύς π αὐτῷ, ἀλλ' ἄξιον τὸ λαβεῖν τὰ παρ' ἐκείνου γινόμενα, i. e. The best Honour we can do to a self-sufficient Being, is to receive the good Things he holds forth unto us; and therefore 'tis not by giving to God that you honour him, but by rendering your selves worthy to receive of him; for saith he, ὅςτις τιμᾷ τὸ Θεὸν ὡς περιδεόμενον, ἔτιον λήθηεν οἰόμενος ἑαυτὸν τὸ Θεῷ εἶναι κρείττονα, i. e. Whosoever gives honour to God as to one that wants, doth not consider that he thereby sets himself above God. For by his own Self-sufficiency, he is infinitely removed above all Capacity of Want, and so can never need any additional Contributions of Glory and Happiness from his Creatures. For Glory being nothing else but the Resplendency of Perfection, which always reflects its own Beams upon it self, where-ever there is infinite Perfection (as to be sure there is in the Nature of God) there must an infinite Glory proceed from it; and therefore being infinitely glorious in himself, it is impossible that any Thing we do should add any farther Glory to him. So that if we would truly honour and glorify him, it must not be by giving to, but by receiving from him. Now the best Thing we can receive from God, is Himself; and Himself we do receive in our strict compliance with the eternal Laws of Goodness. Which Laws being transcribed from the Nature of God, from his own eternal Righteousness and Goodness, we do by obeying them, derive God's Nature into ours. So that while we write after the Copy of his Laws, we write out the Perfections of his Being; and his Laws being the Seal upon which he hath engraven his Nature, we do, in obeying them, take Impression from him, and stamp his blessed Nature on our own. For all those virtuous Dispositions of Mind which we acquire by the Practice of Virtue, are so many genuine Signatures of God, taken from the Seal of his Law, and Participations of his Nature. For so Holiness, which consists sists in a Conformity of Soul with the eternal Laws of Goodness, is in Scripture called the Signature or Impression of the Spirit of God, whereby we are sealed unto the Day of Redemption, Ephes. 4. 30. and such as do Righteousness, are said to be born of God, 1 John 2. 29. which implies, their deriving from him who is their Divine Parent, a Divine and God-like Nature, even as Children do their Human Nature from their human Parents. So that by the Practice of moral Goodness, we receive from God the best Thing he can bestow, viz. a Divine and God-like Nature; and consequently by so doing, we render him the highest Honour and Glory. For since we can no otherwise honour him but by receiving from him, we doubtless do him the greatest honour when we receive Himself, by partaking of the Perfections of his Nature, which are the greatest Gift he can communicate to us. Herein, saith our Saviour, is my Father glorified that ye bear much Fruit, John 15. 8. Μένος γὰρ οἷός ἐστις ἡμῶν ὁ ἀπογονεύων ἐκείνον αὐτὸν ποιεῖν, saith the aforementioned Philosopher, i. e. he only knows how to honour God, who presents himself a Sacrifice to him, carves his own Soul into a Divine Image, and composes his Mind into a Temple for the Entertainment of God, and the Reception of the divine Light and Glory. 'Tis then therefore that we best honour God, when by the Practice of true Godliness we conform our Wills and Affections to him; and derive into ourselves his Nature and Perfections; and should you erect to him a Temple more magnificent than Solomon's, and load its Altars with Hecatombs of Sacrifices, and make it perpetually ring with Psalms and resounding Choirs of Hallelujahs, it would not be comparably so great an Honour to him, as to convert your own Souls into living Temples, and make them the Habitations of his Glory and Perfections. For he values no Sacrifices like that of an obedient Will, delights in no Choir like that of pure and heavenly Affections, nor hath he in all his Creation an Ensign of Honour so truly worthy of him, as that of a Divine and God-like Soul; a Soul that reflects his Image, and shines back his own Glory upon him. Wherefore, since 'tis by the Practice of moral Goodness, that we receive God, and copy his Nature into our own, it is no wonder he should make it the principal Part of our Duty. For how can it be otherwise expected, but that he should exact that chiefly of us, which most conduces to his own Glory. Since then, nothing we can do can conduce to his Glory, but only our receiving Benefits from him, and since no Benefit we receive from him, can so much conduce to it as our receiving Himself, and since we can no otherwise receive himself, but by practising that Goodness which is the Perfection of his Nature, we must hereby doubtless render him the greatest Honour and Glory.

II. God hath made moral Goodness the principal Part of our Duty, because 'tis by this that we do most truly imitate him. For so you find in Scripture, that where-ever God is proposed to us for a Pattern of Action, it is by some Act or other of Morality, that we are required to transcribe and imitate him. So 1 Pet. 1. 16. Be ye holy, for I am holy; and Luke 6. 36. Be ye merciful as your Father in Heaven is merciful; and Mat. 5. 48. Be you perfect as your Father in Heaven is perfect. And indeed, tis only in moral Goodness that God can be the Pattern of our Imitation; as for those Perfections of his, which for Distinction sake we call Natural, viz. his Omniscience and Omnipresence, Omnipotence and Eternity, they are all beyond the Sphere of our Imitation, and therefore were never proposed to us as the Copies of our Actions. But as for his moral Perfections, viz. his Goodness, and Righteousness, and Purity, and Mercy, they are the Fundamental Rules and Standards of all Moral Action. For the Nature of God, as it is infinitely good and righteous, is the eternal Fountain whence all the Laws of Morality are derived; and all those moral Precepts by which he governs his rational Creation, are only so many Exemplifications of the moral Perfections of his own Nature. For the Holiness of God, which comprehends all his moral Perfections, consists in that essential Rectitude of Nature, whereby he always chooses and acts conformably to the Dictates of his own infallible Reason; and 'tis to this Rectitude of choosing and acting, that all his moral Laws do oblige us. For moral Laws are only the Dictates of right Reason, Reason, prescribing us what to do, and what to avoid; so that in our Compliance with them, we follow the Rule of God's own Will and Actions, and thereby imitate the eternal Rectitude of his Nature. For tho in those different States and Relations of God and Creature, right Reason cannot be supposed to oblige him and us to all the same particular Choices and Actions, yet it obliges us both to act reasonably in our respective States and Relations; it obliges God to act reasonably and as it becomes the State and Relation of a God and Creator: And it obliges us to act reasonably and as it becomes the State and Relation of Men and Creatures. And as for God, He is invariably inclined to do all that right Reason obliges him to, by the essential Rectitude of his own Nature; and herein consists all his moral Perfection, which is nothing else but the immutable Inclination of his Nature, to do whatever is just, and good, and reasonable. So that while we live according to the Dictates of Reason, or, which is the same Thing, the eternal Laws of Morality, we trace and imitate the moral Perfections of God; and in our Place and Station, live at the same Rate, and by the same Rule, that He doth in his. We do what God himself would do, if we were in our Place, and what the Son of God did do when he was in our Nature; and there is no other Difference between his Life and ours, but what necessarily arises out of our different States and Relations. Since therefore moral Goodness is an Imitation of God, 'tis no wonder that he so much prefers it before all other matter of Duty. For he must needs be supposed to love that above all Things, which is the true Copy and Image of those Perfections of his Nature, for the sake of which he loves Himself above all. For he loves himself not merely because he is Himself, but because he is in all respects morally Good, and his Will and Power are perfectly compliant with the infallible Dictates of his own Reason; and hence arises his infinite Complacency in himself; and there is nothing in him but what his own Reason perfectly approves, no Inclination in his Will or Nature but what is exactly agreeable to the fairest Ideas of his own Mind. And since it is for his own Goodness-sake that he loves himself as he doth, we may be sure that there is nothing without him can be so dear to him, as that in us which is the Image of his Goodness. Every like, we say, loves its like, and the righteous Lord, saith the Psalmist, loveth Righteousness, Psalm 11. 7. i. e. being righteous himself he loves Righteousness in others by an invincible Sympathy of Nature. His greatest Heaven and Delight is in his own most righteous Nature, and next to that, in righteous Souls that imitate and resemble him. Ψυχῆς καὶ δαεῖς τόπον οἰκεῖται ἐπὶ γῆς Θεὸς ἐκ ἑχέ. God hath not a more grateful Habitation upon Earth than in a pure and virtuous Mind; εὐστρέων δὲ βροτῶς γάνυμαι τόπον ὅσον ἑαυτοῦ, saith Apollo, that Mimic of God, by his Pythian Oracle, i. e. I rejoice as much in pious Souls as in my own Heaven. Which is much what the same with that gracious Declaration that God himself makes by the Prophet, Isaiah 57. 15. Thus saith the high and lofty One, that inhabiteth Eternity, whose name is Holy, I dwell in the high and holy Place; with him also that is of a contrite and humble Spirit, to revive the Spirit of the Humble, and to revive the Heart of the contrite ones. Since therefore moral Duties are all but so many Copies and Exemplifications of God's Nature, this is a sufficient Reason why he should prefer them before all the Positives of Religion.

III. God Principally requires Moral Goodness, because 'tis by the Practice of this that we advance to our own natural Happiness. For the natural Happiness of reasonable Creatures, consists in being intirely governed by right Reason, i. e. in having our Minds perfectly informed what it is that right Reason requires of us, and our Wills and Affections reduced to an entire Conformity thereunto. And this is the Perfection of Moral Goodness, which consists in behaving our selves towards God and our selves, and all the World as right Reason advises, or as it becomes rational Creatures placed in our Circumstances and Relations. And when, by practising all that true Piety and Virtue which Moral Goodness implies, we are perfectly accomplished in our Behaviour towards God, our selves, and all the World, so as to render to each, without any Reserve or Reluctancy, what is fit and due in the Judgment of right Reason, we are arriv'd to the most happy State that a reasonable Nature can aspire to. 'Tis true, in this Life we cannot be perfectly happy; and that not only because we live in wretched Bodies that are continually liable to Pain and Sickness, but also because we are imperfect our selves, and have none to converse with but imperfect Creatures. But were we once stript of these Natural and Moral Imperfections, wheresoever we lived we should necessarily be happy. Were I to live all alone, without this painful Body, I should necessarily be in a great measure happy while I followed right Reason, tho I lived in the darkest Nook of the Creation. For there I should still contemplate God, and while I did so, my Mind would be always Ravish'd with his Beauty and Perfections; there I should most ardently love him, and while I did so, I should Sympathize and Share with him in his Happiness; there I should still Adore and Praise him, and while I did so, I should feel my self continually drawn up to him, and wrapt into a real Enjoyment of him; there I should be imitating his Perfections, and while I did so, I should enjoy an unspeakable Self-satisfaction, perceiving how every moment I grew a more Divine and God-like Creature; there I should intirely resign up my self to his Heavenly Will and Disposal, and while I did so, I should be perpetually exulting under a joyous Assurance of his Love and Favour; in a Word, there I should firmly depend upon his Truth and Goodness, and while I did so, I should be always Triumphing in a sure and certain Hope of a happy Being for ever. Thus were I shut up all alone in an unbodied State, and had none but God to converse with, by behaving my self towards him as right Reason directs me, I should always enjoy him, and in that Enjoyment should be always Happy. And if, while I thus behaved my self towards God, I took care at the same time to demean my self towards my self with that exact Prudence and Temperance and Fortitude and Humility, which right Reason requires, I should hereby create another Heaven within me; a Heaven of calm Thoughts, quiet and uniform Desires, serene and placid Affections, which would be so many ever-flowing Springs of Pleasure, Tranquillity and Contentment within me. But if, while I thus enjoyed God and my self, by behaving my self as right Reason directs, I might be admitted to live and converse among perfect Spirits, and to demean my self towards them with that exact Charity and Justice and Peaceableness and Modesty, which right Reason requires, the Wit of Man could not conceive a true Pleasure beyond what I should now enjoy. For now I should be posselt of every Thing my utmost Wishes could propose; of a good God, a God-like, joyful and contented Soul, a peaceable, kind and righteous Neighbourhood; and so all above, within and without me, would be a pure and perfect Heaven. And indeed, when I have thrown off this Body, and am stripp'd into a naked Ghost, the only, or at least the greatest Goods my Nature will be capable of enjoying, are God, my self, and blessed Spirits; and these are no otherwise enjoyable, but only by Acts of Piety and Virtue, without which there is no good Thing beyond the Grave, that a Soul can taste or relish. So that if, when I go to seek my Fortune in the World of Spirits, God should thus bespeak me, "O Man, now thou art leaving all these Enjoyments of Sense, consult with thy self what will do thee Good, and thou shalt have whatsoever thou wilt ask, to carry with thee into that Spiritual State;" I am sure the utmost I should crave would be this, "Lord give me a Heart inflamed with Love, and winged with Duty to thee, that thereby I may but enjoy thee; give me a sober and a temperate Mind, that thereby I may but enjoy my self; give me a kind, a peaceable, and a righteous Temper, that thereby I may but enjoy the sweet Society of blessed Spirits; O give me but these blessed Things, and thou hast Crowned all my Wishes, and to Eternity I will never crave any other Favour for my self but only this, that I may continue a pious and virtuous Soul for ever; for while I continue so, I am sure I shall enjoy all Spiritual Good, and be as happy as Heaven can make me." So that the main Happiness you see of Human Nature consists in the Perfection of Moral Goodness; and it being so, it is no wonder that the good God, who above all Things desires the Happiness of his Creatures, should above all Things exact of us the Duties of Morality. He knows that our Supreme Beatitude is founded in our Piety and Virtue, and that out of our free, and constant, spritely and vivacious Exercise of these, arises all our Heaven both here and hereafter; and knowing this, that tender Love which he bears us, that mighty Concern which he hath for our Welfare, makes him thus urgent and importunate with us. For he regards our Duty no farther than it tends to our Good, and values each Act of our Obedience by what it contributes to our Happiness; and 'tis therefore that he prefers Moral Duties above positive, because they are more essential to our eternal Welfare.

I

that

IV. And lastly, God Principally requires of us Moral Goodness, because when all positive Duty is ceas'd, this is to be the eternal Work and Exercise of our Natures. For, Moral Good is from everlasting to everlasting, its Birth was elder than the World, and its Life and Duration runs parallel with Eternity; before ever the Mountains were brought forth, 'twas founded in the Nature of God, and as an inseparable Beam of his all-comprehending Reason, it shines from one end of the World to the other. For as soon as ever there was a rational Creature in Being, the Obligations of Morality laid hold on him, before ever any Positive Duty was imposed; and as long as ever there remains a rational Creature, the Obligations of Morality will abide on him, when all Positive Duty is expired. For Moral Obligations are not founded like Positive ones upon mutable Circumstances, but upon firm and everlasting Reasons; upon Reasons that to all Eternity will carry with them the same Force and Necessity. For as long as we are the Creatures of an infinitely perfect Creator, 'twill be as much our Duty as 'tis now, to love and adore him; as long as we are reasonable Creatures, 'twill be as much our Duty as 'tis now, to submit our Will and Affections to our Reason; and as long as we are related to other reasonable Creatures, 'twill be as much our Duty as 'tis now, to be Kind, and Just, and Peaceable, in all our Intercourses with them. So that these are such Duties as no Will can dispense with, no Reasons abrogate, no Circumstances disannul, or make void; but as long as God is what he is, and we are what we are, they must and will oblige us. So that what the Psalmist saith of God, may be truly applied to Moral Goodness, the Heavens shall perish, but thou shalt remain, they all shall wax old as doth a Garment, and be folded up and changed; but thou art the same Yesterday, to Day, and for Ever, and thy Years shall have no end. But as long since, the Positive Parts of the Jewish Religion were Cancell'd and Repealed, the Veil of the Temple rent in twain, the Temple it-self buried in Ruins, and all its Altars thrown down, and their Sacrifices abolished, whilst the Moral Parts of that Religion still stand firm as the everlasting Mountains about Jerusalem; so the Time will come when the Positive Parts of Christianity it-self must cease, when Faith must be swallowed up in Vision, and Sacraments be made void by Perfection, and all the stated Times and outward Solemnities of our Worship expire into an everlasting Sabbath; but then when all this Scene of Things is quite vanished away, Piety and Virtue will still keep the Stage, and be the everlasting Exercise of our glorified Natures. For as I shewed before, all Positive Duty is instituted in subserviency to Moral, and like a Scaffold to a House, is only erected for the Convenience of Building up this everlasting Structure of Morality; and when this is once finished, must be all taken down again as an unnecessary Incumbrance, that now only hides and obscures the Beauty of that Heavenly Building that was raised on it, and shall abide without it for ever, to entertain our Faculties thro' all the future Ages of our Being, and to be the everlasting Mansion of our Natures. Wherefore, since Positive Duties must all cease and expire, and only Moral Goodness is to be our Business for ever, 'tis no wonder that God, who is so good a Master, takes so much care in this short Apprenticeship of our Life, to train us up in that which is to be our Trade for ever. He knows it is upon Piety and Virtue that we must live to Eternity, and maintain our selves in all our Glory and Happiness; and that, if when we come into the invisible World we have not this blessed Trade to subsist by, we are undone for ever; and therefore, out of a tender regard to our Welfare, he makes it his Principal Care to train us up in this everlasting Business of our Natures.

What then remains, but that above all things we take care to apply our selves to the Practice of Moral Goodness; to contemplate, and love, and adore, and imitate God; to depend upon him, and resign up our selves to his Disposal and Government; to be sober and temperate in our Affections and Appetites, and just, and charitable, and modest, and peaceable towards one another. These are the Great Things which God requires at our Hands, and without these all our Religion is a fulsome Cheat. 'Tis true, the Positive Parts of Religion are our Duty as well as these, and God by his Sovereign Authority exacts them at our Hands; and unless when Jesus Christ hath been sufficiently proposed to us, we do sincerely believe in him; unless we strike Covenant with him by Baptism, and frequently renew that Covenant in the Lord's Supper; unless we diligently attend on the Publick Assemblies of his Worship, and use an honest Care to avoid Schism, and to persist in Unity with his true Catholick Church, there is no pretence of Morality will bear us out when we appear before his dread Tribunal. But then we are to consider, that the proper Use of all these Positive Duties is to improve and perfect us in Moral Goodness; and unless we use them to this Effect, we shall render them altogether void and insignificant. Wherefore, as we would not lose all the Fruits of our Positive Duties, let us take care to attend them to their utmost Design, to improve our Sacrifice to Obedience, our Sacraments to Gratitude and Love, our Hearing to Practice, our Praying to Devotion, and our Fasting to Humility and Repentance. For if we rest in these Duties and go no farther, thinking by such short Payments to compound with God for all those Debts we owe to the eternal Laws of Morality, we miserably cheat and besool our own Souls, which notwithstanding all this Exactness about the Positives of Religion, are by their own Immoral Affections still enslaved to the Devil; to whom it is much one what our outward Form of Religion is, whether it be Christian, or Heathen, or Mahometan, provided it doth not operate on our Minds, or give any Check to the Current of our depraved Natures. For whether we bow to God or to an Idol, is all one to the Devil, so long as our Souls remain Profane and Indevout; whether we communicate in the Holy Sacrament of Christ's Death, or in the impure Rites of Venus and Priapus, is indifferent to him, so long as our Hearts continue Putrid and Corrupt, steaming with unchaste Desires and Affections; whether we celebrate the Christian Festivals, or the bloody Saturnals, or barbarous Bacchanalia, is no great matter to him, provided our Minds be but canker'd with Wrath and Malice, and Cruelty and Revenge. These are the Sinews of his Government, and the Bands of our Allegiance to his Throne; and whilst they are preserved, he knows his Kingdom is safe, and so long he doth not much regard what our outward Religion is. Nay, there is nothing can be a higher Gratification to his Ambition, than to behold Himself served in Christ's own Livery, and worshipp'd in a Form of Godliness; by which he hath the Pleasure of dividing Empires with God, and ravishing the better share from him, of beholding his hated Creator mock'd with the Shell and Outside of a Worshipper, whilst himself is treated with the Kernel and Inside. For whilst we continue wicked under an outward Form of Religion, we do in effect sacrifice our Beast to God, and our selves to the Devil; who above all Things loves those unnatural Commixtures of Hearer and Slanderer, Worshipper and Deceiver, Communicant and Drunkard, Sacrificer and Oppresser; by which we only exalt and sublimate Impiety, which never looks so Glorious as when 'tis gilded with Fasts and long Prayers. Wherefore, as you will answer it at your eternal Peril, do not cheat and abuse your selves with the Name and Shadow of Religion; lest when you have superstructed your Hopes

Hopes of Happiness on a rotten Foundation, it should finally miscarry and sink underneath you into everlasting Wretchedness and Despair.

C H A P. II.

Concerning Religion ; what it is, and what Things are Necessary for the founding and securing its Obligations.

HAVING in the foregoing Chapter briefly discoursed concerning the Nature of moral Goodness, and shewn that it is the principal Part of Religion, it will be requisite in the next Place to explain what Religion is ; that so from thence we may collect what Things are necessary to the founding and securing its Obligations, which will be the Subject of the ensuing Chapters.

Religion in the general, respects God as the Object and Centre of all its Acts and Offices. For upon Supposition, that there is such a Being as God, and that there are such Beings as reasonable Creatures, or capable Subjects of Religion, it will necessarily follow, that there must be some Religion or other to tie and oblige these Creatures to that God. For by God, we mean a Being that hath all possible Perfection in him, and is the supreme Cause and Fountain of all other Being and Perfection ; and such a Being we must needs acknowledge doth not only deserve the worthiest Acts of Religion, that reasonable Creatures, who alone are capable of understanding his Worth, can render to him, but hath also an unalienable Right to exact and require them ; and that not only upon the Account of his own essential Desert (for whatever he deserves, he hath a Right to demand) but also upon Account of the Right he hath to reasonable Creatures, who owe their Beings to him and all their Capacities of serving him, and so cannot dispose of themselves without manifest Injury to him contrary to his Will and Orders. By reasonable Creatures, we mean Beings that are derived from God, and are endowed by him with a Capacity of understanding him and themselves ; and such Creatures must necessarily stand obliged to render him such Acts as are suitable to, and due Acknowledgments of, the Perfections of his Nature and their own Dependence upon him ; and this Obligation is that which we call Religion. Which word according to Lactantius, lib. 4. Divin. Institut. c. 28. is derived à religando, from binding or obliging us to God. So that true Religion in the general is the Obligation of reasonable Creatures, to render such Acts of Worship to God as are suitable to the Excellency of his Nature and their Dependence upon him. Which Definition includes both the Doctrines and Duties of Religion. For the Doctrines are the Reasons by which it obliges us to the Duties : And as there is no Duty in Religion but what derives its Tie and Obligation from some Doctrine contained in it ; so there is no Doctrine in Religion but what ties and obliges us to some Duty that is injoyned in it. When therefore I call Religion an Obligation, I include in that Term all those Doctrines of it concerning God, his Nature, and his Transactions with his Creatures, which are the Reasons by which we stand obliged to render all Acts of Worship to him. But for the better understanding the Nature of true Religion, it is necessary we should distinguish it into natural and revealed. By natural Religion, I mean the Obligation which natural Reason lays upon us to render to God all that Worship and Obedience, which, upon the Consideration of his Nature and our Dependence upon him, it discovers to be due to him. For God having planted in us a rational Faculty, by the due Exercise of which we are naturally led into the Belief of his Being, the Sense of his Perfections, and the Acknowledgment of his Providence, he expects we should follow it as the Guide and Directory of our Lives and Actions ; and whatsoever this Faculty doth naturally and in its due Exercise dictate to us, is as much the Voice of God as any Revelation.

For whatever it naturally dictates, it must dictate by his Direction who is the Author of its Nature, and who having framed it to speak such a Sense, and pronounce such a Judgment of Things, hath thereby put his Word into its Mouth, and doth himself speak thro' it, as thro' a standing Oracle which he hath erected in our Breasts, on purpose to convey and deliver his own Mind and Will to us. So that whatsoever natural Reason, rightly exercised, teaches us concerning God and our Duty towards him, that is true Religion, and doth as effectually bind and oblige us to him, as if it had been immediately revealed by him. It teaches us that God is infinitely wise and just and powerful and good; that he is the Fountain of our Beings, the Disposer of our Affairs, and the Arbitrator of our Fate, both here and hereafter; and by these Doctrines it obliges us to admire and adore him, to fear and love him, to trust and obey him. And this is natural Religion, which consists of such Doctrines as natural Reason teaches us concerning God and his Nature and Providence, and of such Duties as it infers from those Doctrines, and enforces by them; and all the Doctrines of this Religion upon which it founds its Duties, being eternal Verities, as they must necessarily be, being all deduced from the immutable Natures of God and Things, all the Duties of it must be morally, that is eternally, good and reasonable, because those Doctrines are the eternal Reasons upon which they are founded, and by which they oblige. So that whatsoever is a Duty of natural Religion must oblige for ever, 'because it obliges by an eternal Reason, and so can never be dispensed with, or abrogated till the Natures of Things are cancell'd and reversed, and eternal Truths are converted into Lyes.

In short therefore, natural Religion hath only natural Reason for its Rule and Measure, which from the Nature of God and Things deduces all those eternal Reasons by which it distinguishes our Actions into honest and dishonest, decorous and filthy, good and evil, necessary and sinful. For it doth not make them good or evil by judging them so; but if it judgeth truly, it judgeth of them as it finds them; and unless it finds them good or evil in themselves upon some eternal Reason, for or against them, its Judgment is false and erroneous. So that the objective Goodness or Evil that is in the Actions themselves is the Measure of our natural Reason, but our natural Reason judging truly concerning them is the Measure of our Choice or Refusal of them; for be our Action never so good or evil in itself, unless we have some eternal Reason for or against it, we cannot judge it so; and unless we judge it so, we cannot reasonably choose or refuse it; but as soon as ever we have judged and pronounced it good or evil upon an eternal Reason, we stand obliged by that Judgment to do or forbear it. So that right Reason, pronouncing such Actions Good and such Evil, is the Law of Nature; and those eternal Reasons, upon which it so pronounces them, are the Creed of Nature, both which together make natural Religion. And by this Religion was the World governed, at least the greatest Part of it, for some Thousands of Years; till by long and sad Experience it was found too weak to correct the Errors of Mens Minds, and restrain the wild Extravagancies of their Wills and Affections; and then God out of his great Pity to lost and degenerate Mankind, vouchsafed to us the glorious Light of revealed Religion, which in the largest Acceptation of it includes all natural Religion, as well the credenda as agenda, the Doctrines as the Duties of it; both which are contained in that Revelation of his Will which God hath made to the World, to which it hath superadded sundry Doctrines and Duties of supernatural Religion.

But strictly speaking, revealed Religion, as it is distinguished from natural, consists of such Doctrines and Duties as are knowable and discoverable only by Revelation; as are not to be deduced and inferred by Reasoning and Discourse from any necessary or natural Principles, but wholly depend upon the Counsel and Good-will of God. And where Things depend intirely upon God's Will, and their Being or not Being lies wholly in his free Disposal, it is impossible that our natural Reason should ever arrive at the Knowledge of them without some Revelation of his Will concerning them. For in such Matters as these, where the Will of God is absolutely free, Reason without Revelation hath neither necessary nor probable Causes and Principles to argue from, and therefore can make neither certain Conclusions nor so much as probable Guesses concerning them, but must necessarily remain altogether in the dark till such Time as God hath revealed to it which way his Will is determined; and of such Matters as these, consists all revealed Religion strictly so called. For tho God hath made sundry Revelations of his Will, yet the subject Matter of them was for the Main always the same, viz. the Doctrine of the Mediation of Jesus Christ, and the Duties that are subsequent thereunto, which from that Promise which God made to Adam upon his Fall, the Seed of the Woman shall break the Serpent's head, to the last Promulgation of the Gospel, hath been the great Theme of all divine Revelation. For what else was that Revelation which God made to Abraham, in thy Seed shall all the Nations of the Earth be blessed, but only the Dawning of the Gospel? which is nothing but glad Tidings of the Mediator. What was the Law of Moses, but only the same Gospel shining thro' a Cloud of Types and symbolical Representations; and what are all the succeeding Prophecies of the old Testament, but only the same Gospel still shining clearer and clearer, till at last it broke forth in its meridian Brightness? And were this a proper Place, I think I could easily demonstrate that from Adam to Moses, from Moses to the Prophets, from the Prophets to Jesus Christ, the main Scope and Design of all divine Revelation, hath been the gradual Discovery of this great Mystery of the Mediation. So that revealed Religion was for the Matter of it always the same, tho it was not always revealed with the same Perspicuity, but clear'd up, by degrees, from an obscure Twilight to a perfect Day. Wherefore Christianity, which in strictness is nothing but the Doctrine of the Mediation, together with its appendent Duties, ought not to be look'd on as a new Religion of 1600 Years date; for in reality, 'tis as antient as the Fall, and was then preached to Adam in that dark and mysterious Promise; after which, it was a little more clearly repeated, tho very obscurely still, in God's Covenant with Abraham; and again, after that, it was much more amply revealed in the Types and Figures of the Law of Moses, which yet, like painted Glass in a Window, did under their pompous Shew, still darken and obscure the holy Mysteries within them, which were nothing but the Doctrines and Laws of the Christian Religion. So that Judaism was only Christianity veil'd, and Christianity is only Judaism revealed.

Thus the Religion of the Mediator, you see, was the principal Subject of all divine Revelation; and this, without Revelation, natural Reason could never have discovered, because the whole of it depended upon the Free-will of God. For whether he would admit of any Mediator or no; whether he would admit his own Son to be our Mediator or no; whether he would deposit such inestimable Blessings for us or no, in the Hands of our Mediator, was intirely left to his free Determination; and there was no necessary Cause either within or without him, no nor any probable one neither, that human Reason could ever have discovered, that could incline or determine him one way or t'other. So that till such Time as he revealed his Will to us, we were left utterly in the dark as to this Matter, and had no Manner of Principles to argue from, or so much as to guess by. This therefore is strictly the Revealed Religion as it stands in opposition to the Natural. But since together with revealed Religion, God hath put forth a second Edition of Natural, which was almost lost and grown out of Print, thro' the wretched Negligence and Stupidity of Mankind, and since he hath not only revealed them together, but also incorporated them into one; Religion, as it is now framed and constituted by this happy Conjunction of natural with revealed, may be thus defined, It is the Obligation of rational Creatures, to render such Acts of Worship to God thro' Jesus Christ as he himself hath instituted, and as are in their own Natures suitable to his Excellencies, and their Dependence upon him. Where by Acts of Worship, I do not mean such only as are immediately directed to and terminated upon God, as all those are which are contained in the first

Table of the Decalogue ; but all those Acts in general which God hath commanded, which being performed upon a religious Account, that is, out of Homage and Obedience to God's Will and Authority, are as truly and properly Acts of Worship to him, as Prayer, or Praise or Adjuration.

And now having given this short Account of the Nature of Religion, it will from hence be easy to collect what Principles are necessary to the founding and securing its Obligations : For,

First, God being the great Object of all Religion, it must be absolutely necessary in order to our being truly Religious, that we believe that God is.

Secondly, Religion being an Obligation of us to God ; that this Obligation may take effect upon us, it is necessary we should believe, that he concerns himself about us, and consequently that he governs the World by his Providence.

Thirdly, Religion obliging us to render all due Acts of Worship to him, to enforce this Obligation upon us, it is necessary we should believe, that he will certainly reward us if we render those Acts to him, and as certainly punish us if we do not.

Fourthly, These Acts of Worship, which Religion obliges us to, being such as are suitable to the Excellency of God's Nature, to enable us to fulfil this Obligation, it is necessary we should have right Apprehensions of the Nature of God.

Fifthly, Religion obliging us to render all these Acts of Worship to God in and thro' Jesus Christ, to our performing this, it is necessary we should believe in his Mediation.

These are the great Principles in which all the Obligations of Religion are founded ; and therefore in order to the thorow fixing those Obligations upon Mens Minds, it will be necessary, before we proceed to the particular Duties which Religion obliges us to, to discourse of these Principles distinctly.

CHAP. III.

Of the Necessity of believing that God is, in order to Mens being truly Religious.

HE that cometh unto God, saith the Apostle, must believe that God is, Heb. 11. 6. where by coming to God, is meant Worshipping him, that is, expressing our Veneration of, and Affection to him, by outward and visible Signs and Actions ; and unless our outward Actions in Religion proceed from an inward Veneration of, and Affection to him, they are not Worship but Mockery ; but how is it possible a Man should inwardly venerate God, when he believes there is no such Being in the World ? For how real soever any Thing may be in itself, if we believe it is not, it is to us as if it were not ; and therefore tho God doth so necessarily exist, as that he cannot but be, the very Notion of him implying an infinite distance from not being ; yet, while we believe he is not, our Thoughts can be no more concern'd about him than about purchasing an Inheritance in Utopia. So that this Proposition that God is, is the prime Fundamental of all Religion, and if this be removed, Religion must sink, and all its sacred Obligations fly in sunder. But this is so self-evident that it would be very impertinent to insist upon the Proof of it. All that I shall do therefore in Pursuance of this Argument, shall be to endeavour to establish the Belief of this fundamental Truth upon which all Religion depends ; and that, First, By inquiring into, and removing the Causes of Mens Infidelity in this Matter ; Secondly, by representing the Folly and Unreasonableness of it. For as for the Proofs and Evidences of God's Being, I shall reserve them till I come to Discourse of his Providence, where, I think, there is enough said to satisfy any Man that is not desperately harden'd against all Conviction.

S E C T. I.

Of the Causes of Atheism; shewing the great Absurdity and Unreasonableness of them.

CONsidering how loudly the Voice of Nature, the Consent of Nations, and the beautiful Structure and Contrivance of Things do proclaim the Being of God, one would think it impossible there should be any such Monster as an Atheist among reasonable Beings; and indeed it hath been warmly disputed among the Learned, whether there be any such or no? A Question, which these latter Ages have determin'd in the Affirmative, by an Induction of too many woful Instances. But doubtless, had Men impartially attended to the Dictates of Reason, and not delivered themselves up to the Infatuation of their Lusts, and the inveterate Prejudice of a corrupt Imagination, it would have been impossible for so many gross Absurdities as Atheism implies, to have entred into their Minds; but when once Mens Wills and Affections have espoused a Proposition, they will make one shift or other, be it never so absurd, to impose it on their Understandings; and considering how many Causes there are leading Men to Atheism who are predisposed thereunto, I cannot think an Atheist to be so great a Wonder. For so long as Mens Understandings are led by their Wills, and their Wills are biased with Inclinations to Impiety, they can hardly forbear wishing, there were no God; and then from wishing there were none, to believing there is none, will be a very short and easy Transition. Since therefore their Atheism proceeds not so much from the Defect of their Reason as from the Fault of their Wills, perhaps the most effectual way to cure it, is rather to detect and remove those faulty Causes in their Wills, than to attempt upon their Reason, with the Proofs and Demonstrations of a Deity. And accordingly you see that when God had once created this goodly Theatre of Beings, and imprinted on it so many glorious Characters of his own Power, and Wisdom, and Goodness, tho from Time to Time he hath wrought innumerable Miracles, to reduce Men from Superstition, Idolatry and Wickedness, yet he never wrought one to reduce them from Atheism. And indeed, to what Purpose should he? It being highly improbable that they who will not be convinced of the Being of God by this standing Miracle, the World, in which there are so many ample Demonstrations of his Being, should be convinc'd of it by any other Miracles; for other Miracles are only the Disorders and Interruptions of Nature; and certainly, the regular Course and standing Order of Nature, is a much more glorious Evidence of God's Wisdom and Power, than the most miraculous Interruptions and Disorders of it. And therefore, if Men will be Atheists, notwithstanding God hath imprinted so many Proofs of his Being on this visible Creation, 'tis plain it is not their Reason but their Wills that make them so; and if so, to what purpose is it to urge their Reason with the Arguments of God's Being? Since, if they will not listen to those that are round about them, and are every where to be found in this great Volume of Nature, it is highly improbable that even Miracles themselves, which are God's peculiar Arguments (and are therefore called the Demonstrations of his Spirit) should ever be able to persuade them. Wherefore, to put a stop to this Pestilential Disease, which in these latter Ages, hath been so fatally propagated among all Degrees and Orders of Men, I conceive the most proper Way is, to discover and remove those Faults in their Wills which have such a malevolent Influence on their Understandings; and the principal ones may be reduced to these nine Heads:

- I. A perverse Opposition of Will to the Will and Nature of God.
- II. Superstitious Misapprehensions concerning God.
- III. Precipitant Rashness in prescribing to, and prejudging the Divine Providence.
- IV. Vain Affectation of Singularity in Opinion.
- V. Custom of Drolling on, and Ridiculing the most serious Things.

VI. Taking up our Religion, or Opinions in Religion, without Examination.

VII. Measuring the Truth or Falshood of Religion, by the Practice of such as make high Pretences to it.

VIII. Placing Religion in the little Opinions that constitute the Seets and Parties we are engaged in.

IX. Profane and careless Neglect of publick Worship.

I. One great Cause of Atheism, is the perverse Opposition of Mens Wills to the Will and Nature of God. For the natural Notion which Men have of God is, that he is a most pure and holy Being, infinitely removed by the Perfections of his Nature from all Inclinations that are contrary to the Dictates of right Reason. And accordingly in all those Declarations which he hath made of his Will, they find him expressing an high Detestation of all Immorality and Wickedness, and commanding them to abstain from it under the most dreadful Penalties, which they know he hath both Right and Power to inflict when he pleases. Notwithstanding which, presuming on his Goodness, and a future Repentance, they suffer themselves to be tempted and seduced into Wickedness; the Pleasure of which, tolls them on from one Wickedness to another, till their Wills are captivated by custom to inveterate Habits of Sinning. So that now their Sense of God, and of his almighty Displeasure, being no longer able to master the Stubbornness of their Wills, only serves to fret and disturb them, to raise Terrors and Anxieties in their Consciences, and therewithal to imbitter the Pleasure of their Sin. For so long as this Sense remains alive in their Bosoms, they can never hope to sin quietly for it; and it being so, they have no other Remedy but either to part with that or their Sins. For while they retain their Sins, the Belief of a God will grow an intolerable Vexation to them, unless by sophisticating their Belief with false Notions of Religion they can temper it into an amicable Compliance with their Lusts. And this is usually the Artifice of the duller Sort of People whose Understandings are more easily imposed on, viz. to intermingle with their Belief of a God such Notions of Religion as may render it favourable and propitious to their Lusts. And hence I doubt not sprang most of those wicked Doctrines which from Time to Time have been foisted into Christianity, from the Desire which Men have to accommodate the Difference between their Consciences and their wicked Wills, and reconcile their natural Sense of God to their Sins. But alas! these Artifices are all so thin and transparent, that 'tis a hard Matter for Men of Wit to impose them on their Understandings; and tho' they have an equal Good-will to these wicked Doctrines with the duller Sort of Sinners, yet their Reason is too sharp-sighted to be chous'd and deceived by them. And therefore usually they go another way to work, and being sensible that they can never enjoy their Sins in quiet, while they are awed with the Sense and Belief of a Deity, and yet obstinately resolved that they will enjoy them, they have no other Expedient, but to muster up all their Wit and Reason to dispute the Belief of a God out of their Minds; and being stiffly resolved to persist in their Wickedness, they are obliged by their own Interest to wish there were no God to observe and punish them: And then facile credunt quod volunt, they easily believe what they would have, and the slendrest Probability will sway their Understanding to vote on the Side of their Interest and Affections. So that when Men are resolved to be wicked, Atheism is their Interest and Refuge, to which they are many Times forced to fly in their own Defence, to avoid the Clamours and Persecutions of their Consciences. Had these Men lived in those good Pagan Days wherein they might have rioted with Devotion, Sacrificed to the Gods in drunken Bowls, and Worshipp'd in the Arms of a Strumpet, no Men would have been more Religious than they; and could they now but compound the Matter so, as that God should let them alone to enjoy their Lusts, there is no doubt but they would be well enough content to let him alone to enjoy his Being. But because their Sense of him frets and galls them, they first grow impatient under it, and then set their Wits at work to raise Objections against it, and either to laugh or or dispute it out of their Minds. And accordingly Plato makes mention of a Sort of Atheists, οἳς ἂν πρὸς τῇ δόξῃ, τῇ Θεῶν ἕνεκα εἶναι πάντα ἀκρεταῖς τε ἡδονῶν καὶ λυπῶν προσπίπτωσι, μνήμης τὰ ἰσχυρὰ καὶ μαθήσεως ὀξείας παρῶσι. who in Consequence of their Opinion, that all things are void of Gods, have plunged themselves into Intemperance of Pleasures and Pains, being otherwise Persons of great Memories and quick Understandings. De Leg. Lib. 10. But alas! how unreasonable is it in a Matter of such vast Importance for Men to believe by their Interest and Affections! 'Tis true, could Men put out the Sun with winking, or extinguish the Nature of Things by an obstinate Disbelief of them, it would be very justifiable for those Men to believe there is no God, whose Interest it is that there should be none. But alas! the Natures of Things are unalterable, and will be what they are whatsoever our Opinion is about them. If there be a God, there will be one, whether we think fit to believe it or no; and tho when the Interest of our Lusts requires it, we may possibly dispute our selves out of the Belief of his Being, yet he is not to be disputed out of his Being. We may indeed secure our selves from the Dread of his Vengeance, by disputing our selves into a Disbelief of him, but we can never secure our selves by it from the Danger of his Vengeance. And what a senseless Thing is it for a Man to shut his Eyes against an unavoidable Danger, merely for Fear of being frighten'd by it; and when he might shun God's Vengeance by dreading it, instead thereof to shun the Dread of it? What is this but to set his Reason at work to rock his Conscience asleep, that so he may destroy himself without Fear or Disturbance?

II. Another great Cause of Atheism is superstitious Misapprehensions concerning God; which (tho they are lodged in the Mind, yet) are most commonly exhauled from the Affections, that like impure Bogs do generally breathe up all those Meteors that darken and disturb the Region above. And indeed, most of our ill Apprehensions of God are transcribed and copied from our own Affections; which, be they never so irregular, our own Self-love will be apt to celebrate for Perfections. And then, whatsoever we esteem a Perfection in our selves, we naturally attribute to God, who is the Source and Standard of all Perfection; and those Affections of our own Nature, which we most injuriously attribute to God, we love or hate in him according as we love or hate them in other Men. Thus the fond and indulgent, who are apt to doat upon others without Reason, and to hug even their Vices and Deformities, are prone to attribute their own Temper to God, and to look upon him as a Being that is infinitely indulgent to those whom without any Reason he hath chosen for his Favourites. And because he, who is fond of others, loves others should be fond of him, to be sure he will love his fond God too, and be far more devoutly affected towards this Idol of his own Temper, than to the true God himself clothed in all the native Glory of his own Attributes. But on the contrary, those who are stern, and peevish, and implacable, can by no means endure their own Temper in others; and therefore, 'tis no wonder if they hate it in God, to whom they are wont injuriously to attribute it. For, how is it possible for them to affect a Divinity, whom they have pictured in their own Minds with such a stern and terrible Aspect, with an Imperious Self-will that bears down all Things before it, by irresistible Might, without any respect to Right or Wrong, with bloody Hands and a vengeful Heart, and a testy, peevish, and unaccountable Nature that loves and hates without any Reason, and is pleased or displeased as the Toy takes it. And having thus set up such a grim Idol of God in their Minds as they can by no means affect, they secretly wish there were no such Being, which is the Brink of Atheism. Thus their ghastly Apprehensions of God meeting with the surly and churlish Temper within them, instead of moulding them into Devotion to him, commonly enrage and canker them with Malice against him; and accordingly Plutarch well observes, ἐν οἷς τας Θεὸς εἶναι ὁ ἀθεῖς, ὁ δὲ δεισιδαιμόμων ἐβλέσται, i. e. the Atheist thinks there is no God, and he who hath dreadful Apprehensions of him wishes there were none; and he who wishes there were none, is but one remove from believing there is none. Thus you see in what a direct Line Vice leads to Superstition, and Superstition to Atheism. For Pride and Wrath, Malice and Revenge are naturally apt to ingender in Mens Minds horrid and frightful Apprehensions of God ; which working on those sour and rough Passions that begot them, are as apt to exasperate and enrage them against him ; and then their Reason immediately takes Part with their Passion, and to gratify its Wish that there were no God, sets it self industriously to argue him out of his Being. But alas ! what an unreasonable Procedure is this, for Men to pin their Faults upon God, and dress him in their own Deformities, and when they have thus disguised him by putting upon him their own frightful Tempers, as the old Persecutors did the Christians by wrapping them in Lions Skins, to set on their Wit and Reason to worry him out of his Being ? what is this but to make a God as the Heathens did their Mercuries, and then sling Stones at him ; to transform him into a monstrous Idol, and then dislike him, and then dash him in Pieces ? But be not deceived, God will be what he is, a most perfect, glorious and amiable Being, how inglorious soever he may appear to you thro' the false Medium of your own diabolical Temper, which like Crimson coloured Glafs will represent the fairest Objects to you bloody and terrible ; but for you to hate God for no other Reason but because your own hateful Passions do reflect to you such an inglorious Idea of him, and then to deny him because you hate him, is equally impious and unreasonable.

III. Another great Cause of Atheism is Rashness and Precipitancy in prescribing to and prejudging the divine Providence, and this also most commonly arises from some great Irregularity in Mens Wills and Affections. For generally the rash Judgments which Men make of the divine Providence, are grounded on those unequal Distributions it makes of the good Things of this World, in prospering the Bad and afflicting the Good, upon which we are too often ready to charge it with being an unequal Arbitrator of Mens Fates. The Occasion of which is our immoderate Estimation of the Goods and Evils of this World. We so inhance the Goods of it in our Opinions, as to think them great enough to be the Crowns and Rewards of Virtue ; and have such horrible Apprehensions of the Evils of it, as to imagine them great enough to be the Plagues and Punishments of the most obstinate and notorious Offenders. Whereas by the whole Course of his Providence it appears that God hath a different Esteem of them both ; that he thinks the best Things of this World to be bad enough to be thrown away upon the most despicable Persons ; and therefore to express his Scorn of these admired Vanities, he many Times scatters them with a careless Hand, as not thinking it worth the while to be so exact in the Distribution of them, as to put them in Gold Scales, and weigh them out to Mankind by Grains and Scruples. And as for the worst Things of this World, he thinks them not so bad but that they may be endured without any considerable Damage to the Sufferer ; and therefore many Times suffers them to befall his own *Favourite*s, as not thinking it of Moment enough to interpose his Providence to shield them against their impotent Impressions. And upon this Difference of Judgment Men too often ground an inveterate Quarrel against God, and because they doat upon this World, and think the Goods of it good enough to be the Portion of good Men, and the Evils of it bad enough to be the Punishment of bad, they are angry with God for not being of their Opinion, and are ready to arraign his Providence, and to conclude that this World is govern'd by a blind Chance that drops her Favours at random, as the full-plumed Hawk mews her loose Feathers, and never cares who stoops to take them up. And this Ovid ingeniously acknowledges of himself :

*Dum rapiunt mala fata bonos, ignoscite fasso,
Sollicitor nullos esse putare deos.*

While I behold ill Fates attend good Men, I am tempted to think there are no Gods.

Marmoreo Licinus tumulo jacet, at Cato parvo, Pompeius nullo ; quis putet esse Deos ?

The Wicked Licinus lies in a marble Tomb, but Cato in a small one, and Pompey in none; who would think there were Gods?

So also there are others, who beholding themselves in the flattering Mirror of their own Self-conceit, are so taken with the Reflections of their own Merit and Excellency, as that they cannot see how 'tis possible but that if there be a God, he must love and reward them; and therefore, if instead of so doing, God either deprives them of those worldly Goods which they doat on, or frustrates them of those carnal Hopes for whose Accomplishment they have earnestly supplicated, they presently begin to murmur against him, and thence proceed to arraign the Justice of his Providence, and thence to deny both that and his Being. For thus it comes to pass, saith Simplicius, that such who have no grounded Belief of a Deity, when they observe the Miseries of good Men, and the Prosperities of bad, are without any regard to the common Notions of a God, ready to cry out with him in the Tragedian, Τολμᾷ καλεῖσθαι μήπολ' ἔκ εἰσιν Θεοὶ, κακοὶ γὰρ εὐτυχῶντες ἱππλήτῃσσι με, i. e. I dare affirm there are no Gods, because the wicked prosper that hurt me. Thus from their fond Affection to these worldly Goods Men frequently take occasion to quarrel with God's Providence, for not appropriating them to be the Rewards of Virtue; and being once engaged in a Quarrel against his Providence, their next Attempt is to dispute him out of his Being.

But what an unreasonable Way of concluding is this? I value this to be best and that to be worst, and therefore God ought to be of my Opinion, and to proceed accordingly in his Providence over the World: For there is nothing can be better or worse within the Prospect of an infinite Wisdom, than what I apprehend to be best and worst for Mankind; and therefore, if he will do Good to the Good, it must be in the Method that I shall prescribe him, that is to say, he must crown them with Rose-buds, and clothe them in Purple, and feed them with the Fat of the Land; and if he punish the Wicked, he must give me leave to give aim to his Arrows, and to direct him how, and what, and when, and where to shoot, and so long I am contented to allow him a Being in the World: But if he will presume to cross my Opinion of Things, and steer his Actions by the unerring Compass of his own infinite Wisdom; if he will rather choose to do Good to the Good by chastening than by prospering them, and to avenge himself upon the Wicked, by fattening them with Prosperity for Slaughter, I shall look upon it as such an Affront to my Judgment as will admit of no meaner Expiation than the stripping him out of his Providence and Being. And what can be more ridiculous than for Men to deny the Being of God, because his Providence sometimes crosses their foolish Opinions of Things, and doth not govern it self by the crooked Rules which they are pleased to prescribe it.

IV. Another great Cause of Atheism is vain Affectation of Singularity in Opinion; a Vice that hath been always incident to Men of Speculation, who valuing themselves upon the Stock of their Knowledge and deep Insight into the Nature of Things, have always affected to start new Notions, and advance contrary Hypotheses to the received Opinions of Mankind, that so they may be vogued for Men of singular Knowledge, and seem to have taller Understandings than the rest of their Brethren. And this, I doubt not, hath been one great Cause of speculative Atheism; for there is no Principle in Nature which hath been more universally received among Men than the Belief of a Deity, which doubtless is the main Reason why Men who affect Singularity, have been so prone to quarrel at it. It doth not comport with their Design of being thought wiser than the rest of the World, to submit their Understandings to common Notions and universal Doctrines; because, should they think as other Men do, they might probably be thought no wiser. Perhaps, had the Belief of a Deity been lately started, and only received by some singular Sect of Virtuosoës, these Men might have been as forward to entertain it as they are now to reject it; but because it is an Old-fashion Doctrine, in which all Ages and Nations have concurred, they think it would be a discredit to their Understanding to wear it, and therefore they set their their Wits at work to invent atheistical Hypotheses to solve the Phænomena of Nature without a Deity. And he that doth but impartially consider the haughty Genius of those Philosophers that laid the Foundations of speculative Atheism, may easily perceive that the great Motive of their Infidelity was nothing but a proud Affectation of thinking counter to Mankind. And indeed, could I but embrace the Doctrine of the Transmigration of Souls, I should be tempted to believe by the Likeness of their Humours, that it was one and the same Soul that pass'd thro' Democritus into Protagoras, thro' Protagoras into Epicurus, and thro' Epicurus into Mr. Hobbes : And since they so exactly agreed in their Pride and haughty Ostentation of Knowledge, it is justly supposable that this was the main Cause of their Agreement in Atheism ; which being a singular Doctrine, and directly contradictory to the common Notions of Mankind, was upon that Account more adapted to the Humour of these arrogant Philosophers. And accordingly, Plato describes the Atheists of his Age to be a conceited and scornful Sort of People, and declares the Cause of their Atheism to be ἀμάθεια μάλα χαλεπή δοκῶσα εἶναι μεγίστη φρόνησις, a certain pernicious Sort of Ignorance that put on a Similitude of the greatest Wisdom : And afterwards he calls Atheism ἡ παρὰ πολλοῖς δοξιζομένη εἶναι σωφίστων πάντων λόγων, that which in the Eyes of some conceited People seemed to be the wisest of all Doctrines. De Leg. Lib. 10. And because these Atheistical Philosophers, who were some of them great Masters of Wit and Learning, had the good luck to be remarked and gazed on, like so many Anticks, for their Singularity, they have always found Disciples and Followers among the People of little Sense, and a great deal of Vanity, who being Ambitious of the Reputation of the Wits and Philosophers, but having neither Brains nor Industry enough to merit it, are fain to shelter their Ignorance in Atheism, and there to face it out with Laughter and Boldness ; and because by laughing at God and Religion they deride the common Faith of Mankind, they fancy themselves singularly witty, and expect that others should fancy them so too ; whereas in reality these little People are but mere Pretenders to speculative Atheism. For before they can be more, they must comprehend the whole System of the atheistical Philosophy, and be able to describe all those supposed Laws of Motion, by which Matter, without the Conduct of a Superior Wisdom and Power, did originally range it self into this beautiful World, and to shew at least the Possibility of all the strange Appearances in Nature, without supposing a God ; which is such a task as their feeble Understandings durst never attempt ; for the utmost they can pretend to is a few Terms of the atheistical Philosophy, which they have learned by Rote, and do cant and fmatter with as much Skill and Understanding, as Parrots do the Lessons that are taught them. And tho' the brisk young Gentlemen will sometimes boldly affirm, and if you dare take them up, will lay a Wager on it too, that Reason is nothing but a Train of Imaginations ; that Choice is nothing but the last stroke of outward Objects on the Fancy ; and that there is nothing in Nature but Matter and Motion ; yet should you be so rude as to ask them what they mean by these Phrases, you would uncase their Ignorance and utterly undo them. So that such as these are only the Hawkers and Retailers of Atheism, that noise and cry it about ; but have neither Wit nor Industry enough to understand it, but do take it up with the same implicit Faith as the Papists do their Religion. Thus as the Ambition of being accounted wiser than others, causes Men to affect Singularity in their Opinions, so the Affectation of Singularity in Opinion, doth very often transport Men into Atheism.

Now tho' I would by no means plead for Mens enslaving their Understanding to vulgar Opinions, so as to put a stop to all Advancements of Knowledge, and hinder the World from ever growing wiser ; yet doubtless, for Men to quarrel at Opinions for no other Reason but because they are vulgarly received, is not only a rude Affront to the Reason of Mankind ; but also an effectual way to involve our selves in an endless Labyrinth of Mistakes. For while I affect to be singular in my Opinion, I deprive my Self of the Assistance of other Mens Understandings, and in my travel for Knowledge, choose rather to go alone by my self self thro' untrodden By-ways, than to keep the Road, and follow the Tract of those that have gone before me. So that unless I am wiser than all the World, which is very unlikely, it is a thousand to one but I bewilder and lose my self; for how wise and sagacious soever I may be, it is certain that many Heads are wiser than one; and therefore, when all Heads concur in the same Judgment, it is probable at least that that Judgment is true; he therefore who rejects an Opinion because all or most do imbrace it, affects to think counter to the strongest Evidence, and to believe against the greatest Probability. 'Tis true, in many Things the generality of Men have been mistaken, which is a sufficient Reason why we should not pin our Faith upon the Sleeve of vulgar Opinions, but impartially examine before we confidently embrace them; but yet there is a Reverence due to the Judgment of Mankind, and the Laws of Modesty require us not to be confident against it without very great Reason; but to affect to run counter to it, especially in such a Matter of Moment as the Belief or Disbelief of a Deity, is not only the highest Arrogance but the most extravagant Madness. For it is at least probable, that there is a God, because all Mankind do believe one, and if there be one, it is of infinite Moment that we should believe it, and act accordingly; and therefore for Men to turn Atheists out of mere Singularity, is not only to believe there is no God, because it is probable there is, but to play and dally with one's own Fate, and run the hazard of being eternally miserable out of a wanton Affectation of contradicting the Judgment of Mankind.

V. Another great Cause of Atheism is Custom of drolling on and ridiculing the most serious Things; a Humour which hath strangely prevailed in this pleasant and jocular Age, wherein the wild Rovings of Mens Fancies into odd Similitudes, startling Metaphors, humorous Expressions, and sportive Representations of Things, are grown more acceptable in almost all Conversations, than the most solid Reason and Discourse, and 'tis generally look'd upon as a far more genteel and fashionable Quality for a Man to be Witty than Wise. Now tho I do not deny but that Wit in it self is a very useful and valuable Indowment, and serves to many excellent purposes; as namely, to polish and adorn the most serious Truths, and represent them to Mens Minds in the most comely and affecting Dresses; to expose what is apparently base and ridiculous, and lash it with the Satyrs it makes against it self; to quicken and give Life to a solid Argument, and render it more piercing and convictive; and in a word, to indear our Society, and give a relish and piquancy to our Conversation, and to recreate our Minds after we have been tired out or cloyed with severer Occupations; tho Wit, I say, be a very useful Quality as to all these good Purposes, yet unless a wise Man hath the keeping it, that knows when, and where, and how to apply it, it is like Wildfire that flies at Rovers, runs hissing about, and blows up every Thing that comes in its way without any Respect or Discrimination. And indeed, the more grave and serious any Thing is, the more prone it will be to expose and ridicule it: For the Life of Wit consists in the surprisingness of its Conceits and Expressions, in making such smart or uncouth Representations of Things as are most apt to raise a pleasing Wonder and Amazement in those that hear us. Now there is nothing more surprising in its own Nature, than to see or hear a serious Thing sportfully represented, and dress'd up in an antick and ridiculous Disguise; the very exposing it in a Garb and Figure so unexpected, because so very unlike and unsuitable to it self, is apt of its own Nature to surprize and amuse the Spectators or Hearers; which Surprize, if he be a vain Person, will tickle him into Laughter, but if he be serious, will affect him with Detestation and Horror to see a serious Thing so contemptibly treated. But the greatest Part of Men being of vain and trifling Spirits, that are whiffled up and down in little Levities of Fancy, there is nothing commonly doth more gratefully surprize them and provoke their Laughter, than ridiculous Representations of serious Arguments; and hence it comes to pass, that 'tis grown a great Instance of Wit among the generality of Men to sport and play with serious Things, to burlesque the Sense of them, and apply them to ridiculous Purposes; whereas, in reality, this mistaken Sort of Wit is nothing but but dull and impudent Buffoonery, and a very little Wit joined with a great deal of Sauciness, will enable a Man to make sport with the most serious Arguments. For 'tis but clothing them in rude and porterly Expressions, or misconstruing them to a profane or ludicrous Sense, or debauching the Phrases by which they are expressed to a silly or a wicked meaning, and it shall presently be cried up for an excellent Jest, and the Author of it dubb'd a Wit Laureat. This therefore being so easy a way, for dull People to advance themselves to the Reputation of Wits, hath of late Years especially been mightily frequented by the impotent Well-wishers to Wit and Ingenuity; and because Religion hath been always esteemed the most serious Thing in the World, therefore they fix upon that as the common Theme of their Raillery, considering that the more serious it is, the more it will surprize Men to hear it burlesqu'd and drolled on. So that if they do but speak slightly and irreverently of God, or never so clownishly ridicule a Mystery of Religion, or clothe an obscene Thought in a Text of Scripture; their Sauciness will supply the Defect of their Wit, and Men will laugh not so much at the Piquancy of their Conceit, as at the Boldness and Presumption of it: And because their Discourse had the luck to be laughed at, they think themselves celebrated for the Oracles of Wit, and are thereby embolden'd to proceed in this their impious Buffoonery, till at last they have drolled themselves into a Contempt of God, and from thence into downright Atheism. For tho a Jest be no Argument, nor yet a loud Laughter a Demonstration, yet if you inspect the Generality of our little Pretenders to Atheism, you will find this is the main Foundation that their Irreligion depends on; for their Gift consists not in arguing and demonstrating, but in such a Set of fine Phrases and terse Oaths; and all the Stock of Learning, they pretend to, is a few shavings of Wit, gathered out of Plays and Romances, and these they pin upon Religion, as you have seen unhappy Boys do Rags at Mens Backs, to expose it to Scorn and Derision; and having accustomed themselves to treat it with such rude and porterly Contempt and Disingenuity, it grows by degrees cheap and vile in their Eyes, and at last is rejected by them as a ridiculous Imposture; and if now, when they are urged with Evidences of Religion, they have but Wit enough to answer Reason with Drollery, and to retort a Jest to a Demonstration, how gloriously do they imagine they have acquitted themselves, and with what triumphant Shrugs do they celebrate their Victory over the little Man in Black.

Now tho for Men to deride what they do not understand, favours neither of Learning nor good Manners, and is equally unbecoming a Gentleman and a Scholar; and tho for a Man to venture to be Damned for deriding of God and Religion, is such a Triumph of Wit as argues the utter Defeat of his Reason, yet so long as there are vain Men enough to be tickled with this profane Sort of Drollery, to be sure there will never want Fools enough to venture on it. For when a Fop will needs aspire to the Reputation of a Wit, he hath no other way but to dress up Religion in a Fool's Coat, and expose it for a Spectacle of Derision, and then how dull soever the Conceit be, the stupendous Presumption of it will surprize and amuse the Company, and Men will admire him just as they do Rope-dancers, for daring to perform what a wise Man would tremble to attempt; and being thus embolden'd by the Admiration and Laughter of his Company, which the vain Creature mistakes for a Proof and Evidence of his Wit, he grows more pert and confident; and so fools and fleers on, till he hath toyed and laughed himself out of all Sense of Religion.

But alas! what a desperate Piece of Folly is this, for Men thus to sport and dally with the Almighty, whose vengeance they can neither withstand nor endure; to point and make Mouths at him to his Face, and set him up as the Finger-but of their Scorn and Derision! For certainly if there be Sins that can raise a Cry loud enough to reach Heaven, this, as a great Author of our own hath expressed it, will be so far from whispering there, that 'twill give an Alarm to the Vengeance of Heaven, whose Inflictions, like Stones tumbling from the Tops of Towers, will by so much the more fatally crush those they light on, by how much the longer they are falling falling upon them. And therefore for Men thus to dally with their own Fate, to venture to be damn'd, that they may be thought to be witty, and expose themselves to endless Wailing and Woe, only to raise a present Fit of Laughter, is doubtless a far more desperate Attempt, than 'twould be to play at the Mouths of Cannons, while they are spitting Fire, or to lay hold on a Thunderbolt, as it comes roaring down from the Clouds.

But suppose there were neither Evil nor Danger in this impious Practice, yet for Men to conclude there is no God, because they have the Confidence to scorn and despise him, is altogether as ridiculous, as their despising him is impious. For there is nothing in Nature so real or serious, but may be drolled and relied on; if a Man will set his Wits at work, he may *break Jest*s upon Pain, and entertain his Company with comical Representations of the Groans and Agonies of Dying; but it would be a Jest indeed, should he droll himself into a Belief that there are no such Things as Pain or Death. But alas! Things are not to be alter'd by Laughing at them, and how merry soever we may make our selves with the Belief and Notion of a Deity, we shall one Day find in earnest, that he is not to be jested out of his Being.

VI. Another Cause of Atheism, is taking up Religion, or Opinions in Religion, without Examination. The Generality of Men do embrace their Religion as a Part of their Fate, as the Temper of their Clime, or the Entail of their Ancestors; and the Reason why they are Christians is, because Christianity had the luck to bespeak them first, and by its timely Interposure to prepossess and forestal them. So that, in all Probability, had Mahometanism plied them first, they would have had as much Faith for the Alchoran, as they have now for the Bible. Now when Men thus take up their Religion they know not why, their Minds must needs be left naked and defenceless to all the Temptations of Atheism. For when a Man can render no Reason for his Religion, his Faith hath nothing but blind Prejudice to support it; and 'tis with his Will that he believes, and not with his Understanding: So that he may choose whether he will believe or no, because he hath no Evidence to determine his Understanding. And how unstable and insecure must his Faith needs be, when it hath no other Foundation but a fickle and inconstant Will; when it lies at the mercy of his Humour and Inclinations, and it is in his Power to determine his Assent to that side of the Question which is most for his Interest? For now his Faith being determined by his Will, and his Will by his Interest, whenever he thinks it his Interest that there should be no God, to be sure he will be ready enough to believe that there is none; and consequently as soon as he grows wicked enough to need Atheism for a Refuge from his Conscience, he will betake himself thither in his own Defence, and endeavour by an obstinate Disbelief of God's Being, to shelter himself from the Dread of his Power. Thus when Mens Belief is not grounded upon Reason and Evidence, but stands tottering on the fickle Foundation of their Wills, it is liable to be blown down by every Blast of Temptation. And hence, I doubt not, in a great measure proceeds the Irreligion of the Age we live in; for if you survey the present Sticklers for Atheism, you will find they chiefly consist of the bare-brain'd and uncatechised Youths of the Town, who never troubled themselves to understand the first Principles of Religion, nor to consider the Dependence and Connexion of its Doctrines, and know nothing at all either of the admirable Contexture of the Parts of it, or of the Reason and Evidence of the Whole. For alas! their Study hath been employ'd another Way, viz. in courtly Forms of Speech and Punctilio's of Action, in fashionable Garbs and Oaths, and artificial Luxuries, in conning of fine Jests and Modes of Address, and retailing Fragments of Wit from Plays and Romances; but as for the severer and more useful Studies, they bequeath them to the dull Men of Sense and Reason.

Such as these are for the most part the Sages that droll upon Religion, and *make Jest*s upon the Scripture; and what Wonder is it that such as these turn Infidels, who are never able to render any Reason of their Faith? For how weak soever the Arguments of Infidelity are, it is a hard Case if it cannot baffle that Faith which hath no Reason on its side to guard and defend it; especially when they are seconded with a Man's Lusts and Inclinations, as to be sure the Arguments of Infidelity will always be. For when a Man hath no Reason for his Faith, but a great many Lusts against it, the slendrest Shews of Probability will suffice to make him an Infidel. But what an horrible Neglect is it for Men that have Reason to distinguish between Truth and Falshood, to take no Care to inquire into the Truth and Evidence of their Religion, in which their greatest Interest is involved; but to wink hard, and believe at a venture they know not why or what? what is this, but to cast Lots for their Souls, and throw Cross or Pile for their eternal Salvation? They resolve, they say, to adhere to the Religion of their Ancestors, but whether that be true or false they never inquire; so that if it be true they may thank their Stars for it, but if it be false they have the worse Luck. Thus they wholly commit themselves to the Conduet of Chance to be conducted to Heaven or Hell, as it happens; and as if those distant Fates were indifferent to them, they concern not themselves to inquire whether the Way they are in be the broad or the narrow, the right or the wrong, but e'en leave the Event to determine it. And can any Thing in the World be more wild or extravagant, than for Men, who are so sollicitous about their smaller Concerns, who will not purchase an Acre of Land without examining the Dæds and Evidences by which the Right to it is convey'd, thus to take up their Religion upon Trust, and stake their everlasting Fate upon such a desperate Venture? But then for Men to take Occasion to despise and reject Religion from their own sottish Neglect to inquire into the Truth of it, is such an height of Extravagance as no Bedlam can parallel; it would be as reasonable for a Man to put out his Eyes, and then resolve not to believe there is a Sun in the Firmament, because he doth not see it, or to stop up his Ears, and then peremptorily deny the Being of Sounds, because he does not hear 'em: For, for Men thus to graft Infidelity upon Ignorance, is only to heap one Extravagance on another; if they understand not the Evidence of Religion, the more Shame it is for them, but methinks it might very well become them to be modest and teachable till they do; and in the mean while to take care to inform themselves better; but thus immediately to leap out of Ignorance into Atheism, is first to play the Fool, and then run stark mad upon it.

VII. Another Cause of Atheism, is Mens measuring the Truth or Falshood of Religion by the Practice of such as make the loudest Pretence to it. When a Man is unwilling to undergo the Trouble of satisfying his own Reason of the Truth of his Religion, his usual Method is to inquire what other Men think of it, who by the zealous Profession which they make, may be supposed to understand it better than himself; but because Mens Thoughts are secret and invisible, and do not always correspond with their Words and Professions; therefore to satisfy himself what other Men think of Religion, he concludes the safest Way is to judge by what they do, and not by what they profess; and so far indeed he is in the right. For to be sure, Mens Actions are a much more certain Index of their Thoughts than their Words; and therefore, when he sees those who profess Religion act as if they did not believe it, and observes how their Words do run a-tilt at their Practice, and how broadly their Lives give the Lye to their Professions, he presently concludes that whatever they pretend, they are Infidels in their Hearts; and being once persuaded that those whom he thinks do best understand Religion, do not believe it, he thence immediately concludes, that they find no Reason to believe it, and do only put on the Profession of it as an Angelical Vizor, being minded to play the Devils in it with more Credit and Security. And by this popular Way of Reasoning, they conclude Religion to be nothing but a politick Device and Engine, which wise Men have contrived to beguile and manage the simple; and that whatsoever is pretended for it, it is a mere Juggling-box which Knaves play tricks with to delude

delude and cozen Fools. And of this Way of Mens reasoning themselves into Atheism, the Age we live in is full of woful Instances; for now a-days to scorn and despise Religion, is no longer the Prerogative of Wits and Virtuosoes, but the Infection is spread and propagated into Shops and Stalls, and the Rabble are become Professors of Atheism. Now whence should this proceed? alas! it is not to be supposed, that such Persons as these should ever be able to philosophize themselves into Infidelity, and turn Atheists either upon Aristotle's or Epicurus's Hypotheses; no, no, their Argument lies nearer home, and more open to their Capacities: They have seen a World of vile Tricks play'd in our Religious Carnivals and Masquerades; some making their Religion a Sanctuary for their Treasons and Rebellions; others gilding over their Faction and Sedition with a specious Pretence of Zeal for God's Glory: Some prosecuting their own Revenge and Ambition under the Ensigns of pure Worship and true Protestant Religion; others commuting for their Excesses of Riot with a clamorous Zeal for Decency and Order, and others picking Pockets with one Hand, while they have been lifting up the other to Heaven in Devotion; the Sight of which hath tempted the rude and unthinking Vulgar to look upon Religion as a mere Castle in the Air, that hath no Foundation but in the Invention of Knaves and in the Faith of Fools.

Now, tho' there is no Doubt to be made, but that these vile Hypocrites, who have laid this Stumbling-block in Mens Way, shall one Day dearly answer for the Ruin of those whom it occasion'd to fall, and for thus exposing the Credit and Reputation of Religion to the Misprisions of those that do not understand it; yet it is a most inexcusable Piece of Folly, for Men thus to infer Atheistical Conclusions from the ill Example of Hypocritical Professors. For, in the first Place, to conclude a Man an Infidel, because his Actions run counter to the Faith he pretends to, is very rash and fallacious: For, do we not see Men very often act against their Consciencies, and fly in the face of their own Convictions? Why may we not then as fairly suppose those wicked Actions we argue from, to be the Effects of an obstinate Will as of an infidel Judgment? But suppose it were true, that those Men were all Infidels, that do thus act against their Faith, doth it therefore follow, that you must turn Infidels too? If it be so unsafe and so unworthy of a Man to carry his Brains in other Mens Heads, what a Shame is it to carry them in other Mens Heels, and to suffer his Faith to be led by the Tract of their Examples thro' all the wild Mazes of Irreligion, and Atheism?

But you will say, by these Mens Examples you plainly see what a Mystery of Iniquity there is in Religious Pretences; and what then? Must Religion be a Cheat because bad Men play Tricks with it, and make it a Cloke for their Knavery? If so, then the best Things in the World are liable to Suspicion; because there is nothing so good but what is capable of being prostituted to very ill Purposes: I confess, when we see so many Cheats acted under the Mask of Religion, we have just reason to call it to a more severe Examination, and to inquire more narrowly into the Proofs and Evidences upon which it is founded; but presently to reject Religion, because Knaves and Hypocrites make bold to disguise themselves in it, is every whit as absurd and ridiculous, as if a Man should deny that there is any such Virtue as Chastity in the World, because there are common Prostitutes that pretend to it.

VIII. Another Cause of Atheism is Divisions and Schisms, formed out of little Opinions in Religion. For it is natural to Men to place a great Part of their Religion in those Opinions, for whose sake they divide and separate from each other; so that if hereafter they happen to be dissatisfy'd with those Opinions, of which they are excessively fond at the present, they will be under a great Temptation to suspect Religion it self, as if that were as ill-grounded as those little Opinions which they laid so great a Stress on; and so after they have run thro' several Sets of Opinions, and in fine have discovered them to be all Delusions, they are ready to conclude Religion it self to be nothing but a System of Lies and Impostures. For as weak Heads when they perceive the Buildings shake, are apt to suspect the Foundations; so weak Understandings will be prone to suspect even the Fundamentals of Religion, when once they perceive those darling Notions trotter which they have confidently presumed to superstruct thereupon.

And upon this account, make no doubt but that the Irreligion of this Age is very much to be attributed to the Sects and Divisions of it. For how many woful Examples have we of Persons who had once a great Zeal for and Satisfaction in Religion, that upon their causeless Separation from the Church's Communion, have run from Seet to Seet, and from one extravagant Opinion to another, till at last being convinced of the Cheats and Impostures of them all, they have totally discarded Religion it self, and made their last Resort into Atheism. And as separating into Parties, upon little Differences in Religion, exposes the Separatists themselves to great Temptations to Atheism, so it doth those also who are indifferent on both sides, and stand engaged on neither Part of the Separation. For whilst these Men behold the State of Religion thus miserably broken and divided, and the Professors of it crumbled into so many Seets and Parties, and each Party spitting Fire and Damnation at its Adversary; so that if all say true, or indeed any two of them in five hundred Seets, which there are in the World, (and for all I know, there may be five thousand) it is five hundred to one but that every one is damn'd, because every one damns all but it self, and it self is damn'd by four hundred ninty and nine; so that 'tis a mighty Chance if in so great a Volly of Anathema's, which every one hath levelled at it, any one escape: When, I say, unengaged Persons that are not able to distinguish between the disputable Opinions that constitute these Seets, and the Necessaries and Essentials of Religion, shall reflect upon this Tumult and Confusion of Faiths, they will be apt to conclude, without farther Inquiry, that Religion itself is nothing but an infinite Maze of disputable Opinions, wherein Men wander about in the dark, and juggle and run-counter one another without any certain Clew on either side to guide and direct their Inquiries; under which Misapprehension they will either damn all Religion for a Cheat, or hover about in eternal Uncertainty, not knowing where, in so great a Confusion of Religions, to fix and settle their Faith. And hereunto, I doubt not, is to be attributed a great Part of the Irreligion of this Age. For while some Men, by running themselves out of Breath in pursuit of those Ignes fatui, or New Lights, that have broken and divided our Communion, have at length quite tired out their Zeal, and religious Pretences, and so are at length laid down in the Mire of Irreligion and open Profaneness; others, by looking on and beholding the wild Divisions which these New Lights have made, have been tempted to run away from Religion itself, as if that were only a Labyrinth of uncertain Opinions, contrived on purpose to distract and bewilder Mens Brains.

Now tho the Authors of these Divisions, whosoever they are, are doubtless highly accountable to God for all that Irreligion which attends them, yet for Men from hence to draw Atheistical Conclusions, is much more imputable to the Perverseness of their Wills, than to the Weakness of their Understandings.

For in the first place, What if you have discovered some Opinions in Religion to be false and erroneous, of the Truth of which you were once very confident; doth it therefore follow, that there is nothing certain in Religion? If so, you may as well conclude that there is nothing certain in the Mathematicks neither, since some Men have been as confident of the Truth of false Axioms in Geometry, as ever you could be of false Propositions in Religion. That you were once over-confident in a disputable Matter, was your own Fault and Folly, but must it therefore follow that Religion is a Cheat, because you have been rash and inconsiderate? and what tho you once laid the great stress of your Religion upon an Opinion which you now discern is erroneous, must Reliligion needs suffer for your Mistake, and be branded for an Imposture, because you took that for Religion which was not? For there are a thousand Propositions about Religion, which have been zealously disputed for and against, which have torn Men into Sects, and been the Religion of the separate Communion they have formed and denominated, that yet are very remote Superstructures on the true Foundations of Religion, and may be true or false, believed or disbelieved, without any Damage to Religion. And therefore before you suspect the Truth of Religion it self, upon your discovering the Falseness of any particular Opinion, you ought in all reason to consider whether that Opinion be so essential to Religion as that it cannot subsist without it: for if it be not, 'tis the most unreasonable thing in the World, to infer a suspicion of the Truth of Religion from the Falseness of Propositions that have little or no Dependence on it, and to reject the Gold and the precious Stones for the sake of the Wood, and Hay, and Stubble that have been superstructed upon them. And then,

2. What can be more absurd than for Men to reject Religion, because Mens Opinions about it have been so divided? For, if you survey the several Divisions of Christians, you will find they generally concur in all the necessary and essential Doctrines of Religion, and that the Opinions wherein they divide, are, for the most part, such unnecessary Speculations, as that it is almost indifferent to Religion whether they be true or false; and with what reason can we suspect the Truth of necessary Doctrines wherein all are agreed, because there are Disagreements in unnecessary ones? Because there are some Propositions in the Mathematicks, about which the Opinions of the Mathematicians are divided, shall we therefore suspect the Truth of all those wherein they are agreed? For if their Disagreement be an Argument of the Falseness of the former, why should not their Agreement be as good an Argument of the Truth of the latter? But how much soever Mens Opinions about Religion may be divided, all that can be thence inferred, is, that some Men are mistaken; and while some Men judge of Religion by their Passions and Interests, and others by the Prejudices of their Education, it is impossible it should be otherwise. But for Men in the Midst of such apparent Causes of Difference, to resolve to be of no Religion till all are agreed in one, is just as wise and as rational as if they should determine not to go to Dinner till all the Clocks in the Town strike Twelve together.

IX. And lastly, Another great Cause of Atheism is the profane and careless Neglect of God's Publick Worship. For Men of Secular Lives, whose Minds are always engaged in this eternal Hurry of worldly Affairs, are too prone to forget God, and all their Concerns in Religion and another World; and even their conversing so much with these sensitive things which are always before them, and are continually crowding in upon their Thoughts, doth naturally indispose them to exercise their Faculties about divine and spiritual Objects, and render their Minds omniâo basèis, unfit and unable to ascend to the Contemplation of God. And therefore God hath appointed the stated Times of Publick Worship, on purpose to withdraw Men from their secular Pursuits, that so they may be at leisure to retire into themselves, to recollect their scatter'd Thoughts, and awake their Minds to a Sense of Piety and Religion; which can by no way so effectually be perform'd as by the Solemnities of Publick Worship, wherein our Remembrance of God is not only refreshed, and our Piety to him excited and directed by the Publick Instructions, but our natural Sense of Religion is also actuated and intended by the mutual Concurrence and Example of each others Devotion. Thus, after our Religion hath been slacken'd by our worldly Cares and Delights, it is duly wound up again by the Returns of our Publick Worship, and so the Sense of God is still kept alive in our Minds. When Men therefore turn their Backs upon the Publick Worship, and devote the holy Seasons of it to their secular Business or Pleasures, it is not to be wonder'd at, that their Sense of a Divine Power, which they seldom or never think of, should by degrees decay decay and wear off; and that that being extinguished, they should sink into Irreligion and Atheism. For when once Men have worn out their Sense of a Deity, and, as the Consequence of that, are broke loose from all the Ties and Obligations of Conscience, they can have no other Principle but Atheism to warrant their Actions; and when once they have abandoned all Sense and Remembrance of God, so that he is not in all their Thoughts, they are in a fair Forwardness to Infidelity. For tho as yet they do not actually disbelieve his Existence, so neither do they actually believe it; for how should they actually believe that which they have no Sense or Thought of? so that in this insensible State their Faith is concerned neither one way nor t'other, nor are they at all solicitous whether there be a God or no. Thus, from their profane neglect of God's Worship, Men naturally slide into an habitual Senselessness and Incoherence of him, and from thence to not believing; and from thence to disbelieving him is an easy and almost necessary Transition.

Of the Truth of which, the Age we live in will furnish us with too many sorrowful Instances. For as this Nation, which hath been always remarked for a grave, serious, and religious Genius, was never so generally tainted with Atheism as now; so neither was it ever chargeable with such a general Neglect of the Publick Worship of God, which for several Ages after the Reformation was duly frequented, and devoutly celebrated, till by the Prevalence of our restless Sects and Factions, the Discipline of the Church was gradually weaken'd, and at last totally destroy'd; in the happy Days before which, the Families of each Parish went hand in hand together to the House of God, and with one Heart and Voice celebrated his Praise and Worship; and to absent one's self ordinarily from the Publick Assemblies, was hardly consistent with the Reputation of being a Christian. By which means their natural Sense and Dread of the Divine Power, being continually awakened and revived, they were not only secured by it from all Atheistical Impressions, but also animated and excited to a pious and sober Conversation. But the Spirit of Schism prevailing against the Power and Discipline of the Church, till it had utterly disabled it from restraining the Wantonness of that crooked and perverse Generation; some incorporated themselves into separate Communion, and others, under pretence of so doing, withdrew from the Publick Assemblies to the common Resorts of Idleness, Drunkenness and Debauchery; and whilst the Masters took the Liberty of Conscience to go to Conventicles, the Servants, pretending to be of a different Persuasion, assumed the Liberty of Will to go to Taverns and Ale-houses; insomuch that it grew a common Observation, that there have been more young People debauch'd on the Lord's Day, than all the Week after, whilst under pretence of joining with a different Communion, they have taken occasion to withdraw themselves from the Inspection of their Parents and Masters. And till once our Schisms and Divisions are cured, it will be impossible to prevent this ill Practice, unless we will be so unjust as to deny that Liberty of Conscience to our Servants, which with so much Clamour and Confidence we demand of our Governors. And thus, by degrees, Profaneness hath insinuated it self under the Covert of Schism, and Liberty of Conscience became a common Sanctuary for the licentious Neglect and Contempt of God's Worship, till at last it grew so common and fashionable, that it almost ceas'd to be scandalous. Yea, so far at length hath this impious Humour prevailed, that to go to Church, and be devout, is among too many Men grown a Note of Disgrace, and the Character of a Priest-ridden Fool; and a Man is hardly look'd upon as fit for genteel Conversation, that knows any other Use of a Holy-day, but only to be at leisure to lie a-bed, or to Game, or Drink, and Debauch; by which Neglect and Contempt of the Worship of God, that natural Sense of him, which should have been quickened and cherished by it, hath been gradually worn out of Mens Minds; the Consequence of which, is all that Atheism and Infidelity that over-spreads this present Age. For when once Men have renounced the Worship of God, and in consequence are abandone of their natural Sense of his Majesty, they are upon the Brink of Atheism, into which their own vile Lusts, whose Interest it is that there should be no God, will easily precipitate them. But alas! how ridiculous as well as impious is it for Men to take Occasion from their own Neglect of God's Worship, to renounce the Belief of his Being? what is this but to tail one Folly to another, and to second Extravagance with Madness? It would make one amazed to think that ever reasonable Beings should be so besotted, as to live in a World over which an Almighty Being presides, who sees all their Actions, and in whose Hands all Events are which concern them, and even the everlasting Fate of their Souls; and yet take no more notice of him, pay no more Respect or Veneration to him, than if he were the meere Trifle, or most insignificant Cypher in the whole Creation. But sure, when Men have been guilty of such a black and horrid Impiety, one would think their wisest Course for the Time to come should be to repent of it, and to endeavour to compensate for their past Profaneness by the Strictness and Sincerity of their future Devotion; but for Men to proceed from neglecting God's Worship to denying his Being, is to do worse because they have done ill, and thereby to inflame the Provocation, as if they were resolved to render their Condition desperate, because they have been so foolhardy as to render it dangerous.

And thus I have given a short Account of the common Causes of Atheism, which, you see, are all derived from Mens Wills, and not from their Reason. For this I do most firmly believe, that the Arguments of God's Existence are so plain and convincing, that no Man ever was or can be an Atheist without some inexcusable Fault in his Will.

S E C T. II.

Of the inexcusable Folly and Unreasonableness of Atheism.

THE next Thing I proposed, was to endeavour to confirm and establish this great Principle of Religion, viz. the Belief of a God, by representing the great Folly and Unreasonableness of Atheism. In discoursing of which, I shall meddle no more than needs must with the Proofs and Arguments of a Deity; because, as I have shew'd before, 'tis not for Want of Arguments that Men turn Atheists, but for Want of Consideration, and an honest Will; and that the Bias that carries them towards Infidelity, is not in their Understandings, but in their Wills and Affections; that 'tis only their Partiality to their Lusts, that inclines them to Atheism; and that the Reason why they are so ready to believe that there is no God, is, because they wish in their Hearts that there were none. To establish the Belief of a God, therefore, I shall endeavour to represent the Folly and Unreasonableness of Mens being partial on the Side of Atheism, supposing it were disputable whether there be a God or no; and this will evidently appear in the following Particulars:

I. The Atheist concludes against the Dignity of human Nature, and renders it not only mean, but ridiculous.

II. He concludes against the very Being and Well-being of human Society.

III. He concludes against that which is the main Support and Comfort of human Life.

IV. He concludes for that Side of the Question which is infinitely the most unsafe and hazardous.

V. He concludes for the unsafest Side of the Question upon the biggest Uncertainties.

VI. He plainly contradicts himself in his Conclusion.

I. The Atheist concludes against the Dignity of human Nature, and thereby renders it not only mean but ridiculous. For the chief Worth and Dignity of human Nature consists in its Relation to God, without whom its noblest and most most excellent Faculties are in a great measure useless and insignificant; for if there be no God, the Objects of our five Senses are the sole Entertainment of our Understanding and Will, and we have no other Use of these mighty Faculties, (which if there were any such Thing as an infinite Truth and Goodness, are naturally capable of enjoying him) but only to consult and choose the Gratifications of our Sense, and the Pleasures of this perishing Body. For, excepting God, there is no such Thing in Nature as a spiritual Enjoyment, no Good to be found, but what is prepar'd to entertain the boundless Liquorishness of our carnal Appetites; and had we none but such as these to consult for, our Reason, which is the Crown and Glory of our Natures, would have nothing else to do but to cater for our Flesh, and we should have an Understanding and Will to no other Purpose, but to enable us to play the Brutes with more Skill and Sagacity. And indeed, setting God aside, we are so far from having the Advantage of Brutes, by being rational, that we are rather so much the more wretched and despicable than they. For, as for the Happiness of this Life, which wholly consists of sensual Good, the Senses and Appetites we have in common with the Beasts that perish, are sufficient for the Enjoyment of it; and with these we might relish it, as well without our Reason as with it: We might eat and drink and sleep, and enjoy all the Pleasures of a Brute with as much Gust and Savour, as we do now with our Reason. For if we were Brutes, we should do as Brutes do; we should weary our selves no longer with vain Pursuits, nor vex our selves with fruitless Expectations, nor torment our selves with the Fears of a Disappointment; but e'en take our Pleasures when our Appetites craved 'em, and they freely offered themselves to our Enjoyment. And tho' our Reason doth sometimes cook the Enjoyments of our Sense, and give them a higher Relish and Luxury, yet this Advantage is very much out-weighed by the many Regrets and Remorses, and stinging Reflections it intermingles with our Pleasures: So that had we only the Faculties of Brutes, I am verily persuaded we should more sincerely enjoy the Happiness of the Brutal Nature, but to be sure we should bear our Miseries with much more Ease and Cheerfulness. For, supposing there is no God, our Reason can afford us no solid Support under any Calamity; the main Arguments of Comfort, as I shall shew by and by, being derived from the Consideration of God and his Providence; which being taken away, I doubt not but we should bear our Miseries without our Reason, much better than with it. For then we should neither be terrified at the Approach of them, nor tormented with Despair under them; then we should neither multiply them with false Opinions, nor enrage them with bitter Reflections on the Causes of them; but whenever they happen, bear them as Beasts do, without any other Pain or Uneasiness than what they necessarily impressed on our Senses, which would render them a thousand times more tolerable to us, than all our Arguments can do, supposing we have no God nor Providence to argue from.

So that were that true which the Atheist concludes for, viz. That there is no God; it would follow, that Reason in a Man serves to no other Purpose, but to render him more wretched and despicable. If there be a God indeed, our rational Faculties are of excellent Use; as having an Object commensurate to their widest Capacities, and every Way fit and worthy to employ and exercise them; an infinite Truth for our Understanding to dive into, and an infinite Good for our Wills and Affections to pursue and embrace. But if there be nothing to be enjoyed by us, but what is carnal and sensual, our Reason is so far from being our Ornament and Perfection, that it is the Plague and Disgrace of our Natures.

For, for any Nature to have more Faculties than what are necessary to its Happiness is monstrous; and therefore had we nothing to enjoy but the Happiness of Brutes, 'twould be a Deformity to our Natures to have the Faculties of Angels; because these Faculties would be in vain, there being no ade- quate Object in the nature of Things to employ and entertain them. So that were the Doctrine of the Atheist true, it would cashier our Reason for a vain and useless Faculty; a Thing that serves our Nature to little other purpose, but only to vex and disquiet it. And what Man, that hath any Regard or Reverence for himself, would ever be fond of a Belief that thus sinks and depreciates him, and lays the Glory of his Nature in the Dust? For if it be true that there is no God, it is as true that Man is a most despicable Creature, that his Reason, upon which he so much values himself, is a frivolous and impertinent Faculty; a Faculty that can serve him to no higher Purpose than only to be a Cook and a Tailor to his Body, to study Sauces and Fashions for it; and that while it serves him in this, disserves him in a thousand other Instances, in mingling his Pleasures with Gall and Wormwood, with Fears and Impatiencies, Anxieties and Remorses, and in aggravating and putting Stings into his Griefs and Calamities. So that when all is done, the only thing that makes it worth the while for a Man to be reasonable is, that there is a Being of infinite Perfection to be known, and loved, and imitated, and adored by him; and to deny the Existence of this blessed Being, is infinitely to undervalue our selves, and to eclipse the Glory and Dignity of our Natures. So that by being partial to Atheism, we are partial to our own Shame and Disgrace, and industriously consult the Reproach and Infamy of human Nature; for the Devil himself cannot affix a blacker Scandal on our Reason, than what is implied in this Assertion, That there is no God.

And as it lays the greatest Reproach upon our Nature, so it also renders us the most ridiculous of all Beings. For there are certain Affections interwoven with human Nature, which, if there be no God, are shamefully ridiculous; such as the Dread of invisible Powers, the Sense of Good and Evil, and the anxious Expectation of a Judgment to come; all which are so deeply inlaid in our Beings, as that with all our Arts and Reasoning we cannot totally erase them. And even the Atheists themselves, who have tried all possible Ways of extinguishing them, have found by Experience that the utmost they can do, is to damp and stupidify them at present; but that in despite of them they will revive and awake again when Death or Danger approaches them. Now, how ridiculous are these Affections in human Nature, if there be no such Being as a God? For upon this Supposal, we have Passions that have no Objects in the Nature of Things, that have nothing in the World to move and affect them, but wild Chimera's, flying Dragons, and Castles in the Air; and whereas all other Beings have real Objects in Nature corresponding to their several Instincts and Affections, (For so the Hare hath a natural Dread of a Dog, the Sheep of a Wolf, the Mouse of a Cat, the Toad of a Spider, all the Objects of which Dread have a real Existence) poor silly Man, supposing there is no God, naturally trembles at an invisible Nothing, and is horribly afraid of the Shadow of an Imagination. So that if the Atheist's Opinion were true, the Ape that looks pale at the Sight of a Snail, and flies as if he feared lest that slow Creature should overtake and devour him, would be a great deal less ridiculous than timorous Man, whose Nature is thus hagg'd with frightful Imaginations of invisible Powers and a Judgment to come.

And what Man that hath any Reverence for the human Nature within him, would ever suffer himself to be bribed for an Opinion that doth not only undervalue, but deride and ridicule it. Should you hear your self branded with a contemptible Character, or ranked among Apes or any such ridiculous Animals, you would doubtless be so far from courting the Author of it, that you would resent it as a great Affront, and think your selves obliged in Honour to return the Provocation; and yet for the sake of a few base Lusts, which are the Shame and Scandal of your Natures, you espouse the Cause of Atheism, tho it derides and affronts you to your Face, and stains the Glory of your Natures with the most contemptible and ridiculous Character in the World.

II. The Atheist concludes against the very Being and Well-being of human Society. For the Soul, that penetrates thro' all human Society, and compact's and unites it in a regular Body, is Religion, or the Sense and Acknowledgment of a Divine Power, without which all the Parts of the Corporation of Mankind, like the Members of a dead Body, must necessarily disband and fly abroad into Atoms. For a form'd Society, which is an united Multitude, consists in the Harmony, and Consent of its Members mutually united by Laws and Agreements, and disposed into a regular Subordination to one another, neither of which can any human Society long continue, without the Belief and Acknowledgment of a God.

For without this, in the first place, 'tis impossible that the Parts of any Society should continue united by Laws and Agreement. For 'tis from the Belief of a God, that all the Obligations of Conscience are derived; so that take away that, and these must dissolve; and when the Obligations of Conscience are dissolved, there is nothing but Mens temporal Interests can oblige them to conform to those Laws and mutual Agreements, by which they are united to one another. And if it be their Interest only that obliges them to be just and faithful to their mutual Agreements, they will be equally obliged to be unjust and unfaithful, whenever it is their Interest to be so. So that this Principle, which only obliges them to be honest, while it is for their Advantage, will as effectually oblige them to be Knaves whenever the Case is altered; and Things being reduced to this Issue, there remains no Foundation of Trust and mutual Confidence among Men. For what can any Man's Promise signify, if he be under no Obligation but Interest? To be sure, if it be for his Interest, he will do what he says without any Promise; but if it be not, what Promise can oblige him? You will say, It is his Interest to keep his Word, because otherwise he will forfeit his Reputation for the future: But pray what Reputation can a Man have to forfeit, that owns no other Law or Obligation but his Interest? Or who will ever presume upon that Man's Word and Engagement, whose avowed Principle it is to be honest no longer than he can gain by it? Thus Atheism, you see, resolves all our Obligations into our worldly Interest, which is so fickle and mutable a Principle, so dependent upon Chance and the Inconstancies of Fortune, that there is no hold to be taken of those that are governed by it. For that which is their Interest to Day, may be their Disadvantage to Morrow; and if it should so happen, they must steer a contrary Course, or else act contrary to their leading Principle. So that for Men to trust each other upon this fickle Principle, is all one as to rely upon the Constancy of a Weathercock, which every contrary Wind turns to a contrary Position. And Things being once reduced to this Issue, that Men can place no Trust or Confidence in one another, their Society will soon become their greatest Plague and Vexation. For every Man will be forced to stand upon his Guard against every Man, and keep himself reserved and retired within himself; till at last, out of mutual Distrust and Jealousy of one another, they are forced to withdraw their Society, and to live apart in separate Dens for Fear of being intrapped and devoured by each other.

And as Atheism cuts in sunder those Ligaments of mutual Trust and Agreement by which the Parts of human Society are united; so it also dissolves that regular Subordination that is between them. Plutarch observes, in his Treatise against Colotes; Πόλις ἂν μοι δοκῇ μᾶλλον ἑδῆρας ᾗ εἶναι, ἢ πολιτεία τὴν ἀπὸ Θεῶν δέξασθαι ἀναγκασμένην παντάπασιν, οὕτωςαν λαβῆναι, ἢ λαβῶσα τηρήσασθαι i. e. It seems to me more possible for a City to stand without Ground, than for a Commonwealth to subsist and continue without the Belief of a God; which is indeed the only firm Foundation whereupon all Government and Society depends. For if there be no God, what should oblige any to own any Superior, or pay any Submission? And if his Interest be his only Obligation to his Superiors, whenever he can mend his Fortune by Rebelling against them, that very same Interest which at present restrains him from it, will with equal Force invite him to it; nor will it signify any thing that we are obliged to the contrary by Oaths of Fidelity and Allegiance: For if it be our Interest to be faithful to the Government, our own Prudence and Discretion will oblige us to it, without such Oaths as well as with them; but if it be not our Interest, and this be the only Principle that obliges us, no Oath or Engagement can hold us. So that in this State of Things, all the Security that Governors can have of their Subjects, is, that they will not rebel when they are not able; but as soon as they think it safe, to be sure they will think it lawful; which being once admitted, will undermine the very Foundations of Government, and utterly dissolve that regular Subordination, by which human Society is supported. Whereas admitting that the Laws of our Prince are bound upon us, by the Authority of a Sovereign Lord who can render us eternally happy or miserable, we are obliged to obey him by all that we can hope or fear, and have all the Engagements to Loyalty that the Reflections on a happy or miserable Eternity can lay upon us. What a prodigious Folly is it therefore for Men to embrace Atheism as their Interest, which doth thus directly tend to deprive us of all the Comforts of Society, by involving us in eternal Confusions and Disorders? For if once we take away mutual Trust, and Government from the World, both which have a necessary Dependence on the Belief of a God, we break all the Harmony of human Society, and convert it into a Commonwealth of Cannibals. And what Man in his Wits would ever be fond of an Opinion, that proclaims open War with Mankind, and is pregnant with Consequents so fatal and destructive to the World? Can we think it more advantageous to us that Atheism should be true, than that human Society should be upheld and perpetuated? Or are the Pleasures we reap from the Lusts which incline us to Atheism, comparably so valuable as the Benefits which accrue to us from being formed and united into regular Corporations? If not how apparently do we engage against our own Interest, when we espouse the Cause of Irreligion?

III. The Atheist concludes against that which is the main Support and Comfort of human Life. For while we are in this World, our best and securest Condition is exposed to a World of sad and uncomfortable Accidents, which we have neither the Wisdom to foresee, nor the Power to prevent: So far are we from being self-sufficient as to our worldly Happiness, that there are a thousand Causes upon which we depend for it, that are not in our Power to dispose of; and in a such a State of Uncertainty, wherein we are continually bandied to and fro, and made the Game of Inconstant Fortune, what Quiet or Security can we enjoy within our selves without believing that there is a God at the Helm, that steadily over-rules all Events that concern us, and steers and directs them by the invariable Compass of his own infinite Wisdom and Goodness. For considering how poor and indigent our Nature is, how we are fain to seek abroad, and to go a begging from door to door for our Happiness; how we depend upon Chance, and are secure of nothing we possess, or desire, or hope for; how prone we are to be alarmed with the Prospect of a sad Futurity, and to magnify distant Evils in our own Apprehensions; how apt we are to aggravate our Miseries by our Impatience and Despair, and to pall our Enjoyments by expecting more from them than their Natures will afford; considering these Things, I say, which Way can we turn ourselves without a God? or where can we repose our restless Thoughts but in his Providence? Verily, could I be tempted to believe that there is no God, I should look upon human Nature in its present Circumstances as the most forlorn and abandoned Part of the Creation, and wish that I had had the Luck to be of any other Species than that of a Rational Animal. For in the State I am, I find my self liable to a thousand Dangers against which I have no Sanctuary, and under which I have no Support, if there be no God to govern the World; and having such a dismal Prospect of Things before me, and a busy Mind within me that will be continually working on, and aggravating the Evils of it, what can I do with my self, or how can I enjoy my self without a God to rely on? Upon the Supposal that he is, and that he governs the World, I can easily relieve my self under the most dismal Apprehensions; I can fairly conclude, and safely depend on it, that if I take care, by my Submission to God's Will, to make him my Friend, he will either prevent the Evils I apprehend, or support me under them, or convert them to my Good, either of which is sufficient to set my Heart at Ease, and instate me in a quiet Enjoyment of my self. But now by giving up the Belief of a God, I throw away all these Considerations, and leave my self utterly destitute and supportless. For what solid Ground of Support can I have, when I have no Manner of Security, either that the Evils I dread shall be prevented, or that I shall have a proportionable Strength to bear them, or that I shall ever reap any Good or Advantage from them; without which Considerations, every Evil that threatens or befalls me is pure unmingled Misery, against which there is no Fence or Cordial in Reason or Philosophy. For suppose I should argue with the antient Moralists, that every ill Accident that befalls me is fatal, as being the Effect of some necessary Cause that is without my Power or Disposal, and therefore 'tis unreasonable for me to grieve at it: This will be so far from any way mollifying the Anguish of my Mind, that 'twill rather enrage and inflame it. For that my Calamity is fatal, so that it is not in my Power to avoid or remove it, is rather an Aggravation than a Diminution of it. Or suppose I should reason as the same Moralists otherwhiles do, Why should I grieve at the Evils that befall me, when, alas! my Grief will be so far from lessening them, that 'twill rather increase and multiply them, contribute new Venom to their Stings, and render them more pungent and dolorous? What a faint Cordial would it be to my oppressed Mind, to consider that my Grief will but augment my Load? It is some Ease to a dejected Soul to vent its Grievings in Moans and Lamentations, which whilst she seeks to smother in a sullen Silence, like imprisoned Wind, will breed a Cholick in her Bowels? and is it not a sad Thing that I must deny my self the only Solace of a miserable Man, for Fear of augmenting my Misery? Again, Suppose I should reason thus with the same Authors, That Afflictions are indifferent Things, and in themselves neither good nor evil, but indifferently improveable into Mischiefs or Benefits; this I confess were a good Argument, supposing that the Affliction came from a good God, who can extract Good out of all our Evils, and render the rankest Poison Medicinal; but otherwise you will find 'tis but a cold Comfort to call your Misery by another Name: For, if there be no God to temper our Evils, and to ordain and direct them to wise and good Ends, we shall find in the Issue they will prove themselves Evils to us, by what soft Name soever we may call them. Again, and to name no more, Suppose I should reason thus, as those Masters of Morality do, That to bear Afflictions with an unconcerned Mind, is brave, and manly, and generous; that it is an Argument of a great and heroick Mind, that hath raised it self above the Reach of Misfortunes: I readily confess so it is, supposing a Man hath good Reason thus to bear his Afflictions, which is the Question in Debate, for then it is the Triumph of Reason over Passion, and an illustrious Instance of a well-fortified Mind; but if we have no Reason for it, all these glorious Words, Generous, Brave, &c. are nothing but empty Flash, and mere Rhodomontado. For, for a Man to be unconcern'd with Evils without Reason, is so far from being generous and brave, that 'tis an Argument of his brutal Stupidity and Fool-hardiness. But yet, supposing that there is no God, these are the main Arguments we have to support ourselves under any Calamity. But, alas! such real Grievings of ours are not to be redress'd with pretty Sayings, and grave Sentences, which, tho they may look takingly at a Distance, will, when we come to apply and experience them, force us to pronounce as Job did of his Friends, Miserable Comforters are ye all, and Physicians of no Value. So that were we left destitute of God and a Providence, and of all those blessed Supports we derive from thence, we were of all Creatures the most miserable. For in this State of Things we are compassed about with Miseries and Misfortunes, and which, without God, is our greatest Misfortune, we have a thing called called Reason within our Breast, which is very ingenious in giving Stings to our Miseries, and vexing us with cutting Reflections on them, but is not able to qualify one Grief, or minister one Dram of solid Comfort to us.

But when we lift up our Eyes to God, there are such vast and innumerable Comforts flowing down to us from the Consideration of his Nature, and Providence, as are sufficient not only to allay our Sorrows, but to convert them into Joys and Triumphs. For in him we behold not only an infinite Wisdom that always knows what is best for us, but also an infinite Goodness that always wills what it knows to be so, and an infinite Power that always does what it wills; and whilst we see and consider this, there is nothing in the World can happen amiss to us; welcome Pain, welcome Pleasure, welcome Loss, welcome Gain, welcome Disgrace, welcome Honour; for if we have but God our Friend, we may securely depend upon it, that whatever befalls us is best for us.

Who but a Mad-man therefore would ever espouse the Cause of Atheism, or make it his Interest to exclude God out of the World? Indeed, were he an envious, malicious, or tyrannical Being, that repined at the Happiness of his Creatures, and watched all Opportunities to plague or destroy them, 'twere but reasonable we should endeavour to quit our Minds of the Belief of him; but to imagine it our Interest to believe there is no such Being in the World as a good God, that out of the immense Benignity of his Nature, espouses our Interest, and takes care of our Happiness; that understands our Wants, and compassionates our Sufferings, and is able and willing to support and relieve us; that requires nothing of us but what is for our Good, and will infinitely reward us for doing that which is best for our selves; that connives at our Follies, and pities our Infirmities, and upon our unfeigned Repentance is ready to be reconciled to us, even when we wilfully and presumptuously provoke him; to imagine it, I say, our Interest to shake off the Belief of such a blessed Being as this, is the utmost height of Folly and Madness. For 'twere doubtless, a thousand times more tolerable for Men that the Sun should be pulled down from the Firmament, and all the Lights of Heaven extinguished, than that the Belief of a God should be banish'd from the World, the Absence of which would overspread Mankind with such a dismal Night of Horror and Despair, and Blackness of Darkness, as would render all wise and considering Men weary of their Beings, and cause them to wish a thousand times over, as for the utmost Good they could devise for themselves, Oh that there were such a Being as a God at the Helm of the World, that so the Affairs of it might be steered by an infinite Power, that is always directed by an infinite Wisdom, and always bias'd and inclined by an infinite Goodness! What then can be more brutish or irrational, than for the sake of a few base Lusts, that are the Scandal of our Nature, the Bane of our Society, the Vexation of our Lives, and the Disturbance of all our Happiness, to banish the Belief of a God from our Minds, which is the Foundation of our Hope, and the only Support we can rationally depend on.

IV. The Atheist concludes for that Side of the Question which is infinitely the most unsafe and hazardous. He who believes there is a God, and acts accordingly, runs a very small and inconsiderable Venture, if in the Issue of Things he should chance to be mistaken; he only ventures the dissatisfying a few extravagant Lusts, the crossing some irregular Inclinations of his Nature, which if he had gratified, would have vexed and tormented him, and entangled his Life with a thousand ill Circumstances; he only ventures some Prayers and Tears, some Watchings, and Strugglings, and Contentions with himself, and perhaps some Reproaches and Persecutions for Righteousness sake, in exchange for which he hath commonly a healthful, and a prosperous, an even, safe, and contented Life, a quiet and a triumphant Conscience, and a joyous Expectation of a blissful Eternity to come, which do out-weigh all the Incommodities he ventures, all the Pains he undergoes, and all the Pleasures of which he debars himself; and if in the Conclusion, when he resigns up his Breath, it appears that there is neither God, nor Heaven, nor Hell, his Condition will be altogether as good as the the Atheists, with whom he will sleep quietly in the same Dust, under the same everlasting Insensibility.

But, on the contrary, the Atheist, by believing that there is no God, and acting accordingly, runs the most desperate Hazard in the World. For besides that he throws away the main Support and Comfort of his Life, and lays himself open to all Contingencies, and resigns up the Satisfaction of a good Conscience, together with the Hope of a blessed Futurity, and all the innumerable Joys it abounds with; besides all which, I say, he ventures to be eternally wretched and miserable in the World to come, and exposes himself naked and defenseless to the unquenchable Wrath of an everliving God; in exchange for all which, he hath no other present Compensation, but the Pleasures of a riotous and tumultuary Life, which do always die away in the Enjoyment, and are generally dash'd and sophisticated with a thousand very sad and uncomfortable Circumstances. And then if, when he concludes this present Scene of Life, he should find himself mistaken in his Atheistical Confidence, and be unexpectedly summoned to the Tribunal of that God, whose Being and Authority he hath so peremptorily denied and affronted, and from thence be transmitted into a dismal Eternity, there, to languish out an everlasting Existence in remediless Woes, and unpitied Lamentations; how would it astonish and confound him to find his confident Infidelity baffled by such a woful Experiment, when instead of being asleep in a State of Silence and Insensibility, which was the thing he depended on, he shall find himself wasted to a strange Shore, and there landed among Devils and miserable Spirits, in a State of endless, easeless, and remediless Calamity! How blank and forlorn will the Fool look, to find himself thus fatally mistaken? and yet, for all he knows, this may be the Result and Issue of Things. So that 'tis a very small Hazard, you see, that good Men run, compared with that of the Atheists; for should they be mistaken, their Condition will be as good as his at the winding up of the Bottom; but if they should not, it will be infinitely better.

It is storied of a certain Hermit, who being retired from the World, led a very severe and mortify'd Life, that being one Day met by two Cardinals, who were riding by with a very pompous Equipage, was thus accosted by them; Father, why should you thus mortify and macerate your self, by retiring from the Glories and Pleasures of this Life? Suppose now that after all your Religious Severities, there should be neither a God, nor a future World to reward you, would it not be egregious Folly in you thus to throw away present Enjoyments for future Nothings? To which the good Man presently return'd this Answer: But, Sirs, suppose there should be a God, and a future World to punish you, would it not be egregious Folly in you, to run such a desperate Venture as you do, of being everlastingly miserable for the sake of a few momentary Honours and Advancements? Upon which, as the Story saith, the Cardinals being convinced, went away very pensive. And herein, doubtless, the honest Hermit was very much in the right. For were it a Moot-Point whether there be a God or no, one would think it a Matter of such unspeakable Moment, and where the Hazard on each Side is so infinitely unequal, there is no Man in his Wits but would choose the safest Side, and make that his Rule and Principle to live by. In this therefore the Atheist is justly chargeable with the most desperate Folly, that whereas at least he might be safe, if not eternally happy, by believing that there is a God, and acting accordingly, he rather chooses to venture being eternally miserable, by believing there is none, and acting as if there were none. In short, this is the plain State of the Case, if I believe that God is, and act consonantly, I shall be safe if he be not, and eternally happy if he be; whereas, if I believe that he is not, I am sure to be miserable for ever if he be, and am only safe from being miserable for ever if he be not; and this being the Case, I leave any Man to judge which of the two is in Prudence more eligible, the Peradventure of being happy for ever, or of being miserable for ever, supposing both to be equally probable. But,

V. The Atheist concludes for the unsafest Side of the Question upon the greatest Uncertainties in the World. One would think, before a Man assented to a Conclusion, the Consequence of which, if he should be mistaken, will be for ever fatal to him, he should be so wise at least as to look before he leap, and satisfy himself of the Grounds he concludes on, and not to give up his Assent upon every doubtful and uncertain Appearance. Now that Part of the Question which the Atheist assents to, is of such mighty Consequence, as that should it prove false, he is lost for ever; and therefore, one would think it concern'd him to be very sure of his Hand, and take care that his Assent be founded upon very strong and undeniable Evidence, instead of which he assents at a Venture, and grounds his Belief upon the most sandy Foundations. For,

I. He concludes for a pure Negative.

II. He concludes for it upon a bare Possibility.

III. He concludes for it, against the best Evidence that the contrary will admit.

I. He concludes for a pure Negative. All Men are agreed, that 'tis a very hard Thing to prove a Negative; but to prove a pure Negative is impossible, unless the Existence of the Thing which it denies implies an express Contradiction. 'Tis true, where a Thing visibly exists, so that we can perceive as well how it doth not exist, as how it doth, we may with as good Evidence deny as affirm; but as for pure Negatives, which deny the very Existence of such Things as may possibly exist, it is impossible to be certain of them without an infinite Understanding. For before we can be sure, that what is not in our Understanding is not in Nature, we must be sure, that whatsoever is in Nature is in our Understanding; otherwise a thousand Things may be, tho we do not understand them. As for Instance, unless I were sure that I had the perfect Map or Geography of such a Country in my Head, it is impossible I should be sure that there is no such Town, or City, or Region belonging thereunto; and so, unless I were sure that the Cosmography or universal Map of Nature were perfectly delineated on my Understanding, I cannot positively affirm, that such or such a Being doth not actually exist. So, that, as a great Divine of our own hath well observed upon this very Argument, after all that can be said against a Thing this will still be true, that many Things possibly are which we know not of, and that many Things more may be than are. For unless our Understanding were extended to the whole Compass of Nature, there may be, for all we know, ten thousand Things in Nature, which are not in our Understanding. So that concerning pure Negatives we can never be certain, unless the Things which they deny be absolutely impossible, and imply, in the very Notion of their Existence, a plain Contradiction; which cannot be said of the Existence of God. For by God, we mean nothing but a Being endow'd with all possible Perfections; and to say that it is impossible, that there should be any such Being as is endow'd with all the Perfections that 'tis possible for a Being to be endow'd with, is to assert Possibilities impossible, which is a Contradiction in Terms. Since therefore this Negative that there is no God, denies that which is possible in its Nature, and which implies not the least Shadow of Contradiction, it is impossible, supposing it were true, for any finite Understanding to be certain of it. What Man in his Wits then would ever presume to deny the Being of a God, and to stake his everlasting Fate on it, when he knows before-hand that he cannot be sure, that his Denial is true, and that if it prove false he is lost for ever! Alas! what is this but to throw Dice for our Souls, and to venture our Salvation on a wild Uncertainty.

II. The Atheist concludes for a pure Negative upon a bare Possibility. One would think, in a Matter of such infinite Moment, Men should at least be so wise as not to conclude without strong Probabilities, where they can find no Certainty to rely on; but so desperately fool-hardy is the Atheist, as to suspend his Faith, and with that his Salvation, upon the bare Possibility that there may be no

God.

God. For when he is urged with those Arguments of God's Being, that are drawn from the beautiful Contrivance of the World, he hath no other Way to evade them, but by endeavouring to demonstrate how by the necessary Laws of Matter and Motion, Things might possibly be shuffled together as they are, without the Agency and Direction of a God; and yet even in this Attempt so many inextricable Difficulties present themselves as have puzzled and confounded the acuteſt Wits that were ever engaged in it; and while with all their Art and Contrivance they have been framing their Hypotheſis of the Exiſtence of this World without a God, they have been forced not only to beg ſome Principles, but alſo to aſſert others that upon Examination have been found repugnant to the Nature of Things; and when all is done, if both were true, yet are they altogether inſufficient to ſolve a thouſand Phænomena in Nature. So that the utmoſt that the moſt learned and inquiſitive Atheiſt could ever pretend to, was to advance Atheiſm to a grand Perhaps; and by endeavouring to demonſtrate how Things might poſſibly be as they are without a God, to prove that 'tis poſſible there is none: And yet when all is done, their moſt ingenious Endeavours are only a Demonſtration that the moſt acute and witty Men may be miſtaken. For what a hopeleſs kind of Task is it to ſhew how that may be the Effect of a blind Chance or Necceſſity, which hath all the Characters of a wiſe Deſign and Contrivance fairly imprinted on it? How is it poſſible for an undeſigning Chance to fit Means to Ends, or Ends to Natures? Or ſo to proportion Parts to one another, as to make a comely Symmetry in the whole, and this in ten thouſand Inſtances, and not fail in one? How often, as the above-named Author from Tully diſcourſes, might a Man after he hath ſhaken together a Set of Letters in a Bag, ſling them out upon the Ground, before they would fall into an exact Poem, or make a good Diſcourſe in Proſe? And may not a little Book be as eaſily made by Chance, as the great Volume of the World, in which there is ſuch an inexhauſtible Treasuſe of rich Senſe and Contrivance? Or how long might a Man be in ſprinkling Colours upon a Canvas with a careleſs Hand, before they would happen to fall into the exact Picture of a Man? And is a Man eaſier made by Chance than his Piſture? Why may we not as well conceive the moſt regular Building in the World to be framed by a caſual Courſe of Stone and Iron and Timber, as that theſe blind and rambling Parts of Matter ſhould chance to place themſelves ſo orderly in the World, and to obſerve ſuch an exact Harmony and Decorum, as if they kept Time with the Muſical Laws of ſome Almighty Mind that compoſed their Meaſures, and regulated their Motions up and down in the Univerſe.

But granting the Atheiſt what he ſo eagerly tho unſucceſſfully contends for, that it is poſſible all this might happen by mere Chance, and conſequently that there may be no God in the World; would any Man in his Wits found his Faith upon a mere Poſſibility, when 'twill be as much as his Soul is worth, if he ſhould happen to be miſtaken? It is poſſible, that ſhould he throw himſelf from the Top of a high Steeple, the Air between may be ſo condenſed as to bear him up and preſerve him from being daſh'd in Pieces by his Fall; but would you not think the Man ſtark mad that ſhould venture his Neck upon that Poſſibility? And yet it is a far more deſperate Venture that the Atheiſt makes by thus hazarding his Soul to everlaſting Deſtruction, upon a bare Poſſibility that there may be no God to deſtroy him.

III. The Atheiſt concludes againſt the beſt Evidence that the contrary will admit. For that there is a God, we have as full Evidence as the Matter could bear if there were one, and to require more is abſurd and unreaſonable. For let us at preſent ſuppoſe, but for Argument-ſake, that there were ſuch an infinite Spirit in the World; a Spirit that were as wiſe, and as good, and as powerful as he whom we call God is ſuppoſed to be; ſuppoſing, I ſay, there were ſuch a Spirit actually exiſting, we could not have greater Evidence of it than we have already that he actually exiſts. For we could not ſee him with our Eyes, becauſe we ſuppoſe him to be a Spirit; we could not demonſtrate his Exiſtence à priori, or from any Cause, because being the First Cause he must be uncaused or Self-originated. It remains therefore, that the only Demonstration we could give of his Being, is that which we call à posteriori, or from such sensible Effects as can only be ascribed to the Power and Wisdom and Goodness of such a Being; and of such Effects as these we have infinite Instances before us. For in sum, we have all this visible World about us, whose changeable Nature demonstrates it to be the Effect of some Superior Cause, and whose unspeakable Vastness, Beauty, and Contrivance argue it to be the Effect of some most wise and good and powerful Cause. For as to the first, whatsoever is changeable cannot self-exist, but must necessarily proceed from some superior Cause; because whatsoever self-exists is necessarily, and whatsoever is necessarily is always the same; that which is without any cause, cannot but be; and that which is thus or thus without any Cause, cannot but be so or so for ever. And consequently, if the World were of it self without any Cause, it would not only be necessarily, but also be such as it is necessarily and unchangeably; but contrariwise we plainly perceive that it runs a perpetual Course of Change and Alteration, that its Parts are continually altering their Figure, and shifting their Places with one another, whereas if this Part were of it self necessarily, as it must be if the Whole be so, it would necessarily be where it is and what it is eternally.

And since the Mutability of this World argues it to be the Effect of some superior Cause, I would fain know whether considering the Vastness, and Beauty, and Contrivance of it, it be not most reasonable to attribute it to such an all-good, all-wise, and almighty Cause as we suppose God to be. For what less than an infinite Power can bear a due Proportion to such a vast and immense World? Should you enter into a vast and magnificent Palace, and find no Creature in it but a company of Mice or Weasels, could you possibly believe that these impotent Vermin built it? And yet the Building of the most royal Palace doth not so much exceed the Power of these weak Animals, as the Building of this World doth the Power of any Cause but a God. But then if we consider the infinite Number of Beings in the World that are capable of Happiness, and the vast Provisions that are made to entertain them according to their several Capacities, we cannot but thence conclude, that the Power which made them was acted by an infinite Goodness. Lastly, if we consider the rare and admirable Contrivance of the several Parts of the World; how perfect each one is in its Kind, how exactly fitted to each other, and what a lovely Symmetry and Proportion they all make in the Whole; how can we otherwise imagine, but that That Power and Goodness which caused it was directed by an infinite Wisdom? So that the World is such an Effect as openly proclaims its Cause to be a God, and if this Evidence of God's Existence will not convince Men, they are impregnablely fortified against all Conviction; and if God should carry them into those infinite Spaces that are beyond the Limits of this World, and there command a New One into Being, while they stood looking on, and saw it springing out of nothing, they might with as good Reason conclude that World to be nothing but a fortuitous Concourse of insensible Parts of Matter, as they now do that this is so. So that, in fine, he that denies God after all these Demonstrations which he hath given of himself, is out of the reach of Argument, and if he pursue his own Principles, can never be convinced by any possible Reasons. And what a desperate Folly is it for Men to embrace a Belief, which, should they be mistaken, draws after it everlasting Ruin, when they have all the Reasons to the contrary that the Matter is capable of? What is this but to shut their Eyes, and cast themselves blindfold on their own Destruction, and to resolve to wink hard, and believe against all possible Reason, that so they may ruin themselves without any Interruption?

VI. And lastly, The Atheist plainly contradicts himself in his own Conclusion. For by denying that God is, he necessarily denies the Possibility of his Being. For if he be not, it is impossible he should ever be; because Eternity of Being is included in the Notion of him. For when we speak of God, we mean by him a Being that is before all Causes, and the Cause of all Causes; and that therefore oweth not his Being to any prior Cause but doth necessarily, independently, and eternally exist. So that if he be not now, he cannot be at all, because he must begin to be, which is contradictory to the very essential Notion and Idea of him. For if he should ever begin to be, he cannot be Eternal; and if he be not Eternal, he cannot be God. So that to say God is not, is by necessary Consequence to say he cannot be at all; and yet by a God, we mean at the same time a Being that is endowed with all the possible Perfections that a Being is capable of. Wherefore as by saying that God is not, we do by Consequence assert that it is impossible he should ever be; so by asserting that it is impossible he should ever be, we do in effect assert this gross Contradiction, That it is impossible such a Being should ever be, as includes all the Perfections that are possible to a Being. Thus in the same Breath we pronounce that God can and cannot be, that 'tis possible he is, and yet impossible he should ever be. For by saying that he is a Being endowed with all the possible Perfections of Being, we expressly affirm that it is possible he may be; but by saying that there is no such Being actually existing, we do as expressly assert that it is impossible he should ever be. He therefore who asserts that God is not, doth by necessary Consequence assert this express Contradiction, that it is impossible there should ever be a Being as perfect as it is possible. And when, if there be a God, Mens eternal Fate depends but upon believing that he is, and acting accordingly, what a monstrous Folly is it for Men to contradict themselves to deny him? What is this but to stake their Souls upon it, that the very first Principle of Reasoning is false, and put their Fate upon this desperate Issue, that unless both Parts of a Contradiction prove true, they must inevitably perish for ever?

And now having shewn you from what malignant Causes Atheism springs, and how desperately foolish and unreasonable it is in self, let us all endeavour, by the serious Consideration of what hath been said, to fortify our Minds against it. And since this Proposition, That God is, is the prime Foundation of all Religion, it concerns us all to use our utmost Diligence to establish our Minds in the firm and stedfast Belief of it; and this we cannot fail to do, if we heartily endeavour it. For the Arguments of God's Being do shine all round about us with such a clear and convincing Light, that we need do no more, than just open our Eyes to see it, and dispel those mischievous Causes from our Wills, that hide and obscure it from our Understandings. And when once we have thorowly settled the Belief of God's Being in our Minds, it will mightily influence all our Powers of Action; it will invite our Hope, and alarm our Fear, and address to every Passion in us that is capable of Persuasion, and be an ever-living Spring of Religion within us. For God is an Object so infinitely great in himself, and of such infinite Moment and Concernment to us, that 'tis next to impossible we should firmly believe that he is, without being vigorously impress'd with religious Affections upon the Consideration of his Being.

C H A P. IV.

Of the Necessity of acknowledging the Divine Providence, to oblige us to be truly Religious.

THE main Influence which the Belief of a God hath upon the Minds of Men, proceeds immediately from the Belief of his Providence, without which we are no way concerned or interested in him. For a God without a Providence is a solitary kind of Being that lives alone from the World, altogether retired within himself, and never looks abroad, or any ways intermeddles with any thing without : and what have we to do with a Being that hath nothing to do with us or our Affairs, but lives apart from us in some inaccessible Retirement, where neither we can go to him, nor he come to us? So that it is by his Providence that all Correspondence and Intercourse between God and his Creatures is maintained ; which being taken away, he is as nothing to us, and we are as nothing to him. For what doth it signify to us that there is a certain excellent Being called God, sitting on the Top of the Heavens with his Arms folded in his Bosom, and who doth nothing there but enjoy himself in a quiet Contemplation of his own Perfections, without regarding any thing without him, or doing either good or hurt to the World? Such a God is nothing but a great Cypher in the World, that only makes a glorious Flourish, but is as insignificant as no God at all. For to what Purpose should we pray to a God that is not at leisure to bear us, or hope in a God that is not concerned to help us? What should move us to love a God that bestows no Good, or to fear a God that inflicts no Evil, or to obey a God that hath no Regard of our Actions? Why should we thank him, if we receive nothing from him? For what should we praise him, if he be no ways beneficial to the World? And wherein should we imitate him if he sits still and doth nothing, and exercises neither Wisdom, nor Goodness, nor Justice, nor Mercy towards any thing without him? All which Perfections of the Deity without a Providence are utterly void and useless. For his Providence is the great Sphere of Activity wherein he exercises and displays his Perfections, wherein his Power executes the Contrivances of his Wisdom, and his Wisdom contrives the Methods of his Goodness ; so that without his Providence all his Perfections will signify nothing. For what doth that Wisdom signify that contrives nothing? Or that Power which doth nothing? Or that Goodness that is good for nothing? Or that Justice which distributes nothing? And yet just such Cyphers are all the Perfections of God, supposing there is no Providence wherein to employ and exercise them. And if once we vacate and extinguish these Perfections of God, which are the Graces which render him so sublime and adorable, what Reason can move us to adore and worship him? For why should we concern our selves with a God who concerns himself with no Body, and that either hath neither Power, nor Wisdom, nor Goodness, or, which is the same to us, makes no Use of them? So that the Denial of God's Providence, you see, directly cuts in fun- der all the Ties of Religion, by rendring him an insignificant Being to the World.

In the Prosecution of this Argument, I shall shew, First, What of the Divine Providence it is that is necessary to be believed, in order to our being truly Religious. Secondly, What Evidence there is to create in us this Belief. Thirdly, The Insufficiency and Unreasonableness of the common Pretences to Infidelity in this Matter.

S E C T. I.

What is it we are to believe of the Divine Providence.

IN General, it is not sufficient that we believe this or that Part or Branch of it, but we must acknowledge the Whole; every Part, whereof the Whole consists, being pregnant with very powerful Obligations to Religion. Now the Whole of Providence consists in God's continual Conservation, Possession, Inspection, and Disposal of all Things, and Government of the Rational World. So that the Whole of it includes these Five Parts or Branches.

I. God's continual Conservation of all things.

II. His continual Possession of all things.

III. His continual Inspection of all things.

IV. His continual Ordering and Disposal of all things.

V. His continual Government of the Rational World. All which, as I shall shew, are highly necessary to be believed in order to our being truly Religious.

I. To oblige us to be truly Religious, it is necessary we should believe that God continually upholds and conserves all things. That he alone is the great Atlas, on whose Almighty Shoulders the whole Frame of things depends. For tho the Works of human Art do often stand many Ages after the Workman's Hand is withdrawn from 'em, yet the Reason is because there is Something between them and Nothing, viz. the pre-existing Matter of which they are formed; whereas the Works of God being all produced out of Nothing, have nothing between them, but that Creative Power which produced them. And therefore as Man's Works would necessarily perish, were that pre-existing Matter taken away, which stands between them and Nothing, so God's Works would necessarily resolve into Nothing, should that creative Power be withdrawn which stands between them and Nothing. In short, pre-existing Matter is the Basis of our Works, and creative Power of God's; and therefore as our Works must cease to be, were their pre-existing Matter withdrawn, so God's Works must cease to be, were his creative Power withdrawn. So that 'tis the same Almighty Power which raised the World out of Nothing that keeps it from sinking into Nothing; and that it is this Moment is as much the Effect of divine Power, as that it was that Moment when it was first created. For the World was no more able to give it self the second Moment of Being than it was the first, nor the third than the second, and so on thro' all the past and future Moments of its Being. For one Moment of Being is as much as another, and therefore to give a second requires the same Power as to give a first; and if so, then each succeeding Moment of the World's Duration and Continuance must be derived from the Cause of the first Moment of its Being. So that the Creation and Conservation of the World, is only the same Act continuing and flowing on (like a Line from a Mathematical Point) from the first Instant of its Being to the last Period of its Duration: And so the Scripture represents it, Nehemiah 9. 6. Thou, even thou art Lord alone; thou hast made Heaven, the Heaven of Heavens with all their Hosts, the Earth and all things that are therein, and thou preservest them all; and Acts 17. 25, 28. He giveth to all Life and Breath and all things; in him we live, and move, and have our Being; and Heb. 1. 3. he is said to uphold all things by the Word of his Power.

Which is a Truth of that vast Importance to Religion, that it is hardly conceivable how it can subsist without it. For while we look on our selves as Beings that are independent from God, that do live, and breathe, and subsist of our selves, without any new Supplies of being from him, why should we serve and worship him? What Reason have we to trust in a Being from whom we expect no Support? Or to render Homage to a Being on whom we have no Dependence? So that by disbelieving this Part of the Divine Providence, we do in effect cut off all Intercourse between God and ourselves, and lay an Imbargo on Religion. For if we depend not on him, what have we to do with him? And if we owe not our Lives and Beings to his Power, what Right hath he to exact our Obedience? But while while we look upon our selves as Beings that hang upon him, and derive every Breath and Moment of our Beings from him, so that should he withdraw from us that Almighty Arm that sustains us, and leave us to subsist of ourselves, we must presently drop into nothing, how can we forbear, without infinite Stupidity and Ingratitude, to devote our selves and all our Powers and Faculties to his Service? For what a stupid Wretch should I be, should I not study to please him upon whom I know my Life and Being depends, and who merely by withdrawing his Hand from underneath me, can let me sink into nothing when he pleases? And what an ungrateful Wretch should I be, should I refuse to honour, worship, and obey him, from whom I draw every Breath I breathe, and derive new Life and Being every Moment?

II. It is also necessary we should believe that God possesses all Things; that he hath not given away this World from himself and cast it out of his own Disposal as a common Scramble among Men; but that he hath reserved to himself an absolute, unalienable and independent Propriety in all that we enjoy and possess. For all things owe their Being to him, as he is the Creator and Upholder of them; and therefore whatsoever is must necessarily be his, because it is by his Power and Providence. And if we, who act by the Power of God, and can do nothing without him, may claim a Right to the Effects of our Invention and Industry, how much more may God who contrived and produced all things by his own independent Wisdom and Power? For our Wisdom and Power being God's he hath a Sovereign Right to all the Effects of them; but his Wisdom and Power are absolutely his own, without Dependence on any superior Cause; and therefore whatsoever are the Effects of them must necessarily be his by a most absolute and independent Propriety. And accordingly he is stiled the Possessor of Heaven and Earth, Gen. 14. 19. And Moses tells his People, Behold the Heaven and the Heaven of Heavens is the Lord's, the Earth also and all that is therein, Deut. 10. 14. and the Earth (saith the Psalmist) is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof, the World and they that dwell therein; for he hath founded it upon the Sea, and prepared it upon the Floods, Psal. 24. 1. and 50. 12. And the Heavens (saith he again) are thine, the Earth also is thine; as for the World and the fulness thereof thou hast founded them, Ps. 89. 11.

God therefore being the Supreme Proprietor of the World, there is nothing can be justly ours but by his Will and Grant; and nothing can be ours by his Will, but what is honestly and justly ours. So that for us to seize upon any Part of the World by Fraud, or Violence, or Oppression, is to trespass upon God, and invade his Property, and to tear his World from him against his Will. Thus whatsoever we possess by Wrong, we possess as Robbers and Invaders of God, and whatsoever we enjoy by Right, we enjoy as Tenants to the great Landlord of the World; and without owning and acknowledging this, we cannot be truly Religious. For if the World be not his, Why should we pray to him for what we want of it, or praise him for what we enjoy? Why should we patiently submit to his Disposal, when he deprives us of what we have, or thankfully acknowledge his Goodness, when he supplies us with what we need? Why should we imploy our Possessions in his Service, or think our selves obliged to return him any Part of them in pious or charitable Works? In a Word, Why should we be contented with a small Share, and abide by that unequal Division of things that is made in the World, and not endeavour to increase our own poor Heap, by pilfering from other Mens that are ten times bigger than ours? Whence are these Obligations but from this Supposal, that God is the Supreme Proprietor and Possessor of all things; which being denied, there remains no solid Foundation of Reason for any of these great and necessary Duties of Religion.

III. To oblige us to be truly religious, it is also necessary we should believe that God is present with and inspects all things, that his divine Substance is diffused thro' and circumsufused about all things, so as to penetrate them within as an universal Soul, and contain them without as an universal Place. For so the Jewish Doctors are wont to call God Hamokom, i. e. the Place or Continent of all things; because all things are encompassed by him, and do live and move within his infinite Bosom.

For

For so in Scripture the divine Substance is described, as spreading itself thro' and a-round the World, even to the utmost Possibility of Extension. Whither (saith the Psalmist) shall I go from thy Spirit, or whither shall I flee from thy Presence? if I ascend up into Heaven, thou art there; if I make my Bed in Hell, behold thou art there; if I take the Wings of the Morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the Sea, even there shall thy Hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me, Ps. 139. 7, 8, 9, 10. And behold (saith Solomon) the Heaven of Heavens cannot contain thee, 1 Kings 8. 27. yea, do not I fill Heaven and Earth, saith the Lord himself, Jer. 23. 24.

Now tho God's Omnipresence be strictly an Attribute of his Essence, and not a part of his Providence; yet 'tis such an Attribute as includes his universal Providence, and without supposing of which, an universal Providence can hardly be conceived. For if he co-exists and be present with all things, he must be supposed to operate upon them; because where-ever he is, his infinite Wisdom and Power and Goodness are; which in their own Nature are such active Perfections as cannot be present, where such a World of things are to be done, and sit still and do nothing. For how can we conceive that infinite Wisdom should be present where a World of things are to be ordered, and yet order nothing? That infinite Power should be present where a World of things are to be done, and yet do nothing? Or that infinite Goodness should be present where a World of good is to be done, and do no good at all? Such an idle, restive Presence as this, is utterly inconsistent with such active Perfections. So that the Omnipresence of an infinite Power, and Wisdom, and Goodness, necessarily supposes an universal Providence, and without such an Omnipresence an universal Providence can hardly be conceiv'd. For how can God be present by any Power or Virtue or Efficacy of his Nature, in any Place from whence the Real Substance of his Divinity is excluded? How can he operate by his own immediate Efficiency where he is not? Or extend his divine Power and Wisdom and Goodness over all things, except his divine Substance, in which these Attributes are, be co-extended with them? Every Agent must be where it acts, because it acts from its Being, and it is as possible for that which is not to operate, as for that which is to operate where it is not; and hence Socrates being asked, how it was possible for one God to order all the Affairs of the World? returns this Answer, Τοσούτον ἡ τιετόν ἐστὶ τὸ θεόν, ὥδ' αἶμα ἅπαντα ὁρᾷ ἡ πάντα αἰεῖν, ἡ πανταχῶ παρῶναι, ἡ αἶμα πάντων ἐπιμελεῖσθαι i. e. God is so great and vast a Being, as that he hears and sees all things together, and is present every where, and takes care of all things at the same time. Thus God's Omnipresence, you see, doth so include his universal Providence, that with it 'tis necessary, and without it inconceivable.

And then from his Presence with all things, necessarily follows his Inspection of all things; because where-ever he is, his infinite Knowledge is, which is inseparable from his Being; and where-ever his infinite Knowledge is, it must necessarily have a thorow Prospect of all things round about him, so that nothing can be concealed from its Inspection. For so the Scripture assures us, that the Eyes of the Lord run to and fro thro'out the whole Earth, 2 Chron. 16. 9. and that the Eyes of the Lord are in every place beholding the evil and the good, Prov. 15. 3. and in a Word, that all things are open and naked to the Eyes of him with whom we have to do, Heb. 4. 13.

Both which are Truths of vast Importance to Religion. For while Men look upon God as a Being that dwells at a great Distance from them, they will be ready enough to conclude procul à Jove, procul à Fulmine, that being far off from him, they are out of his Reach, and beyond the Danger of his Thunderbolts; and that he is too far removed from them, either to succour them when they want his Aid, or to punish them when they deserve his Displeasure; which must needs extinguish both their Hope and Fear, which are the Master-Springs of their Religion. And tho we should believe him to be present with us, yet unless we also believe that he hath a full Inspection into all our Actions and Affairs, we shall have no Regard to him. For, if he sees not into our Affairs, how can he succour and relieve us? And if he cannot relieve us, to what end should we hope in him, depend upon him, or pray to him? And unless he hath a perfect Insight into all our Actions, how

how should he reward or punish us ; and if he cannot reward us, what should encourage us, if he cannot punish, what should terrify us to do our Duty to him ? But if we look upon him as a Being that is always with us, and where-ever we are surrounds us with his boundless Presence, that includes and penetrates every Part of our Substance, sees into our inmost Thoughts and Purposes, and ransacks every Corner of our Souls with his all-seeing Eye, and hath a thorow and perfect Prospect of all our Affairs and Concerns, we cannot without infinite Force to our Reason, forbear fearing and reverencing, serving and adoring him.

IV. To fasten the Obligations of Religion upon us, it is also necessary that we believe that God continually orders and disposes of all things ; that he is the Spring of all the Motions of this great Machine of the World, that sets every Wheel and Cause going, and by his all-commanding Influence, maintains, directs, and over-rules their Motions ; and that there is nothing happens in the World, whether by Nature, or Chance, or Design, but by his Ordination or Disposal ; that even those natural Causes which are necessarily determined to such particular Courses and Effects are influenced and conducted by him, and that whensoever they stray from their Courses, suspend or precipitate their Motions, or move counter to their natural Tendencies, it is by his Order and Direction ; that 'tis he who drives and guides the heavenly Bodies, impresses the Degrees, and chalks out the Paths of their Motions, and by his own Almighty Hand turns round those stupendous Wheels in a perpetual Revolution. For so the Scripture tells us, that he makes his Sun to shine upon the good and bad, Matth. 5. 45. that it is at his Beck and Command, that those vast Bodies of Light exhale the Vapours of the Earth and Sea, and dissolve them down again in Hail, and Rain, and Snow. For so we are told, that 'tis he who covers the Heavens with Clouds, and prepares the Rain for the Earth ; that sends forth his Commandment unto the Earth ; and giveth Snow like Wool, and scattereth the Hoar Frost like Ashes, and casteth forth his Ice like Morfels, and sendeth forth his Word and melteth them, and causes the Wind to blow and the Waters flow, Psal. 147. 8, 15, 16, 17, 18. that the Fire, and Hail, and Snow, and Vapours, and stormy Winds do fulfil his Word, Psal. 148. 8. And in a Word, that 'tis by his Order and Influence, that the Earth sends up its Sap into the Seeds and Roots of Herbs, and Corn, and Plants, and causes them to spring and grow, and that all Animals do propagate their Kind, and still replenish the Store-houses of Nature ; for so we are told, that he clothes the Grass of the Field, and arrays the Lilies in all their Glory, Matt. 6. 28, 29, 30. and that he causes the Grass to grow for the Cattel, and Herb for the use of Man, that he may bring forth Food out of the Earth, Psal. 104. 14.

And then, as for fortuitous and casual Events, which depend upon accidental and irregular Causes, as a Man's being hit with an Arrow let fly at random, or brained with a Stone falling from the Top of an House, we must believe that they are all ordered, directed, and over-ruled by God ; so as that to him there is nothing casual or contingent ; and tho there are many things happen, of which there was no Necessity in their immediate Causes, yet do they as necessarily depend upon the Will and Power of the first Cause of all, as the Rising and Setting of the Sun, and Ebbing and Flowing of the Sea. So, that how fortuitous soever these things may be, in respect of the Design and natural Tendency of second Causes, yet none of them ever happen besides the Purpose and Intention of God, who foresees and designs them before they come to pass, and directs and levels them to his own most wise and holy Ends and Purposes. For so the Arrow which the Soldier let fly at Random was levelled by God at Abab's Breast, so that his Death was Chance in respect of the Soldier who shot the Arrow, but Design in God who directed it ; and accordingly, Prov. 16. 33. we are told, that the Lot is cast into the Lap, but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord. And so in the Case of Chance-Medley, when a Man accidentally kills another without any Design or Intention, tho it be mere Accident in him, 'tis Counsel and Design in God, who, as the Scripture expresses it, delivers the Man he slays into his Hand, Exod. 21. 13.

And then lastly, As for those Events which happen by the Design of free and rational Agents, it is necessary we should believe that they are all over-ruled by God

God too ; that whatever befalls us in this World, whether it be by the good or ill Design of Men or Angels, is for good and just and holy Ends, either permitted or determined by the sovereign Disposer of all Events : So that without his wise Permission or Determination, neither Angels, Men, nor Devils, can do us either good or hurt : that every good thing we receive from them, only passes to us thro' their Hands from God, and that they are only the Channels and Conveyances of the overflowing Streams of his infinite Bounry ; and that whenever we suffer any ill from them, they are but the Rods in God's Hand, wherewith he chastens and corrects us ; that he hath the over-ruling Disposal of all the Ills which they inflict upon us, and can render their Stings a sovereign Balm, and their rankest Poison Medicinal to us ; so that their Malice being in God's Disposal, can effect nothing but what he will have it ; and if it doth us hurt, 'tis his Executioner, but, if he pleases it shall do us good, and like Leeches applied by a skilful Physician, draw away our Disease while it is sucking our Blood. For so God made the Malice of Joseph's Brethren the Means of his Advancement in Egypt ; and by the Covetousness of Judas, and Cruelty of the Jews, advanced the holy Jesus to his own Right-hand, and executed his Purpose to redeem Mankind. Thus God over-rules the Actions of Men, and when he pleases directs them quite contrary to their Intentions ; for the Way of Man, saith the Prophet, is not in himself, it is not in Man that we both to direct his Steps, Jer. 10. 23. It is the Man that walks and acts, but it is God alone that leads his Way, and directs his Actions to what End he pleases.

All which it is necessary we should believe in order to our being truly Religious. For while we look upon God as a Foreigner to the World, that hath altogether retired himself from the Affairs of it, and abandoned it to the Disposal of blind Chance, or Necessity, he must stand for a Cypher in our Esteem, and signify no more to us than the Emperor of the World in the Moon, who, for all we know, may be a glorious and puissant Prince, but is so far removed from us and our Affairs, that he can do us neither good nor hurt. And if God intermeddle not with those Goods and Evils which happen here below, what doth he signify to us who live apart from him in another World, from which he is wholly retired and withdrawn ? But if we firmly believe that there is nothing befalls us, whether it be in the Course of Nature, or by Chance, or Design, but by his Order and Direction, we must lay aside our Reason and Humanity, if for every Good we want, or do receive, we do not apply our selves to him with humble and submissive, thankful and ingenuous Minds ; and if under every Evil that we feel or fear, we do not resign up our Wills and lift up our Eyes to him, as to the sole Arbitrator of our Fate. For where should we pay our Thanks, or whence should we expect our Supplies and Deliverances, but to him who is the Fountain of all Good, and from him who is the supreme Moderator of all Events ? Who is there in Heaven or Earth whom we are so much concerned to please, and so much obliged to acknowledge and submit to, so much engaged to trust to and rely on, as him who hath all our Fortunes in his Hands, and the absolute Disposal of every thing in which we are or may or can be any way interested or concerned ? So that the Belief of God's over-ruling Providence hath every Link of our Duty fastened to it in a strong and rational Concatenation, and if it be loosen'd from this Principle, the whole Chain must necessarily fall in junder.

V. And lastly, To oblige us to be truly religious, it is also necessary we should believe that God is the supreme Governor of the rational World ; which is a distinct Branch of Providence from the former. For all things whatsoever are subject to God's Order and Disposal, but in Strictness of Speech 'tis only rational Beings that are subject to his Government. For Government supposes Laws, and Laws Rewards and Punishments, of which rational Beings alone are capable, they alone having the Power to deliberate, and upon Deliberation to choose what is good, and refuse what is Evil, without which no Being can deserve either to be rewarded or punished. So that the Government of God in Strictness of Speech, respects only the rational World consisting of Angels and Men.

As for the Government of Angels, 'tis impossible we should understand any more of it than what God hath revealed, because tho' they converse with us and our Affairs, yet we do not converse with them; our Spiritual Nature, by which we are near allied to them, being shut up in Matter, which like a Wall of Partition, divides us from them, and hinders us from looking over into their World, and from seeing their Nature and Operations, and surveying their Policy and Government. Indeed, so far as we understand their Natures, we may easily understand the Laws by which God governs them; because we know God's Laws are always adapted to the Nature of things; and consequently, since we know that they are rational Creatures, we may conclude from thence, that whatsoever is fit and decorous for rational Creatures, as such, they stand obliged to by the Law of their Natures. But since there are particular Powers and Properties in their Natures which we understand not, 'tis impossible we should understand all the particular Laws by which they are governed. Only thus much in general we know, that the whole Order of Angelical Beings were from the first moment of their Creation subjected to Laws fitted to their Nature; by which natural Laws they stood obliged to obey their Creator in all his positive Commands and Institutions; and that these Laws whatsoever they were, both natural and positive, were established in Rewards and Punishments, by which if they continu'd obedient, they were to continue for ever in their most blissful Ranks and Stations; but if they rebelled, were immediately to be banished thence into everlasting Wretchedness and Misery; that a certain Order of these Angelical Beings, excited either by their Pride, or Envy, or sensual Affections, did under their Head or Chieftain revolt from God by transgressing some natural or positive Law, for which they were expell'd the high Territories of Happiness, and driven into these lower Parts of the World, where under the Prince of their Rebellion they have ever since waged War against God and Man; that in this State of War they are under the Restraint of God's Almighty Power, who sets Bounds to their Power and Malice which it cannot pass, and determines it to what Ends and Purposes he pleases; employing it sometimes to try and chasten good Men, sometimes to execute his Wrath upon the Children of Disobedience, and sometimes again letting it loose merely to display his own Almighty Power in its Defeat and Overthrow; in which State they are reserved as Prisoners at large to the Judgment of the great Day; whereby together with wicked Men they shall be sentenced and confined to everlasting Flames and Darkness; that the good Angels, in Reward of their constant Obedience are continu'd and fixed in a most blissful Condition, in which they enjoy the constant Smiles of God, and the unspeakable Pleasure of being entirely resign'd to his Will, who upon all Occasions sends them to and fro in the World, as the great Messengers and Ministers of his Providence, to minister to the Recovery of recoverable Sinners, and to pour out the Vials of his Wrath upon the obstinate and unreclaimable; to assist, protect, and comfort good Men while they live, and when they depart from hence to conduct their Spirits thro' the airy Territories of the wicked Angels, into those blissful Mansions that are prepared to receive them till the Resurrection; at which time their Part will be to summon and gather both the good and bad before the Tribunal of Christ, to receive their final Sentence to everlasting Weal or Woe.

This is the main of what we know concerning God's Government of Angels; the sincere Belief of which will be of vast Advantage to us in the whole Course of our Religion. For since there is such a mighty Colony of evil Angels roving about the World, watching all Opportunities to lay Snares in our Way, and to tempt us into their Revolt and Ruin; and since their Design in tempting us now is only to get us into their Power, that so they may torment us hereafter, how much doth it concern us to guard and defend ourselves against their evil Motions and Suggestions, lest by complying with them we give them Opportunity to train us on from one Degree of Wickedness to another, till they have made us provoke the Almighty to cut us off, and abandon us for ever to their Rage and Fury; and since they are all of them under his Restraint, and can proceed no farther in their mischievous Designs against us, than he lets loose his Chain to them, how should this encourage us manfully to struggle and contend against them; since if we do, we may depend upon it, that God in whose Power they are, will either command them off, or at least not permit them to over-power us with temptation. And since, by God's Permission, there are great Flocks of good Angels always hovering about us, to guard us against those malignant ones, and to prompt us to Good, as they prompt us to Evil, and with their holy Inspirations to countermine their impure Suggestions, how much doth it import us to cherish and reverence every pious Thought and Motion? since, for all we know, it may be the Whisper of some Angel of God, who by these and such like holy Injections, is now struggling with the Powers of Darkness, to rescue our Souls out of their Hands. And since these blessed and benevolent Spirits do, by God's Appointment, pitch their Tents about good Men, while they live, and convey them safely to the Seat of the Blessed when they die, how should this encourage bad Men to be good, and good Men to persevere in well-doing, since they place and continue themselves under the blessed Patronage of Angels, to be conducted safely by them thro' this perillous Sea to the calm Regions of Eternal Light? Thus the Belief of God's Government of Angels, so far as he hath thought good to reveal it to us, very much conduces to a Holy Life.

But that which more nearly concerns us, and hath a more immediate Influence on our Practice, is his Government of Men; the Belief of which is indispensibly necessary to render us truly Religious. Now concerning this Government of God over Men, there are seven things necessary to be believed.

I. That the great End of God's Government, is the Welfare of Mankind.

II. That in order to this End, God hath given us Laws, for the Regulation and Government of our Actions.

III. That to secure our Obedience to these Laws, he hath derived his Authority upon all lawful Sovereignities, to govern us according to them.

IV. That he is ready to contribute to us all necessary Assistance, to enable us to observe these Laws.

V. That the Assistance he contributes to us is such as supposes us free Agents, and concurs with and maintains our natural Freedom.

VI. That he takes particular Cognisance of the good and ill Use which we make of our natural Freedom.

VII. That he will certainly reward or punish us accordingly.

I. To oblige us to be truly Religious, it is necessary we should believe that the great End of God's governing us, is our Welfare and Happiness: That being infinitely raised above all Want and Indigence, he doth not assume the Government of us to advance himself, or to gratify any boundless Ambition of his own, which is a Vice that springs out of Poverty and Indigence, and therefore can have neither Root nor Room in a Nature so infinitely happy as his; but that all his Design in reigning over us is to do us good and to consummate our Happiness; to restore and rectify our disordered Nature, and to advance and raise it to the utmost Perfection and Bliss and Glory it is capable of; to protect and defend us against present Evils, and support us under them, and convert them into Instruments of Good, and to rescue us from the worst of Evils Sin, and from all those endless Miseries it is pregnant with. This we ought to believe is the great Scope of all his Acts of Government, and even of the direst Punishments he inflicts, which are always intended either to reclaim the Offenders themselves, or to warn others by the sad Example of their Suffering not to follow the ill Example of their Sin. And that this is the great End of his Government, he himself hath expressly declared. So Psal. 145. 9. we are assured that the Lord is good to all, and that his tender Mercies are over all his Works; and Verse 13, 14. that in the Exercise of his everlasting Kingdom, he upholdeth all that fall, and raiseth up all that are bowed down; and tho in the Administration of his Government, he hath decreed to cut off all such obstinate Rebels hels as will not be reduced by the Methods of his Love, yet he hath declared that he is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to Repentance, 2 Pet. 3. 9. and that he would have all Men to be saved, and to come to the Knowledge of the Truth, 1 Tim. 2. 4. And unless we believe him to be a benevolent Governor, that aims at the Good of his Subjects, we shall look upon his Government as a cruel Tyranny, erected for no other End, but to squeeze and oppress us, to enthrall our Liberty, and rob us of the Rights of our Nature, and to chain us down to an endless and ceaseless Toil and Wretchedness; and whilst we thus look upon it, it is impossible we should ever submit to it with that generous Freedom and Cheerfulness that true Religion requires. But if we firmly believe that the great Design of it is to promote our Welfare, both here and hereafter, we have all the Reason in the World to covet to be governed by God, and to receive his Yoke as a mighty Grace and Favour.

II. To oblige us to be truly religious, it is also necessary we should believe that God hath given us Laws for the Regulation and Government of our Actions. For without Laws to direct Men what to do, and what to avoid, there can be no such thing as Government, the proper Business of which, is to regulate Mens Actions, and without a Rule there can be no Regulation; so that Divine Rules or Laws are necessarily included in the Divine Rule or Government; and as God cannot be supposed to give Laws without governing, so neither can he be supposed to govern without giving Laws; so that unless we believe that God governs us by Laws, we are utterly destitute both of all Reason why, and of all Direction wherein to obey him, and have neither Motive to enforce, nor Measure to regulate our Obedience. And as it is necessary we should believe, that he hath given us Laws, so it is also necessary we should believe that those Laws are for our Good; that he neither imposes them on us pro imperio, as arbitrary Tests and Trials of our Obedience, nor exacts them of us to serve himself, and advance his own Interest and Greatness, but that the great Design of them is to do us good, and to direct our Actions to our own Interest; to render our Lives placid and easy, and to perfect and glorify our Natures. For while we look upon the Matter of God's Law either as indifferent in itself, and imposed upon us by him, for no other End but to shew his absolute Sovereignty over us, or as beneficial only to him, and imposed upon us merely to promote his Interest, it is impossible we should ever comply with it with a free and cheerful Mind. We may haply obey him out of Fear and Dread, because he is too mighty for us, and not to be contended with, without infinite Peril and Disadvantage; but 'tis impossible we should obey those Laws with a resigned and cheerful Will, from which we only fear Ill, but expect no Benefit. Wherefore, to oblige us to render a free and unforced Submission to God's Laws, it is absolutely necessary we should believe that the great Design of them is the Good of those they are imposed on; and so the Psalmist assures us, That the Statutes of the Lord are perfect, converting the Soul, and making wise the simple; right, rejoicing the Heart; pure, enlightening the Eyes, true and righteous altogether, more to be desired are they than Gold, yea than much fine Gold, sweeter also than the Honey and the Honey-comb, and that in keeping of them there is great Reward, Psalm 19. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. and that the Law of God's Mouth was better to him, that is, for the Good it did him, than thousands of Gold and Silver, Psalm 119. 72.

And this, if we firmly believe it, will infinitely encourage our Obedience. For when I am sure that God commands me nothing but what my own Health and Ease, and Happiness requires, and that every Law of his is both a necessary and a sovereign Prescription against the Diseases of my Nature, and that he could not have prescribed me less than he hath without being defective in his Care of my Recovery and Happiness, with what Prudence or Modesty can I grudge to obey him? How can I think much to serve him, when I serve myself by it to the best Purpose in the World? Or why should I so much as wish, that he had not imposed this or that Law on me, when I know he imposed it to no other End but to oblige me to be happy, and that he cannot dispense with any Duty he requires of me, without giving me leave to be miserable. When therefore God's Authority doth thus strike in with our Interest, and walk hand in hand with it thro' every Duty it imposes, by refusing to obey him, we fight against our selves, and renounce his Authority and our own Happiness together.

III. To oblige us to be truly religious, it is also necessary we should believe, that to secure our Obedience to those Laws, God hath derived his own Authority upon all lawful sovereign Powers, to govern us according to them. That to promote our Happiness, which is the End of his Government, and to secure our Obedience to his Laws, which are the Means to that End, he hath established a visible Authority upon Earth, to represent his own invisible Majesty, and in his Name to exact our Obedience to his Laws, so far as it is liable to their Cognisance, and that the Persons vested with this Authority, are exalted by it above all Controul or Resistance, and in their several Dominions placed next to and immediately under God, by whose Commission alone they act, and to whose Tribunal alone they are accountable: So that by resisting them, we do as much resist God, whose Deputy-Governors they are, as a Neapolitan doth the King of Spain, by levying Arms against his Vice-Roy of Naples; and by refusing to obey their just and lawful Commands, we demur to God's Authority, who in every just thing they impose or require, speaks to us by their Mouths, and commands us by their Laws. For so the Scripture tells us, not only that they are ordained of God; and that to resist them is to resist the Ordinance of God; not only that they are the Ministers of God, and that therefore, for Conscience-sake, or in Reverence to God's Authority which they bear, they are to be obeyed, Rom. 13. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. but that they judge for God and not for Men, 2 Chron. 19. 6. and that therefore their Judgment is God's, Deut. 1. 17.

The Disbelief of which excludes God's Government out of the World, and consequently dissolves all our Obligations of Duty and Allegiance to him. For, how can he be Supreme Governor of the World, if all other Governments are not immediately under him? And, how can they be immediately under him, if they are not immediately authorized by him? And by what other Right can any Person or Persons pretend to govern in God's Kingdom under him, but by Commission from him? For every supreme Authority is the Head and Fountain of all other Authorities, so far as it extends; and if it be not so, it cannot be supreme. And therefore, unless all Authority be derived from God, he can have no such thing as a supreme Authority in the World. And this, I doubt not, is very well understood by our Atheistical Politicians, who, in pursuance of their Denial of God, derive all Authority from the People; being truly aware, that if the Authority of the Governors can be derived from the People, it will necessarily follow, that both must be independent from God, and that to derive Authority to govern from any other Head but God, is to deny him to be the supreme Governor of the World, which is the thing they would be at. If it be said, that God hath given Authority to the People to authorize their Governors, and so he is still Head of all Authority, tho it be derived from him immediately thro' the People; I answer, That this doth very little mend the Matter. For, if God hath given Authority to the People to authorize their Governors, he hath in effect given the Reins out of his own Hands, and left the People to govern the World. For I would fain know, Do Governors govern by God's Authority, or the People's? If by the People's, 'tis the People that govern by them, and not God; if by God's, 'tis God that governs by them and not the People. In short, if they govern by the People's Authority, they are, as Governors, at least, independent from God, and accountable only to the Tribunal of the People; if by God's Authority, they they are Independent from the People, and accountable only to the Tribunal of God. So that whether he authorizes them immediately, or by the People, it is all one, the Question being not so much how they are authorized, as by what Authority they govern; if it be by God's, to God alone they are accountable; if by the People's, God's Authority is quite excluded from having any Hand in the Government of the World. In short, if the Choice of the People makes their Governor without God's authorizing him, he is the People's Vice-Roy, and not God's; but if it be God that authorizes him, he is God's Vice-Roy, and not the People's. So that their Choice, even in Elective Governments, can signify no more than the bare presenting of a Person to God, to be authorized his Vicergerent by him; who, if their Choice be just and lawful, is supposed to consent and to approve it, and thereby to authorize the Person so presented. For sovereign Authority, in the Abstract, is ordained and instituted by God; but abstract Authority cannot govern, unless some Person be vested with it; and to vest him with it, he must not only be applied to the Authority, but the Authority must be also applied to him; but where the People have the Right of Election, they only apply the Person to the Authority, but 'tis God's Consent and Approbation that applies the Authority to the Person, who thereupon commences Supreme under God, and hath no superior Tribunal but God's to account to.

And thus, according to the Prophet Daniel, the most High rules in the Kingdoms of Men, because as Lord of all the Lords, and King of all the Kings of the Earth, he rules and governs by their Ministry, and they rule and govern by his Authority. So that to secure and maintain the Obligations which God's Government of the World devolves upon us, it is necessary we should believe that all rightful Sovereigns are his Vicergerents, and do rule by his Commission and Authority, and that the Sword which they bear is God's, who hath deliver'd it into their Hands, to protect his faithful Subjects, and to execute his Wrath, and avenge his Authority upon Evil-doers. So that we cannot rebel against them, nor wilfully disobey their just Commands, without giving a Defiance to God himself, and rejecting the Yoke of his Government. Whilst therefore we behave our selves factiously and seditiously towards those whom God hath set over us, we live as Out-laws in the Kingdom of God, without any Respect to that visible Authority by which he governs the World; and whilst we do so, all our Pretences to Religion are impudent Lies and Impostures.

IV. In order to our being truly religious, it is also necessary we should believe that God is ready to contribute to us all that Assistance which is necessary to enable us to observe his Laws. That whereas in this corrupt State of our Nature, we are so indisposed to all Good by our carnal Affections and vicious Habits, as that without some foreign Aid it is morally certain we shall never be reduced to a thorow Compliance with our Duty, God is always ready not only to second but to prevent our Endeavours, to inspire good Thoughts into our Minds, and by them to kindle devout Affections in our Wills, and by them to excite us to a constant Course of pious and virtuous Endeavours; and that when he hath proceeded thus far with us, he doth not presently abandon us to our selves, and leave us to contend and struggle in vain with insuperable Difficulties; but all along cooperates with us, aids and assists our Faculties, and with his holy Inspirations cherishes our languishing Endeavours, till they have wrought their Way thro' all the Difficulties of Religion, into a permanent State of Piety and Virtue. So that unless we either turn a deaf Ear to those good Thoughts he suggests to us, and refuse to listen to their Persuasions, or quench those holy Affections which they kindle in us with earthly Cares and Pleasures, or by wilful sinning, harden our Hearts against all the Impressions of his Grace, we shall not fail of being frequently and powerfully excited by him to Piety and Virtue; and when he thus excites us, if we do not wilfully slacken our Endeavours, and basely surrender back our selves to our Lusts, in despite of all our Resolutions and his Persuasions to the contrary, we shall be so effectually and constantly assisted by him, as that it will be impossible for us to fail of Success. For thus the Scripture assures us, that he gives Grace to the humble, 1 Pet. 5. 5. and thereby works in them to will and to do, Phil. 2. 13. and that to this End, he gives his Holy Spirit to every one that asks, Luke 11. 13. The Belief of which is absolutely necessary to oblige us to submit to Religion. For, tho we are naturally free to Good as well as Evil, yet thro' the vicious Habits we have generally contracted, either thro' youthful Levity and Inconsideration, or ill Education and Example, our Liberty to Good is so straiten'd and confined, that whenever we attempt to exercise it, we find a prevailing Bias on our Natures, that carries us the contrary Way, bearing before it all our good Resolutions, and tiring out our short-breath'd Endeavours, so that the good we would, we do not, and the evil we would not, we do. And therefore, unless we can depend upon God for Assistance against the Violence and Outrage of our bad Inclinations, after we have once struggled with them in vain, and thereby made a woful Experiment of our own Impotence, we shall out of mere Despair of prevailing against them, give over attempting it, and utterly abandon our selves to their Tyranny.

Endea-

But if we firmly believe that God, who knows our Weakness and our Enemy's Strength, will in Proportion to both readily assist us, whensoever we heartily invoke his Aid, and in Concurrence therewith exert our own Endeavour, we have all the Encouragement in the World to undertake our Duty, maugre all the Difficulties that attend it. For being assured that God will concur with our Endeavours, we may depend upon it, that not only our own Endeavours are in our Power, but God's Assistance too; and that the Corruptions of our Nature do not so much overmatch our Endeavours, as God's Assistance overmatches those Corruptions. So that if we heartily exert our Endeavour, we are sure we cannot fail of Success; because we know that God will assist our Endeavour, and that with his Assistance we cannot but be victorious. Since therefore the Grace of God is as much under the Command of our Will as our own Principles of Action, it is as much in our Power to do that which we cannot do without God's Grace, as to do that which we can. And therefore if God's Grace be sufficient to supply the Defect of our Natural Power, and enable us to conquer the Difficulties of our Duty, we are sure there is nothing in it can be too hard for us; because now we can do, not only all that we can do by our selves, but also all that we can do by the Grace of God.

V. To oblige us to be truly Religious it is also necessary we should believe that the Assistance which God affords us, is such as supposes us free Agents, and concurs with and maintains our natural Freedom. That it doth not necessarily determine us to Good, but leaves it to our own free Choice to determine our selves which way we please, that as he acts upon necessary Agents by a necessary Influx and Causality which they cannot resist, and determines those things to act by his Will, which have no Will of their own to determine them, so he acts upon free Agents by a free and unconstraining Influence, i. e. by suggesting Arguments to their Minds, to incline and persuade them, but leaves it to their own Liberty to consider those Arguments or not, and to comply with those Persuasions or reject them; and that tho as he hath sometimes suspended the Powers of necessary Agents, and interrupted the natural Course of their Motion, as when he forbad the Sun to move, and the Fire to burn, so he hath at other times restrained the natural Liberty of free Agents, and determin'd them by an over-ruling Necessity, yet both the one and the other are extraordinary and miraculous; but that in the ordinary Course of his Government, he doth as well leave free Agents to that natural Freedom with which he first created them, as necessary ones to those Necessities which he first impressed upon their Natures.

For his Providence is succedaneous to his Creation, and did at first begin where that ended, and doth still proceed as it began, ordering and governing all things according to the several Frames and Models in which he first cast and created them. Nor can he order and govern them otherwise without unravelling his own Creation, and making things to be otherwise than he first made them. For how can he ordinarily necessitate those Agents whom he first made free, without changing their Natures from free to necessary, and making them a different Kind of Being than he made them? So that tho in the Course of his Government God doth powerfully importune and persuade us, yet he lays no Necessity on our Wills, but leaves us free to choose or refuse; and as the Temptations of Sin incline us one Way, so the Grace of God inclines us another, but both leave us to our own Liberty to go which way we please. And this the Scripture plainly asserts, where it makes mention of Mens resisting the Holy Ghost, Acts 7. 51. and grieving and quenching the Spirit of God, Ephes. 4. 30. 1 Thess. 5. 19. and refusing to hear when God calls, and to regard when he stretches forth his Hand, and of their setting his Counsel at nought, and rejecting his Reproofs, Prov. 1. 24, 25. and in a word, where it makes mention of some Mens afflicting and defeating that very Grace which would have conquered and persuaded others, Matth. 11. 21. Which plainly imply that all that Assistance to do our Duty, that God ordinarily vouchsafes us in the Course of his Government, is such as no Way determines or necessitates us.

The Belief of which is highly necessary to engage us in the Service of Religion. For while Men imagine that their Duty is such as they cannot heartily comply with, without being compelled to it by an irresistible Grace, and that no Assistance of God can be sufficient to this End, but that which suspends their Liberty to Evil, and fatally determines them to Good, what should move them to exert their own Endeavour? Why should they watch and pray and strive and contend against a corrupt Nature? For if God will make them good irresistibly, their Endeavour is needless; but if he will not, it is Labour in vain. To what End should they ply the Oar to stem the Tide of a degenerate Nature, since without an irresistible Gale from Heaven they shall never succeed, and with it they shall, whether they ply or no? So that while Men live in Expectance of an irresistible Grace to make them good, they quit themselves of all their Obligations to a pious and virtuous Endeavour; but so long as they believe, that God's Grace is such as supposes and leaves them free, such as they may defeat or prosper by the good or ill use of their Liberty, they cannot but discern themselves infinitely obliged to co-operate with it, to listen and consent to its blessed Motions and Persuasions, and constantly to endeavour to comply with them in their Actions, or at least not to resist them, and harden and fortify themselves against them, by acting counter to, and flying in the Face of their own Convictions. For since the Grace of God doth not determine us to good, but leaves us to our own Freedom, we can never expect to be determined to good without our free Concurrence; which if we refuse, we shall certainly perish in our Sin, and have not only the Blood of our own Souls to answer for, but all that Grace too which we have baffled and defeated.

VI. To oblige us to be truly Religious it is necessary that we should believe, That God takes particular Cognisance of the good and ill Use we make of our natural Freedom; that he doth not merely gaze upon our Actions as an indifferent and unconcerned Spectator, but beholds them with the highest Concern and Regard, with infinite Complacency or Detestation, and treasures them up in his all-comprehending Mind, to be produced for or against us in the Day of fearful Reckonings and Accounts; that he doth not inspect our Actions with a passant and cursory View, as things of little or no Moment, but lays them up in everlasting Remembrance, so that every good or ill thing we do, stands upon Record in the Mind of God in order to our final Acquittal or Condemnation. For so the Scripture tells us, not only that God's Eyes are upon the Ways of Man, and that he seeth all his Goings, Job 34. 21. and that his Eyes run to and fro throughout the Earth, and are in every Place beholding the good and evil, 2 Chron. 16. 9. and Prov. 15. 3. but that he sees good Actions tho' done in secret, and will reward them openly, Matt. 6. 6. and that he will bring every Work into Judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or evil, Eccles. 12. 14.

The Belief of which is absolutely necessary to found the Obligations of Religion. For if we suppose either that God sees not our Actions, or looks upon them with an indifferent Eye, without taking any Notice or Cognisance of them, there is no Religious Consideration can oblige us. For upon this Supposal, our Actions must all be indifferent to him; and if they are indifferent to him, what Reason have we to make any Difference between them? 'Tis true, good Actions are in themselves beneficial, and evil ones prejudicial to us, and therefore for our own Interest-sake we ought to choose the one and refuse the other; but this, abstracted from all Respects to God, is only a prudential and not a religious Obligation; but why should we do any good, or avoid any evil upon God's Account, if good and evil are alike to him? But if we firmly believe that God not only sees whatsoever we do, but takes particular Notice of all our good and evil Actions, and out of an high Complacency in the one, and Abhorrence of the other, treasures up both in everlasting Remembrance, we cannot but discern our selves obliged by all the Reason in the World to choose what is good, and eschew what is evil. For what an infinite Encouragement is it to do good, to consider that while we are doing it, God's Eye is upon us, regarding us with high Applause and Approbation, and entering it with all its acceptable Circumstances into the eternal Record of his own Mind, from whence it shall be produced in the last Day and proclaimed before Men and Angels, to our everlasting Honour and Glory? So that when our Memory is lost upon Earth, and all that we did is swallowed up in the deep Abyss of Oblivion, all our Pieties and Virtues shall be famed in the Records of Heaven, and have everlasting Memorials in the Mind of God. As on the contrary, what an infinite Discouragement is it from sinning, to consider that the Eye of that God to whom Vengeance belongs is intent upon us, following us thro' all our Retreats and Concealments, and recording every ill Deed and all its foul Aggravations in the eternal Volumes of his own Remembrance, which he will one Day most certainly open and read out before all the World to our everlasting Shame and Confusion? So that when the Pleasure of our Sin is gone, and all that render'd it tempting and desirable for ever vanish'd and forgotten, the Shame and Infamy of it shall stand upon Record, and be transmitted down to eternal Ages.

VII. And lastly, To oblige us to be truly Religious it is also necessary we should believe that God will reward and punish us according to our Doings; that he is neither an idle, nor an impotent Spectator of our Actions, that merely pleases and vexes himself with the Contemplation of them; but that all the Notice he takes of them is in order to his rewarding and punishing them, which he will one Day most certainly do to our everlasting Joy or Confusion. But, because this Argument will be the Subject of the ensuing Chapter, I shall insist no farther on it here.

S E C T. II.

Of the Proofs and Evidences which there are to create in us a Belief of the Divine Providence.

HAVING in the foregoing Section given an Account of those Parts or Branches of the Divine Providence, which are necessary to be believed in order to the founding the Obligations of Religion, I shall proceed in the next place to shew what Evidences there are to create this Belief in us; and because this is the great Fundamental of all Religion, upon the Belief of which it all immediately depends, I shall endeavour to demonstrate the Truth of it.

I. A priori, by Arguments drawn from God himself.

II. A posteriori, by Arguments drawn from sensible Effects of God in the World.

I. I shall endeavour to assert the Truth of a Divine Providence by Arguments drawn from God himself. For supposing that there is a God, that is to say, an infinitely wise, and good, and powerful Cause of all Things, (which I doubt not to make appear when I come to discourse of the sensible Effects of God in the World) it will from thence necessarily follow that he upholds, disposes, and governs all things by an over-ruling Providence: For,

I. If there be such a God, he must necessarily be and exist of himself, without any dependence upon any Superior Cause.

II. He must necessarily be the Cause of all other things that are and do exist.

III. He must necessarily be present with all Things.

IV. Where-ever he is, so active are his Perfections that he cannot but operate where-soever he finds Objects to work upon. From all which I shall make appear it will necessarily follow, that he continually exercises an over-ruling Providence over the World.

I. If there be a God, he must necessarily exist or be of himself without Dependence on any Superior Cause. For when we speak of God, we mean by him a Being that is as perfect, as it is possible, that hath nothing before him, nothing superior to him, nothing greater than himself; which cannot be meant of any derived Being; because all Effects are after their Causes, and in some respect inferior to them, as deriving their Beings, and all their Excellencies and Perfections from them. But to say of God, that he is after or any way inferior to any Cause, is a palpable Contradiction to the very Notion of him; 'tis to say, that there is something before the eternal Something, superior to the supreme Something, more Perfect than infinite Perfection. So that either there can be no such Being as a God in the World, or he must be of himself or from his own Essence, in which there must be such an infinite Fulness of Being, as that from all Eternity past to all Eternity to come, it is infinitely removed from not Being, and so by Necessity of Nature must from ever have been and for ever be. And such a Being we must admit of, whether we will admit of a God or no; for either we must allow that this World, or at least the Matter of it exists of itself by its own never-failing Fulness of Being, without ever needing any Cause to produce it, (which as I shall shew you by and by is impossible) or that all things in it derive their Being from some first Cause, who having no Cause in being before him must necessarily be uncaused and unproduced; and if God exists of himself, as he must do supposing he is, he must be superior to all things; for that which is of itself cannot but be, and that which cannot but be, can have no Power above it, because if it hath, that Power might have either hindred or extinguished its Being, and so it might not have been.

So that God's Self-existence necessarily supposes him exalted above all Power and Superiority, and consequently to be the supreme and sovereign Power over all things; but to suppose him to be Supreme and Sovereign without exercising Rule and Dominion, is ridiculous; for without the Exercise of Dominion supreme Power is but an useless and insignificant Cypher-flourish with a glorious Name, Rule and Dominion being the only proper Sphere for supreme Power, as such, to move and act in. So that unless God rules and governs, he is Supreme to no Purpose, and his sovereign Power is useless and in vain: For if he exert his sovereign Power at all, it must be in Rule and Dominion, which is its only natural Province; but if he doth not, his Sovereignty is only a Majestick Sloth that sits sleeping in an awful Throne, with its Hands in its Bosom, without ever doing any thing that is Sovereign; and of what Use is that sovereign Power that never exercises any Act of Sovereignty? Since therefore God's Self-Exaltation necessarily supposes his sovereign Power over all Things, we must either grant that he continually exercises this Power in ruling and governing the World, or assert that it is utterly useless and in vain, which, as I shall shew by and by, is as absurd as it is blasphemous.

II. If there be a God, he must necessarily be the Cause of all other things that are and do exist. For whatsoever might not have been, or may not be, must be derived from something which cannot but be. If it might not have been, how came it to be? Not from itself to be sure, for then it must always have necessarily been; and therefore it must finally be resolved into some other Cause which is of itself, and so cannot but always have been and always be. Now that this World is not of itself, but from some other Cause that is of itself, is evident; because whatsoever is of itself, must necessarily have all the Being, and all the Perfection of Being that is possible. For that which is of itself is necessarily of it self, and it is not only true that it cannot but be, but also that it cannot but be of itself; for if it might not have been of itself; it might not have been at all, because itself, or its own Essence, is the only Ground or Reason of its Being; and therefore, if that Reason might have fail'd, it might never have been at all. Now that which necessarily is of itself, hath neither actual nor possible Cause of Being; for if it hath an actual Cause, it is not of itself; if any possible one, it is not necessarily of itself; and if it hath no possible Cause of Being, it is all that it's possible to be, that is, it is so complete and perfect, that no possible Being, or Perfection of Being can be added to it.

Besides, that which is of itself includes Necessity of Being in its Essence, and that which includes Necessity of Being, must always actually be what it is, and have nothing potential in its Nature; and that which hath nothing potential must have all possible Being and Perfection. For, if there be any possible Perfection of Being which it hath not, it must be in Possibility of being what it is not; and if so, it is not necessarily what it is. So that if the World be of itself, it must include in the Nature of it, a Necessity of Being, and if so, it must always actually be, that is, be always out of all Possibility either of not being or of being what it is not; and if it be out of all Possibility of not Being, it must have all possible Being; if out of all Possibility of being what it is not, it must have all possible Perfection of Being; that is, all possible Power, and Knowledge, and Wisdom, and Goodness, which do all as necessarily result from Self-Being, as any essential Property from any Essence. Since therefore this material World hath none of these possible Perfections of Being in it, it is impossible it should be of itself, and if it be not of itself, it must have a Cause of Being that is distinct from and before itself: and what can this Cause be but God? since that which caused the World must be before all Causes, and that which is before all Causes must be uncaused, and of itself, and that which is of itself, must have all possible Perfection, and consequently be God.

Since therefore the World was made by God, it will from hence necessarily follow, that it is ruled and governed by him. For, if he made the World, to be sure he made it for some End, it being unconceivable that infinite Wisdom should frame a World that is capable of the most noble and excellent Ends, without designing it to any End at all; and if he designed it for any End, to be sure he is concerned that that End, whatever it be, should be accomplished; and and if he be, his own Concernment will lead him to the Exercise of a Providence, which is nothing else but a constant and steady Guidance of those Beings which he hath made, to those common and particular Ends for which he made them. For, if he made them for any End, to be sure whatever it was, he did not let it drop out of his Mind and Thoughts as soon as he had made them, but still carries it along in his Eye and Intention; and if he still intends that End, there is no doubt but he still prosecutes it, which he cannot do without a Providence: For how can he drive things on to the Ends for which he made them, if he be withdrawn from the World, and hath wholly sequestred himself from all the Affairs of it.

III. If there be a God, he must necessarily be present with all things; because being of himself without any Cause, he must be without any Bounds or Limits of Being. For it is altogether unconceivable how any thing that is of itself should be restrained or limited by itself. For tho we must allow something to be of itself, whether we will admit of a God or no, yet we cannot suppose that which is of itself to be the Cause of itself, without a Contradiction; because every Cause must be before its Effect; and therefore to suppose that which is of itself, to be the Cause of itself, is to suppose it to be before itself, that is, to be when it is not, or to be and not to be together, which is impossible. When therefore we say that something is of itself, our meaning can be no other than this, that it hath such an immense Plenitude of Being in itself, as that it neither needed nor required any Cause to produce it; and how can that which is of itself without being the Cause of itself, be any way restrained or limited by itself? For that which limits Beings, is only the Will or Power of their Causes, which either would not or could not bestow any farther Being or Perfection upon them; and therefore only such things as are caused are limited, because they being produced out of nothing, are only so far and no farther brought into Being, as their Cause was willing or able to bring them. That therefore which exists of itself without any Cause of Being, must exist of itself without any Limits of Being; because it was neither limited by itself, nor by any other Cause; and that which hath nothing to limit it, must necessarily be immense and boundless. God therefore being this Self-existing Being, must necessarily be of an unlimited Essence; an Essence which no possible Space can either circumscribe or define, but must necessarily be diffused thro' all, circumfused about all, and present with all things.

And if he be present with all things, how is it imaginable he should fit still among them, and exercise no Providence over them? For since he is a living Being, he must be vitally present wheresoever he is, and that he should be vitally and yet unactively present among a World of Beings, that he should live in this wide University of things, and in every Part of it, and yet take no more Notice of, have no more Influence upon it than if he were a dead and senseless Idol, is altogether unconceivable; and we may as well imagine a Sun in the Universe without Heat or Light, as a living God surrounding and penetrating all things without ever exerting his active Powers, or shedding forth his vital Influence upon them. For where-ever Life is, it will operate; and therefore since God, who is all Life and Activity, is every where, he must operate every where, and if he operate every where, that Operation is an Universal Providence.

IV. And lastly, If there be a God, he must be endowed with all those active Perfections of Power and Wisdom, Justice and Goodness; all which must be present wheresoever he is. For as for Power, It is nothing else but the Spring or Fountain of Causality; and therefore since God is the first Cause, he must necessarily be the Spring of the Power of all Causes, and that from which all Power is derived must itself be all-powerful; otherwise it would derive more Power than it hath, and be the Cause of that whereof it hath no Causality, which is a Contradiction. And then as for Wisdom and Goodness, they are inseparable to perfect Power; which how forcible soever it be, cannot be perfect except it be conducted by Wisdom and Goodness, for without these, Power is only an irresistible Whirlwind that sweeps and hurries all things before it without any End, or Method, or Order. And what a lame, blind and defective Power must that be that can neither design nor contrive, neither propose to itself beneficial Ends, not yet choose suitable Means to effect them? and in a Word, that can neither intend well nor prosecute wisely? If therefore the Power of God be perfect, as it cannot but be; being the Original of all Power, it must necessarily be conjoin'd with perfect Wisdom and Goodness; with perfect Goodness to level its Intentions at good and beneficial Ends; with perfect Wisdom to order and direct its Prosecutions.

Since therefore perfect Power, and Wisdom and Goodness are essential to God, they must be co-extended with his Essence, which as I shewed before, is extended to all things. And how can we conceive such active Perfections as these to be present with all things without ever acting upon them? For the very End and Perfection of all these Attributes consists in their Exercise; for so the End of Power is Action, the End of Wisdom is ordering and contriving, and the End of Goodness is doing good. How then can we suppose that an infinite Power, whose End is Action, should be present where a World of Things are to be done, and do nothing? that infinite Wisdom, whose End is ordering and contriving, should be present where a World of Things are to be ordered, and order nothing? Or that infinite Goodness, whose End is doing good, should be present where a World of good is to be done, and do none at all? What is this, but to transform the Divine Perfections into senseless Idols, that have Eyes, but see not, Hands but act not; that have boundless, but useless and unactive Powers; that have Glorious Names, but in reality stand but for so many Cyphers in the World? And thus I have endeavoured to demonstrate a Providence by Arguments drawn from God himself: But because there may be something in them too subtile and metaphysical for common Apprehensions to reach, I have but briefly insisted on them. I proceed therefore, in the second place, to another sort of Arguments, which are more easy and obvious; viz. such as are drawn from sensible Effects, of which I shall give these six Instances.

I. The constant Direction of Things to the same good Ends, which have no Design in themselves.

II. The watchful Providence of Things, which have no Fore-sight in themselves.

III. The mutual Agreement and Correspondency of things, which have no Understanding of themselves or of one another.

IV. The Continuation of Things in the same comely Order, which have no Government of themselves.

V. Miraculous Events.

VI. Predictions of future and remote Contingencies.

I. One sensible Instance of a Divine Providence is the constant Direction of Things to the same good Ends which have no Design in themselves. When we see things void of all Sense and Reason as constantly directed to good Ends, as they could be if they had Sense and Reason, we may be sure that there is a Reason without them that framed them for those Ends, and directs them to them; it being unconceivable how Chance or blind Necessity, that have no Design, or Art, or Contrivance in them, should constantly operate as regularly as Reason itself. Now if we survey this vast Universality of Things, we may easily observe, at least of the generality of them, that they are framed for and directed to some wise and excellent End; and tho, thro' our own short-sightedness or want of Enquiry, we do not see the Use and Tendency of them all, yet this is no Argument at all that they are vain and superfluous: For, as we now see the Use of a World of Things which past Generations understood not, so there is no doubt but future Generations will understand the Use of a World more than we; and therefore since the Usefulness of the Generality of Things is now so apparent and visible, we ought in all reason to conclude, that our not discerning the Usefulness of them all, proceeds not from their Defect, but from our own Ignorance.

Let us therefore briefly survey this beautiful Scene of Things that is before us. The Sun and Earth, for instance, are Things that are utterly void of Understanding, and therefore can have no Design or Contrivance in them; how then came they to place and continue themselves at such a commodious Distance from one another; whereas in such a vast and immense Space they might have found ten thousand Millions of other Places and Distances to fix in? The Earth might have found room enough to place it self either much nearer to, or much remoter from the Sun than it is; but if it had done so, it must have either been everlastingly parched or everlastingly frozen and benighted, and either way converted into an useless, barren, and uninhabitable Defart; whereas, where it now is, it stands at the most convenient Distance from the Sun, to be warmed and cherished by his enlivening Fires, and neither to be roasted by being too near them, nor frozen by being too far from them; but to receive from them such a temperate heat, as is sufficient to excite its seminal Virtues, and to draw up its Juices into them, and thereby to ripen its natural fruits, and in a word to comfort and refresh its Inhabitants, and to render it to them a pleasant, a healthful, and a fruitful Paradise. Since therefore of ten thousand Millions of Places wherein it might have fixed in that Immensity of Space that surrounds it, it hath fixed upon, and doth still continue in the best, without any Design or Wisdom of its own, it is plain that there is an over-ruling Wisdom without it, that chose its Place and fixes and determines it thereunto. Again, How came the Sun (for whether it be the Earth that moves about the Sun, or the Sun about the Earth is all one to our Enquiry) how came this Sun, I say, which hath no Reason to govern it self by, to be determined to such a useful Course of Motion? what makes this vast and mighty Body move round the Earth in twenty four Hours, in finishing which spacious Circle of Motion it must fly far swifter than a Bullet from a Cannon's Mouth; and yet thro' so many Ages each twenty four Hours it hath constantly performed it, without being so much as one Minute faster or slower; whereby it makes those just and regular Returns of Day and Night to both the Hemispheres, so that neither the one or the other is either too much beated by his Presence, or too long benighted by his Absence; because as soon as the one hath been sufficiently warmed and cherished with his Rays, he immediately retires from it into the other, and by so doing he gives the active Animals leave to rest, the over-beated Air to cool, and the gasping Earth to repair its fainting Virtues, which a continued heat would soon exhaust and extinguish. Thus by returning Day and Night to both Parts of the Earth once in twenty four Hours, he preserves both their Heat and Moisture, upon which all Generation depends, in a due and regular Temper; so that neither their radical Moisture is consumed by the parching Droughts of the Day, nor their vital Heat extinguished by the cool Moistures of the Night, but the one still allays and tempers the other by their quick and alternate Revolutions. How then came the Sun, that understands no Utility, and designs no End, to be determined to this Course of Motion, which above all others is so admirably useful and advantageous to this World we live in? Again, What is the Reason that since he thus equally moves round the Earth, he doth not always move in the same Circle; but run out every Day into a different Circle almost a whole Degree farther Northward or Southward, and this so constantly and precisely, that in six thousand succeeding Revolutions, he hath never varied so much as one Minute from his Course either one way or the other, and by these his stated Excurrences towards the North and South, he makes the Seasons of the Year, gives a Summer and a Winter, a Spring and a Fall, to all Parts of the Earth, without which the Earth would long ere this have been utterly useless, and all its Fruits, and for want of them its Animals too, would have for ever perished? For some Parts of it would have been scorched with everlasting Heat, others bound up with everlasting Frost; here it would have been all a Sandy, there all an Icy Defart, and so both Vegetation and Generation would every where have utterly ceas'd, either for want of Moisture or for want of Heat. How came the Sun then, which hath neither Sense nor Reason of his own to guide him, to be directed into such a commodious Course of annual Motion, when as in that vast Space he moves in, he might as well have run ten thousand other Courses of Motion; he might have moved all the Year round the Earth's Equator; but if he had done so, all the middle Tracts of Earth both Northward and Southward would soon have been scorched up with his continual Presence, and all the remoter Parts both ways would quickly have died with Cold thro' his perpetual Absence: Or he might have run his annual Course on one Side only of the Earth's Equator; and made his circular Excursions to or beyond the Pole; but if he had done so, he must have left a great Part of the opposite Hemisphere exposed to everlasting Night and Cold: Whereas in the annual Course of Motion he now performs, he sheds forth his Light, and Heat, and Influence over all the World, and by turns gives every Part its Yearly Seasons; which is a plain Evidence, that all his Motions are conducted by a wise and over-ruling Mind, which among so many Courses of Motion that lie before him in the boundless Space he moves in, hath determined him to that which, for Perpetuity, is much the best and most commodious.

Sense

And the same is to be said of the Motions of the Moon, which Nature hath designed for a vicarious Light to the Sun, to supply his Absence, and perform his Office in this lower World. For what makes this senseless and irrational Planet, that moves without any Intention of its own, wander by turns Northward and Southward some Degrees beyond the Sun? And what makes it move Northward when the Sun is Southward, and again Southward when the Sun is Northward; whereas in that immense Space wherein it swims, it hath room enough to run a thousand other Courses of Motion, none of which could have been so advantageous to us as this? For by moving Northward when the Sun is Southward, and so à contra, it moderates the Cold and Darknefs of the Winter Nights; and by passing beyond the Tropicks, which are the Boundaries of the Sun, it in some measure supplies his Absence, by enlightening those long and tedious Nights in which the Regions towards the Poles are buried; which is a plain Instance of the singular Care of Providence, that no Parts of the Earth should be left altogether destitute of the necessary Comforts of the Heavenly Light and Warmth.

Again, How came the Air, which hath no Design in itself, to place itself so commodiously as it hath done between the Earth and the Heavens? Why is there not a wide Vacuity between? Or if some Body must needs intervene, why was it not Fire or Water as well as Air, which of all other Bodies is the most commodious? For had it been a void Space, there could have been no Intercourse between Heaven and Earth, or had it been filled with Fire or Water, it would have consumed or drowned the Earth and all Things belonging to it; but as for the Air, which is a thin, soft, fluid and transparent Body, it is of all others the most proper Vehicle of the Celestial Influences. For what other Body is there, that thro' such a stupendous Distance could have conveyed down to us the Light and Heat of the Sun, with such an ineffable Swiftnefs; or what other Element could have been so proper for Animals to move and breathe in? Since therefore this Space between the Earth and Heavens might have been supplied with other Bodies, but with none so fit as Air, which yet is no way conscious of its own Fitness, and so cannot be supposed to choose this Space for itself, it is a plain Evidence that there was a wise Mind without it, that chose this Habitation for it.

And now we are come down to this terrestrial Globe, which consists of Earth and Water, let us briefly consider the admirable Use of both, and of all Things appertaining to them. How came the senseless Water to bore Holes and Channels in the Banks of the Ocean thro' long Tracts of Earth, and against its own Nature to climb up to the Tops of Mountains, that so it may be able not only to run down again with Ease, but also to carry itself to such Heights afterwards, as the Necessities of Men and Beasts require, and to unite into

into large Rivers, that run into all the inland Parts of the Earth, watering both them and their thirsty Animals all along as they go, till at last they return into the Ocean again? How came this dull and senseless Element, that can consult neither its own Convenience nor that of other Beings, to be salt where it is convenient for it self to be salt, viz. in the Ocean, by which it is preserved from Putrefaction; and fresh where it is convenient for other Beings that it should be fresh, viz. in the Fountains and Rivers, that so it may be fit to fructify the Earth, and be a wholesom Drink for its Animals? How came so many Rivers and Fountains, which do all arise from the salt Waters of the Sea, to be stripp'd of their salt Particles, by ouzing thro' the Pores of the Earth, and thereby to be render'd both fruitful to the Ground, and wholesom for Men and Beasts? How comes it to pass that so many Clouds as are drawn up out of the salt Ocean, should in their Ascent so far shake off their Salt, as to descend back again upon the Earth in sweet and fresh Showers? And how come those Vapours of which the Clouds consist, and which are much thicker and heavier than the Air, to be drawn aloft as they are by the Rays of the Sun, which have neither Pumps nor Buckets to exhale them? And when they are aloft in the Air, how come they to gather into thick Clouds, and not rather to disperse themselves about in that vast Expansum, or to return back again to the Earth in thin Vapours as they arose; and while they hang in the Air, what is it that sustains their Weight, and when they fall, how comes it to pass that they ordinarily fall in soft and gentle Showers that water the Roots of the Grass and Corn, without any prejudice to their Stalks and Blades, and not rather in Mists or Streams, which either would be insufficient to moisten the Earth, or lay waste its Corn and Fruit with the Violence of their Fall? All which are illustrious Instances of a wise and powerful Providence, that directs and orders this senseless Element, and causes it ordinarily to move and act as if it had Wisdom in it self, and did therewithal industriously consult the publick Good of the World. But this Argument you may find handled more at large in a late excellent Treatise de Deo.

And now we are arrived to the Earth, whereon we live and move and have our Beings, which tho' itself be of a broken and irregular Figure, and seems to be rather the mighty Ruins of some more beautiful Structure, than an Original Effect of the Divine Art and Contrivance, yet contains in it the most amazing Instances of an all-wise and all-powerful Providence. For how comes this dull and stupid Lump to be impregnated with such an infinite Variety of Seminal Virtues, all which do proceed as orderly and artificially in the Formation of their Plants and Fruits, as if they were every one endued with a most wise and intelligent Mind? For since the Plants do all derive their Nourishment from the inward Parts of the Earth, it is necessary that some Parts of them should be buried under Ground, that so they may come at their Food; and that these Parts should be fitted with spongy Strings to fasten them to the Earth, and to suck in those Juices of it whereon they feed; and accordingly the seminal Virtue of every Plant first forms it self a Root under Ground, which runs out more or less from the Centre of it into greater or smaller Strings, proportionable to the Magnitude of the Plant it bears, that so how great soever it be, it may by these Strings be so fasten'd to the Earth, as that the Wind to which its upper Parts are exposed, may not be able to tear them up. Then this seminal Form, whatsoever it be, digests these Strings into a porous and spongy Substance, fit to suck in the Juices of the Earth on every Side, and bores little Holes or strait Fibres thro' them from one end to the other, that so by these Conduit-pipes they may all convey the Juices they imbibed into the Centre of the Root; and having thus formed its Root, and by these Strings or nervous Filaments supplied it with plenty of Juice, by strange mysterious Art it concocts the liquid Matter into a hard and solid Substance, thro' which it also bores an infinite Number of strait Fibres from the very Centre of the Root, to convey up with it those Juices that are lodged there, with the thicker Parts of which it nourishes and increases its more solid Substance, thrusting forth the the thinner towards the Surface, and the thinnest at the Extremities of its Branches; the former of which it digests into a Bark wherewithal it clothes the tender Body of its Plant, to defend it against the Violences of Heat and Cold; the latter into Leaves, and therewithal adorns its Branches, and shelters its Fruit from the Scorching of the Sun, and the excessive Moisture of the Rain; and by thus distributing the still-rising Juices, it still increases its Plant, till such time as it arrives to its full Growth and Maturity: So that from the utmost Strings of the Root, to the Centre of it, from the Centre of the Root to the highest Branches of it, from the Branches to the Leaves and Fruit of it, these porous Fibres run on, by which every part, how distant soever from the Root, sucks up its Juices and digests them into its own Substance; for even the Leaves and Fruit are hung upon the Branches by little, soft and spongy Stalks, thro' which there run innumerable Fibres that convey the Juice from the Branches, and by stupendous Art distribute it by their Pores, thro' all the whole Body of the Leaves and Fruit. But then by what particular Art the Seminal Virtue of each particular Kind doth so constantly and regularly concoct and elaborate the Juices of the Earth into their own specifick Smells and Tastes, and Figure and Colours, is a Mystery that confounds and puzzles all our Philosophy. Now whence I beseech you proceeds this curious, inimitable Art, which we with all our Reason can neither transcribe nor comprehend? Not from the things themselves sure; for how can they have Art that have no Reason? And therefore of Necessity it must proceed from some all-wise, superintending Mind that either immediately contrives and frames them, or else impresses their seminal Virtues with its own all-wise and powerful Art, whereby they contrive and frame themselves.

Vide Lessium
de Prov.

And if in the Composure of every Plant there are such visible Footsteps of a Divine Art, how much more of every Animal, whose Parts for infinite Variety, delicate Smallness, exquisite Shape, Position and Temper, do as far excel the other, as the Offices for which they are designed? For tho' the plastick Soul that forms the Animal, hath not the least Ray of Art or Reason of its own, yet in the Formation of it, it proceeds with as much curious and incomparable Art, as if it were endowed with the most perfect Reason. For first it spins out the thicker Parts of the seminal Matter into little Threads or Fibres, Part of which it hollows into Pipes, and part into Sponges, some whereof are more thin, and some more solid; all which, with wondrous Art, it cuts and prunes in divers Places, fitting their Ends to one another, and in divers Manners knitting them together into a well-proportion'd Structure of Bones and Members: Then of the thinner Parts of the Seminal Matter it forms the Entrails, viz. the Liver and Heart and Brains, drawing out from each certain Fibres to be framed into Veins, and Arteries, and Nerves; for which end it bores and hollows them thro', extends and stretches them out at length, and divides them into innumerable Branches, which it spreads thro' all the Entrails, and thereby maintains a mutual Communication between them, and derives the Nourishment and Animal and Vital Spirits thro' all the Body. And having thus spun the several Parts out of the seminal Matter, and curiously woven them together, it concocts the remainder of the Matter, which is still supplied with new Nourishment, into the Substance of those several Parts; and this in such precise and regular Proportions as to form every one of them, tho' infinitely various from one another, into its own proper Figure, and Measure, and Proportion, so that within seven Days after the Conception, the whole Body is entirely framed and distinguished into all its proper Parts and Members; which, tho' they are so vastly great in their Number, so strangely different in their Size and Figure, so infinitely various in their Motions, and Tendencies, do all contribute one way or other to the Beauty and Benefit of the Whole: Some to propagate the Kind, others to preserve the Individual, others to distinguish what is necessary, convenient, and pleasant, from what is dangerous, offensive, or destructive to its Nature; some to pursue what is good, others to shun what is evil, others to enjoy those goods, and others to defend it against those evils that threaten or invade it: So that of all these infinitely numerous and diverse Parts, not one can be wanting or defective without some considerable Damage to the Whole. How then is it conceivable that such an infinite Number of different Animals, which are all so perfect in their Kind, so amazingly curious in their Composition, as that we with all our Reason can discern nothing in them that is either superfluous or defective, nothing in their Figure that is irregular, nothing in their Position that is misplaced, nothing in their Motion that is exorbitant, should all of them be framed by their several Plastick Souls, which are utterly blind and irrational, without the Conduct and Direction of an all-wise and all-powerful Providence? Should you behold a confused Heap of Earth, and Stone, and Iron, and Timber, without any visible Artificer near it, fall to polishing its own Parts, fitting them to one another, and disposing them into Order according to the Rules of Architecture, and at length frame them all together into the Form of a most beautiful Palace; would you not conclude that some skilful Mind were invisibly present there, and did work upon this senseless Heap, and dispose its Parts into this comely Order? And yet in the Composition of any one Animal there is infinitely more Art than in the most beautiful Structure in the World. How then can we imagine that the blind, artless Matter, of which it is composed, could ever have framed itself into this admirable Form and Contexture, had not some great Mind been invisibly present at the Composition of it, or at least imprinted on its artless Matter, some powerful Signature of its own wise Art to direct, and order and contrive it.

I might from hence have proceeded to the Formation of Man, the Master-piece of all this lower Creation, in whose Frame and Structure there are such Miracles of Art as do out-reach both the Imitation and Wonder of the most raised and comprehensive Minds. For who can sufficiently admire the skilful Contexture of his Corporeal Parts, which tho almost infinite in Number and Variety, do not only compose a Body of a most amiable Symmetry and Proportion; but are also as exactly framed and tempered and adapted to perform the Offices of Life and Motion, and Sense and Reason, as Art or Wit can fancy or imagine them? But then how much more admirable is the Soul which inhabits and animates this Body; for of whatsoever Substance this Thing we call our Soul is, it is evidently framed for great and noble Operations, to disclose the Mysteries of Nature, and to dive into its deep Philosophy, to penetrate into the Causes of Things, and with its nimble and sagacious Thoughts to survey this ample Theatre of Beings; to recollect Things past, and to foretel Things to come, to invent the most useful Arts and comprehensive Sciences, to dictate good Laws, and project wise Policies for the Government of Human Societies; and in a word, to understand the right Reasons of Things, and to regulate its Will and Affections by them: And is it possible we should imagine a Being thus exquisitely framed to be the Product of a blind and artless Matter, to be nothing but a lucky Jumble of senseless and irrational Atoms? For suppose it were nothing but elaborated Matter, yet certainly it requires infinite Art and Skill to contrive and fashion it into all those curious Springs, and Wheels and Mechanick Knacks that are necessary to render it not only a living and feeling, but also a wise and rational Matter. For how is it conceivable that a little Drop of Water, without the Assistance of any Mind or Providence, should form it self not only into all the Parts and Lineaments of a Human Body, but also into a Human Mind, a Mind of vast Desires and infinite Capacities of Knowledge, that can form Ideas within itself of every Thing that is round about it, and from them can frame innumerable Propositions, and deduce them into Arts and Sciences; and in a word that can move itself and the Body it lives in, by its own internal Springs, and form itself into so many various and contrary Affections, by the mysterious Force and Energy of its own Reason and Discourse? If you beheld a dead Pencil move without any visible Hand, and dip itself into various Colours, and draw but an exact Picture of a Man, you would doubtless conclude either that some invisible Limner, had infused into it the Art of Limning, or did immediately manage and direct it. But should you find this Picture, when it is drawn and finished, not only live and move, but reason and discourse, and exert all Sorts of Animal and Human Operations, could you imagine that ever the blind, irrational Pencil formed it of itself, without being managed or directed by some superior Mind or Providence?

And thus I have given some brief Instances of the constant Direction of all sorts of Things, how stupid and irrational soever, to some wise and good End; which is a plain Evidence of an universal Providence over the World, that in a constant and uniform Series directs Things to their proper Ends that have no Aim or Design of their own, and so are utterly incapable to guide and direct themselves.

II. Another sensible Evidence of a divine Providence is, the sagacious Providence of Things that have no Foresight in themselves. For among irrational Beings, that can neither apprehend for what Ends they act, nor by what Means they may best effect them, how strange is it to consider with what Insight and Providence they many of them act in storing up Provisions for themselves against a time of Extremity, in framing their own Beds and Nests, and defending themselves and their Young against approaching Dangers; in educating their Young, and propagating their Kind thro' all succeeding Generations; in-somuch that if they were every one endued with Reason of their own to foresee their own Dangers, and forecast their own Conveniency and Safety, they could not act with more Skill and Sagacity than they do. For thus the Plants that have neither Sense nor Reason to discern the Periods of their own Growth and Decay, when they have almost spent themselves, and are ready to wither and die, run up into Seed, as if they foresaw their own approaching Fate, and did thereupon bethink themselves of propagating their Kind before it be too late, and leaving a numerous Posterity behind them. And therefore since they have neither Thought nor Forecast in themselves, 'tis evident that there is a Providence that thinks and forecasts for them.

Thus also those Plants that shoot up on high, but are too weak to support themselves, such as the Hop and Vine and Ivy, run out into little Strings or Tendrils, with which they lay hold upon some Body that is stronger than themselves; as if they were conscious of their own Weakness, and so to prop up themselves did designedly twist about those stronger Bodies, that are best able to support them. And therefore since they neither know their own Weakness, nor yet the Strength of the Trees or Wall they depend on, it is evident that there is a wise Providence that knows both, and guides and directs them to their Safety.

And as there is a visible Providence over Plants, so there is also over brute and irrational Animals, and especially over the smallest and most contemptible, who by reason of their Natural Weakness and Impotence are less able to provide for themselves. For thus the Spider is a Creature as void of Reason as the Plant of Sense, and yet with what wondrous Art doth he spin his Web out of a viscous Matter within his own Bowels? He extends the Threads of it a-cross to one another, leaving equal Angles in the Middle, fastening the extreme to the opposite Threads; and then lest thro' the Weakness of the slender Threads of which it is composed, the Fly he hunts should happen to break thro', he weaves several Under-nets one within another, and with a wondrous Art fastens them altogether, that so if one should fail, the other might hold: And when he hath thus fix'd and spread his subtle and strange contriv'd Snares, he lies in wait in a little Den without, made by him on purpose to conceal himself; from whence, as soon as the Fly is entangled, he swiftly runs and seizes it, and having killed it, carries it away and lays it up in a safe Repository against a Time of Famine: In all which Performance this irrational Insect proceeds as providently and wisely, as if in a long Deduction he had inferr'd one thing from another, and acted upon the most rational Deliberation; and therefore since he is void of Reason himself, and doth not determine himself by any natural Logick of his own, he must proceed by the Reason and Direction of some wise Mind without him, that hath the guidance and disposal of his Motion. For he begins not to exercise his Art after he is arriv'd to a riper Age, but is born with his Trade about him, and spins and weaves from his very Infancy; nor is there any diversity in his Manufacture, as there uses to be in those of rational Artificers, but 'tis always woven in the same manner, and figure, and fashion; which is a plain Evidence that he effects it not by any Art or Reason of his own, but by mere natural Instinct, which is nothing but the Impression of the Art and Reason of the Author of Nature, which Impression knows not what it doth, nor upon what Reasons it proceeds, but only answers to the Reason of God, as the Signature doth to the Seal that impress'd it, and like an Echo articulates and resounds his Voice without understanding what it means. And as the senseless Echo, when it reverberates Words that carry Sense and Reason in them, supposes the original Voice to proceed from some intelligent Mind; so these irrational Instincts of Nature, which express so much Art and Reason in their Operations, do necessarily imply, that there is some wise Mind or Providence to which they owe their original and continuance.

For thus, to instance farther, with what a strange and wonderful Art do the Bees frame their Combs, which they divide on each Side into a world of little six corner'd Cells, and then prop them up with middle Walls of Pillars which they raise from the Floor into an Arch; by which as they are rendred more strong, so the Bees have an entrance thro' to repair them whenever they decay? And having thus artificially built their Houses, with what industry do they wander to and fro to gather the sweet Dews of Heaven, whereon they live, from the Herbs and Flowers of the Field? And with what Care do they treasure them up in those little Cells against Winter, when they can neither go forth by reason of the cold to seek their Sustenance abroad, nor yet find it if they could? And when they have fill'd their Cells with their Winter Provision, they providently draw over the Mouth of them a thin Skin or Membrane to preserve the grateful Liquor lest it should drop out and be lost: And in a word, in what a regular Order do they live? They rest and labour all together, and in the Discharge of several Offices conspire to the same work: Some press the Flowers with their Feet, others with their Mouths, or the Down of their Bodies, gather up the Moistures which these press out, and carry them home to their Cells; some bring home the Materials of which these Cells are composed, others disburthen them of it, others build with it, and others plane and polish the Building. Thus all Hands are at work, first to build the House they are to dwell in, and to divide it into its several Apartments, and then to store them all with Provision against the ensuing Time of Scarcity. Now therefore (not to mention their wondrous Polity and Government of which so many curious Observations have been made) how is it possible they should do all these Things with so much regularity and exact order, without being guided by some Art and Reason? But yet 'tis certain 'tis not by any Reason of their own; they do not at all consider, when they build, how needful Houses are for themselves and their Winter Provisions, nor how convenient that waxy Matter which they gather is to build those Houses; nor what Necessity there is of dividing them into distinct Cells and Apartments; they understand not the Nature of those sweet Dews which they gather, whether they are Food or Poison; and when they gather more than they have present need of, they know not why they do it; they reason not with themselves that Winter is approaching, wherein neither these Dews will fall upon which they live, nor themselves be able to go forth and gather them, and that therefore it behoves them to store themselves before-hand against the ensuing Famine; and when that they have laid up their Store, and are binding it in with the Membrane they draw over it, they do not consider that 'tis a fluid Matter, that will be apt to run out and be lost: And yet all these Things they perform with as much Regularity and Art, as if they had thorowly weigh'd and consider'd, and perfectly understood the Reasons of them; which is a plain Evidence that they are acted by a Reason that is not their own; and what other Reason can this be, than that of the divine Mind, which governs and disposes all Things? And the same may be said of Ants, and Moles, and Palmer-worms, and innumerable other Animals, which tho they have no Reason of their own, are yet in many Instances as evidently conducted by Reason as any rational Beings whatever.

For with what admirable Art do the irrational Birds form their nests a little after their coupling? They begin to build tho they neither consider that they are breeding, nor yet do foresee when then shall lay: By which it's plain that there is a Providence which considers and foresees for them: And tho they understand not what Materials are fittest to build their Nests, nor in what Order to frame and dispose them, yet there is a very wise Understanding that directs them both to choose and contrive the Materials, and this with greater Art than we with all our Reason can do. For as for the outward Surface of the Nests, which comes not near their Bodies, they frame it with sticks and thorns, which with inimitable Art they twist and interweave into a round and uniform hollown^{ess}, which they commonly dawb round with Mud to render it more compact and warm; when this is done, tho they understand not their own specifick Frame and Constitution, yet they proceed as if they did, and suit their Nests to the strength or weakness of their Natures; for those of them that are of a hardier Make content themselves with this inward plaistering, and when 'tis dried proceed to lay and hatch their Eggs on it, without troubling themselves to line it with any softer Materials, as if they knew beforehand that the Constitution of their Young would be such as would not need any softness or delicacy; whereas those that are of a tenderer Frame take care to clothe the hard Plaistering with straw or hay or moß, upon which those that are tenderest of all make another Layer of hair or down or feathers, as if they perfectly understood what Degree of softness and warmth would be necessary for the Preservation and Nourishment of their tender Offspring. Since therefore it's certain that they know none of all these Things, and yet they act as if they did, they must necessarily be supposed to act by the direction of some wise Mind that perfectly knows them all. And then again, considering with what patience and diligence the Female sits upon her Eggs when she hath laid them, as if she understood the Philosophy of her own warmth, how necessary it is to form, animate and hatch them; and with what care and industry the Male brings in her Provision whilst she is sitting, that so she may not be forced by the Necessities of Nature to neglect their Eggs, and leave them too long exposed to the cold Air, which in a short time would destroy the tender Principles of Life within them; and in a word, with what care and industry they both conspire to cherish and feed their Young when they are hatch'd, till such time as they are cloth'd and fledg'd, and can fly abroad to seek Provision for themselves; considering, I say, how in all these Things they proceed as if they perfectly understood the reasons and necessities of their own Actions, 'tis plain that they must be guided either by a Reason in their own, or in some other Mind, that hath the command and conduct of their Motions. Now that it is not by a Reason of their own is evident, because whatsoever they do, they necessarily do, and cannot possibly do otherwise; for they never vary in their Operations, never try any new Experiments, but always proceed in the same Road, and repeat the same Things in the same Method, which is a plain Sign that they cannot do otherwise, and consequently that they act not from Reason but Necessity; and therefore, since they are made and impelled to act as they do, and yet do act so *rational*ly and wisely, that which impels them must be a rational Mind either acting upon them immediately, or by a fix'd and permanent Impression of its Art and Reason.

son on their Motions : For, as Aristotle hath long since observ'd, ἐν τῇ τέλει καὶ ἐν ζήτησιν οὐκ ἔστι βουλευόμενα ποιεῖν, they do these Things neither by any Art, nor Counsel, nor Deliberation of their own : They are not Masters of the Wisdom by which they act, but are merely passive to the Impressions of that Wisdom that are made upon them ; for so Men, we see, for their own Profit and others Pleasure, can teach Dogs and other Animals to dance the Measures of Tunes, and other artificial Motions, the Rules and Ends of which they understand not ; for when they perform these Motions, they neither think of their Master's Profit nor the Spectator's Pleasure, which is the End and Design of them, nor understand the Proportions of Musick, which is the Rule of them : So that the Reason of their Motions is only in their Teacher's Mind, who, by frequent Use, doth, by Degrees, imprint the Practice of his Art upon their Fancies ; and if a Man can so imprint his Art upon these artless Creatures, as to make them practise it without understanding either the Grounds or Reasons of it, how much more may an All-wise and Almighty Mind ? And therefore, since de facto we behold a World of curious Art among Brute-Animals, that far exceeds all the little Feats we can teach them, why may we not as reasonably believe, that any one of these dancing Animals learn'd all his artificial Motions, the Reason of which he understands not, without any Arts-master to teach him, as that Ants and Bees acquir'd all the Art and Providence they practise, without either discovering the Reasons of it by any Understanding of their own, or being ever instructed in it by any other provident Mind ? for Art and Providence cannot be suppos'd without Reason, and therefore since the Reason of their Art is not in themselves, it must necessarily be in some Mind without them, that hath the Conduct and Direction of all their Motions.

III. Another sensible Evidence of a divine Providence, is the mutual Agreement and Correspondency of Things that have no Understanding of themselves, or of one another : For if we look abroad into the World, we cannot but observe an admirable Harmony among Things which yet have no Kind of Knowledge of one another, and therefore cannot be suppos'd to have framed and adapted themselves to one another ; nor yet to be so framed and adapted, but by the Art and Contrivance of some very wise and intelligent Mind. For how can any Cause fit any two Things to one another, without having some Idea in his Mind of the Natures of them both ? If therefore, in the Nature of Things we can discover a World of mutual Suitabilities of this to that, and of one Thing to another, it will be a sufficient Argument that they all proceed from some wise Cause that had an universal Idea of their Natures in his Mind, and saw how such a Thing would suit such a Thing, before ever he actually adapted them one to another.

Now, not to insist any farther upon the admirable Fitness of the Sun and Earth, the Water and Earth, the Air and Heaven and Earth one to another, which I have largely discours'd already, how exactly is every Animal fitted for its Element, and every Element for its Animals ? Thus the Birds, for Instance, are fitted with Wings to fly aloft in the Air, and the Air is fitted to bear them up, and to yield to the Vibration of their Wings : The Fishes are fitted to swim in the Water, having Fins, which serve instead of Oars, to cut thro' and divide the Streams, and the Waters are fitted for the Fish to swim in, being a soft and fluid Substance that is easily cut and divided ; and as for the Earth, and those earthly Animals that inhabit it, there is an admirable Congruity between them ; for they being all fram'd to walk or creep, must have an hard and solid Matter to move on, and the Earth being an hard and solid Matter, requires such Animals as can walk or creep on it : And as every Element is fitted for the Motion of its Animals, and every Animal to move in its Element ; so every Element hath a Food that is proper to the Appetites of its Animals, and every Animal an Appetite that is proper to the Food of its Element : So that as every Animal is fitted within with all those Faculties and Organs that are requisite to its procuring and enjoying what is good for it, and its shunning and repelling what is hurtful ; so it is also furnish'd without, with all that is necessary or convenient for its Support and Satisfaction. Thus every Faculty within hath an Object without prepar'd for it, that is exactly correspondent therewith, without which, as hath been excellently observ'd, the Faculty would become vain and useless, yea, and sometimes harmful and destructive; as reciprocally the Object would import little or nothing, if such a Faculty were not provided for and suit'd to it. For thus the Eye would be perfectly useless, if it were not for the Light, and the Light would be much less considerable if it were not for the Eye; for if all Light were extinguish'd, all those curious Colours into which the Light is refracted, would be utterly insignificant; and if all those Colours were extinguished, the Eye would be utterly depriv'd of one of its most pleasant Entertainments. And what Use would there be of all that infinite Variety of melodious Sounds, fragrant Odours, and delicious Savours which this Frame of Nature affords, were there no bearing, smelling or tasting Faculties? and, What would these Faculties signify, were there no such Sounds, or Odours, or Savours? So that these Objects and Faculties are all as perfectly fitted one to another, as it was possible for Art to fit them: Nothing could be better fitted for seeing than the Eye; nothing better framed, to render Things visible, than the Light, and Light can be refracted into no Colour so grateful unto the Eye as green, which is the great Colour of Nature; and the same may be said of the Ear and Sounds, the Smell and Odours, the Taste and Savours. And if the Eye were made to see, and the Ear to hear, as there is no doubt but they were, being so exquisitely fram'd for that purpose, to be sure Light was made for seeing, and Sounds for bearing, and so for all the rest: And how is it possible that so many Things should be made so exactly harmonious and agrecable with one another, without the powerful Art and Direction of some very skilful Mind, that knew before-hand, that this Thing would perfectly fit that, and consequently had a perfect Idea of them both? When, therefore, we behold such exact Correspondencies between the motive Faculties of Animals, and the Elements they move in, between the Fruits and Products of those Elements, and the Faculties of Taste, Digestion, and Nutrition, in those Animals that inhabit them; and, in a word, between all sensible Objects without, and sensitive Objects within, how is it possible we should be so senseless, as not to trace out an all-directing Wisdom by Foot-steps that are so express and remarkable? For, suppose you heard a musical Instrument move its own Strings into an exquisite Harmony, and run long Divisions of curious and well-proportion'd Notes, without the Impulse of any visible Artist, would you not conclude, either that some invisible Hand did immediately touch and play upon its Strings, or that they were mov'd by some internal Spring and Contrivance of a musical Mind? how then can we attend to the admirable Harmonies of Nature, to the natural References and due Proportions and exact Correspondencies of all its innumerable Parts to one another, without believing that there is some great harmonical Mind which turn'd it at first, and still plays upon it by the immediate Touch and Impulse of its own invisible Hand.

Satisf-

And as all Things are thus fitted and adapted together, so are they also most regularly subordinated to one another, according to their Rank and Worth; the senseless Elements, with all their Fruit and Product, being subject to the Use of Animals, to whom they afford a vast Variety of all Conveniences and Necessaries answerable to their Desires and Needs; so that of all those vast Numbers of sensitive Beings, there is no one Kind or Individual, no, not so much as a Fly, or Worm, or Insect, but what is plentifully supplied out of these common Store-houses of Nature. And as the Elements are subjected to the Use of Animals, so both are subject to the Use of Man, who is as much superior to the Brute-Animals, as they are to the senseless Elements. To him therefore, as it is most fit and congruous, all Things here below pay tribute; the Earth ingenders within its Bowels Quarries of Stone and Mines of Coal and Metals to serve his necessary Uses and Conveniences, and spreads its Surface with a vast Variety of Herbs and Flowers and fruitful Trees to supply him with Food and with Physick, and treat him with pleasure and delight, to entertain his Eye with beautiful colours, his

his smell with fragrant odours, and his palate with delicious savours; the Waters serve to quench his thirst, to dress his food, to fructify his fields and gardens, to cleanse his Body and habitation, and to maintain and facilitate his intercourse and traffic with all Parts of the World; the Air fans him with refreshing gales, supplies him with breath, and with vital and animal Spirits; the Fire warms and cherishes him, concocts his Meat and Drink into fit and wholesom Nourishment, and serves him in his most necessary Arts and manual Operations. And as all the four elements do one way or other conspire to our Use and Benefit, so do all the Animals too that inhabit them, tho as yet there are sundry of them whose use we have not discovered, but as for the generality of them they are innumerable ways adapted to our use; some to furnish our Table with food and delicacies, others to prevent or to remove our Diseases with their medicinal Virtues; some to clothe, and some to adorn our Bodies, others to assist us in, and others to ease us of our Labours, and others to entertain us with cheerful sports and recreations. Thus all Things here below have as plain a reference to the Use of Man who is the noblest Part of them, as if some wise and powerful Mind had contriv'd them on purpose to serve and benefit him; as on the contrary Man hath so plain a reference to them, considering his needs and his sensitive and rational Faculties, as if the same wise Mind had fram'd him on purpose to use and enjoy them.

And is it possible that after all this we should be so stupid as not to discern those bright Beams of Wisdom which shine thro' so many perspicuous Correspondencies? For it's certain that either they must be designed by Wisdom, or happen by Chance; and is it possible that a blind Chance which can do nothing regularly, and is the Parent only of monstrous and deform'd Births, should thus exquisitely fit and adapt things to one another in such a long and orderly Series? that Chance, which never yet compos'd a tune or wrote a line of coherent sense should ever be the Author of this great Frame of Things, in which there is more of harmony than in all the musical Composures, and more of Sense and Philosophy than in all the studied Volumes in the World? And if it can't be the Effect of Chance, it must be the Product of Wisdom and Providence.

IV. Another sensible evidence of a divine Providence, is, the continuation of Things in the same comely Order which have no government of themselves. That Things are put into a most useful, wise and artificial Order hath been sufficiently demonstrated under the foregoing Particulars; now I would fain know what was it reduced them to, and still continues them in this Order? Did the blind Parts of the matter whereof these Things are composed, once upon a time as they were wandering thro' the field of infinite space beckon to one another, and by common consent assemble themselves into a General Council, and there advise together how they should rank and marshal themselves into a World, and when upon grave and mature Advice they had agreed upon, and describ'd and chalk'd out the laws of their Motion, did they break up Council, and set forth in their several lines to the Execution of their Canons and Decrees, till by their oblique, parallel and counter-motions, they at last interwove themselves into all those beautiful contextures we behold? He who can imagine this to be either probable or possible, must himself be as dull and stupid as those senseless Parts of matter are, of which he dreams. Well then, since these Things could not be effected by any Counsel or Contrivance in the matter itself, was it by mere chance that these blind Parts of Matter floating in an immense space, did, after several jostlings and encounters, jumble themselves into this beautiful Frame of Things? Alas, this is a Conceit, if possible, more ridiculous than the former; for how is it possible to imagine that Chance should ever make a Man in the contexture of whose Parts there are such Wonders of Art, as do as far exceed the most curious Engines and Machines that ever human Art invented, as the most glorious and magnificent Palace doth a Castle of Cards? And if Chance cannot so much as draw the Picture of a Man, which is but a rude Imitation of his outside; how much less can it shape, temper, and connect all all those bidden and subtile Springs of life and motion, sense and imagination, memory and passion within him? Well then, since it was neither from any wisdom in the matter of them, nor from any casual motion of that Matter, that this orderly Series of Things did proceed, was it from a blind necessity? But pray what made this Necessity? how came the matter of these things that might have moved otherwise, having an infinite space about it, and no Principle within it to incline it one way more than another, to determine it self to this Series of Motion? If you say it was by Chance, I have shew'd it is impossible; and if you say it was from Eternity, that is all one. For as an excellent Author of our own hath observ'd, whether it were now, or yesterday, or from Eternity, infers no difference as to our purpose, not the circumstance of the time, but the quality of the cause being only here considerable; the same cause being alike apt or unapt yesterday as to day, always as sometimes, from all Eternity as from any set time to produce such effects. So that 'tis as possible for Matter fortuitously moved, without any Art or Counsel, to compose a World now, and to frame it into Animals and Men, as it was from Eternity; that is, 'tis from all Eternity, and now equally impossible: and if it were by the Counsel of some intelligent Mind, that it was fram'd into this World of Beings and orderly Series of Things, then it is doubtless by the same Mind that its order and harmony is still continued and preserved. For it is altogether as impossible for Matter of itself, unguided by Wisdom and Art, to pursue any constant Course, as to fall into any regular form, it being as we see all torn and broken into little Parts innumerable many, and infinitely diverse in their size, and figures and motions, and thence only fit in their several courses to cross and confound each other. How then is it possible without vast Wisdom and answerable Power so to manage this wild and disorder'd Swarm of Atoms, as to determine them to their proper bounds, continue them in their regular ranks and files, and preserve them in the same tenure of Action, so as that in all those new productions of the individuals of every kind of Plants and Animals which are every Day compounded out of them, they should none of them ever extravagate in their Motions so as to disturb and hinder one another, and finally disorder and interrupt the natural Course of Generation? When therefore we consider how this great Machine of the World (as the above-cited Author expresseth it) whose Parts are infinite for number and variety, hath stood six thousand Years together, always one and the same, unimpair'd in its beauty, unworn in its Parts, unwearied and undisturbed in its motions; thro' what an infinite Series of generations and corruptions all its plants and animals have pass'd; and yet how after they have been corrupted over and over, and their whole Frames have been broke in pieces, and all their Parts divided and dispersed, they have still been generated anew, and rallied into the same specifick Natures, which, tho they still consist of numberless Parts, are constantly drawn up into the same Postures and Figures and Positions, and with strange regularity digested into the same handsome order, as if they all kept time with the musical Laws of some Almighty Mind, as the Stones of Thebes did with Amphion's Lute, and thereby continually danc'd into their natural figures. When, I say, we consider these strange and wondrous Things, what tolerable Account can we give of the Performance of them without an over-ruling Providence? For, how is it imaginable that in a six thousand Years Course of Generations and Corruptions these blind and undesigining Parts of Matter, which by reason of their infinite diversity are so naturally apt to thwart and disturb one another, should maintain such regular Courses of Motion as still to concenter in the same Forms, so as that thro' all this vast Tract of Time, not so much as one kind of plants or animals should miscarry? How, I say, could this have been, had they not all along been conducted by a steady unerring Providence?

V. Another sensible evidence of a Divine Providence, is the miraculous events that have happen'd in the World. By miraculous Events, I mean such as either for their matter or manner of production, do exceed the Power of natural causes, causes, or at least are produc'd by them out of their establish'd course and order: Such as dividing the Sea, stopping the Sun, raising the Dead, curing the sick, and blind, and lame, with a touch or word; of all which, we have notorious Instances both in the old and new Testament, and these attested with as full and convincing Evidence as ever any Matters of Fact were that are recorded in History. For, as for the Miracles of the Old Testament, besides that they were sundry of them performed in the publick View of Nations, and were recorded in those very Ages wherein they were wrought, and so could have been easily disproved by ten thousand living Witnesses, had they not been true; besides, that they were attested by the most antient Heathen Poets and Historians in their Mythologies and Histories; who, to be sure, would never have yielded the Glory of such wondrous Effects to a Nation whom they bated and despised, had they not been forced to it by undeniable Evidence: In a word, besides that they were confirm'd by the succeeding Prophets of that Nation, who both by the Miracles they wrought, and by the exact Accomplishment of their Predictions, have sufficiently evidenc'd themselves to be supernaturally inspir'd; besides all which, I say, the Miracles of the Old Testament are abundantly attested by the New, the Credit whereof is ratified and confirm'd by a World of new Miracles wrought by our Saviour himself, and particularly by his Resurrection from the Dead, which are not only in part confessed by the Jews themselves, his most mortal Enemies, and by the Heathen Writers, who were implacable Persecutors of his Religion, but also by his own Disciples, and Apostles, who, as I shall shew hereafter, were Eye-witnesses of these Miracles, and did not only attest them with their Mouths, but also sealed their Testimony with their Blood, and confirmed it before all the World with infinite other Miracles which they wrought in his Name, and which they continued to work for several Ages together; as is evident not only from the wondrous Success of their Ministry, which without being attested with such miraculous Effects could never have propagated in so short a time such a bated Religion over all the World, but also from the confident Appeals which the Christian Writers frequently make to their Heathen Enemies, in which they Subpæna them in as daily Spectators of their wondrous Works, and for the truth of them, challenge their own Eyes and Ears. So then, that there have been such miraculous Effects, can no more be doubted than that there have been such Men as Pompey the Great, or Julius Cæsar, the former being attested, all things considered, with much more Evidence than the latter.

And if this Attestation be true, there must be a Providence; for how is it possible that blind Nature, which neither deliberates nor chooses, should of itself ever vary or interrupt its course, without rushing into utter confusion and disorder? How should any part of it, when 'tis once moved either faster or slower than ordinary, so restrain or quicken its own Motion as to reduce itself back again to its Established Course? For, if it once move faster, it must have some Degree of Motion superadded to it, and till that is withdrawn it must move faster for ever: If it move slower, it must have some Degree of Motion withdrawn from it, and till that be restored it must move slower for ever: How then is it possible that Nature, or any part of it which moves by a blind Necessity, should of its own accord either hasten and then slacken, or slacken and then hasten the Course of its Motion, as it must do in the Production of miraculous Effects, without being influenc'd by an Almighty Providence? We have several miraculous Instances of the diverting natural Causes from their Course, and stopping them in it; such as causing the Waters to divide and stand still, and the Sun to move backward. Now, how is it conceivable that any natural Cause that hath no will of its own to move and determine it, should either stop its own motion and then move again, or divert from its Course and then return again, if it were not under the Command of some Will without it, that guides and disposes it according to its own Counsel? But besides these Scripture Miracles, there are sundry miraculous Instances of the rewarding good Men and punishing bad, publickly recorded in the Histories of all Ages; some of vindicating the Innocence, others of restoring the Lives, others of relieving the Necessities of good Men; some of detecting the Crimes of bad Men, others of striking them dead in their impious Facts, others of punishing them in kind, and others of inflicting on them those very Plagues which they have imprecated on themselves to give credit to a falsehood; of some or other of which, there is scarce any Age in the World which hath not been furnished with sundry notorious Instances: So that unless we will give the Lye to all human Testimony, and condemn the Records of all Ages for publick Cheats and Impostures, we cannot deny but that there have been sundry Miracles in the World; and if of all these Miracles, that have been so strongly attested, there be but any one true and real, that one is a sufficient Argument of an over-ruling Providence. For, if ever any thing hath been effected that is either above the Power, or contrary to the established Course of natural Causes, it must be brought to pass by the Power of God; and if God doth sometimes visibly exert his own immediate Efficacy on this World, this is a plain Evidence that he always governs it: For whenever he thus exerts it, it is for some reason to be sure, and for what other reason should he thus strip his Arm, and visibly exert his Power upon or before us, but either to awaken our attention, or to confirm our faith, or alarm our fear, or encourage our hope? And if ever he had any such Design upon us, it must be in order to his governing us; for to what other purpose can an Almighty Being be supposed to address himself to our Hope and Fear, and Faith and Attention, but to subdue and reduce us under his Rule and Government?

VI. And lastly, another visible Evidence of a divine Providence, is Predictions of future and remote Contingencies: That there have been such Things, hath been universally acknowledged by Heathens as well as Jews and Christians. As for the Heathens, Tully gives numerous Instances of it in his two Books of Divination; in the first of which, he sets down this as the great Principle of Prediction: Esse Deos, & eorum providentiâ mundum administrari, eosdemque consulere rebus humanis, nec solum universis, verum etiam singulis, i. e. That there are Gods, and that by their Providence the World is governed, that they take care of human Affairs, and this not only in general, but in particular. And of these Predictions he tells, there was one Chrysippus who wrote a large Book, in which he gives innumerable Instances of them, all confirmed by very good Authority. Besides which, there were their Oracles and their Sibylline Writings, among which, if there had not been a great many true Predictions, it is not to be imagined that ever the wiser and more inquisitive Part of Men should be so far imposed on as they were to pay such a mighty respect and veneration to them, and that not only for a little while, but for several Ages together. But as for their Oracles, there are sundry of them recorded in antient Historians, together with their punctual Accomplishments; and Tully in particular, tells us of one of Apollo his Oracles, which foretold a thousand Years before, that Syphselus the Tyrant should reign at Corinth. And Varro makes mention of one Veetius Valens, an Augur in the time of Romulus, who when Rome was building, foretold by the flying of twelve Vultures, that the City should continue a thousand two hundred Years, which accordingly happen'd. But as for the reality of Predictions, we need seek no farther than the Holy Scriptures, in which you have sundry Prophecies of things which happen'd a long time after, as particularly of the Deliverance of the Jews from those two Captivities, the one in Egypt, the other in Babylon; the former of which was foretold four hundred Years, and the latter above seventy Years before it came to pass; and yet both of them accomplished punctually to a Day, as you may see in Gen. 15. 13, compared with Exod. 12. 41. and Jer. 25. 12. compared with 2 Chron. 36. 21, 22. which latter Prophecy is not only recorded in Scripture, but mentioned by Eupolemus, an Heathen Historian, cited by Eusebius, Præpar. pag. 454. Thus also you have Esay his Prophecy Prophecy of Cyrus whose Name and Achievements he most exactly foretels long before he was born, Isa. 45. 1, &c. And then for Daniel's Prophecies of the grand Revolutions of the Empires of the World, they do so punctually describe what happen'd long after, that Porphyry himself, tho a mortal Enemy to Christianity, is forced to confess the exact Agreement of his Prophecies with the succeeding Events (vid. St. Chrysost. cont. Jud. Tom. 6. pag. 326.) and hath no other way to evade the Force of them, but by affirming, without any Colour of Reason or Authority, that they were written afterwards in or near the Time of Antiochus Epiphanes; tho it is evident that the LXX. Interpreters who translated the Old Testament a hundred Years before, translated this Prophecy of Daniel with it. And Josephus expressly tells us, that Jaddus the High-Priest shewed this very Prophecy to Alexander the Great, who lived long before Antiochus, Joseph. Antiq. l. 11. But, to name no more, there are the Prophecies of the Messias, of the Place and most particular Circumstances of his Nativity, and Ministry, and Life, and Death, and Resurrection, and Ascension; all which were so punctually accomplished in our blessed Saviour, that did not the Jews, in whose Hands they have been always preserved, own and acknowledge them, one would be apt to suspect that they were forged on purpose by some Christian to countenance our Saviour's Pretence of being the true Messias.

And if there be any such thing as Prophecy, if but any one of all these Instances be real (and that none of them should, would be very strange) this one will be a sufficient Evidence of a Divine Providence; for to foresee things at a distance, and before their Causes are in Being, so as to describe before hand the precise Time, and Place, and Manner of their Existence, or to foresee things casual and contingent, that wholly depend upon the free Choice and Determination of voluntary Agents, requires a Mind of infinite Comprehension, that sees thro' all the whole Series of Causes, and hath a perfect Prospect not only of those Things that actually exist, but also of all that are future and possible. For, how is it possible to foresee a remote Futurity in all its particular Circumstances, whose immediate Cause is either unborn, or free and undetermined, without having a perfect Inspection not only into the Natures, and Inclinations, and Tendencies of Things, but also into all their particular Conjunctions and Conspiracies? And that Mind which sees into all these, must needs be all-seeing, and have nothing concealed from it, that is either present, or future, or possible. So that if there be any such thing as Prediction of remote and contingent Futurities, it must necessarily proceed from an all-seeing Mind; and if there be an all-seeing Mind that oversees the whole World, and accurately inspects all that is past, or present, or to come in it, is it imaginable that such a Mind should sit looking on as an idle Spectator, and act no Part itself in such a vast and busy Scene of Things? For that it thus exactly inspects and takes notice of the World, is a plain Argument that it is greatly concerned for it; and that it should be greatly concerned for it, and yet do nothing about it, nor exercise any Providence over it, is altogether inconceivable. And thus I have shewn, with all the Plainness I could, what Evidences there are to create in us a Belief of a divine Providence, which I persuade my self are such, as duly considered, cannot but prevail with Minds that are not steel'd against all Convictions, and utterly abandoned both of their Reason and Modesty.

S E C T. III.

The Objections against Providence considered and answered.

I Now proceed to the third and last Thing proposed to be treated of in this Chapter; and that is to shew the Insufficiency and Unreasonableness of the common Pretences to Infidelity in this Matter; and here, not to insist upon all the little and shameful Cavils which have been made against Providence, which are so very inconsiderable that 'twould be too great a Credit to them to be seriously confuted; I shall insist upon those only which are the common, and do carry the fairest shew of Reason with them, and they are these five:

I. That the Exercise of a Providence doth not comport with the Majesty of God.

II. That it doth not consist with the Ease and Happiness of God.

III. That it is not reconcilable with the manifold Evils which we behold in the World.

IV. That if there were such a Providence, it could not admit of the unequal Divisions of Goods and Evils which are made in this World.

V. That it is not to be reconciled with the wretched State and Condition to which we behold the greatest Part of Mankind abandoned."

I. It is objected against the Being of Providence, that it doth not comport with the Majesty of God to take notice of, or concern himself about the little Affairs of this World. Which is such an Objection as carries its own Answer with it; for I would fain know which is most suitable to Majesty, to sit still or to act, to wrap up itself in everlasting Sloth and Idleness, or to display itself in a vigorous Activity? And if it be greater and more majestick, as doubtless it is, for any Being to employ and exercise its Powers, than to let them lie asleep and make no use of them, I would fain know in what higher Sphere can God exercise his Powers than in governing the World. For to govern well is the best and greatest thing that we can frame an Idea of; 'tis to do the greatest Good, to dispense the noblest Virtues, and to shed forth the amplest Sphere of Benefits. And therefore since the World is such a vast Dominion, doubtless the most glorious Employment that the largest Mind can undertake, is to rule and govern it; and there is nothing can be greater and more Godlike, than to sit at the Helm of this floating Universe, and steer its Motions to their Ends with a steady and unerring Hand. What therefore can God do more worthy of himself than to govern the World well and wisely? Or wherein can he better display the Glory of his own Perfection, than in keeping this mighty Engine in such an admirable Order? so as that tho its Parts are infinite in Number and Variety, and in their several Lines of Motion do frequently cross and intersect each other; yet they do neither clash nor interfere, disturb nor confound one another, but in their different Functions mutually assist each other; and all conspire in a common Good, composing out of their infinite Discords a most elegant Harmony, in which mighty Performance there is scope enough for an infinite Power to exert its utmost Activity, for an infinite Wisdom to employ its utmost Skill, and for an infinite Goodness to put forth its utmost Beneficence.

So that to undertake this Province of governing the World, is so far from being beneath the Majesty of God, that it would be an unpardonable Arrogance for any but a God to undertake it; and if Contrivance be the End of Wisdom, Action of Power, Beneficence of Goodness, as doubtless they are, where can the infinite Power, and Wisdom, and Goodness of God find a more ample Sphere for Action, Contrivance, and Beneficence, than in the Government of the World? And if it be the proper Exercise of Majesty to govern, what can better better comport with the greatest Majesty, than to display itself in the Government of the largest Dominion, which is that of the World?

But then considering that God himself is the Father of all this great Family of Beings, how can it be beneath his Majesty, to take care of his own Offspring? Why should it be below him to provide for any thing which was not below him to create? If there be any thing in this World so contemptible as not to deserve his Regard, why did he create it? If there be not, why should he disdain to govern it? And if every thing in this World hath some End for the sake of which God thought it worthy to be one of the Objects of his Creation, why should he not as well think the constant Direction of it to that End, to be an Object worthy of his Providence?

II. It is farther objected against the Being of God's Providence, that it is inconsistent with his Quiet and Happiness. For to attend to such an infinite Number of Things as the Government of the World includes, cannot but distract his Thoughts, and thereby disturb him in the Enjoyment of himself. All which is a gross mistake, arising from no other cause but our measuring God by our selves; because we find our own Minds so narrow, and our own Powers so limited, as that we cannot without Distraction attend to many things at once, therefore we conclude that this mighty Business of governing the World must needs be very uneasy to God. Whereas if we considered God as a Being that is infinitely perfect, whose Almighty Power implies an Ability to do whatsoever is possible, and whose infinite Knowledge includes an universal Prospect of all Things past, present and to come, this would easily convince us of the Vanity and Falsehood of this Objection: for it is by Reason of Imperfection, that Beings operate with Labour and Difficulty; it is because their Powers are weak, and not able to conquer without struggling the Resistances of the Objects upon which they operate; but against perfect and infinite Powers there are no Objects can make such Resistance as to put them upon Struggling and Labour; so that to an omniscient and omnipotent Mind, there can be nothing difficult to be known or effected; and it is altogether as easy to it to know all things that are knowable, and do all things that are possible, as to know or do any one thing whatsoever; because whatsoever it doth, it doth perfectly. How then can the Government of the World be difficult or uneasy to God, whose Knowledge and Power are perfect and infinite, and consequently can inspect and govern all the Beings in the World with as much Facility, as if he had only one Being to take care of; and if one Man can with Ease manage one Business which he perfectly understands, why may not God manage all, who understands all better than we understand any one; and suppose the Things of the World were infinite, yet since God's Knowledge and Power are infinite too, there is the very same Proportion of Infinite to Infinite as of One to One.

For it is to be considered, that the natural Tendency of infinite Power is to Action, of infinite Wisdom to Contrivance, of infinite Goodness to Beneficence; and how can we imagine, that it should be any Disturbance to God to follow the Inclination of his own Perfections? And therefore, since it is equally easy to his infinite Power, and Wisdom, and Goodness, to exert themselves in a larger Sphere of Action, Contrivance and Beneficence as in a narrower, why should it more disturb him to govern a whole World, than one single Being? It would doubtless be rather a Disturbance to him to act nothing, to contrive nothing, and to do no good; because this would be to cross the Inclination of his own Perfection; but since it is as easy to him to exercise those Perfections about many Things as about few; to exercise them about a World of Things must rather be a Delight than a Disturbance to him, because the more he exercises them, the more he complies with their natural Tendencies and Inclinations.

And, what tho this World be a great and cumbersome Mass of Things, it can be no Labour to God to move and actuate it, who as an universal Soul, is diffused diffused thro' it, and vitally present with every Part of it; for he moves it not as Bodies move Bodies, by Thrusting and Pressure, but as Souls move Bodies by Thought and Will; and as our Soul doth move its Body, and determine the Motion of its Members merely by thinking and willing, without any material Pressure, without any Machines or Engines; even so God, who is the great Soul of the World, doth actuate every Part, and regulate every Motion of it without any laborious Heavings or Thrustings, merely by the all-commanding Influence of his own Almighty Thought and Will. And if it be no Labour to our Soul to think and will, and therewithal to move our Body, why should we think it any Labour to God, by the same Operations, to move the World? For, suppose our Soul were clothed with a Body as large as the whole Universe, and were but vitally present with every Part of it, it would doubtless move it all with as much Ease, and command it every way with as much Freedom, as it doth the Body wherein it now resides; how then can it be difficult to a perfect Mind which penetrates all thro', and co-exists with every Part of this material World, to move and actuate the Whole, and moderate all the Motions of it according to its own Will and Pleasure?

III. It is farther objected against a Providence, that it is not consistent with the manifold Evils, both moral and natural, which we behold in this World. If there were a just and gracious Providence over-ruling the World, how can it be imagined that it should ever permit so many Irregularities as we every Day behold in Mens Lives and Manners, or suffer so many Calamities and Miseries to befall its Subjects? Both which, as I shall shew you, are very fairly consistent with a just and righteous Providence.

For as for the first, to wit, the moral Evils or Irregularities of Mens Manners, the Permission of them in the World is no more inconsistent with the Goodness of God's Providence, than his making of free Agents was with the Goodness of his Nature. For his Permission of Sin is no more than his permitting free Agents to act freely, and according to that Liberty, to Good and Evil, wherewith he framed and created them; and, why may he not as well permit them to act freely as create them to act freely? But to be essentially determined to Good, so as not to have any natural Liberty to Evil, seems inconsistent with the State of a Creature; for there is no Will can be naturally and essentially determined to good, which is not conducted by an infallible Mind; for whilst the Mind, which is the Guide, may possibly err, the Will which is guided by it, must be liable to go astray. Since therefore no Will can be essentially good but that which is guided by an infallible Mind, and since no Mind can be essentially infallible but one that is Omniscient, it necessarily follows, that to be free to Good and Evil is as natural to all Reasonable Creatures, as to be finite in Knowledge and Understanding; and accordingly, our Saviour declares, that to be naturally and essentially good, is the incommunicable Prerogative of the Divine Nature, Luke 18. 19. and if so, then either God must have made us free to Good and Evil, or not have made us at all, and there must have been no such Orders of Being as Men and Angels, which are the Crown and Glory of all the Creation; and is it not much better that there should be such Beings than that there should be no such thing as Liberty to Good and Evil? And if it were not inconsistent with the Divine Goodness to create free Agents, why should it be inconsistent with it to permit them to act freely? 'Tis true indeed, we are naturally more free to Evil than the Angels, and some Angels perhaps were more free to it than others; but what then? Was God obliged in Goodness to make all Kinds of Beings equally Perfect? If so, there must have been but one Kind of Beings in the whole Universe, and consequently there must have been infinite Kinds of Beings that are capable of Happiness for ever unmade, or for ever unprovided for. Wherefore, since the Goodness of God was so infinitely fruitful as to communicate itself in different Degrees of Perfection to all Possibilities of Being, that so there might be no Kind wanting to compleat the Universe, it was requisite that there should be a mean Degree of Perfection between Angels and Brutes; otherwise there would have been a Gap and Chasm in the World, not only a possible Kind of Being wanting, but a Kind which by partaking, both of Reason and Sense, of Spirit and of Matter, is the Συμμεσος (συνθεσις τῶν πνεύματος καὶ τῆς ὑλης), as Simplicius expresses it, i. e. the vital Joint that clasps the upper and lower World together; and if it were no way unsuitable to the Goodness of God to create the two Extremes, viz. Angels and Brutes, why should it be thought unsuitable to make a middle Nature between them?

It is true, by partaking of both Natures, we are not only free to Evil in common with Angels, but also liable to stronger Temptations to it than they; because we are placed in a tempting Body among a great many brutish Passions and Appetites, and that Body is placed in a tempting World among a great many sensitive Goods and Evils, that are continually importuning those Appetites to mutiny against Reason, and to carry us away Captive into Folly and Wickedness; but to place us in this State is so far from being inconsistent with the Goodness of God, that it is exactly pursuant to the Design of a most wise and gracious Providence. For since we are placed by the Condition of our Natures in a lower Rank of Being and Perfection than Angels, we have no more reason to complain of that, than Ants or Flies have that they are not Men. But in this imperfect State the highest good that Providence could design us, was to put us into a State of Trial and Probation, wherein, by the good Use of our Liberty, we might by degrees fit our selves for, and at length arrive to a better and more raised Condition; and by an orderly Progression from this rude and imperfect State, might in the different Periods of our Lives grow up into higher and more excellent Capacities, and at length ripen into Perfection. Now in order to our Trial it was requisite we should be placed among Difficulties, without which no Proof can be made of our Virtues, of our Patience, and Temperance, and Chastity, and Equanimity, Meekness and Sobriety; all which are proper to us as Beings made up of Angel and Brute; from the latter of which Natures all those brutal Appetites arise in us, in the good or bad Government whereof consists the Nature of Human Virtue and Vice. So that this present State of our Life is intended by God for a Field of Combat between our Sense and our Reason, our brutal and angelical Nature, and that the Victory of our Reason might thro' the Difficulty of it be rendered more glorious and rewardable, God hath furnished its Antagonist with the Weapons of worldly Temptation to assault and oppose it, to try its Strength and Mettle, and to exercise both its active and passive Virtues; intending when it hath conquered, to translate us hence as a Reward of our Victory into a free and disentangled State, where we shall be vexed and enticed no more with the Importunities of sensual Lust and Affection, but to all Eternity enjoy the Serenity and Pleasure of a pure, angelical Nature. And what is there in all this that is any way unsuitable, yea, that is not every way answerable to the Goodness of Providence? 'Tis true, instead of conquering, we may, if we please, yield our selves captive to Folly and Wickedness; but what then? Is Providence to be blamed for leaving Mens Hands at Liberty, because some have been so desperate as to cut their own Throats? 'Tis sufficient, that he hath proposed to us Reward enough to encourage us to contend, and contributed to us Assistance enough to enable us to conquer, and having done all that becomes a wise and good Governor to prevent our Sin and Ruin, who is to be blamed for it but our selves? God leaves us at Liberty indeed among Temptations to Evil; and this the very State and Composition of our Natures requires; but all he designs by it, is to exercise our Virtues, and thereby to improve and train us up to a State of higher Perfection, and to furnish us with glorious Opportunities of fighting for, and winning Crowns and Rewards; and this is so far from any way reflecting on the Goodness of his Providence, that it is an illustrious Instance of it; and yet 'tis only thus far that he is concerned in the Being of Sin in the World; all the rest is owing to our own mad and desperate Abuse of our natural Liberty, to our wilful Opposition to his gracious Intentions, and obstinate Resistance to his powerful Arts and Methods of preventing our Sin and Ruin. What then can be more unreasonable than for us to object against the Goodness of God's Providence that which is purely the Effect of our own Madness and Folly?

And if the Evil of Sin be no way inconsistent with the Goodness of Providence, much less is the Evil of Misery; since the Generality of those Evils which we suffer in this World, are either the natural Effects, or the just Punishments, or the necessary Antidotes and Preventives of our Sin. And therefore when you come into a great School of wild and unruly Boys, you may as well argue that there is no Master of it, because there are Rods and Ferula's in it, as that there is no Providence over this sinful World, because there are Miseries and Afflictions in it; for upon the Being of Sin in the World, the Being of Misery is so far from being an Argument against Providence that 'tis rather a Demonstration of it; because a sinful World can no more be governed without Misery, than an unruly School without Correction.

IV. Another Objection that is made against Providence is that unequal Division of Goods and Evils that is made in this World. If there were a just Providence that over-ruled the World, one would think it should make a more visible Distinction between good and bad Men in the Distribution of its Rewards and Punishments; whereas in the ordinary Course of Things we see all Things happen alike to all, and many times it fares worst with the best, and best with the worst of Men. Now because this is the greatest and most universal Objection that was ever urged against the Providence of God, I shall in answer to it endeavour to shew. 1. That it is for the most part false and groundless. 2. That so far as it is true, it is no Argument at all against a Providence.

First, I say, this Objection, that there is no Difference made among Men as to the Goods and Evils of this World, is in a great Measure false and groundless. For I make no doubt but in the ordinary Course of Things good Men are more prosperous even in this World than bad: as for times of Persecution, they are a just Exception from the general Rule of Providence; because therein God to serve his own Glory and the great Ends of Religion, exchangeth with good Men spiritual for temporal, and heavenly for earthly Enjoyments, which is such an Exchange as no Man will account Robbery, that understands the just Value of those different Commodities.

'Tis true, it hath been an usual Complaint in all Times and Ages, that it fares best with the worst, and worst with the best; and thro' the Commonness of it, it is now grown into a Maxim. But it is to be considered that Men always pity the Miserable, and envy the Prosperous; and that these Passions do naturally bribe their Judgments to think worse of the one, and better of the other, than either deserve: For those whom we pity we are inclined to love, and those whom we love we are inclined to think well of; as on the contrary, those whom we envy we are inclined to bate, and those whom we bate we are inclined to think ill of; and then because God doth not reward and punish Men according to the Sentence that our blind Pity or Envy passes on them, we are ready to quarrel with his Providence. And besides, there are a world of close Hypocrites, that under a mighty Shew and Ostentation of Piety do secretly indulge themselves in sundry wasteful and ruinous Vices, which many times reduce them to Poverty and Misery, and these we commonly rank among the Good it fares ill with; as on the contrary there are abundance of good Men, that in the Course of a reserved, modest and unaffected Piety, which makes but very little Shew in the Eye of the World, are blest and prospered, and these we as commonly rank among the Bad that fare well. Since therefore we are such incompetent Judges of good and bad Men, we should be very careful how we object against the Providence of God such Maxims as are only founded on our own fallacious Observations. But could we strip our selves of Pity and Envy, and penetrate into the Insides of Men, I doubt not but we should soon be satisfied that good Men have much the Advantage of bad, even as to the Happiness pinefs and Prosperity of this World; for tho perhaps there are many more bad Men prosperous than good, because there are more bad than good Men in the World, yet in proportion to their Numbers I doubt the prosperous Good would far exceed the prosperous Bad, tho there should be but Thirty of the one, to Forty of the other. And supposing that in proportion there were more bad Men than good advanced to worldly Greatness, (which yet is very doubtful, considering how prone we are to judge ill of great Men, and to reckon more of them into the Number of the Bad than we ought, thro' Envy and Misunderstanding the Reasons of their Actions) yet it is to be considered, that the true State of Worldly Happiness and Prosperity consists not in a great but in a moderate Fortune; and that the good Things of this World are no where so freely and entirely enjoyed, as in the middle Region between Poverty and Riches. For as Poverty is attended with Famine, and Cold, and Anguish, so Greatness is attended with Hurry and Tumult, impaled with Cares, and imprisoned with Pomp and tedious Ceremony: So that the truly Unfortunate are the Necessitous and the Great, while the middle State, without partaking of the Evils of either, includes all that is truly desirable in both Extremes, all that Poverty wants, and all that Greatness enjoys; and in this happy State I dare boldly affirm there are proportionably far more good Men than bad: For it is a very rare thing for a good Man that is honest and industrious, and depends upon God for a Blessing, to be reduc'd to extreme Necessity; so very rare, that David in all his Life-time could not produce one Instance of it, Psal. 37. 25. for miserable Poverty is usually the Consequence either of Idleness, or Luxury, or Faction, or Knavery; all which are inconsistent with true Goodness; and a good Man in any Condition on this side pinching Necessity, is ordinarily, even in this Life, far more happy, than the most gay and prosperous Sinner, whose outward Glory and Greatness is usually nothing but the gaudy Covet of a Tragical Inside, of a Mind that is tortured with Pride and Envy, with boundless Hopes, insatiable Desires, and horrible Reflections, that dash and imbitter all his Enjoyments; while the good Man under his mean and simple Outside, carries a great and happy Soul, a contented Mind, a cheerful Heart, and a calm Conscience, which mightily sweeten all his Enjoyments, and make his homely Morsel outrelish the most studied Luxuries. Let us therefore but judge impartially of Men, and but truly state what is the most Happy Condition of human Life, and proportion the Number of the Good to the Bad, and balance the Insides of the one with the Outsides of the other, and I doubt not but we shall be easily convinced that even in this Life the good ordinarily fare much better than the bad: for in true Computation Necessity and Greatness are the only unfortunate States of humane Life, and in these there are far more bad Men than good, but between these Two all Conditions are in a manner indifferent as to the Happiness of Men; and in this happy Mean there are far more good Men than bad; and then the Minds of good Men having infinitely the Advantage of the Minds of bad, as to the rendering their outward Condition happy, it is impossible but that ordinarily and generally they must be the more happy and prosperous.

Secondly, So far as this Maxim, that all things happen alike to all, is true, it is no Argument at all against a Providence; and that upon these following Accounts. 1. Because many of the Goods and Evils of this World happen to us, not as Rewards and Punishments, but in the necessary Course of Secondary Causes. 2. Because the Goods and Evils of this World are in themselves so mean and inconsiderable, that it would be beneath the Wisdom of Providence to be very exact and curious in the Distribution of 'em. 3. Because this Life is properly the State of our Trial and Probation, and not of our Reward and Punishment. 4. Because the Goods and Evils that befall us here are not so truly to be estimated by themselves as by their Effects and Consequents. 5. This promiscuous Distribution of Things, so far as it is, is very requisite to assure us of a Judgment to come. 6. Because the exact Adjustment of Things is reserved for a future Judgment.

I. The happening of all things alike to all is no Argument against Providence; because many of the Goods and Evils of this World happen to us, not as Rewards and Punishments, but in the necessary Course of Second Causes. For in this Life good and bad Men are so mingled together, that in Cases of Common Calamity, what happens to the one must happen to the other without a miraculous Interposel of Providence. Thus, while God leaves Second Causes to their natural Course, how is it possible that War, or Plague, or Famine should distinguish between the Good and Bad that are incorporated together in the same Societies; and so long as free Agents are left to act freely, wicked Parents will frequently spoil their Constitutions by the repeated Excesses of their Riot and Wantonness, and while they do so, their Diseases, without a Miracle, will descend upon their righteous, as well as unrighteous Posterity; and wicked Neighbours, whilst it lies in their way, or serves their Interest, will wrong and oppress the Just and Unjust without any Distinction. But you will say, why then doth not Providence interpose between Second Causes and good Men, and miraculously protect them from their mischievous Effects? To which in short I answer, that in some extraordinary Cases God hath interposed, of which there are innumerable Instances both in Sacred and Profane History; but to expect that he should ordinarily and constantly do this, is very unreasonable, because it cannot be done without giving a perpetual Disturbance to the Course of Nature, which being in the whole most orderly and regular, full of admirable Beauty and Contrivance, ought not to be disturbed and inverted upon ordinary Occasions. For, if the established Course of things be wise and regular in the whole, why should we expect that God should be perpetually tampering with it, and interrupting and varying it by his immediate Interposals, as if he were dissatisfied with his own Contrivance, and upon every Revisal of this great Volume of the World did still discover new Errata in it to be corrected and amended. The Evils therefore which good Men suffer, are not ordinarily so momentous as to oblige a wise and good God to interrupt the Course of Nature to prevent them; and it is much better that some Violences should be offered to good Men, than that a constant Violence should be offered to the Nature of Things; and since God can carry on his good Designs to good Men in a still and silent Path, and cause all their adverse Accidents to unwind of themselves, and at last to clear up into a blessed Close, is it not much better he should do it this way, than by offering perpetual Violence and Disturbance to Nature?

II. The happening of all things alike to all, is no Argument against a Providence; because the Goods and Evils of this World are so mean and inconsiderable, that it would be beneath the Wisdom of Providence to be very exact and curious in the Distribution of them. It is no Part of Wisdom to be nice and curious about Trifles. 'Twas ridiculous enough in Caligula to employ a mighty Army only to gather a great Heap of Cockle-shells: but when he had gathered them, it would have been much more ridiculous to have taken a great deal of care to divide them amongst his Soldiers, in exact Proportions to each one's Merit and Desert. Now, tho' we look upon the Goods and Evils of this World, as Things of vast and mighty Moment; yet God, who sees them with far better Eyes than we, knows very well that they are but Trifles, in comparison with those endless Goods or Evils we must enjoy or suffer in another World, and that it is a very inconsiderable thing whether we fare well or ill this moment, who immediately after must fare well or ill for ever; and therefore he looks on it, as he justly may, as a thing beneath his infinite Wisdom, to be very exact and curious in dividing to us these momentary Trifles in just Proportions to our particular Deserts: And did we not strangely magnify them, by looking on them thro' the false Opticks of our own fantastick Hopes and Fears, we should be so far from objecting against God's God's Providence these unequal Distributions of them; that were they more exact and equal, we should rather object against his Wisdom, as thinking it a very mean Employment for a Deity to be very nice and curious in proportioning such momentary Enjoyments and Sufferings to the Merit or Demerit of immortal Creatures. So that considering of what little Moment the present Goods and Evils are, which good Men suffer and bad Men enjoy, they ought rather to be look'd on as an Argument of God's Wisdom than as an Objection against his Providence; for he understands the just Value of Things, and knows that the best of these worldly Goods are bad enough to be thrown away upon the worst of Men, and so expresses his just Scorn of these admired Vanities, by scattering them abroad with a careless Hand: For, why should he partake of the Errors of vulgar Opinion, and express himself so very regardful of these Trifles, as to put them in Gold Scales, and weigh them out to Mankind by Grains and Scruples.

III. That all things here do happen alike to all, is no Argument against Providence: because this Life is properly the State of our Trial and Probation, and not of our Reward and Punishment. The Divine Providence hath placed us here as Candidates and Probationers for those everlasting Preferments it designs us hereafter, that so by training and exercising us in all those excellent Virtues that are proper to our Natures, it may improve us from one Degree of Perfection to another, till at last it hath accomplished us for the heavenly State; in order to which Design it is necessary that there should be an unequal Distribution of Things, whereby good Men may sometimes suffer, and bad Men prosper; otherwise there would be no Occasion for any of our passive Virtues, nor any Trial of our active. For Affliction is the Theatre of Patience, and Fortitude, and Resignation to God, and without it, there would be no Room in the Lives of good Men for the Exercise of those Virtues, which, for want of Objects to act on, would rust and wax languid. Again, Difficulty is the Touchstone of our Love, and Faith, and Ingenuity, but should Providence be always crowning the Righteous, and dragging Offenders to Execution, such a Procedure would determine our Liberty, and leave us no room for the Exercise of our Faith and Ingenuity; for then the Rewards and Punishments of Providence would be so sensibly and continually present with us, and so urgently press upon our Hopes and Fears, that it would be impossible for us not to believe in God, and next to impossible not to obey him; and being thus forced to believe and obey, what Excellency would there be in our Piety and Virtue? What Charity is it for a Miser to lend his Money upon Assurance of Twenty per Cent? Or what Loyalty for a Traitor to discover his Conspirators within Sight of a Rack? And just as little Virtue would there be in any of our good Works, were there an exact Equality in the Distributions of Providence. For then we should never do a good Work but upon the certain Prospect of an immediate Reward, nor repent of a bad one but upon the irresistible Dread of some immediate Punishment. But in this Inequality of Things, wherein the Good often suffer and the wicked prosper, we are left in a free and unconstrained Condition, and whether we are virtuous or vicious, devout or profane, it is out of Choice and not out of Necessity. So that now to believe and obey the sacred Dictates of Religion is generous and ingenuous, and our Faith and Obedience is our Virtue and Excellency; because we believe and obey without Force, and against Temptations and Difficulties.

And as this unequal State of Things is of absolute Necessity, to try and exercise our Virtues, so it is also very assistent thereunto. For that Providence doth generally and not universally bless and prosper good Men, is a great Support to a wise and rational Belief. For as a late excellent Author hath well observed, if Things were constantly managed one Way without any Variation, we might be apt to conclude that the World was under the rigid Laws of a fatal Necessity; if on the other side there were no Rule observed, no Footsteps of Method in the Dispensations of Providence we might be tempted to believe that Chance rules the World; but when we observe that in the Management of Things there is an Intermixture of these Two, viz. that there is a general Rule, and that there are particular Exceptions from it, we have just Reason to conclude that all is under a free Almighty Agent that rules the World according to the Determinations of his own Will. As this Way of Providence, viz. to interweave into good Mens Fortunes Adversity with Prosperity, is in this Respect very advantageous to their Faith, so is it also to the whole State of their Virtue; for as on the one hand a continued Train of prosperous Events would be apt to bloat and elevate their Minds, so on the other hand a continued Series of Adversity would be apt to sink and depress their Spirits, whilst this middle Way of Interchange in their Condition balances them on both Sides, and keeps them in an even, steady and well-poized Temper. Since therefore this Life is the State of our Trial, 'tis evident that an exact Equality of Things would be a much stronger Objection against the Wisdom of Providence, than all these present Inequalities are against the Justice of it. For Hardships and Difficulties are necessary to a State of Trial; and were good Men always blest, and bad Men always punished, this Life, instead of being a Probation to either, would be the Heaven of the one, and the Hell of the other; and since some Afflictions are necessary to try good Men, and some Prosperities to try bad, it would be a strange Over-sight of Providence, when it designs the Trial of both, to fix them in such a Condition wherein no thorow Experiment can be made of either. So that for us to object against Providence for making such unequal Distributions in a State, wherein it designs our Trial, is in effect to object against Wisdom for acting most suitable to its own Designs.

IV. That all Things here do happen alike to all is no Argument against Providence, because the Goods and Evils that befall us here, are not so truly to be estimated by themselves as by their Effects and Consequents. For the Divine Providence, which runs thro' all things, hath disposed and connected them into such a Series and Order, that there is no single Event or Accident, but what is purely miraculous, but depends upon the whole System, and hath innumerable Causes antecedent to it, and innumerable Consequents attending it; and what these Consequents will be, whether good or bad, is beyond our Skill to prognosticate: So that tho the Event be never so good or bad, singly and apart by it self, yet in Conjunction with all those Consequents that will most certainly attend it, the best Event, for all we know, may prove most mischievous, and the worst most beneficial to us. So that for us boldly to pronounce concerning the Good or Evil of Events, before we see the Train of Consequents that follow them, is very rash and inconsiderate. As for Instance, you see a good Man oppressed with Sorrows and Afflictions, and a bad Man crowned with Pleasures and Prosperities; and considering these things apart by themselves, you conclude that the one fares very ill, and the other very well; but did you at the same Time see the Consequents of the one's Adversity and the other's Prosperity, it's probable you would conclude the quite contrary, viz. that the good Man's Adversity was a Blessing, and the bad Man's Prosperity a Curse. For I dare boldly affirm that good Men generally reap more substantial Benefit from their Afflictions than bad Men do from their Prosperities: the one smarts indeed at present; but what follows? Perhaps his Mind is cured by it of some Disease that is ten times worse to him than his outward Affliction, of Avarice or Impatience, of Envy or Discontent, of Pride or Vanity of Spirit; his Riches are lessened, but his Virtues are improved by it; his Body is impaired, but his Mind is grown sound and hail by it, and what he hath lost in Health, or Wealth, or Pleasure, or Honour, he hath gained with vast Advantage in Wisdom and Goodness, in Tranquillity of Mind and Self-Enjoyment. And methinks no Man who believes he hath a Soul, should grudge to suffer any tolerable Affliction for the bettering of his Mind, his Will, and his Conscience. On the other hand the bad Man triumphs and and rejoices at present ; but what follows ? His Prosperity either shrivels him into Miserableness, or melts him into Luxury ; the former of which impoverishes, and the latter diseases him ; for if the former be the Effect of his Prosperity, it increases his Needs, because before he needed only what he had not, but now he needs both what he hath not and what he hath, his covetous Desires treating him as the Falconer doth his Hawk, still luring him off from what he hath seized to fly at new Game, and never permitting him to prey upon his own Quarrey ; and if the latter be the Effect of his Prosperity, that is, if it melts him into Luxury, it thereby wastes his Health to be sure, and commonly his Estate too ; and so whereas it found him poor and well, it leaves him poor and diseased, and only took him up from the Plough, and sets him down at the Hospital. In general, while he is possess'd of it, it only bloats and swells him, makes him proud and insolent, gripping and oppressive, pampers and enrages his Lust, stretches out his Desires into an insatiable Bulimy, sticks his Mind full of Cares, and his Conscience of Guilt, and by all these woful Effects it inflames his Reckoning with God, and treasures up Wrath for him against the Day of Wrath ; so that comparing the Consequences of the good Man's Adversity with those of the bad Man's Prosperity, it is evident that the former fares well even in his worst Condition, and the latter ill in his best. It's well for me, saith good David, that I was afflicted, for before I was afflicted I went astray, but now I have kept thy Commandments, Psal. 119. 67. But on the contrary, When the Wicked spring as the Grass, saith the same Author, and when all the Workers of Iniquity do flourish, it is that they shall be destroyed for ever, Psal. 92. 7. If then in the Consequents of Things good Men are blessed in their Afflictions, and bad Men plagued in their Prosperities, as it is apparent they generally are, these unequal Distributions are so far from being an Argument against Providence, that they are a glorious Instance of it. For wherein could the divine Providence better express its Justice and Wisdom together, than by benefitting the Good, and punishing the Bad by such cross and improbable Methods ?

V. That all Things here do happen alike to all, is no Argument against Providence, because it is very requisite it should often do so, to assure us of a Judgment to come. For were the Affairs of this World managed with that exact Equality as that the Good did never suffer, nor the Bad escape unpunished, we should be deprived of one of the best moral Arguments of a future Judgment. For as on the one Hand, should Providence never reward the Good nor punish the Bad in this Life, but confound them together without any Distinction, it might tempt us to despair of any just Retributions from it in the Life to come ; so on the other Hand, were the Goods and Evils of this Life, weigh'd out to Men in exact Proportions to their Merit and Demerit, without any Inequality, we might be tempted to think that there is no need of, and consequently no ground to expect any Judgment to come. For what occasion would there be for any future Judgment, if all Things were already exactly balanced and adjusted ; and therefore as to confirm us in the Belief of the Justice of Providence, it was requisite the same plain Instances should be given of its distinguishing the Good from the Bad by present Rewards and Punishments ; so to confirm us in the Expectation of a Judgment to come, it was no less requisite that there should be some Inequality in the present Management and Distribution of Things, and that the Goods and Evils of this World should not be administered with that exact Regularity as to prevent the Necessity of a Day of Judgment ; but that there should be undecided Cases enough remaining for a future Tribunal to adjust and determine. So that as in the present Management of Things as there is Equality enough to induce us to believe a just Providence ; so there is also Inequality enough to induce us to expect a future Judgment ; God having wisely provided in his present Administration of Things, to give us Instances enough of his just Procedure towards the Good and Bad, and yet to leave us Instances enough of unrewarded Virtue and prosperous Wickedness, to assure us that he intends an After-reckoning. For how can we reflect upon these repeated Examples of just Reward and Punishment, which which in every Age almost God sets before us, and nor believe that he governs the World? And how can we reflect upon those manifold Evils which some good Men suffer, and Goods which some bad Men enjoy, without believing that he hath appointed a Day wherein he will adjust these Inequalities, and vindicate the Cause of oppressed Virtue, and crush triumphant Wickedness into everlasting Confusion?

VI. And lastly, That all Things here do happen alike to all, is no Argument against Providence, because the exact Adjustment of Things is reserved for a future Judgment. I confess were God to make no other Distribution to the Just and Unjust, but what is made in this Life, the Inequality of it would be a strong Objection against his Providence; but then considering that all this cloudy Scene of Things will shortly close up in a righteous Judgment, wherein for the Evils which the Good have suffered, they shall be rewarded with an eternal Happiness, and for the Goods which the Bad have enjoyed they shall be doomed to everlasting Wretchedness: This is sufficient to vindicate the Justice of Providence, were these present Inequalities a thousand Times greater than they are. For suppose that after a short melancholy Dream good Men were to live happily, and after as short a pleasant one bad Men were to live wretchedly but for a thousand Years in this World; we might as well object against Providence this unequal Distribution of the melancholy Dream to the Good, and the pleasant one to the Bad; notwithstanding the succeeding thousand Years of their Happiness and Misery, as we do the Sufferings of the Righteous and Prosperities of the Wicked, which bear far less Proportion to that Eternity of Happiness and Misery that is to succeed them, than the Sorrow or Pleasure of a Moment's Dream doth to a thousand Years real Calamity or Blessedness.

For the Providence of God from the first to the last, is all but one continued Plot, like that of a well-contriv'd Comedy, which at first is very obscure and intricate; so that by what is past or present, there is no guessing at the Conclusion; for all thro' the intermediate Acts, Virtue and Honour fight their Way thro' Difficulties and Disappointments, and sometimes the Hero acts a sad, and sometimes the Villain a prosperous Part, at which the unskilful Spectator grieves, and is ready to damn the Poet for distributing such unequal Fates; but then in the fifth and last Act all the cross Accidents clear up and issue in a fair Conclusion; and in the Close of all the Hero is crowned, and the Villain hissed off the Stage. Let us therefore have but the Patience to stay till Providence hath finished its whole Plot, and closed up all its mighty Scenes in the general Judgment of the World, and then we shall see all these Inequalities set right, and the Fates of good and bad Men determined by a most just Award. But for us to quarrel at Providence now, who are yet got no farther, it may be, than to the middle of the great Drama, and to find fault with its Procedure for crossing the Good, and prospering the Bad, is rudely to overturn the Stage before the Entrance into the fifth Act, and to hiss off the Almighty Poet for not completing his Design before he is arrived to the Conclusion. And thus I have endeavoured to answer more at large this Objection against Providence, because it hath been more insisted on than any other, and hath more generally stumbled Mens Belief of divine Providence.

V. And, Lastly, it is farther objected, That the Being of a just and good Providence, is not to be reconciled with that wretched State, and Condition to which we behold the greatest Part of Mankind abandoned. For, if there were a good Providence that over-rul'd the Affairs of this World, how is it imaginable that ever so great a Part of Mankind as the infidel World includes, should be left so utterly destitute as they are of the Knowledge of God, and of the Means of attaining everlasting Happiness? To which I shall briefly answer these three Things.

I. That the infidel World is not perhaps left so utterly destitute as we are apt to imagine; for they have the Law of Nature to direct them, by which alone they must be tried, and stand or fall at the Day of Judgment; which as to the main Strokes of their Duty, is so plain and intelligible, that no sincere Inquirer can be ignorant of it; and, if when they may understand it they will not, or, if when they do understand it, they wilfully transgress and violate it, the divine Providence hath been sufficiently good to them; and that leaves them for ever inexcusable. For so far as their Ignorance is invincible it is not their Sin, nor shall they ever be accountable for it, or for any sinful Omission or Commission thence proceeding, and if they only answer for not understanding their Duty when they might, or for not performing it so far as they understood it, they can have no Reason to complain that they are hardly dealt with. But then,

II. As they have not those vast Advantages that we have of becoming good, and growing up into the State of Perfection and Happiness, so proportionably less Degrees of Good will be accepted of those that do well, and less Degrees of Punishment exacted of those that do ill; for that Maxim of our Saviour, Luke 12. 48. To whomsoever much is given, of him much shall be required, necessarily implies the contrary, viz. That to whomsoever less is given, of him less shall be required; and if so, it is certain that so much as their Means of being good are less than ours, so much the less good God will accept of them than of us; and as God will accept less Good of the best Infidels, so he will exact less Punishment of the worst; for so our Saviour himself hath assured us, that it will be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon, and Sodom and Gomorrah in the last Day, than for those who persist in their Unbelief and Disobedience, in despite of the Proposals of the Gospel. If then in Proportion of their present Disadvantages less Good will be accepted of those who make any Improvement, and less Punishment exacted of them who make none, neither the one sort, nor the other, hath any Reason to complain; and tho their Condition were worse than it is, yet under these Circumstances it would be fairly consistent with the Goodness of the divine Providence. But then,

III. And lastly, Tho their Condition were a great deal worse than it is, yet it would be very unreasonable for us to object against the Goodness of the divine Providence, unless we better understood than we do, how God will dispose of them in the other World. Indeed if Mens Fate consisted in what they suffer and enjoy in this Life, we might better judge of Providence by what is before us; but since our main State is beyond the Grave, whatever befalls us here is very inconsiderable, compared with what we must suffer or enjoy hereafter; and as for the present Disadvantages which the heathen World lies under, they are but very short and momentary, and if Providence pleases, it can abundantly compensate them in the World to come; and therefore since yet we know not what it will do, as having no Revelation in the Case, it becomes us to suspend our Judgment till the Event hath determined it.

This we know, that Providence hath Ways enough, and Time enough too between this and the Day of Judgment, to supply these desitute Souls with all those spiritual Advantages in the other Life, which for Reasons best known to it self it hath hitherto withheld from them; it may if it pleases extend their Trial and Probation beyond this Life, and discover in the other Life the Light of the Gospel, to so many of them at least, as have here made any tolerable Improvements under the Light of Nature, and if they make good Use of it, reward them accordingly. For tho we Christians have no reason to expect any farther Trial after this Life is expired, because we have pass'd the utmost Trial already, yet who knows but God may make a farther Trial of those in the other Life, upon whom the great Experiment of the Gospel was yet never made; and therefore since Providence can yet be infinitely good to them notwithstanding their wretched Condition at present, and since for all we know it will be so, we ought not to object against it its present Disregard of them, will we see the final Issue of Things; for that their present Condition is so bad, is no ground for us to argue against Providence, unless we were sure it would never be better; because for all we know it may yet be render'd good enough not only to justify, but to glorify the Goodness of God's Providence towards them.

And now to conclude this great Argument. Since we see how necessary the Belief of Providence is to our being truly Religious, and what unanswerable Evidence there is of the Truth and Reality of it, what remains but that we heartily endeavour by a calm, fixt, and impartial Consideration of these Things, thoroughly to instruct our selves in the Nature, and firmly to establish our selves in the Belief of it: For our Religion must necessarily ebb or flow according as it is influenced more or less by our Understanding and Belief of the divine Providence, which are the great Principles that move and govern it. For every Branch of the divine Providence is an inexhaustible Fountain of religious Rhetorick and Persuasion, and in this single Proposition, that God upholds and governs the World, there are a thousand Times more Inducements to Piety and Virtue, than in all other Topicks in the World. But how pregnant soever it is with Arguments, and how powerful soever its Arguments are, 'tis impossible it should prevail upon any reasonable Mind that understands not the Force, and believes not the Truth of it: for all the possible Access which outward Objects have to our Minds, is thro' our Knowledge and Belief of them, without which the most momentous Proposals are no more capable of affecting us, than one of Tully's Orations is of calming the North-wind; but he who firmly believes the Truth, and understands the full Emphasis of a divine Providence, must necessarily be affected by it, if he be but within the Reach and Power of Persuasion; and unless his Will be impregnablely fortified against all the Force of Argument and Reason, he will find himself so beseged with Motives on every side persuading him to submit to the Obligations of Religion, that it will be almost impossible for him to defend himself against their powerful Importunities. For what Man in his Wits can sit unconcerned under the lively Belief that he is in the Hands of a most just and gaacious, all-wise, and almighty Providence, that is conscious to his inmost Thoughts and Purposes, and beholds all his Actions with infinite Complacency or Abhorrence; that hath the Disposal of his Life and his Soul, and of all the Goods he can hope for, and all the Evils he can fear, and will certainly reward him a thousand-fold if he doth well, and if he doth ill as certainly pursue him with a dire Revenge? This Belief carries with it such constraining Terrors and Allurements as cannot but affect all reasonable Minds, and finally prevail with their Hopes and Fears against all contrary Temptations. Wherefore if ever we would fix the Obligations of Religion upon our Minds, it concerns us above all Things to be thoroughly instructed in the Nature, and confirmed in the Belief of the divine Providence.

CH A P. V.

Of the Necessity of believing divine Rewards and Punishments, in order to our being truly Religious.

HUMAN Nature is framed to move upon the Hinges of Hope and Fear, and to be elicited and drawn forth in Action either by the Proposal of some attainable Good, or Prospect of some avoidable Evil, the former of which begets Hope in us, and that Pursuit; the latter Fear, and that Flight and Avoidance; and accordingly, we find all Laws address to the Hopes and Fears of Men with Proposals of Reward and Punishment, as to the Master-springs and Principles of their Action, by which they are moved to do or forbear according as they are required and enjoined. And, indeed, to give Laws to Men without enforcing them with Rewards and Punishments, would be to leave it indifferent whether they obeyed them or no, which is inconsistent with the Nature of Laws: for Laws necessarily imply an Obligation to Obedience; but what Obligation could we have to obey them, did they leave it indifferent, as to any Good or Evil accruing from it, whether we obey'd them or no? for if it will be as well for us one way as t'other, what matter is it which way we determine our selves? And this holds good in nothing more than in the Matter of our Obedience to the Laws of Religion, to which our corrupt Nature is above all Things backward and averse; all that spiritual Exercise which those Laws require being quite against the Grain of our earthly and sensual Inclinations; so that were we not drawn to it by the Hope of Good, and driven by the Fear of Evil, to be sure our own bad Natures would keep us at an eternal Distance from it; but unless we believe God to be a Rewarder of those that obey, and a Punisher of those that despise him, we have no ground to hope for any Good, or to dread any Evil at his Hands.

• for

For unless we believe that he will crown those that serve him with some Mark of his Favour, how can we think he is pleased with them; there being no other way for him to express his being pleased, but by crowning them with some signal Reward; and if he be not pleased with those that serve him, to be sure he is not displeased with those that neglect him; and if he be not displeased with them, what Reason have we to apprehend that he will punish 'em? Thus the Unbelief of God's being a Rewarder of those that obey him, draws after it an Unbelief of his being a Punisher of those that despise him, and so on the contrary. For unless we believe him to be so much concerned for his Service as to punish those that neglect it, we have no reason to think he is so much concerned for it as to reward those that embrace it. So that the Belief, and Unbelief of God's being a Rewarder and a Punisher, do by necessary Consequence mutually imply each other; and unless we believe Both, there is no Reason we should believe Either. And when our Nature is so averse, as it is, to his Service; what should induce us to serve him when we expect no Good from him, or hinder us from slighting him when we fear no Evil? And what is there can bring us home to God when we are carried away from him with an impetuous Tide of corrupt Inclinations, and have neither Hope nor Fear to bound or restrain it? So that considering the Aversion of our Nature to God's Service, it is morally impossible we should ever be heartily reconciled to it without being drawn with the Hope of Reward, or driven with the Fear of Punishment.

In the Prosecution of this Argument, I shall endeavour to shew,

First, How far it's necessary that our Belief of divine Rewards and Punishments should extend.

Secondly, What Evidence there is to induce us to believe them.

Thirdly, By what Means this is to be begotten and confirmed.

S E C T. I.

How far it is necessary, that our Belief of divine Rewards and Punishments should extend.

FOR, to induce us to submit to the Obligations of Religion, it is by no means sufficient that we believe in the general that God will reward us if we do well, and punish us if we do wickedly. For this we may firmly believe, and yet at the same Time prefer the Pleasures of Sin as much greater Goods than the Rewards of Virtue, and dread the Difficulties of Virtue as much greater Evils than the Punishments of Sin; wherefore to render our Belief of divine Rewards and Punishments an effectual Principle of Religion, these four Things are necessary.

First, That we should believe that God is so far a Rewarder of those that serve him, and so far a Punisher of those that neglect him, as to make a plain and sensible Distinction between them.

Secondly, Considering how promiscuously the Goods and Evils of this World are distributed among Good and Bad Men, it's necessary we should believe, That there is a future State of Rewards and Punishments.

Thirdly, It is necessary we should believe those future Rewards and Punishments ments to be such as do infinitely transcend any Good we can reap by our Sins, and any Evil we can incur by doing our Duty.

Fourthly, It is necessary we should believe that there is no other way for us to avoid those Punishments but by forsaking our Sins, or to acquire those Rewards, but by submitting to our Duty.

I. It is necessary we should believe that God is so far a Rewarder of those that serve, and so far a Punisher of those that neglect him, as to make a plain and sensible Distinction between them. For unless we believe that God makes some Distinction between those that serve and those that neglect him, we shall confound Good and Evil in our own Apprehensions, and look upon all human Actions as indifferent, and thereby dissolve all the Ties and Obligations of Religion. For Things are in themselves, as they are in the Judgment and Esteem of God, who cannot be mistaken in estimating their Natures; and therefore unless there be some Distinction between Men and Men, and Actions and Actions in the Esteem of God, they must be all alike and indifferent in their own Natures. And if all Actions are indifferent in themselves, we are free from all the Ties and Obligations of Religion; and 'tis left indifferent to us, whether we will worship God or blaspheme him: So that unless we believe that God makes some Distinction between the Good and Bad, Religion can have no force at all upon our Minds.

But now there is no other way for God to distinguish between Men and Men, but by Rewarding and Punishing them; because if he make any Distinction in his Affections between us, we may be sure his Love will incline him to reward, and his Hatred to punish us; and since 'tis as easy to him to follow his Inclination as not, since he can reward where he loves, and punish where he hates, without any Disturbance to his own Happiness, what should hinder him from doing it, supposing that he really loves or hates, or makes any Distinction in his Affections between those that serve and those that neglect him? So that unless he reward the one and punish the other, he can make no visible Distinction in his Affections between them. If he be contrarily affected to good and bad Men, his Affections will infallibly appear in his Actions; but if he use them alike, it is plain they are alike to him. So that unless we believe that God distinguishes between good and bad Men by rewarding and punishing them, we must look upon both as indifferent to him, and believe that he concerns himself neither with the one nor the other; and if we think it is indifferent to God whether we are good or bad, to be sure it will not be indifferent to us, whose Natures are so biassed with bad Inclinations, which, having neither Hope nor Fear to restrain them, will run towards bad Objects without Rub or Interruption. And what likelihood is there that we who are so prone and inclinable to Evil, should concern our selves in the Service of God, whilst we look upon it as a Thing indifferent to him whether we serve him or no?

Wherefore, to the subduing our Minds to the Obligations of Religion, it is necessary we should believe that God is so far a Rewarder of Good, and Punisher of bad Men, as to make a sensible Distinction between them, and demonstrate that he is differently affected towards them. For to what end should we serve a God that takes no notice of us, that regards not what we do, but sits above in the Heavens as an unconcerned Spectator of our Actions? Why should we cross our own Inclinations, and forsake our beloved Lusts, for his Sake, when it is altogether indifferent to him what we do, or whither we go, or what becomes of us?

II. Considering how promiscuously the Goods and Evils of this Life are distributed among good and bad Men, it is necessary that we should believe there is a future State of Rewards and Punishments. For tho' sometimes in this Life God rewards Good Men, and punishes Bad with such signal and remarkable Goods and Evils as are sufficient Indications of the vast Distinction he makes between between them, yet this is Extraordinary, and besides the constant and regular Course of his Providence, which for wise and excellent Ends and Purposes doth ordinarily scatter Good and Evil among Men with an open and undistinguishing Hand; insomuch that as the wise Man observes, Eccl. 9. 1, 2, 3. No Man knoweth either Love or Hatred by all that is before him; all Things come alike to all, there is one Event to the Righteous and to the Wicked, and as is the Good so is the Sinner, and he that sweareth as he that feareth an Oath: This is an evil among all Things that are done under the Sun, that there is one Event to all. Since therefore God's Love of good Men and Hatred of Bad, appears not by any Thing before us, we must either conclude that they are both indifferent to him, which would be to raise the very Foundations of Religion, or that there is a future State of Rewards and Punishments, wherein there will be no more such promiscuous Distributions, no more such cross Coupling of Prosperity with Vice, and Misery with Virtue, but all Things will be adjusted suitably to Mens Deserts and Qualifications, and those that are Good advanced to immortal Glory and Honour, and those that are Bad deprest into eternal Shame and Confusion. For the Difference which God makes between them, in the present Course of his Providence, is too small and indiscernable to induce us to believe that he makes any Difference between them in his Esteem and Affection; and therefore either we must believe that there is another State wherein he makes a far wider Difference between them, or conclude that they are both indifferent to him, and that he hath no more Regard to the one than the other, or that he hath no Regard at all to either, which, as I shewed before, utterly dissolves the Obligations of Religion.

III. It is necessary we should believe those future Rewards and Punishments to be such as do infinitely transcend any Good we can reap in our sinful Neglect of God, and any Evil we can incur by our Submission to him. 'Tis true, were our Natures equally inclined to submit to or neglect him, we should need no more Good and Evil to move us one way than the other; but the same Proportion of Goods and Evils which tempts us now to forsake and abandon him, would equally tempt us to serve and obey him: But alas! this is far from our Case; for in submitting to God, we move counter to our selves, we cross the Grain of our degenerate Nature, and run away from our dearest Inclinations; whereas in forsaking him, we row with the Tide, and are driven on with an impetuous Current of sinful Lusts and Affections; and the Case being thus, the Temptations of the one side must be incomparably greater, if ever they prevail with us, than they need be on the other. For Men are easily tempted to act in compliance with their own Inclinations; and the smallest Goods or Evils that can be proposed unto 'em from without, will readily induce 'em to do what they have a mind to; but to prevail with a Man to do that which he is extremely averse to, to act against Nature, and live in defiance with his own Inclinations, requires a mighty Force of outward Temptation; and it must be a very great Good that he will not lose, a very formidable Evil that he will not incur, rather than enter into any Course of Action that is irksome and ungrateful to his Nature. So that unless we believe the Goods and Evils of the other World to be incomparably greater than all the Pleasures of Sin, and all the Sufferings of Piety and Virtue, there will not be Force enough in our Faith to persuade us; because those future Goods and Evils move against Nature, and persuade us to a Course of Life we are extremely averse to, whereas these present ones join Hands with our Inclinations; and find a ready Concurrence in our Wills and Affections; and a very small Temptation will prevail against a great One, when it hath Nature, that Bosom orator, to solicit and plead for it. Wherefore unless we believe the Rewards and Punishments of the future State to be such as infinitely out-weigh those present Goods and Evils that tempt us to Sin, they will never be able to prevail against 'em; because they must not only out-tempt them, but, which is the much harder Task of the two, they must out-tempt the Reluctancies of our degenerate Nature; and yet for future Goods and Evils to out-tempt present ones is not so easy a Matter neither; especially if those future ones are invifible and out of the Ken of our Senfe; which is the Cafe here. For Futurity leffens all Objects to the Mind, even as Distance doth to the Eye, and makes Things appear to us much fmaller than they are in their own Natures: So that the Futurity of the Rewards and Punifhments of the other Life, are a mighty Disadvantage to 'em when they ftand in Competition with prefent Goods and Evils; becaufe the latter appear to us in their full Proportion and Magnitude, with all their tempting Circumftances about 'em, whereas the former, exhibit to us a dim and confused Landfkip of Things afar off, of Things which we never faw nor felt, and which by Reason of their Distance imprint very dark Ideas on our Minds. And as their Futurity leffens their Appearance, and renders it confused and indiftinct, fo their Invisibility weakens their Force and Influence on our Minds, which no Objects can fo nearly affect as thofe that ftrike upon our Senfes. So that unlefs by an immense Magnitude they compenfate for being future and infenfible, it is impoffible they fhould prevail with fuch Minds as ours againft prefent and fenfible Goods and Evils. Wherefore to render our Belief of a future State effectual to reduce us to God and our Duty, it's absolutely neceffary we fhould believe the Rewards and Punifhments of it to be infinitely greater than all the Goods and Evils that can tempt us to Sin; and that not only becaufe our Natures are extremely averse to that which theſe Rewards and Punifhments tempt us to, but becaufe the Goods and Evils which tempt us the contrary way, have the prevailing Advantages of being prefent and fenfible.

IV. And laftly, It is neceffary we fhould believe that. there is no other way for us to acquire theſe Rewards, or avoid theſe Punifhments, but by submitting to the Obligations of Religion. For to be thorowly convinced and perſuaded of the immense Rewards and Punifhments of the other Life, is by no means ſufficient to reduce us unto God, fo long as we do but dream of any poſſible Way to obtain thoſe Rewards, and to avoid thoſe Punifhments without ſubmitting to Him, to which above all imaginable Ways our corrupt Nature hath the greateſt Antipathy. So that tho we were never fo much convinced of the absolute Neceffity of escaping Hell, and purchaſing Heaven, yet if at the ſame Time we have a Proſpect of any other Way or Means of effecting it, to be ſure we ſhall ſhun this, this moſt ungrateful one of forſaking our Sins and returning to God. And if liſting our ſelves into Godly Parties, or putting on a demure and ſanctified Countenance; if being moped, dejected or unfociable; if whining or faſting, or long Prayers, or an affected Garb, or rigid Obſervance of holy Times; if conſuming our Lives in a bare-footed Pilgrimage, or wearing a Hair-shirt, or whipping our Bodies, or ſpending our Eſtates on Maſſes and Indulgencies; if being made Free of a holy Confraternity, or viſiting Altars and Shrines, or numbering Prayers, like Faggots, by a Tally of Beads; if theſe or any of theſe will but ſecure us of Heaven, and from going to Hell, we ſhall think them a thouſand Times more tolerable and easy than to ſubmit our Wills to God in all the Inſtances of true Piety and Virtue; in the doing of which we muſt ſtrangle the corrupt Inclinations of our Nature, tear our beloved Luſts from our Hearts, rack off our earthly Affections from their Lees, and refine and ſpiritualize them into a divine Zeal, and Love and Devotion, than which there is nothing in the World more irksome to a degenerate Nature. So that till we are reduced to an utter Deſpair of reaping the Rewards, and escaping the Punifhments of the other Life, by any other means than this of submitting our ſelves to the Obligations of Religion, our Faith will be altogether ineffectual.

S E C T. II.

What Evidence there is to induce us to believe these future Rewards and Punishments.

THAT there are future Rewards and Punishments, is a Doctrine universally assented to by all Ages, and Nations, and Religions, and there is scarce any first Principle in Philosophy, in which Mankind are more generally agreed. Thus among the Heathen Poets, Divines, and Philosophers, there is an unanimous Acknowledgment of these future States, altho their Descriptions of them are generally nothing but the Dreams of an extravagant Fancy. For so, as Josephus observes, speaking of the Essenes Doctrine concerning the future State of the Blessed, ταῖς μὲν ἀγαθαῖς ψυχαῖς ὁμοδοξῶντες πᾶσιν Ἑλλήνων, &c. i. e. they teach, as all the Greek Nations also do, that for good Souls there are blessed Seats prepared beyond the Ocean, in a Region that is always free from Rain and Snow, and excessive Heats, being perpetually fanned with gentle Breezes from the Ocean; which Description he hath translated almost verbatim out of the fourth Book of Homer's Odysses, where he brings in Proteus thus bespeaking Menelaus—σεῖ ἡνώσιον πεδῖον — καὶ περὶ στα γαῖαν, &c. i. e. The Gods shall send thee to the Fields of Elysium, which lie on the utmost Parts of the Earth, where thou shalt live secure and happy, there being neither Rain, nor Snow, nor Winter, but the blessed Inhabitants are perpetually refresh'd with the gentle Breathing of cool Zephyrs from the Ocean. Plato tells us of an antient Law concerning Men, καὶ αἰὲ καὶ νῦν ἔτι εἰσιν ἐν θεοῖς, ᾧ δ' ἀνθρώπων ἢ μὲν δικαίως ἢ βίον διαλθόντα καὶ ὁσίως, ἐπειδὴν τελευτήσῃ, εἰς μακάρων νῆους ἀπίοντα, οἰκεῖν ἐν πασῇ εὐδαιμονίᾳ ἐκτὸς κακῶν, τὸν δὲ ἀδίκως καὶ ἀθίως, εἰς τὸ τῆς τίσεως καὶ δίκης δεσμοθήκεον, ὃ δὲ τὰς ταύτων καλῶσιν, ἰέναι, i. e. which was always and is still in force among the Gods, That those who lived just and holy Lives should, after their Death, go into the Isles of the Blessed, where they should enjoy all manner of Happiness, without the least Intermixture of Misery; but that those who lived here unjustly and ungodly, should be sent into that Prison of just Punishment, which is called Hell, Plat. Gorg. p. 312. Thus also Tully, Tuscul. lib. 1. permanente animos arbitramur consensu nationum omnium, i. e. We believe, as all Nations do, that the Souls of Men do survive their Bodies; and to name no more, Seneca, Epist. 117. tells us, Cum de animarum aeternitate differimus, non leve momentum apud nos habet consensus omnium aut Timentium inferos, aut Colentium, i. e. When we discourse of the Eternity of Souls, the general Consent of all Men, either fearing or worshipping the Hellish Powers, is of very great Moment. And indeed this Belief of the future States being so generally imprinted on Mens Minds is a very probable Argument of the Reality of them; it being hardly conceivable, how the Reason of all Mankind should have so unanimously consented in it, had it not been extremely agreeable to the Make and Frame of our Minds, and we cannot suppose any false Proposition to be agreeable to the Frame of our Mind, without reflecting dishonourably upon the Truth of him that framed it. And indeed this Notion of a future State is such, as hath been generally embraced by those Persons who are least capable of deducing it by a logical Dependence of one Thing upon another; and therefore since it hath no Dependency in their Minds on any other antecedent Notion, how could it have been so generally entertain'd, did not the common Dictate of Nature or Reason, acting alike in all Men, move 'em to conspire in it, tho they knew not one another's Minds? For it hath been believed, with a Kind of Repugnancy to Sense, which discovers all Things round about it to be Mortal, and which, upon that Account would have been too apt to have seduced ruder Minds into a Disbelief of any other State; had not some more powerful Impression on their Souls forcibly urged them to believe it.

But because this Argument, drawn from universal Consent, is liable to some little Exception, I shall not insist upon it, but endeavour to prove the Reality of this future State of Rewards and Punishments from these Topicks.

First,

First, From the Wisdom of God's Government.

Secondly, From the Justice of his Providence.

Thirdly, From the natural Capacity of our Souls to survive our Bodies, and to enjoy future Rewards, and suffer future Punishments.

Fourthly, From the natural Expectance we have of future Rewards, and Dread of future Punishments.

Fifthly, From the excellent Frame and Structure of human Nature.

Sixthly, From the Testimony of the Christian Religion.

I. From the Wisdom of God's Government. That Mankind is under the Government of God, is evident from that Law which he hath imprinted on our Nature, by which our Actions are distinguished into Good and Evil, Virtuous and Vicious; of which sufficient Proof hath been given, Chap. I. And since God hath given a Law to our Natures, there is no doubt to be made but he hath taken sufficient Care to enforce the Observance of it by Rewards and Punishments, otherwise his Government over us would be very insecure and precarious. For that Lawgiver doth only petition his Subjects to obey, who doth not promise such Rewards and denounce such Penalties as are sufficient to oblige them thereunto.

But now there is no Reward can be sufficient to oblige us to obey, which doth not abundantly compensate any Loss or Evil we may sustain by our Obedience; no Punishment sufficient to deter us from disobeying, that doth not far surmount all the Benefits and Pleasures which we can hope to reap from our Disobedience: But unless there be a future State, the Law of Nature can propose no such Rewards and Punishments to us. For if we have nothing to dread or hope for beyond the Grave, our present Interest is all our Concern, and in Reason we ought to judge Things to be Good or Evil, according as they promote or obstruct our temporal Happiness. Now tho it is certain that in the general there is a natural Good accruing to us from all virtuous Actions; as on the contrary a natural Evil from all vitious ones; and it is ordinarily more conducive to our temporal Interest to obey than to disobey the Law of our Natures; yet there are a World of Instances wherein Vice may be more advantageous to us than Virtue, abstracted from the Rewards and Punishments of another Life. It is ordinarily better for me to be an honest Man than a Knave, it is more for my Reputation, and usually for my Profit too; and it is more for the publick Good in which my own is involved; but yet in several Circumstances it may be better for me with respect only to this World to be a Knave than an honest Man. For whenever I can cheat so secretly and securely as not to fall under the publick Lash, nor impair my Reputation, and I can gain more by the Cheat than I shall lose in the Damage of the Publick, it will be doubtless more advantageous for me, as to my worldly Interest, to cheat than to be honest; and how often such fair Opportunities of Cozenage do occur, no Man can be insensible that hath but the least Insight into the Affairs of this World. So that if there were no future Rewards and Punishments, this great Law of Righteousness would not have Force enough universally to oblige us; because there are a World of Instances wherein we might gain more Good and eschew more Evil by doing unrighteously, than all its present Rewards and Punishments do amount to. And the same may be said of all other Laws of Nature, which without the great Motives of future Happiness and Misery can no longer induce Men to obey 'em than it is for their temporal Interest to do so. For suppose I can secretly stab or poison a Man whom I hate or dread, or from whose Death I may reap any considerable Advantage, what should restrain me from it? If you say the Law of Nature, pray what Reward doth the Law of Nature propose that is sufficient to compensate for the Dissatisfaction of my Revenge, or for the Danger I run in suffering my Enemy to live; or what Punishment doth the Law of Nature denounce that can balance the Advantage of a Thousand, or perhaps ten Thousand Pounds a Year that may accrue to me by his Death?

If you say the Law of Nature proposes to me the Reward of a quiet and satisfied Mind, and denounces the Punishment of a guilty and amazed Conscience; I easily answer, that this Peace and Horror which is consequent to the Forbearance or Commission of Sin, arises from the Hope and Dread of future Rewards and Punishments, which being taken away, to sin or not sin will be indifferent as to any Peace or Horror that can follow upon it; and when this Restraint is taken off, what Consideration will there be left that is sufficient to withhold me from the bloody Fact, whenever I have an Opportunity to act it securely, and am furiously spurred on to it by my own Revenge and Covetousness? So that if there be no Rewards and Punishments in another Life, to enforce the Commands of the Law of Nature, it's certain that there are no such annex'd to it in this, as are universally sufficient to oblige us to observe them. For as for the Goods and Evils of this Life, they are ordinarily distributed among Men with so little Respect and Discrimination, as not only to occasion but to justify that famous Observation of the wise Man, that all Things happen alike to all. Either therefore there are other Goods to be hoped for, and other Evils to be feared, or there are a World of Cases wherein God hath not sufficiently provided to secure our Obedience to the Law of our Nature; and to imagine that God should give a Law to his Creatures, and take no care to secure the Authority of it, is a most senseless Blasphemy of the Wisdom of his Government; for this would be to expose his own Authority to Contempt, and to cast his Laws at the Feet of his Creatures to be spurned and trampled on by them at their Pleasure.

If it be objected, that all that this Argument proves, is, that to secure our Obedience to the Law of Nature, it's necessary we should believe that there are future Rewards and Punishments; but that it doth not hence follow that 'tis necessary that there should be future Rewards and Punishments; because whether there be any such Things or no, our Belief of 'em will be sufficient to secure the Authority of the Law: I answer, That if our Belief of future Rewards and Punishments be necessary, one of these two Things must inevitably follow; either that the Objects of our Belief are real, which is the Thing I am proving, or that, to countenance the Authority of his Laws, it's necessary for God to impose upon our Faith, and deceive us into the Belief of a Falshood. For if to enforce God's Law, it's necessary we should believe that there are future Rewards and Punishments, either there must be such Things really existing, or God must enforce his Law with our Belief of a Falshood; and to imagine, that when God might have created for us a future State of Reward and Punishment, if he had so pleased, and governed us by the Hopes and Fears of it, he hath rather chosen to govern us by Tricks and Lies, and to whedde us into Obedience by a Cheat and Delusion, is a Blasphemy no less senseless than horrid. Since therefore to secure the Authority of that Law by which the human Nature is to be governed, it is necessary that it should be enforced with the Motives of everlasting Reward and Punishment, one of these three Things necessarily follows; either that God hath not sufficiently enforc'd. his Law, which is a foul Imputation on his Wisdom, or that he is fain to enforce it with a Lye, which is an impious Reflection on his Truth, or that there are everlasting Rewards and Punishments.

II. From the Justice of the divine Providence. For if there be a divine Providence presiding over the World, (as, that there is, hath been already sufficiently proved) Justice and Equity, which is the most glorious Perfection of an over-ruling Power, must necessarily be included in the Notion of it. For without Justice, over-ruling Power is nothing but an impotent Tyranny, which to attribute to God, is far more dishonourable and incongruous to the Nature of his Perfections, than to strip him of all Providence, as Epicurus did, and shut him up in the Heavens in a State of everlasting Sloth and Luxury. For not to govern, is only to do Nothing; but to govern without Justice, is to do Mischief;

Mischief; and 'tis a much less Derogation from the Perfection of any Being, to suppose it to be Idle than to suppose it to be Mischievous. So that allowing that God, who is the most perfect of all Beings, governs the World, it would be not only Blasphemous, but Nonsense to imagine that he governs it unjustly. Now the proper Justice of Government consists in the Equality of its Distributions; for since there is such a Thing as immutable Good and Evil in the Actions of free and reasonable Agents, it is naturally fit and due, that those who do Good should receive Good, and those who do Evil, Evil from their Hands who have the Government of Actions; and this proportionable to the Good and Evil of their Doings. So that God's governing the World justly consists in distributing Good to those that do Good, and Evil to those that do Evil, or in other Words, in proportioning Rewards and Punishments to Men according to the Good and Evil he finds in their Actions; and unless we suppose him to do this, it is Nonsense to imagine that he governs the World.

But if all his Distributions are confin'd to this Life, and there is neither Reward nor Punishment to be expected from him in another, there are infinite Instances of his Providence wherein it will be impossible to defend his Equality and Justice. For if there be no other Scene of Good and Evil, Reward and Punishment, but only this Life, all the afflicted good and prosperous bad Men that ever were in the World, of which there are infinite Instances, are so many reproachful Monuments of the woful Inequality of the divine Government. For how many Millions of brave Souls have there been, who have thought nothing too dear for God and his Service, and have sacrificed their Lusts, their Lives and their Fortunes to him, and yet upon this Supposal have reaped no other Recompence for so doing but only a miserable Life, and a woful Death, and an obscure dishonourable Grave? As, on the contrary, how many Millions of Millions of wicked Men that have lived in open Defiance to all that is Sacred, and Just, and Good, blasphem'd God, affronted his Authority, and trampled upon all the Laws of his Government, and yet, supposing there is no other Life, have undergone no other Punishment for so doing but to live prosperously, and die quietly, and lie enshrined in a marble Monument? Now, how can we otherwise apologize for the Justice of Providence, when it thus cross-couples Prosperity with Vice, and Adversity with Virtue, but only by supposing this present Life to be only the State of our Trial and Probation, which will quickly determine in our everlasting Recompence or Punishment, according as we behave and acquit our selves in it; upon which Supposal the Justice of Providence may be fairly accounted for, were the present Distributions of it a Thousand Times more unequal than they are? For then we need not wonder that good and bad Men are at present so unequally treated, since now they are only upon their Proof and Trial, which, as I have shewn before, requires such a Treatment; but their Reward and Punishment is reserved for another State, wherein all these seeming Inequalities shall be fairly adjusted, and Virtue shall be crowned with everlasting Glory and Pleasure, and Vice damn'd to eternal Horror and Confusion. But if the Goods and Evils of this present Life, are all the Reward and Punishment that good and bad Men are to expect, where is the Justice of the divine Government, that many Times oppresses its Friends, and advances its Enemies, and in the Conclusion extinguishes their Beings together, and therewith all Possibility of making any future Retribution of Good to the one, or Evil to the other? And therefore if it be true, that the Judge of all the world will do righteously, that first or last he will certainly distribute his Rewards and Punishments to his Subjects according to the Merit and Demerit of their Actions, it must be as true, that for the main he hath reserved the doing it to a future State, since it cannot be denied but that at present he very often doth the quite contrary: And if it be but as evident that there is such a future State, as it is that God governs the World justly, I think 'tis as fair an Assurance of it as any modest Man can require.

III. From the natural Capacity of our Souls to survive our Bodies, and enjoy future Rewards, and suffer future Punishments, it also follows that there is a future State of Reward and Punishment. For we find in our Souls a certain innate Force and Power, whereby they determine themselves which way they please in their Motions and Operations; whereby they are exempt from the necessitating Influence of any Thing that is foreign to them; and this innate Liberty or Power of Self-determination is necessarily supposed in the Management of all human Affairs; in Commerce and Treaties, in Government, and Laws, and Administrations of Justice, in Counsels, Admonitions, Reproofs and Persuasions: In all which, Applications are made to our Souls as to free and self-determining Agents, that have the absolute Disposal of their own Motions, and can direct them which way they please; and indeed were not our Souls left to their own free Disposal, but concluded by the Laws of a fatal Necessity, as we see all material Agents are, such Applications to them as these, would be very absurd and ridiculous; and we may as reasonably hope to tame Wolves and Tigers by reading Ethicks to them, or to still the North-wind by sending Ambassadors to him to propose Articles of Peace, as to prevail upon Mens Minds by moral Addresses and Persuasions; because if they are not Masters of their own Choices, whatsoever the rigid Laws of Necessity determine them to, they must necessarily choose in despite of all Persuasions to the contrary.

Now by this self-determining Power our Souls do evidently manifest themselves to be immaterial Substances, and consequently not liable to Death and Corruption. For if they were Matter they would be moved like Matter, i. e. by the Pressure or Thrusting of other Matter upon them; and it would be no more in their Power to move any other way, than that which some other Matter presses and impels them, than it is for a Stone not to move upwards when 'tis impell'd by the Force which your Arm impresses on it, and not to move down again when that Force is spent, and 'tis press'd back by its own Weight and Gravity. Whereas we feel in our Soul an innate Power to determine it self which way it pleases, and even to move quite contrary to all foreign Impressions. For when 'tis press'd on by outward Objects, to such and such Thoughts and Purposes with all imaginable Vigor, it often seems the impetuous Tide, and thinks and purposes the quite contrary. How then can that be Matter which is not determined in its Motions by Matter, but when it pleases can either move counter to all material Impressions, or of two material Impressions, can move counter to the strongest?

That our Souls therefore are immaterial, is just as evident as that they have Liberty of Will; and that they have Liberty of Will, needs no other Proof than the common Sense and Feeling of Mankind. And whatsoever Essence feels this Freedom within itself, whereby it is absolved from the rigid Laws of Matter, may with all the reason, in the World conclude itself immaterial; and if our Souls are immaterial Substances, to be sure they can naturally subsist and live without these Bodies, and must necessarily do so unless God destroys them, as having no contrary Qualities or divisible Parts, no Principles of Death or Corruption in 'em; and since God hath made our Soul of an immaterial and immortal Nature, we have all the Reason in the World to conclude that he will not unravel his own Workmanship, but permit it to survive its Body, and enjoy or endure that happy or miserable Fate which itself hath chosen and made.

IV. From the natural Expectance we have of future Rewards, and Dread of future Punishments, it is also evident that there is a State of future Rewards and Punishments. Thus after the Commission of any flagitious Wickedness, there naturally arise ill Abodings in Mens Minds of a dire After-reckoning; and tho the Commission be secret and conceal'd from all human Cognizance, so that there is no Reason to dread the Corrections of publick Justice for it, yet whenever the Man reflects on it, it fills his Mind with horrible Presages of a woful Futurity; as, on the contrary, whenever a Man doth any great Good, or conquers any violent Temptation to Evil, it lifts up his Soul into a blessed Expectation, and swells his Hope with the Promise of a future Reward; and tho the Good he hath done, or the Evil he hath avoided, gives him no kind of Prospect of any present Advantage, yet his Mind is soothed and ravished with the Contemplation of it, which naturally suggests to him the joyous Hopes of a Recompence to come. For, whence should this Hope and Dread spring up in Mens Minds upon the Commission of good and bad Actions, but from some common Impression upon human Nature, intimating to us a future State of Reward and Punishment? If you say, 'tis from those religious Principles which we imbibe in our Education, I would fain know how came this Principle concerning the future State to be so universally imbibed, if there were not something in it that is very agreeable with the Reason of all Mankind? For, whatever is the matter, we see 'tis very easily embraced, but very difficultly parted with; Mens Minds do catch at it with a strange kind of Greediness, but when once they have swallow'd it, it never comes up again without Straining and Violence; and what should be the Reason of this, if there were not something in it that is very agreeable with the natural Taste and Relish of our Understandings? We know there have been great Wits and Philosophers that have taken as much Pains to raise the Belief of a future State out of Mens Minds as ever any others did to imprint it there; and yet tho their Doctrine hath been always highly befriended by Mens wicked Lusts and Affections, to which the Belief of a future State is the most terrible and vexatious Thing in the World, yet with all their Wit and Sophistry they have never been able to root it out of Mens Minds. If then our Hopes and Fears of another World be merely owing to our Teaching and Education, why should not teaching erase as well as imprint them; especially when it is so powerfully seconded with all the Bosom-Rhetorick of Mens vitious Inclinations? Whereas on the contrary, those who have most industriously attempted to extinguish their Sense of another World, have generally been very unsuccessful; and tho in the Riot of their sinful Delights, they many Times charm and stupidify it for the present, yet no sooner do they retire into themselves, and coolly reflect upon their own Minds, but it presently awakes again, and baunts and pursues them; and tho they use all imaginable ways to divert their Minds from the Thoughts of another World, and, to avoid these Bosom Accusers and Tormentors, run for Sanctuary to all Things without them, to Sports and Recreations, to Wine and Women, to Care and Business, yet still they pursue them, and ever and anon break in upon them, and scare and terrify them; and because their Minds are so baunted with these importunate Terrors of the World to come, they are afraid to look inwards, but are fain to live abroad in their own Defence, as not daring to trust themselves alone with themselves; all which are plain Presages of a future Judgment and Vengeance that awaits wicked Souls after this Life. For if this Dread of future Punishment be natural to us, (as its sticking so closely and universally to human Nature plainly argues it is) it must be impress'd on us by the great Author of Nature; and for him to impress a Passion on us which hath no real Object, would be to impose a Cheat upon our Natures, and abuse our Minds with a false Alarm. So that either we must suppose that God hath implanted in our Natures a Dread of that which is not, which is a dishonourable Reflection on his Truth and Veracity; or that there is really a future Punishment answerable to that Dread.

And as the Dread of future Punishment is natural to us when we do ill, so the Desire and Expectance of future Reward is no less natural to us when we do well. For I dare boldly say, there never was any virtuous Man, of whatsoever Nation or Religion, or Sett of Philosophers, whose Mind hath not been winged with earnest Hopes and Desires of a future Happiness, and there is none that ever yet either denied or despair'd of it, but only such as have first debauched the very Principles of their Nature. For such, it's evident, were the Sadducees and Epicureans, Sects of Men that had drowned all that was human in 'em in Sensuality and Voluptuousness, and are branded upon Record for their shameful Indulgence to their own brutish Genius; and such are no Standards of human Nature, but ought rather to be look'd upon as Monsters of Men.

And

And therefore as we do not judge of the natural Figures and Proportions of human Bodies by monstrous and mis-shapen Births, so neither ought we to judge of what is natural or unnatural to Men by those Brutes in human Shape, who, by submitting their Reason to their Passions and Appetites, have disfigured their Natures, and distorted it into an unnatural Position; but if we would know what is human and natural to us, we must take our Measures from those who live most conformably to the Laws of a rational Nature; and these are they whom we call Pious and Virtuous, who are therefore to be look'd upon as the true Standards of human Nature, by whom we may best judge of what is natural and unnatural to us; and if we judge by these, we shall most certainly find that Virtue, and the Hopes of Immortality are so nearly allied, that like Hippocrates's Twins they live and die together. For tho while Men live a brutish and sensual Life, their future Hopes are usually drown'd in their present Enjoyments; yet when once they recover out of this unnatural State, and begin to live like reasonable Beings, immediately they feel great Desires and Expectations of a future Happiness springing up in their Minds, and so arising higher and higher proportionably as they advance in Virtue and Goodness; which is a plain Evidence that these Hopes and Desires are natural to us, and interwoven with the Frame and Constitution of our Souls. But now how can it consist with the Goodness of God to implant such Desires and Hopes in our Natures, and then withhold from them that which is the only Object that can suit and satisfy them? For as a great Divine of our own hath well observ'd, other Beings, we see, have no natural Desire in vain, the good God having so ordered Things that there are Objects in Nature apportioned to all their natural Appetites; but if there be no future State of Happiness reserved for good Men, we are by a natural Principle most strongly inclined to that which we can never attain to; as if God had purposely framed us with such Inclinations, that so we might be perpetually tormented between those two Passions, Desire and Despair, an earnest Propension after a future Happiness, and an utter Incapacity of enjoying it; as if Nature itself, whereby all other Things are disposed to their Perfection, did serve only in Man to make him miserable, and, which is more considerable, as if Virtue, which is the Perfection of Nature, did only serve to contribute to our Infelicity, by raising in us such Desires and Expectations as without a future Happiness must be for ever disappointed. But if this Desire and Expectation be natural to us, as it evidently is, it must be implanted there by the God of Nature, with whose Truth and Goodness it can never consist to inspire us with such Desires and Hopes, as he knows have no Object in the Nature of Things, and so can never be fulfilled and accomplished.

V. From the excellent Frame and Constitution of human Nature, it's also evident that there is a future State of Reward and Punishment. For whoever shall impartially consider the Frame of our Natures, will easily discern that we are made for much greater Purposes than to enjoy this World, and that our Faculties are as much too big for these sensitive Fruitions as the Channel of the Ocean is for the Streams of a little River. For the biggest Happiness we can frame an Idea of, is the Enjoyment of God by Contemplation, and Love, and Imitation of his Perfections, as I have prov'd at large, Part 1. c. 3. which doth as far excel all worldly Happiness, as the Enjoyments of a Prince do the Pleasures of a Fly; and yet it is evident that our Minds are fram'd with a natural Capacity of enjoying this supreme Beatitude, i. e. of contemplating, and loving, and imitating God. For as for the Being and Existence of God, all Things round about us preach and proclaim it, and which way soever we turn our Eyes, we behold the Footsteps of his Power and Wisdom; and being endow'd with a reasoning Faculty, we can easily ascend to the infinite Perfections of his Nature by those borrow'd Perfections we behold in his Creatures, which are so many lively Comments and Paraphrases upon him, and so far forth as they are Perfections, must necessarily meet and concenter in him; and then such is the Frame of our Natures, that from the Contemplation of the Beauty and Perfection of any Being, we naturally proceed to admire and love it ; so that unless our Wills be violently prejudiced against the Perfections of God, our Contemplation must necessarily kindle our Love of 'em ; and then those Perfections which we love and admire in another we are naturally ambitious to transcribe into our selves ; so that being once inflamed with the Love of God, that will be continually prompting us to imitate him, and that will by degrees mould us into a fair and glorious Resemblance of him. Thus God hath implanted in the very Frame of our Nature a most forward Capacity of enjoying himself, which in the Perfection of it infinitely transcends all that can be imagined in a Terrestrial Paradise. And yet tho we have Faculties that we are sure are naturally capable of enjoying him to Perfection, of contemplating him without Weariness, of loving him without Aversion, of imitating him without Difficulty or Interruption ; in this present State of Things it is morally impossible we should ever arise to it. For our Faculties are clogg'd with so many sinful Prejudices, interrupted with so many bodily Necessities, diverted with so many secular Occasions, that it cannot be reasonably expected even from the best Men in the World, that they should in this Life approach the Perfection of the Happiness of divine Enjoyment ; especially if there were no other Life but this ; for then it would be Folly so much as to attempt it. For what Man in his Wits would ever think it worth the while to spend a considerable Part of his Life in waging War with himself, mortifying his Affecti- ons, crossing and starving out his dearest Inclinations, (which yet he must do ere he can arrive to any comfortable Degree of divine Enjoyment) if there were no other Recompence to be expected at last, but to live a few Days longer in a rapturous Muse, and then lie down in everlasting Darkness and Insensibility. Were he not a thousand Times better please and gratify himself at present, content his craving Desires with the Goods that are before him, and take his fill of those sensual Delights that readily offer themselves to his Enjoyment, than run away from them in a long and wearisome Quest of Spiritual Joys, which for all he knows he may never arrive to, or if he doth, is sure within a few Moments to be deprived of for ever ? So that if there be no other State but this, it's plain we are made naturally capable of the highest Happiness to no purpose ; we are naturally capable of enjoying God, and yet such are our Circumstances in this present State, that if there be no other, it is not to be expected we should ever arrive to any high Degree of Enjoyment ; and if it were, all Things considered, 'twould be an egregious Piece of Folly to attempt it. Now how can it consist either with the divine Wisdom or Goodness to create in us such vast Capacities of spiritual Happiness, and then place us in such Circumstances wherein 'twould be both imprudent and in vain for us to pursue any other Happiness but what is carnal and sensual ? No wise Man would build a House unless he meant it should be inhabited ; and can we imagine that the All-wise God would ever have created in us such vast and boundless Capacities of Happiness, merely to stand empty, and be for ever un- inhabited ; and that he who always proposes to himself the most noble and wor- thy Ends of his Actions, would ever have form'd in us such superfluous Capa- cities, or built such spacious Rooms in our Nature when he never intended to make any use of them ?

And then considering the Goodness as well as Wisdom of God, what likeli- hood is there that he should create such ample Capacities in our Nature, and furnish it with such excellent Faculties, for no other End but to enjoy the trifling Goods of this Life ; that he who hath created Goods for all other Crea- tures that are every way adequate to their natural Capacities, should make us capable to partake of the Felicities of Angels, and then stake us down to the Pleasures of Swine ? Especially considering that by making us capable of a higher Happiness, and sensible of our own Capacity, he hath almost necessitated us to expect and desire it ; and what is this, if he doth not intend it for us, but to create in us an Appetite merely to vex and tantalize it ; as if it were a Recrea- tion to him to sit above in the Heavens, and behold the Work of his own Hands, spending itself in weary Strugglings towards him, and vex'd all the while while it continues in Being, with an impotent Desire of that which it shall never enjoy, and which by giving it a Capacity to enjoy, he hath encouraged it to desire and expect.

VI. And lastly, From the Testimony of the Christian Religion, it is also evident that there is a Future State of Reward and Punishment; which in most express Terms, assures us of another Life beyond this, wherein we shall be for ever happy or miserable, according to what we have done in the Flesh: So that we have as full Evidence of the Reality of Future Rewards and Punishments, as we have of the Truth of Christianity, and as full Evidence of the Truth of Christianity, as all the miraculous Works of our Saviour can give, and as full Evidence of the Truth of his Miracles, as the most credible Testimony of Eye-witnesses can give, who not only confirmed their Testimony by other Miracles of their own, but at the last sealed it with their Blood, which is the highest Security that mortal Men can give of their Fidelity; but tho this Argument be of all others the most convincing and satisfactory, yet I shall insist no farther on it in this Place, because I shall have occasion to prosecute it at large in the Seventh Chapter.

S E C T. III.

By what Means this Belief of Divine Rewards and Punishments is to be begotten and confirmed in us.,

THO the Evidences of future Rewards and Punishments be such as are sufficient to convince any reasonable Mind, yet it is evident that in this degenerate State of our Natures there is a strong Repugnancy to the lively Belief of them, insomuch that the bare Proposal of Evidence is not sufficient effectually to persuade us; wherefore before we dismiss this Argument, it will be necessary to add, to what hath been said, such Means and Directions, as, together with the Evidences, are proper to dispose our Minds to the effectual Belief of the future State: And these I shall reduce to these four Particulars.

I. If we would effectually believe the future State of Rewards and Punishments, we must fix and inure our Minds to serious Thoughts and Considerations. For whilst our Minds are taken up with Fancies and Levities, with wild or ludicrous or incoherent Ideas, or entertained with the Cares or Pleasures of this Life, they will not be at leisure to turn their Thoughts towards another World. For to think close of another World, requires a very serious and thoughtful Mind; because the other World doth not press upon our Senses as this World doth, which, wheresoever we turn our selves, is continually thrusting its Objects into our Minds thro' our Eyes and Ears, and whispering to our Thoughts thro' the Organs of our Senses, which are the most immediate Entries and Inlets to our Mind. So that the other World, being quite out of sight, and this always in view, it is as difficult for us to keep the one out of our Minds as to let the other in. For before we can set our selves to think closely of the other World, we must shut our Eyes and Ears to the Objects of this; otherwise they will obtrude themselves upon us, and draw away our Thoughts and Meditations; we must gather in our Thoughts from the Objects of Sense that are round about us, take leave of this World, and retire into our own Minds, and shut up our selves within our selves, that none of these sensitive Things may come at us, and that we may be wholly at leisure to entertain our selves with the invisible Things of another World. And this we shall never be able to do so long as our Minds are vain, and roving, and desultory, and possess'd with wild Imaginations, or restless Cares, or extravagant Mirth and Jollities; for these Things will put our Thoughts upon so many Vagaries, and render them so loose, and wild, and incoherent, that they will never be able to hang long enough together to form any serious Conceptions. So that when we would fix them upon the other World, we shall scarce be able to gather them in from those outward Objects among which they are squander'd; or if we do, we shall never keep them long enough together to form any serious Apprehensions of it ; but as soon as they have taken a cursory View of it, they will be flying abroad again, and roving into Vanity and Impertinence. So that while our Minds are light and vain, they cannot think enough of another World seriously to apprehend and believe it ; the Rewards and Punishments of that invisible State, are Things too serious for our wild Thoughts to dwell on ; and till our Minds are grown more fix'd and steady, till they are more withdrawn from sensitive Objects, and more accustomed to retired Thinking, they will be too volatile and fugitive seriously to apprehend, and heartily to believe a future State. If therefore we would attain to a firm Belief of it, we must endeavour to reclaim our wild Thoughts, by accustoming our selves to serious Thinking ; and when by sad and serious Meditations we have rendered our Minds more fix'd and retir'd, we must,

II. Endeavour to remove those vicious Prejudices which indispose us to the Belief of future Rewards and Punishments. For while Men live in Opposition to God, and have therefore reason to apprehend his Displeasure, this will strongly prejudice our Minds against the Belief of a future State ; because this Belief must necessarily gall and disturb us, and render our vicious Courses extremely Troublesome and Uneasy. For when a Man is resolved to lead an ill Course of Life, and at the same time believes it will conclude in eternal Wretchedness, his Faith will be a perpetual Plague to his Mind, like Belteshazzar's Mene Tekel, it will scare and alarm him in his sinful Carousés, and imbitter the Gust of them with many a sad Thought and dire Reflection ; and till he either shakes Hands with his Creed, or his ill Resolution, it will be impossible for him ever to be quiet. Whilst therefore he resolves to continue his ill Courses, it is his Interest to believe there is no other World but this ; he is obliged to it in his own defence, and as he hopes to enjoy himself, and sin without disturbance ; and then his Interest having bribed his Affection, his Affection will be sure so to bias his Reason, that it will be a difficult matter for him to convince and persuade himself. For if there be future Rewards, he knows he hath no interest in them ; if future Punishments, he is conscious he must feel and indure them ; and to believe that there are such Goods as he shall never be the better for, and such Evils as he shall be infinitely the worse for, must needs be extremely repugnant to his Inclinations. For that which Men would not have, they are averse to believe ; and that which they are averse to believe they are not easily convinced of, because their Aversion will cast such a Mist before their Minds as that they will hardly be able to discern a fair Probability in a clear Demonstration. Wherefore if ever you would arrive at a firm Belief of the future Rewards and Punishments, you must endeavour to dispel from your Minds those Prejudices against it with which your own ill Courses are apt to inspire you, by resolving with your selves to lay aside your sinful Affections and Interests while you are examining the Evidences of another World, and not to suffer them to intermingle with your Reasonings ; concluding that in a matter of such infinite Moment 'tis the greatest Madness in the World to think as you wish and believe as you affect ; that 'tis not your Unbelief will either extinguish the Joys of Heaven, or quench the Flames of Hell, and that since the nature of things will not bend to your Wishes, and be as you would have them, it is your true Interest to believe that they are what they are, especially in a matter of such infinite Concern to you ; that if Heaven and Hell are not Dreams but Realities, you will most certainly find them so whatever you think of them, and that therefore it concerns you, as much as an Eternity of Happiness or Misery amounts to, to believe that they are real if they are so, lest out of a vain Confidence that there are no such Things, you forfeit Heaven and incur Hell-fire. With such Thoughts as these you must often encounter those Prejudices which Sin raises in your Minds ; and when once you have conquer'd them, and reduced your Minds to an impartial Desire of being rightly informed in this Matter, and in order to that, to give an equal bearing to the Reasons on both sides, you are fairly prepared for the Belief of another World, which cannot fail to obtain upon your Understandings, if

III. You duly examine those Motives of Credibility upon which those future Rewards and Punishments are proposed. For tho Faith be the Gift of God, yet it is a Gift which he confers upon us as he doth all his other Blessings, in the use of due and proper Means; and as it is the Blessing of the Lord that makes Rich, but not without the Concurrence of the diligent Hand, so 'tis the Grace of God that gives us Faith, but not without our Application to the natural Means. Now the natural Means of Faith is a due Consideration of the Evidence upon which the Matter to be believed is founded and proposed. For tho the Matter be never so evident in itself, yet it is not evident to us till we have duly considered it; and if we believe without Evidence, we believe with our Wills, and not with our Understandings; whereas in Reality believing is properly an Act of the Understanding, whereby it assents to a Thing as true, which it cannot do without some Proof and Evidence that it is so; and therefore when we assent to Things as true with our Wills without our Understandings, or, which is the same Thing, without Proof and Evidence, we cannot so properly be said to believe, as not to disbelieve them. For there are a World of Things which Men do neither deny nor affirm, believe nor disbelieve, that is, about which they never concern their Thoughts, nor trouble their Heads, one way or t'other. And thus it is here; there are many who pretend to believe another World, but if you ask them why, they can give no Reason, nor did they ever inquire whether there be any to be given; so that it is plain whatever they imagine, they do not believe it; for to believe without Understanding, is as perfect Nonsense, as to understand without Evidence, or believe without Faith. So that that which they call Faith, is only not disbelieving; whether there be another World or no, they never troubled their Heads to inquire, and so having no Evidence pro or con, their Understanding doth neither affirm nor deny, believe nor disbelieve, but negligently leaves the matter in Suspense and Uncertainty.

The natural Means of Faith therefore, you see, is a due Inquiry into the Evidence of the Truth and Reality of the Things we believe; and therefore if we would indeed believe that there is a future World of Rewards and Punishments, we must seriously consider the Reasons and Evidences that prove and assert it, and urge them close to our Understandings, till they have forced and extorted from them a rational and well-grounded Assent; which if we do, laying aside all Partiality and Prejudice, there is no doubt but they will be found weighty enough to turn the Scale against all Objections to the contrary; especially, if

IV. And lastly, You add to all these Means fervent and heartly Prayer. For Prayer in itself is a very proper and useful Means to beget and confirm in us the Belief of the other World, because it is an Abstraction of the Mind from those sensitive and material Objects which stand like Hills and Mountains between us and the invisible World, and intercept our Prospect of it. For whenever our Mind is engaged in a serious and heartly Prayer, it dispels all earthly Things before it, and scatters them out of sight, and having no Mists or Clouds in its way, nothing but a fair and clear Heaven above it, thither it directs its Eyes, and Thoughts, and Desires, without any Lett or Interruption. Now the very withdrawing our Minds from sensible Things to converse with spiritual and invisible ones, doth, as I shewed before, mightily dispose us to the Belief of another World. When therefore by frequent and heartly Prayer, our Minds have been accustomed to retire from the Objects of Sense, and to fix their Thoughts and Contemplations upon God, they will be able to turn themselves with more Ease and Readiness to the invisible Things of another World, which the more familiar they are to us, the better able we shall be to apprehend and believe them.

But then, by our fervent and heartly Prayers, we shall also obtain the Assistance of God, without the Concurrence of whose Grace we can do no good Thing, and much less effectually believe the Rewards and Punishments of another Life, which is the Root and Principle of all true Piety and Virtue. For to the forming a firm Belief of this Doctrine in our Minds, there is required a very severe and impartial Consideration of the Proofs and Evidences upon which it is founded;

ed; and considering how vain and roving our Thoughts are, how apt to fly off from any serious Argument, and especially from this of another World, which is so offensive to our vitious Appetites and Affections, what likelihood is there that we should ever fix our Minds to such a thorow Examination of the Proofs of another World, as is necessary to beget in us a lively Belief of it, unless God, who alone can command our Thoughts, cooperates with us, and animates our faint Endeavours with his Grace and Assistance; unless he by suggesting the Evidences of the Future State to us, and by urging and repeating them, imprints them on our Minds with all their natural Force and Efficacy; in a Word, unless by following our flying Thoughts with these his holy Inspirations, and importuning them with, and almost forcing them upon them, he at last prevails with them to stay, and look back, and consider, and seriously to ponder the Weight and Force of them, it is very improbable they should ever abide long enough upon our Minds to settle into a firm and efficacious Belief. Let us therefore earnestly implore the Aid and Assistance of God, and beseech him frequently to inspire our Minds with the Arguments of a future Life, and to urge, and repeat, and set them home upon our Thoughts, till by a due consideration of them we have extracted all their Force and Evidence, and digested it into a lively and active Belief; and if to the use of all the above-named means you do but add this of Prayer and Supplication, you may depend upon it, that he who hath promised to open unto all that knock, and to be found of all that seek him, will never deny you any Grace or Assistance that is necessary to produce in you this fundamental Principle of Religion, viz. an effectual Belief of the Rewards and Punishments of another World.

To conclude this Argument therefore, since this Belief is so absolutely necessary to subject our Minds to the Obligations of Religion, let us endeavour as much as in us lies, to found it in our Reason, by convincing our Minds of the Truth and Force of those Evidences upon which it is proposed. For while we believe upon Trust, and we know not why, our Faith must needs be very weak and infirm, and like a Tree without Root in the midst of a Storm, be unable to outstand any Blast of Temptation. For the Temptations of Sin are such Goods and Evils as are evident to our Senses, which do most certainly assure us that there are such Things in the World as Pleasure and Profit, Reproach and Persecution; and therefore unless when we are tempted, our Faith can confront the Evidence of Sense with the Evidence of Reason, and produce good Proof of those future Goods and Evils which it puts in the Balance against these present Temptations, it will hardly be able to withstand 'em. For what likelihood is there that the Things which we believe without Proof and Evidence, should have comparably that Force and Influence upon us, as the Things which we know, and feel, and experience? So that when we come to oppose a Heaven and a Hell, of whose Reality and Existence we have no Evidence, to Pleasures or Profits, Reproaches or Persecutions, which strike immediately on our Senses, it is easy to prognosticate which will be most prevalent.

But if our Belief of the future Rewards and Punishments be founded on such Evidence as satisfies our Reason, what Temptation in the World is there that can prevail against it; what Good is there that can outbid Heaven, or what Evil that can vie Terrors with Hell? For we see by Experience that the Objects of our Faith, when it is grounded upon satisfactory Evidence, do as much influence our Minds as the Objects of Sense; they who never saw the Indies unless it were in a Map, and so can only believe that there are such Countries, are yet as much affected with the rich Merchandizes they abound with, as those who have been there, and as ready to venture their Estates and Persons thither, thro' the Danger of the Sea, in hope of a prosperous Return. If therefore we believe that there is such a State as Heaven, with as full Satisfaction of Mind as we do that there is such a Place as the Indies, doubtless our Faith would affect us as much as our Eyes, and we should be as forward to go to Heaven, and venture thro' all Dangers and Difficulties thither, as if we had been there already, and had seen with our own Eyes all the Glories and Delights it flows and abounds with. So that the Evidence of our Faith, if it be clear and satisfactory, will as much affect our Minds, as the Evidence of our Sense; and Heaven and Hell will as vigorously influence our Hope and Fear, if with a full Satisfaction of Mind we believe them, as if we had seen and felt them. Conceive then that you had spent but one Hour in Heaven, surveying with your own Eyes the Glories of that Place, the Triumphs and Exaltations of its blessed Inhabitants, and the rapturous Joys and Delights wherewith it entertains them; conceive that after this you had been sent for another Hour into Hell, and had there been Speçtators of the Horrors and Agonies of the damned, of their Torture, and Rage, and dire Convulsions of Soul, caused by a desperate and remediless Misery; in a word, conceive that after all, you had been dismiss'd into this World again to choose your own Fate, and determine your selves to that happy, or this miserable Portion for ever; think now what your Mind and Resolution would be; whether you would not be willing to lose any thing rather than Heaven, or to endure any thing rather than Hell; whether any Good or Evil Sin can tempt you withal, would be able to out-tempt the Rewards and Punishments of Eternity. Doubtless no, the Remembrance you would have of the infinite Joys and intolerable Miseries you saw in that other World, would prove an invincible Antidote against all Temptation. Now what your Sense of the other World would be if you had seen it, that will your belief of it be, when 'tis founded upon clear and satisfactory Evidence; 'twill be an infallible Countercharm against the most bewitching Temptations; 'twill render the greatest Goods dreadful to us that beckon us to Hell, and the greatest Evils desirable that drive us towards Heaven. For Faith, saith the Apostle, is the substance of Things hoped for, and the evidence of Things not seen, Heb. 11. 1. that is, it renders its invisible Objects as real and evident to us, as our Sense doth visible ones; and when Heaven and Hell are become as evident to our Faith as sensible Things are to our Senses, what Good or Evil is there in all the World that can out-tempt them? For what Good is there so good as Heaven, or what Evil so bad as Hell? So that if our belief of the future Rewards and Punishments be but founded on such Evidence as gives a full Satisfaction to our Minds, 'twill draw our Souls to God like an invincible Loadstone, in despite of all the Oppositions of Temptations from without, and of all the counter-strivings of a corrupt Nature from within; and there is nothing in the World will be able to withstand it; no Good or Evil that Sin can promise, or threaten, that will have the Power to resist its Almighty Persuasions, but 'twill force its own way thro' all Oppositions, and like an overflowing Torrent bear down all our carnal Considerations before it.
Delights

Wherefore, if ever we mean to disengage our selves from the Slavery of Sin, and entirely to devote our selves to God and his Service, let us in the use of the above-named Means endeavour to establish our Minds in a firm and well-grounded Belief of the other World; that so our Faith being built upon a sure Foundation of Reason, may be able to outstand all the Waves of Temptation, and to chase all those Goods and Evils before it that stand in the way of our Return to God; and when by our Faith we have so far overcome the World as to submit and resign our selves to God in despite of all its Temptations, we shall find our Belief of the other World every Day, grow and improve upon our Hands, till at last it commences into a certain Assurance. For 'tis not so much Mens Reason as their Lusts that do object against the Reality of the future World; they are loth to believe it, because it disturbs them in their sinful Enjoyments, and so their Will employs their Reason to argue against it; and when once their Wills are engaged in the Controversy, a very slender Probability will weigh more on that side than a clear Demonstration on the other. When therefore our Wills are taken off by a free Resignation of 'em to God, all that sinful Prejudice which renders us now so averse to believe, will vanish from our Minds; and then we shall see Things as they are, and the Arguments of another World will appear to our Minds with such a convincing Evidence, as will quickly dispel all our Doubts and Uncertainties, and render our Faith equivalent to a clear Vision. So that we shall pass thro' all the Temptations of the World with the same Constancy and Resolution tion of Soul, as if we walked in open view of Heaven and Hell; and these mighty Objects which do so infinitely transcend all the Goods and Evils which Sin can tempt us withal, will have as viſtorious an Influence on our Lives, as if they were preſent, and did ſtrike immediately on our Senſes. And then, how is it poſſible that any Temptation whatſoever ſhould be able to cope with or prevail againſt them? For he who is fully perſuaded of the Reality of Heaven and Hell, muſt be utterly abandoned of all his Reason, if he ſin for any Goods ſake that is leſs than Heaven, or for any Evils ſake that is leſs than Hell. When therefore we are drawn to God by ſuch invincible Hopes and Fears as the firm Belief of the other World will ſuggeſt to us, how is it poſſible that any Temptation of Sin ſhould either diſſuade us from coming to him, or perſuade us to forſake him? Wherefore it concerns us to take all poſſible care to ground our Faith well, and improve and ſtrengthen it, that ſo in deſpite of all Temptations, it may influence our Wills and govern our Practice, and ſafely conduct us thro' all the Snares of this Life, and at length bring us home to everlaſting Happineſs.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Neceſſity of having right Apprehenſions of God, in order to our being truly Religious.

IT is a noble and celebrated Paſſage of Epiſtetus, Chap. 38. τῆς περὶ τὰς θεὰς εὐσεβείας, ἰδί τι τὸ κυριώτατον ἐκείνῳ ἐστί, ὁρθὰς ὑπολήψεις περὶ αὐτῶν ἔχειν ὡς ὄντων καὶ διοικούντων τὰ ὅλα καλῶς καὶ δικαίως. i. e. Know that the main Foundation of Piety is this, to have right Apprehenſions of the Nature of God, and to be ſenſible that he is, and that he governs the World well and juſtly; and accordingly, the Pſalmiſt, ſpeaking of God, tells us, They that know thy Name will put their Trust in thee, Pſal. 9. 10. i. e. They who have made a true Discovery of thy Nature, and by obſerving, as I have done, the glorious Effects of thy Wiſdom and Power, and juſtice, and Goodneſs, have formed in their Minds right and genuine Apprehenſions concerning thee, will make no ſcruple to place their whole Trust and Confidence in thee; which is equally true of all other Acts of Piety and Religion. For, the true Knowledge of God will as much influence our Minds to love and adore him, to praiſe him, and ſubmit to him, as to put our Trust in him; and hence St. Paul aſcribes all the Impiety and Wickedneſs of the Gentiles to their not liking to retain God in their Knowledge, i. e. to their wicked Averſion, to the true and genuine Notions of God, Rom. 1. 28.

In the Proſecution of this Argument, I ſhall endeavour theſe Three Things:

First, To ſhew in what reſpects right Apprehenſions of God are neceſſary to our being truly Religious.

Secondly, To lay down ſome Rules for the forming of right Apprehenſions of God in our Minds.

Thirdly, To aſſign and remove the common Causes of our Miſapprehenſions concerning him.

SECT. I.

In what Reſpects right Apprehenſions of God are neceſſary to our being truly Religious.

IN general, whatſoever is requiſite to render Men truly religious muſt be derived from true Apprehenſions of God, who is the great Object of Religion. For Religion being the Rule of Divine Service, muſt itſelf be regulated by the Divine Nature, and without a right Underſtanding of the Nature of God, it is impossible we should regulate our Religion by it. Now to the right Conduct and due Regulation of our Religion, it is requisite, first, that we should be rightly inform'd what Services are pleasing to God; Secondly, That we proceed upon a true Principle in serving him; Thirdly, That we direct our Services to a right End; Fourthly, That we be furnished with sufficient Motives to engage us to serve him; the Want of either of which will prove an irreparable Flaw in the very Foundation of our Religion, and render the whole not only infirm, but defective in its very Constitution. And in all these respects, right Apprehensions of God are indispensably necessary.

First, They are necessary to inform us what Services are pleasing to God.

Secondly, They are necessary to inspire us with the true Principle upon which we must serve him.

Thirdly, They are necessary to direct us to the true End for which we must serve him.

Fourthly, They are necessary to furnish us with proper Motives and Encouragements to engage us to serve him.

I. A right Apprehension of God is necessary to instruct us what Services are pleasing to God. For to be sure nothing can be pleasing to him but what is agreeable to the Perfections of his Nature, which are the Originals from whence the eternal Laws of Religion are transcribed; unless therefore we know what his Perfections are, how is it possible we should know what Services are agreeable to 'em? If you would serve a Prince gratefully and acceptably, you must inform your self beforehand what his Nature and Disposition is, that so you may accommodate yourself thereunto, and compose your Actions and Behaviour accordingly; that you may furnish him with fresh Pleasures if he be soft and voluptuous, or blow him up with Flatteries, if he be proud and vain-glorious; that if he be covetous and tyrannical, you may sponge and oppress his People, and drain their Wealth into his Coffers; if just and beneficent, you may assist and forward him in righting the Injuries, correcting the Miscarriages, and alleviating the Burdens of his Subjects. And thus if you would serve the great King of the World in such ways as are pleasing and acceptable to him, you must study his Nature, and endeavour to inform your selves which way his infinite Perfections do incline him, that so you may know how to comport your selves towards him, and to render him such Services as are agreeable to his Nature. For there is no Rule in the World but only that of his Nature, by which you can certainly conclude what will please him, and tho he hath told you by express Revelation what Services he expects, and what will please him, yet without recurring to the Rule of his Nature, you can never be secure either that what he told you is true, or that what he told you was pleasing to him then, is still pleasing to him now. For how can you be secure, either that he told you truly what Services were pleasing to him, but only from the Truth and Veracity of his Nature; or that the Services which were pleasing to him then, are pleasing to him now, but from the Stability and Unchangeableness of his Nature? So that in our Inquiries after what is pleasing to God, we cannot depend upon his Word without consulting his Nature, which is not only the Security, but also the Test of his Word. For it's certain that that cannot be God's Word which contradicts his Nature; and what plausible Pretence soever any Doctrine may make to divine Revelation, if it teach or command any Thing that is apparently repugnant to the divine Perfections, we ought for that Reason to conclude it an Imposture; it being much more possible that the most plausible Pretence to Revelation should be false, than that God should reveal any Doctrine that is repugnant to his Nature. So that in all our Inquiries what is pleasing to God, our last Appeal must be to his Nature, which is the great Standard of Good and Evil, by which we are to measure what is pleasing and displeasing to him.

Whilst therefore we are ignorant of God's Nature, or possessed with wrong and false Apprehensions of it, we must necessarily wander in the dark, and neither know what to do, or how to behave our selves towards him. For how can we imagine what will please or displease a dark and unknown Nature, whose bent and inclinations we are utterly unacquainted with; but if we are under false Apprehensions of his Nature, they must necessarily mislead us in our Behaviour towards him, and put us upon false Ways of serving and pleasing him. Thus, if we apprehend him to be a froward and testy Being, that is apt to be pleased and displeased with Trifles, in conformity to our Apprehension of his Nature, we shall offer him a trifling Service, a Service made up of Pageantry and Compliment, of pompous Shew and ceremonious Respects and empty Formalities; for such a trifling Worship is in itself most proper for such a humorous Divinity. So if we apprehend him to be of an imperious and tyrannical Nature, that governs Himself and the World by a blind and obstinate Will, without any regard to the eternal Reasons of Things, we shall worship him as the Indians do their arbitrary Devils, i. e. follow him with Howlings and Lamentations, with trembling Hearts and frighted Looks, and dismal Tones, and by flattering him with Praises, and fawning upon him with slavish Submissions and Addresses endeavour to collogue with Heaven, and ingratiate our selves with its dreadful Majesty; for what can be more agreeable to such a tyrannical Divinity than such a forc'd and slavish Worship? in a word, if we apprehend him to be a fond and indulgent Being, that is govern'd by a foolish Pity and blind Commiseration, we shall not fail to render him a suitable Worship, i. e. to retire and grow melancholy, to whine and bemoan our selves; to deject our Looks, and disfigure our Countenances, and teaze our Souls into fits of fruitless Compunction, that so by the soft Rhetorick of a well-acted Sorrow, we may pierce his Bowels and melt him into Pity and Compassion towards us; for what can be more prevalent with such a soft and indulgent Deity, than such a mournful and passionate Religion? Thus, whilst we have wrongful Apprehensions of God, they must necessarily mislead us into false Ways of Worship, because we can no otherwise worship him than by rendering him such Services as are suitable to the Apprehensions we have of his Nature; and therefore, while we think any otherwise of his Nature than it is, we must necessarily think such Services suitable to it as are not.

But if we truly understand what God is, we cannot but apprehend what Worship is suitable to him, by that eternal Congruity and Proportion that there is between Things and Things; which is as obvious to Mens Minds, as Sounds and Colours to their Ears and Eyes. If God be a Being endow'd with such and such Perfections, every Man's Mind will tell him, that between such an Object and such Actions and Affections, there is a natural Congruity, and therefore so and so he ought to be treated and address'd to, with such and such Actions and Affections to be served and worshipped. So that if we apprehend God truly as he is, circled with all his natural Glories and Perfections, our Apprehensions will produce in us such Affections, and our Affections such Deportment and Behaviour towards him as are suitable to the Perfections of his Nature, and we shall worship him with such Services as will both please and become him, with admiring Thoughts, and dutiful Wills, and godlike Affections; with an ingenuous Fear, an humble Confidence, and an obedient Love; with cheerful Praises, and profound Adorations, with sober, wise and rational Devotions; such as will wing and employ our best Affections and most noble Faculties; for 'tis such a Worship only that can suit such Perfections, and please such a Nature as God's.

II. A right Apprehension of God is also necessary to inspire us with the best Principle of serving him. For it's certain that there is no Principle in human Nature that will so effectually engage us to the Service of God, or render our Service so acceptable to him, as that of Love; which will tune our Wills into such an Harmony with God's, that we shall no longer choose and refuse according to our particular likings and dislikings, but what is most pleasing or displeasing to him will be so to us; and our Wills being thus united and subjected to his, our Obedience will extend to all his Commands, and admit no other Bounds but his Will and Pleasure. Whereas if we do not obey him out of love, we shall endeavour to contract our Obedience into as narrow a compass as may be, because we shall render it to him with a grudging Mind, and consequently with a narrow and stingy Hand; for we shall serve him no farther than we are driven by Fear, and the restless Importunities of a clamorous Conscience, and so consequently fall infinitely short of our Duty, and take up in a partial and hypocritical Obedience. For while we do not love him, it is impossible we should obey him with a ready Will, which is the proper Seat of his Empire; and while we obey him with a stubborn and rebellious Will, we are only his Slaves, but the Devil's Subjects. Till therefore we do obey him, at least in some measure, from a Principle of Love, it is impossible our Obedience should be either universal or sincere.

But to the inspiring our Souls with this Principle, there is nothing more necessary than right Apprehensions of God, who in himself is doubtless the most amiable of Beings, as having all those Perfections in infinite Degrees that can beget or deserve a rational Affection. So that we cannot think him to be any way otherwise than he is, without thinking him less lovely, and detracting more or less from the infinite Beauty of his Nature; for since he cannot be more lovely than he is in himself, every false Apprehension of him must needs represent him less lovely. But since of all his Perfections, that of his Goodness is the most powerful Motive and Engagement of Love, there is nothing more necessary to kindle our Love to him than right Apprehensions thereof. For being infinitely good, as he is, in his own Nature, it is impossible we should conceive him to be better than he is; and therefore every false Notion we entertain of his Goodness must necessarily detract from it, and so much as we detract from his Goodness, so much we detract from the principal Reason and Motive of our loving him. And therefore in order to the engaging of our Love to him, it concerns us above all Things not to entertain any Opinion of him that reflects a Disparagement on his Goodness. For too many such Opinions there are that have been imbibed among Christians as the fundamental Principles of their Orthodoxy; namely, such as these, that God's Sovereign Will is the sole Rule of his Actions, and that he doth things not because they are just and reasonable, but that they are just and reasonable because he doth them; as if he were merely an omnipotent, blind Will that acts without Reason, and did run thro' the World like an irresistible Whirlwind, hurrying all things before him without any Consideration of Right or Wrong; that his Decrees of governing and disposing his Creatures are wholly founded in his absolute and irresistible Will, that determines of the everlasting Fate of Souls without any Reason, or Forefight, or Condition; that by this his unaccountable Will he hath impaled the far greater Part of them within an absolute Decree of Reprobation, for no other End but that Nimrod-like he might have Game enough to sport and breathe his Vengeance for ever; and that having nail'd them to this woful Cross by this his dire Decree, he bids them save themselves and come down, as those cruel Mockers did our Saviour, and because they do not obey, torments and cruciates them for ever, tho he knows they are not able to do it of themselves, and hath purposed never to enable them to do it. Which Opinions do represent God in such a formidable Dress, circled with such a stern and ghastly Majesty, as is more apt to inspire us with Horror than Love. For tho by persuading our selves that we are of the small Number of his elect Favourites, we may work our Minds into some Degree of Love to him; yet when we consider how severely he hath treated the rest of our Fellow-Creatures, without any other Reason but his own Will, this will intermingle such a Grimness with his Smiles, such a Terror with those Charms for which we love him, as must necessarily damp the Fervors of our Love, and ever and anon freeze it into Horror and Astonishment, and so Fear will be at least the predominant Principle of our Obedience; and while it is so, our Religion must needs languish under great Imperfections and Infirmities. For while our Fear and Dread of God is the governing Principle of our Religion, we shall but do Penance in all our Addresses dresses to him, and every Act of our Obedience will be a kind of Martyrdom, so that we shall never be able to entertain any cheerful Converse or friendly Society with him, and yet serve him we must, for fear our Neglect of him should rouse his Vengeance against us; and between this Necessity of coming to him, and this Fearfulness of approaching him, what can there be begotten but a forc'd and constrain'd Devotion, which because we do not love, we would willingly leave, did not our Dread and Horror of him drag us to his Altars. And as we shall serve him with a forced Obedience, so we shall obey him with a sordid and niggardly Affection; and while we grudge him our Obedience, we shall be most backward to obey him in those Instances of Duty that are of greatest Moment and most pleasing to him, and most forward in those that are of least Concern, and most pleasing to our selves. Thus while our Minds are ridden with sour and rigid Apprehensions of God, they will inspire us with a slavish Dread of him, and that will restrain and contract our Obedience to him. Thus Maximus Tyrius excellently represents the Case: 'Ο μὲν εὐσεβὴς φίλος Θεῷ, ὁ δὲ δεισιδαίμων κίλαξ Θεῷ, καὶ μακάριος ὁ εὐσεβὴς ὁ φίλος Θεῷ, δυστυχὴς δὲ ὁ δεισιδαίμων· ὁ μὲν θαρσύνῃ τῇ ἀρετῇ πρὸς Θεοῖς ἀντιδίδωκε· ὁ δὲ παρὲν δὶα μόχθουσι, μετὰ πολλὰ δάκρυα, δύσουλως, καὶ δειδίως τῶς Θεοῖς ὁμῶς τὰς πράξεις. i. e. The truly religious Man is the Friend of God, but the superstitious is his Flatterer, and the former is happy, but the latter miserable; for the one being encouraged by his own Virtue, approaches God without any slavish Fear or Dread, but the other being debased with the Sense of his own Wickedness, approaches him with Trembling and Despair, dreading him as a cruel Tyrant, Dissert. 4.

If therefore we would render him a cheerful, free, and universal Obedience, we must endeavour to represent him fairly to our own Minds, and to think of him as he is, and as he hath represented himself in the holy Scriptures, i. e. as a bountiful Benefactor to all his Creation, and an universal Lover of the Souls of Men; that would have all Men to be saved, and come to the Knowledge of the Truth, and doth heartily and readily contribute to our eternal Welfare; that leaves no Art of Love, no Method of Kindness unattempted to rescue us from eternal Perdition, and when we have utterly baffled and defeated them all, doth most unwillingly abandon us to the woful Fate we have chosen and prepared for our selves; that in punishing even the most incorrigible Sinners doth not at all design to wreak and gratify his own Revenge, but to do good to the World, and warn others by their Sufferings not to imitate their Sins; and in a word, that importunately invites us back when we are gone astray, and upon our Return graciously receives us, and when he hath received us, is infinitely industrious to prepare us for Happiness, and when he hath prepared us, abundantly rewards us, and when he hath rewarded us, everlastingly triumphs in our Glory and Beatitude: These and such like Thoughts are truly worthy of God, befitting the infinite Goodness of his Nature, and as such do earnestly recommend him to our Affections, as the most amiable and endearing Object in the World; and when by such Recommendation they have captivated our Affections, and kindled our Hearts into an unfeigned Love of him, they have inspired us with such a vigorous Principle of Action, as will both animate and enoble our Religion, and render it truly worthy of God and ourselves; for then we shall serve him with a free and dutiful Will, a liberal Affection, and a cheerful Heart, and consequently render him a full, and generous, and willing Obedience. For so holy David tells, Psal. 119. 32. I will run the Way of thy Commandments when thou shalt enlarge my Heart, i. e. when thou shalt open and widen my Heart with the Love of thee, (for so St. Paul expounds the Phrase, 2 Cor. 6. 11.) I shall most readily and cheerfully obey thee.

III. A right Apprehension of God is also necessary to direct us to the End for which we are to serve him; without which it is impossible we should serve him acceptably. For as a good Intention doth not justify a bad Action, so neither doth a good Action a bad Intention; and unless both are good, neither are acceptable. If I do an Action that is materially good with respect to a bad End, I unballow and vitiates it, and render it formally evil. If I fast for Strife, or give Alms for Vain-glory, or pray to give a Colour to my Rapines and and Oppressions; my very Devotion is a Cheat, my Mortification a Lye, and my Charity an Imposture. So that in order to our serving of God acceptably, it's necessary we should direct those Services we render him to their right and proper End; and what that is we cannot well understand unless we have a right Apprehension of his Nature: For to be sure God hath proposed that to us for the End of our Worship, which is most agreeable to his own Perfection; and therefore unless we have a right Notion of his Perfections, how can we rightly apprehend what End is most agreeable to them? As for instance, the right End of our serving him is, that we may glorify him for ever in an everlasting Participation of his Perfection and Happiness; and this we can be no otherwise certain of, than by a true Survey and Inspection of his Nature, which will instruct us, That being infinitely perfect as he is, he must be infinitely happy within himself, and so can design no Self-end without himself, and consequently that the End for which he requires our Service, is not any Advantage he expects to reap from it, or farther Addition to his own Happiness, he being from all Eternity past as completely happy as he can be to all Eternity to come; and therefore what other End can he be supposed to aim at than our Good and Happiness? It is true indeed, he designs to glorify himself in our Happiness, but how? Not to render himself more glorious by it than he is in himself, for that is impossible; but to display and shew forth his own essential Glory to all that are capable of admiring and imitating him, that thereby he might invite them to transcribe that Goodness of his into their Natures, of which his Glory is the Shine and Lustre, and thereby to glorify themselves; and what can more effectually display the Glory of a Being, who is infinitely wise and powerful and good, than to contrive and effect the Happiness of his Creatures, and especially of his rational Creatures, who of all others have the most ample Capacity of Happiness? Doubtless the highest Glory of an infinite Power, that is conducted by an infinite Wisdom and Goodness, is to contrive and execute the most effectual Methods of doing the greatest Good; and what greater Good can such a Power effect, than the eternal Happiness of reasonable Creatures? So that God's Glory and our Happiness are so inseparably conjoined, that we cannot aim right at either, but we must hit both: and whether we say that his End is his own Glory or our Happiness, it is the same thing; For his Glory is our Happiness, and our Happiness is his Glory; and when he hath perfected our Nature, and advanced it to the highest Happiness it is capable of, it will shine back upon him, even as all other glorious Effects do on their Causes, and reflect everlasting Honour on that infinite Power and Wisdom and Goodness from whence it was derived. Thus right Apprehensions of the Nature of God will naturally lead us to the great End which he proposes in all his Transactions with us, and thereby direct us what End we are to propose in our Transactions with him. For that which is God's End ought to be ours, and therefore since his End is his own Glory, or, which is the same thing, our everlasting Happiness, it ought to be ours also.

But now while we misapprehend the Nature of God, we shall be apt to set up false and indirect Ends of serving him; as for instance, while we look upon him as a selfish Being, that centers wholly in himself, and separates his Interest from the Interest of his Creatures, doing every thing merely for his own Sake, we shall think our selves obliged in all our Addresses to him to set aside our own Interest and Happiness, and to aim singly and separately at his Honour and Glory; and yet this is the great Fundamental of the whole Scheme of some Mens Divinity, viz. That God aims wholly at himself, and regards the Good of his Creatures no farther than it serves his own Interest; that he made this World out of mere Ostentation, to boast and magnify his own Power and Greatness; and gives Laws to his Creatures, and exacts their Obedience for no other Reason, but because 'tis for his Honour to be served and worshipped? that he created Hell only to shew the Power of his Wrath, and prepare an everlasting Triumph for his Vengeance; and erected Heaven for a Theatre to shew himself on, that so having filled it with a vast Corona of Angelical and Saintly Spectators, he might display the Glory of his Majesty before them, and thereby provoke them to extol and praise and commend him for ever. And while we thus conceive of God, how can we hope that he will ever be pleased with us unless we aim at the same End that he doth, i. e. unless laying aside all regard to our selves, and our own Happiness both here and hereafter, we entirely direct all our Worship and Service to his Glory and Interest; which being impossible for us to do, whilst we have so much Self-love and so much Indigence together, will either render our Religion wholly unpracticable, or perplex us with eternal Doubts of its Truth and Sincerity.

And supposing we could direct all our Religion to this end, this instead of rendering it more acceptable to God, would only render it more unworthy of him; for then we should serve him under the Notion of his Benefactors rather than of his Pensioners, with a Design to enrich him, rather than to be enrich'd by him: And what an unbecoming Presumption is it for such indigent Creatures as we to entertain the least Thought of contributing to God, or making any Addition to his infinite Store? He is above all Want, being infinitely satisfied from the inexhaustible Fountain of his own Perfections; and for us to imagine that he needs our Services, and requires them to serve his own Interest, is to blaspheme his All-sufficiency, and suppose him a poor and indigent Being, that for Want of a perfect Satisfaction within himself, is forced to roam abroad and raise Taxes upon his Creatures to enrich and supply himself. For if we serve him for any End at all, it must be either to do him Good or ourselves; if it be to do him Good, we reproach and dishonour him, by supposing that he hath need of us and our Services, which can do him no Good unless he hath some need of them. So that whatsoever some high-flown Enthusiasts may pretend, that it is sordid and mercenary to serve God for our own Good, I am sure to serve him for his Good, is profane and blasphemous; and therefore, either we must serve him for no Good, or serve him for our own; and since he is so infinitely sufficient to himself, that nothing we can do can benefit and advantage him, to what better Purpose can we worship and serve him, than to receive Benefit and Advantage from him; which, instead of being base and mercenary, is a Purpose most becoming both God and our selves? For to serve him with an Intent not to give to, but to receive from him, is to acknowledge his Fulness and our own Want, his All-sufficiency and our own Poverty; whereas, by serving him to the contrary Purpose, we do in effect set up our selves above him, it being much greater to give than to receive; and to make that the End of our Worshipping God, which doth in effect suppose him to be our Inferior, is to make our selves Gods instead of Votaries. What the true End therefore of our serving God is, may be easily inferred from a right Apprehension of his Nature: For do but consider him as a Being that is above all Want, that is infinitely satisfied in his own Perfections, and an unbounded Ocean of Happiness to himself, and then what other End can you propose in serving him, but to derive Perfection and Happiness from him, in the Accomplishment of which he and you will be glorified together?

IV. And lastly, a right Apprehension of God is also necessary to furnish us with proper Motives and Encouragements to serve him. It is the Nature of all reasonable Beings to be drawn forth into Action by Motives and Arguments; and the most powerful Arguments to move us God-ward, are drawn from the Nature of God, from his Majesty and Holiness, his Truth and Justice, his Mercy and Goodness; none of which can have their just and full Influence upon us, unless we have a right and genuine Apprehension of them: The Consideration of his Majesty is naturally apt to strike our Minds into an awful Reverence of his Authority; but if we look upon it under the Notion of a mere arbitrary Greatness, that governs not itself by Counsel and Reason, but by a blind, and absolute, and unaccountable Will, that always chooses and refuses pro Imperio, without any Regard to the eternal Reasons of Things, we may be astonish'd and confounded at it, but we can never truly reverence it. The Consideration of his Holiness is naturally apt to deter us from approaching him with vitious and impure Affections; but if we place his Holiness in a mere formal Affectation of external Decency, Respect, and Reverence, and not in the immutable Conformity of his Will with the the eternal Rules of Righteousness, it may move us to be very ceremonious and respectful to him, as to the Place, and Garb, and Posture of our Worship, but it will never prevail with us to cleanse and rectify our Hearts and Affections. Again, the Consideration of his Justice is naturally apt to restrain us from affronting his Authority, by perverse and wilful Violations of his Laws; but while we look upon it as a stern and implacable Attribute, which nothing will appease and satisfy but Blood and Revenge, it may overwhelm us with Horror and Despair, but 'twill never persuade us to reform and amend. Once more, the Consideration of his Mercy is naturally apt, when we are gone astray, to invite us to return, with the hopeful Prospect it gives us of Pardon and Reconciliation; but while we look upon it under the Notion of a blind Pity, or effeminate easiness and Tenderness of Nature, that will admit of no Severity, how wholesom soever or necessary to the Ends of Government, instead of moving us to Repentance, it will animate us in our Rebellion. In fine, the Consideration of his Goodness is naturally apt to work upon our Ingenuity, and to draw us Godwards with the Cords of a Man, and the Bonds of Love; but while we mistake it for a blind Partiality, that chooses its Favourites without Reason, and rewards them without Respect to their Qualifications, instead of captivating our Love, 'twill provoke our Disdain, and excite in us a secret Contempt and Aversation.

Thus tho the Nature of God be in itself a most fruitful Topick of Motives and Arguments to engage us to serve and obey him, yet by the false Representations that are sometimes made of it, it may be perverted into an Inducement to Wickedness, and made a plausible Pretence to encourage and justify us in our Rebellions against him. Whilst we look upon God as he is in himself, shining with his own unstained and immaculate Glories, there is nothing more apt to influence all the Springs of Motion within us; to inflame our Love, encourage our Hope, and alarm our Fear, and by these to set the Wheels of our Obedience a going. For there is nothing in human Nature that is capable of being moved and affected by Reason, which hath not an answerable Reason in the Nature of God to move and affect it. And as in him there are all the Reasons that can affect us, so there is all the Force and Efficacy of those Reasons, every thing in him being perfect and infinite; in him there is an infinite Beauty to attract our Love, an infinite Good to inflame our Desire, an infinite Kindness to affect our Ingenuity, an infinite Justice armed with an infinite Power to awaken our Fear, an infinite Mercy to invite our Hope, and an infinite Truth to confirm and support it. So that 'tis beyond the Power of all human Imagination to frame or fancy an Object that is so every way fitted to affect human Nature, and influence all its Principles of Action, as God in himself is. Whilst therefore we apprehend him truly, and as he is in himself, the Consideration of him must needs be of wonderful Force to oblige us to serve and obey him; and there is not one of all those glorious Perfections in which his Nature is arrayed, but will suggest to us some powerful Persuasive to Piety and Virtue, and either by our Fear or our Hope, our Love or our Gratitude, incline our Hearts to keep his Commandments. So that if we are ignorant of his Perfections, or do entertain false Notions concerning them, we shall either want those Motives to Piety which they naturally suggest, or draw Arguments from them to encourage and justify us in our Rebellions against him. And thus you see, in all these Instances, how indispensably necessary right Notions of God are to engage us to serve and obey him.

S E C T. II.

Rules for the forming right Apprehensions of God.

Dionysius the Areopagite, and from him all the Schoolmen, assign three ways by which we are to frame our Apprehensions of the Nature of God, viz. Viam Causalitatis, viam Eminentiae, & viam Remotionis, i. e. the way of Causality, the way of Eminency, and the way of Remotion. The first consists in arguing from those Perfections which God hath caused and produced in his Creatures to the Perfections of his Nature. For whatsoever degrees of Perfection there are in the Creature, they must either be uncreated, which is a contradiction, or flow from the Creator as from the immense Ocean of all Perfection; but 'tis impossible they should flow from him, unless they were first in him. So that when we behold such and such Perfections in the Creature, we may from them most certainly infer that the same are all in God, who is the Cause and Fountain of them; and tho the Divine Nature abounds with innumerable Virtues and Perfections, yet 'tis impossible for us, by our own natural Light, to discover any other of them than those of which he himself hath imprinted some Specimens upon created Beings; these being the only Scales by which our Understanding can ascend to the reach and view of the divine Perfections. But because all created Perfections are not only short in their degrees, but also intermingled with defects in their very kind and nature; therefore in attributing them to God we ought carefully to abstract from them whatever is defective, whether it be in kind or degree. For God is the cause of Perfection only, but not of Defect; which, so far forth as it is natural to created Beings, hath no cause at all, but is merely a Negation or Non-entity. For every created thing was a Negation or Non-entity before ever it had a positive Being, and it had only so much of its primitive Negation taken away from it, as it had positive Being conferred on it; and therefore so far forth as it is, its being is to be attributed to that sovereign Cause that produced it; but so far forth as it is not, it's not being is to be attributed to that Original Non-entity out of which it was produced. For that which was once nothing, would still have been nothing, had it not been for the cause that gave being to it; and therefore that it is so far nothing still, i. e. limited and defective, is only to be attributed to its own primitive nothingness. As for instance, if I give a poor Man an hundred Pounds, that he is worth so much Money is wholly owing to me, but that he is not worth an hundred more is owing only to his own Poverty; and just so, that I have such and such Perfections of Being, is wholly owing to God who produced me out of nothing, but that I have such and such Defects of Being is only owing to that Non-entity out of which he produced me; and therefore since our Perfections are derived from God, but not our Defects, 'tis altogether as unreasonable to attribute the latter to him, as it is reasonable to attribute the former.

Now the Defects of created Perfections which we are to remove and abstract from God in our Conceptions of him, are of two Sorts: First of the thing: Secondly, of the mode of the thing. The defect of the thing is when the Thing itself is such as that it wholly excludes something much better and more perfect; thus matter, for instance, is defective in the thing, because it excludes spiritual and immaterial Substance, which is much more excellent than itself. The defect of the mode of the thing, is when the thing is so excellent in itself, as that it excluded nothing better, but yet is deficient in Degrees of Perfection. As for instance, Wisdom and Goodness, Reason and Understanding, are Things so excellent in themselves, as that they exclude nothing that is more excellent, but yet as residing in created Beings want a great many possible Degrees of Perfection. Now both these defects being natural are uncaused, and so cannot proceed ceed from the Author of Nature, and not proceeding from him, they cannot be supposed to be in him, and therefore in our Conceptions of him ought not to be attributed to him. In respect therefore of these twofold defects in created Perfections, it is necessary we should conceive of God in the Way of Remotion and Eminence, as well as of Causality; otherwise we shall injuriously attribute to him the Defects of his Creatures, of which he is not the Cause, as well as their Perfections of which he is. If therefore we would do God Right, in our Thoughts and Conceptions of him, we must in the first place remove from him all defect in the thing, i. e. all matter and material Perfections; because they are defective in their very kind and nature, as excluding such substance and perfections as are incomparably more excellent than themselves; and this is to conceive of him in the way of Remotion, which consists in removing all kind of matter and material affections from our thoughts and apprehensions of God. And then in the second place we must abstract from him all defect in the mode of the thing, i. e. all the defect of Degrees in those spiritual Perfections of the Creature which we attribute to him, and raise and exalt them in our own Minds to their utmost height and eminence; and this is to conceive of him in the way of Eminency; which consists in ascribing to God the short and limited Perfections of his Creatures abstracted from all defect and limitation. These three ways therefore are all indispensably necessary to lead us to a true discovery of the Nature of God; as will yet farther appear by the following Rules I shall lay down for the forming a right Notion and Apprehension of him.

First, If we would think aright of God, we must attribute all possible Perfection to him.

Secondly, In forming our Notions of his Perfections we must take our Rise from the Perfections we behold in his Creatures.

Thirdly, In ascribing to him the Perfections of his Creatures, we must abstract from them every thing that is defective and imperfect.

Fourthly, In arguing from the Perfections of the Creature to the Perfections of God, we must distinguish between the State and Relations of God and Creature.

Fifthly, Tho in arguing from the Perfections of the Creature to the Perfections of God we are not to subject him to the Rules of a Creature, yet we are always to suppose his Will and his Power to be in perfect Subjection to the Perfections of his Nature.

Sixthly, In conceiving of his Perfections, we must always suppose them to be exactly harmonious, and consistent with each other.

I. To the forming of a right Apprehension of God, it is necessary that we ascribe to him all possible Perfection. For he being the first and supreme Cause from whence all the Perfections of Being are derived, must necessarily include all Perfection in himself; and be all those Perfections which he hath communicated to others; for how can he give that which he hath not? It is true indeed, free Causes may give less to their Effects than they have in themselves, but it is impossible they should give more; tho they may withhold from their Effects any Perfection or degree of Perfection which they have, they cannot derive to them any which they have not. Whosoever therefore is a Perfection of Being, must necessarily be essential to that supreme Cause from whence all Being is derived; otherwise there would be more in his Effects than there is in himself, and consequently more than he could give or be the cause of, which is a contradiction.

And as all those Perfections that are in created Beings must necessarily exist in the Nature of God, so must all those too that are possible in themselves. For every Perfection that is possible in itself must be possible to him who is the Cause of all things; but no Perfection can be possible to him that is not actually in him; for no Cause can produce that Perfection in another which it hath not in itself, and therefore if there be any Perfection that is not in him, 'tis impossible it should ever be produced by him, and that which is impossible to God must be impossible in its own Nature, that which is not an Object of omnipotent Power is not an Object of any Power, and that which is not an Object of any Power, is in itself impossible. Since therefore every Perfection that is possible in itself must be possible to God, and since no Perfection that is not in him can be possible to him; it necessarily follows, that all the Perfections that are possible in themselves are actually existing in the Nature of God.

II. In forming our Notions of God's Perfections, we must take our Rise from those Perfections which we behold in his Creatures. For our understanding being too short-sighted to penetrate immediately into the Substance and Essence of things, hath no other way to know and apprehend them, but either by their causes or by their effects; but now God being the first and supreme Fountain of all Causes, cannot be known by his Cause, because he hath none, and therefore is knowable only by his Effects, that is, by the Works of his Creation that lie before us, and are within the prospect of our understandings; in the which all that is excellent and good is an illustrious Comment and Paraphrase upon God.

Now the Effects of God are all reducible to these four generals, Substance or Essence, Life, Sense and Reason; all which are in Man, who is the Epitome of the World, and a compleat Model of all the Works of God; and therefore not only all these, but all the proper Excellencies and Perfections of these, must be supposed to be in God, from whom they are derived.

The first Effect of God is Substance. Now the proper Perfections of Substance are Amplitude and Fulness of Being. By the Amplitude of Substance, I mean its greatness or largeness as to the diffusion or extent of it, in opposition to littleness, or which is the same Thing, to being defined to, or circumscribed within a small and inconsiderable space; by the Fulness of Substance, I mean its having more of Essence or Being, by which it is more removed from not being, in opposition to things that have but little being in them, that are of so fleeting and transitory a nature as that they are next to nothing. Wherefore in conceiving of God, we must ascribe to him these Perfections of Substance, even to their utmost possibility, that is, we must conceive him to be a Being of infinite Amplitude, that is neither defined nor circumscribed within any certain space, but coexists with, and penetrates and passes thro' all things; and by thus conceiving of him we attribute to him Immensity, which consists in being unconfined by any Bounds of Space in the out-spreading of himself to all Places that we can see or imagine, and infinitely beyond them. And then in conceiving of him, we must also ascribe to him infinite Fulness of Being, by which he is so infinitely removed from not being, as that he cannot but be; and by thus conceiving of him, we attribute to him necessary Existence, which consists in being out of all possibility of not being.

But then secondly, another of those Works of God from which we are to take our Rise in conceiving of his Perfections, is Life. For he is the Cause and Fountain of all that Life that is in the World, and therefore must not only have Life in himself, but the utmost Perfection of it also that is possible. Now the Perfections of Life are Activity and Duration; by Activity I mean a vigorous Power and Ability to act, in opposition to Weakness and Impotence, which must needs be a great Perfection of Life, which is the Spring and Principle of Action, by Duration I mean a long continuance of Life, in opposition to that which is short and momentary; for the more lasting the Life is, the more perfect it is, and the more there is of it. Wherefore in conceiving of God we must ascribe to him the utmost Perfection of Life that is possible, that is, we must conceive him to be infinitely Active and Powerful, and doth what he pleases in Heaven and on Earth, and can effect whatsoever is possible in itself, and not repugnant to the other Perfections of his Nature; and in thus conceiving of him, we attribute Omnipotence to him, which consists in an ability to do every thing that doth not imply imply a Contradiction, either to the Nature of the Things themselves, or to the Nature and Perfections of the Doer; and then in conceiving of him we must also ascribe to him an infinite Duration of Life, that is, a Life that is not bounded either by a Beginning or an End, but is from everlasting to everlasting, and coexists and runs parallel with all Duration past, and present, and to come; and by thus conceiving of him we attribute Eternity to him, which consists in a boundless Duration of Life without any term of Beginning or End.

But then thirdly, Another of those Effects of God from which we are to take our Rise in conceiving of the Perfections of God, is Sense; by which I do not understand carnal or material Sense only, which consists in perceiving the Strokes and Impressions of material Objects on our Sensories, but Sense in the general, whether it be of material or spiritual Beings. For, that spiritual Beings have as exquisite a Sense of spiritual Objects as corporal of corporeal Ones, there is no Doubt to be made; because otherwise we must suppose them insensible both of Pleasure and Pain. Now the Perfection of Sense is Quickness and Sagacity of Perception, whether it be of painful or of pleasant, grateful, or ungrateful Objects; and this is to be found not only in Beasts and Men, but also in separated Spirits, in Angels, and in God himself. For tho none of these have any corporeal Sense to feel and perceive the Impressions of corporeal Objects, yet that both Angels and separated Spirits have a spiritual Sense of spiritual Impressions, by which they are subjected to Pain and Pleasure, cannot be denied; and tho God by the infinite Perfection of his Nature is exempt from all Sense of Pain, yet it cannot be supposed that he who is the Fountain from whence all Sense is derived, should himself be insensible; and if he be not, we ought to suppose him as sensible of all that is truly pleasant and good, as it is possible to be; and where there is an infinite Good, as there is in the Nature of God, it is possible to be infinitely sensible of it; and in thus conceiving we attribute to him infinite Happiness. For what else is an infinite Sense of Good, but infinite Pleasure and Happiness; and this is the Happiness of God, that he is infinitely perfect in himself, and infinitely sensible of his own Perfections, and therein infinitely pleased and delighted.

Fourthly, and lastly, Another of those Works of God from whence we are to take our Rise in conceiving of his Perfections, is Reason. For all that Light of Reason which shineth in Human and Angelical Minds being rayed forth, and derived from him, he must be supposed not only to have Reason in himself, but to have it in its utmost possible Perfection. Now the Perfection of Reason consists in Knowledge and Wisdom in the Understanding, and Rectitude or Righteousness in the Will. By Knowledge I mean considering and understanding things absolutely as they are in their own Natures, in their Powers and Properties, Differences and Circumstances. By Wisdom I understand a thorow Consideration of things as they are related to one another under the Notion of Means and Ends, and of their Fitness or Unfitness to the Ends and Purposes they are designed for. Wherefore in conceiving of God we must ascribe to him all possible Knowledge and Wisdom, that is, a perfect Comprehension of all things that either are, or have been, or shall be, or can be; in short, a Knowledge infinitely extensive, as comprehending all knowable Objects, and infinitely intensive, as seeing every single Object in all its Relations, Dependencies, and Circumstances with a most perfect and infallible View; and in thus conceiving of him we attribute to him Omniscience and infinite Wisdom. By Rectitude or Righteousness in the Will, which is the other Perfection of Reason, I mean a Conformity of the Will, and consequently of the Affections and Actions, to all that right Reason dictates and prescribes; for the proper Office of Reason is to conduct the Will, and to give Bounds and Measures to our Principles of Action; and in following right Reason, and choosing and refusing by its eternal Prescriptions, consists the Rectitude of the Will, and in that all Moral Perfection. In conceiving of God therefore we must attribute to him all those moral Perfections, which consist in the entire Compliance of his Will with the Dictates of his infallible Reason, in choosing sing every thing which right Reason approves, and refusing every thing which it disallows, and this with the most perfect Freedom and Exactness, and in thus conceiving of him we attribute to him infinite Goodness, infinite Justice, and infinite Truth. For as for the first, viz. infinite Goodness, which consists in the invariable Inclination of his Will to do good to, and procure the Happiness of his Creatures, by which he is infinitely removed from Envy and Malice, right Reason dictates to him, that being infinitely happy in himself, the best and most becoming thing he can do, is to propagate his own Likeness and Resemblance by doing Good to, and procuring the Happiness of others; and that Envy and Malice, which are the Properties of poor and indigent Beings, are infinitely unbeseeming him who is a self-sufficient Nature; and accordingly his Will, which always follows his Reason, is infinitely propense to the one, and averse to the other. And as for the second, which is infinite Justice, which consists in dealing with his Creatures according to their several Deserts, by which he is infinitely removed from all Partiality and Injustice, right Reason dictates to him, that since there is an immutable Good and Evil in the Actions of free and reasonable Agents, it is fit that those who do Good should receive Good from him, who is the supreme Judge and Moderator, and those who do Evil, in Proportion to the Good and Evil of their Doings; and that to reward evil Actions, and to punish good ones, or to reward those that are less good beyond those that are more, or punish those that are more evil beneath those that are less, is to go cross to the Natures and Reasons of things; and by these Dictates of Reason, his Will is invariably regulated in all its Transactions with his Creatures. Lastly, as for infinite Truth, which consists in a perfect Agreement of his Declarations with his Intentions, especially in Matters of Promise; whereby he is infinitely removed from all Deceit and Falshood, right Reason dictates to him, that to speak Truth is the only natural End of speaking, that to promise is to give a Right, and to intend to perform strict Justice; that on the contrary Lying perverts the Use of Speech, and betrays a Baseness and Meanness of Spirit, that to deceive is to injure, and to falsify a Promise is to commit a Robbery; and accordingly his Will, which is ever guided by his Reason, embraces Truth, and rejects Falshood with infinite Abhorrence.

And thus from the various Perfections of God's Works which are before us, we may fairly argue to all the Perfections of God himself. For whatsoever Perfection he hath given, he must have, and whatsoever Perfection he hath, he must have so far as it is possible; for if it be possible it must be within his Power, and if it be within his Power, to be sure 'tis included in his Nature; otherwise he must choose to be less perfect when it is in his Power to be more. And by thus taking our Rise to God from the Perfections of the Creature, we discover him to be an immense self-existing Substance, that is omnipotent, eternal, infinitely knowing and wise, just and good, faithful and happy. But to render our Discovery yet more compleat.

III. It is necessary that, in ascribing to him the Perfections of the Creature, we abstract from them every thing that is defective and imperfect. For to be sure there is nothing can be defective or imperfect in the Cause and Author of all Perfection. So that whereas all other Beings have some Defect or other intermingled with their Perfections, and do either want some Kind of Perfection, or some Degree of those Kinds wherewith they are adorned, God hath all Kinds and all Degrees of all Kinds of Perfection; and so we must conceive of him, if we would do him right when we attribute to him the above-named Perfections. As for Instance, when we attribute to him the Perfections of Substance we must abstract from them the Defect of Corporeity or material Extension, which compared with Spirituality is a mighty Defect and Imperfection of Substance, both as to its Amplitude and Fulness of Essence. For no corporeal Substance can be at the same Time in the same Place where another corporeal Substance is; because it consists of such Parts as cannot penetrate each other: So that every Body must be limited in Presence, because it cannot be where another other Body is ; whereas a Spirit being penetrable itself, can penetrate or pass thro' all things, and consequently be present at the same Time, and in the same Place, where not only other Bodies are, but other Spirits too. So that by attributing Body or Matter to God, we must necessarily confine and limit the Amplitude of his Substance, which if it be bodily must necessarily be excluded from all those Places in which other bodily Substances are, and consequently have but a finite and limited Presence, which utterly destroys the infinite Amplitude or Omnipresence of his Substance.* And then bodily Substances being all compounded of divisible Parts, and consequently liable to be divided and corrupted, cannot have that Fulness of Being in them which Spirits have, which are simple and uncompounded Substances, and consequently void of all Principles of Corruption; so that by attributing Body or Matter to God, we substract from the infinite Fulness of his Being, and instead of ascribing to him necessary Existence, which puts him beyond all Possibility of not Being, degrade him into a divisible and corruptible Nature. Wherefore in attributing to God the Perfections of Substance, we must abstract from them all Matter and material Affections, and conceive of him as a most pure and simple Spirit.

Again, when we attribute to him the Perfections of Life, viz. Power or Activity and Duration, we must wholly abstract from them all those Imperfections, with which they are commix'd in the Creature. As for Instance, Activity in the Creature is attended with Labour and Pains; the not abstracting of which from the Activity of God made Epicurus suppose him to be a restive Being, that withdrew himself from Action, for Fear of disturbing his own Happiness by it; whereas Labour and Pains are the Imperfections of Activity, and so ought not to be admitted into our Conception of God's, which being infinite, there is nothing can be difficult or uneasy to him: For it is because of Imperfection that Labour and Trouble do attend any Beings in their Operations; could they do what they do perfectly, it would be no Labour at all to them. God therefore having an infinite Power to effect what he pleases, whatsoever he doth he doth it most perfectly, and consequently without any Toil or Labour; and since all things were derived from him, and are dependent upon him, they must all be perfectly subject to his Power; and where there is perfect Subjection there can be no Resistance, and where there is no Resistance there can be no Labour. And then as for Duration, which is the other Perfection of Life, in the Creature it is attended with Dependence. For there is no Life but depends upon God, to be shorten'd or prolonged according to his Pleasure; the Lives of all Beings are maintained and supplied by his all-enlivening Power and Influence, which if he withdraw from them but one Moment, they presently expire; so that the Duration of all created Life is dependent and precarious; and even those Beings that shall live for ever, have no other Tenure of Life but God's Will and Pleasure, who with the Breath of his Nostrils can blow them out when he pleases. But the Duration of God's Life is altogether independent; for he subsists of himself, from that infinite Fulness of Being that is in him, and hath done so from all Eternity past, when there was no other Cause but himself in Being, and therefore can do so to all Eternity to come without the Support or Assistance of any other Cause. So that he is not at all beholden for his Duration to the Good-will and Pleasure of any other Being, but derives it from an inexhaustible Spring of Life within himself, whence he also derives Life to all other Beings.

Again when we attribute to him the Perfection of Sense, viz. Quickness and Exquisiteness of Perception, we must wholly abstract from it all that Imperfection with which it is attended in the Creatures; for in them it is attended with sundry Affections which argue Imperfection in their Nature and Happiness; such as Fear, Sorrow, Repentance, Desperation, and the like; all which argue a Defect of Power or Wisdom, and proceed from a quick Sense of Evil, past, or present, or to come, which is inconsistent with perfect Happiness. When therefore we attribute to God this Perfection of Sense, we must abstract from it all those Affections which proceed from the Sense of Evil or Pain. For he is so infinitely perfect both in Nature and Happiness, that no Evil can approach him to vex or disturb him, or make any painful Impressions on his Nature; and being so, it is impossible that in propriety of Speech he should either fear, or grieve, or repent, or despair. All those Affections indeed are in Scripture attributed to him, but then it is in an improper and metaphorical Sense; not as if he did at any time feel these Passions within himself, but because he demeans himself towards us as if he did; not as if the Affections themselves had any Place in his Nature, but 'because the natural Effects of them appear in his Actions and Behaviour. And tho there is no doubt but he resents all those Evils which good Men suffer, and bad Men commit, yet it is not from any painful Impression that they make upon his Nature; for he neither feels the Miseries he pities and relieves, nor is vex'd at the Sins he detests and abhors, but all the Resentment he hath both of the Evil of our Sufferings and Sins, is perfectly calm to himself, and devoid of all Passion and Disturbance. 'Tis true, his Will being perfectly reasonable, must be differently affected towards different Objects, and contrarily affected towards contrary Objects, because they propose to it different and contrary Reasons; and therefore as it must be affected with Complacency towards good Objects, so it must be affected with Abhorrence towards bad; but this Abhorrence arises not either from any Sense of Hurt they do him, or Fear of Hurt they can do him, his Nature being wholly impassible, but from the Repugnancy they bear to his own infallible Reason, and his Abhorrence being wholly founded in his Reason, and not in any Sense or Feeling he hath of the Evils he detests, must upon this Account be stripp'd of all Grief and Vexation. Wherefore in attributing to God the Perfection of Sense, we must take care to abstract from it all those Affections which spring out of the Imperfection either of our Nature or our Happiness.

But then in the last Place, when we attribute to him the Perfections of Reason, (viz.) Knowledge and Rectitude of Will, we must also abstract from them all those Imperfections with which they are attended in the Creatures: as for Instance, Knowledge in the Creature is attended with reasoning and discourfing, that is, inferring one thing from another, arguing Consequents from Principles, and Effects from Causes, which is a great Imperfection of Knowledge, and a plain Indication that it is narrow and confined in itself, and not to be improved without Labour and Study. For that we are fain to infer one thing out of another, is an evident Token that we know but in part, because in this Way our Knowledge must be successive, and we must know one thing before we can know another; we must know the Principles before we can know the Consequents, and the Causes before the Effects; else how can we deduce the one from the other? And this deducing or inferring requires a great deal of Study and Labour. Wherefore in attributing Knowledge to God, we must abstract from it this Imperfection of Reasoning and Discourse; for his Knowledge being infinite, or unconfined by the utmost Extension and Duration of things, doth at one Intuition, or simple View, behold all things, past, and present, and to come; yea, whenever, wheresoever, or howsoever possible: And beholding as he doth all Consequents in their Principles, all Effects in their Causes, he doth not know one thing after another, but comprehends them all together in his infinite Mind, without any Succession or Improvement. So that from all Eternity past he knew as much as he doth now, and as much as he will do to all Eternity to come; for his Knowledge was always infinite, and what is infinite admits not either of more or less. And then for that other Perfection of Reason which consists in Rectitude of Will, in the Creature it is acquir'd, even as that Knowledge and Wisdom is by which it is measured and regulated. For Rectitude of Will consisting in choosing and refusing as right Reason directs, must needs be acquir'd in the Creature, because that Right Reason is so, by which it chooses and refuses; so that there is the same Defect and Imperfection in the Rectitude of our Wills as there is in our Reason and Knowledge, that is, it is not altogether, but acquired by degrees, and so it may be is infinitely successive and improveable. Wherefore in attributing to God Rectitude of Will, which, as I shew'd before, consists in Goodness, and Justice, and Truth, we are wholly to abstract from it this Imperfection of being acquired. For it is essential to his Will to follow the Dictates of his Understanding and Reason, and essential to his Understanding to dictate to his Will all the Parts and Degrees of Goodness, Justice and Truth; so that the Rectitude of his Will is infinite both as to the Extent and Degrees of it, there being no Good, no Degree of Good that an infinite Reason can propose, but what his Will doth most readily embrace, and perfectly comply with; so that the Rectitude of his Will is such as could not be acquired Part after Part, Degree after Degree, because it is essentially infinite; and from everlasting he was as good, and as just, and as faithful as now, and to everlasting he cannot be better, or juster, or faithfuller than he is, because what is essentially infinite admits no Improvement either of Parts or Degrees. And thus you see, how in all these Respects it is absolutely necessary to the Framing a right Apprehension of God, that in ascribing to him the Perfections of the Creature, we abstract all those Defects and Imperfections, with which they are intermixed.

IV. It is necessary that in arguing from the Perfections of, the Creature to the Perfections of God, we distinguish between the State and Relations of God and Creature. For there are many things which are Perfections in the Creature, considering their State, which would be Imperfections in God, considering his, and so on the contrary. As for Instance, to be dependent and humble, resigned and submissive; to be grateful and devout, are Perfections in the Creature, because there is a Being infinitely above them in all degrees of all Sorts of Perfection, in Knowledge and Wisdom, in Power and Goodness, in Justice and Truth; a Being to whom they owe themselves, and all the good things they possess, and upon whom they depend for all that they are, or enjoy, or hope for; and therefore it infinitely becomes them to abase themselves before him, to trust to, and depend on him, and resign themselves to him; to supplicate him for all they want, and thank him for all they enjoy; but for God to be humble, who is infinitely perfect above all, for God to depend, who is the Upholder of all, for him to submit, who is Lord over all, or to be devout and grateful, who is the supreme Fountain and Proprietor of all, would be to sneak and condescend far beneath the infinite Dignity of his Nature. As on the contrary, to love himself above all, to set up his Will above all other Wills, and to expect and require that they should do homage to it; to exact Adoration and Worship from all, and to appropriate it to himself from all other Beings, are Excellencies and Perfections in God, because he is infinitely amiable, above all other Beings, and therefore ought in Reason to love himself above all, infinitely exalted above all other Beings, and therefore ought in Reason to expect that all other Beings should be subject to him: In a word, because he, and he alone is God, and hath all divine Perfections appropriate to himself, and therefore ought in Reason to expect that all capable Beings should acknowledge his Divinity by suitable Actions, and restrain their Acknowledgment of it wholly to himself; but for a Creature that is infinitely less lovely than God, and infinitely inferior to him, to love itself, and set up its own Will above him, and invade his Throne and Divinity, and arrogate to itself his Honour and Worship, is not only unreasonable, but impious. In this Case therefore we must carefully distinguish between the States of God and Creature, and not attribute to him those Perfections of the Creature which are proper to it under the Notion of Creature, because in so doing we shall infinitely degrade him; but whatsoever is in itself a Perfection, precisely considered from all Respects to the State and Relations of a Creature, that we ought to ascribe to God in its utmost Extent and Degree.

And yet even here it will in many Cases be necessary for us to keep this Distinction of God and Creature in our Minds: For tho whatsoever is absolutely and in itself a Perfection in the Creature, is also a Perfection in God; yet considering the State of God, that may be an Exercise of absolute Perfection in him, which would be Imperfection in a Creature. As for Instance, Wisdom and Goodness and Justice are absolute Perfections in a Creature, and therefore ought to be attributed to God; but it doth not thence follow that that is no Exercise of these Perfections in God which is not so in Creatures. It is an Act of Wisdom in a Creature to pursue his Ends by the most probable Means, but it doth not therefore follow, that it is an Act of Folly in God to effect his Ends by contrary Means, because he being not only all-wise, but all-powerful, which no Creature is, can make the most contrary Means as subservient to his Ends as the most probable; and therefore sometimes to display the Greatness of his Power, and to excite our Attention and Reverence, he chooseth to operate by contrary Means, and when he doth so, he chooseth most wisely. Again, it is an Act of Goodness in us to succour the unfortunate, and rescue oppressed Innocence from undeserved Calamities: And not to do so, when we can with Ease and without any Prejudice to our selves, is a high Degree of Malice and Ill-Nature: But it doth not therefore follow, that it is an Act of Malice in God to permit Innocence to suffer, when, with Ease and without the least Damage to himself, he can relieve it, because being infinitely wise and powerful, which no Creature is, he can infallibly bring good out of evil, and advance us to Happiness by suffering; and therefore sometimes he permits the Innocent to suffer Evil, thereby to procure them some great and lasting Good; and when he doth so, it is an Act of great Goodness in him. Once more, it is Justice in the Creature not to kill or hurt the Innocent, not to deprive them of any good they are rightfully possess'd of; and to act contrary is great Injustice, because we have no Right to another Man's Life, or Limbs, or Goods, unless he forfeits them to us by some unjust Attempt to deprive us of ours: but it doth not therefore follow, that it would be unjust in God to do so, who being the supreme Proprietor of our Lives, and Limbs, and Goods, which no Creature is of any other Creature's, can justly resume them when he pleases, be he never so innocent, because they are his own: Whatever he gave us, he can take away from us, without any Injury, because he rather lent it than gave it us, reserving the absolute Propriety in himself; and his Right being supreme, absolute, and independent, and ours but subordinate and conditional, whatsoever we can justly do he can justly do, and abundantly more: So that tho we may argue this or that is just in the Creature, therefore it is just in God; yet we cannot argue e contra, this or that is just in God, therefore it is just in the Creature, because his Right in all things is infinitely paramount to our Right in any thing: And therefore tho he cannot without our own Fault and Forfeiture reduce us to a worse State than that of not being, wherein he found us, because to do so would be equivalent to the taking away from us more than he gave us, and consequently more than he hath a Right to, yet God's Right being infinitely more absolute and extensive than ours, he can justly take away from us infinitely more than we can justly take away from one another. And therefore to correct the Iniquities of wicked Nations and Parents, God sometimes lays his Hand upon good Kings and innocent Children, and either deprives them of their Comforts, and pursues them with constant Infelicities, or puts an untimely Period to their Lives; and when he doth so, he hath an absolute Right to do it, which no other Being can pretend to. Wherefore in attributing to God the Perfections of the Creature, we are carefully to distinguish between the State of God and Creatures, and neither to ascribe to him any of those Perfections which belong to a Creature, as a Creature, nor to bound the Exercise of those absolute Perfections we ascribe to him, by the Rules and Limitations of the Creature.

V. Altho in arguing from the Perfections of the Creature to the Perfections of God, we are not to subject him to the Rules of a Creature, yet we ought always to suppose his Will and Power to be intirely subject to the Moral Perfections of his own Nature. For God who is infinitely exalted above all other Beings can be subject to no other Law, but that of his own essential Wisdom and Justice and Goodness; and since every thing hath a Right to exercise its own Faculties, so far forth as it is just and lawful, God who is subject to no other Law but only that of his own Perfections, hath an essential Right to will and do whatever that Law allows and approves of. Now the Perfections of God, which give Law to his Will and Power, are those which, for distinction-sake, we call Moral, because their Office is the same in him with that of moral Virtues in the Creature, viz. to conduct and regulate his Will and Powers of Action; and these moral Perfections are his Wisdom and Goodness, Justice and Truth, which being all essential to him, are as much a Law to his Will and Power, as moral Laws are to ours: And to suppose his Will and Power not to be perfectly subject to them, is to suppose him a very defective and imperfect Being, a lawless Will and Power being the greatest Defect in Nature. Wherefore to secure our Minds against all injurious Apprehensions of God, this is a most necessary Rule, that we conceive him to be such a Being as can neither will nor act any thing but what his own essential Wisdom, and Goodness, and Justice do approve; that in all his Decrees, Purposes, Choices, and Actions, consults his moral Perfections, and perfectly regulates himself by them, and doth neither choose, nor refuse, elect nor reprobate, save nor damn, without their full Consent and Approbation. For to affirm that he is not obliged to regulate himself by Wisdom, and Justice, and Goodness, or that he can do otherwise, is to attribute to him a Power to will, and act foolishly, maliciously, and unjustly; which indeed is not so properly Power as Impotence; and to suppose that he can thus will and act, is to deny that he is infinitely wise, and just, and good, which utterly excludes all Possibility of being otherwise in any Respect or Degree. For to be infinitely wise and just, is to be infinitely removed from Folly and Injustice, which nothing can be, that hath the least Degree of Possibility to act unwisely or unjustly. Wherefore in conceiving of God, it is always to be supposed that his Will and Power are so immutably subject to the moral Perfections of his Nature, as that it is impossible for him to will or act against them. For all that Liberty of Will that is determinable to Good or Evil, just or unjust, is a Flaw or Imperfection in the reasonable Nature, because it speaks the Will to be defective in that which is the utmost Possibility of Goodness and Justice, i. e. in being immutably determined thereunto; and therefore to attribute such a Liberty to God, is to scandalize his Nature, and reproach it with Imperfection. For all that Power which is not conducted by Justice and Goodness, is only Power to do mischief, to tyrannize over other Beings, and to sport and play with their Miseries; which is so far from being a Perfection of Power that it proceeds from the most wretched Weakness and Impotence. So that by attributing such a Power to God, we foully asperse and blaspheme him, and instead of a God imagine a worse Devil, and more qualify'd to do Mischief than any that are now in Hell, who tho they are powerful enough to do Mischief, are none of them omnipotently mischievous; it is to imagine a God without a Deity, that is, without that essential Rectitude of Will, wherein all his moral Perfections do consist, which are the Crown and Glory of his Nature. For to be good and just are the brightest Rays of the Deity, the Rays that illustrate and glorify all his other Perfections, and without which infinite Knowledge and infinite Power would be nothing but infinite Craft and Mischief; so that to imagine that he hath any Will or Power that is not essentially subject to his moral Perfections, is to deface the very Beauty of his Nature, and represent him the most horrid thing in the World. Wherefore in conceiving of God we ought to fix this as the main and fundamental Rule of our Thoughts, that he hath no Will to choose, or Power to act, but what are in perfect Subjection to infinite Wisdom, and Justice, and Goodness; and this will secure our Minds from all those rigid and sour Apprehensions of him, which by reflecting on his moral Perfections do him the greatest Dishonour, and represent him the most disadvantageously to Mankind.

VI. And lastly, it is also necessary that in conceiving of the Perfections of God, we always suppose them exactly harmonious and consistent with each other. For all Perfections of Being, so far forth as they are Perfections, are consistent with each other, and like strait Lines drawn from the same Centre run on together without crossing or interfering. For there is nothing contrary to Perfection but Imperfection, and there is no Disagreement but what arises from Contrariety. When therefore we conceive of the Perfections of God, we must so conceive of them, as that there may be no manner of Inconsistency or Disagreement between them, otherwise we must admit into our Conceptions of them something or other that is defective or imperfect. As for Instance, in God there is infinite Wisdom and infinite Justice, infinite Goodness and infinite Mercy; wherefore if we would conceive aright of these his glorious Perfections, we must take care not to admit any Notion, of any one of them that renders it repugnant to any other, but so to conceive of them all together as that they may mutually accord and agree with each other. For while we apprehend his Goodness to be such as that it will not accord with his Wisdom, we must either suppose his Wisdom to be Craft, or his Goodness to be Folly; and whilst we apprehend his Mercy to be such as that it will not agree with his Justice we must either suppose his Justice to be Cruelty, or his Mercy to be blind Pity and Fondness; and it is certain, that that Goodness cannot be a Perfection which exceeds the Measures of Wisdom, nor that Mercy neither which transgresses the Bounds of Justice, and so on the contrary. For if either God's Goodness excludes his Wisdom, or his Wisdom his Goodness; if either his Mercy swallow up his Justice, or his Justice his Mercy, there is an apparent Repugnance and Contrariety between them, and where there is a Contrariety there must be Imperfection in one, or t'other, or both.

Wherefore, if we would apprehend them altogether, as they truly are in God, that is, under the Notion of Perfections, we must so conceive of them as that in all respects they may be perfectly consistent and harmonious; as that his Wisdom may not clash with his Goodness, nor his Goodness with his Wisdom; as that his Mercy may not jumble with his Justice, nor his Justice with his Mercy; that is, we must conceive him to be as wise as he can be with infinite Goodness, as good as he can be with infinite Wisdom, as just as he can be with infinite Mercy, and as merciful as he can be with infinite Justice, which is to be wise, and good, and just, and merciful, so far as it is a Perfection to be so. For to be wise beyond what is good, is Craft; to be good beyond what is wise, is Dotage; to be just beyond what is merciful, is Rigor; to be merciful beyond what is just, is Easiness; that is, they are all Imperfection, so far as they are beyond what is perfect. Wherefore we ought to be very careful not to represent these his moral Perfections as running a-tilt at one another, but to conceive of them all together as one entire Perfection, which, tho, like the Centre of a Circle, it hath many Lines drawn from it round about, and so is look'd upon sometimes as the Term of this Line, and sometimes of that, yet is but one common and undivided Term to them all; or, to speak more plainly, tho it exerts itself in different Ways and Actions, and operates diversly according to the Diversities of its Objects, and accordingly admits of divers Names, such as Wisdom, Goodness, Justice, and Mercy, yet is in itself one simple and indivisible Principle of Action, all whose Operations, how diverse soever, are such as perfectly accord with each other, whose Acts of Wisdom are all infinitely good, whose Acts of Goodness are all infinitely wise, whose Acts of Justice are infinitely merciful, and whose Acts of Mercy are infinitely just; so that in this, as well as in their Extension and Degrees they are all most perfect, fect, viz. that they always operate with mutual Consent, and in perfect Harmony. And while we thus conceive of the divine Perfections, our Minds will be mightily secured against all those false Apprehensions of God which lead to Superstition and Presumption; for we shall so apprehend his Wisdom and Justice as not to be superstitiously afraid, and so apprehend his Goodness and Mercy as not to be presumptuously secure; and as on the one hand his Justice will protect his Mercy from being abused by our wanton Security, so on the other hand his Goodness will protect his Wisdom from being misrepresented by our anxious Suspicion. For while we consider his Mercy thus tempered with his Justice, and his Wisdom with his Goodness, we can neither expect Impunity from the one if we continue wicked, nor yet suspect any ill Design against us in the other, if we return from our evil Ways, and persevere in well-doing.

S E C T. III.

Of the Causes of our Misapprehensions of G O D.

I Now proceed to the last thing I proposed, which was to assign and remove the Causes of Mens Misapprehensions of God; many of which are so secret and obscure, so peculiar to the Frame and Temper of Mens Brains, so interwoven with the infinite Varieties of human Constitutions, that it is very difficult, if not impossible, to trace them so as to make an exact Enumeration of them all; and therefore I shall only assign the most common and visible Causes by which the Generality of Men are misled in their Apprehensions of the divine Nature, which are reducible to these Six Heads:

First, Ignorance of what is the true Perfection of our own Nature.

Secondly, Framing our Notions of God according to the Model of our own Humour and Temper.

Thirdly, Obstinate Partiality to our own sinful Lusts and Affections.

Fourthly, Measuring God's Nature by particular Providences.

Fifthly, Taking up our Notions of God from obscure and particular Passages, and not from the plain and general Current of Scripture.

Sixthly, Indevotion.

I. One great Cause of our Misapprehensions of God, is Ignorance of what is the true Perfection of our own Natures. For, as I shewed before, in conceiving of the Perfections of God, we must take our Rise from those Perfections we behold in his Creatures; and particularly in our own Natures, wherein there is a Composition of all created Perfections: So that while we are ignorant of what is the true Perfection of our own Natures, our Thoughts can have no Rule or Aim whereby to judge of God's. That he hath all those Perfections in himself which he hath derived to us, is the Fundamental Maxim upon which we are to erect our Notions of him; and therefore unless we know what those Perfections are which he hath derived to us, and wherein they consist, our Mind hath no Footing or Foundation whereon to raise any certain Idea of him. For since we have no other Way to conceive of his Perfections but by our own, how is it possible that while we are ignorant of our own, we should ever conceive aright of his? This therefore is one great Reason why Men do so grossly misconceive of God, because they have no true Notion of their own Perfection, by which they are to form their Conceptions of his.

For whereas the true Perfection of human Nature consists in Moral Goodness, or an Universal Compliance of its Will, Affections and Actions, with those everlasting Laws of Righteousness which right Reason prescribes, how many are there there that look upon this as a very mean and carnal Accomplishment, and place all their Perfection in things of a quite different Nature, viz. in the Ebbs and Flows of their sensitive Passions, and the extraordinary Fermentations of their Blood and Spirits? that is to say, in unaccountable Dejections and Exaltations of Mind, in vehement Impressions of Fancy, and mechanical Movements of Affection, in Raptures and Extasies, and Hypochondriacal Incomes and Manifestations, that have nothing of substantial Virtue or Piety in them, nor commonly any other Effect but to cause Men to renounce that Righteousness which they never had, and rely upon that which they have no Title to, and to soothe and tickle their Fancies, and blow them up into glorious Opinions of themselves, and triumphant Assurances of their being the Darlings and Favourites of God: whilst poor moral Men, that make Conscience of regulating their Affections and Actions by the eternal Laws of Righteousness, are look'd upon by them with a scornful Compassion, and placed in the lowermost Form of Sinners, at the greatest Distance from the Kingdom of God. Now when Men take such false Measures of their own Perfection, how is it possible they should conceive aright of the Perfections of God, which they have no other Way to conceive of but by arguing from their own? Wherefore, in order to the forming our Ideas of God's Perfections, it is necessary we should first fix the true Notion of our own; which is no hard Matter for us to do. For our Nature, being reasonable, to be sure its Perfection must consist in willing, affecting, and acting reasonably, or which is the same thing, in governing itself in all its Relations and Circumstances, by those immutable Laws of Goodness which right Reason prescribes, and which are exemplified to us in the Holy Scripture; and when we have fixt in our Minds this Notion of our own Perfection, it will naturally conduct our Thoughts to God's, and let us see that his Perfection consists not in a lawless and boundless Will, that decrees without Forethought, resolves without Reason, and *will*s because it will, and then executes its own blind and unaccountable Purposes by dint of irresistible Power, without any regard to Right or Wrong: For, if we rightly understand our own Perfection, we cannot but discern, that such a Will as this is one of the most monstrous Deformities in Nature, because it is the most diametrically opposite to the true Idea of our own Perfection, which while we attentively fix our Eyes on, we cannot but infer from it, that the true Perfection of God consists in the unvariable Determination of his Will by the all-comprehending Reason of his Mind, or in choosing and refusing, decreeing and executing upon such Reasons as best becomes a God to will and act on, i. e. upon such as are infinitely wise, and good, and just, and merciful. For, if to will and act upon such Reasons as these be the Perfection of our Nature, we cannot but conclude that it is the Perfection of God's too; but if we are ignorant of our own Perfection, we must necessarily think of God at rovers, without any certain Aim or Rule to square and direct our Apprehensions.

II. Another Cause of our Misapprehension of God is, our framing our Notions of him according to the Model of our own particular Humour and Temper. For Self-love being the most vehement Affection of human Nature, and that upon which all its other Affections are founded, there is no one Vice to which we are more universally obnoxious than that of excessive Fondness and Partiality to our selves, which makes us too often dote upon the Deformities, and even idolize the Vices of our own Temper. So that whether our Nature be stern, foul and imperious, or fond, easy and indulgent, we are apt to admire it as a great Perfection merely because it is ours, without measuring it by those eternal Reasons which are the Rules of Good and Evil, Perfection and Imperfection, and then, whatever we look upon as a Perfection in our selves, we naturally attribute to God, who is the Cause and Fountain of all Perfection. And hence it comes to pass, that Mens Minds have been always tinctur'd with such false and repugnant Opinions of God, because they frame their Judgments of him not so much by their Reason as by their Temper and Humour; and so their different Humours being not only unreasonable in themselves, but repugnant and contrary to one another, produce in them not only false and unreasonable, but contrary and repugnant Opinions of God. Thus for Instance, the Epicureans, who were a soft and voluptuous Sect, entirely addicted to Ease and Pleasure, fancied God to be such an one as themselves, a Being that was wholly sequestered from Action, and confined to an extramundane Paradise, where he lived in perfect Ease, and was entertained with infinite Luxuries, without ever concerning his Thoughts with any thing abroad; for this they thought was the Top of all Perfection, and therefore thus they would have chosen to live had they been Gods themselves. Thus the Stoicks who were a sort of very morose and inflexible People, copied their Notions of God from their own Complexion, supposing him to be an inflexible Being, that was utterly incapable of being moved and affected by the Reasons of things, but was wholly governed by a stern and inexorable Fate. And accordingly, the Scythians and Thracians, the Gauls and Carthaginians, who were a People of a bloody and barbarous Nature, pictured their Gods from their own Temper, imagining them to be of a blood-thirsty Nature, that delighted to feed their hungry Nostrils with the nidorous Reeks and Steams of humane Gore. Whereas, on the contrary, the Platonists, who were generally of a very soft and amorous Nature, took, their Measure of God thereby, and so framed an Idea of him that was as soft and amorous as their own Complexion, composed altogether of Loves and Smiles and Endearments, without the least Intermixture of Vengeance and Severity, how just soever in itself, or necessary to the Well-government of the World. Thus as the Æthiopians pictured their Gods black because they were black themselves, so generally Men have been always prone to represent God in the Colour of their own Complexions; which is the Cause that they many times represent him so utterly unlike to himself, because out of an unreasonable Partiality to themselves, they first mistake the Deformities of their own Natures for Perfections, and then deify them into divine Attributes. Thou thoughtest, saith God, that I was altogether such an one as thy self, Psal. 50. 21. that is, Thou didst frame thy Conceptions of me according to the Pattern of thy own ill Nature, and so thoughtest basely and unworthily of me. And hence, I doubt not, spring most of those Misapprehensions of God which have been received among Christians. For how is it possible for any Man that is not of a fierce and cruel Nature himself, to believe it consistent with the Nature of God, to snatch poor Infants from their Mother's Womb, that never actually offended him, and hurl them into the Flames of Hell? And considering the stern and inflexible Temper of the famous Author of the Horrible Decree, tho otherwise a rare and admirable Person, there is too much reason to suspect that he transcribed his own Nature into his Doctrine, and modelled his Divinity by his Temper. And so on the contrary, Who but a Man of excessive Fondness and Partiality, that loves beyond all Reason, and invincibly doats upon the Deformities of his own Darlings, could ever imagine it consistent with the Wisdom and Holiness of God to choose his Favourites without Reason, and when he hath chosen them, not only to overlook all their Faults, but to hide them from his own Eyes with the Mantle of another's Righteousness; that so, how ill soever they behave themselves he may never see Cause to be displeased with them? from these and other Instances it is evident, that one great Cause of our Misapprehensions of God is, our measuring his Nature by our own. For first, our Partiality to our selves makes us magnify our own Faults into Perfections, and then whatsoever we reckon a Perfection in ourselves, we naturally attribute to God, and so many times it comes to pass, that our Notions of God are nothing but the Images of our selves, which, Narcissus like, we fall in Love with for no other Reason, but because they reflect our sweet Likeness. As therefore we would not wrong God in our own Thoughts, we must take care not to attribute to Him any thing of our own, but what is a Perfection in the Judgment of the most impartial Reason; and because our Self-love is apt to bribe our own Reason into a favourable Opinion of whatever is our own, we ought to admit nothing of our own into our Notion of God, but what is voted a Perfection by the common Reason of Man-kind.

.of

III. Another Cause of our Misapprehensions of God is, our obstinate Partiality to our own sinful Lusts and Affections. For while Men are vehemently addicted to any sinful Courses, the true Notion of God must needs sit very uneasily on their Minds, because it will be always quarrelling with them, suggesting Arguments against them, and alarming them with dreadful Thoughts and dire Abodings of a Vengeance to come. For there is no true Conception of God's Nature but what is pregnant with some powerful Argument against Disobedience to his Will: So that while we obstinately persist in Disobedience to him, our Reason cannot truly conceive of him without waging War with our Lusts. And while a Man is thus at Variance with himself, and one End of his Soul is at War with the other, so that he cannot gratify his Affection without affronting his Reason, nor comply with his Reason without doing violence to his Affection, he can never be at ease within, till either he hath forced his Affection to submit to his Reason, or his Reason to submit to his Affection; but while a Man's Reason hath the true Notion of God and his Perfections before it, 'twill be impossible for him to reconcile it to his sinful Affections, against which, whenever he coolly reflects, it must necessarily dictate bitter Invectives, and denounce horrible Sentences. So that if he be obstinately resolved to side with his sinful Affections, he must either be content patiently to endure the Clamour and Fury of his own Reason, which is one of the most uneasy Penances in the World, or endeavour to corrupt and sophisticate his Notions of God with such Opinions as countenance his Lusts. And this, considering the mighty Influence which Mens Affections have on their Reason, is no hard Matter to do; for the least Shew of Probability, back'd with a strong Affection for an Opinion, is of greater Force with corrupt Minds, than the clearest Demonstration against it. So that if the Opinion be but serviceable to the Interest of a Man's Lust, that will engage his Affection on its Side, and then the Opinion having once retained those powerful Orators in its Cause, it is secure of a very favourable Trial at the Tribunal of Reason, where in all Probability only one Side of the Question will be weighed, and Judgment will be given upon hearing the Arguments for it, without admitting any Evidence against it.

Thus when Men are hunted and pursued thro' their wicked Courses by the true Notions of God, it is expedient for them, if they resolve to go on, to take Sanctuary in false Ones, where their Conscience and Will, their Reason and Affections may dwell quietly together, and they may be as wicked as they please without any Disturbance. And Abundance of such false Notions there are prepared to their Hands, which Men's wicked Minds have invented in the Defence of their Lusts: For thus some, to ease their guilty Conscience, have persuaded themselves, that God is so wholly taken up with his own Happiness, as that he is not at Leisure to concern himself about human Actions, and under this Persuasion they sin on with full Security that he will never punish them. Others, on the contrary, to reconcile their Lusts, persuade themselves that God is wonderfully concerned about small Things, about trifling Opinions, and indifferent Actions, and the Rites, and Modes, and Appendages of his Worship, and under this Persuasion they hope to atone him for all the Immoralities of their Lives, by the Forms and Outsides of Religion, by uncommanded Severities and affected Singularities, by contending for Opinions and stickling for Parties, and being pragmatically zealous about the Borders and Fringes of Religion. Others there are that to quiet their anxious Minds, persuade themselves that God, in Christ at least, is all Mercy and Goodness, without the least alloy of righteous Severity, or vindictive Justice; and being thus persuaded, they sin on securely, and under the Wing of his Mercy affront his Authority, without any disturbance. Others again, that to stifle the Sense of their own Guilt, persuade themselves that God hath irrevocably determined the everlasting Fate of Men without any respect to their doings; and that those whom he will save, he will save irresistibly without any Concurrence of theirs, whereas those whom he will not save, he hath utterly abandoned to a dire necessity of perishing for ever; from whence they conclude, that if they are of the Number of those that shall be saved, it is needless for them to endeavour after it, and if in the List of those that shall perish, it is in vain for them to endeavour to prevent it; and that therefore their wisest Course is to sin on, and expect the Event. All which are only the Artifices of Wickedness, to reconcile Mens Consciences to their Lusts, and compromise the Quarrel between God and their wicked Lives, that so they may sin on for the future, without Check or Remorse.

Wherefore if we would form a right Notion of God in our Minds, and preserve it pure and unsophisticated, we must above all things beware not to let our Lusts intermingle with our Reasonings about him, or to bribe us to assent to any Opinion concerning him. For this is an eternal Maxim, That there is nothing can be true of the most holy God, that gives the least countenance or protection to Sin; and therefore when ever it makes for the Interest of our Lusts to believe any Opinion of him, for that Reason we ought to reject it; for nothing can be true of God that is not perfectly consistent with his infinite Holiness, and nothing can be consistent with his infinite Holiness that is any way serviceable to the interest of Sin; so that while we suffer our sinful Interests to dictate to us our Opinions of God, we make Falshood our Oracle, and the very Foundation of our Faith is a Lye.

IV. Another great Cause of our Misapprehensions of God, is our measuring his Nature by particular Providences. The Tree is known by its Fruit, is the common Rule by which Men judge of God as well as of one another, and it is most certain that every free Agent is as it doth, that the ordinary Course of its Actions is an infallible Index of the inward Dispositions and Inclinations of its Mind; but, as for the Actions of God, they are not to be judged of singly and apart from one another, because they have all one general Drift and Tendency, and so are mutually dependent upon one another, and closely linked together, even from the first to the second, and so on to the last, in one continued Chain and Series; so that of all those innumerable Actions whereof his general Providence consists, there is no one loose or independent Link, but every one is connected unto all the rest, and all the rest to every one thro'out that mighty Chain. Wherefore unless we had an entire Prospect of the whole Series of God's Actions, and of the mutual Respects and Relations which they bear to one another, it is impossible for us, without a Divine Revelation, to make any certain Judgment of Particulars. For tho' this or that particular Action or Providence of God, considered separately from all the rest, may have a very pernicious and malevolent Aspect, yet it is to be considered, that no Action of God is what it would be if it were apart by itself, but what it is in Conjunction with all the rest of his Actions, and that that which by itself might prove very pernicious, may by being contempered with others of a different Nature become exceeding beneficial to the World. For so in the Heavens there are sundry Stars of a very malignant Aspect apart by themselves, which yet in Conjunction with other Stars of a different Temper do many times derive a most benign Influence upon us. And if Men can give no certain Judgment of any single Act or Scene of God's Providence, without comprehending at once the whole Drama, how is it possible they should take true Measures of his Nature by any particular Event that befalls them? For, for all they know, those very Events which singly considered are most noxious to the World, may be most beneficial, as they are intermingled and contempered with other Providences; so that while they measure God by single Events, they will many times deduce sour and rigid Opinions of him, from those very Providences which are the highest Instances of his Benignity and Goodness. Thus, for Instance, should Joseph have framed his Judgment of God's Nature by his being thrown into the Pit, sold into Egypt, and there cast into Prison for his Integrity and Innocence, what could he have thought of him, but that he was a very envious and malicious Being, that took Delight in afflicting Innocence, and sported himself with the Miseries of his Creatures? *And yet considering what followed upon these sad Providences, and how these were all of them but so many Steps to his Advancement, it is plain, that had he thought thus, he had thought very injuriously; those very Providences from which he must have inferred God's Malice to him, being, in Conjunction with what followed, most illustrious Instances of his Goodness towards him.

And yet how commonly do we see Men pass Judgment on God's Nature from such particular Providences? They see a World of deplorable Accidents, such as Famines, Butcheries, Plagues, and Devastations, in which themselves are many times involved, from whence they are ready to conclude, that certainly God would never inflict or suffer these Things, if he were not of a very forward, cruel, and implacable Nature; whereas did they but see these sad Accidents as they lie interwoven with all the rest of his Providences, they would doubtless see infinite Reason to conclude the quite contrary. Sometimes again they behold Wickedness prosper in this World, and Virtue and Innocence depressed and trampled on, from whence they are ready to conclude either that that which we call Vice and Virtue are things indifferent to God, or that he is unjust in the Distribution of Rewards and Punishments; whereas had they an entire Comprehension of the whole Train and Series of his Providence, they would soon be convinced that even in these cross Distributions he doth most equally and most effectually punish the Wicked, and reward the Good, by rendering the one's Prosperity his Bane, and the other's Adversity his Restorative. Sometimes again, they are denied those Blessings and Deliverances which they have a long while sought with most importunate Cries and Supplications, from whence they are ready to conclude, that God is of a stern and inexorable Nature, not to be moved or prevailed with by Prayers and Intreaties; whereas, could they but see thro' the whole Drift of his Providence, they would easily be satisfied that the Goods they pray for, are many times pregnant with Evils, and the Evils they deprecate with Goods, which are much greater than themselves, and that that is the Reason why God was deaf to their Intreaties, because he could not grant them what they asked without doing them some great Unkindness; and that therefore these Denials are so far from arguing him stern and inexorable, that on the contrary, they are signal Instances of his tender Mercy and Compassion towards us. If therefore we would conceive aright of God, we must not take our Measures of his Nature by particular Providences, which many times import quite contrary to what they seem and appear, but having formed our Notions of his Nature out of those Perfections we behold in his Creatures, by them we are to measure all his particular Providences, which tho they are sometimes very dark and obscure, and seemingly repugnant to our common Notions of him, yet because we see not the Ends and Reasons of them, we ought to conclude them good, because they proceed from a good God.

V. Another main Cause of our Misapprehensions of God, is the taking up our Notions of him from dark, and obscure, and single Passages, and not from the plain and general Current of Scripture. There is no doubt, but that that whatsoever God hath revealed of himself in Scripture, is true, because Truth and Veracity, being a great Perfection in itself, must needs be included in his Nature, which is the Centre of all Perfection; but yet, since there are some things in Scripture hard to be understood in themselves, and other Things difficult to us, who are not thorowly acquainted with the Customs and Controversies they refer to, or with the Phrase and Language of the Age they were written in, it is impossible for us many Times to comprehend its Meaning by the mere Clink and Sound of its Words, without expounding its obscure Passages by its plain ones, and its particular Propositions by its general Current; and to found any Doctrine or Opinion upon obscure and particular Phrases, that seemingly contradicts the plain and general Drift, and then to expound the plain into the seeming Sense of the obscure, and the general Current into the seeming Sense of the particular Phrase, is a most egregious Prevarication on the Holy Scripture. And yet this unreasonable Practice hath occasioned many false Apprehensions of God in Mens Minds. For there is nothing more evident, than that all along thro' the general Current of Scripture, God is represented to us as a most benevolent Being, that knows no Bounds of Good-will, but stretches out his Arms unto all his Creation, and receives his whole Offspring, excepting only those Prodigals that run away from him, with free and impartial Embraces; as one that would have all Men to be saved, and to come to the Knowledge of the Truth, and readily contributes to them all those Aids and Assistances that are necessary to the effecting of these blessed Ends; that reprobates none from his Kindness and Favour but only such as despise and reject it, and never abandons any to Wretchedness and Misery till they have first baffled and defeated all his Arts of saving them. Such is the Representation of God which the plain and general Scope of Scripture gives us; so that had Men kept themselves to this Rule of expounding obscure Texts of Scripture by plain ones, and particular Phrases by the general Scope, when they seemingly clash one with another, they had done Right to God, and secured their own Minds against sundry very wrongful Apprehensions of him. For that God hath destined the greatest Part of Mankind to endless Calamity, without any Respect to their Doings; that he hath two Wills, viz. a secret and a revealed one; that his revealed Will is, that he would have all Men to be saved, and his secret one, that he would have the greatest Part of them perish; that he hath imposed a Law upon Men which without his irresistible Grace they cannot obey, and notwithstanding he hath decreed to with-hold this Grace from the greatest Part of them, is resolved to persecute all that do not obey it with everlasting Flames of Vengeance: These, I say, are all of them such Opinions as reflect very dishonourably upon God, and have no other Foundation, but a few particular Phrases, and obscure Passages in Scripture, not only Abundance of plain Texts, but the general Drift and Scope of it being of a quite contrary Sense. So what had but this necessary Rule been observed, of interpreting dark Passages by plain, and particular ones by the general Scope, such dishonourable Opinions of God could never have found Shelter under Scripture Authority. For I would fain know, whether those Texts which declare God to be an universal Lover of the Souls of men, be not far more numerous and plain, than those which seemingly restrain his Affection to a small select Number, and reprobate all the rest of Mankind? and if it be so, as I think no modest Man can deny, how can this Doctrine be deduced from Scripture, without forcing the far greater Number of Texts to subscribe to the smaller, and the *plain*er to the obscurer; which is contrary to the most necessary Rules of Interpretation, and which, if pursued, will open a wide Door to the grossest and most fulsome Errors in Religion. Wherefore, to secure our Minds from false Apprehensions of God, it is necessary that in consulting the Scripture concerning him, we should follow the plain and general Drift of it, and not entertain any Opinion of him upon the Credit of a few, or of obscure Texts, which more or plainer ones seemingly contradict. For it is certain, that that Opinion is either false, or of little Moment that hath but one or two Texts to countenance it, and that very dubious, which hath none but obscure Texts to rely on; but when there are more and much plainer against it than for it, it must be false, or there is no relying upon Scripture, the Sense whereof, as to all particular Opinions, must be supposed to be that which the most and plainest Texts do countenance. So that he who embraces any Opinion that hath more and plainer Texts against it than for it, embraces it for its own sake, and nor for the Scriptures.

VI. And lastly, Another Cause of our Misapprehensions of God is, the great Dissimilitude and Contrariety of our Natures to his. For when Men have nothing of God in them, nothing of those amiable Graces which are the Glory and Lustre of his Nature, it is impossible they should have any Experience of him, any inward Taste or Relish of his Perfections; so that they can only know him by the bearing of the Ear, by Books, and dry Discourse and Reasoning, which compared with experimental Knowledge, is very uncertain and defective. For between the notional and the experimental Knowledge of God, there is the same Difference as between the Knowledge of a Geographer and a Traveller: The one hath only a faint and rude Figure of foreign Countries in his Head, copied from the Globe or Geographical Descriptions; whereas the other having travelled thro' them, and beheld their Situations, and Cities, and Rivers, and conversed with their People, and tasted their Fruits, retains a clear and lively Idea of them, of the Exactness whereof he hath as firm a Certainty as of the Truth of his own Senses. Thus he who knows God only by Books and Discourse, can have but a faint and imperfect Idea of him; he may believe him to be infinite in all Kinds and Degrees of Perfection, and Goodness, and Mercy, and Justice, and Truth, and be able to demonstrate it upon dry Principles of Reason; but having no Experience of these Perfections in himself, no Sense or Relish of their Beauty and Excellency, his Apprehensions of them are but slight and obscure, like a deaf Man's Notions of Sounds, or a blind Man's of Colours, which for want of the Evidence of Sense cannot be so clear, and certain, and distinct, as theirs are who see and hear. Whereas he who partakes of the Perfections of God, and is in any Degree pure as he is pure, and holy as he is holy, hath, as it were, travelled into his very Nature, and seen all his Perfections by the Light of an infallible Experience; he knows what God is, not so much by Reasoning and Discourse, as by a quick and lively Sense of the Divine Perfections, which he hath copied and transcribed into his own Temper, and which, like the Beams of the Sun, light up his Thoughts to that Fountain of Light from whence they were derived. And he who hath God's Picture in his own Breast, and can see his Perfections in the Graces and Virtues of his own Mind, knows him by his Sense as well as by his Reason; he sees and feels God in the God-like Temper of his own Soul, the Graces whereof are so many living Images of God, and sensible Comments on his Nature, which render the Man's Notions of him not only as clear and distinct, but also as certain and indubitable as any Demonstration in Geometry. For there is no Evidence will give us so full a Certainty of Things as that of our own Senses, it was by sensible Evidence that our Saviour demonstrated himself to be the Messias, and confuted the Infidelity of his Apostle St. Thomas; and it is certain that our bodily Senses are not more infallible than is the purified Sense of our Minds. When therefore we are transformed into the Likeness of God, and made Partakers of his Nature, we shall have a vital Sense and Feeling of his Perfections within us, by which the true Notions of him will be more confirmed and ascertained to us, than by all the Reasons and Demonstrations in the World.

For

For now we shall behold the Beauties of God's Nature in the God-like Dispositions of our own ; and beholding his Face in the Glass of our Natures, whenever we reflect on it, his Perfections will be as intimate and familiar to us as the Graces of our own Minds ; which will not only awaken our Thoughts into frequent Meditations of him, but also heighten and improve our Meditations into the most glorious Ideas of him. For when all is done, there is no Man can think so well of God, as he who hath a God-like Nature, because the resemblance he bears to him, will not only frequently raise up his Thoughts to God, but also shape them into a Conformity with his Nature ; whereas whilst we are unlike to God, we are not only devoid of all that evidence of his Perfections, which the purified sense of our Nature would give us, and consequently our Notions of him, for want of that Evidence, will be only superficial and uncertain ; but thro' our partiality to our own ungodlike Dispositions, we shall be apt to entertain such Notions of him as are as unlike him as our selves : For either out of Fondness to our selves, we shall look upon our ill Dispositions as Perfections, and so attribute them to God ; or out of fondness to those ill Dispositions, we shall be tempted to admit such Opinions of God as will license and indulge them.

Wherefore, if we would secure our Minds against all false Apprehensions of God, we must, above all Things, endeavour to purify our Hearts from those evil Dispositions which render us unlike him ; from Sensuality and Injustice, from Pride and Discontent, from Envy, Hatred, and all Uncharitableness, which are the great Corrupters of our Minds, the bosom Hereticks that *seduc*e and pervert us ; and, as much as in us lies, to conform our selves to the nature of God, by practising the contrary Virtues ; and when once by imitating the Perfections of his nature we have transcribed them into our own, we shall see and feel them in our selves, and our Sense of him will conduct our Reason, our Experience of him will correct our Knowledge, and our Vision of him consummate our Faith ; and we shall be more enlightened in our Knowledge of him, by beholding his Face in the sanctity of our own Minds, than by a thousand Volumes of curious Speculations.

And now, having seen what the true Causes of all our Misapprehensions of God are, let us from hence-forward beware of them ; and, so far as in us lies, labour to avoid them ; and, considering of what vast advantage to our Religion right and true Notions of God are, let us diligently apply ourselves to the above-named Rules for the regulating our Apprehensions concerning him ; that so having thorowly purged our Thoughts of all erroneous Opinions, we may see God truly as he is, arrayed in all the genuine Perfections of his Nature ; and then we shall find our Lives and Affections under the Influence of the most powerful Reasons in the World. For every thing of God is full of persuasion, all his Perfections have a constraining Rhetorick in them, that by a kind of Moral violence conquers all that attend to it, and seizes and captivates their Wills in despite of all the Reluctances of their Natures. So that when once our Minds are thorowly instructed with the true Notions of God, we shall not need to seek abroad for Motives and Arguments, for we shall have a Fountain of Divine Oratory within our own Bosoms, from whence our Wills and Affections will be continually watered with the most fruitful Inducements to Piety and Virtue ; inasmuch, that which way soever we turn our selves, we shall see our selves surrounded with such invincible Reasons to trust in God, and to fear him, to admire and love him, to obey and worship him, as will animate our Faculties, wing and inspire our drooping Endeavours, and carry us on with unspeakable Chearfulness and Alacrity thro' all the weary Stages of Religion ; and we shall no longer look upon Religion as the burden and oppression of our Nature, but readily embrace it as our Ornament and Crown, our Glory and Happiness ; as being fully convinced, that in serving of God, we serve not only the greatest, but the best Master in the World.

C H A P. VII.

Of the Necessity of acknowledging Jesus Christ to be the One and Only Mediator between God and Man, in order to our leading a Truly Christian Life.

HITHERTO we have treated of the common Principles of Religion in General, but as for this last, it is the great Principle of Christian Religion, strictly so called, as it is distinguish'd from the Religion of Nature, and, as such, is properly the Religion of the Mediator, as containing only the Doctrines which concern the Mediator, and the Duties which result from those Doctrines, and owe their Obligations to them; both which being taken away, all the remaining Religion is purely Natural and Moral: So that this Principle we are now treating of, contains in it all that Religion which is strictly Christian; without believing of which, and practising upon it, we cannot be truly said to lead a Christian Life, how well soever we may live. For there is no doubt, but upon the Motives and Principles of natural Religion, a Man to whom Christianity was never sufficiently proposed, may upon due Consideration, and a hearty Endeavour, reclaim himself to a very pious and virtuous Life, as it is apparent many of the Heathen Philosophers did; but no Man can be pious or virtuous in the Christian Sense, who is not so upon the Christian Obligations: For the Principles from and by which we act, are the very Life and Soul of our Religion; and therefore as it is the Rational Soul that specifies the Man a Rational Animal, so it is our Christian Principles that specify our Religion Christian Religion. Wherefore, tho' the Piety and Virtue of an Heathen may be materially the same with that of a Christian; yet it is impossible it should be formally Christian, unless it be animated and acted with the belief of Christianity. So that if we leave out this, and practise only upon the above-named Principles, we are at best but wise and honest Heathens, and there is nothing in all our Religion but the simple Dictates of mere natural Reason. 'Tis true, to live according to mere Natural Reason is all that God expects from those to whom Christianity hath never been proposed; for how can he expect that they should live by Principles which they either never heard of, or have not sufficient reason to believe? But where Christianity hath been made known, and sufficiently proposed, we cannot be good Men, unless we believe it; and if we believe it, we cannot be good Christians unless we practise upon it. And since Christianity hath improved the Duties of Natural Religion upon new Principles, and enforced them with new Obligations, to render our Piety and Virtue strictly and properly Christian, it is necessary we should believe these new Principles, and act upon these new Obligations; otherwise we are at best but mere Natural Men, in the true sense of the Apostle: i. e. Men who are merely conducted by the light of Natural Reason, and have not received the Things of the Spirit of God, that is, the new Principles and Obligations which Christianity superadds to Natural Religion, 1 Cor. ii. 14.

In handling therefore of this great and necessary Principle of Christian Life, viz. the belief and acknowledgment of Christ's being the one and only Mediator, I shall endeavour these Three Things:

First, To shew what it is that we are to believe in General, concerning the Person and Office of this Mediator.

Secondly, What are the particular Parts and Offices of his Mediation.

Thirdly, What Evidence there is to induce us to believe him to be this one and only Mediator.

S E C T. I.

What it is that we are to believe in General, concerning the Person and Office of this Mediator.

THE Greek word Μεσίτης, which we translate Mediator, signifies one that interposes between Two Parties, either to obtain some favour from the one Party for the other, or to adjust or make up some Difference between them. And this Undertaking of his, is either, first, of his own head, and voluntary, undertaking without any Warrant or Authority from the Parties between whom he interposes, in which case he acts altogether precariously, and as a mere Orator, and can only persuade and intreat on both Sides: or Secondly, it is Authoritative, and this is Two Ways; First, when the Person who mediates is authorized thereunto by the consent and designation of both Parties, both being equal, and consequently having an equal right to authorize him: For when the Parties are equal, he must be authorized by both, before he can pretend to any right to oblige and determine them; but when once both Parties have agreed to put their Case into his Hands, and refer themselves to his Determination, he from thenceforth commences a Mediator by Office, and is the Legal Representative of both, as being authorized by them to act in their stead, in all those Points that are referred by them to his Determination. So that whatsoever he doth, in the matter before him, is in effect the Act of both Parties, who having both submitted their Wills to his, and voluntarily empowered him to will for them both, are thereupon as effectually concluded and determined by what he doth, as if it were their own personal Will and Action. And in this sense a Mediator is the same with that which we in English call an Umpire, who is one that acts for both Parties by Authority from both, and in whose Judgment and Determination both have obliged themselves to consent and agree. But then, Secondly, the Mediation is Authoritative, when he who mediates is authorized thereunto by a superior Party, who hath a just Authority and Dominion over the inferior. For when a Mediator acts the Part of Two unequal Parties, whereof the one is superior, and hath a just dominion over the other, it is sufficient that he be authorized by the appointment of the superior; and the subject or inferior Party will be as much obliged by his Determination, as if he had voluntarily referred himself to him. For a Mediator between a Superior, as such, and a Subject, is one who is authorized to act on the part of the Superior, in requiring the Subject's Duty and Obedience, and to act on the part of the Subject in impetrating the Superior's Favour and Protection; and there can be no doubt but every absolute Superior hath Right to authorize a Mediator between him and his Subjects, to act for him in ruling them, and for them in soliciting his favour. For he who mediates between a Sovereign and a Subject, is the Sovereign's Vicegerent and the Subject's Advocate; and he who without our Consent hath a right to our Duty, and to all the Favours he bestows upon us, may, whether we consent to it or no, demand our Duty by what Vicegerent, and bestow his Favours by what Advocate he pleases. And as for the Subject, he will be obliged, whether it be by his Consent or no, to abide by the Mediator whom the Sovereign appoints, and by the Terms which he shall impose on him; otherwise he will be justly liable to Punishment.

Having given this short account of the General Notion of a Mediator, I proceed to shew what it is in the General, that the Scripture proposes to our belief, concerning the Person and Office of this great Mediator between God and Men; the whole of which I shall reduce under these Six Heads:

First, That he is design'd and authoriz'd to this Office by God, who is our absolute Lord and Sovereign.

Secondly, That this Office to which he is authorized, consists in acting for and on the behalf of God and Men, who are the Parties between whom he mediates.

Thirdly, That this his Mediation proceeds upon certain Terms and Stipulations between God and Men, which he obtained of God for us, and in his Name hath published and tendered to us.

Fourthly, That as he acts for and in the behalf of God and Men, so he partakes of the Natures of both.

Fifthly, That as he partakes of the Natures of both, so, that he might transact personally with both, he was sent down from Heaven to us, and is returned again from us to Heaven.

Sixthly, That upon his Return from us to Heaven, there to mediate personally for Men with God, he substituted the Divine and Omnipresent Spirit, personally to promote and effectuate his Mediation for God with Men.

I. That he is designed and authorized to this Office by God, who is our absolute Lord and Sovereign. For since God, for just and excellent Reasons, was resolved not to converse with sinful Men immediately, they having rendered themselves, thro' their woful degeneracy, utterly unfit for, and unworthy of any such near and close access to His most Holy Majesty; and since his tender Mercy and Compassion towards us would not permit him utterly to reject and abandon us, there was no expedient, at least that we know of, in which the Holiness of His Majesty could so fairly accord with the tenderness of his Mercy, as this of transacting with us by a Mediator, by whose inter-agency, He, tho a most Holy Sovereign, may, without debasing himself, freely converse with us; and we, tho his guilty Subjects, may, without terror and anxiety, as freely draw near unto him: But, by virtue of his essential Sovereignty and absolute Dominion over us, the right of choosing and appointing this Mediator was wholly in him; because, as I shew'd just before, he only can have the right of appointing the Person who shall be his Vicegerent and our Advocate, who is the Sovereign Lord of our Beings, and the supreme Disposer of all our Blessings. And accordingly he hath constituted the Holy and Blessed Jesus to be the sole Mediator between himself and us, to exercise his Authority over us, and to procure for, and convey his Favours to us; and hence he is called the Christ, or Messias of God; that is, his anointed. Anointing with Oil being antiently the visible Sign by which the Regal, Priestly and Prophetick Offices were confer'd. This Title of the Lord's Anointed, therefore, being applied to Jesus, denotes his being designed, appointed, and authorized by God to this great Office of Mediator, in which all those Three Offices are included. For so, Acts v. 31. we are told, Him, i. e. Christ, hath God exalted with his right Hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, to give Repentance unto Israel, and Forgiveness of Sins; And Acts ii. 36. Therefore let all the House of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ; and, to name no more, Phil. ii. 9, 10, 11. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every Knee should bow, of Things in Heaven, and Things in Earth, and Things under the Earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the Glory of God the Father. The belief of which is absolutely necessary to create in our Minds the reverence that is due to our Holy Religion. For unless we suppose the founder of it to be authorized and commissioned by God, we must strip and disarm it of all its Authority, and look upon it at best but as a pious Imposture, contrived on purpose to chose Men of their Sins, and to train and delude them into Piety and Virtue. For as it is a Religion, it can have no Authority but Divine, and a Divine Authority it cannot have, unless the Author of it had a Divine Commission; but supposing him to be commissioned from God,

God, we owe the same respect and reverence to his Religion as if God himself had proclaimed it to us in an audible voice from the Battlements of Heaven; and it will be no less disrespect to the Divine Majesty for us to contemn and slight what he, as God's Mouth, hath delivered to us, than it would have been for a Jew to have laughed at the Ten Commandments, while God himself was proclaiming them from Mount Sinai in a voice of Thunder. For, if we believe that God authorized him to reveal his Will to us, we must believe his voice to be the voice of God, who spake to us by him as by a living Oracle; and consequently, that in refusing to hear and to obey him, we stop our Ears against God, and do in effect declare, that we regard what he saith no more than we do the whistling of the Wind. And as the belief of Christ's being commission'd, and appointed by God, is highly necessary to create in us a due reverence for his Religion, so it is no less requisite to create in us a due trust and confidence in his Intercession for us. For had he thrust himself upon this Office, without any Call or Commission from God, God would have been no way obliged to hear him, how earnestly soever he had supplicated in our behalf; but since he interceeds for us by God's own Commission, we may depend upon it that God will be always ready to hear him, and graciously accept our Addresses to him, whenever they are presented by his Hand. For since God appointed him to be our Advocate, it must be either with an intent to hear him in our behalf, and if so, we may be sure his Ears will be always open to him; or with a design to mock and ridicule him, and recreate his own inexorable spleen, with the spiteful pleasure of denying and repulsing him, which to imagine of God, is no less senseless than blasphemous. Since therefore he Advocates for us by God's own Commission, we may be sure his Plea in our behalf, will be always acceptable and successful, since in repulsing him, he must in effect affront his own Authority, by which he interceeds for us.

II. That this Office to which he is authorized, consists in acting for, and in the behalf of God and Men, who are the Parties between whom he mediates. And this is implied in the very Notion of an authorized Mediator, who, as such, is an Agent between Two Parties, acting by Authority for both, in order to the adjusting some difference between them, and reducing them to a mutual accord and agreement; and if he act only for one Party, he is not a Mediator, but an Attorney: and accordingly the Apostle tells us, that a Mediator is not a Mediator of one, but God is one, Gal. iii. 20. For the better understanding of which Words, it is to be consider'd, that in the foregoing Verse, the Apostle had asserted, that the Law was ordained by Angels in the hand of a Mediator, that is, in the Hand of Moses, who was appointed to mediate, not only for God with the People of Israel, but also for the People of Israel with God; and this, saith he, is implied in the very Notion of a Mediator, for a Mediator is not of one, but God is one, that is, God is only one of the two Parties between whom this Mediation is made, and therefore Moses must be supposed not only to act for God with the People as his Vicegerent, but also for the People with God as their Advocate; in short, he must act for both Parties, otherwise he acts not as a Mediator. And accordingly as Moses, who was the Mediator of the Jewish Covenant, acted for and between God and the People; so Jesus Christ, who is Mediator of the Christian Covenant, is stiled the one Mediator between God and Men, 1 Tim. ii. 5. that is, that goes between the two opposite Parties, and transacts for both, in order to their Accord and Reconciliation; that as God's Vicegerent acts for him with us, in order to the reducing us to our Duty and Allegiance to him; and as our Advocate acts for us with God, in order to the inducing him to be gracious and favourable to us; that so having prevailed with us to lay down our enmity against God, and obtained of God to remit his Displeasure against us, he may effect a happy Reconciliation between us. Both which Parts of his Mediation are expressed in those Words of the Apostle, Heb. vii. 25. Wherefore he is able to save to the uttermost those who come unto God by him; that is, who by submitting to him, as mediating for God, submit to God himself, seeing he ever lives to make Intercession for them, or to mediate with God in their behalf.

The Belief of which carries with it the most indispensable Obligations to Christian Piety and Virtue; but while we look upon Christ as acting only for one Party, whether it be for God or ourselves, we do in a great measure enervate the Motives of Christianity: For thus while we look upon him as acting only for God, that is, as God's Vicegerent, we must necessarily conclude, that he is concern'd only for God's Authority; and that when he hath secured or vindicated that, by reducing us to our Duty, or punishing our Disobedience, he will have no more to do with us or our Concerns, but even leave us to shift for ourselves, and to seek our Reward where we can find it; that he is substituted by his Father for no other end but to exact our Homage, or revenge our Rebellion; but that as for us, he is no way concerned either to procure us any Pardon for our past Sin, or Reward for our future Obedience; and while we look upon him, by whom alone we have Access to God, as one that is utterly unconcerned for our Welfare, we must look upon ourselves as desperate and abandoned Creatures, that are utterly forsaken of all Hopes and Encouragements: For what Hope can we have, when not only the Deity we are to address to is highly offended at us, but also the Mediator we are to address by is utterly regardless of us? And in such a hopeless Condition all the Arguments in the World are void and insignificant. And so on the other hand, while we look upon Christ as acting only for us, that is, as our Propitiation and Advocate, we must unavoidably conclude, that he is concerned only for our Preservation and Happiness; that his Office requires no more of him, but only to pay off the Score of our Sins with his Blood, and by pleading that Payment in Heaven, to obtain our actual Release from the rigorous Demands of Divine Justice; in short, that he hath nothing else to do, but only to purchase and sue out our Pardon, and to justify and set us right in the Court of Heaven; but as for reducing us under his Father's Authority, and subduing our Wills and Lives to his Obedience, that is no Part of his Mediatorship, nor consequently is he at all concerned about it; and if so, all that his Mediation can oblige us to (supposing that he hath effectually discharged it) is to rest and rely upon it for our Pardon and Justification with God; and if out of pure Gratitude we will be dutiful and obedient to him for the future, he will kindly accept it, but if not, he hath no Remedy against us; and what Likelihood is there, that any Argument of Religion should ever prevail with us to submit to the Divine Authority, so long as we presume upon Christ's Mediation for Pardon and Justification without it, and believe it to be left wholly to our own Ingenuity, whether we will submit or no. Thus, while we consider Christ's Mediation by halves, and mistake either part of it for the whole, we pervert and deprave it, and instead of what it is, viz. a most wise and powerful Inducement to Piety and Virtue, render it an inevitable Temptation either to Despair or Presumption, both which are equally and utterly inconsistent with a Holy and Christian Life.

But if we consider this Doctrine in its full Extent, as it takes in both Parts of Christ's Mediation, it enforces our Duty upon us with the most necessary and powerful Obligations: For it addresses itself to every Passion in us, that is capable of being moved and persuaded, and at once proposes to our Hope and Fear, which are the most vigorous Principles of Action, the most encouraging and dreadful Considerations: For since his Office obliges him to act for God and Men together, we may depend upon it, that thro' the whole Course of his Mediation, he will be most just and impartial to both; and that as on the one hand he will not so act for his Father's Authority, as to neglect our Safety and Welfare; so neither on the other will he so concern himself for our Safety and Welfare, as to expose his Father's Authority; and if he proceed with this exact Equality between the Parties he acts for, we have all the reason in the World to conclude, that, if we submit ourselves to God, we shall be graciously received and rewarded; but that if we persist in our Rebellion against him, we shall be most severely punished.

For, in the first place, his being concerned for us as well as for God, gives us the most ample Security, that if we will submit to his Father's Authority, which he stands engaged to secure or vindicate, he will have a most zealous regard to us and our Concerns, and be as mindful of our Interest as if it were his own: For in undertaking to be our Advocate, he assumed our Persons, and took our Affairs into his own Hands, so that now he is another ourselves, and stands obliged to act for us, with as much Care and Concern, as if our Persons and Interests were his; and therefore we may depend upon it, that he will act as much for our Advantage, as we ourselves could do, if we were in his Place, and had the same Power and Interest with his Father that he hath; and that if we were sitting in his room at the Right Hand of God, and there interceding for ourselves, we could not justly wish for, or desire more or greater Instances of Grace and Favour, than he will ask and obtain for us. And what greater Encouragement can we have to return to our Duty, than this very Consideration, that all our Concerns with our offended God, are deposited in the Hands of a most faithful Mediator, who, upon our Return, will concern himself as zealously for our Good, as for his Father's Authority, and solicite our Cause in the Court of Heaven, as industriously as we ourselves could do, if we were admitted to be our own Advocates? But then in the second place, his being concerned for his Father's Authority, as well as for our Interest, gives us as full Assurance, on the other hand, that he is no less obliged by his Office to reduce us to our Duty to his Father, or avenge him upon us for our Disobedience, than he is to restore us to his Grace and Favour; and if he should so attempt the latter, as to be any way deficient in the former, he would not perform the Part of a just Mediator, which consists in acting impartially for both Parties: For should he favour our Interest beyond his Father's Authority, he would be so far partial to us against his Father. Now, tho he loved us so well as to sacrifice his Life for us on Earth, and in the Virtue of that Sacrifice to appear our Advocate in Heaven, yet we can never be so fond, sure, as to imagine, that he loves us better than his own Father; and if he doth not, we may build upon it, that he is as zealously concerned to assert his Authority, as to prosecute our Interest; and to provide that he be obeyed or avenged, as that we be pardoned and rewarded; but for us to rely upon Christ, as mediating for us, without submitting to him as mediating for God, is in effect to hope, that he will be so exceeding gracious to us, as to betray his Father's Trust for our sake, and sacrifice his Authority to our Safety: For should he take our Part with God and solicite him to favour us while we persist in our Rebellion against him, he would in effect abandon the Cause and Interest of God's Government, and endeavour all that in him lay, to expose his Authority to the Scorn and Contempt of Mankind. Whilst therefore we obstinately refuse to hearken to him in his Mediation for God, that is, to submit to his Laws, and return to our Duty and Allegiance, he will be so far from interceding for us in the Virtue of his meritorious Sacrifice, that he will appear against us as an incensed Judge in the Quarrel of his Father's Authority, and dearly revenge upon our guilty Heads all those shameless Affronts and Indignities we have offer'd it; and by making us everlasting Monuments of his Vengeance, convince us by woful Experience, that he is no less a just Mediator for God, than a merciful Mediator for Men. So that by resolving to persist in our Rebellion against God, we do in effect renounce the Mediation of our Saviour, and proclaim before God and Angels, that we will not be beholden to the one and only Advocate of Sinners. And when we have flung ourselves out of this Protection, Lord! whither shall we go for Sanctuary from thy Vengeance? When there is but this one Mediator, and he hath discarded me, O my wretched Soul, whither wilt thou betake thyself? Call now and see, if there be any will hear thee; to which of all the Saints or Angels wilt thou turn thee? What Favourite of Heaven will plead thy Cause, when the only Advocate of Souls hath rejected thee? For if he who is my only Mediator, be incensed against me, who shall mediate between me and him? when God alone was angry with me, there was some hope, because my Saviour stands as a living Screen between me and his Displeasure, to guard and defend me from it; but when that is kindled against me too, what is there to interpose between me and the devouring Flame? Be wise therefore, O ye Sinners, be instructed, ye obstinate Rebels against God; Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way; for if his Wrath be kindled but a little, blessed are all they that put their Trust in him, but Wo be to them that provoke him.

Thus the Mediation of Christ addresses to our Fear as well as Hope, in order to the subduing us to the Will of God, and presses at once upon both these great Avenues of our Souls with the most irresistible Motives.

III. That this his Mediation proceeds upon certain Terms and Stipulations between God and Men, which he obtained of God for us, and in his Name hath published and tendered to us: For when Mankind, by reason of the Degeneracy of Human Nature, were cut off from all immediate Intercourse with God, and this most wise and holy Method of conversing with us by a Mediator, was resolved on by the Divine Counsel, God, in consideration of what our Mediator had engaged himself to suffer for us in the Fulness of Time, granted to him in our behalf a most gracious and merciful Covenant, whereby he engaged himself to bestow his Spirit upon us, to enable us to repent and return to him, upon Condition that we should seek it, and cooperate with it; to pardon all our past Sins, upon Condition that we should unfeignedly repent of them; and to crown us with Eternal Life, upon Condition we should persevere to the End in well-doing. This is the Substance of that gracious Covenant, which God hath granted to us for the sake of our Mediator; who hath accordingly assured us from God, that he will give his holy Spirit unto them that ask, Luke xi. 13. That if we will repent and be converted, our Sins shall be blotted out, when the Times of refreshing shall come from the Presence of the Lord, Acts v. 19. And that if we will be faithful to the Death, we shall receive a Crown of Life, Rev. ii. 10. And upon this Covenant it is that our blessed Saviour proceeds in his Mediation between God and Men: For our Baptismal Vow is nothing else but only a solemn Engagement of ourselves to perform the Condition of this Covenant, upon which there results to us a conditional Right to all that God hath promised in it; and when by this federal Solemnity of Baptism, God and we have once obliged ourselves to each other, by mutual Promises and Engagements, Christ's Office, as Mediator between us, is to sollicit on both sides for mutual Performance; and accordingly in mediating for God with us, he requires nothing of us but what we promised to God; and in mediating for us with God, he claims nothing of God, but what God promised to us. And hence he is called, The Mediator of this better Covenant, Heb. viii. 6. and The Mediator of the new Covenant, Heb. xii. 24. because he transacts between both Parties to sollicit the Performance of their mutual Engagements: For so the same Author in Heb. ix. 14, 15. seems to explain it. How much more, saith he, (having spoken before of the Virtue of the Blood of Bulls and Goats) shall the Blood of Christ, who thro' the eternal Spirit, offered himself without spot to God, purge our Consciences from dead Works, to serve the living God; and for this Cause he is the Mediator of the New Covenant, that by means of Death for the Redemption of Transgressions, &c. they which are called, might receive the Promise of Eternal Inheritance; where those Words [and for this Cause] seem as well to refer to what went before as to what follows; and then the Sense will be this, For this Cause he is the Mediator of the New Covenant, both that he might take care that our Consciences being purged from dead Works, we might serve the living God, and that having redeemed us by his Death, we might receive the Promise of eternal Inheritance. And accordingly he proceeds in his Mediation; for in acting for God as his King or Vicegerent, he hath enacted the Conditions which this Covenant requires of us into the Laws of his Kingdom, and exacts them of us under the fearful Penalty of eternal Damnation; whereby he hath taken effectual Care that we shall either perform these Conditions, or undergo a Punishment as great as the Guilt of our Neglect and Contempt of them; and having thus tied them upon us by the utmost force of Law, that is, by Law established on the most dreadful Penalty, he hath, so far as his Regal Authority extends, compelled us to the Performance of our Part of this Covenant; so that if we do not perform it, it is not to be attributed to any Neglect or Omission of the Mediator, who to oblige us to perform it, hath most faithfully acted for God, even to the utmost Extent of that Power wherewithal he invested him. And so on the other hand, in acting for us as our Intercessor, he hath taken no less Care to insure God's Part of this Covenant to us, than he did to insure our Part of it to God: For this Covenant being granted to us by God, in consideration of a valuable Satisfaction for our Sins, Christ hath not only rendred this Satisfaction to God, by dying for us, and thereby purchased for us a just Right and Claim to all the Blessings which God hath promised on his Part, if we perform what he requires on ours, but in the Virtue of this Satisfaction he also appears for us at the Right Hand of God, there to plead our Right, and to prefer our Claim, by exhibiting that vocal Blood, and those importunate Wounds, with the Price of which he purchased and obtained it. So that now we are intitled to all the Blessings of this Covenant, not only by God's Promise, but by Christ's Purchase too; and to secure both, we have Christ himself advocating for us in Heaven, with the Price of that Purchase in his Hand. So effectually hath he transacted for us in his Mediation with God in our Behalf, that we have the highest Security imaginable, that if we perform our Part of this Covenant, God will not fail to perform his; since in so doing he would not only violate his own Truth, which he hath engaged to us by Promise, but also injuriously defraud his own Son of what he hath duly purchased for us by his Death, and claims upon that Purchase by his Intercession: For he intercedes for no other Blessings in our Behalf, but what he purchased for us, upon a Consideration that was not only infinitely valuable in itself, but also freely accepted by his Father; and he purchased no other Blessings for us, but what are specified in this gracious Covenant; so that he asks nothing for us, but what he hath a Right to obtain, nothing but what he purchased by his Blood, and is in strict Justice due to his meritorious Sacrifice; and consequently nothing that his Father can deny him, without doing him the most outrageous Wrong and Injury; and therefore this we may be as confident of, as we can be of any thing in the World, that whatsoever he hath purchased for us, he will not fail to ask; and that whatsoever he asks, he will be sure to obtain.
into

Thus Christ, by his Mediation between God and Men, hath taken the most effectual Care to insure the mutual Performance of this everlasting Covenant to both Parties: For to insure God of our performing our Part, he hath bound it upon us by a Law enforced with an everlasting Penalty; which is the strongest Obligation he could lay upon us; and to insure us of God's performing his Part, he duly purchased it for us by his Death, and in virtue of that just Right, he ever lives to claim it by his Intercession, which is the strongest Obligation he could lay upon God. So that now, as God cannot fail on his Part, without violating his Truth and Justice, which would be to destroy his own Being, and un-god himself; so neither we can in ours, without exposing our everlasting Well-being, and plunging ourselves Body and Soul together into everlasting Wretchedness and Calamity. And hence, I suppose, it is that our Saviour is called the Surety of a better Covenant, Heb. vii. 22. or, as the Greek Word may be rendered, the Trustee between both Parties, to see that they mutually perform their several Parts of this Covenant to each other; which Office our blessed Lord hath faithfully performed, in that he hath taken the utmost Care to oblige both God and us, mutually to make good our several Engagements to each other: For tho he hath not undertaken for us that we shall certainly perform our Part, yet he hath undertaken to oblige us to it by the bighest and most urgent Reason, which was all that he could reasonably undertake, for Beings that are free to Good and Evil; and if, notwithstanding he hath thus obliged us, we will be so desperately obstinate, as not to comply, he hath undertaken to chastise our Obstinacy with a most dire and exemplary Vengeance.

And since he thus proceeds in his Mediation upon the certain and stated Terms of a Covenant, which he himself hath published and revealed to us, we may hereby most certainly inform ourselves what he expects from us, and what we are to expect from him: For now we are sure, that all he can expect from us, is, that we should faithfully perform our Part of this Covenant, that is, that we should implore the Assistance of God's holy Spirit, and diligently to cooperate with it, so as to repent and return from our evil Ways, to the sincere Practice of all Christian Piety and Virtue, and that herein we should persevere to the End; and less than this he cannot admit, without being an unfaithful Trustee for God of that blessed Covenant upon which he mediates. And now we are also sure, that all we expect from him is, that if we implore the Assistance of his Spirit, we shall have it; that if with his Assistance we repent, we shall be pardoned; and that if being pardoned we persevere in well-doing, we shall be crowned with everlasting Life; and less than this he cannot obtain for us, without being an unfaithful Trustee for us: For if he should exact less for God of us, or procure less for us of God, than that Covenant, upon which he mediates, obliges God and us to, he would be wanting in his Care one way or t'other, to see this Covenant with which he is intrusted, duly and impartially executed, and either defraud God or us of some part of that Right which it devolves upon us; which we have all the Assurance in the World he will never do. So that now we proceed upon certain Terms, and do know infallibly what to trust to; we know that our Mediator exacts of us the whole and intire Condition of the Gospel-Covenant; that this he will certainly accept, but that this he expects without the least Defalcation or Abatement; so that if we heartily implore the Assistance of his holy Spirit, and cooperate with it, we have all the Assurance in the World, that we shall be effectually enabled to render him that sincere Repentance and Obedience he requires; and that if we repent, we shall be pardoned; and if we persevere in our Obedience, be advanced to everlasting Glory. On the other side, we know infallibly before-hand, that if we refuse to submit to this Condition, or do any way fall short of it, instead of being our kind and merciful Advocate, our Mediator will become our implacable Judge, and doom us to a Place of dismal Torment, where we shall live with everlasting Horror and Despair; so that now we can no longer persevere in our Impenitence, without trampling at the same time on the bighest Encouragements, and charging head-long thro' the most amazing Danger.

IV. That as he acts for, and in the behalf of God and Men, so he partakes of the Natures of both: For, that this high and important Office might be the more effectually executed and performed, the eternal Father thought meet to place it in the Hands of his own eternal Son, the Son of his natural Generation, to whom he communicated from all Eternity his own Divine Essence and Nature, and whom, in due time, he appointed to assume the Human Nature, into a personal Union with his Divinity; that so being God-man in one Person, he might be the better fitted and accomplished to mediate between God and Men: For in mediating authoritatively for God with us, he was to perform the Office of a Divine King, to rule and govern us, as God's Viceroy, and either reduce us under his Authority; or chastise us for our Rebellion against him; which is a Sphere so vast and so sublime, as needs no less than some Divine Intelligence, to inform and actuate it: For to wield the Divine Scepter and Government, is a Province that requires a Divine Knowledge and Power; for the Souls and Hearts of Men are the principal Seat and Subject of the Divine Government, and therefore it is very requisite, that he who is intrusted with the Administration of it, should have a thorow and perfect Inspection of all our most secret Thoughts, and Intentions, and Purposes, and Resolutions; otherwise how is it possible he should take Cognizance of them, so as to command, and over-rule, and reward, and punish them? But to know the Hearts of Men is in Scripture always appropriated to the Divine Omniscience; so 1 Kings viii. 39. Thou, even thou only, knowest the Hearts of the Children of Men; and if only God's all-searching Eye can penetrate into the Hearts of Men, who but a God can rule and govern them? And accordingly our Saviour, upon whose Shoulders this inward and spiritual Government rests, challenges to himself this Divine Prerogative, which is so necessary a Qualification for it, Rev. ii. 23. And all the Churches shall know, saith he, that I am he which searcheth the Reins and Hearts, and will give to every one of you according to his Works. Nor is it less requisite to qualify him for this spiritual Empire, that he should be Almighty, than that he should be Omniscient; for to enable him to rule the Hearts and Souls of Men, it is necessary that he should have the Command and Disposal of all those outward Events and Accidents in which they are any way concerned, since it is by these in a great measure that their Hearts are sway'd, their Affections form'd, their Intentions and Resolutions squar'd and regulated, and in a word, their good and evil Actions rewarded and punish'd in this World; and to wield and manage, moderate and dispose such infinite Numbers of Events as concern such infinite Numbers of Men so vastly distant from one another in Place, Condition, and Temper, requires a Power that can do whatsoever it pleases both in Heaven and Earth, which the Psalmist appropriates to the Divine Power as its peculiar Prerogative, Psalm cxxxv. 6, 7. and if it be only a Divine Power that can manage and dispose all the Affairs of all Men, what can be more requisite than that he who rules and governs them, should communicate of the Divine Omnipotence? And accordingly our Saviour, upon whom this Government is devolved, assures his Disciples, that all Power was communicated to him both in Heaven and Earth, Mat. xxviii: 18. which, being the Prerogative of the Divine Power, seems impossible to have been communicated to any but a Divine Person. And therefore the Prophet Isaiah, speaking of the Government of Christ, tells us, that his Name should be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, Isa. ix. 6. where, by Counsellor and mighty God, he seems to design his infinite Knowledge and Power, whereby he should be qualified for this his Divine Government; for so Mighty God doth always in the Scripture-phrase signify Almighty God; so in Deut. vii. 21. Psal. l. 1. Jer. xxxii. 18. Heb. i. 12. and elsewhere. By all which it is evident, that to mediate authoritatively for God with Men is a Province so sublime as that it requires no less than Divine Perfections in the Person that undertakes and manages it, and consequently that it is requisite he should be God.

Nor is it less requisite to render his Government more awful and majestick: For, tho the condition of the Person alters not the Nature of the Authority he is vested with, yet in the estimation of Men the same Authority is more or less venerable, according as the Quality and Condition of the Persons clothed with it is more or less considerable. Since therefore the Quality of the Person doth always cast a Cloud or Lustre on the Office, it was very requisite that he who was authorized to mediate for God with Men, which is the highest Office under God the Father, should be a Person of the highest Rank and Dignity next to God the Father himself; and consequently that he should be God the Son; and hence the Author to the Hebrews, Chap. i. to render his Authority more awful, takes a great deal of Pains to emblazon the Dignity of his Person, in which he gives him such Stiles and Characters, as cannot without extreme force be applied to any but a Person Divine; he stiles him, The brightness of his Father's Glory, and the express Image of his Person; the Founder of the Earth, and the Maker of the Heavens, and the Up-holder

holder of all Things by the Word of his Power, Ver. 3, 10. he tells us, that he was set far above the Angels, and that the Father had ordered all his Angels to worship him, declaring him to be God in these Terms, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever; and then he concludes all with this Application, Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the Things which we have heard of him, Chap. ii. ver. 1. which shews that, in the Apostle's sense, to mediate for God, is a Station so sublime, that it was very fit it should be supplied (as it was) with a Person of the highest Dignity, that so his Person might reflect a Majesty on his Office, and render it more awful and venerable in the World.

And as to accomplish him for this high Office of mediating for God with Men, it was most fit he should be God, so it was no less requisite he should be Man: For Man being naturally a sensitive, as well as a rational Creature, in this degenerate State of his Nature, wherein his sensitive Part is predominant, there are no Sorts of Objects do so vigorously impress and affect him, as those which strike immediately on his Senses; and hence it is, that he so greedily prefers carnal before rational, and sensitive before spiritual Goods; notwithstanding the latter are in themselves infinitely greater and more eligible; and that in his Conceptions of spiritual Objects, he is so prone to blend and intermix them with Carnal and Corporeal Phantasms, because his Mind is so estranged from Spiritual Objects, by its continual intimacy and familiarity with sensual ones, that it can hardly frame any Idea of them without disguising them into some bodily semblance. God therefore being a spiritual and invisible Essence, and upon this account far removed out of the Ken and Prospect of our Sense, our sensual and depraved Minds must either be naturally indisposed to think seriously of, and consequently to be duly affected by him, which renders us prone to Irreligion; or to sophisticate our Conceptions of him with corporeal Images and Phantasms, which renders us prone to Idolatry; to prevent both which, God in great Condescension to this deplorable weakness of human Minds, hath always thought meet to converse with us under some sensible Appearance or visible Symbol of his Divine Presence. Thus when God conducted his chosen People thro' the Red-Sea and Wilderness, he went before them in a Pillar of Cloud by Day, and in a Pillar of Fire by Night; and when afterwards he gave them his Law, he descended upon Mount Sinai in a bright and glorious Flame, overcast with thick and solemn Clouds, in which illustrious appearance he afterwards made his Entrance into the Tabernacle, where he made his constant abode, and from whence he frequently exhibited himself to the Peoples Eyes and Senses in a body of visible light and glory, which visible light is in holy Scripture very often called the Glory of the Lord. And since God in Condescension to the weakness of Human Minds, thought it meet to present himself to the Senses of Men in some visible appearance, there is the same reason why the Mediator should assume some visible substance to his invisible Godhead; that therein he might exhibit himself to our sense, and thereby at once affect our Minds with a great love and dread of his Divine Majesty, and, by vouchsafing us a visible presence, prevent our framing Idols and false Images, and Representations of him in our own Minds. Now, of all sensible substance, there was none so proper for this end as Human Nature, which is that above all others that we are most intimately acquainted with, and most accustomed to love, and reverence, and obey. It is true, had his design been to govern us by Terrors and Affrightments, as he did the Jews, it would have been more proper for him to assume that dreadful Appearance of a consuming Fire, in which he was wont to converse with them; but his design being to erect his Empire in Mens Souls, and to captivate their Wills into a free and generous Obedience, he could not have appeared to us in any visible Substance so proper for this End, so apt to oblige and awe, to endear and terrify us together, as Human Nature. And accordingly, as God dwelt of old in the Jewish Tabernacle, and thence displayed himself before the Eyes of that People in a visible Glory; so the Word, as St. John tells, was made Flesh, and tabernacled among us, (for so the Greek Word ἐσκήνωσεν signifies) i. e. as in Condescension to the Weakness of the Jews, he pitched his Tabernacle among them, and thence frequently appeared in a visible Glory to their sense, so in Condescension to ours, he pitched his Tabernacle in our Flesh, or Nature, from whence, as he proceeds, we beheld his Glory, (i. e. at his Baptism and Transfiguration) as the Glory of the only begotten Son, or in which the only begotten Son was wont to display himself from between the Cherubims, John i. 14. In short therefore, since, in mediating for God with us, it was very needful, that in compliance with our weakness he should address to our sense in some visible appearance; and since there was no visible appearance in which he could so advantageously address to us as that of Humane Nature; it hence evidently appears how requisite it was, that he should assume our Nature to his Deity, and be a Man as well as God.
and

And as it was requisite he should be God-man in order to his mediating for God with us, so was it also no less requisite in order to his mediating for us with God; because, as I shall shew hereafter, to mediate for us with God, implies, First, his making an atonement for our Sins with his Blood; Secondly, his appearing for us as our Advocate in Heaven. Now as for the first, it was highly requisite that he should be Man, that so he might suffer for us, his Divinity being wholly impassible; and this reason the Apostle himself assigns, Heb. ii. 14. Forasmuch then as the Children are partakers of Flesh and Blood, he also himself (speaking of Christ) took part of the same, that thro' Death he might destroy him who had the power of Death; and seeing he was to assume another Nature to his Divinity, that so he might suffer for us, it was most fit and proper that he should assume ours rather than any other. For since God in Mercy had consented to accept of another Person's suffering for our Sins, it was very requisite that what he suffer'd for us should come as near to our own personal suffering as it was possible, that so it might be more exemplary to us, and more nearly affect us with dread and horror for our Sins; and next to our own personal suffering is the suffering of our Nature; and therefore since the Punishment of our Sins was to be transferred from our Persons, it was highly fit it should be inflicted on our Nature, which it could not have been, had not he been Man who endured it.

And as it was requisite that he should be Man, that so he might suffer, and that so the Nature at least that had sinned might suffer, so it was no less requisite that he should be God-man in one and the same Person; to render his Sufferings a valuable Consideration for all that Punishment that was due to God upon the Score of the infinite Sins of an infinite number of Sinners. For how could the Blood of one Man, tho never so innocent or excellent, have amounted to a valuable Commutation for the forfeited Lives and Souls of a world of guilty Sinners? Or what less than the Blood of God-man could have been any way equivalent to that Eternal Punishment that was due to God from the whole Race of Mankind? And yet, that it should be in some measure equivalent was highly requisite, as I shall shew hereafter, both to satisfy the Divine Justice for what is past, and to secure the Divine Authority for the future; and accordingly we are said to be purchased with the Blood of God, Acts xx. 28. not that the Divine Essence can suffer or bleed, but being united into one Person with the Humane Nature, the Properties of this Nature, and also the Actions and Passions thence proceeding, may be truly attributed to it; and therefore since in the Person of Christ, God was united to Man, whatsoever his Humanity suffered may be truly called the suffering of God; and being so, it was a suffering every way equivalent to the Eternal Damnation of the whole World of Sinners.

Lastly, As he was to appear as our Advocate at the Right Hand of God, it was very fit he should be Man, that so, as the Apostle discourses, Having an High Priest that was in all Points tempted like as we are, as having been placed in our Nature and Circumstances, he might be the more affectionately touched with the feeling of our Infirmities, Heb. iv. 15. i. e. that so our Nature being a part of himself, and that himself having experienced its Weakness and Infirmary, he might be the more nearly concern'd for it, and be touch'd with a more tender Compassion towards it, and consequently sollicit its Cause and Interest at the Right Hand of God with greater zeal and importunity. For so the same Author reasons, Heb. iii. 17, 18. Wherefore in all Things it behoved him to be made like unto his Brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful High Priest in Things pertaining to God, to make Reconciliation for the Sins of the People; for in that himself hath suffered, being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted.

And that he should be God as well as Man, is no less requisite to create in us the greater confidence of the success of his Advocacy. For what Reason or Argument could be great enough to satisfy our guilty, and therefore anxious Minds, that ever a meer Man, who had nothing beyond ourselves to recommend him to God, but only his Innocence and Virtue, should be able to obtain such a prevailing Interest in Heaven, as not only to reconcile the Almighty Father of all Things to a World of sinful Men, against whom he was justly and so highly incensed, but also to obtain of him to embrace them with infinite Love, and crown them with eternal Favours; which is such a stupendous success as we could scarce have modestly hoped for from the most importunate intercession, not only of the best Man that ever was upon Earth, but of the highest Angel in Heaven? For unless we could reasonably suppose God to be more pleased with one innocent Man or Angel than he is displeased with a World of guilty Sinners, which is hardly supposable, we could have no just ground to hope that the cries of the one's Intercessions should be more prevalent with him than the cries of the other's Guilt. But when we consider, that he who hath undertaken our Cause is the Son of God, the Son of his natural Generation, that from all Eternity was begotten of his Essence, God of God, Light of Light, very God of very God, what may we not expect from the Prayers of one so near and dear to the Eternal Father, that is fit either for him to ask, or for the Eternal Father to bestow? For this we may be confident of, that he can never be so highly displeas'd with Us as he is pleased with his own Son, who is the stamp of his very Essence, and express Character of his Person, and that therefore his Pleasure in him will be far more prevalent than all his Displeasure against us; and while it is so, we have all the Security in the World that he will succeed in his Advocacy, and prevail in our behalf. Thus that Christ should be God-man was in itself highly expedient to qualify him for all the Parts and Offices of his Mediation, and accordingly the Holy Scripture expressly declares him to be so.

For first, That he is God, is as plainly asserted as any Proposition in the Bible. For thus, not to instance in the Old Testament, where he is frequently styled Jehovah, the incommunicable Name of God, and the Mighty or Almighty God, and Immanuel, that is, God with us; in the New Testament he is not only called God, Acts xx. 28. where the Pastors are exhorted to feed the Church of God which he hath purchased with his own Blood, which can be applied to none but Christ; and John xx. 28. where Thomas calls him my Lord and my God, which Confession of his, our Saviour himself approves, Verse 29. but moreover he is called the true God, 1 John v. 20. And we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ, he is the true God and eternal Life, and God over all blessed for ever, Rom. ix. 5. and accordingly, the Father himself is brought in thus bespeaking him, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever, Heb. i. 8. where his design is to shew the excellency of Christ above the Angels; for, saith he in Verse 7. Of the Angels he saith, who maketh his Angels Spirits, and his Ministers a flame of Fire; but unto the Son he saith, Thy Throne, Throne, O God, &c. which Stile, O God, here must necessarily import something greater than was ever attributed to Angels, and consequently something greater than a Nominal or Titular Deity; which our Adversaries in this Article allow was frequently given to the Angel of the Lord in the Old Testament. If therefore that Angel of the Lord were a mere created Angel, as they affirm, he had as much attributed to him as our Saviour, unless we suppose this Stile, O God, to import real and essential Deity, and not merely nominal. So also John i. 1. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. For the clearing of which noble Text, which our Adversaries with a world of Art have endeavoured to perplex and intangle, it is to be considered that this Phrase, ὁ λόγος, the Word, was a Term of Art by which in that very Age when this Gospel was written, and long before and after it, both the Jewish and Heathen Writers were wont to express and signify a Divine Person, (a) by whom the Antient Jews understood the Messias, (b) who is that very Person the Apostle here treats of. Vide Note (a) at the End of this Part.

Vide Note (b).

Since therefore by this Phrase the Word, both Jews and Gentiles, when St. John wrote this Gospel, understood a Divine Person; and since by this Divine Person the Jews understood the Messias, there is no reason to imagine that St. John here meant it in any other Signification, since in so doing he could not but foresee he should impose upon the World, and take an effectual course to make us believe he meant what he never intended. For he is so far from explaining this Phrase into any different Sense from that of the Jewish and Gentile Writers, that he all along explains himself Vide Note (c). in the the very same.

Now it is hardly to be imagined by any one whose mind is not deeply tinctured with Heretical Pravity, but that he had the Apostle used this Technical Phrase in any different Sense from its common acceptation, he would have told us of it, and not have given us such an unavoidable occasion to mistake in so great a Doctrine, by clothing its Sense in such Phrases as in the Language of the Age he wrote in, signified so differently from what he meant and intended by them.

And as in the above-named Texts he is expressly stiled God, so other Texts, to convince us that he is not a mere titular Deity, attribute sundry Things to him which are peculiar to God Essential: For so the making of the World is in sundry Places expressly attributed to him, (which as the Apostle tells us, Heb. iii. 4. is peculiar to God; For he, saith he, that made all Things is God) for so in the above-named Text we are told, That by him were all Things made, and that without him was not any thing made, which was made, where, by all Things, we must necessarily understand the whole World, unless we will suppose the Apostle to equivocate; because it was then a common and received Doctrine, that the Word was the Maker of the World: For so, besides the above-cited Authorities, the Chaldee Paraphrase upon Isa. xlv. 12. instead of, I made the Earth, and created Man upon it, saith the Lord, renders it, I by my Word made the Earth, and created Man upon it; and on Gen. i. 27. instead of God created Man, the Jerusalem Targum renders it, The Word of the Lord created Man, and so in several other Places. This therefore being the Doctrine of the Age, St. John could not but apprehend that they would certainly understand these Words of his in their own Sense, because in all appearance they are so to be understood; if therefore he meant them in any other Sense, he ought immediately to have explained himself; which since he hath not, it is plain either that he meant according to the common Sense, or that he intended to equivocate; but, that he meant according to the common Doctrine of the Age, is sufficiently evident from other Texts of Scripture: For Heb. xi. 3. the Apostle expresses this Article to the Jews in their own Language, thro' Faith we understand that the Worlds were framed by the Word of God. Now that by this Word he meant Christ, is plain from Heb. i. 1, 2. In these last Days God spake unto us by his own Son, by whom also be made the Worlds; and by these Worlds he means the whole Creation, is evident from the 8th, 9th, and 10th Verses of this Chapter, But unto the Son, he said, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever, &c. Thou hast loved Righteousness, and hated Iniquity, &c. speaking still of the Son; and then it follows, And thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the Foundation of the Earth, and the Heavens are the Work of thine Hands; for the Conjunction (And) here plainly connects these Words to the foregoing, viz. But unto the Son he said, &c. so that still it is the same Son, of whom it is said, Thy Throne, O God, &c. and thou, Lord, in the Beginning, &c. the same Person, whose Throne, in Ver. 8. is said to be for ever and ever, that is said in Verse 10. to have laid the Foundations of the Earth, So also Col. i. 15, 16, 17. Who is the Image of the invisible God, the First-born of every Creature, for by him were all Things created, that are in Heaven, and that are on Earth, visible and invisible, whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers, all Things were created by him, and for him, and he is before all Things, and by him all Things do consist; where, to shew that he means a proper and literal Creation, the Apostle describes it in those very Words, wherein Moses describes the Creation of the World, For by him were all Things created that are in Heaven, and that are on Earth; and to shew that he doth not mean by creating, renewing, or regenerating, as the Socinians will needs understand him, he tells us, that not only Men were created by him, who are 'the only Subjects of this new Metaphorical Creation, but all Things in general that are on Earth; and not only all Things that are on Earth, but all Things that are in Heaven, too, where there never was any thing, new created, or regenerated; for the Thrones and Dominions, the Principalities and Powers, i. e. Orders of Angels, that are here said to be created by him, have never been renewed or regenerated; but those of them that fell, fell for all Eternity, and they which stand, have always stood, and shall stand for ever; and therefore by his creating them, must be meant his giving them their Being and Existence.

And as the Creation of the World is in Scripture attributed to Christ, which speaks him a Divine Being; so there are other Things ascribed to him, which are peculiar to the Divinity, as particularly his being Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the End, the First and the Last, in Rev. xxii. 13. and several other Places, which is a Style that God hath appropriated to himself, Isa. xlv. 6. Thus saith the Lord, the King of Israel, and his Redeemer the Lord of Hosts, I am the first, and I am the last, and besides me there is no God. If then Christ be the first and last, as he himself declares he is, Rev. i. 17. he must be that Lord, the King and Redeemer of Israel.

Hitherto we have been proving, that he is God; but then there are other Texts that do as plainly prove him to be God-man: For so in 1 Tim. iii. 16. Without Controversy great is the Mystery of Godliness, God was manifested in the Flesh; which is the same with that of St. John, John i. 18. And the Word (which, in the first Verse, he saith was God) was made Flesh; so also Phil. ii. 6, 7. For being in the Form of God, he thought it not Robbery to be equal with God, but emptied himself, and took upon him the Form of a Servant, being made in the Likeness of Men; from which Words it is plain that Christ was in the Form of God, before ever he was in the Form of a Servant; for it was by taking on him the Form of a Servant that he emptied himself, and his being in the Form of a Servant consisted in being made in the Likeness of Men; so that his being in the Form of God, doth as much imply that he was God, as his being in the Form of a Servant doth that he was Man; and since in becoming Man he emptied himself, it necessarily follows, that before he became so, he was full, and also that that Fulness of his consisted in being in the Form of God: if then he was full, by being in the Form of God, before he emptied himself into the Form of a Servant, by being made in the Likeness of Men, it is certain that he was in the Form of God, before he was in the Form of Man, and that his being in the Form of God, doth as much signify his being really God, God, as his being in the Form of Men, doth his being really Man; but for farther Satisfaction concerning these two last cited Texts, I refer the Reader to that most learned and incomparable Treatise, Dr. Pearson's Exposition of the Creed, fol. 121, and 127. where the Cavils of the Socinians are all shamefully baffled with clear and convincing Reasons.

Thus as it is highly requisite in itself, that the Mediator should partake of the Natures of both the Parties between whom he interposes, so we are sufficiently assured that he doth, by Scripture-Testimony: So that now in his Mediation for God with us, we have all the Reason in the World to dread and reverence his Authority, and also to resign up ourselves to his conduct with a free and cheerful Mind: For being God, we are sure that he hath an all-seeing Eye that inspects our Hearts, and pries into the inmost Thoughts and Purposes of our Souls, and an Almighty Arm that can stretch forth itself to the remotest Distance, and reach us even to the bottomless Pit; and being thus exposed to the Inspection of an all-seeing Eye, and the Vengeance of an Almighty Arm, how dare we harbour any Thought or Purpose; any Desire or Affection with which that Eye is offended, or that Arm provoked? But then being Man as well as God, his Authority comes armed to us with equal Sweetness and Majesty, and is every whit as apt to affect our Love and Ingenuity, as our Dread and Reverence: For how can we refuse to obey him, when he commands us in our own Nature; a Nature which is most intimate and familiar to us, and which we are most inured to love and to obey; and above all, a Nature wherein he bled and died for us, and cheerfully exposed himself to Sorrow, Shame, and Torment, that we might live, and be happy for ever? And so on the other hand, in his Mediation for us with God, we have all the Reason in the World stedfastly to rely upon his meritorious Sacrifice and powerful Intercession; for as he was Man, he was not only capacitated to suffer for us, but he actually suffered in our Nature, that very Nature wherein we had justly deserved to suffer for ever. So that what he suffered for us came as near to our suffering for ourselves, and consequently did as much satisfy the Ends of Divine Justice in exacting Punishment of Offenders, as it was possible for any substituted or vicarious Punishment to do: For tho our Persons escape, our Nature hath been punished in him. But then, being God as well as Man, what he suffered for us was not only instead of what we ought to have suffered, but equivalent to it: So that our ransom from eternal Punishment being paid with the Blood of one of our own kind, hypostatically united to God, we did as much suffer in him, as we could do without suffering in our own Persons; and what we suffered in him, was every way equivalent to what we had deserved to suffer in our own Persons. So that now we have all possible assurance that the Divine Justice is so far satisfied by what Christ hath suffered for our Sins, that if we repent and forsake them, we shall be freely discharged from all that infinite Debt of Punishment which we have justly contracted by them. And then again being Man, we may be secure that he hath a most tender Sympathy with the whole Mass of Human Nature, by what distances soever of Time or Place divided and dispersed; and consequently that having in himself experienced its Weaknesses and Temptations, so far as was consistent with his innocence, he must needs be a very concerned and zealous Advocate for us with the Almighty Father. And then being God-man, the Son of the Almighty Father's Essence as well as the Son of Man, we may be equally secure that he cannot fail of being successful in his Advocation, especially when he pleads for us, as he doth in the right of his own meritorious Blood, by which he purchased our admission into the Divine Grace and Favour. So that, considering all these Things, it is evident that there could have been no Mediator between God and us every way so fit and proper to govern us for God, and intercede for us with God, none in whom both God and we could have reposed that Trust and Confidence, as a Theanthropos, or God-man.

V. Another thing which the Scripture proposes to our belief concerning this Mediator, is, that as he partakes of the natures of both the Parties between whom he mediates; so, that he might transact personally with both, he was sent down from Heaven to us, and is returned again from us to Heaven. For, since he was appointed to mediate between God and Men, it was highly expedient that he should personally address to both Parties, that so he might more closely and effectually solícite a mutual Reconciliation between them; and that being personally known to both, they might both repose their trust in him with greater confidence and assurance. He was well known to the Father, in whose bosom he dwelt from all Eternity, to be a Person every way fitted to be intrusted with his Authority, and the Administration of his Government, as communicating with him in the same Divine Essence, and consequently essential Dominion; by reason of which no Person in the World could be so much concerned for his Father's Authority as he was; and consequently no Person could be so proper to be intrusted with it: and therefore when upon the first breach between God and Men, there arose an occasion for a Mediator, God could not but be infinitely satisfied, that there was none so fit to act on his Part or mediate for him, as his own Son. But then since he was neither known to us by Person, nor allied to us by Nature, as he was to his Father, we could have no such reason, as the Father had, to place our trust and confidence in him: and therefore, tho when he first undertook his Mediatorship between God and us, he was not related to us by nature as he was to the Father; yet it was upon an agreement between the Father and him, that he should hereafter assume this relation to us, and become the Son of Man as well as the Son of God, that he was admitted to this Office. So that tho from our Fall to his Incarnation, he was not Man but only God, yet all that Time he mediated as God-man between God and Men; he mediated for God, as actually subsisting in the Divine Nature; he mediated for Men as he was infallibly to subsist in the Humane Nature also. He having therefore virtually and intentionally assumed our Nature from his very first entrance on his Mediatorship, did thereupon become equally related to both Parties; but till he had actually assumed our Natures, and therein manifested himself unto us, we could not have that knowledge of him, nor of his relation to us, that the Father had; nor consequently that reason to repose our trust and confidence in him: and therefore, that we might have the same reason to confide in him in his Mediation for us as God had in his Mediation for him, God so ordered it, not only that he should assume our Nature, which, if he had so thought meet, he might have done, without either being seen of us, or born among us, but also that he should so assume it, as to be visibly born of Humane Kind, and manifested in it in the open view and sight of the World. For in the fulness of that Time, which was long before prefixed in the Eternal Counsel of God, the Holy Ghost by an immediate, invisible, and miraculous operation on the pure and immaculate Womb of a Virgin, called Mary, of the Lineage of David, enabled her, without any Congress of Man, to conceive a Child of Humane Kind, consisting of a rational Soul in a mortal Body, which the Eternal Word, or natural Son of God, who was before all Worlds, immediately assumed into a personal Union with himself, whereby he became God-man, who before was only God, and this without either commixing his two Natures into one, or converting either of them into the other; but under their Personal Union, preserving them still distinct and separate; which God-man the blessed Virgin that conceived him, actually brought forth after the natural Time of Women, and nursed and educated till he arrived to the Age of Man, at which Time he began personally to treat with Men in his Father's behalf; and, in order to the reducing them to their bounden Duty and Allegiance to the Throne of Heaven, revealed his Mind and Will to them with his own Mouth, and pressed and enforced it upon them with the most powerful Motives that ever were urged to Mankind, and by his own own miraculous Works, and most holy Example abundantly demonstrated to them, that what he revealed to be the Will of his Father, was true and practicable. Thus far in his own Person he mediated for his Father with Men, as I shall shew more fully hereafter.

The Consideration of which ought in all Reason and Conscience, to render his Mediation more prevalent with us: For when God the Father hath condescended so far as to send down his only Son from Heaven, on an Embassy to us, to propose to us Terms of Reconciliation, who had so highly incensed and affronted him; when God the Son hath condescended so far as to clothe himself in our Nature, that therein he might endear himself to us, and thereby oblige us to listen more attentively to his gracious Proposals, what a stupendous height of Obstinacy, will it be in us to stop our Ears against him, and reject those Terms of Mercy he proposes to us, by persisting in a wilful Rebellion? Had God sent but one of the lowest Angels in Heaven to us, to promise Pardon and eternal Life to us, upon Condition we would but sincerely submit to his Will, one would have thought a Proposal so infinitely reasonable in itself, and advantageous to us, should have been embraced by us with Transports and Raptures; but to reject it now, when he hath sent it to us by his own Eternal Son, whom all his Angels adore, and by his Son incarnate in our own Natures, is such a degree of Obstinacy and Ingratitude together, as no Devil was ever guilty of. Suppose that you beheld this most glorious Person coming down to you from the Right Hand of God, to tender you a Pardon and a Crown, upon Condition you would submit to his Father's Will, and denounce everlasting Vengeance against you, if you persist in your Rebellion: would you dare, by refusing to submit, to reject that Pardon and that Crown, and defy that Vengeance to his Face? One would think it were impossible; but yet in effect you do the same thing, who believe that that Jesus, who preached this Gospel to the World sixteen hundred Years ago, was the Son of God in Human Nature, and yet obstinately refuse to submit to its Proposals. Hence from this very Topick, that God hath in these last Days spoken unto us by his own Son, Heb. i. 2. the Apostle himself makes this Inference, Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the Things which we have heard, lest at any Time we should let them slip, Heb. ii. 1.

And now having finished his Personal Treaty or Mediation with us for God, he lays the Foundation of his everlasting Intercession for us with God before our own Eyes, viz. in the Sacrifice of himself for the Sins of the World. He might, if he had pleased, have suffered Death for us in the invisible State, and receiv'd those Tortures from the malice of Devils, which were inflicted on him by the malice of devilish Men; but that would not have given so great a satisfaction to our Faith. For, for the Son of God to lay down his Life for Sinners, is such a stupendous Instance of Love, as would have exceeded the belief of Mankind, had it not been openly and visibly transacted; and therefore he rather chose to resign up himself into the Hands of the Jews his cruel Persecutors, and by them to offer up his Life upon the Cross in the Publick view of the World. And now having given this sensible evidence to our Faith that he died for us, to satisfy us farther that his Death was accepted by his Father as a full Atonement for our Sins, he rose again from the dead the third Day after his Crucifixion; which was a plain evidence that his Father was fully satisfied with what he had suffered for us, because he exacted no more, but by his Resurrection actually discharged him from any farther suffering for ever. So that the Resurrection of Christ is not only an evidence of the truth of his Religion, under which Notion I shall discourse of it hereafter, but also of the acceptance of his Sacrifice. For so the Apostle intimates in Rom. viii. 33, 34. Who then shall lay any thing to the charge of God's Elect? It is God that justifieth: Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea, rather, that is risen again, i. e. Who is there now that can presume to denounce eternal Condemnation against any good Christian, since Christ himself himself hath laid down his Life for him; yea, rather since he is risen again from the dead, and hath thereby given sufficient evidence that God hath accepted his Death as our Ransom from eternal Condemnation? And now having satisfied our Faith in these two great Points, that he died for our Sins, and that God hath accepted his Death in lieu of that eternal Punishment that was due for them, all the farther satisfaction we can ask or need, is, that, as he came down from the Father to mediate Personally with us for him, so he should return back again to the Father to mediate Personally for us with him, to exhibit and plead his meritorious Sacrifice in our behalf, and in virtue thereof to sollicite our pardon and acceptation with God. And therefore to satisfy us in this also, after he had abode some Time upon Earth after his Resurrection; and satisfied his Disciples, by frequent Converses with them, that he was really risen; and given them all necessary Orders for their future Conduct in the Propagation of his Gospel, he carried them out to Bethany, where after he had lifted up his Hands and blessed them, he ascended before their Eyes into Heaven, upon which it is said, Luke xxiv. 52. That they worshipped him, and returned to Jerusalem with great Joy; surely not because their dear Lord was gone from them, never in this World to be seen by them more, that was cause of sorrow rather than joy, to them; but because he was gone to the Right Hand of the Father, there to intercede in Person for them, and for ever to exhibit that wounded and bleeding Body of his, by which he had made expiation for the Sins of the World, and purchased the promise of the Spirit, and of eternal Life. Upon this account, indeed, they had great cause to rejoice, because now they knew they had a sure Friend in Heaven, where their main hope and interest lay, even that very Friend, who not long before had freely exposed himself to a most shameful and tormenting Death, to rescue them from Death eternal; and who, after such an Instance of Love, they could not but conclude would employ his utmost Interest with the Father in their behalf; and, in a word, who being the only begotten of the Father, whose precious Blood he had graciously accepted as a Ransom for the Sins of the World, could not but have an interest with him infinitely sufficient to obtain for them all the Graces and Favours that were fit either for them to ask, or for his Father to bestow. So that now, if we heartily comply with him as mediating for his Father with us, we have all the Encouragement in the World to depend on him as mediating for us with his Father; since he doth not mediate with him by a second hand, or at a distance, but in his own Person, in that very Person which is not only infinitely dear to the Father, as being his only begotten Son, but hath also infinitely merited of him by offering him his own Life at his Command, as a Sacrifice for the Sins of the World: And accordingly upon this Consideration the Apostle founds the hope of Christians; 1 John ii. 1, 2. My little Children, these Things write I unto you, that ye sin not; but if any Man sin, let him not presently give up himself as hopeless and irrecoverable, for we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous, and he is the Propitiation for our Sins.

VI. And Lastly, Another Thing which the Scripture proposes to our belief concerning this Mediator, is, that upon his Return from us to Heaven, there to mediate Personally for Men with God, he substituted the Divine and Omnipresent Spirit Personally to promote and effectuate his Mediation for God with Man. When he went up to Heaven, there to mediate for us with God, he did not thereby abandon his Mediation for God with us, but immediately substituted a certain mighty spiritual Being to act for him, whom he calls the Advocate, or, as we render it, the Comforter, and the Holy Ghost, and who was to mediate with Men in his behalf even as he mediated with them in the behalf of his Father, and to advocate for his Authority, as he advocated for his Father's: For so he tells his Ministers, whom he left behind him to assert and propagate his Authority in the World, I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter or Advocate, i. e. to plead for, and enforce your Ministry in in my behalf, whose Ministers you are, that he may abide with you for ever, even the Spirit of Truth, &c. I will not leave you comfortless, or without an Advocate, I will come to you, that is, by this Spirit of Truth, who is to be my Vicegerent, even as I am my Father's, John xiv. 16, 17, 18. But for the fuller Explication of this great and necessary Article, I shall, first, shew what this Divine Spirit is, which Christ hath substituted to mediate for God with us in his Absence. Secondly, I shall explain his Subordination and Substitution to Christ in this Part of his Mediation. Thirdly, I shall shew what it is that he hath done, and still continues to do, in order to the effecting this Mediation.

First, What this Divine Spirit is, which Christ hath substituted to mediate for God with us in his Absence. I answer, It is the third Person in the Trine Godhead: For that besides the Father and the Son, there is a third Divine Person subsisting in the Godhead, seems to have been a current Doctrine among the antient Writers, both (d) Gentile and Jewish (e), and is more plainly and expressly asserted in holy Scripture; which third Person is known in Scripture by the Name of the Holy Ghost, or the Spirit of the Lord; for that the Holy Ghost, so often named in the New Testament, is the same with the Spirit of the Lord, so much celebrated in the Old, St. Peter expressly asserts, 2 Pet. i. 2. For the Prophecy came not in old time by the Will of Man, but holy Men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost; from which Words it is evident, that this Holy Ghost, whom St. Peter here mentions, is the very same with that Holy Spirit, or Spirit of the Lord, by whom, as we are told in the Old Testament, the antient Prophets were inspired, vid. Isa. lxiii. 11. 2 Sam. xxiii. 2. Mic. ii. 7. and abundance of other Places; and accordingly St. Peter applies that Prophecy of Joel ii. 28. I will pour out my Spirit upon all Flesh, to that miraculous Descent of the Holy Ghost on the Day of Pentecost, Acts ii. 16, 17. But this is that, saith he, which was spoken by the Prophet Joel, &c. which could not be true, if St. Peter's Holy Ghost were not the same with Joel's Spirit of the Lord. But it is most certain that the Holy Ghost, whom St. Peter and the New Testament so often mention, was, in the first place, a real Person, and not a meer Quality, as the Socinians vainly dream: For so we every where find personal Properties and Actions attributed to him. Thus he is said to speak, Acts xxviii. 25. and Heb. iii. 7. yea, and his Speeches are frequently recorded; so Acts x. 20. The Spirit said unto Peter, Arise therefore, get thee down, and go with them, for I have sent thee; and Acts xiii. 2. The Holy Ghost said, separate me Barnabas and Saul, for the Work whereunto I have called them; and how can we, without horrible Force to such plain, historical Relations, which ought to be literal and not figurative, attribute these Speeches to a meer Virtue or Quality? And elsewhere he is said to reprove the World, John xvi. 8. and to search into and know the deep Things of God, 1 Cor. ii. 10, 11. and to divide his Gifts severally to every Man as he will, 1 Cor. xii. 11. And not only so, but such Things and Actions are attributed to him, as can in no Sense be attributed to the Father; which would be Nonsense, if he were only the Virtue or Power of the Father, and not a real Person, distinct from him. Thus the Holy Ghost is said to come, as sent from the Father, in the Name of Christ, John xiv. 26. and in John xvi. he is said to come, as sent from Christ, ver. 7. and when he comes, Christ promises them, that he shall guide them into all Truth, for he shall not speak of himself, saith he, but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak, ver. 13. Again, he shall glorify me, saith Christ, for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you, ver. 14. And to name no more, the Holy Ghost is said to make Intercession for the Saints, according to the Will of God, Rom. viii. 27. none of which Things can in any tolerable Sense be said of God the Father. Since therefore not only personal Actions, but such personal Actions also as cannot be attributed to the Father, are frequently attributed to the Holy Ghost; it hence necessarily follows, that he is not merely the Virtue or Power of the Father, but a distinct Principle ciple of Action from him, that acts from and by himself, and consequently is a real Person or Subsistence.

It being evident therefore, from what hath been said, that the Spirit of the Lord in the Old Testament, is the same with the Holy Ghost in the New, and that the Holy Ghost in the New is a real Person distinct from the Father; it hence follows in the second Place, that this Holy Ghost is a Divine Person, because in the Scripture-Forms of Baptism and Benediction, he is always ranked with Divine Persons, viz. the Father and the Son; thus Baptism is in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, Matth. xxviii. 19. And, the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the Love of God, and the Communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all, is the usual Form of Benediction, 2 Cor. xiii. 14. Now that the Father is a Divine Person, all acknowledge, and that the Son is so too, hath been proved at large; and therefore since the Holy Ghost is ranked with the Father and the Son, both in our Baptismal Dedication and Form of Benediction, that is a sufficient Evidence that he is a Divine Person also: For what likelihood is there, that in such solemn Acts of Religion, a meer Creature should be taken into Copartnership with the Divine Father and Son? But besides, both in the Old and New Testament, divine Actions and Perfections are attributed to him. Thus in Job xxxiii. 4. Creation is attributed to him. The Spirit of God hath made me, and the Breath of the Almighty hath given me Life. So also Job xxvi. 13. By his Spirit he hath garnished the Heavens. Since therefore to create is a divine Act, and since every Act flows from the Essence of the Agent; it follows that the Essence of this Spirit, from which this divine Act of Creation flows, is Divine. Again, in Psal. cxxxix. 7. Omnipresence is attributed to this divine Spirit, Whither shall I go from thy Spirit? And if there be no Place whither we can go from him, as the Question plainly implies there is not, then he must necessarily fill all Places, and be Omnipresent. So again, 1 Cor. ii. 10. Omniscience is attributed to him, for the Spirit searcheth all Things, yea, the deep Things of God; and that by searching here is not meant Inquiry, but Knowledge and Comprehension, the next Verse will inform us, For what Man knows the Things of a Man, save the Spirit of a Man which is in him? Even so the Things of God knoweth no Man, save the Spirit of God. If then the Spirit's Search be Knowledge, and his Knowledge comprehends all Things, what else is this but Omniscience? And as the Actions and Attributes, which the Scripture attributes to the Holy Ghost are Divine, so are the Honours also: For so 1 Cor. vi. 19. our Bodies are said to be the Temples of the Holy Ghost which is in us; now since there is nothing can make a Temple, which as such is the House of God, but only the Inhabitation of a Divine Person, and since no Person can have right to the Honour of a Temple, which, as such, is made for divine Worship, but he to whom divine Worship is due; it will hence necessarily follow, both that the Holy Ghost is a divine Person, and that he hath right to divine Worship; and accordingly, 1 Cor. iii. 16. the Apostle makes the Inhabitation of God's Spirit in us to be that which constitutes us Temples of God; but how could his Spirit's dwelling in us, constitute us Temples of God, unless he himself were God?

Besides all which he is in express Words affirmed to be God: So in 2 Cor. iii. 15, 16, 17. Even unto this Day, when Moses is read, the Veil is upon their Hearts; nevertheless when it shall turn to the Lord, the Veil shall be taken away; now the Lord is that Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is Liberty; in which Words the Apostle, as all agree, refers to Exod. xxxiv. 34. When Moses went in before the Lord to speak with him, he took the Veil off until he came out; from whence I argue, that that Lord whom Moses went in to speak with was Jehovah, the true God; this Jehovah, the Apostle tells us, is that Spirit; this Spirit he also tells us is the Spirit of the Lord, or the Holy Ghost, therefore the Holy Ghost is Jehovah, the true God. So also Acts v. 3, 4. Why hath Satan filled thy Heart to lye unto the Holy Ghost, &c. Thou hast not lyed unto Men, but unto God, i. e. in Lying to the Holy Ghost, who is God; for if he were not God, as we are sure he is not Man, it might as well have been said, thou hast not lyed unto Men only, no, nor to the Holy Ghost only, but unto God; and indeed it ought to be so expressed, supposing that, by the Holy Ghost and God, he did not mean the same thing; because the Design of the Words was to aggravate Ananias's Crime, from the Consideration of the Greatness of the Person against whom it was committed; and therefore, had the Holy Ghost been any thing less than God, as we are sure the Apostles were, to whom the Lye was immediately told, he ought to have pursued the Gradation as well to the Holy Ghost as to Men; and then it must have been, it was not merely to Men that thou didst lye, no, nor to the Holy Ghost merely, but to God himself; since therefore he places the Aggravation of his lying to the Holy Ghost in this only, that he lied not unto Men but unto God, it is plain, that by the Holy Ghost and God, he meant the same thing. From all which Testimonies it is very apparent, that this great Spirit or Holy Ghost, whom Christ hath substituted to carry on his Mediation for God with Men in his Absence, is no other than the third divine Person subsisting in the eternal Godhead. And indeed, considering the mighty Part he was to act, viz. to mediate under Christ for God with Men, the same Reasons which rendered it necessary for Christ to be God, to qualify him for this Office, vide Page 534. do render it altogether as necessary for the Holy Ghost to be so. And indeed how is it possible he should operate upon so many Men together, at such remote Distances, as he is obliged to do by his Office, and at once move every Member of that vast Body of Christ, the Catholick Church, dispers'd over the Face of the whole Earth, unless like an Omnipresent Soul, he be diffused thro' the whole, and coexists with every Part; and if he be Omnipresent, he must be God.

And now having given an Account of the Person and Quality of this Divine Spirit, I proceed,

Secondly, To explain his Subordination and Substitution to Christ, in this part of his Mediatorship for God with Men. In order to which, it is to be considered, that this Subordination of the sacred Persons in the Holy Trinity, proceeds not from any Inequality of Essence, but from the Inequality of their personal Properties: For, as to their Essence, they are all of them God, i. e. infinite in Being and Perfections; and being infinite, they must all be equal, there being no such thing as more or less in Infinity; and then being equal in Essence, they must necessarily be equal in essential Power and Dominion; and consequently, as such, are no way subject or subordinate to one another: but, as to their personal Properties, it cannot be denied but they are unequal; for the Father who begot, must in that respect be superior to the Son, who was begotten; and the Holy Ghost who proceeded, must in that respect be inferior to the Father and Son, from whom he proceeded; and upon this Inequality their Subordination is founded: For as there is a stated Number in the Trinity, by which the sacred Persons are determined to Three, so there is also a stated Order, by which they are ranked into a First, a Second, and a Third; which Order is not made by mutual Consent or arbitrary Constitution, but founded in the Nature of those personal Properties, by which they are distinguished from one another: For as the Father, being the Fountain of Godhead to the Son, must be first in order of Nature; and as the Son together with the Father was the Fountain of Godhead to the Holy Ghost, and therefore must be second to the Father, and in order of Nature before the Holy Ghost; so the Holy Ghost proceeding from the Father and the Son, must of the Three be in order of Nature the Third: For so the Scripture expressly asserts, that he proceeded from the Father, John xv. 26. and also that he is the Spirit of the Son, Gal. iv. 6. and the Spirit of Christ, Rom. viii. 9. and the Spirit of Jesus Christ, Phil. i. 19. And being the Spirit both of the Father and the Son, he must be supposed to proceed from both. And where-ever the Holy Ghost is in the Old Testament called the Spirit of God, it is in the Hebrew Ruach Elohim in the Plural, which seems to intimate that he proceeded not from one, but from two divine Persons, i. e. not from the Father alone, but from the Son also. So that tho, as to their Godhead, they are all equal, yet in order of Nature, and in respect of their personal Properties, the third is inferior, the second superior, and the first supreme; and being unequal in those personal Properties, by which they stand related to each other, it is very reasonable that, according to these their personal Inequalities, they should be subordinate to one another; and consequently that the Father, who is the Fountain of the Divinity, should be supreme in the Divine Monarchy; and that the Son, who was begotten of him, should minister to him; and that the Holy Ghost, who proceeded from the Father and the Son, should minister to both. And accordingly in all its external Actions and Administrations, this hath ever been the Oeconomy of the Holy Trinity, for the Father to act by the Ministry of the Son, and the Son by the Ministry of the Holy Ghost: For so, before the Fall of Man, and consequently, before this Mediation of the Son commenced, it is evident, that even in creating the World, the Father acted by the Son, and therefore is said to have made the World by him, Heb. i. 2. and the Son acted by the Spirit, who is said to have moved upon the Face of the Chaos, Gen. i. 2. For that by the Spirit of God there is meant the third Person in the Holy Trinity, we have reason to believe, because he is elsewhere said to have made Man, and to have garnished the Heavens, as hath been already shewn. And in the same Method of Subordination the Godhead hath always proceeded in its Transactions with the World, and that more especially and remarkably in this great Affair of mediating with Mankind; wherein the Father hath always used the Ministry of the Son, and the Son the Ministry of the Holy Ghost. But in the Matter of the Mediation, it is evident, that this Subordination of these sacred Persons was founded not only in these their personal Inequalities, but also in a mutual Agreement between them, in which the Son agreed with the Father, that, in case he would be so far reconciled to Rebellious Mankind, as to grant them a Covenant of Mercy, and therein, among other Blessings, to promise them his Holy Spirit, he himself would assume our Natures, and therein not only treat with us personally, in order to the reducing us to our bounden Allegiance, but also die a Sacrifice for our Sins; upon which Agreement, the Father, long before the Son had actually performed his Part of it, even from our first Apostasy, granted his Spirit to Mankind, which Spirit was granted to this end, that under the Son he should mediate with Men, in order to the reducing them to their due Subjection to the Father: For all that heavenly Influence, which the Holy Ghost sheds forth upon the Minds of Men, is wholly Mediatorial in God's behalf, and in order to the reconciling Mens Minds to him; and therefore in this his Mediation, he must be supposed to act in Subordination to the Son, who is supreme Mediator; and accordingly, as the Son hath been, and will be always mediating with Men by this blessed Spirit, even from his Ascension to the End of the World, so I make no doubt but he always mediated with them by the same Spirit, even from the Fall of Man to his Incarnation: For so in the Time of the Old World, we read of the Spirit's striving with Men, i. e. in order to the subduing their stubborn Wills to a due Subjection to the Will of the Father, Gen. vi. 3. In doing of which, 'he even then mediated for God with Men, under the Great Mediator, and so he hath continued to do thro' all successive Ages of the World: For there is nothing more apparent from Scripture, than that it is under Christ, that the Spirit acts in the Kingdom of God, upon which account he is called the Spirit of Christ, 1 Pet. i. 11. even as by the antient Jews he is called the Spirit of the Messias, as was observed before; and this Spirit, whom St. Peter calls the Spirit of Christ, was, as he himself there tells us, the Spirit which was in the antient Prophets; by which it is evident, that long before Christ came, this Spirit was his, and that he acted by him. And even when he came down into the World to transact personally with Men, he generally acted by this Holy Spirit:

For so at his Baptism we are told, that the Holy Ghost descended on him in a bodily shape, Luke iii. 22. upon which it is said, that he went away full of the Holy Ghost, Luke iv. 1. after which it is plain, that it was by this Holy Ghost in him, that he prophefied and wrought his Miracles; for so Isa. lxi. 1. the Prophet attributes the whole Prophecy of Christ to the Spirit of the Lord which was upon him; and in Mat. xii. 28. our Saviour himself affirms, that he cast out Devils by the Spirit of God, and therefore he calls the Jews attributing his miraculous Works to the Devil, blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, Mat. xii. 31. because it was by the Power of the Holy Ghost that he wrought them. Now as the Father's acting by the Son implies the Son's Subordination to him; so the Son's acting by the Spirit, implies the Spirit's Subordination to him; which Subordination of the Spirit in his Mediatorial Office is immediately founded in that Compact of the Son with the Father, upon which he undertook the Mediation. For the Spirit was a part of the Purchase of the Son's Blood, and whatsoever he purchased, he purchased of the Father by compact and agreement with him; so that now he hath a right to the Spirit's Ministry, not only by virtue of his proceeding from him, together with the Father, but also by the purchase of his own Blood, whereby he obtained the promise of him from the Father. For so the Holy Ghost is said to be shed on us abundantly thro' Jesus Christ our Saviour, i. e. thro' the Intercession he makes in virtue of his meritorious Sacrifice, Tit. iii. 5, 6. For whatsoever comes to us from God thro' Christ, is part of what he hath purchased for us; and in Rom. v. 5, 6. he makes Christ's dying for the ungodly, the reason of the giving the Holy Ghost to us. The promise of the Holy Ghost therefore, being part of the Purchase of Christ's Blood, he, by his Advocation in Heaven, obtained the performance of it of the Father, even as he doth the performance of all his other Promises. For the Father being the supreme Person in the Holy Trinity, is the prime and original Fountain of all our Blessings, and every good thing we receive is derived from him to us thro' the Son, and by the Holy Ghost; and even the Holy Ghost himself is derived to us from the Father thro' the Advocacy of the Son. For so he himself tells us, I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, namely, the Holy Ghost, John xiv. 16. So that tho Christ hath purchased the Holy Ghost of the Father, as he hath also all the other Blessings of the New Covenant, yet it is plain this Purchase vests him not with a right to bestow and send him without the Father, but only to obtain him, of the Father, upon his Prayer or Advocation; and so of all those other Blessings. So that still the Father is the supreme Source from whence the Spirit and all those Blessings are derived to us; and it is from his Hands that the Son procures them by his powerful Intercession; in short therefore, Christ by his Death purchased a right of the Father to obtain of him, by his Intercession, Authority to send the Holy Ghost to minister for and under him, in his Mediation for God with Men; and accordingly he promises his Disciples that when he departed this World, he would send the Comforter to them, John. xvi. 7. where he uses the very same Phrase as he did when he commissioned his Apostles to minister under him, As the Father hath sent me, so send I you, John xx. 21. and accordingly his sending the Comforter must denote his Commissioning him by the Authority he had received from the Father to minister under him in his Mediation for the Father. For so in John xv. 26. When the Comforter is come, whom I will send to you from the Father, even the Spirit of Truth which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me: Where first, the Son is said to commission or send him; Secondly, to commission or send him from the Father, i. e. by Authority from him; and Thirdly, to commission or send him to testify of him, and therein to minister to him; and so in Luke xxiv. 49. when he was just ascending into Heaven, he tells his Disciples, Behold I send the Promise of my Father upon you, i. e. the Promise of the Holy Ghost; and accordingly Acts ii. 33. St. Peter tells us, upon that miraculous descent of the Holy Ghost, that Christ being exalted to the right hand of God,

God, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, (i. e. having by his Intercession received Authority of the Father to send the Holy Ghost, according to that Promise which he had before purchased of him with his Blood) he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear, i. e. this miraculous Gift of the Holy Ghost. In all which Places it is evident, that the Holy Ghost was substituted, commissioned, and sent by the Son, authorized thereunto by the Father, to minister under him. For as the Son acts by the Father's Authority; as he is his Minister, so 'all that Authority which he communicates to others to act under him, he must derive originally from the Father, and consequently that Authority by which he sent the Spirit to act as his Minister, he must have deriv'd from the Father, whose Minister himself is; and hence the Father is said to send the Spirit in the name of the Son, that is, to appoint the Spirit to act under the Son, and by his authority, John xiv. 26. as the Son is said to send the Spirit from the Father, i. e. by the authority which he had received of the Father; and this, I verily believe, is the reason why the Apostle in Eph. iv. 8. quotes the Psalmist with that variation, he ascended up on high, saith he, speaking of Christ, he led Captivity Captive, he gave Gifts unto Men, whereas the Words of the Psalmist are, He received Gifts for Men, Psal. lxxviii. 18. to denote that that Gift of the Holy Ghost which Christ gave to his Church, was nothing but what he himself had first received from the Father: so that tho it was from the Father that the Son had his Authority to send the Holy Ghost; yet it was from the Son that the Holy Ghost had his Mission immediately. And accordingly you may observe, that after Christ's departure from this World, the Holy Ghost acted immediately under Christ, as the supreme Vicegerent of his Kingdom. For next and immediately under Christ he authorized the Bishops and Governors of the Church, and constituted them Overseers of the Flock of Christ, Acts xx. 28. It was he that chose their Persons, and appointed them their Work, Acts xiii. 2. and gave them their several Orders and Directions, Acts xv. 28. and xvi. 6. in all which it is evident he acted under Christ, and still continues to act as his supreme Substitute and Vicegerent; and accordingly he is stiled by Tertullian, the Vicarious Virtue or Power, as he was the supreme Vicar and Substitute of Christ in mediating for God with Men; so that now the Holy Ghost is subordinate to the Son, not only by virtue of his Procession from him together with the Father, but also by virtue of his being purchased and obtained by him of the Father by his meritorious Death and Intercession. I proceed,

III. To shew what it is that this Holy Spirit hath done, and still continues doing in order to the effectuating this his Mediation. For there are some Things which he hath done, and now ceases to do, and some Things which he hath always done, and will still continue doing to the end of the World; of both which I shall give some brief account in order to the fuller explication of the Ministry of the Holy Ghost, under Jesus the great Mediator. First therefore, there are some Things which he hath done, and now ceases to do, and of this sort were those extraordinary Operations he performed in order to the Planting and Propagating Christ's Gospel in the World, upon and after that his Miraculous Descent, of which we read in Acts ii. For when Christ was departing from his Disciples into Heaven, he ordered them to stay at Jerusalem, and not to undertake that mighty work of Planting his Gospel thro' the World, till they were endued with Power from on High, Luke xxiv. 49. which Power from on High was no other than that miraculous Assistance which upon his Descent the Holy Ghost did afterwards vouchsafe them; upon which Order they return to Jerusalem, and there continue till the Day of Pentecost, Fasting and Praying together in an upper Room; when all on a sudden the Holy Ghost descended upon them in a visible Body of bright shining Fire, and endowed them with all those Heavenly Powers which were requisite to qualify them for the Propagation of Christ's Gospel thro' the the World. For as they were to be the first Planters of the Gospel, it was requisite, First, that they should be able to speak the several Languages of those Nations to whom they were to preach; Secondly, that they should be fully and clearly instructed in the Doctrines which they were to preach; Thirdly, that they should be able to give the most convincing evidence of the truth and divinity of their Doctrines; Fourthly, that they should be conducted by Infallible Advice thro' all the emergent Difficulties of their Ministry; against all which Necessities the Holy Ghost abundantly supplied them: For,

First, He inspired them with the Gift of Languages, without which they must have spent a great Part of their Lives, before they could have been capable of preaching the Gospel to the World, in learning the several Languages of the several Nations they were to preach to; which must have very much retarded the Progress of the Gospel. And therefore the Holy Ghost upon this his miraculous Descent, did in an instant infuse into them the Habit of speaking several Languages; insomuch that all of a sudden, and without any Rules of Grammar or previous Instructions, they were heard to speak, to the great Astonishment of their Auditors, in the fifteen several Tongues of fifteen several Nations, Acts ii: 4. &c. And tho they were immediately disperſed abroad in the World, and some of them into remote Countries, whose Names perhaps they had never heard of, yet still, where-ever they came, they were inspired with the Language of the Country, which they spake as freely as their own Mother-Tongue. And this was a vast advantage to them in their Ministry, because they were not only enabled by it to preach the Gospel to all Nations, but were enabled in such a manner, as gave a mighty confirmation to their Doctrine. For their very Gift of speaking, being a miraculous effect of Divine Power, was an undeniable Demonstration that what they spake was Divine.

Secondly, The Holy Ghost fully and clearly instructed them in the Doctrines which they were to preach; and this was no more than what was necessary. For what they preached, who were the first Planters of the Gospel, was to be the Standard of Truth and Falshood to all succeeding Generations, and therefore it was highly necessary, that they should be fully and clearly instructed in the Doctrine of the Gospel, that so their Successors in all Ages, might safely rely on their Authority. But whilst they were under the Personal Discipline of our Saviour, who instructed them by Human Methods, i. e. by proposing his Doctrine to their Ears, and thro' their Mediation to their Understandings, it is plain they made but very slow and slender Improvements. For after all his Pains with them, they continued very ignorant of some of the most material Articles of Faith, and at best they had but gross Apprehensions of the nature of Christ's Kingdom, and of the Ends and Reasons of his Death, and were very diffident even of his Resurrection; and the Reason was, that Christ taught them as a Man doth a Man, i. e. by Words, which are only the audible Images and Representations of Things, which being liable to misapprehension and oblivion, some of them they utterly forgot, and some of them they grossly misunderstood. But when the Spirit came upon them, a wondrous Light broke all of a sudden into their Understandings, by which they discovered farther into the Gospel-Mysteries in an instant, than they had done under all our Saviour's teaching. For, tho the Spirit taught them no new Doctrines, but did only repeat and explain to them what our Saviour had taught them before, (for he shall receive of mine, saith Christ, i. e. of my Doctrine, and shall shew, or explain it unto you) yet it is evident, he taught them much more effectually than our Saviour. For he spake not to their Ears, but to their Minds, and represented Things more nakedly and immediately to their Understandings; he conversed with their Spirits, even as Spirits do with Spirits, without involving his sense in articulate sounds; or material Representations, but objected it to them in its own naked light, and characterized he was invested, was given him by Prophecy, i. e. by the immediate Direction of the Holy Ghost; and St. Clemens, who was a Disciple of the Apostles, tells us, that in those Times they ordained Bishops, πνεύματι δοκιμάζοντες, discerning by the Spirit, who should be ordained; and again, that they did it, πρὸ γνῶσις ἀληθῆς τῆς αἰτίας, having a perfect Fore-knowledge who they should choose. And thus also for composing the Differences which arose between their Jewish and Gentile Converts, they had the immediate Advice of the Holy Ghost, who directed them to that wise Expedient, Acts xv. 28. by which the Peace of the Church was secured for the present, and afterwards maintained in despite of all the Attempts of seditious Incendiaries to break and divide it. And thus having recourse upon all Occasions to this infallible Guide, they were never at a loss either what to say, or how to behave themselves; the Holy Ghost making good to them what our Saviour had promised them, When they bring you before Magistrates, take no thought what ye shall answer, for the Holy Ghost shall teach you at the same Hour what ye ought to say, Luke xii. 11, 12.

These are the extraordinary Things which the Holy Ghost acted for and under Christ, in order to the planting and propagating his Gospel thro' the World, and which he continued to act so long as it was necessary for that end: For as for the first, the Gift of Tongues, it seems to have been continued no longer than till the Gospel had been preached to, and some Converts made in the several Nations, the First-fruits of whom were always ordained to the Work of the Ministry; and when once the several Nations had Natives of their own to preach the Gospel to them in their own Languages, there was no farther Necessity of this miraculous Gift of Tongues. And then as for the second, the Gift of Revelation, it seems to have been continued no longer than till the whole New Testament was revealed, and the several Parts of it were collected into one Volume, and distributed to the several Churches; after which there was no farther Necessity of any new Revelation. But as for the third, the Gift of Miracles, it seems to have been continued much longer than either of the former, as indeed there was longer Occasion for it, especially for that of ejecting evil Spirits, who for many Ages, had been the Gods of the World, and detecting their Frauds and Impostures, that so by beholding the manifold Triumphs of Christ's Power over them, the Heathen might be at length convinced of the Falseness of their own Religion, and of the Truth of Christ's; and accordingly this Gift, as I shall shew hereafter, was continued in the Church for above Two hundred Years together, till it had wrought its designed effect, i. e. had sufficiently detected the Fraud and Malice of those Idol-Gods, to the Conviction of all that were convincible, and then it was withdrawn as being no farther necessary. And then as for the last, viz. the Gift of Counsel and Direction, it seems to have been continued no longer than till the Government of the Church was every where established, and its Affairs reduced into a stated Course and Method, by which sufficient Provision being made against those emergent Difficulties, with which the State of Christianity was perplexed, this Gift also ceased, together with the Reason and Necessity of it. Thus by these extraordinary Gifts and Operations the Holy Ghost continued to sollicit the Cause of Christ and his Religion in the World, till by their invincible Evidence he had baffled the Malice and Prejudice of a deluded World, and captivated Mankind into the Belief and Obedience of the Gospel; and this being effected, he discontinued those Extraordinaries, and now proceeds to solicit the same Cause in a more ordinary and standing Way and Method, viz. by Cooperating with Mens Minds and Wills in a more human and regular manner, by joining in with their Reason, and thereby influencing their Wills and Affections; which brings me to the

2. Second sort of the Holy Ghost's Operations, viz. that which he ordinarily doth, and always hath done, and will always continue so do: For, upon the Cessation of these his miraculous Operations, the Holy Ghost did not wholly withdraw himself from Mankind, but he still continues mediating with us, under

under Christ, in order to the reconciling our Wills and Affections to God, and subduing that inveterate Malice and Enmity against him, which our degenerate Nature hath contracted: For it is by this blessed Spirit that Christ hath promised to be with us to the End of the World, Mat. xxviii. 20. and Christ himself hath assured us, that upon his Ascension into Heaven, he would pray his Father, and he should give us another Comforter, meaning this Holy Ghost, that he might abide with us for ever, John xiv. 16. and accordingly the Holy Ghost is vitally united to the Church of Christ, even as Souls are united to their Bodies: For as there is one Body, i. e. Church, so there is one Spirit, i. e. one Holy Ghost which animates that Body, Eph. iv. 4. and hence the Unity of the Church is in the foregoing Verse called the Unity of the Spirit; because as the Soul, by diffusing itself thro' all the Parts of the Body, unites them together, and keeps them from flying abroad, and dispersing into Atoms; so the Holy Spirit by diffusing himself thro'out this mystical Body, joins and unites all its Parts together, and makes it one separate and individual Corporation. So that, when by Baptism we are once incorporated into this Body, we are intitled to, and do at least, de jure, participate of the vital Influence of the Holy Ghost, who is the Soul of it; and accordingly, as Baptism joins us to that Body, of which this Divine Spirit is the Soul; so it also conveys that Divine Spirit to us. So that as in natural Bodies, those Ligaments which unite and tie the Parts to one another, do also convey Life and Spirit to them all; so also in this mystical Body, those federal Rites of Baptism and the Lord's Supper, which are, as it were, its Nerves and Arteries, that join and confederate its Members to one another, are also the Conveyances of that spiritual Life from the Holy Ghost, which moves and aetuates them all. And hence the washing of Regeneration, and the renewing of the Holy Ghost, the being born of Water and of the Holy Ghost, are put together as concurrent Things; and in Acts ii. 38. Baptism is affirmed to be necessary to our receiving the Holy Ghost; and if by Baptism we receive the Holy Ghost, that is, a Right and Title to his Grace and Influence, then must the Holy Ghost be still supposed vitally united to the Church, whereof we are made Members by our Baptism, and like an Omnipresent Soul, to be diffused all thro' it, and to move and aetuate every part of it by his heavenly Grace and Influence.

It is true, he doth not move and aetuate us by mere Force and irresistible Power, so as to necessitate us, or to determine our natural Liberty one way or t'other, nor doth he ordinarily work upon Men in such a strange and miraculous way as he did in the first Ministration of the Gospel, when he frequently transformed Men, in an instant, from Beasts and Devils into Saints, and, as it were, at one Act, turned the whole Tide of their Natures into a quite contrary Current: For so Origen against Celsus very often triumphs in these sudden and miraculous Conversions, wrought by the Christian Religion; so lib. i. p. 21. Should any Man, saith he, release Mens Souls from all sorts of Wickedness, from Lust, and Unrighteousness, and Contempt of God, and this but in an hundred Instances, surely no Man would imagine that he could ever have inspired so many Men with Reasons strong enough to conquer so many Vices without a Divine Assistance; but if you inquire into the Lives of those that have embraced Christianity, you will find that whereas before they lived in all Impurities and Lusts, ἐξ ἧ δὲ παραλήφασιν τὸν λόγον, τίνα τρεῖς ἡμέρας ἔμενον ἀποκρίσεις καὶ σιωπώτεροι καὶ ἐυσταθέστεροι, i. e. from that very time wherein they received the Word, how much more equal and temperate, serious and constant are they grown? So again, lib. 2. p. 78. in Answer to Celsus, who calls Christianity a pestilent Doctrine, neither Jew, saith he, nor any one else can ever make it out, ὅτι ὁ λαὸς τοσούτους ἀνθρώπους ἐπιστρέφει ἀπὸ τῆς κακίας καὶ κακῶν ἐπὶ τῇ κατὰ φύσιν μετὰ σωφροσύνης καὶ ἡμετέρας βίον, i. e. that a pestilent Doctrine should so wonderfully convert the most profligate Persons that embraced it, to a Life most suitable to Nature and Reason, and all manner of Virtue. Such were the miraculous Operations of the Holy Ghost in those Days, as to transport Men, in an instant, from an inveterate Habit of Wickedness to a Habit of Piety and Virtue : For so Lactantius de fals. sup. lib. 3. c. 26. What a mighty Influence the divine Precepts have upon Mens Souls daily experience shews : For, saith he, Da mihi virum qui sit iracundus, maledicus, effrenatus; paucissimis Dei verbis tam placidum quam ovem reddam : da cupidum, avarum, tenacem ; jam tibi eum liberalem dabo & pecuniam suam plenimanibus largientem : da timidum doloris ac mortis ; jam cruces & ignes & taurum contemnet : dalibidinosum, adulterum, ganeonem ; jam sobrium, castum, continentem videbis : da crudelem, & sanguinis appetentem ; jam in veram clementiam furor ille mutabitur : da injustum, insipientem, peccatorem ; continuò & æquus & prudens & innocens erit. i. e. Give me a Man who is wrathful, reproachful, ungovernable, and with a few Words of God, I will render him as placid as a Lamb ; give me a covetous, a niggardly and tenacious Man, I will return him to thee liberal, and distributing his Money with a bountiful Hand ; give me one that is timorous of Grief and Death, he shall despise all manner of Torment ; give me one that is lustful, adulterous, and a Buffoon, you shall presently see him sober, chaste, and continent ; give me one that is cruel and thirsty of Blood, his Fury shall be immediately converted into Pity and Clemency ; give me one that is unjust, foolish, and criminal, and he shall be presently rendred just, prudent, and innocent : Which wondrous Changes were so very frequent in the Primitive Times, that the Heathens, as St. Austin hath observed, were very much amazed at them, and therefore attributed them to the Power of Magick, thinking it impossible they should ever be effected without the Assistance of some very powerful Spirit.

But since Christianity hath been spread thro' the World, and prevailed so far as to be the Religion of Nations, the Divine Spirit doth not ordinarily work upon Men in such a strange and miraculous way, nor produce in them such sudden Changes and instantaneous Conversions ; but proceeds more gradually, and more suitably to the Methods of Human Nature, by joining in with our Understandings, and leading us on by Reason and Perswasion from Acts to Dispositions, and from Dispositions to Habits of Piety. So that whatsoever Grace he now affords us, it ordinarily works on us in the same way, and after the same manner, as if all were performed by the Strength of our own Reason ; so that in the Renovation of our Natures, we cannot certainly distinguish what is done by the Spirit, from what is done by our natural Reason and Conscience cooperating with him ; only this we do most certainly know, that in this blessed Work the Spirit is the main and principal Agent ; that without him we can do nothing ; and that he is the Author and Finisher of our Faith, who worketh in us to will and to do according to his own pleasure ; but yet that he doth not work upon us as a Mechanick upon dead Materials ; but as upon living and free Agents, that can and must cooperate with him ; that he acts not on us by any necessary Causality, but in such a way as is fairly consistent with the natural Liberty of our Wills ; and doth not renew us whether we will or no, but takes our free Consent and Endeavour along with him ; and that having done all on his part, that is necessary to persuade us, he expects that we should consider what he saith, and upon that, consent to his gracions Motions, and express this Consent in a constant Course of holy and virtuous Endeavour ; and that unless we do thus concur with him, we shall for ever remain and perish in our Sin, notwithstanding all that Grace which he affords us. But as for the particular manner of the Holy Ghost's Operation on our Mind, it is not to be expected that we, who know so little of the Nature and Intercourse of Spirits, should be able to render a clear and distinct Account of it ; only thus much may be said, that our Soul being a thinking Spirit, whose very Essence consists in a Power or principle of Cogitation, seems naturally incapable of any other Passion from any external Agent, but only the Impression of Thoughts : For how can a Spirit, whose very Essence is thinking, be any other-wise affected by any thing without it, but only by being made to think, or by having such Thoughts and Considerations impress'd on it? And by the same reason that Bodies, which are material Substances, are impressible only by Matter, Souls which are thinking Substances, must be impressible only by Thought. And hence we find by Experience, that there is no Object we converse with can any otherwise affect our Mind, than by suggesting such Thoughts and Cogitations to it; and that all the Pleasure and Torment of our Minds consists in joyful and tormenting Thoughts; which are plain Arguments that our Mind is a sort of Being, which nothing but Thought can strike or touch, and which hath no sense or feeling of any thing, but only of dreadful or hopeful, pleasant or painful Cogitations. And if this be so, then the way of the Holy Spirit's working upon our Minds, supposing that he works suitably to their Natures, must be by inspiring or impressing them with Thoughts: For as he is an infinite Spirit, he is always and every where present with our Spirits, and hath an immediate Access to them, by Virtue of which he can speak to our Minds whenever and whatever he pleases, and also urge what he speaks with that Life and Power, as to excite our most serious Consideration and Attention; and by this it is that he ordinarily works upon us, in order to the reducing us to God, viz. by inspiring such good Thoughts into our Minds, as are most apt to move and perswade us to believe and obey the Gospel, and by a continued Repetition of them urging and pressing them upon us, in order to the reducing our vain and roving Minds to a fixed and serious Attention to them: For it is very apparent that our Faith and all our good Resolutions are the immediate Effects of deep and serious Consideration. I considered my Ways, saith David, and turned my Feet unto thy Testimonies. So that in reducing us to God, the great Work of the Spirit is to reduce us to a fixed and steady Consideration: which being once effected, there naturally follows a good Resolution, unless the Will be invincibly obstinate; and to this as naturally succeeds the actual Return of the Soul to God. Now to reduce us to this fixed Consideration, the Holy Ghost, in the first place, suggests good Thoughts to our Minds; and then to keep our Minds fixed and intent on them, that so our worldly Cares or Pleasures may not divert us from them, he most importunately urges and repeats the same Thoughts, or seconds them with a train and succession of new ones to the same purpose: so that unless we are incorrigibly obstinate against all good Motions, we cannot avoid admitting them into our most serious Consideration; and when they are there, they cannot fail of raising in us good Desires and Affections, which if we carefully cherish, will soon determine in holy Purposes and Resolutions. In all which Things, you see, it is only by Impression of Thoughts, that the Holy Spirit operates on our Minds. But this will more plainly appear, by considering those particular Operations on our Minds, which the Scripture attributes to the Holy Ghost, all which may be ranked under these Five Heads;
by

1. Illumination.
2. Sanctification.
3. Quickning or Excitation.
4. Comforting or Supporting.
5. Intercession.

First, Illumination, or Informing our Minds with the light of heavenly Truth; thus Eph. i. 17, 18. the Apostle prays, that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of Glory, would give unto them the Spirit of Wisdom and Revelation in the Knowledge of him, that the Eyes of their Understanding being enlightned, they might know what is the Hope of Christ's Calling, and what the Riches of the Glory of his Inheritance in the Saints; and 1 Cor. ii. 12. we are told, that it is by receiving the Spirit of God that we know the Things that are freely given us of God. Now this Illumination of the Spirit is two-fold; First, External, by that Revelation which he hath given us of God's Mind and Will in the holy Scripture, and that miraculous Evidence, by which he sealed and attested it; for all Scripture is given by Inspiration of God, 2 Tim. iii. 16. or, as it is elsewhere expressed was delivered by by holy Men, as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, 2 Pet. i. 21. And all those miraculous Testimonies we have to the Truth and Divinity of Scripture, are, as hath been already proved, from the Holy Ghost, and upon that account are called the Demonstration of the Spirit. So that all that Light we receive from Scripture, and all the Evidence we have that that Light is Divine, we derive originally from the Holy Spirit. But besides this External Illumination of the Spirit, there is also an Internal one, which consists in impressing that external Light and Evidence of Scripture upon our Understandings, whereby we are enabled more clearly to apprehend, and more effectually to believe it: For tho the Divine Spirit doth not (at least in the ordinary Course of his Operation) illuminate our Minds with any new Truths, or new Evidences of Truth, but only presents to our Minds those Old and Primitive Truths, and Evidences, which he at first revealed and gave to the World; yet there is no doubt, but he still continues not only to suggest them both to our Minds, but to urge and repeat them with that Importunity, and thereby to imprint them with that Clearness and Efficacy as that if we do not, thro' a wicked Prejudice against them, wilfully divert our Minds from them to vain or sinful Objects, we must unavoidably apprehend them far more distinctly, and assent to them far more cordially and effectually than otherwise we should or could have done: For, alas! our Minds are naturally so vain and stupid, so giddy, listless, and inadvertent; especially in Spiritual Things which are abstract from common Sense, as that did not the Holy Spirit frequently present, importunately urge, and thereby fix them on our Minds, our Knowledge of them would be so confused and our Belief so wavering and unstable, as that they would never have any prevailing Influence on our Wills and Affections. So that our Knowledge and Belief of divine Things, so far forth as they are saving and effectual our Renovation, are the Fruits and Products of this internal Illumination of the Spirit.

Secondly, Another of these ordinary Operations of the Spirit, is Sanctification; which consists in the purifying our Wills and Affections from those wicked Inclinations and inordinate Lusts, which countermand God's Will in us, and set us at Enmity against him; and this also the Scripture attributes to the Holy Spirit. So Tit. iii. 5. For according to his Mercy he saveth us by the washing of Regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost; and in 1 Cor. vi. 11. But ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified, in the Name of our Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God. And this is the meaning of our being sealed by the Spirit, so often mentioned in the New Testament, viz. our receiving his Image or Impression from him; which consists in Holiness and Righteousness; and by this Image or Impression we are discriminated and set apart from the rest of the World, as a chosen Generation, a royal Priesthood, an holy Nation, and a peculiar People, 1 Pet. ii. 9. and made Kings and Priests unto God, Rev. i. 6. upon which account we are said to be anointed by the Spirit, 1 John ii. 20. and by the same Image, we are also intitled to, and secured of, all the Blessings of the New Covenant; upon which account it is called, The Earnest of the Spirit, and the first Fruits of the Spirit. And this Image of himself the Holy Ghost produces in us, by suggesting to our Minds the powerful Motives and Arguments of Religion; and by often reiterating, imprints them upon us with all their native Force and Efficacy, in the most lively and affecting Characters; and by these his blessed Suggestions, he, by degrees, persuades and bends our stubborn Wills, melts and mollifies our hard Hearts, reduces and tempers our wild Affections to a willing Compliance with the Will of God; and at length to a heartly Complacency in all those Instances of Piety and Virtue, wherein our Sanctification, or this Image of himself, consists; which Operation of the Spirit we frequently experience in our selves: For, how often do we find good Thoughts injected into our Minds, we know not how nor whence, which are many times improved into such strong and vehement Convictions of the Folly and Danger of our Sin; as, even in the midst of our loose Mirth and Jollity, and in despite of all our Endeavours to chase them from our Minds, and rock ourselves into a deep security, cease not to follow and haunt, and importune us; till they have scared us into wise and sober Resolutions: And tho we, like ungrateful Creatures, do oftentimes stifle the good Motions of the Spirit, and turn a deaf Ear to his Calls and gracious Invitations, yet doth he not presently give us over, but still, as we are running away from him, we hear a voice behind us calling after us to return; and tho we still run on, yet still he follows us with his Importunities thro' the whole course of our sinful Life, till either he hath brought us back, or sees us past all hope of Recovery. And indeed such is the degeneracy of our Natures, the vanity of our Minds, and the prejudice of our Wills and Affections against God and Goodness, that, without this sanctifying influence of the Holy Ghost, it is certain no Man ever was, or ever will be reclaimed to a State of Piety and Virtue. For tho our Religion furnishes us with such Motives as are infinitely sufficient to persuade us, and tho our Minds and Wills are not so depraved, but that still we are naturally capable to consider, and naturally free to follow those Motives; yet so vain and roving are our Minds, so averse to all serious and spiritual Thoughts; so stubborn and inflexible are our Wills to those spiritual Duties, which those Motives persuade to? so cankered and prejudiced against them, that, did not the Holy Ghost frequently impress them on our Minds, and pathetically urge and apply them to our Wills and Affections, we should never of ourselves so thorowly consider them, as to be conquered and persuaded by them; but either our Thoughts would presently fly away from them, and rove into sensual Cares or Pleasures, or our Wills and Affections, by objecting their Prejudice, and the Interest of their Lusts against them, would infallibly baffle and defeat them. So that it is to this sanctifying influence of the Holy Ghost, that all the Graces and good Dispositions of our Minds are owing.

Thirdly, Another of these ordinary Operations of the Spirit is Quickening or Exciting us in the ways of Piety, and Virtue. For as by his sanctifying influence he first inspires us with spiritual Life, so he still proceeds to cherish and invigorate it, and to quicken it up into Activity and Motion, whenever he perceives it droop or languish. Hence the Apostle, Gal. v. 25. If we live by the Spirit, let us also walk by the Spirit, i. e. if we have received Spiritual Life from him, let us move and act by him; and hence also we are said to be led by the Spirit of God, i. e. to be moved and conducted in our motion by him, Rom. viii. 14. And this he also doth, partly by admonishing and putting us in mind of our Duty, which, in the Croud and Hurry of our worldly Occasions, we are too prone to forget, and partly suggesting to our Minds such Considerations of Religion as are most apt to quicken our sluggish endeavour, to allure our hope, or alarm our fear, or affect our ingenuity; and by these to excite our zeal, and render us more active and vigorous in the ways of Piety and Virtue: And, of this operation of the Holy Spirit, there is no good Man but hath frequent experience. For thus, when our Thoughts are squandered abroad among our worldly Cares and Pleasures, we are many Times assaulted with unexpected Temptations, which finding our Minds in a careless, forgetful, and incoherent posture, are apt to surprize and hurry us into sinful Actions before we are aware, in which nick of time a good Thought is suddenly shot into our Minds to warn and admonish us, of the precipice of sin and guilt we are falling into; by which, if we are not wilfully deaf and inadvertent to it, the Temptation is discovered, and baffled, and defeated; and thus, also, when thro' the many Temptations that do here surround us, our zeal for God and Goodness doth at any Time languish; and we begin to grow cold and indifferent in Religion; we find a world of good Thoughts pressing so hard upon our Minds, as that without doing violence to ourselves, we cannot avoid listening and attending to them; and when they have almost forced themselves into our attention, there they do so vigorously struggle with our reluctant Wills, so pathetically address to our listless Affections, that, without equal violence to ourselves, we cannot avoid being moved by their Persuasions, and at last conquered by their powerful Importunities. Now these good Thoughts are many Times the immediate Inspirations and Whispers of the Holy Spirit to our Minds, which he very often imprints on us, with that life and vigor, and repeats and urges with that efficacious Ardor and restless Importunity, that unless we are strangely obstinate, we cannot find in our Hearts to repel or resist them.

without

Fourthly, Another of these ordinary Operations of the Holy Spirit on Mens Minds is comforting and supporting them, or inspiring their Minds with such Joys and Refreshments, as are necessary to support them under the Difficulties and Temptations they are here exposed to. For this Operation of the Spirit is a standing provision against such Difficulties and Temptations, as are too great for an ordinary patience and courage to contest with, and is not ordinarily vouchsafed to us, but only at such Times when we are called to do or suffer something beyond ourselves, and above our own strength and ability; in which Cases we are secured of this supporting influence of the Spirit by that Promise, 1 Cor. x. 13. God is faithful, who will not suffer ye to be tempted above what ye are able, but will with the Temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it. For thus we read of the Primitive Church, that they walked in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, Acts ix. 31. i. e. had the constant supporting influence of the Spirit of God, to strengthen and bear up their Minds under that mighty Work and those grievous Persecutions they were to undergo; and the Apostle makes it his earnest Prayer to God for his Christian Romans, that he would fill them with all joy and peace in believing; that is, in their Profession of the Christian Faith, and that they might abound in hope thro' the power of the Holy Ghost, Rom. xv. 13. And accordingly we find the Ages of Persecution abounding with remarkable Instances of this operation of the Holy Ghost. For whereas constant Persecutions never failed to exterminate false Religions from the World; witness the Heathen Religion and the Christian Heresies, the Priscillians, Arians, and Donatists, which whilst they were tolerated or connived at, did mightily increase and multiply, but under vigorous Persecutions immediately shrunken, and in a little Time dwindled into nothing; the true Christianity, on the contrary, bore up its head under the heaviest Oppressions, and triumph'd in the midst of Flames, and was so far from being vanquished by all the barbarous Cruelties of its Persecutors, that the more they persecuted it, the more it conquered and prevailed; which doubtless is in a great measure to be attributed to this supporting influence of the Holy Spirit, which still accompanied its Confessors and Martyrs. For, how was it possible that a Company of tender Virgins, delicate Matrons, and aged Bishops, could ever have endured those long and dolorous Martyrdoms, as many Times they did, when their Tormentors took their turns from Morning to Night; and plied them with all Kinds of Cruelties, till they were oftentimes forced to give over, and confess that they had not Heart enough to instruct the Tortures which those poor Sufferers had courage enough to endure? How could they have sung in the midst of Flames, smiled upon Racks, triumph'd upon Wheels and Catastra's, and there challenged their Executioners, as they often did, to distend their Limbs to the utmost stretch, to tear their flesh with Ungulae, to scorch their tender Parts with Fires, and rake their Bowels with Spikes and Gaunches? How, I say, could they have endured all these miserable harasings of their tender Flesh, with the most witty and exquisite Tortures, and this sometimes for sundry Days together; when for one base and cowardly Word they might have been released when they pleased, had they not been supported with an invisible hand, and refreshed with such strong Consolations, as not only abated, but sometimes quite extinguished their Pains? And the same Comforts, tho not perhaps in the same degree, other good Men have frequently experienced; sometimes upon their undertaking some great and Heroick Office of Piety or Virtue; sometimes in their conflict with some great Temptation;

Temptation ; sometimes when they have been sorely oppressed with some mighty Sorrow or Affliction ; and sometimes in the hour and extremities of Death : For it is only upon these, or such like extraordinary Occasions, that the Holy Spirit usually administers these great Consolations to our Minds. And this he also performs in the same manner as he doth the aforementioned Operations, viz. by suggesting to and vigorously impressing comfortable Thoughts upon our Minds ; for there is no doubt but that as he can impress on us what Thought soever he pleases, so he can also impress it with what strength and vigour soever he pleases ; and accordingly as he impresses a comfortable Thought on us more or less vigorously, it must of necessity be a greater or a less Consolation to us. If he think fit, and our State require it, he can imprint a comfortable Thought on us with that strength and vehemence, as that it shall even ravish us from our sense, and so ingross all our attention to it, as that we shall be altogether mindless and insensible of any Pain or Pleasure of the Body. For thus it is usual for serious Contemplators, in their profound Musings to collect and call together all their animal Spirits to attend that work, so that many Times there are none or not enough at least, remaining to supply the Offices of their Sense, and carry on the inferiour Operations of Nature ; and if we ourselves by intense thinking can thus alienate our Minds from Sense, we may easily suppose that the Holy Ghost, who hath the command of our Minds, can, when he pleases, stamp a joyous Thought so vigorously upon them, as that it shall instantly transport them into an ecstasy, and ravish them from all corporeal Sensation. And, that thus he hath done, is notoriously evident in the above-named Martyrs, whose Senses were many Times so intranc'd by the rapturous Contemplations their Minds were seized with, that they lay smiling and sometimes singing under the bloody Hands of their Tormentors, without any apparent sense of those long and exquisite Cruelties that were practised upon them. And tho the blessed Spirit seldom applies these strong and powerful Cordials to pious Minds, but in such great and urgent Extremities, it being much more for their interest to be kept humble and lowly, than to be ravished with continued Comforts ; yet ordinarily he administers a standing Peace and Satisfaction to them, and whenever their Necessities call for it, he inspires them with such degrees of Joy and Consolation, as their Case and Condition requires.

Fifthly and Lastly, Another of these ordinary Operations of the Holy Spirit on Mens Minds is Intercession, by which he enables us to offer up our Prayers to God with such ardent and devout Affections as are in some measure suitable to the matter we pray for. For Prayer being the immediate converse of our Souls with God, wherein our Minds are obliged to withdraw themselves from Sense and sensible Things, and wholly to retire themselves from those Objects to which they are most endeared and familiarized, into the Divine and Spiritual World, there is no one Duty whatsoever, to the due performance of which our carnal Affections are naturally more listless and averse ; and therefore as herein we have most need of the Holy Spirit's Assistance, so herein he more especially operates on our Minds, exciting in us all those Graces and Affections which are proper to the several Parts of our Prayer, such as Shame and Sorrow in the Confession of our Sins ; a Sense of our need of Mercy, and a hope of obtaining it, in our Supplications for Pardon and Forgiveness ; Resignation to God's Will and Dependance on his Truth and Goodness, in our address for temporal Mercies and Deliverances ; Hunger and Thirst after Righteousness, in our Petitions for his Grace and Assistance ; and in a word Gratitude, and Love, and Admiration of God, in our Praises and Thanksgivings for Mercy ; and in these Divine Affections the Life and Soul of Prayer consists. And accordingly in Gal. iv. 6. the Apostle tells us, Because ye are Sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your Hearts, crying, Abba, Father ; that is, by kindling devout and pious Affections in your Souls, enabling you to cry to God with all earnestness and assurance, as to a kind and merciful Father ; and hence also we are said to pray in or by the Holy Ghost, Jude 20. because all the proper Graces and Affections of Prayer are excited in us by him. And this his excitation of the Graces of Prayer in us is called his making Intercession for us, Rom. viii. 26, 27. which imports no more than his enabling us to offer up the matter of our Prayers to God in a most devout and affectionate manner, or, as he there explains himself, with Sighs and Groans that are not to be uttered, that is, with such earnest and flagrant Affections as are too big for words to express. And this is properly to intercede for us. For as Christ, who is our Advocate in Heaven, doth offer up our Prayers to the Father, and enforce them with his own Intercessions; so his Spirit, who is our Advocate on Earth, begets in us those Affections which render our Prayers prevalent, and wings them with fervor and ardency; the one pleads with God for us in our own Hearts, by kindling such Desires there as render our Prayers acceptable to him, and the other pleads with him for us in Heaven, by presenting those Desires, and soliciting their supply and acceptance. Now this Intercession of the Holy Spirit is also performed, as all the foregoing Operations, by suggesting to, and imprinting such Thoughts upon our Minds, as are most apt to raise and excite our Affections; which Thoughts he often urges with that vehemence, and presses with that reiterated importunity, that if we do not wilfully repel them from our Minds, and refuse them admittance to our Hearts and Affections, they cannot fail to stir up in us all the Graces of Prayer, and inflame our Souls with a fervent Devotion; and accordingly, whenever we harbour these Suggestions of the Spirit, and by seriously attending to them, cherish and encourage them, we find by experience they so affect and influence our Devotions, as that in every Prayer our Souls take wing, and, like the Angel that appeared to Manoah, fly up to Heaven in the Flames of our Sacrifice.

And thus I have given a brief account both of what the Holy Spirit hath done, and of what he still continues to do, towards the promoting and effectuating of Christ's Mediation for God with Men: And by what hath been said, it abundantly appears that he hath done for us, and still continues to do all that our Case and Necessity requires; and that there is nothing imaginable wanting on his part towards the reducing and reconciling our Minds to God: So that now he may justly say to us what God doth to his Vineyard, Isai. v. 4. What could I have done more for my Vineyard that I have not done? Or, as the Hebrew expresses it, What is to be done more? Not but that by his omnipotent Power absolutely considered, the Holy Spirit can do more for us than he ordinarily doth; he can in an instant infuse a new Nature into us, in despite of all the resistance of our Wills, and make such irresistible Impressions on our Minds, as our most inveterate prejudice and enmity against God shall never be able to withstand; but then his Power always acts by the Direction of his Wisdom, and can do no otherwise; that is, it can do no more than it can wisely do, and it is certain that ordinarily and regularly it cannot wisely so act upon Men, as to determine their natural liberty to good and evil, since by so doing he must not only commit a perpetual violence on the frame of our Beings, and thereby reverse the established course of our Natures, but also destroy the very being of Virtue in us, which is no longer Virtue than while it is free and unconstrained: But whatsoever he can wisely do, or which is all one, consistently with the Liberty of our Nature, he hath done, and still continues doing. So that now, to the reduction of our Souls to God, there is nothing wanting but our own consent and free cooperation, which if we will refuse we may; for, for desperate obstinacy there is no remedy: if we will not comply with the blessed Spirit, it is certain he will not save us whether we will or no. So that when inquisition shall be made for the blood of our Souls, the utmost we can charge him with, is, that he did not drag us to Heaven in spite of our teeth, and bind up our Hands in the Cords of an irresistible Fate, to hinder us from murdering ourselves: But, if we have so little regard of ourselves as to spurn at our own Happiness, it is by no means fit that he should force it upon us, and it would be a very mean and unreasonable Condescension in him to prostitute his Grace to such as scorn and refuse it. If therefore, after all these Things that the Spirit hath done for us, we persist and finally perish in our enmity against God, he may fairly wash his Hands in Innocency over us, and charge our Blood upon our own Heads; and, how deplorable soever our Condition proves in the future State, his Justice will triumph gloriously in our ruin; and our own Consciences, together with all the reasonable World, will be forced to be his Compurgators, and to pronounce him infinitely Just and Righteous in all his Ways.

S E C T. II.

Concerning the particular Offices of Christ's Mediation.

FOR the clearer stating what are the particular Offices of the Mediator, it will be necessary briefly to inquire into the state and condition of the Parties between whom he mediates, as they stand related to one another. For he, being to officiate for and between God and Man, to be sure his Offices must be such as their respective States and Conditions do require. For how can he officiate effectually between them, unless he performs all those good Offices on both Sides, which, considering their States as they stand related to one another, are necessary to create a mutual accord and agreement between them? Now the state of God, as he stands related to us, is that of a supreme and absolute Sovereign, over blind and rebellious Subjects, who were so far depraved and degenerated, as that we neither understood his Will, nor were at all disposed to obey it. Wherefore, that he might officiate effectually for God with us, his ignorant and rebellious Subjects, it was necessary, First, that he should perform the Office of a Prophet, in revealing God's Will and Pleasure to us, of which the whole Race of Mankind was so deplorably ignorant. Secondly, That he should perform the Office of a King, in exacting our Obedience to God, and subduing our stubborn Wills to his Heavenly Pleasure; so that in officiating for God with us, it was necessary that he should both teach us as God's Prophet, and rule us as God's King. And then the State of Man, as it respects God is that of a most guilty and criminal Subject, who by a continued course of Rebellion, had justly and highly incensed and provoked his Sovereign Lord against him; in which state of Things it was highly necessary that, in officiating for us with God, our Mediator should in the first place render him some great and honourable reparation in our behalf, such as he, in his infinite Wisdom, should think meet to exact for those high and manifold Affronts and Indignities which we had offered to his Sacred Person and Authority. For without some such Reparation he could not well have admitted of any Reconciliation with us, without prostituting his own Authority, and rendring it cheap and vile in the Eyes of bold and insolent Offenders. Now the greatest Reparation he could make for us, was to take our Punishment on himself, by offering up his own Life to God as a Sacrifice for the Sins of the World. And then, secondly, it was necessary, that having made this Reparation for us, he should thereupon become our Advocate, and plead his Sacrifice to God in our behalf, that for the sake thereof he would be so far propitious to us, as to admit us, upon our unfeigned Repentance, to his Grace and Favour. Both which are comprehended in the Priestly Office, which consisted, as I shall shew hereafter, in atoning God with Sacrifice. So that the particular Offices, which the respective States of God and Man require of him that mediates between them, is to teach and rule for God, and to expiate and advocate for Men.

But for the better understanding of these particular Offices, it is necessary we should briefly consider the Method and Oeconomy of them, and explain in what Order and Manner the Mediator hath proceeded and advanced in the Exercise and Administration of them. Which, in short, was thus; by Commission from God the Father, he came down into this World, where the first Mediatorial Office he undertook, was that of a Prophet, in the discharge whereof he made a full Revelation of God's Mind and Will to the World. And having performed this, at least so far as was needful in his own Person, he next enters upon the first Part of his Priestly Office, which was to make an Expiation for the Sins of the World, by the Sacrifice of himself; and this being finished, he a little after proceeded to the other Part, which was to make an Oblation of his Sacrifice to God in Heaven, and in virtue thereof to advocate for us, and sollicite our Pardon and Admission into the Divine Favour; upon the Performance of all which, and as a glorious Reward of it, he was admitted to sit down at the Right Hand of God in the Throne of Regal Authority, next and immediately to the Father. For so Phil. ii. 8, 9, 10. the Apostle tells us, He humbled himself, and became obedient to the Death, even the Death of the Cross; wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a Name above every Name, that at the Name of Jesus every Knee should bow. And in Heb. xii. 2. his sitting down at the right Hand of the Throne of God, is the Consequence of his enduring the Cross, and despising the shame of it. So that in short the Order and Method in which he proceeded in his Mediatorial Offices was this; First, he prophesied; then he made Expiation for our Sins on the Cross; then presented his Expiation in Heaven, and therein began to advocate or intercede for us, and then he received that Regal Authority, by which he is to reign till the Consummation of all Things. And therefore, for the more clear and distinct explication of these particular Offices, it will be most proper to treat of them in the same order wherein they are placed in the Divine Oeconomy, beginning first with the Prophetick, thence proceeding to the Priestly, and thence to the Kingly Office.

S E C T. III.

Of the Prophetick Office of Jesus Christ.

CONsidering the manifold Errors, and the deep Ignorance in which Mankind was almost universally lost and bewilder'd, it was absolutely necessary, that he who mediated for God with Men, in order to the reconciling them to him, should in the first place take care to inform them of the Nature, and instruct them in the Will of God; without which it was impossible for them so much as to know what it is to be reconciled to him. And accordingly this was the first Mediatorial Office that our Saviour undertook, viz. to prophesy to the World, i. e. to reveal and publish the Gospel to Mankind, wherein the Nature and the Will of God, and the Method of our Salvation, are plainly stated and described, so far forth at least as it is necessary to our Reconciliation to him. Upon which account he is called the Light of the World, the Sun of Righteousness, the Way and the Truth, and the bright Morning Star; all which refer to his Prophetick Office, which is the Fountain of all that spiritual Light, that shines thro' the World: For long before our Saviour was born, it was foretold of him, that he should execute the Office of a Prophet; so Deut. xviii. 15. The Lord thy God shall raise up unto thee a Prophet, from the midst of thee, of thy Brethren, like unto me, unto him ye shall hearken; which Prophecy St. Peter applies to our Saviour, Acts iii. 22. And upon this, and other Prophecies of the Old Testament, it is evident, it was a general Anticipation among the Jews in our Saviour's Time, that the Messiah should be a Prophet: For thus, upon Christ's feeding Five Thousand Men with Five Loaves and Two Fishes, they cried out, This is of a Truth that Prophet that should come into the World, John vi. 14. so upon his restoring the Centurion's Servant, they were amazed, and glorified God, saying, that a great Prophet was risen up among them, Luke vii. 16. And so also his own Disciples stile him, A Prophet mighty in Deed and Word before God and all the People.

Now this Prophetick Office of Christ consisted not so much in foretelling of future Events (tho this he also did so far as it was needful for the Church) as in expounding, declaring and making known the Will of God to us by Divine Revelation: For so, to prophecy signifies no more than to speak from or in the stead of another; πρὸς in Composition being all one with ἐν: thus Exod. vii. 1. God said to Moses, I have made thee a God to Pharaoh, and Aaron thy Brother shall be thy Prophet; that is, he shall be thy Mouth to deliver to Pharaoh what I shall deliver to thee: For so the Word is explained, Exod. iv. 16. He shall be thy Spokesman, he shall be to thee instead of a Mouth. And in this Sense the Poets were antiently called the Prophets of the Muses; so Theocritus, μετὰ τὸν δὲ μάλιστα τῶν ἱερῶν ὑποφύτας.

i. e. the sacred Prophets of the Muses; and Saint Paul himself, Tit. i. 12. calls the Heathen Poets their Prophets, quoting a Passage out of Epimenides; who, tho he is stiled by Laertius σοφιστής, a great Favourite of the Gods, and, as he relates the Story, directed the Athenians how to lustrate their City in a Time of Pestilence, yet if we may credit Aristotle, ὁ περὶ τοῦ ἰσομέναν ἐμάνειτο, i. e. he never prophesied of Things to come, Rhet. l. 3. c. 17. but was only a Divine, as Plutarch calls him, and σοφίης καὶ σοφὸς περὶ τὰ θεῶν, i. e. a Friend of God, and one that had a deep insight into divine Things. By which it is evident, that Prophecy doth not necessarily include, in the true Acceptation of it, foretelling Futurities, but only denotes declaring the Mind and Will of God, in any matter by divine Inspiration: For so Justin. Mart. in Cohortat. ad Græc. tells us, that the Prophets declared those Things to the World, ὃ τὸ ἄχρον ἐπ' αὐτοὺς καταβὼν πνεῦμα τὸς τῶν ἀληθῶν διδασκῶν μαρτυρῶν βοῶντων δι' αὐτῶν διδάσκων περὶ τῶν θεῶν, i. e. which the Holy Ghost descending upon them, had intended by them to teach those Persons who were truly willing to be instructed in the true Worship of God. And accordingly St. Chrysostom, ὁ περὶ τῶν ἐρμηνευτῶν ἔστιν, ἀλλὰ τὸ θεῶν, ὁ Prophet is not only an Interpreter, but an Interpreter of God. And so also Dionysius the Arcopag. stiles the Prophets, τῶν ἀρρήτων σοφίας πατέρες, i. e. the Fathers of secret Wisdom, Epist. 9. because they discovered those Things to the World, which were discoverable only by Divine Inspiration. And in this large Sense of the Word, Christ's Prophetick Office is to be understood, viz. as a declaring and signifying the Will of God to Mankind, concerning the Way and Method of our Reconciliation to God and eternal Salvation by him. But for the fuller Explication of this his Mediatorial Office, I shall endeavour, first, to shew how excellently he was fitted and accomplished for it; and secondly, how fully and effectually he hath discharged it. As for the first, how excellently he was fitted and accomplished for this Office, will evidently appear by these Three Considerations.

I. That when he came down to prophecy to us, he came immediately from the Bosom of the Father: For as he was the Eternal Son of God, he was always with him from all Eternity, and always intimate and infinitely dear and familiar to him; and therefore, as such, must not only be supposed fully to comprehend his Nature, and perfectly to know his Will, but also to be privy to his most secret Thoughts and Counsels. And it is upon this account, perhaps, chiefly that he is called the Logos, or Word of God; because, as St. Gregory Nazianzen discoursed, Orat. 36. he hath the same relation to God the Father, that a Word or inward Thought hath to the Mind; not only in regard of his Generation without any Passion, but because of his intimate Conjunction with him, by which he perfectly understands him, and so hath full Power to declare him: For, the Father is known, saith he, by the Son, and the Son is a brief and easy Demonstration of the Father, as every thing that is begotten is αὐτῶν λόγος, the silent Word of that which begat it. So that as it is the Office of our Speech to declare our Minds to one another, so it is the Office of this Eternal Word of the Father, to declare his Mind and Will to the World; and who can be so proper to declare the Father's Mind to us, as he who from all Eternity hath been so familiar to his inmost Thoughts and Purposes? Hence St. John, c. i. v. 18. No Man hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son, who is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath declared him; and indeed his being in the Bosom of the Father, i. e. being most near and intimate to him, did perfectly qualify him to declare him: For in that Nearness and Intimacy he could not but have a most perfect Knowledge of him; and this not by the Instructions of Angels, nor by Dreams or Visions, as other Prophets had; no, nor merely by the Holy Ghost neither, but by an immediate personal Intuition of his Father's Thoughts and Purposes, which from all Eternity were exposed to his View and Prospect.

II. It is also to be considered, that as he came down immediately from God, to prophesy to us, so he came down into our own Nature, which gave a vast Advantage to his Ministry: For had he preached to us, as he did to the Jews from Mount Sinai, in his Divine Person, the Glory and Majesty thereof would have so amazed and confounded us, that like them we should not have been able to attend to him; and our Minds would have been so struck with the terrible manner of his Ministry, that we could never have fix'd our Thoughts as we ought upon the Matter of it: For so the Jews, upon God's preaching personally to them in the proper Equipage of his Divine Majesty, were struck with such a sacred Horror, as that they were not able to bear it; but made it their Request, that they might not hear the Voice of the Lord any more; and that for the future, he would speak with them by Moses, whose Voice they could more easily bear, and better attend to; which Request of theirs God thought so reasonable, that he promises to raise up unto them a Prophet of their own Brotherhood, like unto Moses, meaning the Word incarnate, and bids them hearken to him, Deut. xviii. 15, 16. i. e. since you cannot endure to hear me speaking to you in the Majesty of my Divinity, I will hereafter allay and qualify it, by assuming one of your own kind and kindred into personal Union with it; in and by whom I will vouchsafe to speak to you in such a familiar and condescending manner, as that you shall be able freely to attend without any Terror or Disturbance. And indeed, the most natural way of instructing Human Minds is by Human Means: As for Voices from Heaven, or from bright and glorious Appearances on Earth, they are more apt to confound than to edify our Understandings; and therefore for this Reason, among others, Christ thought meet to assume our Natures, that so he might treat with us in such a way as is most accommodate thereunto, and deliver his Divine Doctrines to us in a Human Form and Voice, that so being convey'd to us in the most natural and familiar manner, they might not so alarm our Dread, as to confound our Attention, but might instruct our Minds instead of scaring and amusing them. And therefore he did not only qualify the Terror and Dreadfulness of his Divine Majesty, by putting on our Nature; but together with it he put on all the Condescensions and Sweetnesses of a most familiar and endearing Conversation, and conversed among Men in such a generous, friendly and courteous manner, as charm'd and enamour'd all ingenuous Minds, and thereby attracted their Attention to his Doctrine. So that, as Christ was the Son of God, he perfectly understood his Father's Will; and as he was the Son of Man, he was perfectly fitted to reveal and declare it to Mankind.

And as by being God-man, he was most perfectly accomplished to declare God's Will to us, so he was also to give us a perfect Example of Obedience to it; which, as I shall shew hereafter, was a necessary part of his Prophetick Office: For without assuming Human Nature, he could never have been an Example of Human Virtue, which consists in acting suitably to the Nature of a Man, who is a Compound of Spirit and Matter, Reason and Sense, Angel and Brute; from which contrary Principles there arise in him contrary Inclinations and Affections, in the good or bad Government whereof all Human Virtue and Vice consist.

How then could he have practised those Virtues which consist in the Dominion of spiritual and rational Faculties over brutal and sensitive, such as Temperance, Chastity, Equanimity, and the like, had he not assumed that Nature which is compounded of both? How could he have shewn us by his own Example how to govern the Passions, and conduct ourselves in the Circumstances of Men, had he not communicated with us in the Passions and Circumstances of Human Nature? He might have come down from the Heavens to us enrobed with Splendor and Light, or have preached his Gospel to the World, in the midst of a Choir of Angels, from some bright Throne in the Clouds; and it would have been more convenient for himself to have done so, because more suitable to the natural Dignity and Majesty of his Person; but he consulted not so much his own Convenience as ours; he knew well enough that his Appearance among us in such an illustrious Equipage, would have been more apt to astonish than to instruct us, to have amused our Thoughts into a profound Admiration of his Glories, than to have directed our Steps in the Paths of Piety and Virtue; and that it would be much more for our Interest, that he should conduct us by his Example, than amaze us by his Appearance: And therefore he rather chose to appear to us in our own Nature, that so by going before us as a Man, he might shew us by his Example what became Men to do, and trace out to us the way to our Happiness with the print of his own Footsteps. So that, his Coming among us in our own Nature, was of vast Moment to his Prophetick Office, both in declaring his Father's Will to us, and setting us an Example of Obedience to it.

III. And Lastly, It is farther to be considered, that as he came down immediately from the Father to prophecy to us in our own Natures, so while he abode among us, he was always endued with the Holy Ghost; the Spirit of the Lord, from whom all Prophetick Inspiration proceeds, rested on him, and made its constant Residence and Abode in his Human Nature. So that, whereas it descended upon other Prophets only at certain Times and upon certain Occasions, by reason of which it was not in their Power to prophecy when they pleased, but they were fain to attend the arbitrary Motions of the Holy Ghost, and, like dead Organ-pipes, were mute and silent, as oft as he withdrew, and ceased to breathe into them his divine Enthusiasms; our blessed Saviour had the Prophetick Influx at command, and could prophecy whenever he pleased: For the Holy Ghost resided in his Mind, and, like an assisting Form or Genius, was always present with his Understanding, and being, as was shewed before, subordinate to him, both by personal Property and Agreement with the Father, it operated in him whenever, howsoever, and whatsoever he pleased; and was as intirely at his Disposal, as his own most voluntary Motions. So that whenever he had occasion for a Revelation, he no sooner willed it, but the Holy Ghost immediately inspired it into him; and whenever he wanted a Miracle to confirm a Revelation, he no sooner called for it, but the Holy Ghost immediately exerted it by him: For, as I shewed before, he did both prophecy and effect his Miracles by the Holy Ghost that was in him, and that was so intirely subject to him, thro' the whole Course of his Ministry, that he could prophecy and do Miracles by him whenever he pleased; and hence he is said to be anointed with the Holy Ghost and with Power, Acts x. 38. that is, to be consecrated to the Prophetick Office, by the Descent of the Holy Ghost upon him, by whom he was empowered to prophecy, and to confirm his Prophecy by Miracles; for so it follows, He went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed with the Devil, for God was with him; and accordingly at his Baptism he was solemnly consecrated, the great Prophet of God, by a visible Unction of the Holy Ghost, who, as St. Luke tells us, descended on him in a bodily Form or Appearance, Chap. iii. ver. 22. which St. Matthew thus expresses, The Spirit of God descended like a Dove, and lighted upon him, Chap. iii. ver. 16. not as if he descended in the Form of a Dove; but, as it seems most probable, he assumed a Body of Light or Fire, and therein came down from above, just as a Dove with with its Wings spread forth is observed to do, and gathering about our Saviour's Head crowned it with a visible Glory : For so in the Nazarene Gospel, as Grotius observes, it is said, that upon this Descent of the Holy Ghost, ἐν τῷ βάπτισμῳ αὐτοῦ καὶ τὸ πνεῦμα ὡς μέγα, i. e. there immediately shone a great Light round about the Place ; and Justin Martyr tells us, that when Christ was Baptized, πῦρ αἰνέσθη ἐν τῷ Ἰορδάνῃ, that there was a Fire lighted in the River Jordan ; that is, by the Reflexion of that bright and flaming Appearance, in which the Holy Ghost descended, the River seemed to be all on Fire. So that as God did signalize his Presence in the Old Tabernacle by a visible Light or Glory ; so the Holy Ghost, by descending on our Saviour in this shining Appearance, declared him to be the Tabernacle of his Divine Presence, wherein he meant from thenceforth to reside and make his constant abode ; and from whence, and by whom, he would, for the future, communicate himself to Mankind. And accordingly the Sign which God gave to John Baptist, by which he might know the Messias when he saw him, was this, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost, i. e. who, from himself, or from his own Fulness, shall communicate the Holy Ghost to the World, John i. 33. For so full was Jesus of the Holy Ghost, that he not only prophesied himself, and did Miracles by it whensoever he pleased, but he also communicated it to his own immediate Disciples, and empower'd them to communicate it to others ; and hence it is said, that God gave not the Spirit by measure to him, John iii. 34. i. e. with Limitations and Restrictions, to such particular Times, or Ends and Purposes ; but in that unlimited manner, as that he could not only act by it himself whensoever or howsoever he pleased, but also communicate it to others, in what degree or measure soever he pleased : For so John xx. 22. it is said, that he breathed upon his Disciples, and bad them receive the Holy Ghost ; and Acts viii. 17. we are told, that upon their laying their Hands upon others, they also received the Holy Ghost. And by this unlimited Fulness of the Holy Ghost, which our Saviour received at his Baptism, he was perfectly accomplished for his Prophetick Office : For the Holy Ghost abode in him after that visible Glory in which he descended disappeared, even throughout the whole Course of his Ministry ; and hence, Luke iv. 1. we are told, That being full of the Holy Ghost, he returned from Jordan ; and after he had finished his Forty Days Fast in the Wilderness, he returned from thence in the Power of the Spirit into Galilee, ver. 14. where, in his own City of Nazareth, he began to prophesy, declaring and manifesting, that the Spirit of the Lord was upon him, ver. 18. to 23. And at Cana in Galilee he began to work Miracles, and thereby to manifest forth his Glory, John ii. 11. Thus by Prophecy, and confirming his Prophecies by Miracles, he exerted that Fulness of the Holy Ghost which was communicated to him at his Baptism. And now, since before he came down to prophesy to us, he was from Eternity in the Bosom of the Father ; and since when he came down he was clothed in Human Nature, and in that Nature was inspired, with such an unbounded Fulness of the Holy Ghost, as that he could not only prophesy himself, and confirm his Prophecies by Miracles, when he pleased, but also communicate these his Gifts to others, in what Measures and Proportions he thought fit, to enable them to prophesy for him, wheresoever he thought meet to send them, what can we imagine farther necessary to complete and accomplish him for the Prophetick Office ?

I proceed therefore in the next place to shew how thoroughly and effectually he discharged this Office ; which will plainly appear, by considering briefly what those Things were, which, as a Prophet he performed ; all which are reducible to these Six Heads.

First, He made a full Declaration of his Father's Will to the World.

Secondly, He proved and confirmed what he had declared, by Miracles.

Thirdly, He gave a perfect Example of Obedience to what he had declared and proved to be his Father's Will.

Fourthly, He sealed his Declaration with his own Blood.

Fifthly, He instituted an Order of Men to preach what he had declared to the World.

Sixthly, He sent his Holy Spirit, when he left the World, to recollect and explain to those Men what he had declared, and to enable them also to prove and assert it by Miracles.

I. He made a full Declaration of his Father's Will to the World, viz. in those Sermons, Parables, and Discourses of his, which we find recorded in the Four Evangelists, in which the whole Will of God concerning the Way and Method of our Salvation, is fully and perfectly revealed: For thus St. Paul declares to the Elders of the Church of Ephesus, that he had kept back nothing that was profitable for them, but had testified both to the Jews and Greeks, Repentance towards God, and Faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ, Acts xx. 20, 21. and ver. 27. he tells them, that he had not shunned to declare unto them all the Counsel of God. Now it is certain, that this whole Counsel of God, which he had preached, was only that account of our Saviour's Discourses and Actions which St. Luke gives us in his Gospel, who, as Irenæus tells us, was a Follower of St. Paul, and did compile into one Book that History of our Saviour's Life and Doctrine which St. Paul had taught and delivered: And if so, then the whole Counsel of God must be contained in this Gospel: And accordingly St. Luke tells his Theophilus in the Beginning of his Gospel, That forasmuch as many had set forth a Declaration of those Things that were surely believed among Christians, it seemed good unto him also, having had a perfect understanding of all Things from the first, to write them down in order, that he might know the Certainty of those Things wherein he had been instructed: From whence I infer, that, supposing that St. Luke performed what he promised, his Gospel must contain a full Declaration of the Christian Religion: For, first, by promising to give an Account of those Things that were surely believed among Christians, he engaged himself to give an intire Account of Christianity; unless we will suppose that there were some Parts of Christianity, which the Christians of that Time did not surely believe. Secondly, in promising to give an Account of those Things of which he had perfect Understanding from the first, and in which his Theophilus had been instructed, he also engaged himself to give a complete Account of the whole Religion, unless we will suppose that there were some Parts of this Religion which St. Luke did not perfectly understand, and in which Theophilus had not been before instructed. And the same may be said of the Three other Evangelists, viz. that their Gospels do severally contain all the necessary Articles of Christianity; tho the last of them seems to have been written upon a more particular Design, viz. more fully to explain, than any of the former Evangelists had done, the Article of the Divinity and eternal Generation of Jesus Christ the Son of God. And if the Whole of Religion be contained in these Gospels, which are only Histories of our Saviour's Preaching and Actions, then it cannot be denied but that he made a full Revelation of God's Will to the World. It is true, there are sundry other Divine Writings annexed to these Gospels, which, together with them, complete the New Testament, viz. the Acts and Epistles of the Apostles; but these pretend not to declare any new Religion to the World: For as for the Acts of the Apostles, it is only an Historical Account of the Præparations of Christ's Ministers for the preaching that Gospel to the World which he had taught them, and of the Way and Method of their Procedure in it, in despite of all those Oppositions they met with. And as for the Epistles, they are partly Comments and Enlargements on our Saviour's Actions and Discourses; and partly Decisions of such Controversies as arose among them, according to the Analogy of that Faith, which our Saviour had before declared and revealed; but in all these Writings there is no one Article of Faith but what was before declared and defined in the Sermons and Discourses of our Saviour. And then as for the Primitive Writers, who lived in or near the Apostolical Age, and upon that Account had much greater Advantages of understanding the Truths of Christianity than we, who live at this remote Distance; they are at best but genuine Commentators on that Doctrine which our Saviour first taught, and his Apostles afterwards more fully explained to the World; but as for declaring any new Doctrines, or defining new Articles of Faith, that is an upstart invasion of Christ's Prophetick Office, which they never so much as pretended to. So that the Prophecy of our Saviour is the Fountain from whence all Christian Truth is derived, as containing in it a complete and intire Sum of God's Will and Counsel, concerning the Salvation of Mankind.

II. As he taught the whole Will of God, so he prov'd that what he taught was the Will of God, by sundry miraculous Operations, which are the great Evidences by which God always demonstrated the Truth of his Divine Revelations, and which of all others are the most popular, easy and convincing Proofs that can be given of them. For as for the Prophets themselves, they might be very well assur'd, that their Entusiasms were Divine, by the vehement Impressions they made on their Minds, which were such as did as fully satisfy them, that they were from God, as the strokes of the Sun-beams on our Eyes do us, that it is Day at Noon: but no other Man could be satisfied, that what they spoke was by Divine Inspiration, without either being divinely inspired himself, or confirmed by them in the belief of it by some miraculous Sign of the Divine Power; which latter was the way by which the 'Prophets of Old did ordinarily confirm their Doctrines, when they delivered any thing new to the World. And accordingly, tho our Saviour had all along sufficiently confirmed his Doctrines to the Jews, by the Authorities of the Old Testament, yet this Confirmation of his Miracles he more particularly insists on and appeals to; thus John x. 25. The Works, saith he, that I do in my Father's Name, they testify of me; and again, ver. 37, 38. If I do not the Works of my Father, believe me not: but if I do, tho ye believe not me, believe the Works. And herein he places the inexcusable Sin of their unbelief, that they persisted in it, notwithstanding he had done among them the works which none other Man did, John xv. 24. And indeed well he might, considering the miraculous Powers he exerted among them; for how often did he, even before their Eyes, subpæna in whatsoever was in Heaven or Earth or Sea, to give their Testimony to his Doctrine. He made the Angels minister to him, and the Devils tremble and fly before him, and the Plants and Animals, the Winds and Seas obeyed him, and Health and Sickness, and Life and Death, and the Grave, did by their obedience to his Word, bear witness to the Truth of his Doctrine. By his powerful Voice, he shook the Heavens, and sent down the Holy Spirit on his Followers; he tore the Rocks, and open'd the Graves; and, at his Command, the Bodies of his Saints arose; and, which was more miraculous than all, he raised himself the Third Day after his Crucifixion, and having finished his Course upon Earth, ascended Triumphantly into Heaven, in the View of a numerous Assembly of Spectators. All which were such illustrious Demonstrations of his being inspired by God, as nothing but an incurable Infidelity could ever be able to withstand. But what proper Arguments these Miracles of his were to convince Men, and what evidence there is of the Truth and Reality of them, will be shewn at large hereafter, and therefore it will be needless at present to insist any farther on this particular.

III. Therefore, as a Prophet, he gave us a perfect Example of Obedience to that which he had declared and proved to be his Father's Will. He did not only reveal his Father's Will to Mens Ears in his excellent Sermons and Discourses; but he also set it forth before their Eyes, in the glorious Example of his Actions. For what he taught in Words, he exemplified in Deeds, and his Conversation was a lively Picture of his Doctrine, wherein all that Humility and Self-denial, that Temperance and Justice, that Charity and Heavenly-mindedness, that invincible Constancy of Mind, and generous Contempt of the World, which he taught Mankind, were drawn to the Life, and expressed in their fairest Colours and Proportions. So that what he taught in Words he taught over again again in Actions, and explained his Rules still by his own Example: For his Conversation was all along a most genuine Comment and Paraphrase on his Religion; by casting their Eyes on which, those who did not fully understand the sense of his Precepts by his Words, might very easily expound it by his Actions. For there is no doubt but a good Example doth far more effectually instruct, than good Precepts; because it doth not only express the same Virtues that the Precepts injoyn, but also expresses them with much more Grace and Emphasis. For whereas Precepts and Discourses of Virtue, are only the dead Pictures and artificial Landscips and Descriptions of it, a virtuous Example is Virtue itself, informed and animated, alive and in motion, exerting and exhibiting itself in all its natural Charms and Graces. And therefore, as we know a Man much better when we see himself alive and in action, than when we only see his Picture; so we understand Virtue much better, when we see it living and acting in a good Example, than when we only behold it described and pictured in virtuous Precepts and Discourses. So that by giving us a complete and perfect Example of Piety and Virtue, the blessed Jesus hath far more effectually instructed us in our Duty, than by all those Heavenly Sermons which he preached to the World; because his whole Life was nothing else but a continued Series of living and moving Virtue, or rather, it was nothing but Piety and Virtue acting their several Parts in their own proper Forms, and exhibiting themselves to the Eyes of Men in all their natural Graces. And as the Holiness of his Life, did most effectually instruct Men in their Duty, so it could not but very much confirm them in the Truth of his Doctrine; for it is certain, if his Doctrine were false, it was not a simple Error, but a downright Lye, i. e. a known and wilful Falshood; because it depended, as I shall shew by and by, upon Matters of Fact, which he could not but know whether they were true or false. So that, if these Facts were false, he was a wilful Deceiver in affirming them, and building his Doctrines upon them. But how could he be reasonably suspected of lying, whose whole Life was such an illustrious Example of Goodness, and unspotted Integrity of Manners? For, it is to serve either their Covetousness or Ambition, their Envy or their Revenge, that Men turn wilful Deceivers; none of which Vices, nor so much as the least appearance of them, are visible in the Life of Jesus, but their contraries continually shone thro' the whole course of this Actions; and if none of those Vices ever appeared in him, that could any way tempt him to lye and deceive, it is not only unjust but unreasonable to suspect him. Thus by the Sanctity of his Life, he not only instructed Men in his Father's Will, but also confirmed them in the belief of it.

IV. As a Prophet also he sealed his Doctrine with his Blood, which is the highest Pledge that any Mortal can give of his Truth and Integrity. While he was preaching his Doctrine to the World, he foresaw all-along that he must either recant it or die for it; and therefore it is not imaginable, that he would have proceeded to divulge it, had he not believ'd it to be true. For, what Man in his Wits would ever publish a lye to the World, when he knows before-hand, he must either recant it with Shame, or assert and maintain it with his Blood? But such was the Nature of his Doctrine, that he could not believe it to be True, unless it were so; because the Truth or Falshood of it depended upon Matters of Fact, wherein he could not be deceived, namely, that he was the Son of God, that he came down from him, and had dwelt with him in unspeakable Glory and Happiness from the Foundations of the World, John xvii. 5. upon the Truth of which Facts depended the Authority of his whole Doctrine; but whether these were true or false, he could not be ignorant, if he were in his Wits, which no body can doubt, that considers the exactness of his Conversation, and the wisdom and dependence of his Doctrine. Now, if he were first in Heaven, and was sent down from thence to preach to the World, there is no doubt to be made of the Truth of his Doctrine; and whether he were or no, he could not be ignorant; if he were not there, he not only died with a wilful Lye in his Mouth, which is not reasonably imaginable of a Person of his unspotted Piety and Virtue, but he also published it to the World in his Life, notwithstanding he knew it to be a Lye, and foresaw he must either die for it, or shamefully recant it, which is not imaginable of a Person of his Wisdom and soundness of Mind. So that considering that he could not but certainly know whether his Doctrine were True or False, his sealing it with his Blood, is an unanswerable Attestation of the Truth of it; and accordingly his Blood is made a great Testimony of the Truth of his Gospel, 1 John v. 8. and St. Paul tells us, that he witnessed a good Confession before Pontius Pilate, 1 Tim. vi. 13. that is, in affirming before Pilate, that he was the Son of God, and King of the Jews; even when he certainly foresaw that he should forfeit his Life by it, he took it upon his Death, that he had preached nothing but the Truth to the World.

V. As a Prophet he also instituted an Order of Men, to publish and declare his Doctrine to the World. Whilst the Gift of Prophecy continued in the Jewish Church, there were certain Schools called the Schools of the Prophets, in which Men were trained up under some great and eminent Prophets, who were the Masters of those Schools, in the knowledge of Divine Things, and the practice of Piety and Virtue; that so being educated in Wisdom and Goodness, they might be the better disposed and qualified to receive the Prophetick Influx, and deliver God's Messages to the People. For out of these Schools God ordinarily called those Persons whom he employed and sent forth to prophesy to their Kings and People; and accordingly our Saviour, when he began to revive the Spirit of Prophecy in his own Person, (which, from Malachi till then, which was for the space of Four Hundred Years, had been utterly extinct) immediately erected a School of Prophets, consisting of his Twelve Apostles and Seventy Disciples, to whom, as it seems, he afterwards added Thirty-eight more, Vide Acts i. 15. over whom he himself presided as the great Master-Prophet, in order to the instructing their Minds in all Divine Wisdom, and forming their Manners by the strictest Rules of Piety and Virtue; that so, whenever occasion required, they might be duly qualified to prophecy to the World. And accordingly, as those antient Masters of the Prophetick Schools had ordinarily their Scholars personally attending on them, and, upon emergent Occasions, did frequently send them forth as their Ministers upon Prophetick Messages, Vide 2 Kings ix. 1. and 1 Kings xx. 35. so our blessed Saviour kept his in ordinary attendance about him, that so they might hear his Doctrine, and see his Miracles, and observe his Conversation; and upon particular Occasions, he sent them forth as his Ministring Disciples to prophesy in his Name, Vide Luke x. 1. And out of this Prophetick School of our Saviour, the Primitive Prophets of our Religion were called and sent forth to preach the Gospel thro' the World. For that his Gospel might be taught thro' all succeeding Ages to the end of the World, he first erected this sacred School, and when he was to leave it, he deposited a standing Commission in the Hands of his Twelve Apostles, whom he ordained to preside in it in his room, by which he empowered them, not only to ordain and send forth the present Disciples of it, viz. the Presbyters and Deacons, to teach his Gospel to all Nations; but also to derive down the same Authority to their Successors thro' all Generations to come; For as the Father bath sent me, saith he, so send I you, John xx. 21. and as he sent them, so they still sent others, and so in an uninterrupted Line of Succession, hath this Commission been handed and derived from one Generation to another; the Bishops who next succeeded the Apostles in presiding over the Sacred School, not only still ordaining other Bishops to succeed them, but also still admitting other Presbyters and Deacons, who are as the Disciples of that School to minister under them in the Propagation of the Gospel. Thus Christ, as the Great Prophet of the Church, hath erected a standing Prophetick School or Order of Men authoritatively to teach and declare his Gospel to all succeeding Ages of the World.

VI. And Lastly, As he was a Prophet, he also sent his Holy Spirit, when he left the World, to recollect and explain to his Disciples the Doctrine he had taught them, and to enable them also to prove and assert it by Miracles. For, as Elias, the Great Prophet of Israel, when he was snatched up into Heaven, let drop his Mantle, and, with that, derived that Holy Spirit on his Disciple Elisba, by which he prophesied and wrought his Miracles; so Jesus, the Great Prophet of the World, when he ascended into Heaven, derived that Divine Spirit upon his Apostles and Disciples, by which he himself prophesied, and confirmed his Prophecies by miraculous Evidences, while he was upon Earth, Vide Supra, p. 351, 352, &c. For in all likelihood, the Holy Ghost descended, on the Day of Pentecost, not only on the Apostles, but also upon all the rest of the Hundred and Twenty Disciples, of whom we read in Acts i. 15. For of these consisted the Prophetick School of our Saviour, who, in all probability, separated them, while he was yet upon Earth, from the rest of his Followers, to be the Heralds and Preachers of his Gospel to the World: And if so, we may reasonably conclude, that the Holy Ghost fell on them all, as well as on the Apostles, to qualify them for that work, which, together with the Apostles, they had been fore-ordained to. Indeed as the Apostles were placed in a higher station than any of the rest, as being authorized by Christ to super-intend and preside over them, so they received a peculiar Gift of the Holy Ghost, in which none of the rest communicated with them; and that was conferring, by Imposition of Hands, the Holy Ghost upon others. For so, in Acts viii. we find that when Philip had converted the People of Samaria, he could not confer the Holy Ghost on them, but Peter and John are sent thither for that purpose; who laid their Hands upon them, and they received the Holy Ghost, verse 17. Now by thus deriving his Holy Spirit on his Apostles and Disciples, the blessed Jesus still proceeded by them to prophecy to the World, till, thro' their Ministry, he had fully consummated his Prophetick Office, and revealed and explained the whole Doctrine of the Gospel. For till such Time as the whole New Testament was complete, his Ministers generally preached by the immediate Inspiration of the Holy Ghost, who, as I have shewn at large, p. 351, &c. not only recollected to their Memories those Doctrines which Christ himself had taught them, but also explained them fully to their Minds, and thereby enabled them to explain them fully to the World; and when this was once finished, and the whole Doctrine of the Gospel committed to Writing, and collected into a Volume, the Spirit of Prophecy was withdrawn from the Ministers of Christianity; who were, from thenceforth, obliged to supply the want of it, by their own Study and Industry. For now the Gospel being fully revealed, there needed no farther Revelation; and for the Holy Spirit to reveal over again to Mens Minds what he had plainly enough revealed already, and set before their Eyes, would have been but actum agere, to multiply Actions to no purpose. Whilst the Gospel lay hid in the Eternal Counsel of God, out of the reach and prospect of Human Understandings, it was necessary that the Holy Ghost should immediately reveal it to the Minds of those who were to declare it to the World; otherwise it is impossible it should ever have been known to Mankind; but when once he had fully revealed it to them, and declared it by them, and transmitted their Declaration by a standing Scripture to all succeeding Generations; to what end should he still proceed to make new Revelations of it, unless it were to gratify Mens sloth and idleness, and excuse them from the trouble of searching and studying that Scripture in which he had taken care to transmit his Gospel to them? But tho that blessed Spirit hath never been wanting to Mankind in any necessary assistance, yet when once he hath put Things within our own power, he always expects that we should do them, and not sit still with our Hands in our Pockets, expecting that he should do them for us. Since therefore by transmitting to us the Scripture, he hath put it within the power of its Ministers to understand and teach the Gospel, he expects that they should exercise that power in a diligent study of those Things which lead to the true understanding of Religion, and not depend upon new Revelations for the understanding of that which he hath already sufficiently revealed to them. For thus, till the whole Old Testament was finished, God continued the Spirit of Prophecy in the Jewish Church, after which he immediately withdrew it, and wholly remitted his People to the conduct of the Priests and Levites; who in their Forty-eight Cities, which were so many Universities for their Education in Divine Learning, diligently read and studied the Law, and thereby accomplished themselves to preach and explain it to the People. And in like manner God continued the same Spirit of Prophecy in the Christian Church, till the whole New Testament was revealed and written, and Copies of it dispersed thro' all the Churches; and from thenceforth the Spirit of Prophecy ceased, and in the room of its first inspired Ministers, there succeeded an ordinary standing Ministry, who, by their Learning and Industry, and diligent search of Scripture, were to supply the defect of immediate Revelation, and qualify themselves to teach and instruct the several Flocks that were committed to their Charge. In short, therefore, the Spirit of Prophecy remained upon the Ministers of Christ, till such Time as it had fully revealed and clearly explained the Gospel to them, and when this was done, and they had transmitted its Revelations to writing, there could be no farther need of it, unless it be supposed either that he had not sufficiently revealed the Gospel to them, or that he hath some new Gospel to reveal. And thus you see what it is, that our Saviour had done in the discharge of his Prophetick Office. And considering all, I know not what farther he could have added to complete and perfect it, and to render his Prophecy effectual to teach and instruct the World. So that, if after all these mighty Performances, we still remain in darkness and ignorance, the blame of it wholly redounds upon ourselves; for he hath in all respects abundantly performed his part towards the enlightning of the World, and chalked out to us the way to our Happiness with such plain and visible Lines, that if we are but willing to walk in it, we cannot mistake or wander from it; but if we will be so supine and negligent, as to concern ourselves no more about it, than if it were only a Fanciful Description of the Road to Utopia, or the Highway to the World in the Moon, it is impossible we should be thorowly acquainted with it, how plainly soever it is described. It is true, there are some Doctrines in Christianity, which are not so clearly revealed, but that the most honest Minds may be mistaken about them; but then these are such, as are far remote from the necessary and fundamental Articles, upon which our Salvation depends, all which are so clearly and distinctly revealed, that there is nothing but a perverse Will, that is either prejudiced against them by some sinful Affection, or thro' a profane disregard of God and Religion, utterly unconcerned about them, can hinder Men from apprehending them; and if, when the Divine Light shines so clearly round about them, Men will be so obstinate as to shut their Eyes against it, it is at their own eternal Peril; and they are as justly accountable for their Ignorance, as if they had sinned against the clearest Knowledge. For this, saith our Saviour, John iii. 19. is the Condemnation of the World, that Light is come into the World, and Men love Darkness rather than Light. If therefore, thro' any wicked prejudice against the Truth, or thro' a profane neglect to inquire after it, we continue ignorant of it, this will be no Excuse at all for our sinning against it; but we shall be as certainly condemned for our affecting Ignorance, and loving Darkness more than Light, as if we had sinned against the clearest Light and Conviction. For what a monstrous Instance is it, of Stupidity and Impiety together, to shut our Eyes against that Light which is of such infinite Moment to us, and which the Son of God thought worth his while to come down from Heaven to reveal to us; what is this, but to tell him to his Face, that if he had pleased, he might have spared his Pains, and not have come so far on such an impertinent Errand, as is not worth a Man's while to listen to?

exercise

to? O prodigious Supineness and Stupidity! that Men who are so inquisitive about the little Affairs of this Life, as that when they receive but a Letter in which they imagine any of their Worldly Interests are concern'd, they cannot forbear one moment breaking it open and perusing the Contents of it, should yet receive a Message from the God of Heaven by his own Son, in which their everlasting Happiness or Misery is concerned, and take no notice of it; but let it lie by them Day after Day, without ever inquiring into the Contents of it, or taking the least Care and Pains to inform themselves about it. Good God! what reverence have these wretched Creatures for thee, or what regard for themselves, that can thus receive thy Messages, and with them their own Eternal Fate, with the same unconcern and indifferency, as they would the most impertinent Tales of Bedlam? Wherefore, as we regard either God or our own Souls, let us from henceforth be persuaded seriously to attend to this great and momentous Revelation of our Saviour, and thorowly to inform our Minds with its Doctrines and Precepts; for which end let us avoid, as much as in us lies, busying and entertaining our Thoughts with nice and curious Speculations, or remote and disputable Opinions; and betake ourselves to the Study of Things upon which our Eternal Life and Happiness depends, viz. of the Duties which the Gospel exacts and requires of us, and of the Motives by which it presses and enforces them; which when once we have digested into a clear and distinct Scheme of Practical Knowledge, that will be a standing Light to our Wills and Affections, by which we shall always see our way before us, and be secured from wandering into dangerous Errors, and at length safely conducted to eternal Light and Happiness.

S E · C T. III.

Of Christ's Priestly Office.

IN treating of which great and momentous Argument, I shall endeavour First, To shew what the antient Priesthood was, and in what Acts it consisted. Secondly, To prove that the antient Priesthood in its proper Acts was a Type and Figure of the Priesthood of our Saviour. Thirdly, To explain the Priesthood, and Priestly Acts of our Saviour, corresponding to that antient Priesthood, in which they were prefigured.

First, What the antient Priesthood was, and in what Acts it consisted. In the first Ages of the World, it is evident, that in Matters which concerned himself alone, every Man was his own Priest. For thus in sacrificing to God upon their own particular Accounts, both Cain and Abel officiated for themselves, but in Family-Sacrifices, the Father of the Family was the Priest, as is evident by Noah and Job, Gen. viii. 22. Job i. 5. And when Families were multiplied into Tribes and greater Societies, the Prince of each Society was also the Supreme Priest of it; and hence, before Aaron was consecrated, Moses, who was the Prince of Israel, officiated also as the Priest in that solemn Sacrifice by which the Covenant with Israel was confirmed, Exod. xxiv. 6. And long before Moses, Melchisedeck, King of Salem, was also Priest of the most High God, Gen. xiv. 18., And it is evident, that originally Kings were the High-Priests of their Countries. For so Aristotle observes, that μοναρχεῖν καὶ ἱερατεῖν, to Rule and Sacrifice were Offices conjoined in the same Person, Polit. l. 3. So also Virgil, Æn. 3.

Rex Anius, Rex idem hominum, Phœbiq; Sacerdos,
i. e. Anius, in the same Person was King of Men, and Priest of Phœbus; upon which Servius hath this Note, Sanè majorum hæc erat consuetudo, ut Rex esset etiam Sacerdos vel Pontifex; It was a Custom among the Antients, that the King should be also Priest or High-Priest. Which Custom was continued for a long while in Ægypt, and from thence was derived to the Greeks,
and

and from them to the Romans; for so Plut. Quæst. Rom. p. 279. tells us. Τὸ πλεῖστον οἱ βασιλεῖς τὰ πλεῖστα καὶ μέγιστα τῶν ἱερῶν ἔδρουν, καὶ τὰς θυσίας ἔδουν αὐτοὶ μὲν τῶν ἱερῶν, ἱεροὶ δὲ οὐκ ἐμετέριον, ἀλλ' ἦσαν ἀνεσφάκτοι καὶ βαρύντες, τῶν μὲν Ἑλλήνων οἱ πλεῖστοι τὴν ἐξουσίαν αὐτῶν μεταλλάξαντες, μόνον τῷ θύον τοῖς θεοῖς ἀπέλειπον, i. e. Of old Kings performed the most and greatest Parts of the Sacred Rites, and, together with the Priests, sacrificed the Victims; but upon their exceeding their due Bounds, and taking upon them to domineer proudly and unjustly, many of the Greeks took from them all their Civil Power, and only left them their Authority to sacrifice to the Gods: But the Romans, as he goes on, utterly rejecting their Kings, appointed another to succeed them in the High Priesthood, whom they wholly debarred from intermeddling with Secular Affairs. Dionysius Halicarn. speaking of the Power of Kings, expressly tells us, πρῶτον μὲν ἱερῶν καὶ θυσιῶν ἡγεμονίαν ἔχον, καὶ πάντα δι' αὐτοῦ πράττειναι τὰ πρὸς θεοῖς ὅσια, i. e. That they had the Government of all Sacrifices and Sacred Rites, and whatsoever was to be done to the holy Gods was done by them. And therefore the reason why Melchisedeck here is more particularly taken notice of under the Character of a King and Priest, was not because there was no other Kings so but he, but perhaps because all other Kings that were contemporary to him, were revolted to Idolatry, so that he only remained a Priest of the most High God. And in being a King and Priest together, he was a Type of our Saviour, who was a Priest, not after the Order of Aaron, but after the Order of Melchisedeck, Heb. v. 10. For in Aaron the Priestly Office was separated from the Kingly, which latter remained in Moses, after he by the command of God had devolved the Priesthood, which was originally in himself, upon his Brother Aaron; and so according to Divine Institution, the Priesthood was to continue in the Family of Aaron, separate from the Regal Power, till the coming of our Saviour, who re-united those Offices in himself; and became a Royal Priest after the antient Order of Melchisedeck. For, upon the Separation of these Offices, none could be a Priest of the Aaronical Order, but such as were descended from the Family of Aaron; and therefore Christ could not be a Priest of that Order, because he descended from the Family of Judah; and, being of the Royal Lineage, he resumed the Priestly Office from the House of Aaron, and joined it to the Kingly Office again, with which it was originally united; by which he abrogated the Priesthood of the Aaronical Order, and in its room restored the antient Melchisedecan or Royal Priesthood. And hence the Author to the Hebrews observes, that Christ pertaineth to another Tribe, of which no Man gave attendance at the Altar; for it is evident that our Lord sprang out of Judah, of which Tribe Moses spake nothing concerning the Priesthood, Heb. vii. 13, 14. and therefore by being a Priest of a different Tribe from that to which the Aaronical Order was confined, he disannulled that Order, and erected another in the room of it, viz. the antient Order of Melchisedeck, which was before the Aaronical. Hence St. Ambrose in Loc. Et quomodo translatus est Sacerdotium? Ex tribu ad tribum, de Sacerdotali ad Regalem, ut eadem ipsa sit Regalis & Sacerdotalis; & intueretur mysterium, primum fuit Regale Sacerdotium Melchisedech, secundum consequentiam hujus sermonis; secundum etiam fuit Sacerdotale in Aaron; tertium in Christo fuit iterum Regale, i. e. How was the Priesthood translated? Why, from one Tribe to another, viz. from the Sacerdotal to the Regal, that so it might be both Regal and Sacerdotal; and this is the Mystery; the first Priesthood of Melchisedeck was Regal; the Second was Sacerdotal in Aaron; the Third was Regal again in Christ. For that which distinguished the Melchisedecan from the Aaronical Priesthood, was not, as some imagine, the difference of their Sacrifice, viz. that Melchisedeck sacrificed only inanimate Things, whereas Aaron sacrificed Animals also; for, that Melchisedeck sacrificed, there is no doubt, because he was Priest of the most High God, but that he sacrificed inanimate Things only, such as Bread and Wine, there is not the least intimation in Scripture; only it is said, that when he met Abraham, he brought forth Bread

Bread and Wine, Gen. xiv. 18. that is, to refresh Abraham's Soldiers after their Battle with Chedorlaomer, as the manner was in those Countries, Vide Deut. xxiii. 4. and Judg. viii. 15. and vi. 15. And what is all this to his Sacrificing? But, that he sacrificed Animate as well as Inanimate Things, is evident, not only because Animal Sacrifices were generally used before the Institution of the Aaronical Priesthood, and it is very improbable that he, who was so eminently the Priest of the most High God, should never offer the accustomed Sacrifices; but also because Christ's Sacrifice was an animate one, who was a Priest after Melchisedeck's Order, and not of the Order of Aaron, Heb. vii. 11. So that if the difference between these Two Orders consisted in this difference of their Sacrifice, Christ must be rather a Priest of the Aaronick than the Melchisedecan Order. And how could the Acts of the Priesthood of Aaron be Typical of our Saviour's, which is Melchisedecan, as the Scripture all along makes them, if they were of a different Nature from those of Melchisedeck? How could Aaron's bloody Sacrifices be Typical of our Saviour's Priesthood which was after the Order of Melchisedeck, if Melchisedeck's Priesthood admitted no bloody Sacrifice? As to the Acts of their Priesthood therefore, for any Thing that appears to the contrary, these Two Orders were the same, but in this they apparently differed, that whereas the Regal Power was united to Melchisedeck's Priesthood, it was wholly separated from Aaron's, who, in all probability, was the first High Priest in the World, that was not a King as well as a Priest. The Priestly Acts therefore of these Two different Orders being the same, we shall better understand the Nature of our Saviour's Priesthood, tho it be of the Order of Melchisedeck, by the account we have of the Aaronical, than by that of the Melchisedecan Order; because the former is far more distinct and particular than the latter. For of the Acts and Functions of Melchisedeck's Priesthood there is very little mention in Scripture, whereas those of Aaron's are described at large in all their particular Rites and Circumstances. The Priestly Office therefore in general consists in officiating for sinful Men with God, in order to the reconciling of God to them, and obtaining for them his Favour and Benediction. To which End there are Two Offices necessary to be performed; First, To offer Sacrifice for them, and thereby to make some fitting Reparation to God for their past Sins and Provocations; Secondly, To present that Sacrifice to God, and in the Virtue and Merit of it to interceed with God in their behalf, in order to the Restoring them to his Grace and Favour. And accordingly we read of the Jewish High-Priest, who of all their other Priests was the most perfect Type and Representative of Christ in his Priestly Office; and this more especially in celebrating the Mysteries of the great Day of Expiation, that on this Day he was appointed to bring the Beast to the Door of the Tabernacle, which was set apart to die for the Sins of the People, and to kill it there with his own Hands; by which Action he did, as the Peoples Representative, offer a Life to God, as a Reparation for those manifold Sins, by which they had justly forfeited their own Lives to him; after which he was to take the Blood of it, and present it before the Lord in the Holy of Holies, sprinkling it Seven Times with his Finger, upon and before the Mercy-Seat, by which Action he interceded with God to accept that Blood in lieu of the forfeited Lives of the People; and accordingly, the whole Performance is called making an Atonement for the Children of Israel, for all their Sins once a Year, Lev. xvi. 34. But for the fuller Explication of the Priestly Office, it is necessary we should briefly explain these Two essential Acts of it, viz. of sacrificing and presenting the Sacrifice to God by way of Intercession for the People.

As for the first of these, the Apostle tells us, that every High-Priest is ordained to offer Gifts and Sacrifices, Heb. viii. 3. And that he is ordained for Men in Things pertaining unto God, that he may offer both Gifts and Sacrifices for Sin, Heb. v. 1. It is true indeed to sacrifice, in a strict Sense, i. e. to kill the Sacrifice, seems not to have been so peculiar to the Priestly Office, as to present the Blood of the Sacrifice before the Lord by way of Intercession, the latter of which was so appropriate to the Priesthood, as that it was never allowed, upon any occasion whatsoever, for any but a Priest to perform it; but as for killing the Sacrifice, it seems that not only the Priests, but sometimes the Levites, Vide 2 Chron. xxx. 17. yea, and sometimes the People themselves were allowed to perform it, Vide Lev. iv. 24, 29, 33. tho it is probable, that the Levites were allowed it only in Cases of Necessity and the People only in private and particular Sacrifice; but in the publick and general Expiation, wherein Christ's dying for the Sins of the World, was more eminently expressed and represented, not only the presenting the Blood of the Sacrifice, but the killing it too, was peculiarly appropriated to the Priesthood. So that tho in private and particular Expiations, the People had a right to sacrifice, or kill the Victim, yet in all publick ones, such as our Saviour's was, that Right was incommunicably inherent in the Priesthood. Now the killing of those Sacrifices which were designed for Expiations of Sin, was a transferring of Punishment from the People to the Victim: For, you must know, the Jews had Two sorts of Laws, viz. Civil and Ritual; their Civil Laws were enforced according to their strictest Sanction, with the Penalty of Death, which Penalty, in many Cases allowed by God, admitted of this mitigation, that the Life of a Beast should be accepted in exchange for the forfeited Life of the Offender. Their Ritual Laws were enforced with the Penalty of legal Uncleaness, and being separated upon that Account from the Congregation and Publick Worship; which Penalty also was thus far relaxed, that if they offered the Life of a Beast in Sacrifice, their Uncleaness should be thereby purged, and themselves restored to the Benefit of the publick Worship. In both which Cases, the Sacrifice was evidently substituted to suffer for the Offender; and in the first Case he was substituted to suffer that very Punishment, which the Offender had incurred. And therefore you find that the greater Crimes were no otherwise to be expiated, but by the Blood of the Offender himself, whereas for lesser ones the Blood of a Beast was accepted, which is a plain Argument, that that Punishment, which in greater Sins was *exact*ed of the Criminal himself, was in the Case of smaller Sins transferred from the Criminal to the Sacrifice; and, that the Punishment of the Beast was instead of the Punishment of the Man. And this is most evident in the Case of the Scape-Goat, who, upon the High Priest's laying his Hands upon his Head, had the Sins of the People transferred on him, and was thereby so polluted, that he defiled the Man, that led him into the Wilderness; who was therefore obliged, before he returned to the Camp, to lustrate himself by washing his Clothes, and bathing his Flesh in Water, Lev. xvi. 26. And, so also those expiatory Sacrifices, whose Blood was carried into the Holy Place, and their Bodies burnt without the Camp, had the Sins of the People so imputed to them, and were so defiled by that Imputation, that they were ordered to be carried without the Camp immediately, lest they should defile the whole Congregation; and those who carried them out and burnt them, were so far actually defiled by them, that it was unlawful for them to return to the Camp, till they were legally purified; which is a plain Argument, that in these Sacrificial Expiations the Sin and Guilt of the People was still transferred upon the Sacrifice, and consequently, that the Death of these Sacrifices was instead of the Death of those Criminals; and accordingly, Lev. xvii. 11. we are told, that it is the Blood, i. e. of the Sacrifice, that maketh an Atonement for the Soul. And indeed this was the Sense which all Nations had of Expiatory Sacrifices, viz. that their Death was instead of the Punishment, due to the Offenders that offered them: For thus the Jews, by making Expiation, generally understand suffering Punishment for another, in order to his being released from suffering it himself: For thus where-ever it is said by them, Ecce me in Expiationem, the meaning is, En me in ejus locum, ut portem iniquitates ejus, i. e. I stand in such a one's place, that I may bear his Iniquities; and so, Ecce me in expiationem R. Chijæ & filiorum ejus, i. e. castigationes quæ obveniunt mihi mibi sint in expiationem R. Chijæ & filiorum ejus, Behold I am for an Expiation of R. Chijab and his Sons, i. e. Let the Afflictions that happen to me be for an Expiation of R. Chijab and his Sons. So when all the People were to say to the High Priest, Simus nos expiatio tua, the meaning was, In nobis fiat expiatio tua, nosque subeamus tuo loco quicquid tibi evenire debet: Let us be thy Expiation, that is, let thy Expiation be made upon us, and let us undergo in thy stead whatsoever evil thou hast deserved; of which see more, Buxtorf. Lexic. Chald. p. 1078. And accordingly in the Form of Prayer they used at the killing the Sacrifice, they plainly expressed the Substitution of it in the room of their own forfeited Lives; Obsecro, Domine, peccavi, rebellis fui, &c. O Lord, I obsecrate, I have sinned, I have been rebellious, I have acted perversely, I have done this and that evil; of which I now heartily repent; let this be my Expiation, and let those Evils which might justly fall upon my Head, fall upon the Head of my Sacrifice, Outram de sacrif. p. 273. And so also for the Gentiles, Eusebius Demonst. l. 1. tells us, that they looked upon their λύτρεα or Expiations, as ἡ σφῶν ψυχῆς ἀντὶ ψυχῶν, ὥσπερ ψυχὴν ἀντὶ ψυχῆς, i. e. that their Lives were a Commutation for the Lives of those that offered them, as one should say a Life for a Life; and accordingly Porphyrus tells us, that the first Original of the Sacrifice of Animals was, τίνας καρπὸς ψυχῆν ἀντὶ ψυχῆς αἰτουμένους, i. e. Certain Occasions requiring that a Life should be offered for a Life, Abstin. l. 4. and hence they were wont to curse the Sacrifice, and solemnly to imprecate all those Evils on it which themselves had deserved, vid. Herod. Euterp. & Scriv. in Æneid. 3. From all which it is abundantly evident, that this Priestly Act of sacrificing or killing the expiatory Sacrifice, was nothing else but a translating the Punishment that was due to the Offerer from his Person to his Victim or Sacrifice. But then,

Secondly, Besides this, another Sacerdotal Act was presenting the Blood of the Sacrifice to God by way of Intercession for the People: For when the Sacrifice was slain, the Priest was to take the Blood and sprinkle some of it round about the Altar of Burnt Offerings; and the rest of it, say the Jews, was poured out by the Priest on the South-side Floor of the Altar; where there were two Holes thro' which it ran into a Channel that conveyed it into the Valley of Kidron; but in the Sin-Offerings for the High Priest and the Congregation, he was to carry the Blood within the Sanctuary, and to sprinkle of it seven times before the Veil of the Sanctuary, and to put some of it upon the Horns of the Altar of Incense, after which the Remainder of the Blood was to be disposed of, as was said before, on the Altar of Burnt Offerings. And at the great Day of Expiation, the High Priest himself, having slain the Sacrifice, was to carry the Blood of it into the Holy of Holies, and there with his Finger to sprinkle the Blood of it seven times before the Mercy-Seat. Now this sprinkling of the Blood was nothing else but a solemn presenting of the Life of the sacrificed Animal to God, as an Exchange or Price of Redemption for the forfeited Life of the Offender: For, whatsoever was offered upon the Altar was always looked upon as religiously presented to God; so that by sprinkling the Blood on the Altar, which is the Vehicle of Life, and therefore is sometimes called the Life, vid. Gen. ix. 4. the Life was solemnly tendered and presented to God as to the supreme Lord of Life and Death; and the meaning of this Tendency, was to move God by way of Intercession to accept of that Life instead of the Offender's, which was forfeited into his Hands: For since, as a Learned Author of our own hath observed, all Divine Worship, whether natural or instituted, was either to implore or to commemorate God's Grace and Favour, this solemn sprinkling of the Blood in expiatory Sacrifices, must necessarily respect the imploring of God's Pardon of those Sins for which the Expiation was designed. So that in performing this Rite, the Priest was a silent Intercessor with God in the behalf of the People, and his action was a solemn Deprecation, of which this was the natural language and meaning; O Lord, I beseech thee, be merciful to these guilty Supplicants, in lieu of whose Blood, which I acknowledge is justly forfeited feited to thee, I here present thee the Life of this Sacrificed Animal, whose Blood I am sprinkling on thy Altar; humbly imploring thee to accept it as a ransom for their Lives; and in consideration of it, to release them from that mortal Penalty in which they stand bound to thy Justice. Upon which Intercession of his, God's high Displeasure was atoned, and the Priest thereupon authorized to blest the People, i. e. to declare that God was appeased and reconciled to them.

And thus you see what the Office of Priesthood is, and in what Acts it consists: In sum therefore, it consists in sacrificing to God for the Sins of the People, and interceding with him, in the virtue of the Sacrifice, to be propitious and merciful to them.

I proceed now in the Second Place, to shew that both these Acts of the Priestly Office among the Jews, were designed and intended by God for Types and Shadows of the Priesthood of our Saviour. For as for the first, viz. Sacrificing, the Scripture plainly tells us, that it was instituted for a Typical Representation of the Death of our Saviour. For so the Author to the Hebrews, makes the Sacrificed Body of our Saviour to answer to, and succeed in the room of the whole Body of the Jewish Sacrifices, as the true Antitype of those Types and Shadows, Heb. x. 5, 6. &c. Wherefore when he cometh into the World, speaking of Christ, he saith, Sacrifice and Offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me, that is, a Body to be Sacrificed in the room of that former Sacrifice and Offering; In burnt Offerings and Sacrifices thou hast had no Pleasure; then said he, ver. 9. Lo I come to do thy Will, O God; that is, to die a Sacrifice for the Sins of the World; and thereby, saith he, he taketh away the first, that is, those Typical Sacrifices, that he may establish the Second, that is, that great Sacrifice of Christ's Body: For so it follows, verse 10. By the which will we are sanctified, thro' the offering of the Body of Jesus Christ once for all. In which Words he plainly makes all the Jewish Sacrifices in general, to be Types and Figures of the great Sacrifice of our Saviour's Death. And indeed, as those Sacrifices were all of them to be slain, and to be all sound and immaculate; they were so far forth at least express Types of our Saviour, both as to his Death, and unspotted Innocence and Purity. But then, as for those Sacrifices whose Bodies were burnt without the Camp, they were more peculiarly Types, than any of the rest, of our Saviour's Sacrifice; because they had not only all those Things appertaining to them, by which the other Sacrifices represented it, but besides that, they were Expiations for Sin, as well as the Sacrifice of our Saviour; and by their being burnt without the Camp, did more eminently prefigure our Saviour's being crucified without the City. Hence the Apostle, Heb. xiii. 10, 11, 12. We have an Altar whereof they have no right to eat which serve the Tabernacle; for the Bodies of those Beasts, whose Blood is brought into the Sanctuary by the High Priest for Sin, are burnt without the Camp, lest they should pollute the Congregation; as being defiled and curst upon the account of the Peoples guilts which were transferred upon them: Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the People with his own Blood, suffered without the Gate, that is, as an Expiatory Sacrifice, that took upon him the guilts of Mankind, and thereby became polluted and accursed. In which Words the Death of our Saviour is plainly represented, as the true Antitype of the Expiatory Sacrifices of the Jews; and accordingly, as all Types have much less in them, of that which they prefigure, than their Antitypes; so those Expiatory Sacrifices had something of real Expiation in them, tho' much less than the Sacrifice of our Saviour. For so Heb. ix. 13, 14. For if the Blood of Bulls and of Goats, and the Asbes of an Heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctify to the purifying of the Flesh, (by which it is evident, that there was a real Expiation made by those Sacrifices, so far as concerned the purifying Mens Flesh, i. e. releasing them from corporal Punishments and legal Uncleanesses;) How much more, saith he, shall the Blood of Christ, who, thro' the eternal Spirit, offered himself without spot to God, purge your Consciences from dead Works? Where the same Expiation in kind, that that was made by those Legal Sacrifices, is expressly attributed, tho in a much higher degree, to the Sacrifice of our Saviour, which plainly argues the former to be a Type and Shadow of the latter.

And then, as for the second Act of the Jewish Priesthood, viz, his presenting the Blood of the Sacrifice to God by way of Intercession for the People, this was also instituted for a Typical Representation of our Saviour's presenting the Blood of his Sacrificed Body to God by way of Intercession for Mankind. And hence his Blood is called the Blood of sprinkling, which speaks better Things for us, than the Blood of Abel, Heb. xii. 24. which is a plain allusion to the High Priest's sprinkling the Blood of the Sacrifice before the Mercy-Seat, on the great Day of Expiation; by which Action, as I shewed before, he interceded with God to be propitious to the People, in consideration of that Blood which he there presented in their behalf. And therefore as the Holy of Holies was a Type of Heaven, Heb. ix. 24. and the High Priest's entring thereinto, after he had slain the Sacrifice, a Type of our Saviour's entring into Heaven after the Sacrifice of himself, Ibid. ver. 7. 11, 12. so the High Priest's sprinkling the Blood before the Mercy-Seat, was also a Type of our Saviour's presenting his Blood to the Father in Heaven, and there pleading it in our behalf; and hence he is said to have entred into the Holy Place; that is, into Heaven, the Antitype of the Holy of Holies, and to have obtained Eternal Redemption for us, neither by the Blood of Bulls and Goats, as the Jewish High-Priest did, but by his own Blood, Heb. ix. 12. where the High Priest's entring into the Holy of Holies, with the Blood of Bulls and Goats is plainly opposed, as a Type to its Antitype, to Christ's entring into Heaven with his own Blood, and therefore the High Priest's interceding for the People in the Holy of Holies, in virtue of the Blood of their Sacrifices, must necessarily be Typical of Christ's interceding for us in Heaven, in the virtue of his. Thus, as God cast and contrived the Rites and Ceremonies of the Jewish Law in general, into a Prefiguration, or visible Prophecy of the Mysteries of the Gospel, that so by those Emblematical Predictions he might intimate before-hand those glorious Truths to pious and inquisitive Minds, which he intended afterwards more plainly to reveal, (vid. Col. ii. 17. and Heb. x. 1.) so particularly, in the Jewish Priesthood, he drew a rude Draught and Representation of the future Priesthood of our Saviour; that so by that figurative Sacrifice and Intercession he might visibly foreshew and intimate to the World the Sacrifice and Intercession of our Saviour. For thus it is evident from Philo, that the Jews understood their High Priest to be a Type of the Eternal Word or Messias; for thus in his Allegories he makes the Temple to be an Emblem of the World, Ἐν δὲ τῇ Ἀρχιερεὺς ὁ πρωτόγονος αὐτῷ θεῷ λόγος, in which God's first-born Divine Word is the High Priest; and in several other Parts of his Writings, he makes the High Priest's Crown and Vestments to be Types and Representations of the Dignity and Perfections of the Eternal Word; by which it is evident, that by their Typical High Priesthood, the Jews were in some measure instructed in the nature of the Priesthood of our Saviour.

Thirdly and Lastly, I shall now proceed to explain the Priesthood and Priestly Acts of our Saviour, corresponding to that antient Priesthood in which they were prefigured. In general therefore the Priesthood of our Saviour, corresponding to that antient Priesthood, consists in offering up himself a Sacrifice for our Sins, and in presenting that Sacrifice to God in our behalf, and thereby interceding with him to be merciful and propitious to us. So that the Priesthood of our Saviour consists in these Two Acts;

First, In offering up himself a Sacrifice for our Sins.

Secondly, In presenting that Sacrifice to God by way of Intercession for us; of each of which I shall discourse at large.

S E C T. IV.

Concerning the Sacrifice of our Saviour.

IN handling the first of these, viz. the Sacrifice of our Saviour, I shall endeavour, First, to shew that the Death of Christ had in it all the requisite Conditions of a most real and complete Sacrifice for Sin. Secondly, To make appear how effectually God's exacting such a Sacrifice, in order to his being reconciled to Sinners, conduces to their Reformation.

First, That the Death of Christ had in it all the requisite Conditions of a real and most compleat Sacrifice for Sin. Now to make both a true and perfect expiatory Sacrifice, there are Five Things indispensibly necessary.

First, That in being Sacrificed it should be substituted in the room of an Offender to be punished for him, in order to his being released from his own personal obligation to Punishment. For in all those Legal Expiations which prefigured this great Expiation of our Saviour, the killing of the Sacrifice was, as I shewed before, a real transferring and inflicting upon it the Punishment due to the Offender that offered it, in order to his being excus'd from suffering it in his own Person.

Secondly, Another necessary Condition of an Expiatory Sacrifice is, that it should be pure, sound, and unblemish'd; and indeed, this Condition is required in all kinds of Sacrifices, whether Expiatory or Eucharistical; that they should be pure or Legally clean, and that they should be sound, and without blemish. For so Lev. xxii. 20. But whatsoever hath a blemish, that shall ye not offer; for it shall not be acceptable for you; and ver. 21. It shall be perfect, i.e. sound and intire, to be accepted; there shall be no blemish therein: And then he goes on to Particulars, It shall not be blind, or broken, or having a Wen, or Scurvy, or Scabbed, verse 22. Now, tho the legal Uncleaness, and the natural Blemishes here forbidden in Sacrifices, had nothing of Sin or Immorality in them; yet the prohibition of these natural Blemishes in Sacrifices that were incapable of moral ones, denotes the necessity of a moral cleanness and unblemish'dness in that great Expiatory Sacrifice for the Sins of the World, which they typified and prefigured; and hence Christ is called, A Lamb without blemish and without spot, 1 Pet. i. 19.

Thirdly, Another necessary Condition to a perfect Expiatory Sacrifice is, that it should be of such an intrinick worth and value, as that its Death may be, in some measure, an equivalent Commutation for the Punishment which the Offender deserves. For the end of punishing, whether it be the Offender himself, or another in his stead, is to secure and maintain the Authority of the Law; in order whereunto it is highly requisite, that the Punishment should ordinarily be equivalent to the demerit of the Crime; otherwise it will not be a sufficient Motive to warn and deter Men from committing it. And herein consisted the Imperfection of the antient Expiatory Sacrifices, that what they suffered was much short of what the Offenders, they suffered for, deserved; for they only substitute the Life of a Brute, in the room of the Life of a Man, which is of far greater worth and value; and therefore by how much less valuable the Life of a Beast is than the Life of a Man, by so much less was the Punishment transferred upon the Sacrifice than the Guilt contracted by the Offender.

Fourthly, Another necessary Condition to the making of a true and perfect Sacrifice, was, that it should be free and unforced on the part of the Offerer. For since he had deserved the Punishment in his own Person, it was very fit, both that the Sacrifice, that was to undergo it for him, should be something that was his own, otherwise he could have no right to substitute it in his own stead or to offer its Life to God in exchange for his own; and that he should freely offer it to be killed in his stead, otherwise he had not been consenting to the exchange, without which it must have been invalid, and consequently the Expiation void; and hence, Lev. i. 3. it is required that he should offer it of his own voluntary Will at the door of the Tabernacle of the Congregation before the Lord.

Fifthly, It is also a necessary Condition to a true and perfect Sacrifice for Sin, that it should be admitted and accepted by God in the room and stead of the Punishment that is due to him from the Offender himself. For by violating his Laws, we give God a Right to exact the Penalty of them at our own Hands; so that if he pleases, he may refuse to admit of any Substitute to suffer for us; and if he will insist upon his Right to punish us in our own Persons, and refuse to admit of any exchange; what another suffers for us will signify nothing to our discharge or acquittal, because it is not our own suffering, who stand personally obliged to God to suffer the utmost Evil that our Sin deserves; and therefore to admit another to suffer for us, is an Act of pure Grace and Favour in him, which he may grant or refuse as he pleases. So that the expiatory Virtue of all Sacrifice lies in God's admitting and accepting it in exchange for that personal Punishment we owe him; and hence he is said to have given them the Blood upon the Altar, to make an atonement for their Souls, Lev. xvii. 11. that is, to have admitted and accepted that Blood which was offered on the Altar as an Atonement for their Lives, which were forfeited to him. And thus you see what are the necessary Conditions of a real and perfect expiatory Sacrifice; all which, as I shall now shew you, do fully concentre in the Death and Sacrifice of our Saviour. As,

I. In dying or being sacrificed, he was substituted in the room of sinful Men, to be punished for them in order to their being released from their personal obligation to Punishment. And hence, Tit. ii. 14. he is said to have given himself for us that he might redeem us from all Iniquity, and purify to himself a peculiar People zealous of good Works; that is, he gave his Life in exchange for ours, and thereby became our ἀντίλυτρος. For by what follows it is plain, that his giving himself for us here is to be understood by way of an Expiation; for it was, first, to redeem us from all Iniquity, which is the very Phrase by which the virtue and efficacy of Propitiatory Sacrifices is expressed; for so λύσσω, which signifies to redeem, in the Greek, is the same with כָּפַר which signifies to expiate by Sacrifice in the Hebrew; and accordingly the Greek word λύτρον, which in the Greek signifies the Price of Redemption, is frequently used for the Hebrew Copher, which signifies a Price to reconcile or propitiate. So that Christ's giving himself for us, to redeem us from all Iniquity, must signify, according to the common acceptation of the Phrase, his laying down his Life for us, as the Price of our propitiation with God. For so among the Jews that common form of Speech, Let me be your Redemption, was as much as to say, Let me bear your Iniquities, and undergo the Punishment of them, that you may escape, Buxtorf. Lexic. Chald. 1078. Agreeably to which in Heb. ix. 15. Christ is said to die for the Redemption of Transgressions, that is, to buy off the Punishment of them with his own Blood. For so he is said to have given himself ἀντίλυτρον, i. e. a Ransom or Price of Redemption for all, 1 Tim. ii. 5, 6. and to have given his Life as a λύτρον or Ransom for many, Matth. xx. 28. But then, Secondly, his giving himself for us was to purify us, which also refers to the Purifications which were made by Expiatory Sacrifices. For so the word καθαρίζω signifies to cleanse from guilt by Sacrifice. Thus Lev. xvi. 30. On that Day shall the Priest make Atonement for ye to purify ye, that ye may be pure from all your Sins before the Lord; and so the word is generally taken not only in the Writings of Moses, but also in all other Authors, by whom Expiatory Sacrifices are promiscuously called ἱλαστικὰ, ἀγνιστικὰ, and καθαριστικὰ, i. e. atoning, sanctifying, and purifying. Agreeably to which, the Blood of Christ is said to purify us from all Sin, i. e. from the guilt of all Sin, 1 John i. 7. For it was from that that the Blood of Sacrifices did immediately purify Men. And hence he is said to have died for our Sins, 1 Cor. xv. 3. to have given himself for our Sins, Gal. i. 4. and to have once suffered for our Sins, the just for the unjust, 1 Pet. iii. 8. and his Blood is said to be shed for many for the remission of Sins, Matth. xxvi. 28. and to be a Propitiation for our Sins, 1 John iv. 10. by which Expressions it is evident, that our Sins were the cause, and the expiation of them the end of Christ's Suffering; and it is upon this account, that he is said to bear our Sins in his own Body on the Tree, 1 Pet. ii. 24. that is, to undergo the Punishment of them in those exquisite Torments he endured upon the Cross, and to be made Sin for us, 2 Cor. v. 21. even as the Expiatory Sacrifices were made Sin, i. e. Piacula, that underwent the Punishment of Sin for the Offenders that offered them, Lev. iv. 3, 29. and also to be made a curse for us, Gal. iii. 13. that is, by having the guilts of our Sins transferred on him, even as the Sacrifices were curst, as was shewed before, by the very translation of the guilts of the People upon them; and accordingly, as by this Translation, those Sacrifices were render'd curst and unclean; and, as such, were to be burnt without the Camp; so our Saviour, upon the same account, suffered without the Gate, Heb. xiii. 11, 12. And, to name no more, in Isaiah liii. we are told, That he should bear our Grievs, and carry our Sorrows, and be wounded for our Transgressions, and bruised for our Iniquities; that the Chastisements of our Peace were upon him, and that by his Stripes we should be healed; that the Lord hath laid upon him the Iniquities of us all, and that for our Transgressions he was stricken, that his Soul was made an Offering for Sin; that he should bear our Iniquities, and be numbred with the Transgressors, and bear the Sins of many, and make intercession for the Transgressors; all which Expressions do as plainly denote him to be substituted to be punished for us, in order to our release, as it is possible for Words to do; and, unless we will admit that to be the sense of Scripture, which the words of it do as plainly import, as they could have done if it had been its sense, it will be impossible to determine it to any sense whatsoever; because Men may prevaricate upon the plainest words, and with quirks of Wit and Criticism pervert them to a contrary meaning. And I dare undertake, by the same Arts that our Adversaries use to avoid the force of these Testimonies, to elude the plainest Words that the Wit of Man can invent to express this Proposition, that Christ's Death was a Punishment for our Sins; which to any reasonable Man is a sufficient Answer to all the Socinian Cavils. And indeed the whole current of Scripture runs so clear against them, that they do as good as acknowledge, that according to the most common and natural acceptation of its words, it fairly implies the Doctrine we contend for, viz. that the Death of Christ was a real Punishment for the Sins of the World. But their main Plea is, that it is unjust, in the nature of the thing, to punish one Man for the Sins of another, and therefore we ought rather to impose any Sense on the Words of Scripture, how foreign soever, than attribute to God so great a piece of Injustice, as the punishing his own Son for the Sins of the World. But as for the Justice of this Procedure, I shall endeavour by and by to clear and vindicate it.

II. He died in pure and spotless Innocence; and this was highly necessary to his being an expiatory Sacrifice for the Sins of others. For had he been a Sinner, he had deserved to die upon his own account, and the utmost Effect of his Death could have been only the Expiation of his own Sin, by which his Life must have been forfeited to the Divine Justice; and it is impossible that he, who hath forfeited his own Life, should by his Death redeem the forfeited Lives of others. And accordingly, Heb. vii. 26, 27. we are told, that such an High Priest became us, who is holy, harmless, and undefiled, separate from Sinners, and made higher than the Heavens, who needed not daily, as those High Priests, to offer up Sacrifice first for his own Sins, &c. because the Sacrifice which he offered was his own Life; so that, had he been obliged to offer that for his own Sins, it could have made no Expiation for ours; the bare Payment of a Man's own debt being no satisfaction for other Mens. And therefore, herein the Apostle places the virtue and efficacy of Christ's Blood, by which it was rendered sufficiently precious to be a Ransom for the Sins of the World, World, that it was of a Lamb without Spot or Blemish, i. e. the Blood of a most holy and innocent Person, who never deserved the least Evil on his own Account, and therefore was truly precious, and fit to be a Ransom for the Sins of others, 1 Pet. i. 18, 19. And accordingly he is said to be made sin for us, i. e. to be devoted as a Sacrifice for our Sins, who knew no Sin, 2 Cor. v. 21. where you see the great Emphasis of his Sacrifice is laid upon his Innocence, as that which was necessary to qualify him to be a Sacrifice for others. So that by that spotless Obedience of Christ's Life, thro' the whole Course of which he did no sin, neither was there any guile found in his Mouth, he consecrated himself an acceptable Sacrifice to God for the Sins of the World.

III. His Death was of sufficient intrinsic Worth and Value to be an equivalent Commutation for the Punishment that was due to the whole World of Sinners: For the reason why God would not pardon Sinners without some Commutation for the Punishment that was due from them to his Justice, was, that he might preserve and maintain the Authority of his Laws and Government: For had he exacted the Punishment from the Sinners themselves, he must have destroyed the whole Race of Mankind; and had he pardoned them, on the other hand, without any Punishment at all, he must have exposed his Authority to the Contempt and Outrage of every bold and insolent Offender; and therefore to avoid these dangerous Extremities of Severity and Impunity, his infinite Wisdom found out this Expedient, to admit of some Exchange for our Persons and Punishment, that so some other Thing or Person being substituted in our stead, to suffer and be punished for us, neither we might be destroyed, nor our Sins be unpunished. This therefore being the Reason of God's admitting of Sacrifice, it was highly requisite that the Punishment of the Sacrifice should bear some Proportion to the Guilt of the Offenders; otherwise it will not answer God's Reason of admitting it: For since the Reason of his admitting it, was the Security of his Authority, the less he had admitted, the less he must have secured his Authority by it: For to have exacted a small Punishment for a great Demerit, would have been, within a few degrees, as destructive to his Authority, as to have exacted none at all; to punish but little for great Crimes, is within one Remove as mischievous to Government as total Impunity; and therefore to support his own Authority over us, it was highly requisite that he should exact not only a Punishment for our Sin, but also a Punishment proportionable to the Guilt and Demerit of it: For there is no doubt, but the nearer the Punishment is to the Demerit of the Sin, the greater Security it must give to his Authority. And upon this Account the Sacrifices of the Jews were infinitely short of making a full Expiation for their Sins; because, being but brute Animals, their Death was no way a proportionable Punishment to the great Demerit of the Sins of the People: For what proportion could there be between the momentary Sufferings of a Beast, and those eternal Sufferings which the Sins of a Man do deserve? The Death of a Beast is a Punishment very short of the Death of a Man, but infinitely short of that eternal Death to which the Man's Guilt do oblige him: and accordingly the Expiations, which were made for Men by the Death of those Beasts, were very short and imperfect: For so the Apostle tells us, that they only sanctified to the purifying of the Flesh, Heb. ix. 13. that is, to the acquitting them from their Corporal Penalties and Legal Uncleanesses; but could not at all make them perfect, as pertaining to their Consciences, i. e. could not expiate the Guilt of any wilful Sin, by which their Consciences were laid waste and wounded, ver. 9. And accordingly, the Heathen seem to be aware how short the Death of Beasts was of the Punishment which was due for the Sins of Men: For tho' in ordinary Cases they sacrificed Beasts, as well as the Jews, yet in great Extremities, when they conceived their Gods to be highly displeased with them, even the most civilized of them sacrificed Men; which shews, that they thought the Death of Beasts to be an insufficient Expiation for the Sins of Men. And indeed it cannot be denied, but that the Sacrifice of a Man, as such, is much more proportionable portionable to the Punishment which the Sins of Men deserve, than the Sacrifice of a Beast; because a Man is a much nobler Creature, as being far advanced above a Beast by the Prerogative of his Reason; and consequently his Death, considered as a Man, must be a much more valuable Exchange for the Punishment that is due to those he dies for. But herein the Heathen were miserably mistaken; that they did not consider that the Men whom they sacrificed were Sinners as well as themselves, and that it is a much greater Flaw in an Expiatory Sacrifice to be a Sinner than to be a Brute: For whereas the latter only renders it less effectual and valuable; the former, as was shewn before, renders it utterly void and insignificant; and therefore, tho the Death of a Man, considered as such, is of much more value than the Death of a Beast, yet to expiate for the Sins of Men, there is more internal Virtue and Efficacy in the Death of an innocent Beast, than of a sinful Man; because the latter can expiate only for his own Sin, whereas the former can have no Sin but that of others to expiate. Since therefore Men were all spotted and blemished with Sin, there was no Life so fit for them to offer to God, in Commutation for their forfeited Lives, as that of innocent Brutes; so that the best Commutation they could make was infinitely short of their Demerit. And, suppose that the Men which the Heathen offered, had been all pure and innocent, yet their Lives would have been only an equivalent Commutation for the forfeited Lives of an equal Number of Sinners; unless therefore one half of Mankind had been innocent, and they had been sacrificed for the other half that was guilty, it had not been an equal Commutation so much as for the temporal Punishment, which was due to God from the Guilty; but then for their eternal Punishment, a Hecatomb of Angels had been short and insufficient: For what Proportion is there between a temporary Death and an eternal Misery? Since therefore, in great Compassion to us, God hath thought meet to accept of a Sacrifice in lieu of that Punishment which was due to him from Mankind; and since to secure his own Authority, it was highly requisite, that what this Sacrifice suffered for us, should be in some measure equivalent to what we had deserved, and since we had deserved to suffer for ever, it necessarily follows that this Sacrifice must be something infinitely more precious and valuable than the Blood of Bulls and Goats, yea, than the Lives of Men or Angels; and what can that be but the Blood of the Eternal Son of God, the infinite Dignity of whose Person rendred his Sufferings for us equivalent to the infinite Demerit of our Sins: For it was the Dignity of his Person that gave the Value to his Sufferings, and enhanced his temporary Death to a full Equivalence to those endless Miseries which we had deserved: For if the Life of a King be (as David's People told him) worth ten thousand Lives, of what an infinite Value must the Life of the Lord of Glory and of the Prince of Life be, who being the Son of God, of the same Nature and Essence with his eternal Father, must from thence necessarily derive upon his Sacrifice an Immensity of Worth and Efficacy. And hence we are said to be purchased with the Blood of God, Acts xx. 28. and to have the Life of God laid down for us, John iii. 16. and to be redeemed not with corruptible Things, as Silver and Gold, but with the precious Blood of Christ, 1 Pet. i. 18, 19. and accordingly the Author to the Hebrews makes the Virtue and Efficacy of Christ's Blood to consist in the Worth and Value of it; For if the Blood of Bulls and Goats, &c. sanctified to the purifying of the Flesh; how much more shall the Blood of Christ, who thro' the Eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your Consciences from dead Works to serve the living God? Heb. ix. 13, 14: By all which it is evident, that it was the infinite Dignity of Christ's Person, which derived that infinite Merit on his Sacrifice, whereby it became an equivalent to the infinite Demerit of our Sins. Nay, of such an infinite Value and Worth was his Sacrifice, that it not only countervailed for the Punishment due for our Sin, but did abundantly preponderate it; upon which Account God engaged himself, not only to remit that Punishment, in consideration of it, but also to bestow his Spirit and Eternal Life on us, both which, as hath been shewn shewn before, are as well the Purchase of Christ's Blood, as the Remission of our Sins : For God might have remitted our Punishment without super-adding the Gift of his Spirit and Eternal Life to it ; and therefore, since in consideration of Christ's Blood, he hath super-added these Gifts to the Remission of our Punishment, it is evident that his Blood was equivalent to both, i. e. that it was not only a valuable Consideration for the Pardon of our Sins, but also for the Assistance of his Spirit and our eternal Happiness.

IV. His Death was on his Part voluntary and unforced : For since, as a Sacrifice, he was to be innocent, and yet to undergo the Punishment of our Sin, he could not be the one and do the other, without his own free Consent and Approbation : For no innocent Person can be justly made obnoxious to Punishment, but by his own Act and Choice ; because Punishment bears a necessary respect to Sin, and the Desert of suffering evil, doth originally spring out of doing evil. So that an innocent Person, considered as such, cannot deserve to be punish'd, nor consequently be justly obliged thereunto ; but yet, notwithstanding his Innocency, he may by his own Will and Consent, oblige himself to undergo a Punishment, which otherwise he did not deserve ; and when he hath so obliged himself, the Punishment may be justly exacted of him : For tho he hath no Sin of his own to be punished for, yet he may by his own Act oblige himself to undergo the Punishment of another Man's. And therefore, tho merely as an innocent Person, he cannot deserve to be punished, either upon his own Account, or any other Man's, because having no Sin of his own, he cannot be guilty of another Man's ; yet so far as he hath the free Disposal of himself, he may substitute himself in the room of one that is guilty, and thereby render himself obnoxious to his Punishment. As for Instance, Suppose that by some criminal Action of his own, a Man hath forfeited his Liberty or Life to the Law, it is certain that no innocent Man, as such, can be thereupon obliged to suffer Death or Imprisonment ; but suppose that this innocent Man, having the free Disposal of himself, shall voluntarily offer his own Life or Liberty to the Magistrate in exchange for the forfeited Life or Liberty of the Criminal, and the Magistrate shall think meet to accept it, in this Case he is justly liable, notwithstanding his Innocence, to undergo the Punishment that was due to the Offender : For if he may justly offer this Exchange, as there is no doubt but he may, supposing that he hath the free Disposal of himself, to be sure the Magistrate may justly accept of it ; because the Life of the Offender is as much in his Disposal, as the Life that is offered him in exchange for it, is in the Disposal of the Offerer : So that he hath as much Right to give the Offerer the Offender's Life for his, as the Offerer hath to give his own Life for the Offenders ; and when both Parties have a Right to the Goods which they exchange with each other, and the Goods which they receive, are, on both sides, equivalent to the Goods which they give, it is impossible the Exchange should be injurious to either : the Magistrate cannot be injured, because for the Life of the Offender which he gives, he receives the Life of the Offerer, which is equivalent : the Offerer cannot be injured, because for his own Life which he gives, he receives the Life of the Offender, which is dearer to him ; and neither Party being injured, the Exchange must be just and equal on both sides. Now that Christ had the free Disposal of his own Life, he himself tells us, John x. 18. No Man taketh my Life from me, but I lay it down of myself ; I have Power to lay it down, and I have Power to take it up again ; this Commandment have I received of my Father. And that the Lives of our Souls were in God's free Disposal, as being justly forfeited to him by our Sins, the Scripture assures us, when it tells, that all have sinned, and that the Wages of Sin is Death. Christ's Life therefore being in his own free Disposal, he had an undoubted Right to exchange it with God for the Lives of our Souls ; and the Lives of our Souls being in God's free Disposal, he had as undoubted a Right to exchange them with Christ's for his Life, upon the free Tendry which he made of it. And in this Exchange neither Party could be injured, because they both received an equiva- lent for what they gave ; Christ gave his own Life to God, for which God gave him the Lives of our Souls in exchange, which were far dearer to him ; God gave the Lives of our Souls to Christ, for which Christ gave him his own most precious Life in exchange ; which, considering the infinite Dignity of his Person, was at the least tant-amount. It is true indeed, both Parties having a Right to the free Disposal of the Goods which they exchange with each other, to render the Exchange just and valid, it was necessary that both should be freely consenting to it : Now that God was freely consenting, I shall shew by and by ; and that Christ was so too, the Scripture expressly testifies ; for so we are told, that he gave himself for our Sins, Gal. i. 4. and that he gave his Life a Ransom for many, and gave his Flesh for the Life of the World, Mat. xxi. 28. and, in a word, that, he gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all Iniquity, Tit. ii. 14. and that he laid down his Life for us, 1 John iii. 16. all which plainly imply, that by his own voluntary Consent, he substituted himself to suffer in our stead, that we might escape ; and freely exchanged his own Life with God for the Lives of our Souls, which were forfeited to him. And if, notwithstanding his Innocence, it were just in God to expose him, without any respect to our Sins, to all those bitter Sufferings he endured, (and that it was so, the Socinians themselves must acknowledge, or charge God with Injustice) how much more was it just, when of his own accord he substituted himself to bear our Punishment for us, and freely exchang'd his Life for our Salvation ?

V. And Lastly, His Death was admitted and accepted by God in lieu of the Punishment which was due to him from Mankind ; and it is this that compleats it an Expiatory Sacrifice, and without this, it had been altogether insignificant to the Expiation of Sin, notwithstanding all the above-named Qualifications : For it is the personal Punishment of the Offender, which Sin gives God a Right to, and which the Obligation of his violated Law exacts : Since therefore all Mankind had sinned, they all stood bound to God to suffer the desert of their Sin in their own Persons, and therefore the suffering of another in our stead, can signify nothing towards the releasing us from this Obligation, unless God, in pure Grace and Favour to us, shall please to admit and accept it ; because another's suffering is not ours, and it is ours that God hath a Right to. Indeed the Punishment of the guilty Person himself, supposing it to be equal to his fault, doth, without any interposal of Grace, extinguish the guilt of it, and by its own force and virtue dissolve his Obligation to Punishment ; because when a Man hath suffered as much as he deserves, he hath suffered as much as the Law can oblige him to, and so consequently cannot be obliged to suffer any more ; but should another suffer for me even as much as I deserved to suffer myself, it will be altogether insignificant to the expiation of my guilt, unless God in mere Grace will accept it for my suffering ; because it is not another's suffering but my own that the Obligation of his Law *demand*s and exacts of me ; and altho the other's suffering for me may as effectually secure the Honour and Authority of God's Law, as if I had suffered what I deserved in my own Person, yet it is evident that in admitting the others suffering instead of mine, God remits and relaxes the Obligation of his Law, which requires that I should suffer in my own Person. And therefore, notwithstanding that Christ hath suffered for us, and God hath admitted his suffering for ours, yet this being out of mere grace and favour to us, he is still truly said to pardon and forgive us for Christ's sake, Eph. iv. 32. because for the sake of Christ's suffering he graciously remits to us the Obligation of his Law, which requires the Punishment of our Sin at our own Hands ; and since his remitting to us the Obligation of his Law for the sake of Christ's suffering was pure grace and favour, he was not at all obliged to remit it unconditionally ; but being absolute Master of his own Graces and Favours, he might remit it upon what Terms and Conditions he pleased. So that, tho if we had suffered in our own Persons, the utmost of what our Sin doth deserve, he had been obliged obliged in Justice to discharge us without any farther condition; yet since out of his own free grace he hath admitted another to suffer for us, he may admit it with what Limitations he pleases; and if he shall think meet (as he hath done) to limit it to our Repentance and Amendment, all that Christ hath suffered for us will be insignificant to our discharge from our Obligation to Punishment, unless we repent and amend. So that the Death of Christ, you see, doth not expiate Mens Sins, as their personal Punishments do, by their own natural Virtue, but by Virtue of God's accepting it upon his own Terms and Conditions: And without God's accepting it, it would not have been at all an Expiation for the Sins of the World, and without the Conditions upon which he accepteth it, viz. our Repentance and Amendment, it will not be at all an Expiation for ours. Now God hath solemnly declared his Acceptance of Christ's Death as an Expiation for our Sins; for it was God that laid upon him the Iniquities of us all, Isa. liii. 6. that gave his only begotten Son, John iii. 16. and sent him to be a Propitiation for us, 1 John iv. 10. which plainly imply his free acceptance of him; and therefore Christ is said to have given himself for us an Offering and a Sacrifice to God for a sweet smelling savour, Eph. v. 2. i. e. for an Expiation that was highly grateful and acceptable to him. So that now the Expiation of our Sins by the blood of Christ wholly depends on our performing the Condition on which God hath accepted it; and since it is upon Condition, that we repent and amend, that God hath accepted the Blood of Christ in Exchange for the eternal Punishment we owe him, unless we perform this Condition, the Blood of Christ will not at all avail us, but we shall still remain as much obliged to undergo that Punishment, as if he had never died for us at all. God's acceptance, indeed, hath made the Death of Christ available for us under those Conditions and Limitations upon which he accepted it; but if when he hath accepted it conditionally, we expect that it should avail us absolutely and unconditionally, we miserably deceive and abuse our own Souls. Thus far therefore God's acceptance of Christ's Death, instead of the Punishment we have deserved, hath rendred it an effectual expiation and ransom for Sinners, that if they repent and amend, they shall be released and acquitted from the Obligation they lie under to suffer eternal Punishment in their own Persons, and entitled to everlasting Life and Happiness. And thus the Death of Christ, you see, had in it all the necessary Qualifications of a real and complete propitiatory Sacrifice. I proceed therefore in the Second Place, to shew what a wise and effectual Method this of God's admitting Christ's Sacrifice for Sinners is to reduce and reform Mankind, which will evidently appear by considering these Five Things:

First, That the Sacrifice of Christ's Death was a most sensible and affecting acknowledgment of the infinite guilt and demerit of our Sin. For thus under the Law, the offering of Propitiatory Sacrifices implied a most solemn and sensible Confession of the guilt of the Offerer. For his laying his Hand upon the Head of his Sacrifice, was a Symbolical Action, by which he solemnly acknowledged to God that he had justly deserved to suffer that Death himself which his Sacrifice was suffering for him; and accordingly the Jews have this Maxim, Ubi non est peccatorum confessio, ibi non est impositio manuum, quia manuum impositio ad confessionem pertinet; where there is no Confession of Sins there is no imposition of Hands, because the imposition of Hands appertains to Confession. For so Lev. v. 5. they are particularly directed to confess their Sins upon their bringing their Trespass-Offering before the Lord; and, as hath been shewn before, they had a set Form of Confession in all their expiatory Sacrifices; and particularly in that solemn Propitiation, viz. the dismissal of the Scape-Goat, the High Priest is directed to lay both his Hands upon the Goat's Head, and to confess over him all the Iniquities of the Children of Israel, Lev. xvi. 21. So that as Confession is a kind of audible Sacrifice, so Sacrifice was a kind of visible Confession; and the demerit of their Sin being thus represented to their Eyes by the Death of their Sacrifice, was far more apt to move and affect them them with horror and detestation of it, than any audible Confession, how severe or pungent soever. And accordingly our Saviour in offering up himself as an expiation for our Sin, did, as it were, lay his hand upon his own head, and, as our Representative, solemnly acknowledge to God, that we had justly deserved to suffer for our Sin a Punishment equivalent to that which he was undergoing for us. And what a dreadful one must that be which is equivalent to the Death of the Son of God? What less Punishment than our everlasting Misery can countervail the temporary Death of him who was so eminent and innocent, who was God-man united in one Person, and the Lamb of God without spot or blemish? If the Jews by sacrificing a Beast did make such a moving acknowledgment, that they themselves deserved to die, how much more did Christ by sacrificing himself for us, acknowledge in our stead that we deserved to die eternally? So that whatsoever virtue there is in the most bitter and pathetick Confession to create in Mens Minds a horror and detestation of their Sins, all that and much more there is in the Sacrifice of our Saviour, whose Blood cried louder against our Sins, and made a far more Tragical Confession of their demerit than it is possible for the most sorrowful Penitent to do with all the Eloquence of his grief and bitter strains of self-aborrence. And hence our Saviour is said to have condemned Sin in the Flesh, Rom. viii. 3. i. e. to have solemnly acknowledged by his dying for it, what a dreadful Punishment it deserves.

Secondly, It is to be considered also, that the Sacrifice of Christ's Death was a most ample declaration of God's Severity against our Sins. All wise Governours ought so to exercise their Mercy, as that it may not be prejudicial to their Authority, by giving Offenders encouragement to kick against it; but whilst their Mercy is easy, and apt to be moved by slight Reasons and Motives, it will infallibly expose their Authority, and render it cheap and vile in the Eyes of bold and insolent Offenders: The Reasons therefore which move a Prince to pardon Criminals ought to be such, if possible, as give all manner of discouragement to them from presuming upon impunity for the future. God therefore being inclined by the infinite benignity of his Nature, to shew Mercy to Sinners, was obliged in Wisdom to shew it in such a way, and upon such Reasons, as might sufficiently discourage them from presuming upon his Mercy, to the prejudice of his Authority; and there is no Reason could be so sufficient to this end, as a valuable Sacrifice to suffer in our stead, and bear the Punishment of our Sin; which Reason carries with it such an awful Severity, as must needs dishearten any considering Sinner, from presuming upon impunity if he go on in his Sin. For, next to exacting the Punishment of the Offender himself, the most dreadful Severity he could have expressed was, not to remit it upon any Consideration but this, that some other should undergo it in his stead; and by how much greater and more valuable the Person is, who undergoes it for us, so much greater and more formidable God's Severity appears in remitting it to us. Since therefore, in consideration of our Pardon, God would admit no meaner Sacrifice than the precious Blood of his own Eternal Son, he hath hereby expressed the utmost indignation against our Sin, that he could possibly do, unless he had absolutely resolved never to pardon it at all. So that now we have all the reason that Heaven or Earth can afford us, to tremble at his Severity, even while we are within the Arms of his Mercy. For what Man in his Wits would take encouragement to sin on from a Mercy that cost the Blood of the Son of God? He that can presume upon such a reason of Mercy, hath Courage enough to outface the Flames of Hell, and if Hell itself had stood open before us, and we had seen the damn'd Ghosts weltering in the Flames of it, it would not have given us such a loud and horrible warning of God's Severity against our Sin as this tremendous Sacrifice of the Son of God doth. If then a Mercy that is so secured from being made an encouragement to Sin, by the terrible reason and consideration upon which it is founded, cannot deter us from sinning on, there is no wise Mercy that we are capable of,

of, and consequently no Mercy that the great God can indulge with safety to his Authority. For what Mercy can be safe from our abuse and presumption, if this be not, that is thus guarded with thunder, and attended with the utmost severity that Mercy could possibly admit of? Wherefore if after I have seen my Saviour in his Agony deprecating with fruitless cries that fearful Cup which I deserved; if after I have beheld him hanging on the Cross, covered with Wounds and Blood, and in the bitter Agony of his Soul heard him crying out, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? And, in a word, if after I have seen that God, to whom he was infinitely dear and precious, turn a deaf ear to his mournful Cries, and utterly refuse to abate him so much as one degree or circumstance of a most shameful and tormenting Death, in consideration of my Pardon; if, I say, after such a horrible Spectacle, I have heart enough to sin on, I am a courageous Sinner indeed, or rather a desperate one, not to be affected or restrained by all the Terrors of Hell.

Thirdly, This Sacrifice of Christ is also to be considered, as a most obliging Expression of the Love of God and our Saviour to us. For, if God had so pleased, he might have exacted our Punishment at our own Hands, and made us smart for ever in our own Persons; and this notwithstanding we had heartily repented. For tho to repent is the best thing a Sinner can do, yet it doth not alter the nature of the Sin he repenteth of, so as to render it less evil or less deserving of Punishment; nor indeed is Repentance a sufficient reason to move the all-wise Governor of the World to grant a publick Act of Pardon and Indulgence to Sinners; it being inconsistent with the safety of any Government, Divine or Humane, so far to encourage Offenders, as to indemnify them by a publick Declaration, meerly upon condition of their Future Repentance and Amendment. For all Men are naturally apt to presume that God will be better to them than his word, and therefore had he declared that he would pardon them upon their Repentance without any other reason, this would have encouraged them to hope that he might pardon them, tho they repented not at all, or at least tho they repented but by halves. Wherefore since our Repentance is not a sufficient reason to oblige God to grant a Publick Pardon to Sinners, and since this was the best reason we could offer in our own behalf to move him thereunto, it hence necessarily follows, that he might have justly exacted the Punishment of our Sin of us, and made us smart for it for ever, notwithstanding the best reason we could have offered him to the contrary. But such was his goodness towards us, as to admit another to suffer in our stead, that so neither we might be ruined nor our Sins be unpunished. And then that the Punishment of our Sin might be a sufficient reparation to his injured Authority, he admitted his own Son upon his voluntary offering himself to undergo it for us, who by the dignity and innocence of his Person, rendred that temporary Death he underwent for us equivalent to that eternal Death which we had deserved. Now what a Prodigy of love was this, that the God of Heaven, whom we had so infinitely offended, should part with his own Son, for us, and freely consent that he should undergo our Punishment! Which while I seriously consider, it puzzles my conceit, and out-reaches my wonder: so that tho I have infinite reason to rejoice in it, yet while I am contemplating it, I seem to be looking down from some stupendous Precipice, whose height fills me with a sacred horror, and almost over-jets my Reason. But Oh! the amazing love of the Son of God towards us, that he should put himself in our stead, and interpose his own Breast as a living Shield between ours and his Father's Vengeance! Which, considering the greatness of his Person, and of our unworthiness, is such a stupendous Expression of Love, as no Romance of Friendship ever thought of! And what is the proper influence of all this Love, but to oblige us for ever to God and our Saviour, in the bands of a reciprocal Affection; to melt down our stubbornness and enmity against them, and draw us on to our Duty with the Cords of an invincible Endearment? For is it possible my Sins should be as dear to me as the Son my God was to his own Father; and yet the Father left him out of love to me, and shall not I leave them out of love to him? And when the Son of God hath been so kind to me, as to lay down his Life for me, can I be so ingrateful to him, as to doat upon those Sins which he hated more than all the shame and torment which he endured on their account; those Sins that were the cause of all his Sufferings, the Thorns that gored his Temples, and the Nails that pierced his Hands and Feet? Sure if we are not utterly lost to all that is modest and ingenuous, tender, or apprehensive in Humane Nature, it will be impossible for us to resist these endearing Instances of the love of God and our Saviour, which carry warmth and fervour enough with them to melt the most obdurate Natures.

Fourthly, Christ's Death and Sacrifice is also to be considered as a sure and certain ground of our hope of Pardon, if we repent and amend. For it was upon the virtue of Expiatory Sacrifices, that all Mankind depended for their Reconciliation with God; and therefore these Sacrifices were a principal part not only of the Religion of the Jews, but of the Gentiles too, who besides their Eucharistical, had their constant Expiatory Oblations to atone and pacify their Gods. And this more especially in Times of Publick Danger and Calamity, when they conceived their Gods to be most offended with them; at which Seasons they were wont to offer up their most costly Sacrifices, and devote not only Hecatombs of Beasts to their Altars, but many Times the more precious Lives of Men, Women, and Children; imagining that the more valuable the Life was, the greater virtue there was in it to appease the angry Deity. And upon this sacred Rite did all the World build their hope of Reconciliation with God, as being conscious that by their Sin, they had forfeited their own Lives to him, and that there was no other way to redeem them, but by making a commutation with him, and offering him another Life for their own, which was therefore called ἀντίδοτος, i. e. a Life for their Life; and ἀντίλυτρον, i. e. the Price of their Redemption. But, alas! so miserably defective were the very best of their Sacrifices, that they could not rationally depend on them with any confidence or assurance. For as for the Heathen Sacrifices, God had never promised to accept them, and, it being an act of pure grace and favour in him to admit of such a commutation, it wholly depended on his own good-will, whether he would admit it or no; and, without some express revelation, it was impossible for them to know which way his Will was determined in the case. And then even their most precious Sacrifices, which were the Lives of Men, were infinitely short in value to redeem the Lives and Souls of those that offered them; those sacrificed Men being Sinners themselves, and they but a few Sinners for many. And as for the Jewish Sacrifices, tho God in many Cases had promised to accept them in commutation for the Lives of their Bodies; yet those being only the Lives of Brutes, which were but negatively innocent, as being incapable of Sin or Virtue, could merit nothing of God, and consequently were infinitely short of a valuable commutation for the forfeited Lives of their Souls. All which considered, there was no relying on them for Redemption from the Obligation they lay under to eternal Punishment. But now all these Defects are abundantly supplied in the Sacrifice of our blessed Saviour. For his Life was not only infinitely valuable by reason of his personal Union to the Godhead, and so in itself an equivalent Ransom; he was not only no Sinner, which the best of the Heathen Sacrifices were; he was not only Negatively innocent, which was all that the Jewish Sacrifices were; but he was also perfectly Righteous, and by virtue thereof infinitely dear and acceptable to God; and to crown all, God himself both by express Revelation, and by raising him from the dead, hath openly declared his acceptance of his precious Blood, as a Ransom for the Sins of the World. And, upon this most sure and certain ground, stands our hope of Pardon and Reconciliation with God. So that in the precious Blood of this our meritorious and accepted Sacrifice, we openly behold the Mercy of God, inviting us into grace and Favour, and with out-stretched Arms ready to receive and embrace us; which gives us the most effectual Encouragement in the World to return to our Duty. I confess, if we had no such Sacrifice to depend on, the Sense of our past Guilt might justly discourage us from all Thoughts of future Repentance; for though the natural Goodness and Benignity of God might happily give us some small hope, yet, on the other hand, the Consideration of his natural Abhorrence of Sin, and the mighty Obligations he lies under to punish it, as he is a wise and righteous Governour, would very much dash our Hope out of Countenance. So that the utmost Encouragement we should have, would be that which the King of Nineveh gave his People, Who can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce Anger, that we perish not? Jonah iii. 9. But now we can certainly tell, that if we will turn from our Sins, he will turn from his Anger; for our Hope depends not on a doubtful Peradventure, but upon a full, perfect, and sufficient Sacrifice, paid down to, and accepted of God. What then should hinder us from returning to him, who are thus firmly assured of his gracious Reception, and do certainly know before-hand, that all our past Provocations shall be blotted out, and our penitent Souls embraced with the same Grace and Favour as if we had never offended?

Fifthly, and lastly, This Sacrifice of Christ is also to be considered as the Seal and Confirmation of the New Covenant: For thus of old, Covenants between God and Men were wont to be sealed and transacted by Sacrifice. So Gen. xv. Abraham, by God's Command, being to strike Covenant with him, offered a Sacrifice, which he divided in the middle, laying each Moiety one against the other, between which God passed in the likeness of a burning Lamp, and so made a Covenant with him, saying, Unto thy Seed will I give this Land; in which Rite of passing between the Parts, God condescended to the Manner of Men; for so the Jews, when they struck Covenant with God, were wont to cut the Sacrifice in sunder, and pass between the Parts thereof, Jer. xxxiv. 18, 19. by which Action they made this Imprecation on themselves, Thus let me be divided and cut in pieces, if I violate the Oath I have now made. And accordingly, the Blood of the Sacrifice is called by Moses, The Blood of the Covenant, Exod. xxiv. 8. and the Jews are said to make a Covenant with God by Sacrifice, Psal. l. 5. For all Expiatory Sacrifices were regularly attended with Peace-offerings, in both which the Priest or the People were God's Guests, and in token of Reconciliation, did eat and drink with him of the Provisions of his Altar or Table: For in the Burnt-offerings, the Sin-offerings and the Trespass-offerings, the Priests only, as the Proxies and Representatives of the People, were admitted to be God's Guests; but then in the Peace-offerings, which followed them, the People themselves were admitted to his Table, to partake with him of those sacred Viands. So that in the first, the Priests, as the Peoples Representatives, struck Covenant with God for them, in the second they struck Covenant with God for themselves. Thus, as it was the Custom of all Nations to solemnize their Covenants with one another, by eating together; so God, in Condescension to the manner of Men, and to confirm their Faith in his Promises, did, by the same Rite, engage himself in Covenant with them. And in the same manner the Sacrifice of our blessed Lord was a Seal and Ratification of the New Covenant; upon which account it is called, as the Jewish Sacrifices were, the Blood of the Covenant, Heb. x. 29. Heb. xiii. 20. For his Sacrifice upon the Cross was the meritorious Sin-offering, in which he, as the High-Priest, the Head and Representative of his Church, did solemnize the New Covenant between God and us, and obtained of his Father an inviolable Ratification of his Promise of Grace and Eternal Life: For in that dreadful Transaction God did solemnly engage himself to Christ in the behalf of his Church, to perform to her what he had promised, to the utmost, upon the Terms specified in the New Covenant. And therefore Christ is said to have made Reconciliation in his own Body on the Cross, and to have slain the Enmity thereon, Eph. ii. 16. and to have made Peace, that is, a Covenant of Peace, through the Blood of the Cross, Col. i. 20. But then to this Sin-offering there follows a Peace-offering, and that is the Lord's Supper, in which the Church, for herself, by eating and drinking at this his Table, strikes Covenant with God; and upon those holy Signs of Christ's Body and Blood, gives to, and receives from God Assurance of mutual Amnesty and Friendship; and hence, 1 Cor. x. 16, 20. this holy Supper is call'd The Communion of the Body and Blood of Christ, and drinking the Cup of the Lord, and being Partakers of the Table of the Lord: For when God, in this Supper, doth, by the Hand of his Priest, present his Bread and Wine to us; he doth thereby renew his Covenant with us, and when we receive, and eat and drink God's Viands, we thereby renew our Covenant with him. Thus God, in great Condescension to our desponding Minds, hath been pleased to ratify his Covenant with us in our own way and manner; not that this Ratification doth render his Covenant surer in itself, for nothing can be surer than his Promise; and yet for the Confirmation of our dissident Minds, he is sometimes pleased to add his Oath to his Promise; and, for the same Reason, to his Promise and Oath he hath super-added these federal Ratifications, which being the same with those legal Forms and Rituals by which Men were wont to ratify their Covenants and Agreements with one another, are upon that Account more apt to assure and confirm our Minds. And now what a mighty Influence must this solemn Confirmation of the New Covenant have upon us, to excite and quicken our Piety and Virtue, and render us actively zealous of good Works? For, when God hath not only owned the New Covenant, by the many miraculous Attestations he hath given it; but hath also vouchsafed, by all those federal Rites, that were most sacred among Men, to oblige himself to perform it, we have abundant reason to believe not only that it is he that hath promised all the good Things of this Covenant; but also that he is fully resolved to perform those Promises to us, if we perform the Conditions of them; since, by the Blood of his own Son, he hath engaged himself to him in our behalf; and by the sacramental Signs of the Body and Blood of his Son, he has engaged himself to us in our own Persons, to perform what he has promised, to the utmost Punctilio. So that now our Faith in the Covenant stands upon a firm and immoveable Foundation, as having not only the Promise and the Oath, but also the Seal of God to depend on; and having all the good Things of the Covenant thus solemnly consigned to us, what abundant Encouragement doth it give us to return to God and our Duty? For now we are not only assur'd of his Pardon and gracious Reception, but also of the Assistance of his Blessed Spirit to back and enforce our pious Endeavours, and to enable us to conquer all those Resistances of Flesh and Blood, with which we are to contend; and to encourage us to contend with all our might, we have an immortal Crown of Glory propos'd to us as the Reward of our Victory, and are firmly assured, that after we have spent a few Moments here in the Practice of Piety and Virtue, we shall be removed from hence into that triumphant State of Immortality, there to reign in unspeakable Glory and Delight, among the blessed Conquerors above, and sing Hallelujahs with them for ever. For to all these blessed Things we are entitled by the Ratifications of the New Covenant. Having therefore these great and precious Promises sealed to us by the Blood of Jesus, Let us cleanse ourselves from all Filthiness of Flesh and Spirit, perfecting Holiness in the Fear of the Lord, 2 Cor. vii. 1.

And thus you see how effectually the Death of Christ, as it is a Sacrifice for Sin, contributes to our Reformation. But after all, it must be acknowledged that it contributes only as a concurrent Cause with our own Endeavours; it doth not work upon us as if we were dead Machines, that have no Free-will or Principle of Self-determination; it draws us indeed, but it is with the Cords of a Man, i. e. with a powerful Grace and Persuasion, but doth not drive or hale us with violent or irresistible Agency: For, after all the powerful Influence of his Death to reform and amend us, we are still in our own Disposal; and so may resist and baffle the Efficacy of his Death, and in despite of it, continue in our Wickedness if we please. But if we do, it is at our own eternal Peril, and we must one Day expect to answer,

answer, not only for the Blood of our own Souls, which, in despite of the most powerful Method of saving them, we have wilfully ruined and destroyed; but also for the Blood of our Saviour, which we have not only defeated, but trampled on: and if both these be brought to our Account, it had been better for us, not only that we had never been born, but that our Saviour himself had never been born, since all that he has done to save us, will be brought in Judgment against us, as an horrid Aggravation of our Guilt, to inflame the Reckoning of our Punishment. So that unless we concur with this great Design of Christ, by endeavouring our own Reformation to the utmost of our Power, his Death will not only be as insignificant to our Happiness, as it is to the Redemption of Devils; but even those vocal Wounds of his, which were made to plead for, will accuse and condemn us, and that eloquent Blood, which in its Native Language speaks better Things for us than the Blood of Abel, will, like the Souls under the Altar, raise a Cry of Vengeance on us as high as the Tribunal of God. Wherefore, as we would not find this blessed Sacrifice, which was designed for our City of Refuge, converted into an Avenger of Blood, let us diligently concur with it to our utmost Power, in this necessary Design of our Reformation, that so being washed white and clean in the Blood of it, we may appear before God holy, and unblameable, and unreproveable in his sight. And thus I have given an Account of the first Act of Christ's Priesthood, viz. his Sacrifice.

S E C T. VI.

Of Christ's Intercession, or presenting his Sacrifice to God in Heaven, by way of Advocation for us.

I Now proceed to the second Act of our Saviour's Priesthood, corresponding to that ancient Priesthood, in which it was typified and prefigured, viz. his presenting his Sacrifice to God in Heaven, thereby to move God, as our Advocate, to be merciful and propitious to us. In discoursing of which, I shall endeavour,

First, To explain the Nature of that Advocation, which he performs by presenting his sacrificed Body in Heaven.

Secondly, To shew the admirable Tendency of this Method of God's communicating his Graces and Favour to us, through the Intercession and Advocation of our Saviour, to reduce and reform Mankind.

As for the First, viz. The Nature of this our Saviour's Advocation for us in Heaven, it may be thus defined, It is a solemn Address of our blessed Saviour to God the Father in our behalf, wherein by presenting to him his own sacrificed Body, and by continuing and perpetuating the Presentation of it, he doth effectually move and solícite him graciously to receive and accept our Prayer, and to impower him to bestow on us all those Graces and Favours, which, in consideration of his Sacrifice, God hath promised to us: For the better understanding of which Definition, I shall distinctly explain the several Parts of it, which are these Four;

First, It is a solemn Address of our blessed Saviour to God the Father, in our behalf.

Secondly, This Address is performed by the presenting his Sacrificed Body to the Father in Heaven.

Thirdly, It is continued and perpetuated by the perpetual Oblation or presenting of this his sacrificed Body.

Fourthly, In virtue of this perpetual Oblation, he doth always successfully move and solícite God; and this;

First, To receive and graciously accept our sincere and heartly Prayers; and Secondly, To impower him to bestow on us all those Graces and Favours, which, in consideration of his Sacrifice, God hath promised to us.

I. This Advocation of Christ in Heaven is a solemn Address to the Father in our behalf. And this is implied in the very Word Advocation; for the proper Business of an Advocate is to address in the behalf of his Client to the Party with whom he is concerned; or to plead the Cause of his Client with some Person, with whom he has some Difference, or from whom he expects some Favour. Now St. John tells us, that we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous, 1 John ii. 1. which must therefore necessarily imply his addressing to the Father in our behalf, in order to the composing that Difference which Sin hath made between him and us, and to the obtaining for us his Mercy and Favour: For in this Sense the Greek Word ἀντιπαρστηναι, which we here render Advocate, is generally used among all Authors, vid. Outram de Sacrif. p. 360. And so also the Word Intercession signifies, to address for one Person to another, in order to the reconciling some matter of Difference between them, or to the obtaining from the one some Favour for the other: And therefore since Jesus Christ is said to intercede for us at the right Hand of God, Rom. viii. 34. this Intercession also must necessarily imply his making Application to God in our behalf: For so the Phrase ἐνυπάρχων ὑπὲρ, which we render to intercede for, signifies to advocate or plead the Cause of another; as on the contrary ἐνυπάρχειν καὶ doth always signify to accuse, Rom. xi. 2. 1 Maccab. viii. 32. and 1 Maccab. x. 61. and 1 Maccab. xi. 25. And consequently, when our Saviour is said ἐνυπάρχων ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, it must necessarily denote his addressing himself to God as our Advocate, to plead our Cause, and solicite our Interest; and accordingly, Heb. ix. 24. we are told, that Christ is entred into Heaven itself, now to appear in the Presence of God for us; which Phrase cannot, without infinite Force, be otherwise understood, than of his appearing for us as our Advocate to God. By all which it appears, that in this his Intercession for us, our Saviour Addresses to God the Father, from whose bountiful Hands he procures and receives all those Blessings and Favours which he derives to us. So that the Father is the Fountain whence all our Blessings flow, and the Son is the Channel that receives them thence, and conveys them down to us: For, as he is Mediator, the Son can bestow nothing on us in his own right, independently from the Father, whose Minister he is, and by whose Commission and Authority he acts: And since they are all his Father's Goods which he bestows upon us, he cannot justly bestow them without his Leave and Consent, the obtaining of which is the great Business of his Intercession, whereby he continually moves and solicites the Father to grant to him those good Things in our Behalf, which, as the high Almoner of the Father's Graces and Favours, he bestows upon us. So that whatsoever he gives us, he receives of the Father, and whatsoever he receives of the Father, he procures by his Intercession with, and Addresses to him in our behalf.

II. This Address is performed by the presenting his sacrificed Body to the Father in Heaven: For thus, as was shewed before, the High Priest's Address to God, for the People, consisted in presenting the Blood of the Sacrifice to him, in sprinkling it upon and before the Mercy-Seat, which was the Throne of the Divine Majesty: For he made no vocal Prayer for them in the Holy of Holies, and consequently he performed not his Intercession by Words, but by Actions; and the principal Action he performed there was sprinkling the Blood of the Sacrifice, which Action was a very significant Intercession, importing this Sense, O God, I beseech thee, accept this Blood which I offer thee for the Lives of thy People which are forfeited to thee. And accordingly our Blessed Saviour, after he had offered up himself a Sacrifice for our Sins upon Earth, ascends into Heaven, the true Antitype of the Holy of Holies, and there presents not his Blood but his sacrificed Body to the Father; that Body which not long before bled and died on the Cross, and which, as it seems probable, carried with it all the Wounds it received in its Crucifixion; for by the Story of Thomas, it is certain it it retained them after its Resurrection. And by thus presenting his sacrificed Body to the Father, he did what the High Priest did, when he sprinkled the Blood of his Sacrifice, i. e. he interceded for us with God; and indeed he interceded more prevalently by this significant Action, than if he had used all the Eloquence of Men and Angels. For his Wounds are vocal, and his Blood speaks; yea, and not only speaks better things for us than the Blood of Abel spoke, but also expresses what it speaks, far more powerfully and emphatically than it is possible for any verbal Oratory to do. So that by the presenting to his Father his wounded and bleeding Body, which carries with it an inexhaustible Fountain of Rhetorick and Perjuasion, he makes the most moving and pathetical intercession for us; the sense of which is this, though the full Force and Emphasis of it no Language can express, O my Father, behold this Sacrificed Body of mine; which by thy consent and approbation, hath been substituted to bear the Punishment which was due to thee from Mankind; and through the Wounds of which I have cheerfully poured out the precious Blood of God, as a Ransom for the Sins of the World; for the sake of this Blood, therefore, be thou so far propitious to those miserable Sinners it was shed for, as, upon condition they shall repent, to accept it in exchange for the Lives of their Souls which are forfeited to thee, to release them from the Obligation they are under to die eternally, and upon their final perseverance in well-doing to crown them with eternal Life: And that this Blood which at thy command I have willingly shed for them, may not, through their inability to repent and persevere, be utterly ineffectual to them; O send thy Holy Spirit to assist their weak Faculties, to excite their Endeavours, and co-operate with them. This is the Language of Christ's sacrificed Body in Heaven, and these are the better Things which his Blood bespeaks for us. For his Blood bespeaks those good Things for us in Heaven, for which he shed it upon Earth, i. e. the remission of our Sins and our Eternal Life; of which Blessings his Blood, being the price that God had promised to accept, his presenting it to him in Heaven not only speaks for, but humbly demands them, as carrying with it the unanswerable Claim of an accepted Price to a stated Purchase. So that this address which Christ makes for us to God in Heaven is not performed by him after the manner of a prostrate Suppliant, with bended Knees, up-lifted Hands, and lowly Supplications, but in such a manner as comports with the Kingly Majesty he is advanced to; and so as at the same time to assert his own right of purchase in the Blessings he addresses for, and yet to acknowledge God to be the supreme fountain and disposer of them. And this, the Scripture tells us, he performs by appearing in the presence of God for us, and presenting his sacrificed Body to him as a standing motive to prevail with him to be propitious to us; and to crown us with all those Graces and Favours in consideration of which he laid down his Life for us. And accordingly he is said to offer himself to God for us in Heaven, Heb. ix. 25. and to offer his own Sacrifice, i. e. to God in Heaven, for Sin for ever, Heb. x. 12. By which offering or presenting his Sacrifice to God, he doth at once claim for us, by the right of his purchase, all those good Things for which he paid down the price of his Blood, and also by a silent desire pray to God to bestow them upon us, whereby he acknowledges him to be the sovereign Disposer of them. So that this significant action of Christ's presenting his sacrificed Body to God is both a Claim and a Prayer, or rather it is a Prayer back'd and enforc'd with a rightful Claim to the Blessings he prays for. For so, for that particular Blessing of the Spirit, he himself tells us, I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever, John xiv. 16. not that he offers up any other Prayer to the Father but what his Wounds and Blood continually make, which with incessant Importunity do move and sollicit God in our behalf; but his meaning is this, by presenting that Sacrifice to my Father in Heaven, which I am going to offer on the Cross, and by which, among other Blessings, I shall purchase of my Father his Holy Spirit for you, I will pray him to send his Holy Spirit to you, I will pray him by my Wounds and Blood, which which are a thousand Times more moving and eloquent than any vocal Prayer I can offer in your behalf; for while they pray him to send his Spirit to you, they lay an undeniable claim to what they pray for, as being the dear and inestimable price by which I am purchasing his Spirit for you. From all which it is evident that this address which Christ now makes for us to his Father in Heaven, consists in the presenting his sacrificed Body to him, by which he both prays to him, and claims what he prays for.

III. It is by the continued and perpetual oblation or presentment of this his sacrificed Body to the Father, that Christ continues and perpetuates this his Address or Intercession in our behalf. For the first presenting or oblation of his sacrificed Body in Heaven, was the beginning and commencement of his Intercession, and the whole progress of his Intercession is nothing but that same oblation continued and perpetuated. For as the High Priest was interceding for the People all the Time that he was presenting the blood of the Sacrifice before the Lord, so Christ is interceding for us all the while that he is presenting his sacrific'd Body in Heaven. For it is by the presence of his sacrificed Body that he intercedes, and therefore so long as his Body is present in Heaven, so long he must be interceding by it in our behalf. So that, between the Jewish High Priest's Intercession and Christ's, there is this vast difference, that the former presented himself in the Holy of Holies with his Sacrifice, and consequently interceded by it, but once a Year, viz. on the great Day of Expiation; whereas the latter continually presents his Sacrifice in Heaven, and so doth continually intercede by it: and whereas the Blood which the High Priest presented was so mean and inconsiderable, that the whole virtue of it was still spent in one Act of Intercession, as not being available enough for him to intercede with it twice; insomuch that in every new Act of Intercession, he was still fain to present new Blood; the Blood of Christ was of that infinite moment and value as that, though he makes a continued and perpetuated Intercession by it, yet the virtue and efficacy, the power and prevalency of it with God remains fresh and unimpaired, so that he needs not sacrifice again that so he may have new Blood to present, but with that which he shed sixteen hundred Years ago, he still intercedes for us with the same effect and success as when he first presented it to his Father in Heaven. Upon which account there was no need that he should offer himself often, as the High Priest entred into the Holy Place every Year, with Blood of others: for then must he have often suffered since the Foundation of the World; but now once in the end of the World hath he appeared to take away Sin by the Sacrifice of himself, Heb. ix. 25, 26. So that Christ's one Sacrifice being of perpetual virtue and efficacy, and being, as such, perpetually presented to the Father in Heaven, he therewithal makes a continued and uninterrupted Intercession for us, and will continue to do so to the end of the World. Hence we are said to be sanctified through the offering of the Body of Jesus once for all, Heb. x. 10. And whereas every Priest standeth daily ministering, and offering oftentimes the same Sacrifices, which can never take away Sin; this Man, after he had offered one Sacrifice for Sins, for ever sat down on the right Hand of God, ver. 11, 12. And this offering his one Sacrifice for Sins in Heaven being for ever, it is a perpetually continued Act of Intercession for us. For so it is said that he ever lives to make intercession for us, Heb. vii. 25. i. e. he ever lives in Heaven, so as by his perpetual presence there to make perpetual Intercession for us. And upon the account of the perpetuity of this his Priestly Act of Intercession, he is said to have an unchangeable Priesthood, not barely because he continues for ever, for so he might have done and yet ceased to have been a Priest, but because he continues for ever exercising his Priesthood, or presenting his Sacrifice, Heb. vii. 24. And hence also he is said to be a Priest for ever after the order of Melchisedeck; that is, not only to be a Royal Priest, as Melchisedeck was, which, as I shewed before, was the proper Character of Melchisedeck's Priesthood, but to be a Royal Priest for every Heb. vii. 17. For Melchisedeck was not only a Royal Priest, but also a Type or Shadow of an eternal nal Royal Priest; and that, as he was without Father, and without Mother, without descent, or Genealogy, having neither beginning of Days, nor end of Life, but made like unto the Son of God, abideth a Priest continually, Heb. vii. 3. Where the Phrase ἀγενεαλόγητος without descent, or Genealogy, explains what is meant by without Father and without Mother, i. e. without any Father or Mother mentioned in the Genealogies of Moses; so the Syriack Version, whose Father and Mother are neither of them recorded in the Genealogies; in which he very much differed from the Aaronical Priests, whose Fathers and Mothers Names were constantly recorded in the Jewish Genealogies, as appears from Esdr. xi. 62. and so also Philo on the Decalogue tells us, Ἱερέως γὰρ τὸ γένος ἐξέλεται μετὰ πάσης ἀκραιβείας εἰ ἀνεπίπλητον, i. e. the Descent and Progeny of the Priests is kept with all manner of Exactness. So that there being no Genealogy at all of Melchisedeck, in Scripture, he is introduc'd into the History like a Man dropt down from Heaven, for so the Text goes on, having neither beginning of Days nor end of Life, i. e. in the History of Moses; which, contrary to its common usage, when it makes mention of great Men, takes no notice at all of the Time either of Melchisedeck's Birth or Death; and herein he is made like unto the Son of God, i. e. by the History of Moses, which mentions him appearing and acting upon the Stage, without either entrance or exit, as it, like the Son of God, he had abode a Priest continually. So that as Moses's History treats of Melchisedeck, without taking any notice of his beginning or end, as if he were a Royal Priest for ever; so Christ in truth and reality is a Royal Priest for ever, because by the perpetual Oblation and presenting his Sacrifice to the Father, he perpetually exercises his Priesthood, and makes a continued Intercession for Mankind.

IV. This Address being made by the continued Oblation or presenting of his sacrificed Body to the Father, is, in the virtue thereof, always effectual and successful. For his Sacrifice, as hath been shewn at large, was the price of his Purchase of those Blessings he intercedes for; the price which God, by a solemn agreement with our Saviour, had obliged himself to admit and accept. For the only Blessing he intercedes for, are those which are specified in the New Covenant, which New Covenant God granted to Mankind, in Consideration of the meritorious Death and Sacrifice of our Saviour; and accordingly when he went to offer up himself a Sacrifice for us, he tells us that it was κατὰ τὸ ὡρισμένον, according to what was determined, or agreed on between his Father and himself, Luke xxii. 22. And hence our Saviour tells us, that his Father, in Consideration of what he was to suffer, did διαθήσασθαι βασιλείαν covenant to him a Kingdom, Luke xxii. 29. which Kingdom includes a Kingly Power to bestow upon his faithful Subjects the Rewards of his Religion, which are the Blessings of the New Covenant; and of this Covenant, by which God obliged himself in Consideration of Christ's Death, to bestow this Kingly Power upon him, that of Heb. x. 7. seems to be intended, Then said I, Lo I come, in the Volume of the Book it is written of me, to do thy Will, O God; where κεφαλὴς βιβλίου, which we render the Volume of the Book, may perhaps be more truly translated the Instrument, Indenture, or Covenant, that is between thee and me. For so the Hebrew כּוּנֵן, to which the Greek βιβλίον answers, signifieth any sort of writing, and particularly a Bill, Deut. xxiv. 1. according to which sense, κεφαλὴς βιβλίου must here signify the volume or folding of a Bill, or, which is all one, an Indenture or Covenant. When therefore he saith, Lo I come, in the Indenture or Covenant which is between thee and me, by which thou hast Bequeathed or Covenanted to me a Kingdom, or Power to bestow such and such Blessings on my faithful Subjects; in this Covenant, I say, it is express'd or written, that I should come to do thy Will, i. e. to offer up that body which thou hast prepared for me, a Sacrifice for the Sins of the World, ver. 5. And indeed how could it have been foretold of him, as it is Isaiah liii. that he should justify many by bearing their Iniquities, and that he should see the travail of his Soul, i. e. for our Salvation, and be satisfied, had not the Father obliged himself himself by Contract and Covenant, to justify and save us, in consideration of his Sacrifice? And indeed this whole Prediction carries with it a Promise from the Father to Christ, that upon the Consideration of his Death and Sacrifice, he should be effectually impowered to save and justify us.

Since therefore the Sacrifice of Christ was the great consideration upon which the Father granted to him the Blessings of the New Covenant in our behalf, and since it is by presenting that Sacrifice, and in the virtue of it, that he intercedes with the Father for those Blessings, we may confidently assure ourselves he cannot fail of success, because he intercedes with a righteous God, of whom by presenting to him the consideration of his grant, he hath acquired a right to obtain the Blessings he intercedes for. For now he intercedes for us with the price of our Redemption in his Hands, so that he doth not act precariously, or as a mere Orator, that begs and supplicates without any claim, and so may be denied and rejected without any Injustice; but whatsoever he asks he asks in the right of his Sacrifice, by accepting of which inestimable consideration, the Father hath obliged himself to grant what he asks for. So that now he cannot be denied those Favours, which he craves in our behalf, without manifest Injustice, because by mutual Contract between himself and his Father he hath purchased to himself a right to obtain them, and hath bought and paid for them with his own Blood. And how can we imagine that the most Just and Holy God can ever be so outrageously unjust to his own Son, as to be deaf to his Intercessions, while he intercedes in the right of that precious Blood, which his Son freely paid, and he as freely accepted, in consideration of those Blessings he intercedes for? It being therefore evident, by what hath been said, that the Intercession of Christ is a most effectual and successful address to the Father, to all the Intents and Purposes for which it is made, it now remains only that we give an account to what Intents and Purposes it is that he makes this address to the Father.

First therefore, It is to move and solicite him graciously to receive and accept our sincere and heartly Prayers; and,

Secondly, To obtain of him Power and Authority to bestow on us all those Graces and Favours, which, in consideration of his Sacrifice, God hath promised us.

I. One Intent or Purpose of Christ's making this address to the Father, is to move and solicite him graciously to receive and accept our sincere and heartly Prayers. For thus the Incense which the Priests offered twice a Day upon the Golden Altar, and which the High Priest offered once a Year in the Holy of Holies, was a Symbol or Emblem of the Prayers of the People, which they mystically offer'd up to God with it; and hence the Psalmist, Let my Prayers be set forth before thee as Incense, Psalm cxli. 2. and St. John calls the Odours that filled the Golden Vials, the Prayers of the Saints, Rev. v. 8. and that the Prayers of the Saints were offer'd with the Incense upon the Golden Altar, is evident from Rev. viii. 3. And accordingly while the High Priest was offering the Incense in the Holy of Holies, the People in their Court offered up their silent and mental Prayers to God; for so Ecclus. l. 15, 18, 19, 21. we read that whilst Simon the High Priest was offering the Incense to God, all the People fell on their Faces to the ground, and besought the Lord most High in Prayer, till the Ministry of the Lord was done, i. e. till the High Priest had offered the Incense; and St. Luke makes mention of the Peoples praying without in the time of Incense, Luke i. 10. By all which it is evident, that this fumig of the Incense by the Priests and High Priest, was nothing but a mystical Oblation of those Prayers to God, which the People were pouring out while the Mystery was performing. Since therefore the High Priest was a Type of Christ, and his entrance into the Holy of Holies a Type of Christ's entrance into Heaven, his offering Incense there, which was a mystical Oblation of the Prayers of the People, must necessarily be a Type of Christ's offering and recommending our Prayers to his Father, which he promised his Disciples he would perform when he came to to Heaven, John xvi. 26, 27. In that Day ye shall ask in my Name, and I say not unto you that I will pray the Father for you; which in our Saviour's Way of Expression (which is, when he mentions Two Things, to pass by, and seemingly deny the one, that so he may the more illustrate and amplify the other, vide John xii. 4. John v. 45, 46, 47.) plainly implies, that he would; for the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me. And therefore it is through him that we are said to have access unto the Father. Eph. ii. 18. and by him to have access to Divine Grace, Rom. v. 2. and in him to have boldness and access with Confidence, Eph. iii. 12. and Rev. viii. 3. he is represented as that Angel of the Covenant, who, at the Golden Altar before God, doth offer up the Prayers of the Saints, incensed by the Merit of his Sacrifice. For it is the Sacrifice of Jesus that hallowes and consecrates all our Prayers and good Works; the best of which have so many sinful Defects and Imperfections cleaving to them, as would render them abominable to the pure and holy God, were they not purged and expiated by this great Propitiation. And though Prayer be a Duty we stand eternally obliged to, by our continual Dependence upon God, yet in this Degeneracy of our Nature, there are so many Sins do still accompany our Prayers, as that were they not expiated by some very acceptable and meritorious Satisfaction, the Cry of them would drown the Cry of our Prayers, and for ever hinder their Access to the divine Ear and Acceptance. So that it is only in the virtue of that Sacrifice with which our Saviour intercedes for us in Heaven, that our Prayers have admittance thither; it is his Blood alone that purifies our polluted Supplications, and out-cries the Guilt of those Sins that go along with them. For by presenting that Sacrifice to his Father, with which he made satisfaction for our Sins on the Cross, he continually moves and solicites that those sinful Defects which cleave to our Prayers may be pardoned and remitted; upon which Motion of his, our Prayers are continually purged from the Guilt of those Defects, and thereupon introduced into the divine acceptance as pure and innocent, spotless and unblemished Devotions. And as by presenting his Sacrifice he purges the guilt of our Prayers, so he enforces and seconds them. For, as hath been shewn before, the very presenting his Sacrifice is a Symbolical Prayer for those very Blessings which we pray for, and not only so, but a Prayer that is enforced with a just claim, and doth plead the Right or Purchase to all the Blessings it sues for, and so cannot justly be denied or rejected. And when he thus prays with us, and continually joins the cry of his Blood to the cry of our Prayers, we may safely depend upon it, that we shall prevail, and find free access to the Throne of God's grace and acceptance. And hence we are said to have boldness to enter into the Holy of Holies, that is, to draw near, by Prayer, to God, by the Blood of Jesus, by a new and living way which he hath consecrated for us through the vail, that is to say, his Flesh, Heb. x. 19, 20. And our Saviour himself assures us, that whatsoever we shall ask in his name, he will do it; and again he repeats, If you shall ask any thing in my name I will do it, John xiv. 13, 14. that is, he will procure it for us, by joining his Intercessions with our Prayers; for so, ver. 16. he explains himself, I will pray the Father.

II. The other intent and purpose of his making this Address or Intercession for us to the Father, is, to obtain of him Power and Authority to bestow on us all those Graces and Favours which, in consideration of his Sacrifice, God hath promised us. It is not to move the Father to bestow on us the Blessings of the New Covenant immediately with his own hand that our Saviour intercedes, but to empower himself, as Mediator between the Father and us, to bestow them upon us, according to the Terms and Conditions upon which they are proposed to us. For though it is most certainly true, that every good and perfect gift comes down from above, even from the Father of Light; yet it is as certain that they come not down to us from the Father immediately, but are all derived to us through the Hands of the Son, who by his continual Intercession obtains continual Power and Authority of the Father, to derive and confer on us all those Heavenly Gifts. So that as the High Priest, when he had presented the Blood of the Sacrifice in the Holy of Holies, was authorized by God to bless the People, vide 1 Chron. xxiii. 13. even so our blessed Saviour, by presenting his meritorious Sacrifice in Heaven, and in the virtue thereof interceding for us with the Father, is continually authorized by him effectually to bless us, i. e. to confer on us the Blessings of the New Covenant upon the Terms and Conditions that they are therein proposed. For this Power he obtains of God by his perpetual Intercession, and hence he is said to be able to save all those to the utmost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever lives to make intercession for us, Heb. vii. 25. where his power, or ability to save us to the utmost, i. e. to confer on us all the Blessings of the New Covenant, is expressly attributed to his ever living to make Intercession for us; which is a plain Argument, that the intent of his Intercession is to move God to authorize him to save us, seeing that, in answer to his Intercession, he is continually empowered and authorized thereunto. For it is to be considered, that this Power and Authority, and the Exercise of it, appertains to his Kingly Office, which he first arrived to, and still continues in, by virtue of his Intercession; and indeed herein consists the Royalty of his Priesthood, in that by interceding for us as Priest in the virtue of his Sacrifice, and continuing to do so, he first obtained and still continues vested with Kingly Power and Authority, to bestow on us those Heavenly Blessings he intercedes for; and it is to this purpose that he intercedes, not that the Father would bestow them on us immediately, but that he would put and continue it in his Power to bestow them, as Mediator between the Father and us; so that he acquired and holds this Royalty by his Priesthood, and that Kingly Power, by which he gives the Blessings of the New Covenant, God gave and continues to him by way of Answer and Return to his Priestly Intercession. And hence he is said upon his offering one Sacrifice for Sin for ever, i. e. upon the perpetual Oblation of his Sacrifice in Heaven, to have sat down on the right hand of God, i. e. in the Throne of his Kingly Power and Authority, Heb. x. 12. and accordingly, Eph. iv. 8. we are told, that upon his ascending up on high, i. e. to present his sacrificed Body in Heaven, he led captivity captive, and gave Gifts unto Men, which necessarily implies, that he had received Power and Authority from his Father to give them; and so Psal. lxxviii. 18. whence these Words are quoted, expresses it, He received Gifts for Men, i. e. upon the presenting his Sacrifice, as Priest, he received of the Father those Gifts for Men, which by his Kingly Power he afterwards distributed among them. So that what he gives by his Kingly Power, he receives by his Priestly, and both the Gifts which he gives, and the Authority by which he gives them, are the Fruits and Returns of that perpetual Intercession which he makes by his Sacrifice. And that by his Intercession our Saviour hath required this Royal Power of giving us the Blessings of the New Covenant, he himself doth plainly enough intimate; for thus of the Spirit, which is one of those great Blessings, he tells his Disciples, It is expedient for you that I go away, i. e. to Heaven, to intercede for you; for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come, i. e. he will not come upon my Intercession; but if I depart I will send him unto you, namely, by that Royal Authority which upon my Intercession I shall receive from the Father, John xvi. 7. And accordingly St. Peter tells the Jews, that Christ being exalted by the right hand of God, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, i. e. upon his Intercession in Heaven, he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear, i. e. the miraculous Virtues of the Holy Ghost, Acts ii. 33. And so for Remission of Sins, he tells us, that he hath the Keys of Hell and Death, Rev. i. 18. i. e. power to bind or loose, to pardon or condemn; and lastly, for Eternal Life, he expressly tells the Church of Laodicea, To him that overcomes will I grant to sit with me on my Throne, even as I have overcome, and am set down with my Father on his, Rev. iii. 21. By all which it is abundantly evident, that Christ hath a Royal Power delegated to him from the Father upon his Intercession, to grant and bestow all the Blessings of the

the New Covenant upon those that comply with its Terms and Conditions. For so all the Graces and Favours of God are in Scripture said to be derived in, by, or through Jesus Christ; for so Eph. i. 3. God the Father is said to bleſs us with all ſpiritual Bleſſings in or through Chriſt; and Rom. vi. 23. Eternal Life is ſaid to be the Gift of God through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord; and we are ſaid to be Heirs of God, or Inheritors of his Bleſſings through Chriſt, Gal. iv. 7. which plainly implies, that though it is from God the Father originally that all our Mercies are derived, yet it is through God the Son immediately that they are derived to us, and that whatſoever God beſtows upon us, he beſtows by the hand of Jeſus Chriſt, whom upon his fiſt Oblation of his precious Sacrifice in Heaven, and continual Interceſſion with it, he conſtitutes and continues the Royal diſtributer of all his Graces and Favours to the World. And therefore, ſince there is no doubt but that that which he obtains by his Interceſſion is the thing which he intercedes for, it neceſſarily follows, that the thing which he intercedes for, is Power to beſtow on us the Bleſſings of the New Covenant, becauſe he hath actually obtained that Power by his Interceſſion.

Having thus given as plain, and as brief an Account as I could of this ſecond Prieſtly Act of our Saviour, viz. his Interceſſion for us in Heaven by the continual Oblation of his Sacrifice there, I proceed in the ſecond place to ſhew the admirable tendency of this Method, of God's communicating his Graces and Favours to us through the Interceſſion of our Saviour, to reduce and reform Mankind; which will plainly appear by conſidering the following Particulars:

Fiſt, This Method naturally tends to excite in us a mighty awe and reverence of God's Majeſty.

Secondly, It alſo tends to give us the ſtrongeſt Conviction of God's hatred and abhorrence of our Sins.

Thirdly, It alſo tends moſt effectually to ſecure us from preſuming upon God's Mercy, while we continue in our Sins.

Fourthly, It tends to encourage us to draw near to God with Chearfulneſs and Freedom.

Fiſtly, It tends to give us the moſt ample aſſurance of his gracious Intentions towards us, if we repent and return to our Duty.

I. This Method of God's communicating his Favours to us through our Saviour's Interceſſion, is naturally apt to excite in us a mighty awe and reverence of the Divine Majeſty. For in this degenerate Condition wherein our Nature is inverted and turned upſide down, and our ſenſitive Faculties have got the Aſcendant of our Reason, rational Objects have incomparably leſs force on, and prevalence with us than material and ſenſitive. And hence it is that we are ſo unapt to be affected with the Majeſty of God, though in itſelf infinite and incomprehenſible, becauſe it being purely ſpiritual, is objected only to our Faith and Reason, and doth not ſtrike upon our Senſe with the Rays of a viſible Glory. And hence it was that, under the Old Teſtament, God ſo frequently exhibited himſelf to Mens Eyes, in ſenſible Appearances; as particularly ſometimes in humane ſhape, and ſometimes in a Body of light or of ſhining flame, that ſo by making an impreſſion of his great Majeſty on their ſenſe, he might affect them with ſuitable awe and dread of it. And for the ſame reaſon that he converſ'd with them in theſe ſenſible appearances, he alſo treated with them by a Mediator on Mount Sinai: For God commanded that Bounds ſhould be ſet round about the Mountain, which the People were forbid upon peril of Death to break through unto the Lord to gaze; and only Mofes, their Mediator, together with his Brother Aaron, were permitted to aſcend the Mount, and to have immediate acceſs to him: and by thus keeping them at a diſtance from his ſacred Preſence, and only ſuffering them to approach him by their Mediator, he took an effectual courſe to inspire their Minds with a reverential awe of his Divine Majesty: which is in itself so infinitely Sacred and August, that it seems it would have been a high Prophanation in them to have conversed with it immediately. And accordingly God, by keeping us at a distance from him, and allowing us to have access to him only by our Mediator, expresses the greatness of his Majesty, which is too sacred to be mingled in Conversation with us, too sublime to admit of the immediate addresses of poor Mortals, yea, and which no Mortal must approach without the Mediation of his own Eternal Son; for thus Plato in his Sympos. gives it as an Instance of the Majesty of God, Θεὸς ἀνθρώπῳ ἔμικνεται, ἀλλὰ διὰ Δαιμονίων πᾶσά ἐστιν ὁμιλία ἢ ἡ διάλεκτος Θεὸς πρὸς ἀνθρώπους, i. e. God doth not mingle himself with Men; but all the Converse and Intercourse between him and us is transacted by the Mediation of Demons. And if it were thought so great an Instance of God's Majesty, that he would not be approached by us without the Mediation of Angels, to what an infinite height must he be exalted above us, when no less a Person than he who is God-man can so much as give us access to him, or present our Prayers and Supplications at his Feet. O! what an awful Sense therefore of the Majesty of God should this Consideration beget in our Minds! For how can we think of him without dread and reverence, when we consider how he is secluded by the infinite sacredness of his own Majesty from all immediate converse and intercourse with us, and how he is exalted so infinitely above us, as that we cannot have access to him so much as by our Prayers and Supplications without the interposition of a Mediator, who is greater than the greatest of all the Kings on Earth, or Angels in Heaven? Surely he who can thus think of God without being struck into a profound awe and reverence of his Majesty, must have a mind so hardened against all the impressions of Reason, as that no wise thought can ever move or affect it.

II. This Method of God's communicating his Favours to us, through our Saviour's Intercession, tends also to give us the strongest Conviction of God's hatred and abhorrence of our Sins. For doubtless, to convince us how deeply he resents our sinful behaviour towards him, the most effectual course he could take, next to that of banishing us from his presence for ever, was to exclude us from all immediate intercourse with him, and not to admit of any more Addresses or Supplications from us but by the hand of some Mediator. Hereby he plainly demonstrates how infinitely pure and abhorrent to Sin his Nature is, that he will not suffer a sinful Creature to come near him but by Proxy, nor accept of a service from a guilty hand, nor listen to a Prayer from a sinful Mouth, till it is first hallowed and presented to him by a pure and holy Mediator. If therefore we are not infinitely conceited of ourselves, this procedure of his cannot but lay us low in our own Eyes, and make us deeply sensible of our own Vileness and Baseness. For how infinitely detestable must our Sins be in his Eyes, when notwithstanding all his kindness and benevolence towards us, he keeps us at such a distance from him, and will not be prevailed with, without some powerful Intercession, so much as to hear our Prayers, or to have any kind of Communication or Intercourse with us? And accordingly you find, that when the three Friends of Job had treated him so despitefully and uncharitably, God, to manifest his Displeasure against them, commands them to make use of Job's Mediation, Job. xlii. 7. My wrath, saith he to Elephas, is kindled against thee, and against thy two Friends; for ye have not spoken of me the thing that is right, as my Servant Job hath: therefore take unto you seven Bullocks and seven Rams, and go to my Servant Job, and offer up for yourselves a burnt Offering, and my Servant Job shall pray for you, for him will I accept; lest I deal with you after your Folly: As if he should have said, that you may see how ill I resent your severe and cruel usage of that good Man, know, that if you offer to address to me immediately for yourselves, I will certainly throw your Prayers back upon your Faces; as therefore you hope to be restored to my Favours, go to that injured Friend of yours, and beseech him to mediate for for you, and I will hear him, though I will not hear you. And after the same manner doth God manifest his high displeasure against our Sins, that he will not suffer us to approach him immediately, to present our Petitions to him with our own Hands, but will have them all presented to him by a Hand that is more acceptable to him than our own, and not only so, but by the greatest and most acceptable Hand in the World, even that of his own Eternal Son, the Son of his essence and delight, in whom he is for ever well pleased. For it is through him alone that we have access to the Father, whom our Sins have so horribly incensed against us that no Advocate in Heaven or Earth, less great and less dear to him than his own Son, can prevail with him, to be reconciled to us upon our most unfeigned Repentance, or so much as to accept of our humble Supplications. O good God! what a woful distance have my Sins made between thee and me, that notwithstanding the infinite goodness and benevolence of thy Nature, I cannot be admitted to thee, nor expect any favour at thy Hands upon any less powerful interest or application than that of thine only begotten Son! But, O stupid Creature that I am, to make light of those Sins that have so highly incensed thee against me, that none in Heaven or Earth but only that dearly beloved Son can prevail with thee to cast a propitious eye on me, or so much as to give me access to the foot-stool of the Throne of thy Grace!

III. This way of God's communicating his Favours to us, through the Intercession of Christ, is also most apt to secure us from presuming upon God's Mercy, while we continue in our Sins. There is no one Thing doth more universally obstruct the Reformation of Men, than their confident Presumption, that God will be merciful to them, notwithstanding they persist in their Rebellions against him: For all Men have a natural Notion of the infinite Goodness and Benevolence of the Divine Nature, together with which all bad Men have a natural Desire to sin without disturbance: When therefore their Conscience begins to clamour against their Wickedness, and to vex and persecute them for it, the Mercy of God is the usual Sanctuary they fly to. Peace, forward Conscience, cry they, God is a most gracious and merciful Being, hard to be provoked, and easy to be pacified; fear not, therefore, his Mercy is infinitely greater than my Faults, and I am sure so good a God as he is can never find in his Heart to destroy his Creature and Off-spring for such Peccadillo's as these; with such Presumptions as these they commonly lull their Consciences asleep, and so sin on securely in despite of all the Threats and Warnings of Heaven that thunder about their Ears. Now to prevent such Presumptions as these, and dash them quite out of Countenance, there is no Consideration in the World can be more effectual than this, of God's communicating his Mercies to us through the Intercession of our Saviour: For if, notwithstanding the Goodness of his Nature, he will not be propitious to us, no not upon our Repentance, without being moved thereunto by the powerful Intercession of his own Son, how can we ever expect that he should be propitious to us whether we repent or no? Is it likely he should be more indulgent to us for 'our own sake, than he is for his Son's sake and our own together; or that, when all that his Son can obtain for us, is to receive us into Favour, in Case we will lay down our Arms, that we, by our own Interest should prevail with him to receive us while we persist in our Obstinacy and Rebellion; in short, if our Repentance, which is the best Thing we can render him, be not sufficient to move him to pardon us, without being seconded and enforced with the powerful Oratory of our Saviour's Intercession, what should move him, when we have neither Repentance nor a Saviour to intercede for us? For our Saviour will not intercede for us, unless we repent; and our Repentance will not prevail for us, unless he intercede: What hope have we therefore, while we continue impenitent, when our Repentance itself, which is the best Thing we can do to move God to be propitious to us, is insufficient without Christ's Intercession; and when, without our Repentance, Christ will not intercede for us; and and if the Tears of a penitent Supplicant will not prevail with him, without an Intercessor, what hope is there that the Efforts of an impenitent Rebel should? But suppose we might reasonably presume upon the Benignity of God's Nature; that he will be propitious to us, notwithstanding our Impenitence, yet it is to be considered; that now he has placed the Dispensation of his Mercy in the Hand of a Mediator, who is not left to dispose of it arbitrarily, as he shall think fit, but is confin'd and limited to dispose of it, only to penitent Offenders: For Christ's Trust can extend no farther than to dispense God's Mercy to us, upon the Terms of that Covenant, of which he is Mediator, which Covenant proposes Mercy to us only upon condition of our Repentance. So that now we can expect no Mercy from God, but what passes through the Hands of Jesus our Mediator, who cannot, without violating his Trust, dispense the Mercy of God to us, except we repent and amend: For now God cannot dispense his Mercy to us immediately, without displacing his Son from his Mediatorship; and his Son cannot dispense his Mercy to us unconditionally, without transgressing the Bounds and Limits that are prescribed to him; and therefore since God hath restrained himself to dispense his Mercy only through his Son, and restrained his Son to dispense it only to Penitents, for us to presume upon the Mercy of God, while we continue impenitent, is the greatest Nonsense in the World: It is to suppose either that God will cancel the Oeconomy of his Mercy for our sakes, and resume the Dispensation of it immediately into his own Hands, merely to favour and encourage us in our Rebellion against him; or that Christ will betray the Trust which his Father hath reposed in him, and dispense his Mercy to us contrary to his Orders; that is, either that God the Father will depose his Son for our sakes, or that God the Son will be unfaithful to the Father for our sakes, both which Suppositions are equally absurd and blasphemous. Whilst therefore God proceeds with us in this established Method of granting his Mercy to us only through his Son, and confining his Son to dispense it to us only upon the Conditions of the New Covenant; to flatter ourselves with hopes of Mercy, while we continue impenitent, is to presume both against Reason and Possibility.

IV. This way of God's communicating his Favours to us, through the Mediation of Christ, is also most apt in itself to encourage us to approach him with Chearfulness and Freedom: For it is a natural Effect of Guilt to suggest to Mens Minds dreadful and anxious Thoughts of God, and whilst we are under such Thoughts of him, how is it possible for us to approach him immediately, and without any Friend or Advocate to introduce and speak for us, with any Chearfulness or Freedom: For, with what Confidence can I address to an incensed and offended God, purely upon my own Fund or Interest, when I am conscious of a thousand times more evil in me to provoke him against me, than of good to recommend me to his Favour? Unless therefore I am secured of some powerful Friend in Heaven, that is infinitely more acceptable to God than I can modestly hope to be, and that will agitate for me, and solicite my Cause with all his Power and Interest, my Sense of the innumerable Provocations I have given him to turn his back upon me, must either render me quite desperate of Success at the Throne of his Grace, or cause me to approach it with unspeakable Horror and Confusion. So that my Intercourse with God must either be wholly interrupted or rendered very difficult and uneasy to me; because my slavish dread of him must either chase me from his Altars, or drag me to them with Violence and Reluctancy. And hence it is, that under the Sense of our Guilt, we naturally fly to the Intercessions of others, whom we believe to have more Interest with God than ourselves; because we cannot modestly promise ourselves a free Admittance and Access to him upon our own Account; which probably was the Reason of the first Institution of Demon-worship among the Heathens, whose Minds being stung with the Sense of their own GUILTS, they were not able to approach God without fearful Despondence and Anxiety; whereupon they began to cast about (as it is natural for guilty Minds to do) how how they might procure some other Beings, that were in great Favour with God, to interpose with him in their behalf; and having learned by an universal Tradition, that there was a sort of middle Beings, called Angels or Demons, between the Sovereign God and Men, they began to address to these, and to bribe them with Sacrifices and sacred Honours; to intercede with God in their behalf. And hence Apuleius de Dæmon. Soc. calls these Demons, Mediæ potestates per quas & desideria nostra & merita ad Deos contineant; inter terricolas cælicolasque vectores hinc precum, inde donorum; qui ultro citroque portant hinc petitiones, inde suppetias, seu quidam utrumque interpretes & salutigenæ, i. e. "They are middle Powers by whom our Desires and Merits are presented to the Gods; they go between Heaven and Earth, and carry from hence the Prayers of Men, and from thence the Gifts of God; from Earth they go with Petitions, and from Heaven they return with Supplies, or they are the Interpreters of both Worlds, that do continually carry and report the mutual Salutations of both to each other". By which it is evident, that they thought it very necessary, in order to God's accepting their Addresses, that they should be presented and recommended to him by some better Beings than themselves; their guilty Minds, it seems, suggesting to them, that it would be high Presumption for such great Offenders as themselves, to approach the Divine Majesty, without being introduced and patronized by some more pure and holy Beings. And I am very apt to think that the great cause of that Spirit of Bondage, which possessed the ancient Jews, and rendred them so diffident and tremulous in all their approaches to God, was their want of an explicite knowledge of the Mediator. For what dismal and melancholy Expostulations do we frequently meet with in their addresses to God; such as, Wilt thou be angry for ever? Hast thou forgotten to be gracious? Wilt thou remember thy loving kindness no more? Which plainly shews, that their guilt suggested to them such frightful Apprehensions of God, as did very much cramp their hope and confidence in him. And hence the Apostle opposes this Spirit of Bondage in them, to that Christian Spirit of Adoption, by which we cry, Abba, Father, i. e. by which we approach God with great freedom and assurance, and go to him as Children to a kind and merciful Father, Rom. viii. 15. Now if you would know from whence this Christian freedom and assurance proceeds, the Author to the Hebrews will inform you, Heb. x. 21, 22. Having therefore an High Priest over the Household of God, i. e. to mediate and intercede for us, let us draw near with a true heart and full assurance of Faith; and Heb. iv. 14, 15, 16. the Apostle urges our having a compassionate High Priest in Heaven to intercede for us, as an Argument to encourage us to come boldly to the Throne of Grace. And indeed, what greater encouragement can we have to draw nigh unto God with an humble confidence, than this consideration, that the highest Favourite he hath in Heaven or Earth, is our Advocate? And that he is not only infinitely concerned for us, as being akin to us by Nature, and having a compassionate sense of our Infirmities; and he doth not only employ in our behalf all the favour and interest he has with God as he is the Son of his Essence, and the Object of his Delight, but that he ever intercedes for us in the right and virtue of that meritorious Sacrifice, with which he bought and purchased all those Heavenly Blessings he intercedes for. So that now all we have to do is to return to God by an unfeigned Repentance, which if we do, he stands engaged to undertake our Cause; and what may we not expect from the Patronage of so great and powerful a Mediator? For how great soever our past Sins are, his Interest in Heaven is far greater; how loud and clamorous soever our past Provocations are, his Blood and Wounds are far louder; and how importunately soever our past guilts may importunate the Divine Vengeance upon us, his Intercession does far more importunately and prevalently deprecate it. So that now we cannot reasonably doubt of a free admission to God in any case whatsoever wherein our Saviour will make use of, his Interest for us with God; and therefore since in all Cases he does continually employ his Interest for us, but only in that of our impenitence, every penitent Sinner in the World has a door of access set open to him by the Intercession of Jesus, through which he may freely enter, and with an humble confidence apply himself to God for Mercy, and for Grace to help him in the Time of Need. Thus by the Mediation of our Saviour, God has taken off that Imbargo which Mens guilts had laid upon their commerce with Heaven; and made way for a free and generous intercourse between himself and his Creatures.

V. And Lastly, This way of communicating his Favours to us through the Mediation of Christ, is most apt to assure our diffident Minds of God's gracious Intentions to perform to us all the good Things which he hath promised us upon our performing the Conditions of them. It is true, if God only promised them, we should have had abundant reason to believe him on his own bare word, without any farther security: But, alas! to be diffident and distrustful is the inseparable property of guilty Minds; and so great is our guilt and ill desert, and so inestimable are the Blessings and Favours which God promises us, that when we reflect upon both, and compare them together, it so confounds our Reason, and astonishes our Faith, that notwithstanding all the security God hath given us, we can hardly believe without trembling and diffidence. So that had not God given us some other Security besides that of his own Word and Promise, it would have extremely puzzled our Faith to believe that God sincerely intended such mighty goods for such unworthy Subjects. For whenever we reflected on our own guilt and ill desert, we must have looked upon God as our adverse Party, as one that was concerned only for his own right and honour; to retrieve from us that natural homage we owed him, and had hitherto unjustly detained from him; and we should have been but too apt to suspect that when once he had obtained this end of us, he would be much less concerned to make good our right to his promise, than he was to recover his own to our Duty. Now, although this had been a most unreasonable suspicion, after the God of Truth had passed his word to the contrary; yet there is nothing so unreasonable which guilty Minds are not apt to suspect; and therefore out of great condescension to this pitiable infirmity of his sinful Creatures, God thought meet, upon his entrance into a New Covenant with us, not only to oblige himself thereby to bestow on us the most inestimable Favours, if we performed our Part, but also to put the making good of his Obligation into a third hand; namely, into the hand of a Mediator, who, by the nature of his Office, is as much obliged to secure our Right as God's, as being equally concerned for both Parties; as well that God should make good to us what he hath promised, as that we should make good to him what he requires. So that now we have no longer to do with God immediately as our adverse Party, but all our Intercourse with him is by a Mediator, who, by his Office, is obliged to be on our side as well as God's, and to see that what he hath promised be performed to us, as well as that what he requires be performed by us. And hence our Saviour is called the Mediator of the New Covenant, and the Mediator of a better Covenant; which Expressions plainly bespeak him to be an Authorized, Security on both sides for the mutual Performance to each other of what they stand respectively obliged to by this Covenant; and hence also he is called the Sponsor or Surety of a better Covenant, because he stands engaged for the Performance of both Parties, so far as it was possible for him to oblige them thereunto; for us, to oblige us by the strongest Motives to repent and persevere in well-doing; for God, to oblige him by the most powerful Pleas to Pardon, and crown us with eternal Life; and the latter of which he performs by his Intercession, wherein, by continual pleading that precious Blood which God hath long since accepted in consideration of our Pardon and eternal Life, he continually obtains Power and Authority from God to bestow on us the Blessings he intercedes for. So that now we have not only God's Word, but also the Suretyship of our Saviour to depend on; who not only stands engaged to us for God, that he shall perform all his Promises to us, but hath also

Right

Right and Power upon the just claim of his Sacrifice, to oblige him to perform them. So that, as God, in condescension to the pitiable Diffidence of guilty Minds, hath been graciously pleased to seal his Promises with his Oath; so that he might leave us no umbrage of distrust, he hath superadded to both the collateral Security of a Mediator for the performance of them; of a Mediator that hath purchased of him all the Blessings he had promised us, and paid for them with his own Blood; and so is not only obliged to sue for them at the Throne of his Grace, but also authorized to claim at the Tribunal of his Justice; and in a word, of a Mediator in whose Hands he hath actually deposited all the Blessings he hath promised us, and made his Executor in trust for the performance of his bequests to the Heirs of Promise. So that now to distrust the performance of his Promise to us, is not only to suspect God's Word and his Oath, which are altogether as sacred and inviolable as his God-head, but also to question the security, and arraign the fidelity of a Mediator that died for us; that purchased for us with his own Blood all the Blessings which God hath promised us; by virtue whereof he not only rightfully claims them of God, but hath also actually received them in our behalf. So that now we can't be defeated of them, unless he will withhold them from us; and he cannot withhold them from us without violating his trust; since it is for us, and in our behalf that God hath deposited them in his Hands: and can we imagine that he, who, was so true and kind a Friend to us, as to lay down his Life to purchase them for us, will be now so unkind and unfaithful together, as to detain them from us, when God hath intrusted him with them in our behalf, and fully impowered and authorized him to bestow them on us? Having therefore the security not only of God's Promise and Oath, but also of our Saviour's Kindness and Fidelity, for the performance of God's Part of the New Covenant, if we perform ours, what infinite encouragement must it give us to forsake our Sins, and return to our Duty? For now, if we repent, we have no more reason to question God's pardoning and forgiving us; if we persevere to the end in well-doing, we have no more cause to doubt of his crowning us with Eternal Happiness, than we have to distrust our present Being and Existence. If therefore the most ample assurance that God himself can give us of his Mercy and our Happiness, hath any force in it to oblige us to repent and amend, this our Saviour's Intercession you see fairly proposes to us; so that if this proposal doth not effectually influence our hope, and thereby excite and animate our endeavours, it is impossible that any encouragement should ever move or affect us.

And thus you see, in all these several Particulars, how effectually this way of God's communicating his Favours to us, through the Intercession of our Saviour, tends to our Reformation and Amendment; what a fruitful Topick of Motives it is to induce us to Repentance, and how pathetically it addresses to every affection in us that is capable of persuasion; what awful and reverential Thoughts of Almighty God, it suggests to our Minds, to dispose our stubborn Wills to an humble submission to him? What a horrible Representation it makes of our Sins, and of God's Wrath and Indignation against them; and what a dreadful alarm it gives to our fear, to rouse and awake us out of our sinful security! And, in a word, how powerfully it encourages us to draw near unto God, and to make our addresses to him with an humble and generous Freedom; and what vast assurances it gives our hope of his gracious Intentions towards us, if we repent and amend? All which considered, one would think it were impossible for any Man that believes and understands this wonderful Method of Mercy, not to be moved and affected by it: And certainly that Man who hath obstinacy enough to withstand all its Persuasions, and finally to defeat and baffle those powerful Attempts which it makes to reclaim him, is a Creature not to be moved by Reason and Argument. For in this he has conquered the greatest Motives of all sorts that can be urged to persuade Men, and when once he is got beyond the reach of persuasion, and no Motive of In-Servility, or hope, or fear can affect him, his Condition is desperate, and his obstinacy incurable. Wherefore, as we would not finally disappoint this wonderful Contrivance of God to reclaim us, and thereby render ourselves for ever desperate, let us at length be persuaded seriously to consider the Motives and Arguments it proposes to us; and never to cease urging and pressing them upon our own Souls, till they have conquered our obstinate Wills and prejudiced Affections, and finally captivated us into a free compliance with their powerful Persuasions. For if, through our wilful Neglect and Inconsideration, this mighty Project of Mercy prove utterly unsuccessful with us, it is certain we have sinned ourselves past all hope of Recovery, and it will be in vain to make any farther experiment on us. And when we have once baffled this last and most powerful Remedy of the Divine Goodness, what remains but that it should give us up, and utterly abandon us to the just desert and dire Effects of our own Folly and Obstinacy.

S E C T. VII.

Of the Kingly Office of our Saviour.

WHEN I first entered upon this Argument of the particular Offices of our Mediator, I proposed to handle them in the same order that he performed and executed them; and accordingly, as he began with his Prophetick Office, of which his whole Life was a continued Ministry, so I have treated of this Office in the first Place: And as from his Prophetick he proceeded to his Priestly Office, one part of which he executed on the Cross, where he offered himself a Sacrifice for the Sins of the World, and the other upon his Ascension into Heaven, where he presented, and still continues to present his Sacrifice to the Father by way of Intercession for us; so I proceeded, in the next Place, to treat of his Priesthood, in both the Parts of it: And now in the last place, in pursuit of the same order, I proceed to his Regal or Kingly Office, which was the last he entered upon; after he had finished his Prophecy, offered his Sacrifice, and presented it to his Father in Heaven. For so in Scripture the Regality of Christ is always spoken of as successive both to his Prophetick and Priestly Office, and as the fruit and reward of his faithful discharge and execution of them. So Phil. ii. 8, 9, 10. it was because he humbled himself, and became obedient to Death, even the Death of the Cross, that God highly exalted him, and gave him a name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of Things in Heaven, and Things in Earth, and Things under the Earth. And Rom. xiv. 9. the Apostle tells us, that it was for this end that Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living; and accordingly the Angels in St. John's Vision attribute his advancement to his Regal dignity to the merit of his Death and Sacrifice, Rev. v. 12. Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive Power, and Riches, and Wisdom, and Strength, and Honour, and Glory, and Blessing. And hence his sitting at the right hand of God, which is the great Scripture-Metaphor by which his Regal Authority is expressed (of the sense and meaning of which vide Pearson's Exposition of the Creed, p. 277, 278, 279.) is mentioned as the Fruit and Consequence of his Death and Intercession. So Heb. i. 3. When he had by himself purged our Sins, i. e. by dying for us on Earth, and presenting his Sacrifice in Heaven, he sat down on the right Hand of the Majesty on high; and Heb. x. 12. But this Man after he had offered one Sacrifice for Sins, for ever sat down on the right Hand of God; and so also 1 Pet. iii. 22. we are told, that it was upon his going into Heaven, i. e. to present his Sacrifice to his Father there, that he was advanced to the right Hand of God, and that Angels and Authorities, and Powers were made subject to him. For his going into Heaven was a Priestly Act, corresponding to the High-Priest's going into the Holy of Holies, to present his his Sacrifice to God there; so that Christ's first arrival into Heaven, and presenting his Sacrifice there, is the beginning and commencement of his Intercession, in Answer to which he first received of his Father that Royal Power and Authority which he exercises both in Heaven and Earth; and it is by virtue of the continuance of that his Priestly Intercession, that this his Royal Power is continued and perpetuated to him. So that as he is a Royal Priest, i. e. a Priest invested with Regal Power to bestow the Blessings he intercedes for, so he is a Sacerdotal King, i. e. a King that holds his Regal Power in the right and virtue of his Priestly Intercession. For it is by the continuance of his Intercession that he obtains the continuance of his Royal Authority to bestow those Blessings on us which he intercedes for. So that as Christ intercedes in the virtue of his Sacrifice, so he rules in the virtue of his Intercession. And accordingly you find in Scripture his Ascension into Heaven, there to intercede for us, represented as a Triumphal progress to his Coronation, wherein, after the manner of Princes in that glorious Solemnity, he scatters a Royal Largeſs among his Subjects, Ephes. iv. 8. It is true, before his Ascension, he tells his Disciples, that all Power was given him in Heaven and Earth, Matth. xxviii. 18. But this, it is evident, he spake by way of Prolepsis or Anticipation, a very usual Scheme of Speech in Scripture, which is to express Things of certain Futurity, as if they were actually Existing; according to which Scheme all Power is given me, imports no more than all Power is shortly to be given me, i. e. upon my Ascension into Heaven. For so it is evident our Saviour must be understood in that parallel Expression, John v. 22. The Father judgeth no Man, but hath committed all Judgment to the Son; which words he spake long before his Death, when it is evident, that all Judgment, i. e. Universal, Regal Authority was not actually committed to him, but there was only a certain futurity of it. For so himself tells us, that his sitting down with his Father on his Throne, or investiture with that Regal Authority which he now exercises; was the reward and consequence of his overcoming, or consummate Victory on the Cross, Rev. iii. 21. By all which it is evident, that it was upon his Ascension into Heaven, and Oblation of his Sacrifice there, by way of Intercession, that Christ was installed in his Universal, Mediatorial Kingdom. It is true, our Saviour had a peculiar Kingdom in this World, viz. the Jewish Church, not only before his Ascension, but before his Incarnation, as I shall shew hereafter; but as for that Right of Dominion over the Gentile World too, by which he became universal Lord and King, he was not invested with it till his Ascension into Heaven. And therefore he himself tells us, that his Mission into this World was purely to the lost sheep of the House of Israel, Matth. xv. 24. and accordingly in the pursuance of this his Mission, when he sent forth his Ministers to Preach his Gospel, he orders them not to go into the way of the Gentiles, nor to enter into the City of the Samaritans, but to go rather to the lost sheep of the House of Israel, Matth. x. 5, 6. which implies, that at that Time he was not actually authorized to subdue and reduce the Gentiles under his Dominion, but that his Authority extended only to the Jewish Nation: But when he had told his Disciples, in that proleptical Speech after his Resurrection, that all power was given him in Heaven and Earth, it immediately follows, Go ye therefore and teach all Nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, &c. as if he had said, now my Commission and Authority is enlarged, and I am made Universal Lord and King, go ye therefore in pursuance of it, and by your Ministry endeavour to reduce all Nations under my Dominion. And hence it was that the Mystery of the calling of the Gentiles into the Kingdom of Christ was not revealed till after his Ascension, vide Acts xi. 18. because it was upon his Ascension that he received his Universal Kingly Authority over them, and till then it was to no purpose to reveal it. So that it was over the Gentile World peculiarly that he received Power and Dominion upon his Ascension into Heaven; he was King of the Jews long before, but upon his Ascension he was invested with a right of Dominion over the Gentiles too, and thereupon became the Universal Lord and Monarch of the World under the most High God and Father of all Things. But this I shall have occasion farther to explain hereafter.

In the prosecution of this great Argument, I shall endeavour these six Things :

First, To give an account of the Beginning and Progress of this Kingdom of Christ.

Secondly, To explain the Nature and Constitution of it.

Thirdly, To shew who are the Ministers of it under Christ.

Fourthly, To assign and explain the Regal Acts which Christ hath, and doth, and will hereafter exercise in it.

Fifthly, To give an Account of the End and Conclusion of it.

Sixthly and Lastly, To shew the Reason and Wisdom of this Method of God's governing sinful Men by this his Mediatorial King, Christ JESUS.

S E C T. VII.

Of the Rise and Progress of Christ's Kingdom.

AS for the First, viz. the Beginning and Progress of Christ's Kingdom, I shall endeavour to give an Account of it in these following Propositions :

First, That the Kingdom of Christ is founded upon the New Covenant.

Secondly, That the New Covenant commenced immediately after the Fall; and was afterwards particularly renewed to Abraham and his Posterity.

Thirdly, That, upon its first Commencement, Christ was the Mediator of it, and so he continued all along in that particular renewal that was made of it to the People of Israel.

Fourthly, Therefore that, as Mediator of this Covenant, Christ was King of all that were admitted into it, and particularly of Abraham and his Posterity, or the People of Israel with whom it was renewed.

Fifthly, That after his coming into the World he still retained his Title of King of Israel in particular, till they finally rejected him, and the Covenant in which his Kingdom is founded.

Sixthly, That though the main body of that Nation rejected him, yet there was a Remnant of it that received and acknowledged him as their rightful Lord and King.

Seventhly, That this Remnant still continued the same individual Kingdom of Christ with the former, though very much reformed and improved.

Eighthly, That to this individual Kingdom of Christ, thus reformed and improved, was superadded all those Gentiles that were afterwards converted to Christianity.

First, That the Kingdom of Christ is founded in the New Covenant. For it is by the New Covenant that he engages himself to us to be our gracious and merciful Lord, and that we engage ourselves to him to be his faithful and obedient Subjects; and from these mutual Engagements results the relation of King and Subjects between him and us. So that the Church and Kingdom of Christ consists of all those People, Nations, and Kindreds, who have been admitted into this Covenant-relation to him, wherein by a solemn Vow of Faith and Allegiance, they have indispensably obliged themselves to serve and obey him. But of this I shall have occasion to Discourse more largely hereafter.

Secondly, Therefore this New Covenant commenced immediately after the Fall, and was afterwards in a particular manner renewed to Abraham and his Posterity. For the New Covenant was a Plank thrown forth to Mankind immediately after that woful Shipwreck that was made by the Fall. For no sooner

sooner had God denounced this deserved Doom on our lapsed Parents, but, to support them from sinking into utter desperation, he subjoins that gracious Promise, Gen. iii. 15. The Seed of the Woman shall bruise the Serpent's head; where by the Seed of the Woman, not only Christian, but the ancient Jewish Interpreters understand the Messias, and by the Serpent, the Devil, who in the form of a Serpent had tempted our first Parents to that fatal Revolt which drew after it all those miserable Consequents which their Posterity have groaned under ever since: By the Messias his bruising the Serpent's head, is meant his assaulting and crushing under foot the very seat of all his Strength and Power, and finally rescuing Mankind from under his Dominion and Tyranny. For this Promise was the first dawning, the Morning Twilight of the New Covenant; and, so far as we can find, the only discovery of it to the Old World; and therefore in all probability was the sole ground and object of that Faith by which Abel and Enoch were justified in the Sight of God, Heb. xi. 4, 5. For, though that Promise was but a dark and obscure intimation of the Gospel Covenant, yet thus much it plainly proposed to them, that from the First Parents of the World there should descend a certain Person, who should conquer the Devil that had conquer'd them, and thereby repair the damage of their Apostasy; by believing of which, it seems, and acting accordingly, they found Grace and Favour in the Sight of God: But however it is apparent that the New Covenant was in force in the Time of the Old World, because it is evident both that the Faith of the Antediluvian Patriarchs was actually accepted by God, and that their Faith could upon no other account have been accepted by him, but only in the virtue of this New Covenant.

But after the Flood, God more clearly and expressly renewed this gracious Covenant with Abraham and his Children, Gen. xii. 2, 3. where he promises to bless him, to make his Name great, and himself a Blessing, and to bless them that blessed him, and curse them that cursed him, and in him, that is, in the Messias, who should descend from him, vide Gal. iii. 16. to make all the Families of the Earth blessed; which Covenant he again renews to him, Chap. xiii. and Chap. xv. and then in Chap. xvii. he yet again renews it more largely and solemnly, assuring him not only that he should be a Father of many Nations, &c. but that that Covenant should extend to his Posterity as well as to him, and that he would be a God to him, and to his Seed after him; immediately after which he institutes the Ceremony of Circumcision for a perpetual Seal and Ratification of his Covenant between him and them; and upon this Covenant it was, that the Jewish Church was founded. For so Circumcision, which was the standing Seal of this Covenant, was also the standing Rite of Admission into that Church; which is a plain Argument, that to be a Member of that Church, and a Confederate in this Covenant was one and the same thing, because they were admitted both by one and the same Rite. Now from the New Testament it is evident, that this Covenant with Abraham, upon which the Jewish Church was built, was the Gospel or New Covenant. For so Gal. iii. 8. the Apostle calls the Delivery of this Covenant, preaching the Gospel to Abraham; which must be apparently false, if this and the Gospel-Covenant were not the same; and in verse 29. he tells them, if ye be Christ's, i. e. true Christians, then are ye Abraham's Seed, i. e. that Spiritual Seed to whom the Covenant with Abraham extends, and Heirs according to the Promise. i. e. of that Covenant; but how could they be Abraham's Seed, by being Christians, and Heirs to the Promise of Abraham's Covenant, if the Seed with whom Abraham's Covenant was made, were of a different Religion from Christians, and the Covenant itself were of a different kind from the Christian Covenant? But that it was the very same, appears yet farther, because in the first Place, it requires the same Condition, viz. an obedient or practical Faith. For so Gen. xv. 6. it is said, that Abraham believed in the Lord, and he accounted it to him for righteousness, i. e. though he had formerly been guilty of many Sins; and at present could not challenge any reward from God; yet upon that obedient Faith which he exercised, God acquitted and justified him; or, which is the same thing, dealt with him as if he had been perfectly righteous: And accordingly his Circumcision, which was the Ratification of that Covenant, is in Rom. iv. 11. called the Seal of the Righteousness of Faith, i. e. of his Justification, or being accounted righteous, and dealt with accordingly by God, upon his Faith or practical Assent to God's Promise. And accordingly the Apostle, Gal. iii. 9. thus concludes, so then they which be of Faith, i. e. sincere Believers, as Abraham was, are blessed with faithful Abraham; in which Words he expressly asserts that Abraham and Christians are blessed upon the same Terms, viz. upon an obediential and practical Faith.

acquitted

And, as Abraham's required the same Condition with the New Covenant, so it also contained the same Promises. For, although those Promises according to the outside and litteral sense of them, do contain only temporal Blessings, yet it is apparent, that they had all the eternal Blessings of that New Covenant lock'd and treasured up in the mystical sense of them. For thus St. Paul expressly tells us, that the Justification of the New Covenant was couched in that Promise that was made to Abraham, Gal. iii. 8. The Scripture foreseeing that God would justify the Heathen through Faith, preached the Gospel before unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all Nations be blessed; which necessarily implies, that in that Blessing was included their Justification in the sight of God. And as for Divine Grace and Assistance to enable Men to repent and persevere in well-doing, the Prophet Micah tells us, that one part of God's performing his truth unto Jacob, and his mercy to Abraham, consisted in his subduing our Iniquities, and casting our Sins into the depths of the Sea, Micah vii. 19, 20. And lastly, as for eternal Life, the Apostle plainly tells us, that God gave the Inheritance, i. e. of Justification to eternal Life, to Abraham by promise, Gal. iii. 18. upon which Gift we are assured, that Abraham looked for a City which hath Foundations, whose builder and maker is God. Heb. xi. 10. Since therefore both the Conditions required, and the Blessings promised, in Abraham's and the New Covenant, were in all Particulars the same, it necessarily follows, that they were one and the same Covenant. It is true, indeed, as to the manner of the Revelation of it, there was a vast difference; for whereas in the Gospel it is revealed throughout with the greatest clearness and perspicuity, and in plain and literal Terms, it was delivered veiled to Abraham and his Posterity under general and obscure Expressions, which at best exhibited to them but a dark and confused apprehension of it. But however it is still the same Covenant, notwithstanding it be thus differently expressed; even as it is the same Sun that sometimes is overcast with Clouds, and other times shines forth with a full Splendor.

Thirdly, from the very first Commencement of this Covenant, Christ was Mediator of it, and so hath continued all along under that particular Renewal of it, which God made to the People of Israel. For the Scripture expressly affirms, that he is the Mediator and Surety of this New and better Covenant, that is, that it is he who as our Advocate with God, obtains for us the Blessings of this Covenant; and who, as our King, under God, dispenses them to us: And if he be thus the Mediator of this Covenant now, he must have always been so, even from the Fall, upon which it commenced, to his Ascension into Heaven; otherwise the New Covenant, upon which he now mediates, must have been Four thousand Years without a Mediator; which, considering the whole State and Condition of it, can by no means be allowed: For besides that, the Fall of Man was the Reason why God withdrew himself from all immediate Converse with him, and that therefore it is reasonably to be presumed, that whatsoever Converse he had with him afterwards, it was through a Mediator; there is nothing more evident from Scripture, than that this very Covenant, which is the standing Medium of God's Converse and Intercourse with Men, was granted to us by God, in Consideration of Christ's Death and Sacrifice. Since therefore it was granted long before Christ died, even from the Fall of Adam, it must be granted upon Christ's obliging and engaging himself to the Father to die for us in the Fulness of Time; which Engagement of his was virtually and in effect an offering up himself a Sacrifice for us; God being as much secured of it upon his Engagement, as if he had actually performed it. Upon which Account he is called, the Lamb slain from the Foundation of the World, Rev. xiii. 8. because upon his obliging himself to die for us, which was immediately after the Fall, the Event became as certain and infallible, as if in that very moment he had breathed out his Soul upon the Cross. And accordingly God proceeded on it as on a sure and certain Fund, and in Consideration of it, granted the New Covenant to the World. Hence the Apostle tells us, that it was by Means of his Death that there was Redemption for the Transgressions that were under the first Covenant, Heb. ix. 15. Since therefore it was, in Consideration of Christ's future Sacrifice, that God first granted this Covenant to Men, it necessarily follows, that upon the same Consideration, he at the same time appointed Christ to be the Mediator of it; because, as I shewed before, he is Mediator in the right and virtue of his Sacrifice, by which he obtained it; and therefore, since his Sacrifice had the same Virtue in it when it was future, as it has now when it is past, he had the same right to be Mediator of it then, as he hath now. In short, Christ's Sacrifice was as certain in God's Account, and therefore as prevalent with him, before, as after it was offer'd; and therefore since his Mediatorship of the New Covenant is wholly owing to the Prevalence of his Sacrifice, there was the same Reason why God should admit him to be Mediator of it, before it was offered, as after; and accordingly long before he offered up his Sacrifice, he is called the Angel or Minister of the Covenant, Mal. iii. 1. And St. Paul expressly tells us, that Four hundred and thirty Years before the Law of Moses this Covenant was confirmed of God to Abraham in Christ, Gal. iii. 17. and if it was then confirmed in Christ, it is certain that then Christ was the Mediator of it.

Fourthly, Christ's being always Mediator of this Covenant, necessarily implies his having been always King, under God, of all that ever were admitted into it, and particularly of the People of Israel; because his Kingly Office is so necessary and essential a Part of his Mediatorship, that he cannot be properly a Mediator without it: For to mediate, as he doth, between God and Men, is to act Authoritatively for and in behalf of both Parties; so that if he act only for one, he cannot be truly said to be a Mediator between both; but in his acting Authoritatively for God consists his Royalty or Kingly Office, as you may see, p. 5, 22. and if his Mediatorial Office necessarily includes a Kingly Power, to be sure that Power must extend to all that ever were admitted into the Covenant upon which he mediates: For how can any Man be admitted into that Covenant, of which he is the authorized Mediator, without being subject to all the Authority which his Mediatorship necessarily implies?

Hence therefore it follows, that Christ hath been always King of the Church of God, or confederate Society of the true Worshipers of him, in all Ages of the World: For thus in the Old World St. Peter tells us, 1 Pet. iii. 19. that by that very Spirit whereby Christ rose from the Dead, he went and preached to the Spirits in Prison, i. e. by Noah, who, by the immediate Inspiration of the Holy Spirit, was a Preacher or Herald of Righteousness, Christ preached to the Spirits or Souls of Men, whilst they were yet shut up in, and united to their Bodies long before that general Separation of their Souls from their Bodies, which was made by the Flood; vid. Dr. Ham. in Loc. At this time, I say, whilst they were yet alive, Christ preached to them, to warn them of that general Destruction which was pursuing them, and would e'er long overtake them, unless they speedily repented; which shews that, long before the Flood, Christ acted as a King, in issuing out his Heralds, in his Royal Proclamations to Men, to declare his Will and Pleasure to them, and warn them of the fatal Consequence of their Disobedience to it.

Soon after the Flood Mankind almost universally apostatized from God to Idolatry; so that the Church or Society of the true Worshipers of him was quickly reduced into a very narrow Compass; so that Four hundred Years af-med to call themselves God or Jehovah, or to arrogate Omnipotence to themselves, which yet they had as much right to do as this Angel, supposing him to be a created Being; but, on the contrary, whereas this Angel always spake in his own Name, and delivered what he said as his own Word, the Prophets always spake in a different Style, and still ushered in what they delivered with a Thus saith the Lord; and the same to be sure this blessed Angel would have done, had he been only an Embassador from God. But besides that he assumed God's Name, and Attributes; he not only admitted, but required Divine Honours to be rendred to him: For so, as hath been shewed before, he not only admitted Jacob to offer Sacrifice, and a religious Vow to him, and therein to devote himself to him as to his God, but also required him to make and dedicate an Altar to him at Bethel, Gen. xxxv. 1. so also he admitted Joshua to fall on his Face to the Earth and worship him, and not only so, but bids him loose his Shoe from off his Foot, telling him, that the Place whereon he stood, was holy, as being consecrated by his Divine Presence, Josh. v. 14, 15. and the same Command, enforced with the same Reason, he gave before to Moses out of the burning Bush, Exod. iii. 5. and, to name no more, he received a Burnt-offering, and a Meat-offering, at the Hands of Manoah and his Wife, Judg. xiii. 23. And is it likely, that any created good Angel would ever have admitted these Things? Especially considering how strictly St. John was forbid by the Angel, at whose Feet he fell down, to worship him, See thou do it not, I am thy Fellow-Servant — worship God, Rev. xix. 10. and so again, Rev. xxii. 9.

Thirdly, That he was also that Divine Person that descended upon Mount Sinai, and from thence removed into the Tabernacle, and thence into the Temple, is evident from what is recorded of him, Numb. xxii. 22, &c. where we have the History of the Angel of the Lord's meeting Balaam on the way, as he was going to curse the People of Israel; now that by that Angel there is meant this Divine Angel, or Angel Jehovah, appears, first, from ver. 32. where he tells Balaam, Behold, I went out to withstand thee, because thy way is perverse before me, i. e. it is contrary to that Will of mine which I declared to thee, ver. 12. where it is said, That God said unto Balaam, thou shalt not go with them, thou shalt not curse the People, for they are blessed; which is a plain Evidence, that this God and that Angel of Jehovah were the same Person. And then, secondly, ver. 35. it is said, that this Angel of Jehovah said unto Balaam, go with the Men, but only the Word that I shall speak unto thee, that thou shalt speak; whereas he that afterward spake unto him, and instructed him what he should say to Balak, is expressly called God and Jehovah; for so, Numb. xxiii. 4, 5. it is said, that God met Balaam, and that Jehovah put a word into his Mouth: Whence it appears, that this God and Jehovah was the same Person with that Angel of the Lord that gave him that Charge, but only the word that I shall speak unto thee, that shalt thou speak. But then, thirdly and lastly, Balaam himself calls the apparition of this Angel, the Vision of the Almighty, Numb. xxiv. 4, 16. which shews that this Angel was the Almighty himself.

Now this Angel Jehovah, Balaam in his inspired Parable calls Jehovah the God and King of Israel, and the God that brought them out of Egypt, Numb. xxiii. 21, 22. which is the very Style of that God that descended upon Mount Sinai, I am Jehovah thy God that brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, Exod. xx. 2. which is a plain Argument that it was all but one and the same Person.

But then Judg. ii. we have the History of another Appearance of this great Angel of Jehovah, who, as we are told in ver. 1. came from Gilgal unto Bochim, and by what he there saith of himself, it is evident that he was that very God that came down upon Mount Sinai, and afterwards dwelt in the Tabernacle; for there he declares, that it was he that made them go up out of Egypt, and brought them to the Land which he swore unto their Fathers, which is the Language of that God that dwelt in the Tabernacle, vide Exod. xxxiii. 1. that it was he that said, I will never break Covenant with you, and ye shall make no League with the Inhabitants of this Land, and that they should throw down their Altars: But, saith he, ye have not obeyed my voice; why have ye done this? Wherefore I said, I will not drive them out from before ye, but they shall be Thorns in your Sides, and their God shall be a snare to you, ver. 1, 2, 3. which are the very words of God, from the Tabernacle, as you may see Exod. xxxiv. 12, 13. Numb. xxxiii. 55. which is a plain Argument, that this Angel and that God that dwelt in the Tabernacle were one and the same Person.
down

And then that he was the God that afterwards fix'd his abode in the Temple, is very apparent. For, besides that no body questions but that it was the same Divine Person that brought Israel out of Egypt, led them through the Wilderness, came down upon Mount Sinai, resided in the Tabernacle, and that afterwards removed into the Temple, we have a particular evidence, that this Person was the Angel Jehovah, in Isaiah vi. 1. where the Prophet tells us, that he saw Jehovah sitting on a Throne, high and lifted up, and his Train filled the Temple; by which it is evident that he appeared to him in a visible form, else how could the Prophet have seen him? and that sitting, which is a corporeal Posture? But this the second verse puts out of all doubt, which attributes to him a Face and Feet, implying that his appearance was in a Human Form, the very same in which this Angel Jehovah was wont to make his appearances to Men; and then that Prophet concludes, that he should certainly die, because his Eyes had seen the King, the Lord of Hosts; which is the same terrible apprehension that Men always expressed upon the appearance of this Angel Jehovah. Thus upon the sight of him Manoah cries out, We shall surely die, because we have seen God, Judg. xiii. 22. and so also Gideon, Judg. vi. 22. and the Children of Israel, Exod. xx. 19. and Moses himself, Exod. iii. 6. So that among the Antients it seems it was a received opinion, that the appearance of this illustrious One, did commonly bode Death unto those that beheld him. Since therefore the Prophet had the same dreadful apprehension upon his Vision of God in the Temple, that all Men had before him upon the appearance of this Angel Jehovah to them, it is at least very probable that that God and this Angel were the same Divine Person.

Fourthly, That this divine Person was not the most High God the Father: For besides that our Saviour tells the Jews, that they had not heard the Father's voice at any Time, nor seen his shape or appearance, John v. 37. which is a plain evidence that that Divine Person who spake and appeared to their Fathers in a Human Voice or Shape, was not God the Father, of whom the same Apostle tells us, that no Man hath seen God at any Time, John i. 18. whereas it is expressly said of Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and the Seventy Elders of Israel, that they saw the God of Israel, viz. upon Mount Sinai, and, as it is evident from the Text, it was in a Human Shape that they saw him; for there was under his Feet as it were a paved work of Saphir Stone, Exod. xxiv. 9, 10. and if he appeared to them with Feet, it is reasonable to suppose that he appeared with all the other Parts of a Human Body; for though Moses tells the People, that they saw no Similitude on the Mount, but only heard a Voice, Deut. iv. 12. yet this doth not at all hinder, but that Moses and the Seventy Elders with him might and did; for so when Moses desired to see the Glory of God upon the Mount, God tells him, thou art not able to see my Face, i. e. by reason of the Glory and Lustre of it, for no Man shall see my Face and live, i. e. no Man can endure without great hazard of his Life, the brightness and splendor of my Countenance; and from this Passage, in all probability, sprang that common Opinion in Mens Minds, that they should surely die, whenever they saw God or the Angel Jehovah; and then God proceeds, and tells Moses, that he would place him in the Cleft of the Rock, and cover him with his hand whilst he passed by, and that when he was passed by he would take away his hand, and permit him to see his back Parts, Exod. xxxiii. 20, 21, 22, 23. by all which it seems evident that this apparition of God upon the Mount, which Moses and the Elders saw, was in a Humane Form, since it had not only Feet, but Face, and Hands, and back Parts, which is not only a farther Evidence that this God was the same Divine Person with that Angel Jehovah, who appeared so often in Human Shape, but also a plain Argument that he was not God the Father, who, as St. John tells us, was never seen in any shape or appearance whatsoever: Besides all which, I say, how can the Father, who is the first and supreme Person in the Holy Trinity, from whom both the Son and Holy Spirit are sent, be in any Sense stiled (as this Divine Person of whom we are treating is) the Angel Jehovah? For the word Angel, which imports a Messenger, implies some kind of Inferiority to him, whose Angel or Messenger he is, and therefore can in no Sense be truly and properly applied to the most High God and Father.

Fifthly and lastly, That this Divine Person was God the Son: For, First, that it was he who appeared to the Patriarchs, and particularly to Abraham, those Words of our Saviour plainly imply, in John viii. 56. Your Father Abraham rejoiced to see my Day, and he saw it and was glad: Where by Abraham's seeing of Christ's Day, must necessarily be meant his real, and actual, and personal sight of Christ himself; for so the Jews understood it, Thou art not yet (say they in the following verse) Fifty Years old, and hast thou seen Abraham? As much as if they should have said, How is it possible that ever thou shouldst personally and actually see Abraham, or he thee, as thy Words do import, when thou art not yet fifty Years old, and there are many Ages since Abraham died. If therefore the Jews did not mistake Christ's Sense, it is plain that by seeing his Day, he meant personally and actually seeing himself: But that they did not mistake him, is evident, because if they had, Christ ought to have corrected them by explaining himself into some other sense, and not suffer them to run away with such a gross Mistake in a matter of such mighty Moment; instead of which, he plainly allows and countenances their sense in the Answer which he gave them, verse 58. Verily, verily, I say unto you, before Abraham was I am; as much as if he had said, it is no such impossible matter as you imagine, that Abraham should see me, and I him, because I have a fix'd and eternal existence, and therefore was in Being before ever he was born. So that either the Jews apprehended Christ aright, and if so, Abraham really and actually saw him, or Christ in his Answer prevaricated with them, and merely plaid upon their Mistake; and if Abraham personally saw Christ, it is certain that Christ must be that Divine Person that appeared to him. But then,

Secondly, That it was he also that brought Israel out of Egypt, and descended upon Mount Sinai, at the giving the Law to them, i. e. who declared himself to be the Lord their God that brought them out of the Land of Egypt, is apparent from Heb. xii. 26. where it is expressly affirmed, that it was Christ's Voice which then did shake the Earth, i. e. when the Law was delivered in Thunder from Mount Sinai; which is a plain Argument, that Christ was that Jehovah, who came down from Mount Sinai, and whose Voice caused the whole Mount to quake greatly, Exod. xix. 18. the same also is evident from Eph. iv. 8. Wherefore he saith, i. e. the Psalmist, Psalms lxviii. 18. when he, i. e. Christ (of whom he had been speaking just before, ver. 7.) ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave Gifts unto Men: So that either Christ must be the Person of whom the Psalmist speaks, or the Apostle must grossly misquote, and misapply him; and if he be the same Person, then from that Psalm it is evident; First, That it was he that went before the People, and marched with them through the Wilderness, verse 7. to 15. Secondly, That it was he that was among the thousands of Angels in Sinai in the Holy Place, and by their Ministry promulgated the Law from thence; ver. 17. Thirdly, That it was he who was the God and King, whose goings were seen in the Sanctuary, ver. 24. Fourthly, That it was he who was the God of the Temple at Jerusalem, ver. 29. For all these Things are expressly spoken of him that ascended on high, and led captivity captive, and received Gifts for Men, ver. 18. which the Apostle tells us was Christ.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, That it was he also that conducted them through the Wilderness into Canaan, appears from that of St. Paul, 1 Cor. x. 9. Neither let us tempt Christ as some of them, i. e. of the People of Israel in the Wilderness, also tempted, or as some Copies read it, as some of them also tempted him, and were destroyed by Serpents: and although in most Copies him be not expressed, yet in all it is necessarily implied, for if they tempted in the Wilderness, it is certain that they tempted Somebody, and to understand by that Somebody any other than Christ, who is the only Person before mentioned, is against all Grammar and Reason: Against Grammar, which allows no other Accusative to be understood by the Verb than that of some Thing or Person aforesaid in the same Sentence: Against Reason, because if we understand any other Accusative but him or Christ, who is the only Person afore-mentioned, we must make the Apostle speak loosely and indeterminately, whereas otherwise it is evident he speaks most strictly and certainly; for there is no word in the Text, but only Christ, which determines the Accusative that the Verb tempted implies; so that if that doth not determine it, it must be left wholly indeterminate; but if it doth, it must be him or Christ: And to make the holy Oracles speak loosely and vagrantly, where they may as well be understood to speak strictly and determinately, is not only impious but unreasonable. If therefore it was Christ that some of the Jews tempted in the Wilderness, it necessarily follows in the first Place, that Christ was with them there; and secondly, that he was that God against whom they spake, Numb. xxi. 5. which is the Place the Apostle here refers to, where it is said, that the People spake against God and against Moses; for which God sent fiery Serpents among them, ver. 6. If therefore Christ was with them in the Wilderness, and was that God against whom they spake in the Wilderness, there is no doubt but that he was that God that led them through it, and brought them into Canaan.

Fourthly, That it was he who dwelt in the Jewish Tabernacle and Temple, is evident from John xii. 41. These Things said Isaias when he saw his Glory and spake of him; the occasion of which Words is this; at ver. 37. St. John takes notice of the perverse Infidelity of the Jews in not believing in Christ, notwithstanding all the Miracles he had shewn them, ver. 38, 39, 40. which he shews was no more than what the Prophet Isaiab had long before foretold of them, Isaiab vi. 9, 10. and then he concludes, ver. 41. These Things said Isaiab when he saw his Glory and spake of him; where by his Glory it is evident the Apostle means Christ's Glory, and by speaking of him, speaking of Christ; for so in ver. 37. where the Discourse begins, it is plain he means Christ, when he tells us, that yet they believed not on him; and in ver. 42. it is as plain that it means him still, when he tells us, that nevertheless among the chief Rulers, also many believed in him; and if by him he means Christ, as all agree he doth, both in ver. 37. and 42. either the four Verses between must be included within a Parentesis (which we have no reason to imagine, seeing there is no note of a Parentesis to be found in any Copy, nor doth the Discourse itself require it, which from Verse to Verse runs all along in a close and continued dependence) or by him, must be meant Christ, in ver. 41. also; and if it was Christ's Glory which Isaiab saw, and Christ of whom he spake, then it is evident that Christ was the God who inhabited the Temple. For so in Isaiab vi. 1. (which is the Place St. John here refers to) Isaiab tells us, that in the Year that King Uzziah died, he saw the Lord sitting on a Throne high and lifted up, and his Train filled the Temple; if therefore Christ was this Lord, as St. John affirms, it is certain, from these Words, that it was he who sat upon the Throne in the Temple, and had his Train or Retinue of Angels there.

Fifthly and lastly, That Christ also was that Jehovah and Divine Lord and King, who, under the most High Father, presided over the Jewish Church, is evident from several Places of the New Testament, compared with the Old, from whence they are cited. I shall only instance in Two, the first of which is Ephes. ver. 14. Wherefore he saith, that is the Prophet Isaiab, awake thou that that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light; which Words are a Paraphrastical Reference to Isaiah lx. 1. Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the Glory of the Lord is risen upon thee: But now, unless we suppose Christ to be this Lord or Jehovah, the Prophet is so far from saying here, that Christ shall give thee light, as St. Paul affirms, that he makes no mention at all of him; either therefore Isaiah says no such thing as, Christ shall give thee light, which is to give the lie to St. Paul; or else the true sense of that saying of Isaiah, The Glory of the Lord is risen upon thee, must be, that Christ shall give thee light; which it cannot be, if Christ and that Lord were two distinct Persons; but that they are one and the same, is evident from Isaiah xlv. 6. Thus saith Jehovah, the King of Israel, and his Redeemer, the Lord of Hosts, I am the first, and I am the last, and besides me there is no God: which Divine Character of I am the first, and I am the last, he elsewhere gives himself in Chap. xli. 4 and Chap. xlviii. 12. of this Prophecy. Now this very Character of the God of Israel Christ assumes to himself, Rev. i. 11. I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last; so again, ver. 17. and Chap. ii. 8. and Chap. xxii. 13. Now how can we, with any Reverence to our Saviour, suppose that he would ever have assumed to himself this distinguishing Character of the God of Israel, and that in the very same Words, and without ever explaining them into a different Sense, had he not been the very same Person? Since he could not but foresee that he should hereby endanger the misseading of his Church, and tempting her into a false opinion of his Person. For what Man that was not prepossessed with a contrary Opinion, would ever have thought that our Saviour did not mean himself to be the God of Israel, when he thus verbatim applies to himself his personal Character, without any kind of Restriction or Explication? Should any Man hear a Voice from an invisible Person seriously pronouncing, I am William the Conquerour, (as St. John did this Voice from Christ, I am the first and the last) would he not presently conclude either that this Person was the Ghost of that victorious Prince, or that that Voice was a design'd Delusion? Since therefore our Saviour declares that he is the first and the last, which is the essential Character by which Jehovah the King of Israel describes himself, and doth no where intimate a different Sense of this Character, as applied to himself, from what it signified, as applied to the Jehovah, it necessarily follows, that either he meant not sincerely, or that himself and that Jehovah the King of Israel were the same Person. And accordingly, Zech. ix. 9. which all agree is a Prophecy of our Saviour, he is expressly called the King of Israel, Rejoice greatly, O Daughter of Zion, shout, O Daughter of Jerusalem, behold thy King cometh unto thee: The most natural Sense of which Phrase, thy King, is, he that is now thy King, not he that is hereafter to be so; and if then when this Prophecy was delivered, he was King of the Daughter of Zion, or People of Israel, to be sure he was always so: And therefore the Prophet Malachi calls the Temple, which was the Palace of the Divine King of Israel, the Temple of Christ, Mal. iii. 1. Behold I will send my Messenger, i. e. John Baptist, and he shall prepare my way before me, and the Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to his Temple, even the Angel of the Covenant whom ye delight in, behold he shall come, saith the Lord of Hosts. From whence I infer, first, that this Lord of Hosts, which is the ordinary stile of the God of Israel, was Christ, whose Messenger and Fore-runner John Baptist was, vide Luke i. 76. And secondly, That the Temple, which was the Abode of this Lord of Hosts, was the Temple of Christ; the Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to his Temple; which cannot be meant of God the Father, because in the next Words he is called the Angel of the Covenant, which all agree is Christ. If then the Temple of Jerusalem was the Temple of Christ, and he was that Lord of Hosts that dwelt in it, it necessarily follows that he was that Divine King of Israel, who under God the Father governed the Jewish Church. And now having proved at large this Fourth Proposition, which is the principal Hinge upon which the whole Argument turns, I proceed, Fifthly, That after his coming into the World he still retained this his Right and Title of King of Israel in particular, till they finally rejected him, and apostatized from that Covenant on which his Kingdom is founded. For he did not at all divest himself by his Incarnation, of that Royal Authority he was vested with, as he was the Eternal Word, and Son of God, hereafter to be incarnate. For this his Royal Authority, as I shewed before, is necessarily implied in his Mediatorship of the New Covenant, of which, as I have also shewed, he was always Mediator without any discontinuance or interruption. So long therefore as the New Covenant continued in force with the Jews in particular, so long he was their Mediatorial King in particular, under God the Father. Now it is certain that the New Covenant continued in force with them so long as they continued to be the Church of God, because it was the New Covenant that made them so; and 'tis certain they continued the Church of God many Years after the Incarnation of our Saviour, even 'till such Time as by their obstinately rejecting of our Saviour, and incurable Apostasy from that Covenant which made them the Church and People of God, they had finally incensed him to reject them, to break off his Covenant-relation to them, and utterly to dispark and unchurch them. And therefore we find that for several Years, both our Saviour and his Apostles continued in close Communion with the Jewish Church, frequented their Temple and Synagogues, and joined with them in all the Solemnities of their Publick Worship: By which they owned them to be the true Church of God, and consequently to be yet in Covenant with him. Since therefore they continued in the New Covenant after Christ's Incarnation, Christ must also continue the Mediator of that Covenant to them, and consequently their Mediatorial King. And hence he is styled, the King of the Jews in particular, after his Incarnation; for so the Wise Men in their Enquiry after him, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? Matth. ii. 2. And that he was born King of the Jews, not merely as he was descended from the Loins of David, but by a Title that he had antecedent to his Birth, viz. as he was the Son of God, hereafter to be Incarnate, is evident by that Confession of Nathana'el, John i. 49. Rabbi, thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Israel; where his being the King of Israel is consequent to his being the Son of God; and so John xii. 13. they who attended him in his Progress to Jerusalem salute him with a Blessed is the King of Israel, that cometh in the Name of the Lord; which St. John makes the Accomplishment of that fore-mentioned Prophecy, Zach. ix. 9. Rejoice greatly, O Daughter of Zion — behold thy King cometh unto thee sitting on an Ass's Colt, ver. 14, 15. And this Title our Saviour assumes to himself in that good Confession he made before Pontius Pilate, who asking him, Art thou King of the Jews? He answered him, Sayest thou this of thyself, or did others tell it thee of me? And when Pilate presses him for a more explicite Answer, he tells him, My Kingdom is not of this World; as much as if he had said, I know the Jews, mine Enemies, have insinuated to thee, that by assuming to myself this Title of King of the Jews, I design to usurp the temporal Dominion of Cæsar thy Master; but let not that trouble thee, for though it is most certain that I am King of the Jews, yet my Kingship and Cæsar's are of a quite different nature, and do no way clash and interfere with one another; for, whereas his Kingdom is temporal, mine is purely spiritual, and not of this World; and when Pilate insists farther, Art thou a King then? Jesus answers, Thou sayest I am a King, i. e. thou sayest truly so, to this end was I born, and for this Cause came I into the World, that I should bear Witness to the Truth, John xviii. 33, 34, 35, 36, 37.

And as he retained the Title of King of the Jews, after his Incarnation, so we frequently find him exercising his Royal Authority among them. For in the first Place he not only authoritatively explained to them those old and eternal Laws of Morality which he delivered to them from Mount Sinai, and inforced them with new Sanctions and Motives; but he also gave them two new Laws, viz. that of Baptism, and that of the Lord's Supper, to be continued in force to the end of the World. Secondly, he erected a perpetual Form of Government and Discipline in his Church, and gave Commission to his Apostles to exercise and administer it, and to derive down their Commission to all succeeding Generations. Thirdly, he actually forgave Sins, Matth. ix. 2. compared with the Sixth, where he doth not only pronounce to one that was sick of the Palsie, Son, thy Sins are forgiven thee; but declares, that he did it by that Power and Authority which he had upon Earth to forgive Sins. All which being Acts of Regal Power, do sufficiently manifest, that even whilst he was upon Earth, he was vested with Royal Authority, and that by assuming our Nature he did not divest himself of his ancient Royalty, but still continued King of the Jews, so long as they continued a Church.

Sixthly, That though the main Body of the People of Israel rejected Christ, and were thereupon rejected by him, yet there was a Remnant of them that received and acknowledged him for their rightful Lord and King. For so, as St. Paul observes, it is foretold of Isaiah concerning Israel, Though the Number of the Children of Israel be as the Sand of the Sea, a Remnant shall be saved, Rom. ix. 27. and accordingly it proved in the Event: For though the much greater Part of the Jewish Nation obstinately persisted in their Infidelity and Rebellion against the blessed Jesus their King, notwithstanding all those powerful Arts and Methods he had used to reclaim and save them; yet there was a great Number of them that willingly received, and loyally adhered to him: For not only the Disciples which he gathered whilst he was upon Earth, but also the first Converts after his Ascension into Heaven, were generally of the Jewish Nation, within which, not only his own Personal Ministry was confined, but also the Ministry of his Apostles for some time after his Ascension: For so St. Paul and Barnabas tell the Jews, That it was necessary the Word of God should first have been spoken to them, Acts xiii. 46. But this Proposition is so manifest from the whole Gospel, that I should not need to insist any farther upon it.

Seventhly, Therefore that this Remnant still continued the same individual Church or Kingdom of Christ with the former, though very much reformed and improved: For it still remained upon the same Basis with the former, as having the self-same Covenant for its Charter, which is the Form that Identifies all Societies, and, notwithstanding the perpetual Change and Renovation of their Parts, still continues them the same individual Politick Bodies. Since therefore that Remnant of Israel, who believed in Christ, continued still in the same Covenant with that whereupon the old Jewish Church was founded, it necessarily follows, that they were not a new or distinct Church, but still remained the same individual sacred Society with the old. So that they were the unbelieving Jews that revolted from their old Church, by rejecting the Mediator of that Covenant, by which it was formed and constituted; but as for the believing Jews, who embraced and acknowledged him, they still continued in it, and so remained the same continued Church, as being still united and incorporated by the same Charter.

" But, though it was the same continued Body with the old Jewish Church; yet was it very much reformed and improved by our blessed Saviour. For, in the first place, whereas before it was extremely corrupted through the many false Glosses and superstitious Traditions of their Elders, and, like an undress'd Garden was all over-grown with Thorns and Weeds, its Religion being almost dwindled away into Ceremonies, and outward Observances, and evaporated into a dead Shew and Formality; our blessed Saviour repaired its Ruins and Decays, removed its Rubbish, and reformed its Disorders, and restored it to its Primitive Beauty and Purity: For the great Design of all his Sermons and Parables, was to explain the Laws of it into their Genuine Sense, and to rescue them from the false Glosses and Comments of the Scribes and Pharisees; to reprehend and expose its Hypocrisy and Formality, and to refine its Religion from all those corrupt and heterogeneous Mixtures, with which it was dash'd and sophisticated. That Remnant of the Jews therefore who believed in Christ, and submitted to his Doctrine, when all the rest of them finally rejected him, were the same individual continued Body with the Old Jewish Church, as purified and reformed from its Errors and Corruptions: For, by submitting to our Saviour's Regulations, they did not commence into a new Church, but still continued the same Body, only with this Difference, that whereas before it was distempered with sundry corrupted Humours, now it was thoroughly purged and recovered.

And as our Saviour restored that Church to its ancient Purity; so, Secondly, he advanced and improved it to a far more perfect State than it was in, even under its primitive Constitution. It is true, as for the Religion of that Church, it was for Substance the same with that which our Saviour and his Apostles taught: It proposed to them the same Covenant, and the same Mediator, and the very same Doctrines, and Articles concerning this Mediator, to create in them the same Belief, and oblige them to the same Practice, only with this difference, that whereas it proposed him to their Belief as hereafter to be incarnate and sacrificed, to rise, and to ascend into Heaven, it proposes him to ours as actually incarnate and sacrificed, and as actually risen and ascended: But this is only a circumstantial Difference, since that, as to all Purposes of his Mediation, his future Incarnation and Sacrifice, &c. had the same Virtue and Influence with his actual. But though as to the main, the ancient Jewish Religion was the same with ours, yet, in respect of Clearness, and Easiness, and Amplitude, there is a vast Difference between them: For, first, as to Clearness, it is evident, that it was much more darkly and obscurely revealed to the ancient Jews, than it is to us; for to them it was revealed only either in general Promises, out of which they were fain to argue and deduce Particulars; or in Temporal Promises, that carried a mystical Sense with them, and obscurely implied the Spiritual Blessings which the Gospel proposes; or in dark Types and material Figures and Emblems, which were Prophetick Pictures, or, as the Apostle calls them, Shadows of good Things to come: For thus, in that general Promise, In thy Seed shall all the Nations of the Earth be blessed, was included Christ, and all those particular Blessings which we receive by and through him: Under those temporal Promises of Deliverance from their Enemies, and peaceable Possession of Canaan, was couched their Deliverance from Sin and Hell, and their eternal Rest and Happiness in Heaven; and under their legal Sacrifices, the all-sufficient Sacrifice of the blessed Mediator was exhibited and represented to them; and in a word, under the High Priest's offering the Blood of the Sacrifice in the Holy of Holies, was intimated the Mediator's Intercession for them in Heaven. Thus both the Promises and Types of the Jewish Religion, were all of them obscure Revelations of Christianity, which is nothing but Mystical Judaism, or Judaism explained into its Spiritual Sense and Meaning. And accordingly the Apostle makes a Jew, according to the spiritual Sense of the Jewish Religion, to be the same with a Christian; for he is not a Jew, saith he, i. e. in a spiritual Sense, that is one outwardly, neither is that Circumcision which is outward in the Flesh, but he is a Jew who is one inwardly, i. e. who is a Jew according to the inward and spiritual Sense of Judaism; and Circumcision is that of the Heart, in the Spirit, and not in the Letter, whose Praise is not of Men, but of God, Rom. ii. 28, 29. and if the spiritual Jew be a Christian, then the spiritual Judaism must be Christianity. But though this obscure Revelation of Christianity was sufficient to enable Men, that sincerely attended to it, to grope out their way to eternal Happiness; yet it is impossible it should ever give them, without some farther Revelation, a distinct and explicite Understanding of it. In general, they understood that there was a rich Vein of spiritual Sense running all through the Letter of their Law; that there were glorious Mysteries wrapped up within those weak and beggarly Elements, like precious Diamonds under a rough Coat: For so not only the Author to the Hebrews, but also Philo the Jew, in his Allegories of the Law, and almost in all his other Writings, makes the Rites and Ceremonies of the Jewish Religion to be Types and Figures of Divine and Moral Truths: and particularly the High Priest and his Vestments to be a Figure of the eternal Word and his Perfections. And as they understood this in general, so from sundry Passages in the Book of the Psalms, it is apparent that the good Jews had a prospect beyond the Outside and Letter of their Law, even into the Mystical Sense and Meaning of it; and that, through its dark Shadows, they saw a great deal of the Substance and Reality of the Gospel. Hence David observes in Psal. xxv. 14. that the secret, i. e. Mystery, of the Lord is with them that fear him; and he shall shew them his Covenant; which implies, that there was something of a Cabala of the spiritual Sense of the Law, among the true Israelites, by which they were instructed a great deal farther than the bare Letter and Outside of it; especially considering that Prayer of David, Psal. cxix. 18. Open thou mine Eyes, that I may behold wondrous Things out of thy Law; which is a plain Argument, that under the literal sense of that Law, which was plain and obvious, and had nothing of depth or mystery, he saw a spiritual and mystical Sense, in which some very wonderful Truths were included. For if there had been no more in it than the literal meaning, it is not to be imagined he would have prayed as he doth, Ver. 19. Hide not thy Commandments from me; and v. 27. Make me to understand the way of thy Precepts; so shall I talk of thy wondrous Works; which plainly shews that there were Mysteries couched under the Letter of the Law, which were both wonderful in themselves, and very difficult to be understood: And accordingly, ver. 69. he tells us, that he had seen an end of all Perfections, but that God's Commandments were exceeding broad. Which shews that he had discovered something in that Law beyond the literal sense of it (which was far from being exceeding broad) even a vast Mine of mystical sense, whose bottom he was not able to reach. Now this mystical sense, as hath been shewed, was Christianity, which under that Dispensation of it was so overcast with Clouds and Darkness, that in all probability the most pious and inquisitive Minds had but very imperfect and confused Apprehensions of it.

But, when our Saviour came into the World, he unveiled the Jewish Religion, and decyphered all those mystical Characters wherein its spiritual sense was expressed; and what he had revealed before only in obscure Generals, and mysterious Types, he now deliver'd to the World in plain and explicite Articles of Faith. And having unriddled all those Types and Shadows, and turned them inside outwards, and revealed their hidden sense to the World in plain and naked Propositions, he utterly repealed and abrogated them, as Things of no farther use; those sacred Truths which they contained, and darkly intimated, being now made manifest, and set forth to open view in a far more clear and glorious Light. For the proper use and design of those Types was to teach the Gospel; so the Apostle, The Law was our School-master, to bring us unto Christ, Gal. iii. 24. But it is evident they were designed to teach it but darkly and mysteriously. For the Jews being bred among the Ægyptians, who were wont to express their divine and moral Doctrines by sensible Images or Hieroglyphicks; God in compliance therewith (the Jews being infinitely fond of the Manners of Ægypt) thought it meet at first to express the Gospel to them in the same typical manner, i. e. to represent the whole Method and Oeconomy of it in visible Signs and Figures, which he intended only for a rude draught of the Gospel; which he purposed afterwards to draw to the Life, and express more clearly and exactly. When therefore our Saviour had fully revealed to the World the sense and meaning of those Types, and expressed what they did so mysteriously signify, in plain and clear Propositions, they from thenceforth became altogether useless, and for that reason were repealed, and utterly expunged out of the Rubrick of divine Worship. So that now the Gospel, which hitherto ran under ground in a dark and mysterious Channel, broke forth into a visible stream from underneath the surface of Types and Shadows which had hitherto covered, and in a great measure concealed, it from the sight and view of the World. And therefore we need no longer grope after it among Shadows and Umbrages, as the good Jews were fain to do under the Mosaic Dispensation; these Doctrines of it which before were all Mystery and overcast with Types Types and Shadows, being now brought forth from behind the Curtain into open view, and presented barefaced to our Understandings in a most plain, and easy, and familiar sense. Since therefore the Types of the Law, and Jesus Christ taught the same Religion, and only he taught more plainly and clearly what they taught more darkly and mysteriously, it hence necessarily follows, that those believing Jews who received and acknowledged Christ, espoused no new Religion; but still adhered to that good old Religion which the significant Rites and Ceremonies of their Law had all along preached to them; and that it was only the unbelieving Jews who rejected Christ's Doctrine, that were the true Apostates from the ancient Judaism, which preached and exhibited to them all those holy Mysteries, of which the Religion of our Saviour is composed; but as for those of them who believed in Jesus, they continued steadfast in the mystick and spiritual sense of their ancient Religion; and, though they forsook their old School-master, the Law, under which they had been trained and educated, yet still they retained their old Lesson: For the Doctrine of Jesus was the standing Doctrine of their Legal Types, which they taught darkly and obscurely, but he most clearly and distinctly; and therefore, though those believing Jews still continued in the same Doctrine, yet they had very good reason to change their Teacher, and from being the Disciples of the Law, to become the Disciples of Jesus, under whose Instruction they were sure to improve far beyond what they had hitherto done under their old Master. Since therefore Christianity is nothing but the ancient Judaism explained and unriddled, it hence necessarily follows, that the believing Jews, by embracing it, did not commence a new Church distinct from the ancient Jewish one, but were the same Church, still continued and improved; the same Church, because founded on the same Religion; but the same Church improved, because enlightened with a far more distinct and explicite knowledge of that Religion.

And, as our Saviour did very much improve the Religion of the Jewish Church in respect of clearness and perspicuity, so he did also in respect of easiness. For besides those many Rites and Ceremonies which the Law of Moses super-added to it, as Types and Shadows of the Gospel, there were sundry others super-added to it by the same Law, partly in Conformity to the more innocent Rites of the Ægyptians, among whom the Jews were educated, and of whose Rites and Manners they were pertinaciously fond; and partly in opposition to their Magical and Idolatrous ones, vide Vol. I. p. 59, 60. For the Primitive Jewish Religion was that which the Patriarchs and their Posterity professed and practised before the giving of the Law, and to which the Ceremonial Law was but a super-addition; but by reason of the vast number of Rites and Ceremonies which this Law contained (which yet considering their state and temper was very necessary for them) their Religion was rendered exceeding cumbersome and grievous to them: And therefore the Apostle justly calls it a Yoke which neither they nor their Fore-fathers were able to bear, Acts xv. 10. But our Saviour, when he came into the World, who was the substance and accomplishment of all those Ceremonial Types and Prophetick Pictures, unloaded it of all those burthensome Appendages, and thereby restored it to that ancient ease and liberty in which it was, before that yoke of Bondage was imposed on it: Nay, and not only so, but also render'd it more easy than ever; for whereas before the Law, it had annexed to it that painful Rite of Circumcision, which was the Primitive Seal of that Religion or Covenant, our blessed Saviour exchanged it for a much gentler and easier, viz. that of Baptism. For whereas Circumcision was not only an infamous Rite among the greatest Part of the Gentile World, and upon that account unfit to be the sign of initiation into the Church of Christ, which was now to be enlarged and propagated through the World; but also a bloody and painful one, and upon that account more apt to affright Men from, than to initiate them into his Church; Baptism was a Rite that Both Jews and Gentiles revered, and that is very easy and practicable in its own Nature. So that whereas the ancient Judaism was rendered a yoke of Bondage (as the Apostle calls it, Gal. v. 10.) thro' those numerous Rites and Ceremonies that were super-induced upon it, our Saviour disburthened it of them all, and thereby rendered it an easy yoke, as he himself calls it, Matth. xi. 30. Since therefore Christianity, for the main, is nothing but the ancient Judaism released from the Bondage of the Ceremonial Law, and restored to its Primitive easiness and freedom, it hence follows, that by embracing Christ and his Doctrine, the believing Jews did not turn to a new Religion, nor consequently constitute a new Church, but still continued in their Old Religion which our Saviour only bettered and improved, and rendered far more easy and practicable.

Thirdly and lastly, Our Saviour very much improved the Jewish Church and Religion in respect of the extent and universality of it. It is true, the Gentiles, who embraced the Jewish Religion, were always allowed admission into the Jewish Church. For so at first, not only Abraham himself and his Children, but his Servants also were admitted into Covenant with God, and thereby made his Church and People. And in the Reigns of David and Solomon, as Mr. Selden, de Jure, lib. 2. cap. 2. observes, there were vast Numbers of Converts to the Jewish Church out of all the Neighbouring Nations; and in Absuerus's Reign, many of the People of the Land of Media and Persia, became Jews, Esther viii. 17. and afterwards in Hyrchanus's Reign the whole Nation of the Idumeans embraced the Jewish Religion; all which, and many more, as the true Children of Abraham's Faith, were by Circumcision initiated into the Covenant God made with him and his Posterity, and thereby became Co-members with them of the same Corporation, and Co-heirs to the same Promises. But, though the Gate of the Jewish Church was never shut against the Gentiles, yet, as I shewed before, there were sundry of the Rites of that Church, instituted on purpose to divide and separate the Jews from the Gentiles, to create a distance and mutual strangeness between them; that thereby the Jews might be preserved and secured from mingling with the Gentile Idolatries. Now by these distinguishing Rites, which begat an inveterate mutual prejudice between the Jews and Gentiles, the Jewish Church was very much narrowed and contracted. For in the first place these distinguishing Rites, by prejudicing the Jews against the Gentiles, restrained them from all free converse and communication with them, and thereby from propagating their Religion among them: And secondly, by prejudicing the Gentiles against the Jews, they also prejudiced them against the Jewish Religion, and rendered their Minds extremely averse to the entertainment of it. Thus as these Ceremonious singularities of the Jewish Church were to the Jews great Preservatives against the Idolatries of the Gentiles, so to the Gentiles they were very great Hindrances of their Conversion to the Religion of the Jews. And therefore our Saviour, in order to his design of propagating Christianity among the Gentiles, which is the true Spirit and Mystery of Judaism, found it necessary to remove it from these offensive Rites, which lay as so many stumbling Blocks in the way to the Conversion of the Gentiles to it, and so by pulling down this middle Wall of Partition between the Jews and Gentiles, and abolishing this enmity of Ordinances, which created such a vast distance between them, he opened and prepared the way to the Conversion of the Gentiles, and took a most prudent and effectual Course to make Peate between them and the Jews, and to reconcile them both into one Body in the Cross, and hereby to extend and enlarge the Church into an Universal Corporation.

In short therefore, Christianity being nothing else but only Judaism separated from all those Appendages of it, which rendered it obscure and burthensome, and narrow, it hence follows, that that Remnant of Jews who received and embraced it, were so far from renouncing their old Religion, that they still admitted, and professed, and adhered to it under its greatest Advantages and Improvements; that they renounced nothing of it, but only its comparative Defects, and did only admit of these new Reformations of it, by which our Saviour advanced it to its utmost Lustre and Perfection, and rendered it infinitely more clear, and easy,

easy and extensive: And since it was their old Religion thus reformed and improved that they still embraced and continued in, upon their turning Christians, it necessarily follows, that they did not become a new, distinct Church, but were only a continued Succession of the old one. And hence it is that Christians in the New Testament are sometimes called Jews, Rev. ii. 9. i. e. reformed Jews, or, which is the same, true Christians; and sometimes the Israel of God, Gal. vi. 16. and sometimes the Children of Abraham, Gal. iii. 7. and sometimes a chosen Generation, a Royal Priesthood, an Holy Nation, a peculiar People, which is the proper Character of the Jews; because by their Faith and Religion, which is nothing but the true spiritual and mystick Judaism, they were Jews and Israelites, and the Children of Abraham; though they were not all so according to the Flesh, as the Apostle distinguishes, 1 Cor. x. 18. and hence also it is that the Christian Church is called the new Jerusalem, Rev. iii. 12. because it is nothing but the old Jerusalem, or Jewish Church renewed and enlarged.

Eighthly and lastly, That to this individual Church or Kingdom of Christ, thus reformed and improved, was superadded all those Gentiles that were afterwards converted to Christianity. When the main Body of the Jews had rejected our Saviour, his Kingdom was reduced to a very narrow compass, and consisted only of one single Congregation of Christians in Jerusalem; which, through the Blessing of God, upon the indefatigable Industry of his Apostles and Disciples, was by degrees spread and dilated over all the World: For this single Congregation was the Primitive Root, out of which the vast Stock of the Catholick Church sprung, which hath since branched forth itself into particular Churches to all the Ends of the Earth: For it is of this Church that the Apostle speaks, Acts ii. 47. when he tells us, that the Lord added to the Church daily such as should be saved. So that all that were converted to the Faith of Christ, were but so many Additions to this Primitive Church, so many living Stones incorporated into this spiritual Building, which by the Industry of its Builders, did soon increase and multiply into several other Congregations; and these Congregations, though they were several, yet were not separate or independent, but continued all of them united to the first, as Homogeneous Parts growing out of the same Body, or distinct Apartments superadded to the same Building. So that the Christian Church began in one Congregation, and by degrees enlarged itself, like a fruitful Stock, by branching forth itself into other Congregations, in a continued Unity with its own Body, which, for the convenience of Worship and Discipline, were afterwards formed into several though not separate particular Churches, under the Conduct of their particular Pastors and Governors. And thus all the particular Churches that are now in the World, are only so many Lines drawn from this Primitive Center, and united in it; and it is upon this Account particularly that they all of them constitute but one Catholick Church; because they all grew out of one, and so are but Comparts of the same Body, and Branches of the same Root, and are only that one Primitive Church multiplied into several Churches living in the same Catholick Communion and Unity. And accordingly the Gentile Converts are said to be grafted in the Jewish Church, which the Apostle calls the good Olive-tree, in Rom. xi. 17, 18. For if some of the Branches, that is, the unbelieving Jews, be broken off, i. e. rejected from being any more the Church and People of God, and thou being a wild Olive-tree, growing in the wild Common of the World, without the Pale and Inclosure of God's Church, wert grafted in among them, i. e. incorporated with the believing Jews, and made a Member of the Body of their Church, and with them partakest of the Root and Fatness of the Olive-Tree, i. e. communicatest with them in all the Blessings of God's Promise to Abraham, which is the Foundation of their Church, boast not against the Branches; but if thou boast, consider thou bearest not the Root, but the Root thee, i. e. the Jewish Church grew not out of thee, but thou out of that; she is no Branch of thee, but thou of her, as being ingrafted into her Stock, and added to her Communion. By which it is evident that the converted Gentiles were all but so many many Superadditions to that Primitive Church of Jerusalem, which was the only Remainder of the ancient Jewish Church, and which from one single Congregation, did by degrees increase and multiply itself into an infinite number of particular Churches, in Union with itself, from one end of the World to the other.

And this, in short, is the Progress of Christ's Kingdom, which from Adam to Abraham, consisted of all such as were true Worshipers of God, of whatsoever Kindred or Nation, from Abraham to Jesus Christ, principally of the Jewish Nation; and when the greatest Part of that Nation had revolted from Christ, and renounced their Relation to him, his Kingdom extended no farther than to the small Remnant of the Jews that adhered to him, who made up but one single Congregation; which Congregation, by the Diligence of its Ministers, and the Blessing of God, increased and propagated from itself vast Numbers of other Congregations, and these were formed into particular Churches, which, like so many conquer'd Provinces, were still united to that Primitive Kingdom, till at last, by a continued Accession of new Conquests, it was spread and enlarged into an universal Empire.

S E C T. VIII.

Of the Nature and Constitution of Christ's Kingdom.

THE Kingdom of Christ and the Church of Christ are Phrases of a promiscuous use in Holy Scripture, and do import the same thing. Thus Matth. xvi. 18, 19. Thou art Peter, and upon this Rock will I build my Church, and I will give unto thee the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven; where the Church and the Kingdom of Heaven are the same thing. And thus, to be translated into the Kingdom of Christ, Col. i. 13. and called to the Kingdom of Christ, 1 Theff. ii. 12. imports no more than to be made a Member of the Church of Christ. And thus also by the Kingdom, Matth. xiii. 38. by the Kingdom of God, Matth. xxi. 31. by the Kingdom of Heaven, Matth. xi. 12. and by the Kingdom of Christ, Rev. xi. 15. no other Thing can be intended, but only the Church of Christ.

I confess, the Kingdom of Christ taken in the largest Sense, extends a great deal farther than the Church of Christ: For under God the Father he is universal Lord and King of the World; his Kingly Power being upon his Ascension into Heaven extended, as was shewn before, to the utmost Limits of the Universe: For so he himself tells us by way of Anticipation, that God hath given him Power over all Flesh, John xvii. 2. i. e. over all Mankind: For his Regal Power extends as far as his Power of judging, which is one of the principal Acts of his Regality, and his Power of judging is over all Mankind; for so we are assured that God hath appointed a Day, in which he will judge the World by the Man Christ Jesus, Acts xvii. 31. and that Christ is ordained of God to be the Judge of Quick and Dead, Acts x. 42. and not only so, but that when he shall sit down upon the Throne of his Glory, all Nations shall be gathered before him, Matth. xxv. 31, 32. Since therefore by the Right of his Royalty he shall judge all Nations, it necessarily follows, that all Nations are under his Empire and Dominion: and accordingly the Apostle tells us, that God hath set him at his own right Hand in the heavenly Places, far above all Principality, and Power, and Might, and Dominion, and every Name that is named, not only in this World, but also in that which is to come; and hath put all things under his Feet, and gave him to be Head over all Things to the Church, Ephes. i. 20, 21, 22. So that the Kingdom of Christ, in a large Sense, extends to all Nations in the World, even to the Heathens and Infidels, that never heard of his Name, and upon this account he is styled, The blessed and only Potentate, the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, 1 Tim. vi. 15. and so also Rev. xvii. 14.

But the Church is more peculiarly his Kingdom, as consisting of that part of the World, which owns and acknowledges his Authority, makes a visible Profession of Faith to him, and Submission to his Laws and Regulations. As for the other Parts of the World, they are all of right his Subjects, by virtue of that Universal Regal Authority, wherewith the most High God and Father of all Things hath invested him; but, de facto, they are Slaves to the Prince of Darknes, all whose Dominions in this World are nothing but Usurpations on the Kingdom of Christ. But the Church is that Part of the World that hath thrown off the Yoke of this Usurper, and, by a solemn Profession, surrender'd up itself to the Authority of Christ, its rightful Lord and Sovereign; and hence the Members of the Church are said to be translated out of the Kingdom of Darknes into the Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, Col. i. 15.

The Church therefore being more peculiarly Christ's Kingdom, as being that Part of the World which is actually subjected to him, and under his Government, I shall, with as much Brevity as the Argument will admit, enquire into the Nature and Constitution of it. In General therefore the Church or Kingdom of Christ may be thus defined: It is the one Universal Society of all Christian People, incorporated by the New Covenant in Baptism, under Jesus Christ its supreme Head, and distributed under lawful Governours and Pastors into particular Churches, holding Communion with each other in all the Essentials of Christian Faith, and Worship, and Discipline: For our better understanding of which Definition, it will be necessary to explain the several Parts of it.

First therefore, It is the one Universal Society of all Christian People.

Secondly, Of all Christian People incorporated by the New Covenant.

Thirdly, Of all Christian People incorporated by the New Covenant in Baptism.

Fourthly, Of all Christian People incorporated under Jesus Christ, its supreme Head and Governour.

Fifthly, It is a Society of all Christian People, distributed into particular Churches.

Sixthly, It is distributed into particular Churches, under lawful Pastors and Governours.

Seventhly, It is distributed into particular Churches, holding Communion with each other.

Eighthly, The Communion which these particular Churches hold with each other is,

First, In all the Essentials of Christian Faith; and, Secondly, In all the Essentials of Christian Worship.

Thirdly, In all the Essentials of Christian Discipline.

First, The Church or Kingdom of Christ is one Universal Society, consisting of all Christian People, who, as was shewn before, were at first comprised in one single Congregation at Jerusalem, and then this single Congregation was the whole Church or Kingdom of Christ, which by the continual Accession of new Converts, increased and multiplied by degrees, till at length it was spread over the whole Earth. So that the Christian Society, as it is now enlarged, is nothing but that Primitive Church diffused and dilated: For it was not diffused into separate and independent Societies, but into similar Parts and Members of the same Society: and therefore as a Man is one and the same Person when he is full grown, as he was when he was an Infant but of a span long, because his Growth consists not in an addition of other Persons to him, but only of other Parts of the same Person; so the Church of Christ is the same individual Church now, since it is grown to this vast Bulk and Proportion, that it was in its Infant State, when it extended no farther than one single Congregation; because it grew not into other divided Churches, but only into other distinct Parts of the same Church, and therefore since its Growth consisted only in new Accessions of similar Parts to the same Body, it must be as much one Body or Society now, as it was at first, when it was but one single Congregation. For this this Congregation was the Root out of which the Catholick Church sprang, or, as our Saviour phrases it, the Grain of Mustard-seed, which, though a very small Seed, shot up into a mighty Tree, in whose far-spread Branches the Birds of the Air came and lodged; and therefore as the Stock and Branches grow up from the Root in a continued Union with it, and all together make but one Tree, so all the Christian People in the World sprang out of this single Congregation, and as they sprang, were still incorporated and united to it, so as that all together they make but one Church. And this is that which in our Creed is called the Holy Catholick or Universal Church: For, so the Apostle tells us, that there is but one Body, or Church, as well as one Spirit, one Lord, one Faith, and one Baptism, Ephes. iv. 5, 6. and our Saviour tells us, Other Sheep have I, meaning the Gentiles, [which are not of this Fold], meaning the Jewish Church; and they shall hear my Voice, and there shall be one Fold and one Shepherd, John x. 16. For so the Gentiles, added to the Christian Jewish Church, are said of twain to make one new Man, Eph. ii. 13. and both together are compared to a Building fitly framed together, growing into an holy Temple in the Lord, ibid. ver. 21. And indeed, since all Christians do enjoy in common, and without any Distinction, the same Privileges and Immunities, they must of Necessity be all of the same Community: For it is by their peculiar Faith, and Laws, and Rites of Worship, and Promises, and Privileges, that the Christian Society is distinguished from the rest of the World; and therefore since these Peculiarities are, by the very Institution of Christian Society, made common to all Christian People, it is nonsense to suppose them distinguished by that Institution into separate and independent Communities: For how can they be separate Societies, which have nothing to separate and distinguish them, but enjoy all Things in common with one another?

Secondly, The Church is one universal Society of all Christian People incorporated by the New Covenant: For this is that which distinguishes regular Societies from confused Multitudes, that whereas the latter are only locally united, so that as soon as ever their Parts are dispersed into distant Places, they cease to be, and are utterly dissolved; the former are united by Laws and mutual Stipulations, which are the Political Nerves and Arteries, by which their several Parts, how remote and distant soever, are united to one another; even as it is in our City-Companies, which are not only united while their Members are met together in their Common Halls, but do also continue united after they are dispersed abroad to their several Homes; because that which unites them is not their being together in the same Place, but their being obliged together under the same Laws and Stipulations, and communicating with one another in the Duties and Privileges of one and the same Charter; by reason whereof, though they suffer a continual Defluence of old, and Access of new Parts, yet still they remain the same Societies; (even like natural Bodies that are under a perpetual Flux of Parts) because they still retain the same Laws and Charters, which are the statick Principles or Forms that individuate them, and keep them still the same. And thus it is with the Church, which partakes of the common Nature of all other formed and regular Societies. For hence, in Scripture, it is called a Kingdom, a City, or Commonwealth, and compared to a natural Organized Body, to denote that it is a regular Society, all whose Parts are united together by legal Bonds and Ligaments. Now the legal Bond which unites the Church, and renders all its Members one regular Corporation, is the New Covenant; by which all Christian People are in one Body obliged to all the Duties it requires, and entitled to all the Privileges it proposes, and by being all engaged together in this one Covenant, whereby they are all concerned together in the same common Duties and Privileges, they are all incorporate together into the same Community. And thus it was that the Jewish People were all united into one Church, by their being all confederated as one Party in one and the same Covenant, whereby they all engaged themselves, as one Body, to be God's People, and God engaged himself to them, as to one Body, to be their God; which in Deut. xxvi. 17, 18. is thus expressed, Thou hast avouched this Day the Lord to be thy God, and to walk in his Ways, and to keep his Statutes, and his Commandments; and the Lord hath avouched thee this Day to be his peculiar People, as he hath promised thee. This, therefore, was that which united them into one Religious Society, that they were all confederated with God in one and the same Covenant. For, thus saith God, I entred into Covenant with thee, and thou becamest mine, Ezek. xvi. 8. and hence God is said to be Married to that People, Jer. iii. 14. and to be their Husband, Isaiah liv. 5. because by the Covenant, which like a Matrimonial Engagement, was transacted between God and them, they were all united into one Spouse, and contracted to one Husband. And in the same sense the Christian Church is called the Bride and the Spouse of Christ, vide Rev. xxii. 17. and Christ is called her Husband, 2 Cor. xi. 2. because we by contracting ourselves to him in one and the same Covenant, do all become one Party, and are incorporate together into one Spouse, and he by contracting himself to us in one and the same Counterpart, unites us in one common Husband, and endows us in common with all his Spiritual Goods and Blessings. So that by the New Covenant, which is the Nuptial Contract between Christ and Christians, and in which we are said to be married to Christ, Rom. vii. 7. we are not only united to one Head and Husband, but are also incorporated into one Body and Spouse. And accordingly, as the Jews, by virtue of their Covenant with God, were separated from all Nations and united together into a distinct Body, upon which account they are called God's peculiar Treasure, a Kingdom of Priests, and an holy Nation, Exod. xix. 5, 6. so we Christians, by virtue of our Covenant with God in Christ, are separated from all other Societies, and made a distinct Corporation from the World; upon which account we are also called a chosen Generation, a Royal Priesthood, and a holy Nation, and a peculiar People, 1 Pet. ii. 9.

Thirdly, The Church or Kingdom of Christ is the Universal Society of all Christian People, incorporated by the new Covenant in Baptism. For so in Humane Contracts it hath been thought meet even by the unanimous Consent of all prudent Law-givers, that the mutual Engagements of the contracting Parties should not be legally Pleadable, till they have been first mutually sealed, and solemnly confirmed before Witnesses. And accordingly God, who is wont to proceed with Men in Humane Methods, hath always thought meet to strike and ratify his Covenants with them, by some visible Sign, or Solemnity. For thus he struck his Covenant with the Jews in that visible Solemnity of Circumcision, which was the Sign by which God and that People sealed and con-signed to each other their respective Parts of that Covenant, by which he stipulated to be their God, and they to be his People. And till such time as this outward Sign was transacted between God and them, the Covenant it sealed was not in force so as to oblige either Party, or give them a mutual Claim in one another. And hence it is called God's Covenant in their Flesh, for an everlasting Covenant, and they who refused to admit this Sign, unless it were under some great Necessity (in which Case God accepted the sincere Desire for the Deed) were to be cut off from that People, i. e. to be treated as Aliens from that Church, and that because they had broken or rejected God's Covenant, i. e. by refusing that Sign which was the Seal and Ratification of it, Gen. xvii. 13, 14.

But this Bloody Sign, as was shewn before, being not so commodious for the State of the Christian Church, which was to be diffused over all the World, our Saviour abolished it; and in its room introduced the Sign of Baptism, which was before used by the Jews for the initiation of their Females and Profelytes; and which was much more acceptable to the Gentiles, as not being at all offensive to them (as Circumcision was) it being one of their own Religious Ceremonies, and much less painful in its own Nature. But, though this was of a quite different Nature from Circumcision, yet it was instituted by our Saviour to supply its room, and to serve its Religious Ends and Purposes, viz. to transact, and seal, and ratify the New Covenant between God and us. For in Baptism the Party baptized makes a solemn Vow and Profession, by himself or his Sponsor, of Fidelity and Allegiance to God through Jesus Christ; and hence Baptism is called the Answer or Promise of a good Conscience, 1 Pet. iii. 21. For in the Apostolick Age, as Origen tells us, in Num. Homil. 5. there were certain Questions proposed by the Minister to the Person to be baptized, which St. Cyprian calls Interrogatio Baptismi, the Interrogation of Baptism: Now the Questions proposed were first, Ἀπολάσῃ τῷ Σατανᾷ, Wilt thou renounce the Devil? To which the Party answered, Ἀπολάσσομαι, I do renounce: Then he was asked again, Σωθήσῃ τῷ Χριστῷ, Doest thou consent to resign thyself to Christ? To which he answered, Σωθήσομαι, I do consent; and this Answer or Promise being made with a sincere Intention, was that in all Probability which the Apostle here calls the Answer of a good Conscience: and if so, it is certain that these Words do imply our formal Covenanting with God in Baptism. Of the Truth of which we have a large Account in Rom. vi. 3, 4, 5. Know ye not that so many as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his Death: therefore we are buried with him by Baptism into Death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the Glory of the Father; even so we also should walk in newness of Life: for if we have been planted together into the likeness of his Death, we shall be also into the likeness of his Resurrection; where it is plain that those Phrases, buried with Christ, and risen with Christ, are only the Sense and Signification of that Eastern Custom in Baptism, viz. of plunging the baptized Person under Water, and raising him up again; which being Sacramental Actions, must be supposed to have a peculiar import and significancy; and the significancy of them, the Apostle here plainly tells us, wholly refers to the Death, and Burial, and Resurrection of Christ: And therefore the plunging under Water must necessarily refer to Christ's Death and Burial, and the raising up again, to his Resurrection. The true import therefore of these Baptismal Actions must be, First, a solemn Profession of our Belief, that as we are buried under Water and raised up again, so Christ died, and was buried, and raised up from the Dead, which being the principal Articles of Christianity, do include all the rest. Secondly, They also import a solemn Engagement of the Party baptized to die to, and endeavour utterly to extinguish all his sinful Lusts and Affections, even as Christ died and was buried; and to rise from the Spiritual Death of Sin into newness of Life, even as Christ rose from his natural Death to live for ever. Since therefore in their Baptism they did by the same Actions signify their Belief of the Death, and Burial, and Resurrection of Christ, together with their own Resolution of dying to Sin, and rising to Righteousness, they might very well be said to die with Christ in those Actions, to be buried with Christ, and to rise with Christ, since what is represented as done together, is representatively done together; and it is usual in Sacraments to call the representing Signs by the Names of the Things which they represent. For so the Paschal Lamb is called the Passover, and the Bread and Wine in the Lord's Supper the Body and Blood of Christ; and for the same reason the plunging under Water and raising up again in Baptism is here called dying with Christ, and rising with Christ, because in the same Actions Christ's natural Death and Resurrection, and our spiritual Death and Resurrection are represented together. The meaning therefore of the abovesaid Passage is plainly this, "You cannot be ignorant that when you were baptized into Jesus Christ, you made a solemn Profession, that you would conform yourselves to his Death, in dying to Sin even as he died for it, so that in your Baptismal Immersion you were representatively buried with him, that so as Christ was raised from the Dead, so you, in conformity thereto, might live a new regenerate Life; for if we conform to his Death in dying to Sin, as we promised to do in our Immersion, we shall be sure to conform to his Resurrection also, in living to Righteousness, as we promised to do in the rising out of the Water again. By which it is evident that Baptism is on our Part a solemn

Engagement

Engagement of ourselves to perform the Conditions of the New Covenant. And indeed the very Phrase, Baptized into Jesus Christ, can import no less than a solemn resignation of ourselves to Christ in Baptism. For so the Phrase, Baptized into Moses, 1 Cor. x. 2. plainly denotes the Jews giving up themselves to him, to be governed by him, as the Minister of God. And accordingly the Apostle tells us, that so many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ, Gal. iii. 27. and putting on Christ is opposed by the Apostle to making no provision for the Flesh to fulfil the Lusts thereof, Rom. xiii. 14. and therefore must necessarily denote an Engagement of ourselves, to a strict observance of the Laws of Christian Purity; or, which is the same thing, a Promise or Stipulation on our Part, of universal Obedience to his Laws. By all which it is evident, that in this Solemnity of Baptism we put ourselves under Christ, as our Head, and Covenant with him to be ruled by him in our Faith and Manners.

And as in this Ceremony of Initiation we strike Covenant with him, so doth he with us. For in this sacred Action the Minister is the authorized Proxy of Jesus Christ, and therefore his giving the holy Sign is Christ's own Action, and doth to all Intents and Purposes as much oblige him, as if he did it in his own Person. For since Christ is not upon Earth, and so cannot transact the New Covenant with us in his own Person, it is necessary he should do it by Authorized Proxies, impowered by himself to do it in his Name; which Proxies being thus Authorized by him, do as effectually oblige him by those federal Rites which they perform in his Name, as if he himself had performed them in his own Person. For he doth what they do by his Authority, and is as effectually obliged by what he doth by them mediately, as by what he doth by himself immediately. For thus his Commission runs, by which he Authorized them and their Successors to the End of the World, Go teach all Nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; where that Phrase, in the Name, plainly imports (as it generally doth in other Places of Scripture) by the Authority. So that by this Commission, Christ's Ministers are authorized and constituted the legal Proxies of the Holy Trinity, in the stead of those blessed Persons to seal the New Covenant with the Baptismal Sign to those whom they Baptize, and thereby legally to oblige the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost to perform the Promises of it to all those Baptized Persons who perform the Conditions of it. For that the Baptismal Sign is a legal Engagement upon God as well as us to perform the New Covenant, is evident from Mark xvi. 16. He that believes and is baptized shall be saved; where it is evident, that Baptism as well as Faith doth confer a right to Salvation; and therefore since Faith confers it only as it is the Condition of the Covenant, Baptism must confer it as it is the Seal of the Covenant. And accordingly St. Peter exhorts his Converts to Repent and be Baptized for the Remission of Sins, and ye shall receive the Gift of the Holy Ghost. From whence it is evident, that Baptism, as well as Repentance, has a great influence on our Remission of Sins, and our communication of the Holy Ghost. Since therefore Faith and Repentance are the whole Condition of the Promise of Remission, and of the Holy Ghost, it necessarily follows, that Baptism doth not influence it, as it is the Condition, but as it is the Seal of the Promise. And so also in Baptism we are said to wash away our Sins, i. e. the guilt of them, Acts xxii. 16. because the Sign of Baptism seals to us on God's Part the Promise of Forgiveness. By all which it is evident, that Baptism is a federal Rite in which God and we do seal and ratify to one another each other's part of the New Covenant; and it is this sealing that makes the Covenant obliging to both Parties, and gives to each Legal Claim and Title to each other's Promise and Engagement: To God it gives a Legal Title to all that Duty which we promise, and to us it gives a Legal Title to all those Blessings which God promises. So that till such Time as we are Baptized, the New Covenant is not struck between God and us, nor have we any Right or Title to any of the Blessings promised in it. And, though we should perform all that Duty which the Covenant requires, yet this will not at all intitle us to the Blessings it promises. For he who engages to walk a Mile for me, upon my promise to give him a Thousand Pounds, hath, upon his performance, a just Claim and Title to the whole Sum; whereas he that walks Ten Miles for me without any such Promise, hath a Right to no more than what in strict Justice he deserves. And therefore since what God promises in the New Covenant infinitely exceeds the merit of what he requires, our Performance of what he requires, doth not at all oblige him to bestow the Blessings of his Promise on us, unless we perform it upon a Covenant-Engagement; and therefore till this Engagement is made and sealed in our Baptism, we can have no Promise to rely upon; and though we should never so heartily endeavour to repent, we cannot Claim the Divine Grace and Assistance, and though we should actually Repent, we can plead no Title to Remission of Sins, and though we should persevere in well-doing to the end, we cannot challenge Eternal Life. And since our Endeavours do not merit God's Grace, nor our Repentance his Pardon, nor our Perseverance Eternal Life, he is no more obliged to bestow these Blessings on us by his Justice, than he is by his Promise. So that in this State all we have to rely upon, is the hope of an extraordinary Mercy; that God will do for us that which he never promised, and bestow upon us that which he is not obliged to. But when once we have struck Covenant with him in Baptism, we have him fast obliged to us, to perform his Part of the Covenant, whenever we perform ours; and our being thus tied together as one Party in one and the same Covenant by this federal Rite of Baptism, is that which makes us one Catholick Church or Community. For our admission into this New Covenant, which is the Church's Charter, is our admission into the Church itself; and it is by being intituled to all the Blessings that belong to Christians in common, by virtue of the New Covenant, that we become Members of the Christian Community. And hence we are said to be Baptized into the Body or Church of Christ, 1 Cor. xii. 13. because Baptism, which is our admission into the Christian Covenant, is only in other Words our admission into the Christian Church, which is nothing but the Body of Christian People joined and confederated by the New Covenant.

Fourthly, The Church or Kingdom of Christ is one universal Society of all Christian People incorporated by the New Covenant in Baptism, under Jesus Christ its supreme head. And it is this also that makes all Christian People one Body and Society, because they are all united under one and the same supreme Head and Governour. For several neighbouring Congregations are called in Scripture one Church, as I shall shew hereafter, because they were all under the Government of one and the same Bishop: So all the Churches under all the Bishops in the World, are in Scripture called one Church, because they are all under one Governor, even Jesus Christ the supreme Bishop of our Souls: And accordingly the Apostle tells us, that as there is but one Body, i. e. one Church, so there is but one Lord or supreme Governor of that Church, Eph. iv. 4, 5. and in Col. i. 18. he tells us, that Christ is the head of this Body the Church; and again, Eph. v. 23. that the Husband is the head of the Wife, even as Christ is the Head of the Church. For Christ being Mediator of the Covenant, by which we are incorporated into a Religious Society, it must be under him, as our immediate Head and Governor, that we are incorporate by it; because as he is Mediator of it for God, his Office is to govern us for and under God, according to the Terms and Conditions of it.

Fifthly, The Church or Kingdom of Christ is one Universal Society of all Christian People [distributed into particular Churches] which distribution is made for the convenience of Divine Worship: For the Catholick Church being a vast Body composed of infinite Parts which are separated from each other by vast distances of Place, it is impossible for it to celebrate the Offices of Divine Worship in any one Assembly or Congregation. At first, indeed, the whole Catholick Church was only a single Congregation; but this in a little Time increased and multiplied so fast, that they could no longer exercise the Publick lick Worship of God together in one Place or Assembly; and therefore the first distribution of it was into several Congregations, which in Scripture are called by the Name of Churches, as being similar Parts of the Catholick Church, even as every breath of Air is called Air, and every drop of Water, Water. For thus those Believers who were wont to Assemble in any one particular House to Worship God together, are frequently called Churches; as for Instances, the Church in the House of Priscilla and Aquila, Rom. xvi. 5. The Church in the House of Nymphas, 1 Cor. xvi. 19. The Church in the House of Philemon, Col. iv. 15. In which Houses in all probability there was an upper Room consecrated and set apart, according to the Custom of the Jews, for Divine Worship; in which upper Rooms, not only the Believers of the Family, but several other neighbouring Christians were wont to assemble for the Publick Exercise of Divine Worship. And so where-ever the Scripture speaks of several Churches in the same Countrey; as for Instances, the Churches of Judea, Gal. i. 22. of Samaria and Galilee, Acts ix. 31. it is evident, that by these Churches no more is meant but only the several Congregations of Believers in those several Churches.

But these Congregations growing numerous, there was a second distribution made of them, by which many of those Congregations neighbouring upon one another, were collected into one Body, under one Head or Bishop, who was the common Guide and Pastor of all the Members, whether Lay or Clergy, appertaining to them. And these Collections of several Congregations under their several Bishops or Governours, are in Scripture also frequently called Churches; for thus for Instance, the Church of Corinth contained in it several Congregations, and therefore, though in the Dedication of his Epistle, the Apostle calls it, the Church of God, in the singular Number, which is at Corinth, 1 Cor. i. 2. yet in the Epistle he enjoins, that the Women should keep silence in the Churches, 1 Cor. xiv. 34. which is a plain Evidence, that in that Church there were several Churches or Congregations: And so also we read of the Churches of Asia and Syria, Cilicia and Macedonia; all which were large Countries, and did without doubt contain in them several Congregations of Christians; and thus also we read of the Church of Jerusalem, in the singular Number, and so of Antioch, Ephesus, &c. which Churches doubtless consisted of several Congregations in and about those populous Cities; which were all united into one Body, under the Care and Inspection of one Bishop or Governour.

Now as the first distribution of the Catholick Church into distinct Congregations, was made for the convenience of Worship, it being impossible for the whole Church, when it began to increase and enlarge itself, to celebrate the Divine Offices by the Ministry of one and the same Pastor; so this second distribution of it into particular Churches, consisting of several Congregations, was made for the convenience of Government and Discipline; it being impossible for the whole Church to maintain its Order, Government and Discipline, under the single inspection of any one Bishop or Governour: But yet, notwithstanding these Distributions, the Church's Unity still remains; for as the Empire was but one, notwithstanding that, for the convenience of Society and Government, it was distributed into several Cities and Regions, and those into several Provinces, because they were all incorporated together under one Civil Head, the Emperour; so the Church is but one, though for the convenience of Worship and Government it be distributed into several Congregations, and those into several particular Churches or Episcopacies; because they are all incorporate under one spiritual Head, even Jesus Christ the supreme Bishop and Pastor of our Souls.

• Sixthly, It is the Universal Society of all Christian People, distributed into particular Churches, under Lawful Governours and Pastors, and it is this, indeed, that constitutes them distinct Churches, viz. their being joined and united together under distinct Pastors and Governours: For thus a single Congregation is a distinct Church, because all the Members of it do locally Communicate together in all the Offices of Divine Worship administred to them by a distinct Pastor; and so also a Collection of several Congregations is a distinct Church, because they all participate together of the direction and conduct of a distinct Governour. For, as I shewed before, the reason of these Distributions of the Catholick Church, first into single Congregations, was the Convenience of Worship, and then into several Collections of several Congregations was the Convenience of Government; and therefore, since that which serves the convenience of Worship, is the having distinct Pastors to administer it; and that which serves the convenience of Government, is the having distinct Rulers to exercise it, it hence necessarily follows, that that which makes a Congregation a distinct distribution of the Catholick Church, must be its worshipping together under a distinct Pastor; and that which makes a Collection of Congregations a distinct distribution of the Catholick Church, must be its being united together under a distinct Governour; because without their Pastor or their Governour they want the formal reason of their being distributed into distinct Churches. And indeed there is no Church whatsoever, whether it be a single Congregation or a Collection of Congregations, can act as a Church without a Pastor or Governour. No Congregation can Lawfully communicate in the Publick Offices of Divine Worship, without a Lawful Pastor to administer it; no Collection of Congregations can Lawfully exert an Act of Church-Government without having an authorized Governour to exercise it. For the Administration of all Church-Offices is committed, by our Saviour, into the Hands of the Church-Officers; it is to them that he hath given the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, i. e. Authority to admit, or exclude, or re-admit Men into the Communion of the Church: It is they alone whom he hath made the Keepers of the Seals of the New Covenant, viz. Baptism and the Lord's Supper, they alone whom he hath authorized to teach the Gospel, to bless the People, and to offer up the Publick Prayers of Christian Assemblies. And these are the proper Acts of a Church, consider'd as a Church; so that without Pastors or Governours there is no Church can perform any of those Acts that are proper to a Church: And therefore since all Action proceeds from the Essence of the Agent; Pastors and Governours, without which Churches, as such, cannot act, must necessarily be essential to Churches; and hence the Apostle tells us, that the great purpose for which Christ ordained Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, and Pastors, and Teachers was πρὸς κατασκευὴν, for the compacting or joining together the Saints as one Body in Church Communion and Society, Ephes. iv. 11. 12. and hence also you find the Churches of Asia following the Number of the Angels or Rulers of them, Rev. i. 20. which plainly implies, that therefore they were Seven distinct Churches, because they had Seven distinct Rulers or Bishops; and therefore though the Ordination of Pastors and Bishops is not confined to the Ministry of any particular Church, but extends to the Ministry of the Church Catholick; for so St. Paul, Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, all are yours, and you are Christ's, that is, they are all Ministers of the Catholick Church in common, of which you are Members, and as such you have all a share in them, 1 Cor. iii. 22, 23. yet it is the particular Application of this their general Capacity to this or that particular number of Christians or Congregations of Christians that constitutes them particular Churches; and being first authorized Ministers of the Catholick Church they carry along with them into the particular Church they are sent to, all that Church Authority and Power by which it acts and operates as a Church. So that without Pastors or Governours, particular Churches are nothing to so many Bodies without Souls, to animate and act them; and therefore as in natural Bodies the form that acts them doth also constitute their Kind and Species, so in these Ecclesiastical Bodies, the Pastors and Governours that move and act them as Churches, do also constitute them Churches. What these Lawful Pastors and Governours are, I shall have occasion to discourse hereafter, when I come to treat of the Ministers of Christ's Kingdom; it being sufficient at present to shew the necessity of them to the constituting particular Churches.

Seventhly,

Seventhly, The Church is one Universal Society of all Christian People distributed into particular Churches [holding Communion with each other:] By holding Communion with each other, I mean, owning each other as Parts of the same Body, and admitting each others Member, as occasion serves, into actual Communion with them in all their Religious Offices. It is true, in the Primitive Churches there were sundry prudential Acts of Communion pass'd between them, such as their formed and communicatory Letters, by which the holy Bishops gave an account to each other of the State and Condition of their respective Churches, and consulted each other's Judgment about them; but these were not at all essential to that Communion which they were obliged, as true Churches, to maintain with one another. All the Communion which they are obliged to, as they are similar Parts and distributions of the Catholick Church, is, that they should not divide into separate Churches, so as to exclude each others Members from communicating in each others Worship, whenever they have occasion to travel from one Church to another. For so long as there is no Rupture between distant Churches, no declared disowning of each other, no express refusal of any Act of Communion to each others Members, they may be truly said to maintain all necessary Communion with each other. And that this Communion is absolutely necessary between all those particular Churches, into which the Catholick Church is distributed, will evidently appear from these Four Considerations. First, that by Baptism, as was shewed before, all Christian People are made Members of the Catholick Church, and by being made Members of it, they are all obliged to communicate with it; for how can they act as Parts of the whole, that hold no Communication with the whole? They who are Members of any Society have not only Right to communicate in all the common Benefits of it, but also an Obligation to communicate in all common Offices of it: And therefore since by Baptism we are made Members of the Catholick Church or Society of Christians, we are thereby not only entituled to partake with it in all its Privileges, but also obliged to join with it in all its Offices. But then secondly, it is farther to be considered, that the Catholick Church being all distributed into particular Churches, we can no otherwise communicate with it, than by communicating with some particular Church; for how can we communicate with the whole, that is all distributed into Parts, without communicating with some Part of the whole? And since the whole is nothing but only a Collection of all the Parts, what Communion can they hold with the whole, who hold no Communion with any part of it? So long therefore as there is any such thing as a visible Catholick Church upon Earth, we are obliged by our Baptism, unless necessity hinder us, to maintain a visible Communion with it: And so long as this Catholick Church is all distributed into so many particular visible Churches, we cannot visibly communicate with it, unless we communicate with some one of those particular Churches: For how can we be in Communion with the whole Body, when we are out of Communion with all the Parts, unless we can find a Body to communicate with, without all its Parts, or some Universal Church without all particular Churches. But then Thirdly, it is also to be considered, that as we cannot communicate with the Universal Church without communicating with some particular one, so neither do we communicate with the Universal Church by communicating with any particular one, unless that Particular one be in Communion with the Church Universal. For if I cannot communicate with the whole without being in Communion with some part of the whole, it is impossible I should communicate with the whole, unless I communicate with some part that is in Communion with the whole. It is as possible for a Finger to communicate with a Body by being joined to an Arm that is separated from the Body, as it is for a Christian to communicate with the Church Catholick by being joined to a Church that is separate from the Church Catholick. But then Fourthly and lastly, There is no particular ticular Church can be in Communion with the Catholick, that separates itself from the Communion of any particular Church that is in Communion with the Catholick. For they who separate from any part of any whole, must necessarily separate from the whole, because the whole is nothing but all the Parts together; and it is a Contradiction to say, that they who are separated from any one part, are yet united to all. How then is it possible for any Church to separate itself from the Communion of any other Church, which is a true part of the Church Catholick, without separating itself from the Communion of the Church Catholick itself; since the Church Catholick is nothing but a Collection of all true Churches; and to be at the same time united to all true Churches, and separated from one true Church, is the same absurdity as to be separated from all true Churches, and yet united to one. In short, the Catholick Church is one, by the Communion of all its Parts, and therefore they who break Communion with any one part, must necessarily disunite themselves from the whole: For when Two Churches separate from one another, it must be, either because the one requires such Terms of Communion as are not Catholick, or because the other refuses such as are. Now that Church which requires sinful or uncatholick Terms of Communion, doth thereby exclude not only one but all Parts of the Catholick Church from its Communion, because they are all equally obliged not to communicate with any Church upon sinful Terms of Communion, and that Church which excludes all Parts of the Catholick Church from its Communion, must in so doing separate itself from the Communion of the Catholick Church. And so on the other hand, that Church which refuses the Communion of any other Church upon Lawful and Catholick Terms, doth hereby separate itself from Communion of all Parts of the Church Catholick, because it separates from a part that is in Communion with all the Parts of it; for that Church which may be Lawfully communicated with, is in Communion with all other Churches that are in Communion with the Catholick Church; and therefore that Church which separates from its Communion cannot be in the number of those Churches that are in Communion with the Catholick Church; and how then can this separating Church be in the Communion of the Catholick Church, when it is out of the Communion of any one of those Churches of which the Catholick Church consists? All those particular Churches therefore into which the Catholick Church is distributed, must be in Communion with each other, otherwise they are so far from being distributions of the Catholick Church, that they are only so many Schisms and Divisions from it. For, if every Christian is obliged by his Baptism to Communicate with the Catholick Church; and if he can no otherwise Communicate with it than by Communicating with some particular Church, which is in Communion with the Church Catholick; and lastly, if no particular Church can be in Communion with the Church Catholick, which is not in Communion with all the Churches of which the Church Catholick consists; then it is absolutely necessary that all those Churches into which the Church Catholick is distributed, should maintain a Catholick Communion with one another.

Eighthly and lastly, The Communion which these particular Churches, into which the Catholick Society of Christians is distributed, hold with each other is Threefold: 1. In all the Essentials of Christian Faith: 2. In all the Essentials of Christian Worship: 3. In all the Essentials of Christian Discipline.

I. In all the Essentials of Christian Faith: By the Essentials of Christian Faith, I mean those Doctrines, the Belief of which is necessary to the very Being of Christianity; for, as in all Arts and Sciences there are some first Principles upon which the whole Scheme of their Doctrines depends, and the denial of which, like the removing the Foundations of a Building, dissolves and ruins the whole Structure; so in Christianity there are some Principles so Fundamental to it, as that the removal of them shakes the whole Scheme of it in pieces. Now the great Fundamental, as the Apostle tells us, is Jesus Christ: For other Foundation can no Man lay, than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ, 1 Cor. iii. 11.

so that by removing the belief of Jesus Christ from the Christian Religion, we necessarily sink and dissolve the whole Structure; and accordingly the Apostle pronounces those Men Apostates from Christianity, who hold not the Head, which is Jesus Christ, Col. ii. 19. But yet the bare belief of Jesus Christ, or of this Proposition, that Christ came from God, and was his Messias and Anointed, is not all that is essential to the Christian Faith, which includes not only his Mission from God, but also the end of his Mission, viz. to be a Mediator between God and Man. For Christianity, as it is distinguished from Natural Religion, is nothing but the Religion of the Mediator, as consisting wholly of the Doctrine of the Mediator, together with the Duties thence arising; so that whatsoever Proposition the Mediatorship of Christ necessarily and immediately implies, it is a fundamental Article of the Christian Faith, which no Man can deny, without innovating the whole Religion, and turning it into a quite different Doctrine from true and real Christianity. For this Proposition, that Christ came from God to mediate between God and Man, includes the whole Doctrine of the Gospel: And therefore whatsoever Proposition is either so necessarily included in it, or so inseparably conjoined with it, as that the denial of it doth by necessary and immediate consequence overthrow the Mediation of our Saviour, it must be essential to the Christian Faith; and the more necessary Connexion there is between any particular Doctrine, and this all-comprehending Doctrine of the Mediation, the more necessary and essential it is to the Christian Faith.

Now whosoever believes not, or at least denies any essential part of the Christian Faith, is not a Christian; and that not only because he wants a Part of that Faith which denominates Men Christians, but also because by disbelieving that Part, he doth by necessary consequence overthrow the whole of Christianity; for so Tertul. de Præscr. c. 37. expressly asserts, Si Hæretici sunt, Christiani esse non possunt, i. e. They who are Hereticks, cannot be Christians; and hence it is that Hereticks, who are such as obstinately deny any fundamental Article of Christianity, are in Scripture ranked in the same Class with Heathens and Infidels; for all true Christians are required to shun and avoid them as unclean Persons, the very touch of whose Conversation was enough to defile them, Rom. xvi. 17. and the Governours of the Church are required to anathematize or exclude them from all Christian Communion, Gal. i. 8. to reject them, Tit. iii. 10. and withdraw themselves from them, 1 Tim. vi. 5. that is, to treat them as Heathens and Infidels, who have no Right or Title to Christian Communion; and if Heretical Persons are to be thus treated, then much more are Heretical Churches; and if every single Heretick be condemned of himself, as the Apostle affirms, Tit. iii. 11. i. e. Excommunicated by his own Sentence of Doctrine, whereby he voluntarily departs from the Church, and so cuts off himself from its Communion, then certainly so is every Heretical Community; and therefore, as such, must be utterly unqualified for Christian Communion. And if Heresy excommunicates not only Heretical Persons, but Heretical Societies, then a common Agreement in all the Essentials of Christian Faith, which is the opposite of Heresy, is necessarily included in Catholic Communion; and accordingly the Scripture frequently presses all Christian People to this common Agreement, as to a most essential Part of their Communion with each other: For so they are required to mind or think one and the same thing, Phil. ii. 2. to stand fast in one Spirit with one Mind, 2 Cor. xiii. 11. to walk by the same Rule, and think the same Thing, Phil. i. 27. to be joyned together in the same Mind, and in the same Judgment, 1 Cor. i. 10. to hold fast the form of sound Words, 2 Tim. i. 13. to strive together for the Faith of the Gospel, Phil. i. 27. and to keep that which is committed to us, 1 Tim. vi. 20. which is that one Form of Doctrine which was delivered to us, Rom. vi. 17. The meaning of all which is, not to oblige us to be of one Mind and Judgment in all Points of Religion; for that is no more in our Power than it is to be all of one Stature or Complexion; but that we should all unanimously consent in all those fundamental Articles of which that one Faith consists, which is the common Creed of Christians: So that it is not the differing of one Church from another in Doctrines that are either remote from or near the Foundations of Christianity, that dissolves their Communion in the Christian Faith; but so long as the essential Doctrines of the Gospel are secured on both sides, no corrupt Doctrines on either can warrant a breach of Communion between them. It is true, if the erring Church imposes the belief of its Errors as a Condition of its Communion, no Church or Christian, that believes them to be Errors, can lawfully communicate with it, be those Errors never so small or inconsiderable; not that in themselves they are a sufficient Cause of separation, but because they who do not believe them cannot profess they do, without telling a Lye, which is a Condition that is simply unlawful: And so also when the Errors are such as do corrupt the vital and essential Parts of her Worship, so that there is no communicating with her in her Worship without communicating in her Corruptions; all Churches and Christians are obliged to abstain from its Communion; not because of the Errors simply considered in themselves, but because they profane and desecrate her Worship with those sinful intermixtures they infuse into it; so that we cannot join with her in her Worship, without joining with her in her Sin: So that there is no Error can separate any Church or Christian from the Catholick Communion of Faith, but only Heresy, which is a perverse renunciation of some essential Part or fundamental Article of that Faith.

Secondly, The Communion, which the particular Churches, of which the Catholick Church consists, hold with each other, is in all the Essentials also of Christian Worship. By the Essentials of Christian Worship, I mean the Invocation of the one Eternal God, through the one Mediator Jesus Christ, and the Participation of the Two Sacraments of Baptism and the Lord's Supper. Hence the Apostle tells us, that as there is but one common Faith wherein all true Christians communicate with each other, so there is but one Lord, Eph. iv. 4. and but one God for us to address to, and one Mediator between God and Man for us to address by, 1 Tim. ii. 5. and therefore to address to this one God by this one Mediator, is an essential Part of Christian Worship. And the same Apostle tells us, that there is but one Baptism, Ephes. iv. 4. and but one Bread of which we are Partakers, 1 Cor. x. 17. and therefore to participate of these Sacraments must also be essential to Christian Worship: So that all those particular Churches that admit each others Members upon lawful Terms to communicate with them in worshipping this one God, through this one Mediator, and in this one Baptism, and one Eucharistical Bread and Cup, are so far in Communion with the Church Catholick. For in these Acts of Christian Worship consists the principal Part of Christian Communion; and therefore that Church which refuses either to admit other Churches to communicate with her in these Acts of Worship, or to communicate with them in them upon lawful Terms, doth so far separate itself from the Christian Communion. I say, upon lawful Terms, because if it either require unlawful, or refuse lawful ones, it utterly excludes all other Churches from its Communion. If on the other hand it hath sophisticated its Worship with any unlawful Intermixtures, so that there is no participating with her in the one, without partaking with her in the other; if we cannot pray with her to the one God, by the one Mediator, without praying to Creatures too, or praying by other Mediators also; if we cannot partake with her in her Baptism, without partaking with her in some sinful and impure Rites of Baptism; in a Word, if we cannot be admitted to receive the Lord's Supper with her, without receiving it by balves, or being obliged to pay Divine homage to its Elements; in this case, I say, all Christians and Christian Churches are utterly excluded by her from communicating with her in the Essentials of Christian Worship. And so on the other hand, if a Church forbids its Members to Communicate upon occasion with any other Church in these Acts of Christian Worship, upon lawful Terms, in so doing it divides itself from the Communion of the Church Catholick; and though that Church it refuses to communicate with, should, through the neglect of its Discipline, have a great many bad Men as well as good in it; though it should require the observation of a great many indifferent Rites, Customs, and Ceremonies, yea, and of contrary Rites and Customs to its own; yet so long as the Essentials of its Worship are kept pure and entire, and are not so blended with unlawful intermixtures, but that we may safely partake of them, without being at all obliged to partake of any Sin; in this case, I say, to refuse to communicate with it, is to separate from the Communion of the Catholick Church: For, for the same Reason that any Church refuses to communicate with this Church, it must refuse to communicate with all other Churches in the World, because we cannot to this Day, nor ever could, communicate with any Church in the World in which there was not some defect of Discipline, some intermixture of bad Men with good, and some indifferent Modes and Ceremonies of Worship.
that

Thirdly and lastly, Another Thing wherein those particular Churches, into which the Catholick Church is distributed, do communicate with each other, is, in the Essentials of Christian Regiment and Discipline: For, though the particular Modes and Circumstances of Christian Government and Discipline are not determined by Divine Institution, but left, for the most part, free to the prudent ordering and disposal of the Governours of particular Churches; yet there is a standing Form of Government and Discipline in the Church, instituted by our Saviour himself, which, as I shall shew hereafter, is this, that there should be an Episcopacy, or Order of Men, authorized in a continued Succession from the Apostles (who were authorized by himself) to oversee and govern all those particular Churches into which the Church Catholick should be hereafter distributed; to ordain inferior Ministers to teach, and instruct, and administer the holy Offices to particular Congregations; and having ordained them, to guide and direct them in the discharge of their Functions; to prescribe the particular Rules of outward Order and Decency to the People of the respective Churches committed to their Charge; to confirm the weak, and admonish the disorderly; and to correct the obstinate, by excluding them from the Communion of the Church of Christ. These Things therefore being all of Divine Institution, are the Essentials of Christian Government and Discipline, in which all Christian Churches are obliged to communicate with each other. And this being the standing Government and Discipline of the Catholick Church, no particular Church or Community of Christians can refuse to communicate in it, without dividing itself from the Communion of the Church Catholick; I say, refuse to communicate in it, because it is possible for a Church to be without this Government and Discipline, which yet doth neither refuse it, nor the Communion of any other Church for the sake of it. A Church may be debarred of it by unavoidable necessities in despite of its power, and against its consent; and under this circumstance I can by no means think such a Church to be separated from the Church Catholick; it is, indeed, an imperfect and defective Part of the Catholick Church; and, if this defect of it be any way owing to its own negligence, it is a very great fault in it, as well as an unhappiness. But though this instituted Government is necessary to the perfection of a Church, yet it doth not therefore follow, that it is necessary to the being of it. For even in the Jewish Church, wherein all Things were determined by Divine Institution, even to the minuteſt Circumstances, there were sundry notorious deviations from that Institution, which yet did not unchurch them. It was a great deviation in them to offer Sacrifice in their High Places, after God had determined them to Sacrifice only at the Temple of Jerusalem: It was another great deviation in them, to make Priests out of other Families, after God had determined them to the Family of Aaron; and yet it is certain, that neither the one nor the other did unchurch them. And if these deviations from Divine Institution, which were the effects of their negligence, did not yet unchurch them, it is not to be imagined that such deviations from it as are the pure effects of necessity should unchurch others. For, though no necessity can dispense with the Eternal Laws of Good and Evil, because the observance of them depends wholly upon our Wills, and there is no such necessity can happen to us, as can put them out of the power of a willing Mind; yet as for positive Institutions, there are a thousand Necessities may occur, any one of which may render them wholly unpracticable, and then no Man can be obliged to do that which is impossible: As for Instance, the whole Family of Aaron might have been extinct, and if it had, it is evident, that positive Institution, by which God required the Jews to chuse their Priests out of the Family of Aaron, must have been wholly unpracticable, and consequently the Obligation of it must have for ever expired; and they must have been obliged, notwithstanding that positive Institution, either wholly to have dropt their Priesthood, and with that their Publick Worship, (which was much more necessary to them, than that their Priests should be all of such a Family) or to have chosen their Priests out of other Families of the Tribe of Levi; and if in this Exigence they had done the latter, there is no doubt but that the Divine Providence which created the necessity, must thereby have designedly dispensed with its own Institution, and so have left them free to make Priests out of other Families. And by the same Reason, whenever the Divine Providence doth by unavoidable necessity deprive any Church of its Episcopacy, it thereby, for the present at least, and whilst the necessity continues, releases it from the obligation of the Institution of Episcopacy, and allows it to administer its Government and Discipline by a Parity of Presbyters. And therefore so long as it doth not renounce the Episcopacy, but still continues in Community with other Churches that enjoy it, it ought to be look'd upon and communicated with, as a true Member (though a maimed one) of the Church Catholick: For the Catholick Church never denied her Communion to any Christian, or Community of Christians, upon any unavoidable deviation from positive Institution. It was, without doubt, as great a deviation from positive Institution for Laymen to Baptize, as for a Parity of Presbyters to Govern or Ordain, &c. and yet in Cases of necessity the Catholick Church always allowed the Baptism of Lay-men, as deeming Baptism in itself more necessary than the administration of Baptism by Persons in Holy Orders: And therefore where such Persons could not be had, she thought meet rather to admit, that Lay-men should administer it, than to suffer such as were qualified for it to die unbaptized. And why may we not reasonably suppose, that the Catholick Church will admit Presbyters to Govern and Ordain, where there are no Bishops to be had; since it hath admitted Lay-men to Baptize, where there are neither Bishops nor Presbyters to be had? Since the latter is as great a deflexion from positive Institution as the former: And if the Catholick Church may be reasonably presumed to allow it in such necessary Cases, we must acknowledge either that she hath not Authority enough to provide against her own necessities, which supposes her to be very defective; or that her allowance is sufficient to authorize such Persons to Rule or Ordain, as well as to Baptize in case of necessity, as are not authorized by positive Institution.

But, though a Community of Christians may be a true Part of the Catholick Church, and in Communion with it, though it hath no Episcopacy; yet it is a plain Case, that if it rejects the Episcopacy, and separates from the Communion of it, it thereby wholly divides itself from the Communion of the Catholick Church. For whether Episcopacy be of Divine Institution or no, this is matter of Fact granted on all Hands, that for Twelve Hundred Years at least all those Churches into which the Catholick Church hath been distributed, have been subject to the Episcopal Government and Discipline; and therefore they who now separate themselves from the Episcopal Communion, as such, must in so doing separate themselves from the Communion of all Churches for Twelve Hundred Years together; and then either all those Churches must be out of the Communion of the Catholick Church, and consequently during all that Time there must be no such Thing as a visible Catholick Church upon Earth; or else those Communities of Christians which separate from all those Churches, must be Schisms and Separations from the Catholick Church.

S E C T. X.

Concerning the Ministers of the Kingdom of Christ.

HAVING in the foregoing Section treated at large concerning the Nature and Constitution of Christ's Kingdom; I shall in the next Place shew who the Ministers are, by whom he Rules and Governs it. And these are all included under a fourfold Rank and Order.

First, The first and supreme Minister by which Christ rules his Kingdom is the Holy Ghost.

Secondly, The Second and next to him are the Angels of God.

Thirdly, The Third are Princes and Civil Governours.

Fourthly, The last are the Bishops and Pastors of the Church.

I. The Supreme Minister by which Christ rules his Kingdom is the Holy Ghost, or Third Person in the Holy Trinity, of whose Person and Ministry under our Saviour in his Kingdom, I have treated at large from Page 357, to 378.

II. Therefore the next Order of Ministers by which Christ rules his Kingdom, are the Angels of God, that is, the whole World of Angels, whether they be good or bad, Angels of Light, or Angels of Darkness. In the Prosecution of which Argument, I shall endeavour First to prove the Thing, viz.

That the Angels, both good and bad, are the Ministers of Christ in the Government of his Kingdom.

Secondly, To shew wherein their Ministry doth consist. First, That the Angels, both good and bad, are Christ's Ministers in his Kingdom: For as for the good Angels, they are subjected to Christ by the Order and Appointment of God himself; who is the Father of Spirits, and to whom they are inviolably obedient: And for the bad, they are subjected to him by just Conquest, contrary to their own Wills and Inclinations. Of each of which I shall endeavour to give some brief account.

First, The good Angels are subjected to Christ by the Order and Appointment of God to whom they are always inviolably obedient. It seems at least, very probable, that before our Saviour was exalted upon his Triumphant Ascension into Heaven to the Universal Empire of the World under God the Father, the Angelical Powers were not all of them subjected to his Mediatorial Royalty, but that some of them had their distinct Regencies and Presidentships, immediately under God the most High Father, over such and such Nations and Countries, as he in his Grace thought meet to allot them; for so it is evident the Septuagint thought, when in Deut. xxxii. 8. instead of he, (i. e. God) set the bounds of the Nations according to the Number of the Children of Israel, they render it, He set the bounds of the Nations according to the Number of the Angels of God; for as the ancient Jews distributed the Gentile World into Seventy-two Nations, so they also reckoned Seventy-two Angels that presided over them; and indeed, considering what follows, ver. 9. For the Lord's Portion is his People, Jacob is the lot of his Inheritance, it seems very probable that this Translation of the Septuagint was the true Sense of the Original, viz. That, whereas God distributed the Gentile World into so many Nations as there were President-Angels to be their Guardians and Governours, he reserved Israel to himself, as his own Lot and Portion, over which he intended to preside immediately in his own Person; and therefore, as a learned Writer of our own hath observed, it is not at all improbable, but that instead of בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל i. e. the Sons of Israel, as it is now in our Hebrew Copies, the ancient reading whence the Septuagint translated might be בְּנֵי אֱלֹהִים i. e. the Sons of God, and that El might either be mistaken by the Transcribers for a final abbreviation of Israel, or changed into Il, which is the contraction of Israel, and if in the ancient ancient Hebrew it was the Sons of God, it is no wonder that the Septuagint render'd it the Angels of God; the Sons of God being in Scripture a very common Appellation of Angels.

But whether this be so or not, it is evident, that when God threatned to withdraw his Personal Presence from Israel, upon their worshipping the Golden Calf, and to put them under the Conduct of an Angel, Exod. xxxiii. 2, 3. the meaning of it was, that he would no longer preside over them in his own Person, but subject them to the Government of a President Angel, and therefore ver. 20. he bids them beware of this Angel, and obey his voice, and not provoke him; for, saith he, he will not pardon your Iniquities: Which plainly shews, that this Angel was to have had a ruling power over them to pardon or punish them at his own Pleasure; so that that which God here threatned was that he would put them in the same condition with other Gentile Nations, who were subjected to the Government of particular Guardian Angels; and so change their Theocracy into Angelocracy. And so, as it is evident, Moses understood him, for ver. 15, 16. he thus prays, If thy Presence go not with me, carry us not up hence, for wherein shall it be known here, that I and thy People have found Grace in thy sight, is it not that Thou goest with us, so shall we be separated, I and thy People from all the People that are on the Face of the Earth: Where it is very plain, that that which distinguished Israel from all other Nations was this, that God himself in his own Person immediately presided over them; and that if this Distinction were taken away by God's withdrawing from them, and subjecting them to the Presidence of an Angel, they would be left in the same Condition with other Gentile Nations, who must therefore be supposed to be under the immediate Conduct of President Angels. And this is most evident of the Kingdom of Persia, and the Kingdom of Greece in particular, Dan. x. 13, 20. where there is mention made of Two Angels under the Character of the Prince of Persia, and the Prince of Greece, and also of a Third, viz. Michael who is styled one of the chief Princes, and Michael your Prince, verse 21. and elsewhere the great Prince which standeth for the Children of thy People, Dan. xii. 1. and upon what other account can we suppose them to be styled the Princes of those Countries, but because they presided over them as their Guardians and Governours? It is true, as for the last of them, viz. Michael; he is supposed by very learned Expositors, to be no other than God the Son, who, as I have proved at large, was always the Prince and Guardian of Israel; but if he were not God the Son, but merely a created Angel, it is certain he was not the President or Guardian of Israel: Since, as was shewn before, they had no other Guardian but God himself: But, in all probability, he was the Prince of those Angels that ministred to God the Son in his Guardianship and Government of Israel; and consequently that Angel of his to whom he intended to subject them, when he threatned to withdraw his Personal Conduct from them; upon which account he might be called their Prince, because under Christ he had a principal share in the Protection and Government of them. Now these Guardian Angels seem to have been Archangels, or the Princes of the distinct Orders of Angels; for so Michael is not only styled an Archangel, Jude ix. but he is also said to have an Army of Angels under his Command and Conduct, and with them to have fought with the Dragon or Satan (who was also an Archangel) and his Angels, Rev. xii. 7. Now though Michael (supposing him to be a created Spirit) was not a Guardian Angel, yet the Prophecy of Daniel, by styling him one of the chief Princes, plainly assures us that he was an Angel of the same rank and degree with the Princes or Guardian Angels of Persia and Greece; from whence it follows, that those Guardian Angels were Archangels, as well as he, and consequently that they also had their Angels or appropriate Armies of Angels, under their Conduct and Command, in which Armies of theirs (whose Ministry, without doubt, they always used in the Administration of their respective Guardianships) there is no Question but there was an exact Order and Regiment, which cannot well be supposed, without supposing supposing them particular Officers subordinated to each other, under their respective Princes or Arch-angels; and this seems to be implied in that Distinction which the Apostle makes between these Heavenly Spirits, Coloss. i. 16. Whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers; where by Thrones he seems to mean the respective Princes or Arch-angels of the several Orders; by Dominions or Lordships, the Reguli or chief Dignitaries under the Arch-angels; by Principalities, their Governours of such Provinces or Cities as were within their Guardianships; by Powers, their inferiour Magistrates or Officers.

These Arch-angels therefore, who were the Tutelar or Guardian Angels of Countries, together with their respective Coborts or Armies of Angels, seem not to have been subjected to the Mediatorial Dominion of our Saviour, till after his Ascension into Heaven; at which Time, it seems, God totally dissolved those Angelocracies, or Angelical Governments of Countries and Nations, and subjected both them and the Arch-angels (together with their Armies of Angels) that governed them, to the Mediatorial Scepter of our Lord and Saviour; upon which he, who before was King only of the Jews, vide Page 427, 428. became universal Lord and Emperour of the World; for so, Heb. ii. 5, we are told, That to the Angels God hath not put in subjection the World to come, or future Age, as it is in the Greek: Where by the future Age it is evident he means the Time of the Gospel; for this is the very Phrase used by the Septuagint, to express the State of Christianity, Isaiab ix. 6. where Christ is called Πατήρ μέλλοντος αἰῶνος, The Father of this future Age. This Passage therefore of God's not subjecting the future Age to the Angels, plainly implies that he had subjected the past Age to them, by constituting them the Guardians of Nations; but that now in this Age of the Gospel he hath wholly dissolved that Oeconomy, by subjecting both the Guardians and the Nations they guarded, to the Dominion of our Lord and Saviour: So that now the whole World of Angels is in the same subjection to Jesus Christ, as it seems Michael and his Angels were before Christ's Exaltation; that is, they are now no longer subject as Deputy Governours of Provinces and Nations, who as such were empowered to do good or hurt to those who were under their Government, according to their own discretion; but as the immediate Attendants of his Person to whom nothing is left arbitrary, but all they do is determined by the sovereign Will of him who employs them; for thus the Scripture declares, that upon his Ascension into Heaven he was vested with a new Dominion over the Angelical World; so we are told, 1 Pet. iii. 22. that it was upon his going into Heaven, and sitting down at the right hand of God, that Angels, and Authorities, and Powers were made subject unto him; and in Eph. xx. 21. that God raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in Heavenly Places, far above all Principality, and Power, and Might, and Dominion, i. e. above all Angels of what rank or quality soever, and every name that is named, not only in this World, but also in that which is to come; and accordingly, Col. ii. 10. he is said to be Head of all Principality and Power, i. e. of all the Heavenly Hierarchy, as well as Earthly Dominions: Thus also the Apostle tells us, that upon his Ascension into Heaven, God hath given him a Name above every Name, that at the Name of Jesus every knee should bow, i. e. that every Being should acknowledge subjection, either of Things in Heaven, or of Things on Earth, or Things under the Earth; i. e. whether of Angels, or Men or Devils. And, as all these Angelical Powers are now subjected to Christ, so do they all of them minister under him in his Kingdom; for so Heb. i. 14. they are said to be all of them ministering Spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be Heirs of Salvation; and in so doing they must necessarily minister under him who is the Captain of our Salvation; and accordingly in Rev. v. 6. those Seven Angels which in Zech. iv. 10. are said to be the Seven Eyes of the Lord which run to and fro the whole Earth; and therefore styled the Watchers, Dan. iv. 13. as being the chief Instruments of the Divine Providence, are called the Seven Eyes of the Lamb, by whose Ministry and Agency he inspects and governs his Kingdom, which plainly implies, that they now minister to the Exalted Mediator; in the same Capacity that they heretofore ministred to God Almighty himself.

2. And then, Secondly, as the good Angels are subject to Christ by the ordination and appointment of God, so the bad are subjected to him by just and lawful Conquest; for so the Scripture assures us, that our blessed Saviour subdued them to his Mediatorial Empire, by pure dint of just force and violence: For so we find in his Life-time he frequently contested with these evil Spirits, and, in despite of all their power and malice, continually vanquished and repelled them. Thus in his Temptation in the Wilderness with only that powerful Command, Get thee hence, Satan, he put the Devil to flight, Matth. iv. 10, 11. So also upon his approach towards the two possessed Gergesens, the Devils that possessed them made a hideous outcry, What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God, art thou come hither to torment us before the Time? and were forced to depart immediately upon his Command, Matth. viii. 29. — nor did he only vanquish them himself in all the Personal conflicts he had with them, but he also gave his Disciples Authority over all Devils, Luke ix. 1. inasmuch that, Luke x. 17. his Disciples acquaint him, Lord, even the Devils are subject unto us through thy Name. But these were only so many successful Skirmishes with those Powers of Darkness, in which they fought against him, sometimes in single Combat, and sometimes in smaller Parties: But the main Battel, in which they engaged him with all their power and might, and by winning of which he completed his Conquest, and finally subdued them to his Empire, seems to have been that which he fought in his last Agony; wherein, after they had reduced him to the utmost distress, he struck them with the spiritual Thunderbolts of Horror and Confusion, and in a Panick Dread forced them to turn their Backs and flee from him. For first, it is evident that before he enter'd the Garden, where his Agony seized him, he expected some terrible assault from these Infernal Powers: So he tells his Disciples just before he went thither, Hereafter I will not talk much with you, for the Prince of this World cometh and hath nothing in me, i. e. give me leave now to discourse freely with you, because within a very little while I shall be so engaged, that I shall not be at leisure to discharge my Mind to you; for the Prince of Devils is just now mustering up all his Legions against me, and is coming to make his last effort upon me; but this is my Comfort, he will find nothing in me, no sinful Inclination to take part with him, no guilty Reflection to expose me to his Tyranny, John xiv. 30. and accordingly, Luke xxii. 53, when the Jews had apprehended him, he expostulates the Case with them, why they did not lay Hands on him before, when he was daily with them in the Temple; and then Answers himself, But now is your Hour and the Power of Darkness: As much as if he should have said, I need not wonder you did not seize me sooner; for this, alas! is the appointed Time wherein my Father had decreed to let loose the Devils and you upon me. Which plainly shews that in that dismal Hour he was assaulted by the Devils as well as by the Jews; for in all probability those crafty and sagacious Spirits had smelt out the merciful design of his approaching Death, viz. that it was to be a ransom for the Sins of the World; and therefore though they were desirous enough of his Death; as is apparent by their animating Judas and the Jews against him; yet dreading the end and intention of it, they resolve to imploy all their Art and Power to tempt and deter him from undergoing it, and either to prevail with him to avoid it by a shameful Recantation, or at least not to consent to it; that so being forced and involuntary, it might be void and ineffectual. In which black Design of theirs God himself thought meet so far to favour them as to give them his free permission to try him to the utmost; that so having experienced in himself the utmost force of Temptation that Humane Nature is liable to, he might thereby be touched with a more tender sympathy with it, or as the Author to the Hebrews expresses it, That having suffered himself being tempted, he might be able to succour them that are tempted, chap. ii. 17, 18. But then Secondly, if we consider the woful Circumstances of his Agony, it is evident, that it was the effect of some far more powerful Cause than merely a natural Fear of his ensuing Death and bodily Torment; for no sooner was he entred on that tragick Stage, but he began to be sorrowful, said St. Matthew, chap. xxvi. 37. or to be sore amazed, as St. Mark, chap. xiv. 33. or to be very heavy, as both; which Words, according to their native Signification, declare him to have been all on a sudden oppressed with some mighty Damp, which arising from some fearful Spectacle or Imagination, overwhelmed his Soul with an unknown and inexpressible Anguish, an Anguish that sunk and depressed him into as deep a Dejection as it was possible for an innocent Mind to endure; causing him to groan out that sad Complaint, My Soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto Death, μεγαλυνέειν ἡ ψυχὴ μου. i. e. My Soul is encompassed with Grief, and like a desolate Island surrounded on every Side with an Ocean of Sorrows, and that even unto Death; as if it had been struggling under some mortal Pang, and the Pains of Hell had got hold upon it. And so intolerable was his Passion, that though he liberally vented it both at his Eyes and Lips in Tears, and Sighs and sorrowful Complaints; yet that was not a sufficient Discharge for it, but through all the innumerable Pores of his Body it poured out itself as it were in great Drops of Blood, Luke xxii. 44. All which considered, I can by no means think that that which occasioned this bitter Agony was merely the Prospect of what he was going to suffer from the Hands of Men, since not only some Martyrs, but some Malefactor's have suffered much more with less Dejection; and if you consult the History, you will find that he bore his Death far better than his Agony: From whence we have just Reason to believe that the latter was more grievous to him than the former, and that the Crucifixion of his Body on the Cross, was nothing near so painful to him as the Crucifixion of his Mind in the Garden, and since his Sufferings in his Agony are described with more tragical Circumstances than his Sufferings on the Cross, we have just Reason to conclude they were inflicted on him by more spiteful and powerful Executioners, and consequently that he endured the Tortures of Men only on the Cross, but of Devils in the Garden; where being left all alone naked and abandoned of the ordinary Supports of his Godhead, and having only an Angel to stand by and comfort him (i. e. to represent such Considerations to him of the Benefits and Advantages of his Death, as were most proper to fortify him against the Temptations which the Devils were then urging to deter him from it) he was in all probability surrounded with a mighty Host of Devils, who exercised all their Power and Malice to persecute his innocent Soul, to distract and fright it with horrid Phantasms, to afflict it with dismal Suggestions, and vex and cruciate it with dire Imaginations and dreadful Spectacles. Thirdly, If we consider that strange unaccountable Drowsiness which seized his Disciples, whilst he was in his Agony, it seems to have been the Effect of a diabolical Power; for before he entred into the Garden, he had expressly told them that the Hour was come, wherein he was to be taken from them by an untimely Death: So that one would have thought, the dear Love which they bore him, together with the infinite Concern they had in him, might have been sufficient to have kept them awake for a few Hours; yet notwithstanding he desired them to watch with him (being loath it seems to be left alone, in a dark Night, among a Company of horrid and frightful Spectres) upon his return to them he found them fast asleep, and though he gently upbraided them with their Unkindness, What! could ye not watch with me one Hour? Yet he no sooner left them but they fell asleep again; for as the Text tells us, their Eyes were heavy, heavy indeed, that could not hold up for a few Hours upon such an awakening Occasion. It is true, indeed, St. Luke attributes this prodigious Drowsiness of theirs to their Sorrow, and so it is usual in Scripture to put the apparent Cause for the real, when the real Cause is secret and invisible. But, how can we imagine that mere Sorrow should necessitate three Men to fall asleep together under the most awakening Circumstances, all Things considered, that ever happened to Mortals? Why did it not as well force them to fall asleep again afterwards, when their Lord was apprehended, condemned and crucified? At all which Times they were doubtless rather more sorrowful than they were in the Garden: And therefore, it seems very probable, that there was a much more powerful Cause than Sorrow in the Case, viz. a preternatural Stupefaction of their Senses, by some of those malignant Spirits that were then conflicting with our Saviour; who, perhaps, to deprive him of the Solace of his Disciples Company, did by their diabolical Art, produce that extraordinary Stupor that oppressed them; that so having him all alone, they might have the greater Advantage to tempt and terrify him. Fourthly and lastly, If we consider the Warning our Saviour gave his Disciples, when they entered the Garden with him, of the extraordinary Danger they were in of falling into Temptation, it seems very probable that he expected and found there an extraordinary Concourse of Tempters or evil Spirits: For as soon as they were entered with him into the Garden, St. Luke tells us, that he bid them pray that ye enter not into Temptation, Luke xxii. 40. and when, notwithstanding this Admonition, they fell asleep the first Time, he bids them again watch and pray that ye enter not into Temptation, Matth. xxvi. 41. which Words plainly imply our Saviour's Apprehension of some extraordinary Danger they were in of being tempted in the very Time and Place of his Agony; and what more probable Account can be given of this Apprehension of his than this, that he found vast Numbers of evil Spirits there, by whom he himself at that very Time was furiously tempted and assaulted, and that therefore having experienced their Power and Malice in himself, he thought meet to admonish his Disciples (who were much less able to resist them than he) to stand upon their Guard, lest they should tempt them as they had tempted him.

For these Reasons it seems highly probable that this last Agony of our Saviour was nothing else but a mighty Struggle and Conflict with the Powers of Darkness; who having, by God's Permission, muster'd up all their Strength against him, intending once more to try their Fortune against him, and if possible to tempt or deter him from prosecuting his Design of redeeming the World, were in the end gloriously repulsed by his persevering Resistance, and forced to flee before him: And of this his glorious Victory over them he made an open Shew upon the Cross, where, in despite of all those Terrors and Temptations they had exercised him with, if possible to divert him from laying down his Life for the World, he freely and voluntarily poured out his Blood as a Sacrifice for the Sins of Mankind. And hence the Apostle tells us, Col. ii. 15. that on his Cross, he spoiled Principalities and Powers, viz. in that victorious Act of laying down his Life to ransom us from their Power, in despite of their most exquisite Temptations to the contrary, and made an open Shew of them triumphing over them. And by this glorious Victory he finished his Conquest of those infernal Powers, so that from thenceforth they never durst assault him more; but like vanquished Slaves, were forced to yield their unwilling Necks to the Yoke of his Empire, and (though with infinite reluctance) to obey his Will, and execute his Orders; and hence we are told, that by his Death our Saviour hath destroyed him that hath the Power of Death, that is, the Devil, Heb. ii. 14. so that now at his powerful Name every Knee must bow, or every Being yield Obeisance, not only of things in Heaven, and of things on Earth, i. e. of Angels and Men, but of things under the Earth too, i. e. of Devils, who notwithstanding they are incensed with an implacable Animosity against him, and would gladly pull him down from his Throne, if they had but Power answerable to their Malice; yet having long since experienced the Might of his victorious Arms, even then when they had him at the greatest Advantage, and being thereby driven into everlasting Despair of prevailing against him, they have from thenceforth been forced by the mere Dread and Terror of his Power, to submit themselves to him, and to become his Servants and Ministers in his heavenly Kingdom: So that now whatsoever they do, it is by his Permission or Order, who holds their mischievous Power in Chains, and lets it loose, or restrains it, as he pleases.

And thus having proved at large that both the good and bad Angels are Christ's Subjects and Ministers; I proceed, in the second Place, to shew wherein their Ministry to Christ, in his Kingdom, consists.

And, in the first Place, I shall shew wherein the Ministry of good Angels consists.

And Secondly, wherein consists the Ministry of bad Angels. And because the Philosophy of the Nature and Operations of Angels is far above the ken of our short-sighted Understanding, I shall not presume to enquire any farther into the Ministry of either good or bad Angels than the Scripture gives me light; in which we find these seven following Instances of the Ministry of good Angels under Christ.

First, They declare, upon occasion, his Mind and Will to his Church.

Secondly, They guard and defend his Subjects against outward Dangers.

Thirdly, They support and comfort them upon great Undertakings, and under pressing Calamities.

Fourthly, They protect them against the rage and fury of evil Spirits.

Fifthly, They further and assist them in all their religious Offices.

Sixthly, They conduct their separated Spirits into the Mansions of Glory.

Seventhly, They are to attend and assist Christ in the great Solemnity of the Day of Judgment.

I. One Instance of the Ministry of Angels in the Kingdom of Christ, is their declaring upon occasion his Mind and Will to his Church and People; for thus most of those Prophetick Messages which God from Time to Time sent to the World were conveyed to the Prophets by the Ministry of Angels: So Daniel, for Instance, had all his Visions from an Angel of God, vide Dan. viii. 16. and ch. ix. 22, 23. as also chap. x. 11. so also the Prophet Zechariah, vide Chap. i. 9, 14, 19. and chap. ii. 3, 4. and sundry other Instances there are of it in the New Testament, vide Matt. i. 20, 21. as also chap. ii. 13, 20, 22. and Luke i. 13, 30, 31. and many other Places: And it was an ancient and Catholick Doctrine among the Jews, that all Prophecy was communicated by the Mediation of Angels; whence the Pharisees, describing St. Paul as a Prophet, thus pronounce concerning him, We find no evil in this Man; but if a Spirit or Angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God, Acts xxiii. 9. And accordingly we find our Saviour sending forth his holy Angels on prophetick Messages to his Church: For so St. John received his Revelations from Christ by the Hand of an Angel, Rev. i. 1. and xxii. 16. And an Angel is sent from Christ to Philip to bid him go to the Ethiopian Eunuch to expound to him the Prophecy of Isaiah, Acts viii. 26. And Cornelius received a Message from Christ by an Angel, requiring him to send to Sopha for St. Peter to instruct him in the Christian Religion, in Acts x. 3, 4, 5. But since that Christ hath revealed his whole Will to his Church, and transmitted it down by a standing Scripture, this Ministration of the holy Angels is in a great Measure ceased, and to this written Word of his we are intirely referred, as to the perpetual Rule of our Faith and Manners; inasmuch that if thenceforth even an Angel from Heaven should preach any other Gospel to us than what we have there received, he is pronounced accursed, Gal. i. 8. Not but that sometimes, and upon great Emergencies, they may be still sent from Heaven with new Messages to us, to discover some useful Secret, or to inspire our Minds with the Notice of some future Contingencies, that are of great Moment to us; though this very rarely, it being no Part of their ordinary Ministry. But, since the Revelation of the Gospel was completed, to be sure they never reveal any new Doctrine to us; they may be assisting Geniuses to our Understandings, to excite in them a true Apprehension of what is already revealed, by impressing our Imaginations with clear and distinct Ideas and Representations of Things that are revealed more obscurely: But to suppose that they still reveal new doctrinal Truths to us, is not only to deny the Perfection of written Revelation, but to open a wide Door to all manner of Enthusiasm.

II. Another Instance of the Ministry of Angels in the Kingdom of Christ is their guarding and defending his Subjects against outward Dangers; for thus the Angels are said to encamp round about those that fear God, to deliver them, P^{sal.} xxxiv. 7. And, though I see not sufficient Reason to be fully persuaded that every faithful Subject of the Kingdom of Christ hath an appropriate Guardian Angel appointed to him, yet from that Caution of our Saviour, Matth. xviii. 10 it is evident, that he employs his Angels to attend as an invisible Life-guard upon the Persons of all good Christians; for, saith he, Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones, for I say unto you that in Heaven their Angels do always behold the Face of my Father which is in Heaven, i. e. Those blessed Spirits which are appointed by God to be their Guardians upon Earth, have yet their continual returns and recourse to God's glorious Presence in Heaven; and having always access to him, to offer up Requests or Complaints in their behalf, it must needs be a very dangerous Thing for any to presume to despise or offend them; lest he thereby provoke those mighty Spirits to sue out and execute some Commission of Vengeance upon him. From whence it is evident, that the blessed Angels are greatly concerned in the Vindication and Protection of the Faithful, and that that Promise, Psal. xci. 10, 11, 12. is still in Force, viz. There shall no evil befall thee, for he shall give his Angels charge over thee to keep thee in all thy Ways; they shall bear thee up in their Hands, lest thou dash thy Foot against a Stone: And this they do sometimes by removing such evil Accidents from us, as in the Course of necessary Causes must have befallen us: For there is no doubt but these powerful Spirits have a mighty Influence upon necessary Causes (at least upon a great many of them) and can retard, or precipitate, or vary or divert their Motions, as they see occasion, and thereby prevent a great many Accidents which must otherwise have befallen, had they permitted them to proceed in their natural Courses. Other Times again they divert the mischievous Intentions of our Enemies by injecting sudden Fears into them, and brandishing horrid Phantasms before their Imaginations (as the Angel did the flaming Sword before Balaam) when they are just upon executing their Malice. Sometimes again they warn us of Dangers approaching, either by some external Sign or unaccountable Impression on our Fancies, by which we are vehemently solicited, without any visible Cause or Reason, either to proceed very cautiously in the Ways where our Danger lies, or to stop and forbear a while, or steer some other Course. Of all which there are innumerable Instances to be found in History.

III. Another Instance of the Ministry of Angels in the Kingdom of Christ, is their supporting and comforting his faithful Subjects upon difficult Undertakings, and under great and pressing Calamities: For thus not only our Saviour himself was comforted in his last Agony by an Angel from Heaven, Luke xxii. 43. but St. Paul also tells us, that being in imminent Danger of being shipwreck'd in a Storm in his Voyage to Rome, there stood by him in the Night an Angel of God, whose he was, and whom he served, saying, fear not, Paul, thou must be brought before Cæsar, and lo God hath given thee all them that sail with thee, Acts xxvii. 23, 24. So also when the Apostles by an Order from the High Priest were cast into the common Prison, the Text tells us, That an Angel of the Lord by Night opened the Prison-doors, and brought them forth, and said, go stand and speak in the Temple to the People all the Words of this Life, Acts v. 19, 20. So also in the ancient Martyrologies of the Church, we meet with sundry Relations of the Appearances of Angels to the suffering Martyrs, and of the wonderful Comforts they administered to them to support their Faith and Patience under their Agonies and Torments. And although since the Cessation of Miracles they do not ordinarily perform this Ministry to us in visible Appearances, yet there is no doubt, but as they are Spirits, they have spiritual and invisible Ways of conversing with our Spirits, and of administering Comforts to us in our Needs and Extremities; for though they can have no immediate Access to our Mind, which is a dark mysterious Chamber, into which no other Eye can penetrate, but his who is the searcher of all Hearts, yet that they can vehemently impress our Fancies with joyous Representations, and thereby exhilarate our drooping Spirits to that degree, as to transport us into Raptures of bodily Passion, is not to be doubted, there being so many sensible Experiments of it in the ancient Prophets, whose Imaginations were sometimes so vehemently impressed with frightful Ideas by the Angels which conversed with them, as that they immediately fell into an Agony, and were seized with unaccountable Horrors and Tremblings; and not only the Prophets themselves that saw the Angel, were thus affected, but sometimes their Companions too that saw him not; of which you have an Instance in Dan. x. 7. where Daniel tells us, that he alone saw the vision of the Angel, and that the Men that were with him saw not the Vision, but a great quaking fell upon them, so that they fled to hide themselves; which is a plain Evidence of the great Power which the Angels have over our bodily Passions, even when they are invisible to us; so as to strike what Note soever they please upon them, whether it be Fear, or Sorrow, or Joy; and it being in their Power to excite our Passions to what degree they please, there is no doubt but that being ministring Spirits they can and do minister Joy and Comfort to us, whenever our Case and Circumstances require it.

who

IV. Another Instance of the Ministry of Angels in the Kingdom of Christ, is their protecting his Subjects against the Rage and Fury of evil Spirits; for considering with what a fierce and indefatigable Malice those malignant Spirits, which in vast Numbers rove above in the Air, are animated against Mankind, and especially against the Subjects of Christ, their most dreaded and implacable Enemy; and considering also the mighty Power they have, as they are Angels, to do mischief, it is not to be imagined but that, were they not opposed and restrained by a mightier Power than their own, they would never be able to forbear exercising their direful Rage and Cruelty upon us, till they had converted this Earth into Hell, and made this School of our Probation the Place of our Torments; and as for the Kingdom of Christ, whose Subjects have so solemnly renounced their Yoke and Dominion, to be sure they would never cease infesting it with the fiery Darts of their Malice, till they had utterly ruined and destroyed them; and therefore to prevent their mischievous Attempts, God in Mercy hath thought meet to commit us to the Guardianship of his holy Angels, and to send them forth under the Conduct of Jesus our Mediator, to fight against these hellish Powers in the Defence of his Church and People: For so God promised Jerusalem, Zech. ii. 5. that he would be as a Wall of Fire round about her, i. e. as the most learned Expositors suppose, by surrounding her with a Guard of Angels, whom, in the Defence of his People against evil Angels, he maketh a flaming Fire, as the Psalmist expresseth it, Psalm civ. 4. and in Rev. xii. 7. we read of a War in Heaven, (or the Airy Region, of which the Devil is called the Prince) Michael and his Angels fought against the Dragon, and the Dragon fought and his Angels; which War Michael undertook, as the foregoing Verses tells us, in the Defence of the Woman that was clothed with the Sun, which all agree was the Christian Church; so also in ver. 9. of St. Jude's Epistle, we read that Michael the Archangel contended and disputed with the Devil about the Body of Moses; or Jewish Church, so called for the same Reason that the Christian Church is called the Body of Christ. And it is very probably supposed, that that Hedge which the Devil complained God had set about Job, and about his House, by which he was hindered from breaking in upon him, was no other than a Guard of Angels, by which he was driven back, as oft as he attempted to execute his Rage and Malice upon him, Chap. i. 10. Now by what Means or Instruments the good Angels war against and repel the evil ones, is I conceive, an Enquiry beyond our Cognisance, Revelation (from whence we receive all our Notions of the State and Oeconomy of the invisible World) being wholly silent in the Case; only thus much we may say, without any way presuming beyond our Capacity, that Spiritual Agents can as easily strike upon Spirits, as Bodily Agents do upon Bodies; and though we, who are Spectators

Spectators only of corporeal Motion, can give no account of the Manner, how one Spirit acts upon another, yet there is no reason at all to doubt, but that they have some way of impressing one another, and communicating to each other a mutual sense and feeling of each other's Pleasures and Displeasures; and if so, then it is easie to suppose, that the more powerful any Spirit is, the stronger and more exquisite Impressions of its Displeasure it can make upon other Spirits, and consequently that the good Angels, who by preserving their Innocence, and improving their Perfections, have augmented and redoubled their natural Strength and Vigour, are much more powerful than the bad ones, who have rather impaired it, and so are much more able to withstand and repel the violent Impressions of the bad Angels, than the bad Angels can theirs; so that though the bad Angels may, and oftentimes do resist and oppose the good, yet they can never conquer them; but in the Conclusion are still forced to flee before them; as being unable to withstand their more powerful Impressions. Since therefore we wrestle not with Flesh and Blood, i. e. not only with Flesh and Blood, but against Principalities, against Powers, against the Rulers of the Darkeness of this World, against spiritual Wickednesses in high Places, i. e. against the several Ranks of Devils that are in the Air, under the Command and Conduct of Beelzebub their Prince, Ephes. vi. 12. And since these Apostate Spirits are by much too strong and powerful for us; so that we are left to grapple with them alone, by our own single Strength, they would infallibly vanquish and lead us captive to eternal Ruine, God hath thought meet to subject his holy Angels to the Command of our compassionate Mediator; that so whenever we are too hardly beset by these evil Spirits, he might send them forth to guard and protect us against them, and either to assist us in our Conflicts with them, or to chase them away from us, when we are no longer able to withstand them; and accordingly we have a sure Word of Promise, that if we resist the Devil, he shall fly away from us, James iv. 7. not that our weak Resistance is in itself sufficient to put those daring and mighty Spirits to flight; but the meaning without doubt is, that if when they assault us with any Temptation to Sin, we do but oppose them with a sincere Resolution, God will not permit us to be vanquished by them; but whenever they press too hard upon us, will be sure to send down some good Angel to us, to repel and drive them away from us; for so he hath promised, that he will not suffer us to be tempted above what we are able, but will with the Temptation also make a way to escape, that we may be able to bear it, 1 Cor. x. 13. which plainly implies, that should God suffer him, the Devil can tempt us above what we are able; and this without doubt he is ordinarily binder'd from by the timely Interpositions of the holy Angels, who when our Strength begins to fail, are always ready to second us, and with their victorious Arms to encounter and put to flight those evil Spirits that do so importunately tempt us.

V. Another Instance of the Ministry of Angels in the Kingdom of Christ, is their furthering and assisting his Subjects in the Works and Offices of Religion; for since they are said to minister to them who shall be Heirs of Salvation, there is no doubt but that they minister to them in the Discharge of their religious Obligations, upon which their Salvation depends; and since, as our Saviour assures us, there is joy in the presence of the Angels over one Sinner that repents, Luke xv. 10. we cannot but suppose that so far as their own Ability, and the Laws of the invisible World will permit them, they do promote and further our Repentance; since in so doing they contribute to their own Joy; and in a word, since the Scripture assures us, that the Angels are present in our holy Assemblies (which that Passage of St. Paul seems necessarily to imply, 1 Cor. xi. 10. For this Cause ought the Woman to have Power over her Head, i. e. to be veiled in the sacred Assemblies, because of the Angels, or out of a decent Respect and Reverence to those blessed Spirits who are supposed to be present there) since, I say, they are present in our religious Assemblies, we cannot reasonably suppose them to be present merely as Idle Auditors and Spectators, who have nothing else to do but only to observe and gaze upon our holy Solemnities; and therefore must conclude that their great Business there is to assist us in the Performance of them, to remove our Indispositions, and recollect our Wandrings, to fix our Attention, excite our Affections, and inflame our Devotions: For besides that, as they are the Ministers of the Divine Providence, they have many Opportunities of presenting good Objects to us, and removing Temptations from us, of disciplining our Natures with Prosperities and Afflictions, and of so ordering and varying our outward Circumstances, as to render our Duty more facile and easy to us; besides which, I say, as they are Spirits they have a very near and familiar access to our Souls; not that they can make any immediate Impressions on our Understanding or Will, which are a Sphere of Light, to which no created Spirit can approach, it being under the immediate Oeconomy of the Father of Spirits; but yet being Spirits there is no doubt but they may, and oftentimes do insinuate themselves into our Fancies, and mingle with the Spirits and Humours of our Bodies, and by that means never want opportunity both to suggest good Thoughts to us, and raise holy Affections in us. For that they can work upon our Fancies, is apparent, else there could be neither angelical nor diabolical Dreams, and if they can so act upon our Fancies, as to excite new Images and Representations in them; they may by this Means communicate new Thoughts to our Understanding, which naturally prints off from the Fancy those Ideas and Images which it there finds set and composed. And as they can work upon our Fancies, so there is no doubt but they can influence our Spirits and Humours; else they have not the Power so much as to cure or infect a Disease; and by thus working upon our Spirits they can moderate as they please the Violence of our Passions, which are nothing but the Flowings and Reflowings of our Spirits to and fro from our Hearts; and by influencing our Humours they can compose us, when they please, into such a sedate and serious Temper, as is most apt to receive religious Impressions, and to be influenced by the heavenly Motions of the Holy Ghost. These Things, I doubt not, the blessed Angels can and frequently do, though we perceive it not, and though by the Laws of the World of Spirits they may probably be restrained from doing their utmost for us, that so we may still act with an uncontrouled freedom, and be left under a necessity of a constant and diligent Endeavour; yet this we may be sure of, that as the evil Angels are always busy to pervert and seducer us from our Duty, so the good are no less active to reduce us to, and assist us in it.

VI. Another Instance of the Ministry of Angels in the Kingdom of Christ is, their conducting the separated Spirits of his faithful Subjects to the Mansions of Glory. It was an ancient Tradition among the Jews, that the Souls of the Faithful were conducted by Angels into Paradise, of which the Chaldee Paraphrase makes mention on Cant. iv. 12. and this Tradition of theirs is confirmed by our Saviour, Luke xvi. 22. where he tells us, that when Lazarus died, he was carried by Angels into Abraham's Bosom, i. e. into that Place of Refreshment where the Soul of Abraham, who was the Father of the Faithful, dwells; and in all probability that fiery Chariot and Horses wherein Elias was mounted up to Heaven, 2 Kings ii. 11. was nothing but a Convoy of Angels; and accordingly Textullian, de Anima, cap. 52. styles the Angels Evocatores Animarum, i. e. the Messengers of God, that call forth the lingring Souls out of their Bodies, and shew them the Paraturam diversorii, the Preparation of those blessed Mansions where they are to abide till the Resurrection. And this Office the good Angels do perform to the Souls of the Faithful, not merely to congratulate their safe Arrival into the World of Blessedness, though there is no doubt but that they, who do so heartily rejoyce in the Conversion of Sinners, are ready enough to congratulate their Glorification; but that which seems to be the great reason of this Ministration of theirs, is to guard holy Souls, when they leave their Bodies, through those lower Regions of the Air, which are the Seat and Principality of the apostate Angels, who may therefore be very reasonably supposed supposed to be continually lying in wait there, like Birds of Prey, to seize upon the Souls of Men, as soon as they are escaped out of the Cage of their Bodies into the open Air, and either to scare and terrify them in their Passage to Heaven, or to lead them away captive into their dark Prisons of endless Horreur and Despair; and therefore to prevent their affrighting good Souls (which is all the hurt they can do them) as they pass along through their Territories, they are no sooner parted from their Bodies, but they are taken into the Custody of some good Angel or Angels, who guard them safe through the Enemies Quarters, and beat off those evil Spirits from them that would fain be infesting and assaulting them; and it is not at all improbable, but that by this very thing those evil Spirits do distinguish what Souls do belong to them from what do not, viz. their being destitute of, or attended with this holy Guard of Angels. When they behold a separated Spirit under this heavenly Convoy, they fly away from it with infinite Rage and Envy to see it irrecoverably rescued out of their Power to make it miserable; but when they perceive one destitute and abandoned of this angelick Guard, they immediately seize it as their own, and so commit it to their Chains of Darkness. And as the good Angels do guard good Souls as they pass through the Air, against the Power and Malice of the Prince of the Power of the Air; so they also conduct and guide them to their Mansions of Blessedness. For when the departed Soul is wafted through the Air into those immense Tracts of Æther, wherein the Sun and all the heavenly Bodies swim, how would it be possible for it in such a vast and unknown Continent ever to find its way to the Seat of the Blessed, without the conduct of some experienced Guide? And who can be better experienced in that Celestial Road, than those winged Messengers of the Almighty King, who in the execution of his high Behests are always travelling to and fro between Heaven and Earth? And therefore our Saviour hath committed the separated Spirits of his faithful Subjects to these most skilful and faithful Guides, who in pursuance of his Commission are some or other of them still attending upon every good Man's decease, to receive his Soul into their Custody, as soon as ever it is expired, and to guard it against evil Spirits, as it passes through the Air, and thence to conduct it through all those spacious Fields of Æther, which extend themselves far and wide beyond all the visible Lights of Heaven, to those happy Abodes which the Divine Goodness hath prepared for glorified Spirits.

VII. And lastly, Another Instance of the Ministry of Angels to our Saviour in his Kingdom, is their attending and assisting him in the great Solemnity of the Day of Judgment; for thus in all his most solemn and conspicuous Works of Providence, our Saviour hath still been pleased to make use of the Ministry of his holy Angels; so when he came to ratify his Covenant with Jacob, the mysterious Preface of that great Solemnity was a Ladder reaching from Heaven to Earth, and the Angels ascending and descending upon it, which was doubtless intended for an Emblem of that Everlasting Covenant by which Man was to ascend to God, and God to descend to Man; so also when the Law was delivered by him upon the Mount, the Angels descended with him, and pitched their Tents about it in Circles of flaming Fire, to signify to the People those Flames of Vengeance that would certainly pursue and seize them, if they were not obedient to those Words that were thence delivered to them; so also when he was born into the World, the holy Angels came down to sing his Christmas Carol, and at once to proclaim and celebrate his Nativity; and it is the Opinion of some learned Men, that that Multitude of the Heavenly Host, which St Luke speaks of, and who sang that Anthem of Glory be to God on high at our Saviour's Nativity, Luke ii. 13. contain'd the whole Nation of Angels, because in Heb. i. 6. it is said, that when God brought in the first begotten into the World he said, let all the Angels worship him; that is, as they understand it, when our Saviour was born, God gave Order to all the Angels of Heaven to come down and do Homage to him, who was e'er long to be their Sovereign Lord under the most high Father. Thus also a little before Jerusalem was destroyed, Josephus tells us, that the Heavens were spread with Troops of armed Men, who without doubt were the blessed Angels, that by their phantastick Combats in the Air did pre-signify the ensuing Tragedy of that bloody City. It is no wonder then if the great Solemnity of Doomsday, of which Jerusalem's Desolation was only a mournful Type, shall also be adorned and illustrated with the Presence and Attendance of the holy Angels: For this great Transaction is to be the winding up of the vast Bottom of divine Providence over the whole Race of fallen and degenerate Mankind, and the close and conclusion of the mediatorial Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour; and therefore will without doubt be performed with the greatest Grandeur and Magnificence. This is to be the great Day of our Saviour's Triumph, wherein his Friends shall be crowned, and his Enemies made his Foot-stool; and such a Solemnity may well deserve the Attendance and Ministry of all the heavenly Angels, who accordingly shall then descend with our Saviour from the highest Heavens in bright ethereal Bodies, such as shall render them gloriously conspicuous to all the lower World, and so fit to adorn the Triumphs of that glorious Day; for so the Scripture assures us, not only that he shall descend from Heaven with a Shout, with the Voice of the Arch-angel, and with the Trump of God, 1 Thess. iv. 16. but also that he shall come in his Glory, and all his holy Angels with him, Matth. xxv. 31. and that he shall be revealed from Heaven with his mighty Angels, and that he shall come in his own Glory, and in his Father's, and of his holy Angels, Luke ix. 26: and in a Word, that he shall come in the Glory of his Father with the holy Angels, Mark viii. 38. But what their Ministry is to be in that great Day, I shall hereafter have occasion to shew, when I come to discourse of that solemn Transaction.

And now having explained the Ministry of the good Angels under Christ, I proceed to treat of the Ministry of the evil Angels to him, which principally consists in these four Particulars:

First, In trying and exercising the Virtues of his Subjects.

Secondly, In chastening and correcting their Faults and Miscarriages.

Thirdly, In fearing and hardening his incorrigible Rebels.

Fourthly, In executing his Vengeance on them in another World.

I. The Ministry of evil Angels to Christ, consists in trying and exercising the Virtues of his Subjects; for this being the State of our Trial and Probation, wherein we stand Candidates for those everlasting Preferments in the other World, our blessed Lord hath thought meet to surround us with Difficulties and Temptations, that so being in continual Conflict with them, we may never want Opportunity to exert and exercise our Virtues, and to give the most glorious Proofs of our Courage and Constancy: For Difficulty is the Spur of Endeavour, and the Whet-stone of Virtue, without which the fairest Graces that belong to humane Nature, would be altogether useless, worthless, and inactive; such as Faith and Patience, Temperance and Equanimity, Courage, and Resignation to God, all which would scarce deserve the Name of Virtues, if they had not some Difficulties to contest withal. Now one of the greatest Difficulties with which our blessed Lord tries and exercises these Graces of our Nature, is the Temptations of evil Spirits, who, as so many assisting Geniuses to the corrupt Inclinations of our Nature, are permitted by him to rove about the World in innumerable Swarms to tempt and elicit those Inclinations into Action, and these being Spirits, have a much nearer Access to the Souls of Men than any material Agents whatsoever; for though they are totally debarred from all kind of intercourse with the immediate Operations of the reasonable Soul, and can no more look into its Thoughts, than we can into the Bowels of the Earth, yet our Fancies and Imaginations lying open to them, there is no doubt but they can and oftentimes do make what use they think fit of the Animal Spirits there, and dispose, and order, and distinguish them, just as the Painter doth his numerous Colours that lie confusedly before him in their several Shells, into the Pictures and Phantasms of whatsoever Objects they please, and continue and repeat those Pictures in our Fancies as long and as oft as they think meet; and then considering what the natural Use of the Fancy is, both to the Understanding and Will, and how it prompts the one with Matter of Invention, and supplies it with variety of Objects to work on, and draws forth or elicits the other to chuse or refuse those Objects it presents, according as they are amiably or odiously represented; considering these Things, I say, it is notorious what mighty Advantages the evil Spirits have of insinuating their black Suggestions to our Minds. And then they being very subtil and sagacious by Nature, and having had above five thousand Years Experience to cultivate their Talent of tempting and seducing us, (that having been their Trade ever since they became Devils) to be sure they can never be at a Loss when or how to apply themselves to us, and to nick us with such Temptations as are most convenient to our several Inclinations, Conditions, and Circumstances; and accordingly, 2 Cor. ii. 11. the Devil is said to have his Methods or Devices, i. e. his stated Rules by which he governs his mischievous Practice of tempting and seducing Souls; and 2 Tim. ii. 26. we are told of the Snare of the Devil, or his crafty Devices to entangle and captivate Mens Souls.

Now though the Design of these evil Spirits in tempting Christ's Subjects, is doubtless to seduce and ruin them, yet it is evident that the Design of Christ in permitting them to tempt them, is only to try and exercise them, and rouse them out of their Sloth and Inactivity, and by the continual Alarms of these their restless Adversaries to keep them upon their Guard, and make them more watchful and vigilant; and accordingly from the Consideration of that Permission which these evil Spirits have to tempt us, we are in Scripture frequently exhorted to Activity and Vigilance; so 1 Pet. v. 8. Be sober, be vigilant; for the Devil your Adversary goeth about like a roaring Lion, seeking whom he may devour; So also, Ephes. vi. 11. Put on the whole Armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the Wiles of the Devil. Since therefore the Devil's tempting us is used by Christ as a Motive to excite our Activity, it is evident that Christ's Intention in permitting him to tempt us is to excite and stimulate us thereunto. It is true, the Devil's Temptations may, and often have a quite contrary Effect on us than Christ intended; they may seduce us from our Innocence and Duty, and thereby involve us in everlasting Perdition; but if they do, it is our own Fault, and through our own Consent, without which they can never prevail against us, for we are assured, that if we resist the Devil he will fly away from us, and that we shall not be tempted by him above what we are able; and we are furnished by our Saviour with sufficient Strength and Assistance to repel his most powerful Temptations; but if instead of imploying our Strength, and exercising our Virtue in a vigorous Resistance of him (which is the Thing Christ intended in permitting him to tempt us) we will tamely suffer ourselves to be led Captive by him, we must thank ourselves for all the dire and miserable Consequents of it.

II. Another Instance of the Ministry of these evil Angels to Christ is their chastening and correcting the Faults and Miscarriages of his Subjects. Thus upon great and high Provocations he many Times lets loose these evil Spirits upon us, and permits them to pain, and punish us either immediately by themselves, or mediately by their Instruments: For so only to prevent St. Paul's being exalted above Measure through the Abundance of his Revelations, there was given a Thorn in the Flesh, the Messenger of Satan to buffet him, i. e. as it seems most probable, some evil Spirit was sent to him from Satan, the Prince of Devils, to inflict some corporal Pain or Disease on him (for so the grieving Thorn, Ezek. xxviii. 24. signifies a sore bodily Affliction) and though he fought the Lord thrice for this Thing that it might depart from him, yet could he receive no other Answer, but My Grace is sufficient for thee; see 2 Cor. xii. 7, 8, 9. and it is very probable that those Weaknesses, Diseases, and Deaths, which were inflicted on the Corinthians for their irreverent Communication of the Lord's Supper, vide 1 Cor. xi. 30. were inflicted by the Ministry of evil Angels, to whole Power and and Malice they were abandoned by our Saviour, as a just Chastisement of their Prophaneness; for so it is evident the incestuous Person was corrected upon the Sentence of his Excommunication, which was, that he should be delivered up unto Satan for the Destruction of his Flesh, 1 Cor. v. 5. where the delivering him up to Satan seems to have been in answer to Satan's demanding of him; for so in Scripture the Devil is sometimes called, The Accuser of the Brethren, which accuses them before God Day and Night, Rev. xii. 10. and sometimes the Ἀνιδίκος, which signifies, an Adversary in Court of Judicature, that impleads and accuses us before God, 1 Pet. v. 8. Now this Accusation of his is sometimes false and groundless, as in the Case of Job, upon which Account he is called, Διαβόλος, the Calumniator, but sometimes he accuses us truly, for Faults that are real and highly Criminal, upon which he requires us of God as he did St. Peter, Luke xxii. 31. i. e. he requires us as the Executioner does a Malefactor, to sift or winnow us as Wheat, i. e. to shake and afflict us; and whenever God is pleased to answer this Request, he is truly said to deliver us up to Satan: And this Power of delivering up to Satan such Persons as are justly accused of great and scandalous Sins, God hath communicated to his Church, upon which Delivery in the primitive Ages (when there were no Magistrates to second the Churches Censures with corporal Punishments) Satan, as the Lictor or Executioner of our Saviour, immediately seized the Criminal, and inflicted on him some bodily Disease or Torment, which St. Ignatius calls, Κόλασις Διαβόλου, the Punishment of the Devil, Epist. ad Roman. for so in our Saviour's Time, and before and after it, it was usual for evil Spirits, by God's Permission, to inflict Diseases and Torments on Mens Bodies, of which there are innumerable Instances in the Gospels, and the Writings of the primitive Fathers; and that this was then the usual Consequence of Excommunication, is evident from that Phrase, For the Destruction of the Flesh, which plainly signifies some corporal Punishment consequent to that tremendous Sentence, which is therefore called a Rod, 1 Cor. iv. 21. because of the bodily Correction that followed it.

But since the Power of corporal Punishments hath been derived by Christ upon Christian Magistrates, he very rarely chastens his Subjects with any bodily Pains by the immediate Agency of evil Spirits, but hath wholly deposited it in the Hands of the Temporal Powers, who are now his sole Ministers and Revengers to execute Wrath upon those that do evil. But yet still upon occasion he so far makes use of the Ministry of the Devils in correcting us, as to permit them to excite wicked Men, and especially wicked Princes and Governours to Plague and persecute us: When he sees his Church, or any particular Part of it degenerating from the Purity of his Religion, or waxing cold and remiss in their Love and Duty to him, he many Times gives a loose to these malignant Spirits, who always burn with inveterate Rancour against it, and permits them to provoke and stimulate its Enemies, to exert and imploy their Power against it: So that whatsoever Mischiefs wicked Princes or Men do to the Church of Christ, or to any Part of it, they do it only as the Instruments of these evil Angels, and by their mischievous Suggestions and Instigations; for so Christ tells the Church of Smyrna, in Rev. ii. 10. The Devil shall cast some of you into Prison; that is, the wicked Governours there shall do it by the Instigation of the Devil, to whom I will certainly give permission to instigate them thereunto; for so Christ is said to have the Keys of the bottomless Pit, Rev. i. 18. that is, Power to confine or let loose those evil Spirits, that inhabit it, at his Pleasure; and when he thinks fit to confine them, we find the Church enjoys Peace, and Rest, and Prosperity, Rev. xx. 1, 2, 3, 4. But no sooner doth he let them loose again; but they are immediately instigating the wicked Powers of the Earth, to fight against it and persecute it, ibid. ver. 7, 8, 9. from whence it is evident, that the Power of these evil Spirits to excite evil Princes or Men to persecute his Church, is under the Restraint and Determination of our Saviour; that they can proceed no farther in this their mischievous Design, than he thinks meet to permit them; and consequently, that in all those Persecutions to which they excite their Instruments, they are but the Ministers and Executioners of Christ, even as the Dog is the Shepherd's in worrying the straying Sheep into the Fold.

III. Another Instance of the Ministry of evil Spirits to Christ is, their hardening and confirming incorrigible and obstinate Sinners in their wicked Purposes: For when notwithstanding all those powerful Methods, which in the Administration of his Government Christ uses to reduce and reclaim Men, they still persist in their Rebellion; when they have conquer'd his Grace, quenched his Spirit, broke through all his Persuasions, and baffled all his Arts of saving them, he many Times withdraws from them those powerful Aids of his Spirit, and of his holy Angels, which they have wilfully neglected, and utterly abandons them to the Powers of Darkness, whom from thenceforth he freely permits to tempt and seduce them, and to roll them on at their Pleasure from Sin to Sin, and from one Degree of Sin to another, till they have filled up the Measure of their Iniquities; and this, without doubt, is the severest Punishment that Christ inflicts upon Sinners on this side Hell; for this is a kind of Damnation above ground to be delivered up alive to those restless Furies, who having free Leave to back and ride us at their Pleasure, to be sure will never cease stimulating and spurring us on from Wickedness to Wickedness, till they have leapt us headlong into the everlasting Burnings. And this, I conceive, is the Meaning of God's hardening Sinners so often mentioned in the Holy Scripture, which doth not at all imply, that God by any positive Act of his own infuses any sinful Quality into Mens Wills to excite or stimulate them to Sin, as some Men have blasphemously enough asserted; for God cannot be tempted with Evil, neither tempteth he any Man; but when Men have a long while hardened themselves against all the powerful Impressions of his Grace, and in the Pursuit of their wicked Courses have turned a deaf Ear to all his Persuasions to the contrary, then, as a just Punishment of their incorrigible Obstinacy, he many Times withdraws from them the Influences of his Grace, and delivers them up to Satan, or, which is the same Thing, permits him to seize them as his own, and to take Possession of them, and as a wicked Soul to animate and act them in all their Wickedness; for so the Devil is said ἐνεργῶν, to work in the Children of Disobedience, so that these Children of Disobedience are a Sort of ἐνεργήματα, or Persons that are possessed and acted by the Devil. And too many deplorable Instances there are of wicked Men that Sin on at that Rate, as if they were really acted by some diabolical Genius, that are hurried into such monstrous Extravagances of Wickedness, as are neither pleasant, nor profitable, nor reputable; so that they gratify no Passion or Appetite in humane Nature by committing them, but do seem to Sin merely for the sake of Sinning, out of a kind of preter-natural Malice, when they can scarce give any other Reason to themselves why they do such an Action, but only this, because it is wicked; so truly Diabolical is their Love of Wickedness, so abstract from all those Motives which are wont to affect the Passions and Appetites of Men, that it is hardly resolvable into any other Reason, but that they are delivered up by God to be informed and acted by the Devil; who having once obtained the Possession of them, continually plies them with Temptation, and never ceases urging and pressing them forward from one Degree of Wickedness to another, till at length he hath scared and hardened them into final and incurable Impenitence. And this in particular was the Case of Judas, who having long persisted in his Thievery and Sacrilege, notwithstanding all those Warnings and Admonitions our Saviour had given him to the contrary, was at length abandoned to that Devil to whose Temptations he had been so obsequious; upon which it is said, that the Devil entred into him, Luke xxii. 3. and the Devil being in Possession of him, immediately provokes and irritates him to the foulest and most horrible Villany that ever any mortal Creature was guilty of; for so, John xiii. 2. we are told, that the Devil put it into the Heart of Judas to betray Christ. But as yet it seems he was not totally abandoned to the Devil, who had only Permission to make that black and dire Proposal to him; after which our Saviour attempts by the most pathetic pathetick Peerfusions to prevent his Compliance, Mark xiv. 21. notwithstanding which, the Wretch being still enticed by his own Covetoufnefs to listen to that horrid Suggestion, our Saviour having marked him out for a Traitor, by giving him the Sop, it is faid again, that Satan entred into him; and upon this second Entrance our Saviour gives him up for desperate; for, that thou doft, faith he, do quickly, Jobn xiii. 27. As much as if he had faid again, Now I find the Devil has the full poffeffion of thee, and that henceforth there remains no more hope of reclaiming thee; go therefore and difpatch thy wicked Purpose as foon as thou pleafeft. So that now, it feems, he was entirely delivered up to the Devil; who thereupon immediately hurries him to the Execution of his black Defign.

IV. And laftly, Another Instance of the Miniftry of evil Spirits to Chrift, is, their executing his Vengeance on incorrigible Sinners in the other World. For fince, as I have fhewn before, our Saviour makes ufe of the Power and Malice of thefe evil Spirits to correct and chafen Men in this Life, why may we not thence conclude, that he makes ufe of the fame to plague and punifh them in the Life to come; efpecially confidering that they bear the same Malice to us in the other Life that they did in this; for they tempt us to fin here for no other End but that they may make us miferable there; therefore to be fure that same Malice of theirs which excites them now to contribute all they can to our fin, will equally provoke them then to contribute all they can to our mifery, and render them altogether as active in tormenting us in Hell as they were in tempting us upon Earth; and then confidering that Spirits can act upon Spirits, as well as Bodies upon Bodies, and that the more powerful any Spirit is, the more vigorously it can act upon our Spirits, we may be fure that thofe evil Spirits being Angels by Nature, are incomparably more powerful than the Souls of Men, and therefore can act upon them with unfpeakable more Force and Vigour than one Soul can on another; for the weaker any Spirit is, the more paffive it muft neceffarily be to thofe Spirits that are stronger and more powerful, and therefore by how much weaker wicked Souls are than wicked Angels, by fo much more paffive muft they be to their Power, and confequently, by fo much more liable to be vexed and tormented by them: And fince in all probability the Disproportion which Nature hath made between the Power of Angels and Souls is far greater than that which Sin hath made between the Power of one Angel and another, we may reasonably conclude, that wicked Souls are far more imprefible by the Power of wicked Angels, than wicked Angels are by the Power of good Angels; and therefore fince the good Angels can make fuch violent Impreffions upon the wicked ones as they are not able to endure, but are ftill forced to fly before them, as oft as they encounter them, vid. Pag. 404. what intolerable Impreffions can wicked Angels make upon wicked Souls when they are abandoned by God to their Malice and Fury; for though our Souls are no more imprefible by corporeal Action than the Beams of the Sun are by the Blows of a Hammer, yet that they can feel the Force of fpiritual Action, we find by every Day's Experience: For fo a Thought, which is a fpiritual Action, if it be very horrible or difmal, doth as fenfibly pain and aggrieve our Souls as the moft exquisite Corporeal Torment can our Bodies. Now there is no doubt but evil Spirits can fuggeft preternatural Horrors to our Minds, and repeat and urge them with fuch Importunity and Vehemence, as to render them moft exquisitely painful and dolorous; of the Truth of which we have a woful Example in that miferable Wretch Francis Spira, who upon that woful Breach he made in his Confcience by renouncing his Religion, notwithstanding he had received feveral kind Admonitions from Heaven to the contrary, was forfaken of God, and delivered up Alive into the Hands of thofe dire Tormentors of Souls; whereupon, though he had not the leaft Symptom of bodily Melancholy, he was immediately feized with fuch an expreffible Agony of Mind, as amazed his Phyficians, aftonifhed his Friends, and ftruck Terror into all that beheld him; for he was fo near to the Condition of a damned Spirit, that he verily believed Hell itfelf was more tolerable than thofe invisible Lashes that his Soul endur'd without any Intermiſſion; and therefore he often wiſh'd that he were in Hell, and as often attempted to diſpatch himſelf thither, in hope to find ſanctuary there from thoſe direful Thoughts which continually prey'd upon his Soul. Now, that theſe Horrors were inflicted on him by a Diabolical Suggestion is evident, both by the impenetrable Hardneſs and Obſtinacy of his Mind againſt all the Motives of Repentance that accompanied them, and by the horrible Blasphemies they frequently extorted from him. And if now in this Life they have ſo much Power to torment our Minds, whenever God thinks it meet to let them loose upon us, what will they have hereafter, when our wretched Spirits ſhall be utterly abandoned to their Mercy, and they ſhall have a free Scope to exert their Fury on us, and glut their hungry Malice with our Torment and Vexation? And ſince it is evident they do not want Power, we may certainly conclude, even from that natural Malignity that is in the Temper of a Devil, they do not want Will to plague and torture us in the other World. And this Will and Power of theirs our Saviour makes uſe of as the common Executioner of his Vengeance upon incorrigible Sinners in the other Life: For as ſoon as ever a wicked Soul departs from its Body, it is immediately conſigned into the Hands of thoſe diabolical Furies, who, like ſo many hungry Hounds, ſeize it with infinite Greedineſs, and fall a tearing and worrying it with horrible Suggeſtions without any Pause or Intermiſſion; and by continually recording its Sins to it, and reproaching it with the Folly of them, and putting it in mind of that diſmal eternal Futurity it muſt ſuffer for them, do inceſſantly ſting and vex it with Swarms of dire Reflections and tormenting Thoughts, which are the only Inſtruments of Torment that can faſten upon a Soul. And hence in Matth. xviii. 34. the Devils, to whom the wicked Servant was delivered up by his Maſter for his Cruelty toward his Fellow-ſervant, are called Tormentors, as being the Ministers of our Saviour's juſt Vengeance upon wicked and incorrigible Offenders.
invisible

And thus having ſhewn at large, that the good and bad Angels are the Ministers of Chriſt, and wherein their Ministry to him conſiſts, I proceed to the

III. Third Sort of the Miniſters of Chriſt's Kingdom, viz. The Kings and Governours of the World; for though there are many Infidel Kings in the World that know not Chriſt, and that never ſubmitted themſelves to his Empire, but inſtead of that do openly defy and perſecute his holy Religion, yet theſe of right are ſubject to him, though in fact they are enſlaved to the Devil, and he hath the Diſpoſal of their Crowns, and the Command of their Power, and doth actually employ and uſe it, even as he doth the Power of the Devils, in the Proſecution of the righteous Ends of his Government. And though too many of theſe Kings who, by their viſible Profeſſion of Chriſtianity, have actually ſubmitted themſelves to the Scepter of Chriſt, have yet together with Chriſtianity eſpouſed the Intereſt of ſundry Antichriſtian Principles, in purſuance of which they have been as inveterate Enemies and Perſecutors of the Truth as it is in Jeſus, as any of the Heathen Kings or Emperours; yet theſe alſo, notwithstanding their Male-adminiſtration, are the Subjects and Ministers of our Saviour; and it is by his Authority and Commiſſion that they reign, and by his omnipotent Providence that all their wicked Deſigns and Actions are over-ruled to gracious Ends and Purpoſes; ſo that all the Sovereign Powers of the Earth are ſubjected by God to the Dominion of our Saviour; and in their reſpective Kingdoms and Empires are only his Subſtitutes and Vicegerents: For ſo we are told not only that all Judgment is committed to him, and that all Power is committed to him in Heaven and Earth; and that he is Heir of all Things, and hath Power over all Fleſh, but alſo that he is King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, the only Potentate, the Head of all Principality and Power, and the Prince of all the Kings of the Earth, vide Page 382. and ſo the Fathers of the Council of Ariminum tell Conſtantius the Arian Emperour, that it was by Chriſt's Donation that he held his Empire, ὁ δὲ [Χεῖρ] τοῦ καὶ τοῦ βασιλεύοντος ἔτιος παρ' ἡμῶν αὐτῶν καὶ ἡμῶν αὐτῶν καὶ ἡμῶν αὐτῶν, by him, i. e. Chriſt, thou art appointed to reign over all the World; upon which account Liberius advises him, μὴ μάχεσθαι πρὸς τὸν δεδωκότα σοι τὸ κράτος τούτου, μὴ ἀντ' εὐχαριστίας ἀσεβήσης εἰς αὐτόν, do not fight against Christ who hath bestowed this Empire upon thee; do not render him Impiety instead of Gratitude; and to the same purpose Athanasius tells us, Λαμβάναντες ἐν ὁ χειρὶς τὸ θρόνον μετέστησεν αὐτὸν καὶ ἔδωκε τοῖς ἁγίοις χριστιανῶν βασιλεύειν ἐπαναστήσαντες τὰς ἐπὶ τὸ οἶκον Ἰακώβ, (i. e.) that Christ having received the Throne, hath translated it from Heathen to Holy Christian Kings to return them back to the House of Jacob. So that both from Scripture and the current Doctrine of the Primitive Church, it is evident that all the Sovereign Powers upon Earth are subjected to our Saviour, and are only the Ministers and *Viceroy*s of his universal Kingdom.

World;

But for the farther Prosecution of this Argument, I shall shew in the first Place, that by this their Subjection to Christ, they are not deprived of any natural Right of their Sovereignty; and Secondly, that they are obliged by it to certain Ministries in the Kingdom of Christ.

First, That by their Subjection they are not deprived of any natural Right of their Sovereignty; for when our Saviour pronounced the Sentence, Give unto Cæsar the Things that are Cæsar's, he thereby renewed the Patent of Sovereign Powers, and re-invested them in all the natural Rights of their Sovereignty, which doubtless are included in the Things that are Cæsar's; for upon the Pharisees asking him that captious Question? Is it lawful to pay Tribute to Cæsar? He doth not answer, yes, it is lawful; which yet had been a sufficient Reply to their Question; but calls for a Tribute-Peny, and having asked them whose Image and Superscription that was upon it? And being answered Cæsar's; he returns them an Answer much larger than their Question, Give unto Cæsar the Things that are Cæsar's, (i. e.) it is certain that you are obliged not only to pay Tribute to Cæsar, but also to render him whatever else is due to him by virtue of his Sovereign Power; for Sovereign Power being immediately founded on the Dominion of God, hath from thence these two unalienable Rights derived to it, to which all the essential Rights of Sovereignty are reducible: First, to command in all Things as it judges most convenient for the Publick Good, where God hath not countermanded; for the Power of Sovereigns descending from God can only be limited by God or themselves; for if they are limitable by any other Power, they are Subjects to that Power, and so can no longer be Sovereigns; and if they are limitable only by God or themselves, then where they are not limited either by God or themselves, they must necessarily have a right to command. Secondly, The other unalienable Right that is derived to them from God, is to be accountable only to God; for by deriving to them Sovereign Power, God hath exalted them above all Powers, but his own; and therefore since no Power can be accountable but to a superiour Power; and since Sovereigns have no superiour Power but God, it is to God only, from whom they received their Power, that they are accountable for the Administration of it. These therefore are the natural Rights of Sovereign Powers, and these Rights remain intire and inviolable in them, notwithstanding their Subjection to the Mediatorial Scepter of our Saviour, as I shall endeavour to shew in the Particulars,

First, Therefore, by this their Subjection to Christ they are not deprived of their natural Right of commanding in all Cases as they shall judge most convenient for the Publick Good, where God hath not countermanded them: For the Christian Religion is so far from any way retrenching the Power of Princes, that it abundantly confirms and enforces it, by requiring us to submit to every Ordinance of Man for the Lord's sake; to be subject to the higher Powers, and that not only for Wrath, but for Conscience sake; to submit to Principalities and Powers, and to obey Magistrates; to render Tribute to whom Tribute is due, Custom to whom Custom, Fear to whom Fear, Honour to whom Honour; (i. e.) to submit to all the Lawful Impositions of our Princes, whether it be of Taxes, or of any other matter whatsoever, and in all the New Testament there is only one Limitation made of our Obedience, which is a natural and eternal one, and that is, that we ought to obey God rather than Man; that is, when Man's Command and God's do apparently clash and interfere with each other; for in this Case the Magistrate hath no Right to be obeyed, because his Will is countermanded by a superior Authority: By which Exception this general Rule is confirmed, that in all Cases whatsoever, whether Temporal or Spiritual, Civil or Ecclesiastical, Sovereign Powers have an unalienable Right to be obeyed. For if their Right to be obeyed in the Kingdom of Christ, extended only to Civil and Temporal Causes, their Authority would be very much lessened and retrenched by their Subjection to our Saviour; since before their Subjection to him, it undoubtedly extended to all Causes whatsoever; because being Sovereign under God, it could have no other Bounds or Limits but what God had set to it, and therefore since before their Subjection to Christ, God hath bound their Authority by no other Law but that of Nature, it must either be made appear that the Law of Nature did then limit their Authority only to Civil Causes (which I am sure is impossible) or it will necessarily follow, that it extended also to Spiritual and Ecclesiastical, and if it did so then, it must do so still, unless it be made appear that Christianity hath retrenched and lessened it. It is true, Christ hath erected a standing Form of Spiritual Government in his Church, and it is as true that all Government, whether Spiritual or Temporal, includes a Legislative Power in it, or a Power of commanding its Subjects; but this is no Limitation of the commanding Power of Sovereign Princes, who must still be obeyed in all Things where Christ hath not countermanded, though the Church should command the contrary; for Christ never authorized the Governours of his Church to controul the commanding Power of Princes, but hath left all Matters of Indifference as absolutely to their Disposal and Determination as ever they were before his Spiritual Government was erected, and Matters of Indifference are the sole Matter both of purely Civil and purely Ecclesiastical Laws; and therefore after the Church by its Legislative Power hath restrained any Matter of Indifference, the Civil Sovereign, in whose Disposal all Matters of Indifference are, may, if he see good occasion, release and free it again, and impose the contrary Matter of Indifference; and if he doth so, all Christian People are obliged by the express Commands of Scripture to obey him; for the Scripture Commands of Obedience to the Temporal Sovereignty have no such Exception as this annexed to them, except the Church command the contrary; and in Matters of Duty what have we to do to make Exceptions where God hath made none? And indeed where there are two Legislative Powers, the one must necessarily be subject to the other, or it will be impossible for the Subject in many Cases without Sinning to obey either. For whenever the Commands of the Civil State do happen to clash with the Commands of the Church, either the Church must be obliged to submit to the State, or the State to the Church, or the Subject cannot possibly obey the one without sinning against the other. If it be said, that the Church must submit to the State, in Things appertaining to the State, and the State to the Church, in Things appertaining to the Church, and so both are supreme in their own Province: I would fain know, what is to be done when these two Powers differ about the Things which appertain to the one and to the other: The State saith, this appertains to me, and so commands it; the Church saith, this appertains to me, and so forbids it; now in this Case it is certain, that one or the other must be obliged to give way, or the Subject can neither obey nor disobey either without sinning; and whichever of the two it be that is obliged to give way, by virtue of that Obligation it must be subjected to the other: So that now the Question is only this, which of the two Legislative Powers is Supreme; and it would be impertinent to say, that they are both Supreme in their proper Province, the one in Civil, and the other in Spiritual Causes, because it is in suspence whether the Cause in which they countermanded each other, be Civil or Spiritual; so that in this Case I must either be obliged to obey neither, which is notoriously false, or whatsoever the Cause be in itself, to yield Obedience to the one, and to disobey the other; and if I must obey the Civil Power, whether

that

ther the Cause be Civil or Spiritual, then the Civil Power must be supreme in both; as on the contrary, if I must obey the Church Power whether the Cause be Spiritual or Civil, it will as necessarily follow that the Church Power is supreme in both. Which latter we are sure is false, as the Scripture is true; for in civil Matters it is agreed on all Hands, that the Scripture concludes all Men as well Clergy as Laity, under the Obligation of Obedience to the Civil Sovereign, and that none are exempt; no not the Apostles themselves, or the Bishops succeeding them in the Spiritual Government, whether we consider them separately or conjunctly, and if in all Civil Causes I am obliged to obey the Command of the Civil Power, then it is most certain that if the Case in contest between that and the spiritual Power be really civil, I am obliged to disobey the countermand of the spiritual Power; but if on the contrary I must disobey the Command of the civil Power, supposing the Cause to be spiritual, which Way can I turn myself without danger of sinning; so that unless one of these two Powers are supreme in both Causes, whenever any Cause happens to be contested between them, (as to be sure many must between two Rival Powers) I can neither obey nor disobey without sinning against one or both; and can we imagine that God, who is the God of Order and not of Confusion, would ever involve us in such inextricable Difficulties by subjecting us to two supreme Powers that are subject to clash and interfere with one another? Wherefore although as I shall shew by and by, the Church is invested with a Legislative Power, whereby it can restrain Things that were free and indifferent for its own Security, and Decency, and Order; yet this Power is subordinate to the civil Legislation (which is in all Causes supreme) and cannot enact against it, controul or countermand it in any indifferent Matter, whether temporal or spiritual, but stands obliged to recede to the civil Sovereign, who hath the supreme Disposal of all indifferent Things, and in all contested Cases to veil its Authority to his.

And accordingly we find that during the first three hundred Years, when the Civil Powers were Enemies to Christianity, and did no otherwise concern themselves with it than to ruin and extirpate it, the Church made Laws for itself, and by its own Legislative Power enacted whatsoever it judged convenient or necessary for its own Security or Edification; but yet it never presumed in any indifferent Matter to contradict the Laws of the Empire; nor did ever any Christian, because he was a Subject of the Church, refuse to obey his Prince in any Case whatsoever, where God had not countermanded him; as is most evident from hence; because in all the History of those Times, we do not find one Instance of any Christian that suffered for so doing. In those Days, there were no Martyrs for indifferent Things, which to be sure there must have been, had the Church then taken upon it to determine Indifferences contrary to the Edicts of the Emperor; but the only Thing they then suffered for, was their Refusal to disobey the express Will of God, in compliance with the wicked Wills of Men; which is an unanswerable Argument, that in those Days the Church never assumed to itself any supreme Authority over indifferent Things, either in Spirituals or Temporals, but left that in those Hands where God had placed it, viz. in the Hands of the Civil Sovereign, with whose Imperial Laws its Canons never interfered, with whose Legislative Power it never jostled for the Wall, but chearfully submitted to it in all Things, wherein it was not determined to the contrary by the express Will of God. And when afterwards the Civil Sovereign embraced Christianity, he did not thereby divest himself of his Supremacy over all indifferent Things in all Causes whatsoever, but by his own Authority he not only convened General Councils, and for the most Part presided in them (as particularly in that of Ephesus, Chalcedon, the sixth General One in Constantinople, called Trullo, and several others) and enforced their Canons with his own Imperial Edicts, but many Times made Laws, even in Church Matters without them; to which the Ecclesiastical Governors yielded the same Obedience as they did to the Decrees of the most oecumenical Councils; for so, not only Constantine, who was the first Christian Emperor, made Laws concerning the Festivals of the Church, ordaining what might and what might not be done upon the Lord's Day; and not only several of those Ecclesiastical Laws in Gratian's Collection are now confessed on all Hands, to be the Laws of Princes, but the first Titles of the Code are all of them concerning Ecclesiastical Matters, and so also in the Laws of the Goths and Vandals, the Authenticks and Capitulars of the French Kings, there are numerous Instances of the Legislative Power of Kings in Ecclesiastical Matters, and this Power was openly asserted by the French Embassadors in the Council of Trent, viz. that the Kings of France following the Examples of other Christian Emperors had frequently made Laws for the Church, which were so far from being countermanded by the Bishops of Rome, that they received many of them into their own Canons; and that the Gallican Church had been always governed by the Ecclesiastical Laws which were made by their Kings; and Cardinal Cusanus tells us, lib. 2. Cath. Concord. c. 40. that he himself had collected eighty six Chapters of Ecclesiastical Laws, made by the ancient Emperours; besides many others of Charles the Great and his Successors, in which there are many Things concerning the Popes and all other Patriarchs, declaring that he never read that ever any Pope was asked to confirm those Laws, or that ever they were accounted the less Obligatory because they wanted the Papal Confirmation. And indeed before Pope Hildebrand, who was the first Bishop that challenged the supreme Legislation in Ecclesiastical Affairs, it is notoriously known that the greatest Prelates of the Church frequently addressed themselves to the Emperor for such good Laws, as the present Necessities of the Church called for. Thus Pope Damasus intreated the Emperor Honorius to make a Law for the more regular Election of the Popes. Thus also Sergius, Patriarch of Constantinople, supplicated the Emperor Heraclius to forbid by a pragmatick Sanction, the admission of any Man into the Clergy, unless it were into a dead Place; and it was, (as it is thought) upon St. Ambrose's Intreaty, that Theodosius made a Law for the disannulling of Marriages within the prohibited Degrees; so when the Emperor Justinian turned the ancient Canons of the Church into Imperial Laws, he was so far from being accused of being an Usurper of the Ecclesiastical Power, that Pope Adrian IV. highly extolls him for so doing, though in his 133d Novel, that Emperor affirms, that μηδὲν ἀβασίον ἐστὶν εἰς ζήτησιν τῇ βασιλείᾳ, nothing is impervious to the Inspection and Cognisance of the King; in which St. Austin accords with him, when he affirms the Kings do nothing but their Duty, Cum in suo regno bona jubeant, mala prohibeant, non solum quæ pertinent ad humanam societatem, verum etiam quæ pertinent ad divinam Religionem, i. e. when they make good Laws, not only concerning humane Society, but also concerning divine Religion; by all which it is evident, that the Civil Powers for several Ages after they became Christians, did claim and exercise a supreme Legislative Power in Causes Ecclesiastical as well as Civil, and this without any Contradiction from the Bishops and Governours of the Church; for as for that saying, Quid Imperatori cum Ecclesia? What hath the Emperor to do with the Church? It was not the Language of the Church, but of that Fire-brand Donatus, who was the Ringleader of one of the most factious and turbulent Heresies that ever infested the Christian World: And if in those Instances wherein they exerted their Legislative Power in Ecclesiastical Causes, the Church had no Power to controul or countermand them, then neither hath it in any other Instance of the same Nature; and if so, then notwithstanding their Subjection to our Saviour, they still retain their supreme commanding Power over all Matters of Indifference, whether it be in Civil or Ecclesiastical Causes. But then,

Secondly, By this their Subjection to our Saviour, they are not deprived of their natural Right of being unaccountable to any but to God alone, through Jesus Christ; for all the difference between the State of Sovereign Powers in this Matter, before and after their Subjection to Christ's mediatorial Scepter, is only this, that before they were accountable to God only immediately, whereas now they are accountable to God only through Jesus Christ: For

Christ

Christ being authorized by God to mediate for him; or, which is the same Thing, to be his Vicegerent in the World, all Things are now subjected to him; and God now rules and judges, rewards and punishes all Men by him, whether they are Subjects or Sovereigns, Vassals or Emperors; for so in the great Transaction of the Last Day we are told, that the Kings of the Earth shall be arraigned before his Judgment-Seat, Rev. vi. 15, 16, 17. but they are now accountable immediately to Christ, who, during this Evangelical Oeconomy, is to rule and judge for God; yet in respect of any earthly Tribunal, they remain altogether as Sovereign and unaccountable as ever: For to be Sovereign and unaccountable are convertible Terms; and it is nonsense to say, either that any Power is unaccountable which hath any Superiour; or, that any Power is accountable which is Sovereign and Supreme; so that by necessity of Nature those Powers which are Sovereign upon Earth, must be unaccountable to any Power upon Earth; because to call to Account is an Act of Superiority, and that which is Supreme can have no Superiour to account to: So that unless it be made appear, that Christ hath erected some earthly Tribunal, that is superiour to the Tribunals of the Supreme Civil Powers, he must of necessity have left them as unaccountable as he found them. Now it is plain, that our Saviour erected no other Tribunal in this World, but only that of the Spiritual or Ecclesiastical Government, which he was so far from advancing above the Tribunal of the Civil Sovereign, that while he was upon Earth he acknowledged himself to be subject and accountable thereunto, though he was then the supreme Bishop and Head of that spiritual Regiment; and this he did not only by recognizing Cæsar's Right of receiving Tribute from him, of which I have spoken before, (for by bidding them render to Cæsar the Things that are Cæsar's, he leaves Sovereign Princes in the quiet Possession of all those Rights which he found them possessed of, and requires their Subjects to pay them whatsoever is essentially due to their Sovereignty, and whatsoever the Laws and Customs of Nations had before determined to be their Right) but also by acknowledging before Pilate the Right of the Civil Tribunal, to call him to Account, John xix. 1. where he confesses, that the Power by which Pilate arraigned him was given him from above; and by reprehending St. Peter, for endeavouring by Force to rescue him out of the Hands of the Civil Powers, Put up thy Sword, saith he, into his Place; for all that take the Sword shall perish by the Sword; Matt. xxvi. 52. in which Words it was far from his Intention to prohibit the Use of the Sword either to Governors, who, as St. Paul tells us, bear not the Sword in vain; or to private Persons in their own lawful Defence; for he commands his own Disciples to buy them Swords to defend themselves against Robbers and lawless Cut-throats, who, as Josephus tells, did very much abound in those Days, Luke xxii. 36. but all that he intended, was, to forbid drawing the Sword against lawful Authority in any Case whatsoever, tho' it were for the Defence and Security of his own Person; for this was St. Peter's Case, who in the Defence of his Saviour resisted the High-Priest's Officers, who came armed with a lawful Authority to seize and apprehend him; in which our Saviour plainly owns himself accountable to the Civil Authority of his Countrey: For if he had not been so, it could be no Fault in St. Peter to endeavour to rescue him from its Ministers; and if Christ himself, while he was upon Earth, were subject to the Civil Authority, what an high Piece of Arrogance is it for those who are at most but his Vicars and Ministers, to claim or pretend an Exemption? And if it were so great a Fault in St. Peter, to draw his Sword against lawful Authority, though it were in the Defence of his Saviour's Person, then doubtless it is no less a Fault in his Successors to pretend a Right from St. Peter to draw their Swords against Sovereign Princes, though it be in the Defence of their Saviour's Religion. And as our Saviour owned himself subject and accountable to the Civil Tribunal, so St. Paul's Injunction is universal, Let every Soul be subject to the higher Powers; and surely, every Soul must include the whole Body of the Clergy as well as of the Laity, unless we can produce some clear and express Exception to the contrary; and as the Commands extend universally to all, so doth the Reason of it also, for the Powers that be are ordained of God; and if we must be subject to them, because they rule by God's Authority, then it is certain there are none that are subject to God, but are under the Force and Obligation of this Reason. And then he goes on, Whosoever resisteth the Power (of whatsoever Degree or Order of Men he be) resisteth the Ordinance of God; and they that resist shall receive to themselves Damnation; and if, according to the Law of our Saviour, it be a damnable Sin for any Person or Persons whatsoever to resist the Civil Authority, then it is a plain Case, that our Saviour hath not at all depressed the Sovereignty of the secular Powers, by subjecting it to any superiour Tribunal; but hath left it as absolute and unaccountable as ever it was before it was subjected to his Empire. And thus having proved that Sovereign Princes are not divested of any natural Right of their Sovereignty by their Subjection to the mediatorial Scepter of our Saviour; I proceed in the—Second Place, To shew what those Ministries are, which they are obliged to render to our Saviour, by virtue of this their Subjection to him: In general it is foretold, that upon their Subjection to Christ they should become Nursing Fathers and Nursing Mothers to his Church, Isa. xlix. 23. that is, that they should tenderly cherish, protect, and defend it, and liberally minister to it whatsoever is necessary for its Support and Preservation; and to be sure Christ expects of them that they should accomplish this Prediction by doing all those good Offices to his Church which the Relation of a Foster Father or Mother imports: For when God predicts any good Thing of Me, it is plain that he would have them be what he foretels they shall be; so that in this Case the Prophecy carries Precept in it, and doth not only signify what shall be, but also what ought to be. When therefore God propheesies of Kings that they shall be Nursing Fathers to his Church, he doth as well declare what they should be as what they shall be; and so he foretels of them, and commands them in the same Breath. If therefore we would know what those Ministries are, which Christ now requires Sovereign Powers to render to his Church, our best Way will be to inquire what those Duties are which are implied in the Relation of a Foster Father to his Foster Child. Now the Duties of this Relation may be all of them comprehended under these four Particulars;

First, To protect and defend it against Harms and Injuries.

Secondly, To cultivate its Manners with good Precepts and Counsels.

Thirdly, To correct and chasten its Faults and Irregularities.

Fourthly, To supply it with decent Raiment and convenient Sustenance: Answerable to which, Sovereign Powers being constituted, by our Saviour, the Foster Fathers of his Church, are, by virtue of this Relation, obliged,

I. To protect and defend it in the Profession and Exercise of the true Religion.

II. To fence and cultivate its Peace and good Order, either by wholesome Laws of their own, or by permitting and requiring it to make good Laws for itself, and, if need be, enforcing them with Civil Coercions.

III. To chasten and correct the irregular and disorderly Members of it.

IV. To make Provision for the Decency of its Worship, and for the convenient Maintenance of its Officers and Ministers; which answers to the decent Raiment and convenient Sustenance with which the Foster Father is obliged to supply his Foster Child.

These Particulars I shall but very briefly insist on, it being none of my Province to instruct Princes and Governours.

I. One of those Ministries which Princes, by virtue of their Subjection to Christ, are obliged to render to his Church, is to protect and defend her in the Profession and Exercise of the true Religion, that is, not only to permit her openly to profess the true Religion, and to perform the publick Offices of it without Disturbance or Interruption, but also to fence her with legal Securities, and guard her with the temporal Sword, against the Power and Malice of such as would disturb and persecute her; and therefore Sovereign Powers are concerned above all Things impartially to inquire, and studiously to examine what the true Religion is; lest being imposed upon by false Pretences, they mis-employ that Power in the Patronage of Error which was given them for the Protection of the Truth.

above

II. Another of those Ministries which Princes are obliged, by virtue of their Subjection to Christ, to render his Church, is to fence and cultivate its Peace and good Order, either by wholesome Laws of their own, or by permitting and requiring it when occasion requires, to make good Laws for itself, and if need be, by enforcing them with civil Coercions; for so when the Church was either broken by Schisms, or corrupted by Errors and disorderly Customs, it was always the Practice of Christian Kings and Emperours, even from the Time that they became Christians, to restrain and give a Check to those Divisions and Disorders, either by their own Royal and Imperial Edicts, or by convening the Ecclesiastical Governours to Councils, there to consult and agree upon such good Laws and Expedients as the present Necessities of the Church required; and because these Laws being grounded upon more spiritual Authority could as such be enforced by no other Penalties than spiritual, which by bold and obstinate Offenders were frequently despised and disregarded, therefore those holy Kings and Emperours thought themselves obliged, as they were the Ministers of Jesus, to strengthen and reinforce them with temporal Sanctions and Penalties, by which means they became the Laws of the Empire, as well as of the Church: Of all which I have given sufficient Instances, and all this was no more than what they were obliged to by virtue of their Subjection to Christ; for being subjected to him they are his *Viceroy*s in the World, and do reign and govern by his Authority; and since their Authority is his, they must be accountable to him, if they do not employ it for him in ministering to the Necessities of his Church and Kingdom; and therefore if when it is in their Power to check a prevailing Schism or Corruption in the Church by wholesome Laws and Edicts, they refuse or neglect to do it, they must doubtless answer to him from whom they received their Power, and who being himself the supreme Head of the Church, hath constituted them its Guardians and Nursing-Fathers.

III. Another of those Ministries, which Princes are obliged to render his Church, is to chasten and correct the irregular and disorderly Members of it; for though there are Spiritual Rods and Corrections which Christ hath solely committed to the Spiritual Government, and which, if Men understood and considered the dire Effects and Consequences of them, are sufficient to restrain and keep in awe the most obstinate Offenders, yet when Men are stupified in Sin, and do feel nothing but only what pains or pleases their Bodies, these Spiritual Corrections are insignificant to them, they being such as make no Impression on their corporeal Senses; and so when Men are hardened in Schism or Heresie, to be sure they will despise the Ecclesiastical Rods, as being confidently persuaded that they cannot be justly apply'd to them, and that where they are apply'd unjustly, they are only so many Spiritual Scare-crows that can only threaten, but not hurt them; and therefore in these Cases the Secular Powers are obliged, by virtue of their Subjection to Jesus, to second the Spiritual with the Temporal Rod, and to awe such Offenders with corporeal Corrections as are fearless and insensible of the Censures of the Church. And conformable hereunto hath been the constant Practice of all good Kings and Emperours, even from their first Conversion to Christianity, as might easily be demonstrated by innumerable Instances out of Ecclesiastical History; for they not only made Laws inforc'd with temporal Penalties for the Regulation of the Clergy, as well as Laiety, not only commanded and obliged their Bishops in case of notorious Neglect, to execute the Church Censures on the schismatical, heretical and disorderly of both Sorts; but when they found those spiritual Executions ineffectual, they very often seconded them with temporal, such as pecuniary Mulcts, Imprisonments and Banishments; and though in the Case of Error and false Belief, they were always very tender and gentle, yet whenever they found Men busily propagating their Errors into Seets and Divisions, to the Disturbances of the Church's Peace, they thought themselves obliged to restrain their Petulancy with temporal Chastisements. And indeed as they are the Vice-roys of our Saviour, they are ex Officio the Conservators of the Peace of his Kingdom, and stand obliged to exert that Authority he hath devolved upon them in the Defence of its Unity and good Order, which in many Cases they can no otherwise do, but only by restraining the Schismatical and Disorderly with the Terror of temporal Corrections; so that as well in the Church as in the Civil State they are the Ministers of God to us for our good; and therefore if we do that which is evil, we have just Cause to be afraid, for they bear not the Sword in vain, for they are the Ministers of God, Revengers to execute Wrath upon them that do Evil, Rom. xiii. 14. .

IV. And lastly, Another of those Ministries which Princes are obliged to render to Christ's Church, by virtue of their Subjection to him, is to make good Provision for the Decency of its Worship, and for the convenient Maintenance of its Officers and Ministers; to take care that it hath decent and commodious Places set apart for the publick Celebration of its Worship, and that those Places be supplied with such Ornaments and Accommodations as are suitable to those venerable Solemnities that are to be performed in them; that so its Worship may not be exposed to Contempt by the Slovenliness and Barbarity of its outward Appendages; and this is the clothing of the Church, which as it ought not on the one hand to be too pompous and gaudy, that being naturally apt to distract and carnalize the Minds of its Votaries, and to divert their Attention from those spiritual Exercises, wherein the Life and Soul of its Worship consists; so neither ought it on the other hand to be sordid and nasty, that being as naturally apt to prejudice and disgust Men against it, and to create in their Minds a loathing and contempt of it. Now the furnishing the Church with such decent Places and Ornaments of Worship, as do become the grave Solemnities of a spiritual Religion, being a matter of Cost and Charge, must necessarily belong to the Civil Powers, who alone can lay Rates upon the Subject, and have the sole Command and Disposal of the Publick Purse; and therefore, by virtue of their Subjection to Christ, they are obliged to take care that such religious Places and Ornaments be provided as the Decency and Convenience of his Worship do require. And then as for the Ministers and Officers of his Church, they are under the same Obligation to take care, that they whose Office it is to serve at the Altar, should live upon the Altar; and that according to the different Stations and Degrees wherein they are placed, that so they may neither be necessitated for a Subsistence to involve themselves in secular Affairs, and thereby to neglect their spiritual Calling, which is Burthen enough of all Conscience for any one Man's Shoulders; nor be tempted to base Compliances with the Lusts of Men, and the Iniquities of Times for a Maintenance; and that so Religion itself may not be exposed to Contempt through their wretched Poverty and Indigence who are the Ministers of it, and who for want of a fair and honourable Subsistence can never obtain Credit and Authority enough to do any considerable Good in the World. And this is the Food and Sustenance of the Church, without which it cannot long flourish either in true Knowledge, or true Piety, but must insensibly whither away, and degenerate into Barbarity and Ignorance. And accordingly, if you consult Ecclesiastical History, you will find that it was ever the Practice of Pious Princes and Emperours to take care both for the erecting of decent and convenient Churches in all Parts of their Dominions for the Celebration of Divine Worship, and to furnish them with all the decent Accommodations and Ornaments that were proper thereunto, and also for the endowing the Bishops and Pastors of the Church with such honourable Subsistences as becomes the Port and Dignity of their several Orders and Offices; in which they did no more than what they stood obliged to, as they were the Vice-Roys of Jesus, and the Foster-Fathers of his Church, by virtue of which Relation to it, they are bound in Duty to supply supply it with decent Raiment and convenient Food. And now having explained the Subjection of the Sovereign Powers of the Earth to our Lord and Saviour, and shewn what those Ministries are, which they are obliged to render to him in his Kingdom, I proceed to the Fourth and last Sort of his Ministers, by which he governs his Kingdom, viz. the Spiritual or Ecclesiastical Governours, in treating of which I shall endeavour these three Things:

First, To shew that Christ hath erected a Spiritual Government to Minister to him in his Church.

Secondly, To shew in what Hands this Spiritual Government is placed.

Thirdly, To shew what are the proper Ministries of this Episcopal Government.

I. That Christ hath erected a Spiritual Government in his Church. And indeed supposing the Church to be a regular and formal Society, subsisting of itself, distinct from all other Societies, it must necessarily have a distinct Government in it; because Government is essentially included in the very Notion of all regular Society, which without Rule and Subjection is not a formed Society, but a confused Multitude; for what else do we mean by a humane Society, but only such a Company of Men united together by such and such Laws and Regulations? But how can any Company of Men be united by Laws, without having in it some governing Power to rule by those Laws, and exact Obedience to them? So that we may as well suppose a compleat Body without a Head, as a regular Society without a Government. Now that the Church is a regular Society utterly distinct from all Civil Society, is as evident as the Truth of Christianity, which all along declares and recognizes the Law or Covenant, upon which it is founded, and by which it is united, to be Divine, and consequently to be superiour to, and independent upon all Civil Laws; and if that which constitutes the Church by Divine Law, and not Civil, then the Constitution of the Church must be Divine and not Civil; for that which makes us Christians, at the same time makes us Parts of the Christian Church; and that which makes all the Parts of the Church, makes the Church itself; which is nothing but the whole or collection of all the Parts together; and therefore as we are not made Christians, so neither are we made a Christian Church by the Laws of the Common-wealth, but by the Laws and Constitutions of our Saviour, which were promulgated to the World long before there were any Laws of the Commonwealth to found a Christian Church on; for there was a Christian Church for Three hundred Years together, before ever it had the least Favour or Protection from the Laws of Nations. In all which time it subsisted apart from all other Societies, and was as much a Church or Christian Society as it is now; and as it is now, it is only a continued Succession of that Primitive Church, and therefore, as to the Constitution of it, must necessarily be as distinct now from all other Societies, as it was then, when it subsisted not only apart from but against the Laws and Edicts of all other Societies in the World; in short therefore since the Church of Christ is founded on a Charter, and incorporated by a Law that is utterly distinct from the Charters and Laws of all Civil Societies, it hence necessarily follows, that itself is a distinct Society from them all; because that which individuates any Society, or makes it a distinct Body from all other Societies, is the Charter or Law upon which it is founded; and accordingly our Saviour tells Pilate, when he asked him, whether he was a King? That he was a King, indeed, but that his Kingdom was not of this World, John xviii. 36. i. e. tho' my Kingdom be in this World, yet is it not of the World; for neither are the Laws of it Humane, but Divine; nor the Powers of it external, but invisible; nor the Rewards and Punishments of it temporal, but spiritual and eternal.

From the whole, therefore, these two Things are evident;

First, That Government is Essential to formed and regular Societies.

Secondly, That the Church of Christ is in the Nature and Constitution of it a formed and regular Society, distinct from all other Societies: From both which it necessarily followeth, that it must have a distinct Government included in the very Essence and Being of it. And accordingly in the New Testament besides the Civil Magistrates, we frequently read of Spiritual and Ecclesiastical Governours; so Heb. xiii. 17. there is mention made of the Rulers that watch for our Souls, and a strict Injunction to obey and submit ourselves to them; and so again in the 7th and 24th Verses, and in 1 Tim. v. 17. the Apostle speaks of the Elders that rule well, who are to be accounted worthy of double Honour. And indeed the Greek Word ἐπισκοπος, which signifies a Bishop or Overseer, doth in Scripture always import a Ruler or Governour; vide Hammond, Acts i. Note 1. and therefore being apply'd, as it is frequently in the New Testament, to a certain Order of Men in the Christian Church, it must necessarily denote them to be the Rulers and Governours of it; and this Power to ἐπισκοπεῖν, i. e. oversee, and rule and govern the Church, was derived to them from Christ the supreme Bishop of our Souls, even by that Commission he gave them, John xx. 21. As the Father hath sent me, so send I you, i. e. so I commission you with the same Authority in kind to teach and govern in my Kingdom, as I myself have received from the Father; and accordingly as Christ is called the Pastor or Shepherd, which Nature imports Authority to govern his Flock (for so to feed and to rule are of the same Significancy in Psal. lxxviii. 72. and Philo tells us οἱ ὁ ποιμαίνοντες ἀρχόντων ἢ ἡγεμόνων ἔχοντες δύναμιν, i. e. that the Name of Shepherds implied ruling and governing Power) so they who were sent and commission'd by our Saviour, are styl'd ἐπισκοποι ἐν ποιμνίῳ, the Bishops and Overseers or Shepherds in the Flock to feed the Church of God, Acts xx. 28. and they are elsewhere commanded to feed the Flock of God, and to take the Oversight thereof, 1 Pet. v. 2. And as they are called the Shepherds of Christ's Flock, so they are also the Stewards of his Family, and as such they are constituted by him the Rulers of his Household, to give them their due Portion of Meat in due Season, Luke xii. 42. and elsewhere they are called Governments or Governours, (the Abstract, as it is very usual in Scripture, being put for the Concrete) 1 Cor. xii. 28. and their Authority is said to be given from the Lord, 2 Cor. x. 8. and they are said to be our Rulers in the Lord, i. e. by the Lord's Commission and Authority, 1 Thes. v. 12. and as such they are commanded to rule with Diligence, Rom. xii. 8. from all which it is abundantly evident, that the Church of Christ is a formed Society subsisting of itself, distinct from all other Societies, under a distinct Rule and Government. But this I shall make yet more fully appear, when I come to treat of the several Ministries which the Governours of the Church of Christ are obliged to render him.

I proceed therefore at present to the Second Thing propos'd, which was to inquire into the Nature of this Government, in what Hands Christ hath placed it. Now the two main Rival Forms of Church-Government pretending to Divine Institution, are the Presbyterial and Episcopal; the Presbyterial is that which is seated in an Equality or Parity of Church-Officers; the Episcopal is that which is placed in a superiour Order of Church-Officers, called Bishops; to whom the other Order of Presbyters and Deacons are subject and subordinate: the latter of which, I shall endeavour to prove, is the true Form of Government instituted by our Saviour, and that

First, From the Institution of our Saviour.

Secondly, From the Practice of the Holy Apostles.

Thirdly, From the punctual Conformity of the Primitive Church to both.

Fourthly, From our Saviour's declared Allowance and Approbation of the Primitive Practice in this Matter.

I. That the Government of the Church of Christ is Episcopal, is evident from the Institution of our Saviour, who, in his Life-time instituted two distinct Orders of Ecclesiastical Ministers, the one superiour to the other, viz. that of the Twelve Apostles, and that of the Seventy or Seventy-two Disciples; for that these Two were of distinct Orders, is evident from their being always distinguished from one another, and mentioned apart by different Names and in different Ranks and Classes; for to what purpose should the Scripture mention the Twelve and the Seventy so distinctly as it every where doth, if there were not some Distinction in their Office and Employment; for in Luke vi. 13. we are told, that Christ called unto him his Disciples, and of them he chose Twelve, whom also he named Apostles, and Mark iii. 13, 14. it is said, that he called unto him whom he would, that is of his Disciples, and ordained Twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send 'em forth to preach; and what less can this imply, than that the Twelve were separated by this Call and Ordination of Christ to some distinct Office and Employment from the rest of his Disciples? And that the Office of the Twelve, was superior to that of the Seventy, is evident not only from their being still placed first in the Catalogues of Ecclesiastical Officers, see Eph. iv. 11. 1 Cor. xii. 28. in the latter of which we are told that God constituted in the Church first Apostles, wherein the Primacy is attributed to the Apostolical Office; and not only from the particular Care which Christ took of these Twelve above the rest of his Disciples both in praying for and instructing them, of which there are a great many notorious Instances in the Gospels; but also from hence, that their immediate Successors were for the most Part chosen out of the Seventy; for so Simeon the Son of Cleophas succeeded St. James at Jerusalem; Philip, St. Paul at Caesarea; Clement, St. Peter at Rome; and divers others of the Seventy, according to Dorotheus, Eusebius and others of the Fathers, succeeded the Apostles after their Death in the Government of their several Churches; and Matthias, who, as Eusebius, Epiphanius and S. Jerome affirm, was one of the Seventy that was chosen and ordained by the other Apostles to succeed Judas in the Apostolate, Acts i. 26. from whence it is evident, that the Apostles were superior to the Seventy, otherwise it would have been no Advancement to the Seventy to succeed 'em; for all that Superiority which they acquired by their Succession, must necessarily be inherent in the Apostles before they succeeded 'em; else how can they be said to succeed 'em in it? And if we suppose 'em to be equal with the Apostles in Office before they succeeded 'em, it is Nonsense to say, they succeeded 'em; for how can a Man be said to succeed another in any Office, who is actually vested with the same Office, before he succeeds him; if therefore the Seventy received no more Power after the Apostles, than they had under 'em, they were as much Apostles before they succeeded 'em, as after; but if they did receive more Power, then the Apostles to whom they succeeded had more Power than they before they received it, and consequently were their Superiors; because a Man can receive no more Power by succeeding another in any Office, than he to whom he succeeds had before, by virtue of the same Office. By all which it is most evident, that by the Institution of our Saviour, the Apostles were superior to the Seventy, and yet it is as evident that the Seventy were Ecclesiastical Ministers, as well as they; for in Luke x. 1. we are told, that after these Things the Lord appointed other Seventy also, and sent 'em two and two before his Face, that is, to preach his Gospel; and that by this Mission of his they were authorized to be the Ministers of Religion, is evident from what he tells 'em, verse 16. He that heareth you heareth me, and he that despiseth you despiseth me, and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me; from whence it is plain, that they were his authorized Ministers, even as he was God's; because as the despising of him was a despising of God, by whom he was sent; so the despising of them was a despising of Christ, by whom they were sent; and accordingly by virtue of this Mission we find 'em acting as authorized Ministers of the Gospel; for so Ananias, who was one of 'em, baptized Saul, Acts ix. 18. and Philip, who was another, preached and baptized at Samaria, Acts viii. 5.

So that here are plainly two Sorts of Ecclesiastical Officers, the one superior to the other, of our Saviour's own Institution and Appointment; and therefore if his Institution be still valid, there must still be a Superiority and Subordination between the Officers and Ministers of his Church, and consequently the Government thereof must still be Episcopal, i. e. by some superior Officers presiding and super-intending over other inferior ones. I know it is objected that this Superiority of the Apostles over the Seventy was only in Office, but not in Power

Upon this Account therefore St. James is called an Apostle in Scripture ; because by being ordained by the Apostles Bishop of Jerusalem, he had the Apostolick Power and Authority conferr'd on him ; for since it is apparent he was none of the Twelve, to whom the Apostleship was at first confined, he could no otherwise become an Apostle, than by deriving the Apostleship from some of the Twelve ; and therefore since that Apostleship which he derived from the Twelve was only Episcopal Superiority over the Church of Jerusalem, it hence necessarily follows, that the Episcopacy was the Apostleship derived and communicated from the primitive Apostles.

The second Instance of the Apostles communicating their apostolick Superiority to others, is Epaphroditus, who, in Phil. ii. 25. is styled the Apostle of the Philippians : But I suppose it necessary to send to you Epaphroditus, my Brother and Companion in Labour, and Fellow-Soldier, ὑμῶν ὁ Ἀπόστολος, but your Apostle ; for so St. Jerome Com. Gal. i. 19. Paulatim tempore procedente & alii ab his quos Dominus elegerat ordinati sunt Apostoli, sicut ille ad Philippenfes sermo declarat, dicens, Necessarium existimaui Epaphroditum, &c. i. e. by degrees, in process of Time, others were ordained Apostles, by those whom our Lord had chosen, as that Passage to the Philippians shews, I thought it necessary to send unto you Epaphroditus your Apostle. And Theodoret upon the Place gives this Reason why he is here called the Apostle of the Philippians ; τὴν ἐπισκοπικὴν οἰκονομίαν ἐπετίθετο, ἔχων ἐπισκοπικὴν προσηγορίαν, i. e. he was intrusted with Episcopal Government, as being their Bishop : So that here you see Epaphroditus is made an Apostle by the Apostles, and his Apostleship consists in being made Bishop of Philippi.

A third Instance is that of Titus, and some others with him, 2 Cor. viii. 23. Whether any do inquire of Titus, he is my Partner and Fellow-helper concerning you : or our Brethren be inquired of, they are Ἀπόστολοι ἐκκλησιῶν, the Apostles of the Churches, and the Glory of Christ ; where it is plain, they are not called the Apostles of the Churches, merely as they were the Messengers of the Liberality of the Churches of Macedonia ; for it was not those Churches, but St. Paul that sent them, ver. 22. and therefore since they were not Apostles in relation to those Churches whose Liberality they carried, it must be in relation to some particular Churches over which they had Apostolical Authority ; and that Titus had this Authority over the Church of Crete, is evident both from St. Paul's Epistle to him, and from primitive Antiquity : As for St. Paul's Epistle, there are sundry Passages in it, which plainly speak him to be vested with Apostolical Superiority over that Church ; so chap. i. ver. 5. For this Cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldst set Things in order that are wanting, and ordain Elders in every City as I have appointed thee. For in the first Place, St. Paul here gives him the supreme Judgment of Things that were wanting, with an absolute Power to reform and correct them ; which is a plain Demonstration of his Superiority in that Church. Secondly, He authorizes him to ordain Elders in every City, and whether these Elders were Bishops or Presbyters is of very little Consequence as to the present Debate, for first, it is of undoubted Certainty, that there were Presbyters in the Church of Crete, before Titus was left there by the Apostle ; and secondly, it is as evident, that those Presbyters had no Power to ordain Elders in every City, as Titus had ; for if they had, what need St. Paul to have left Titus there for that Purpose ? What need he have left Titus there with a new Power to do that which the Presbyters before him had sufficient Power to do ? For if the Presbyters had before the Power of Ordination in them, this new Power of Titus's would have been not only in vain, but mischievous ; it would have look'd like an Invasion of the Power of the Presbyters, for St. Paul to restrain Ordination to Titus, if before him it had been common to the whole Presbytery ; and upon that Account have rather proved an occasion of Strife and Contention, than an expedient of Peace and good Order. From hence therefore it is evident, that Titus had a Power in the Church of Crete which the Presbyters there before him had not ; and this Power of his extended not only to the Establishment of good Order and the Ordaining of Elders, but also to rebuking with all Authority ;

Authority, i. e. correcting obstinate Offenders with the Spiritual Rod of Excommunication, Chap. ii. ver. 15. and taking Cognizance of heretical Pravity, so as first to admonish Hereticks, and in Case of Pertinacy to reject them from the Communion of the Church, Chap. iii. ver. 10. from all which it is evident, that this Apostolate of Titus, consisted in his Ecclesiastical Superiority, which was the very same in the Church of Crete, that the first Apostles themselves had in the several Churches that were planted by them. And accordingly he is declared, by the concurrent Testimony of all Antiquity, to be the first Bishop of that Church; so Euseb. Lib. 3. cap. 4. affirms him, ὁ ὅτι Κρήτης ἐκκλησιῶν ἐπισκοπῶν εἰληχέναι, to have received Episcopal Authority over the Churches of Crete. So also Theodoret, in Argum. Ep. ad Tit. tells us, that he was ordained by St. Paul Bishop of Crete, and so also St. Chrysostom, St. Jerom, and St. Ambrose, and several others of the Fathers and Ecclesiastical Writers. This Episcopal Authority therefore which St. Paul gave Titus over the Church of Crete, is another plain Instance of the Apostles making Apostles, or deriving to others their Apostolick Power and Superiority over particular Churches.

The Fourth and last Instance I shall give, is that of Timothy, who, as it appears by St. Paul's Epistles to him, had Episcopal Authority over the Church of Ephesus; and this not only over the Laity to command and teach them, 1 Tim. iv. 11. to receive Widows into the Church's Service, or reject and refuse them, 1 Tim. v. 4, 9, 16. and to oblige the Women to go modestly in their Apparel, and keep Silence in the Church, 1 Tim. ii. 11, 12. but also over the Clergy, to take care that suitable Provision should be made for them, 1 Tim. v. 17. that none should be admitted a Deacon till after competent Trial, nor ordained an Elder, till after he had well acquitted himself in the Deaconship, 1 Tim. iii. 10, 13. to exercise Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction over them, to receive Accusations against them, and if he found them guilty to put them to open Shame, 1 Tim. v. 19, 20. and St. Paul charges him to exercise this his Jurisdiction, without preferring one before another, and without partiality, ibid. ver. 21. which if he had no Jurisdiction over them, had been very impertinent; and as he had Jurisdiction over the Clergy concredited to him, so had he also the Authority of ordaining them; for the due Exercise of which, St. Paul gives him that necessary Rule, 1 Tim. v. 22. Lay Hands suddenly on no Man, neither be partaker of other Mens Sins. And that this Authority of his in the Ephesian Church, over both the Laity and Clergy, was given him by St. Paul for a standing Form of Government there, is evident from hence, because it was conferred on him after the Presbytery was formed and settled in that Church; for in planting and cultivating this large and populous Church, which extended it self over all the Proconsular Asia, St. Paul had laboured for three Years together with incredible Diligence; which is a much longer Time than he spent in any other Church; and therefore by this Time to be sure he had not only constituted a Presbytery in it, as he did in all other Churches, Acts xiv. 23. but also reduced it to much greater Perfection than any other, that so in the Constitution of it, it might be a Pattern to all other Churches; and if so, then to be sure the Government which he had now at last established in it, was such as he intended should continue, viz. by a single Person presiding over both Clergy and Laity. And that de facto it was so, we have not only the Authority of St. Paul's Epistles to Timothy, but also the concurrent Testimony of all Ecclesiastical Antiquity; for so Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. iii. cap. 4. tells us, he was the first Bishop of the Province or Diocese of Ephesus, and the anonymous Author of his Life in Photius; that he was the first that acted as Bishop in Ephesus, and that he was, ordained and enthroned Bishop of the Metropolis of Ephesus, by the great St. Paul; and in the Council of Chalcedon Twenty-seven Bishops are said to have succeeded in that Chair from Timothy; who was the first; and St. Chrysostom, Hom. 15. in 1 Tim. v. 19. tells us, that it is manifest, Timothy was intrusted with a Church, or rather with a whole Nation, viz. that of Asia, upon which account he is styled by Theodoret, 1 Tim. iii. 1. Ἀσιανῶν Ἀπόστολος Τιμόθεος, Timothy Timothy the Apostle of the Asiatiques, and to name no more of the great Numbers of Authorities that might be cited in the Apostolick Constitutions we are expressly told, that he was ordained Bishop of Ephesus by St. Paul. This therefore is another evident Instance of the Apostles deriving down their Apostolick Authority. Other Instances might be given, but these are sufficient to shew, that the Apostles did not look upon our Saviour's Institution of a superiour Order of Ecclesiastical Officers, as a temporary thing that was to expire with them, but as a standing Model of Ecclesiastical Government, since they derived to others that Superiority over the Churches of Christ, which he communicated to them. For from all these Instances it is most evident, both that the Apostolical Office did not expire with the Twelve, but was transferred by them to others, and that that which is now called the Episcopacy, was nothing else but the Apostolical Office derived from the Apostles to their Successors; for in the Primitive Language of the Church, Bishops are generally styled Apostles; for which no other Reason can be assigned, but that they succeeded in the Apostolical Superiority. Thus, as hath been shewn before, St. James, Epaphroditus, Titus, and Timothy are styled Apostles in Scripture, and by the Primitive Writers; Clemens Bishop of Rome, who was a Disciple of the Apostles, is called Ἀπόστολος Κλήμης, i. e. Clemens the Apostle, vide Clem. Alex. Strom. Lib. iv. and Ignatius Bishop of Antioch, Ἀπόστολος καὶ Ἐπίσκοπος, Apostle and Bishop by St. Chrysostom; and Thaddæus, who was sent by St. Thomas to the Prince of Edessa, Ἀπίστολος Θαδδαῖος, by Eusebius, and so are also St. Mark and St. Luke by Epiphanius; and Theodoret lays it down for a general Rule, τὰς ἡ νῦν καλεσμένους ἐπισκόπους, Ἀποστόλους ὠνόμαζεν. τὴν ἡ χρέων περιέειναι τὸ μὲν τὸ Ἀποστόλης ὄνομα τοῖς ἀληθῶς Ἀποστόλοις κατέλιπον, τὴν ἡ Ἐπισκοπῆς προσηγορίαν τοῖς πάλαι καλεσμένοις Ἀποστόλοις ἐπέθεσαν, i. e. those whom we now call Bishops, were anciently call'd Apostles; but in process of Time the Name of Apostle was left to them who were more strictly Apostles, (viz. the Twelve) and the Name of Bishop was restrained to those who were anciently called Apostles. If therefore the Practice of the Apostles, proceeding upon the express Institution of our Saviour, be sufficient to found a Divine Right, we have this you see to plead for a Superiority and Subordination of Ecclesiastical Offices; since the Apostles did not only ordain Presbyters and Deacons in the several Churches they planted, but also Apostles or Bishops to preside over them; and if their Ordaining of Presbyters be an Argument of the perpetuity of the Office of a Presbyter (as the Presbyterians themselves contend it is) why should not their Ordaining Bishops also be as good an Argument of the perpetuity of the Office of a Bishop? If either be perpetual, why not both? if not both, why either? And how can we argue a perpetual Power of Ordination in the Church, from the Ordination of Timothy and Titus, for instance, (as the Presbyterians do, vide Jus Divin. p. 159, 167.) if the Office they were ordained to were not perpetual; and if it were perpetual, then so is Episcopacy, which is in nothing different from that which they exercised in their Churches.

III. That the true Government of the Church is Episcopal, is evident also from the Universal Conformity of the Primitive Church thereunto. It is objected by the Adversaries of the Episcopal Government, that though our Saviour indeed instituted a superiour Order of Church Officers, viz. his Twelve Apostles to preside over the rest, and govern his Church; yet this was an extraordinary Commission which he never intended they should derive down to the Church as a perpetual Model of Government, but was limited to the Persons of the Apostles, and was to expire with them. Now that it was not limited to the Persons of the Apostles is evident, since as it hath been shewn, before, the Apostles derived it to others; which they could not have done without violating their Trust, and exceeding the Bounds of their Commission, had it been appropriated to their Persons; so that it must be allowed either that they proceeded irregularly in transferring their Superiority to others; or that their Commission did impower them to transfer it; and therefore if it appear not only that they might transfer it to some for the Government of some Churches,

by

by virtue of their Commission (of which the above-cited Instances are a full Demonstration) but also that they universally transferred it to others for the Government of all other Churches, then it is certain that either they mistook the Intent of our Saviour's Commission, or the Intent of it was to empower them to transfer it universally as a standing and perpetual Form of Ecclesiastical Government; in short, if they understood the Intendment of their own Commission (as to be sure they did, being guided by the Spirit into all Truth) to be sure they would never have communicated their Apostolick Superiority to any, had it not been our Saviour's Intention, when he commissioned them, to authorize them so to do; and for the same reason we may be sure, that so far forth as they did communicate it, it was our Saviour's Intention that they should, now, as was shewn before; to some they did communicate it for the Government of some Churches, as to Timothy and Titus for instance, for the Government of the Churches of Ephesus and Crete; from whence it is evident that it was our Saviour's Intention, that they should communicate it to some; and for the same reason if it be made appear, that they did communicate it universally for the Government of all other Churches, it will necessarily follow, that it was our Saviour's Intention they should communicate it as an universal Form of Church-Government. Now whether they did communicate it universally or no, is a Question about Matter of Fact, and as such is decidable, only by the Testimony of the most competent Witnesses; and the most competent Witness, in this Case, is the Christian Church in the Ages next succeeding the Apostles, which Church attests with one universal Consent, the universal Derivation of a superior Order of Ecclesiastick Officers from the Apostles, to preside over the Churches of Christ. And some Christian Writers we have who were living in the very Days of the Apostles, and were their immediate Scholars and Disciples; others again, who lived in their Days, and were their Disciples, who lived in the Apostles; and others who immediately succeeded these; from all which we have ample Testimonies of the continued Succession of this superior Order, even from the Apostles to whom our Saviour first delivered it. Out of all which I shall only produce some few Instances out of an infinite Number that might be given. Of the first sort are St. Clement Bishop of Rome, and St. Ignatius Bishop of Antioch. St. Clement, who as Irenaeus tells us, saw the Apostles, and conversed familiarly with them, makes mention in his Epistle to the Corinthians of Three Orders of Ecclesiastical Officers in his Time, whom he calls the High Priests, the Priests and the Levites, which Words can be no otherwise understood than of the Bishop, Presbyter, and the Deacons: St. Ignatius, who was the Disciple of St. Peter, and in his Life-time Bishop of Antioch, is so full and express in all those Six Epistles he wrote on the Way to his Martyrdom, for the Derivation of this superior Order from the Apostles, that the Adversaries of this Order have no other way to evade him but by condemning those Epistles for Counterfeits; from which injurious Sentence they have of late been so triumphantly vindicated by a learned Pen of our own, that I dare say no Man of Learning for the future will so far expose the Reputation of his Understanding and Modesty, as to call them in Question again. Now in all these Epistles the holy Martyr not only distinguishes the Clergy into Bishops, Presbyters and Deacons, but strictly enjoins the two latter, as well as the Laicks to be dutiful and obedient to the former, and particularly in his Epistle to the Trallians, What is the Bishop, saith he, but he that hath all Authority and Power? what is the Presbytery, but a sacred Constitution of Counsellors and Assessors to the Bishop? what are the Deacons, but Imitators of Christ, and Ministers to the Bishop, as he was to the Father? And as he every where enjoins Obedience to the Bishops as to the supreme Order in the Church of Christ, so in the Beginning of his Epistle to the Philadelphians, he tells them, that so many as belong to Christ are united to the Bishop, and that so many as depart from him and his Communion, and associate themselves with the accursed, shall be cut off with them. And in his Epistle to the Magnesians, he tells them, that it highly became them to obey their

Bishop,

Bishop, and not to contradict him in any thing; for it is a terrible thing to contradict him, because in so doing, you do not so much despise him who is visible, as the invisible God, who will not be despised; for his Promotion is not from Men, but from God. And several of his cotemporary Bishops he mentions by Name, viz. Onesimus Bishop of the Ephesians, Polycarp of the Smyrneans, Polybius of the Trallians, and Damas of the Magnesians; and still as he mentions them, he highly commends the Presbyters and Deacons for their Obedience to them. So in the Beginning of his Epistle to the Magnesians, having been so happy as to see you by your worthy Bishop Damas, and your worthy Presbyters, viz. Bassus and Apollinus, and Zotion your Deacon, whom I cannot but commend for his Obedience to the Bishop and the Presbytery — you ought not to contemn the Youth of your Bishop, but to pay him all Veneration (as I know your holy Presbyters do) according to the Appointment of God the Father. And in his Epistle to the Ephesians, Let us be careful, saith he, that we do not oppose the Bishop, as we would be obedient to God; and if any Man observe the Silence of his Bishop, let him reverence him so much the more; for every one that the Master of the Family appoints to be his Steward, we ought to receive him as the Master himself, and therefore it is evident we ought to respect the Bishop as our Lord himself: From whence I infer first, that at the writing of these Epistles, which was not above eight or nine Years after the Decease of St. John, there were Bishops every where constituted over the Churches of Christ; for he not only mentions several Churches that had Bishops actually presiding over them, but declares Bishops to be of Divine Ordination, and that they were to be obeyed, καὶ γνώμῃ θεῶν πατρὸς, according to the Appointment of God the Father, and εἰ πρὸς ἄνθρωπον, ἀλλὰ πρὸς θεὸν ἔχει τὴν ἀναφορὰν, that they had their Promotion, not from Men, but from God; and not only so, but in his Epistle to the Trallians, he bids them obey their Bishops, as Christ and his Apostles had commanded them; in which he necessarily supposes Bishops to be instituted by Christ and his Apostles; and then he goes on, He who is within the Altar, that is, within the Communion of the Church, is clean, ὁ δὲ ἐκτός ὢν, ἕως ἔσιν ὁ χωρὶς τοῦ Ἐπισκόπου καὶ τῶν Πρεσβυτέρων καὶ τῶν Διακόνων τι πρᾶσσων, i. e. He is without the Altar, who does any Thing without the Bishop and Presbyters, and Deacons; and if any Christian acting without the Bishop, &c. was without the Communion of the Church, then to be sure no Community of Christians that did so could be esteemed a Part or Member of the Church; and therefore since according to the Doctrine of this primitive Age, Bishops were a divine Ordinance, and were looked upon as necessary to the very Constitution of Churches; we may from hence justly conclude, that there were then no Churches without them. And secondly, we may from hence also infer, that since there were Bishops in this early Age presiding over the Churches of Christ, several of them at least received their Episcopal Orders immediately from the Hands of the Apostles: For at the Time when these Epistles were written, Ignatius himself had been above forty Years Bishop of Antioch, at which Time sundry of the Apostles were living; and therefore considering the singular Eminence of the Church of Antioch, whereof he was Bishop, as being immediately planted by St. Peter and St. Paul, and that wherein the Disciples of Jesus first received the Name of Christians; and considering also that it was the constant Practice of the Apostles to ordain Elders in all the Churches they planted, it is highly probable that he received his Ordination immediately from their Hands; and so St. Chrysostom, Tom. 5. Edit. Savil. p. 499. expressly tells us, that he did not so much admire Ignatius, for that he was accounted worthy of so great a Dignity, ἀλλ' ὅτι καὶ πρὸς ἁγίων ἐκείνων τὴν δέχνην ταύτῃ ἐνεχειρίσθη καὶ αἱ τῶν μακαρίων Ἀποστόλων χεῖρες τὴν ἱερεῖαν ἐκείνης ἤψαντ' κεφαλῆς, i. e. but because he obtained his Dignity from those holy Men, and the sacred Hands of the blessed Apostles had been laid upon his Head. And the same may be said of Polycarp Bishop of Smyrna, of whom Ignatius makes honourable mention; and indeed it is not to be imagined that the Christian Churches would ever have so universally admitted of Bishops, as it is apparent they did in Ignatius's Time, when the Apostles were living, had had not some of them at least derived their Authority from the Apostles immediately; and considering how much St. John, who survived the Apostles, was revered to the last through all the Christian Churches, what likelihood is there that those very Churches should so far condemn both him and them, even whilst they were living among them, as to admit of a new Order of Men without their Authority to oversee and govern them? But that de Facto the Apostles did with their own Hands ordain several Bishops to preside over several Churches, is most certain, if any Credit may be given to Ecclesiastical History, which assures us, that they ordained Dionysius the Areopagite Bishop of Athens, Caius of Thessalonica, Archippus of Colosse, Onesimus of Ephesus, Antipas of Pergamus, Euphroditus of Philippi, Crescens of the Gauls, Erastus of Macedonia, Trophimus of Arles, Jason of Tarsus, Titus of Corinth, Onesiphorus of Colophon, Quartus of Berytus, Paul the Proconsul of Narbona. Vide Bishop Taylor of Episcopacy, Sect. 18. But then thirdly and lastly, from hence I also infer, that the Bishops of this Age were look'd upon as a superiour Order to all other Ecclesiastical Officers; for Ignatius not only enjoins the Presbyters and Deacons to obey their Bishops, but also presses them thereunto by the Command of Christ; and if by Christ's Command they were to obey their Bishops, then by Christ's Institution their Bishops were their Superiours. Thus much therefore we are assured of by the Testimony of Ignatius, that in the Apostolick Age Bishops were universally admitted in the Churches of Christ, that they derived their Authority from the Hands of the Apostles, and that by virtue of that Authority they were superiour to all other Ecclesiastical Officers; and this is all we contend for.

And now let us proceed to the Testimony of the Writers of the next Age, who conversed with those that were Conversant with the Apostles, of which number are Justin Martyr, Hegeippus, Dionysius Bishop of Corinth, Irenæus, and Clemens Alexandrinus. The first of which was converted to Christianity about the Year of our Lord 133. which is not above twenty five Years after the Death of St. John. This Writer in his Apology for Christianity to the Emperor Antoninus, giving an Account of the Manner of their publick Worship, makes mention of a πρῶτος, i. e. a President, or presiding Ecclesiastick in the Mother Church, who did there consecrate the Bread and Wine in the Sacrament, and give it to the Deacons to distribute it to such as were present, and carry it to such as were absent, and who did receive the Charities of the People, and dispose of and manage the Stock of the Church. Now that πρῶτος was the Bishop's Title is evident, for so Dionysius Bishop of Corinth, who was Justin Martyr's Cotemporary, uses the Word πρῶτος and ἐπίσκοπος, promiscuously, styling Publius Bishop of Athens, πρῶτος, or President, and Quadratus his Successor ἐπίσκοπος, or Bishop, vide Euseb. lib. 4. cap. 23. Next after him we have the Testimony of Hegeippus, who, as St. Jerome, de Script. Eccles. tells us, lived very near to the Apostolick Age; he wrote five Books of Commentaries, some Fragments of which are preserved in Eusebius his History, in which he not only makes mention of several Bishops with whom he conversed in his Journey from Judæa to Rome, and of Primus Bishop of Corinth by Name, and afterwards of Anicetus, Soter, and Eleutherius, Bishops of Rome successively; but also tells us, that after James the Just, who was the first Bishop of Jerusalem, had suffered a Martyrdom, Simeon Cleopha was made Bishop of that Church, because he was of the Kindred of our Lord, vide Euseb. lib. 4. cap. 22. Not long after him Dionysius Bishop of Corinth, makes mention in several Epistles of several Bishops by Name, and particularly of Publius and Quadratus, successive Bishops of Athens, of Dionysius the Areopagite the first Bishop of that Church, of Philip Bishop of Gortyna in Crete, of Palma Bishop of Amastris in Pontus, of Binytus Bishop of the Gnostians, and of Soter Bishop of Rome, vide Euseb. lib. 4. cap. 23. About the same Time lived Irenæus Bishop of Lyons, who, as himself tells us in his Epistle to Florinus, had often seen Polycarp the Disciple of St. John, and did very well remember his Person and Behaviour, when he discoursed to the Multitude; the intimate Conversation he had with St. John, and the rest of the Apostles who had seen our Lord. And from him we have this express Testimony concerning the Matter in Debate, We can reckon up those who were ordained Bishops by the Apostles in the Churches, who they were that succeeded them even down to our Times — for the Apostles would have them to be in all Things perfect and unreprouable, whom they left to be their Successors, and to whom they delivered their Apostolick Authority, And then he goes on, and gives us a Catalogue of eleven Bishops of Rome, by Name, beginning from Linus, to whom he tells us St. Peter and St. Paul, Episcopatum administrandæ Ecclesiæ tradiderunt, i. e. delivered the Episcopal Power of governing that Church, and ending with Eleutherius, who was the Twelfth, and did then actually preside in the Episcopal Chair. And that by Bishops in this Age, was meant such as presided over Presbyters as well as Laicks, is evident by the Distribution Clemens Alexandrinus makes, who was Irenæus his Cotemporary, between the προκρίται Ἐπισκόπων, Πρεσβυτέρων ἡ Διαιόνων, Strom. 6. i. e. the Processes of Bishops, Presbyters, and Deacons, and a little before, speaking of the Dignity of the Presbytery, he tells us, καὶ ἐν αὐτῷ ὅτι καὶ πρῶτον καθεδρία μὴ τιμηθῇ. — i. e. that it was not honoured with the first Seat, or placed in the first Class of the Ecclesiastick Orders; which plainly shews, that then there was an Order above the Presbytery, viz. the Bishops, whom presently after he mentions as the first Order of Ecclesiasticks. And that Passage which Eusebius quotes from him out of his Book, Τίς ὁ σωζόμενος πλάσιον, lately published, is a plain Argument, that in his Time Bishops were look'd on as a distinct Order from the rest of the Clergy; for he tells us, that when St. John returned from Patmos to Ephesus, he visited the neighbouring Provinces, ὅπως μὲν Ἐπισκόπους καλᾶσιν. ὅπως δὲ κλήρω ἑνᾷ τινα κληρώσων τῷ ὑπὸ τοῦ πνεύματος σηματοδοτήσων, i. e. partly that he might ordain Bishops, and partly that he might set apart such for the Clergy as were pointed out to him by the Holy Spirit; by which it is evident, that in Clement's Time at least, and, if he be not mistaken, in St. John's too, the Bishops were a distinct Order from the rest of the Clergy, viz. the Presbyters and Deacons. Thus both in the Apostolick Age, and that succeeding it, we have abundant Testimony of the Derivation of the Superiority of the Apostolick Order from the Apostles to the Bishops of the Churches of Christ.

And then for the next Age we have the concurrent Testimonies of Tertullian, Origen, and St. Cyprian, not only of the Continuance of this Apostolick Superiority in the Church, but also of the Derivation of it from the Apostles themselves; but we need not cite their Words, it being granted by the most learned Advocates of the Presbyterian Government, that for several Years before these Fathers, viz. about the Year of our Lord 140. the Episcopacy was every where received in the Church; for they tell us, that though the Apostles exercised a Superiority over the other Ecclesiastical Orders, yet they left none behind to succeed them in that Power; but the Church was every where governed by a Common Council of Presbyters: But this Form of Government being found inconvenient, as giving too much Occasion for Schisms and Divisions, it was at last universally agreed upon, that one Presbyter should be chosen out to preside over all the rest; and this, say they, was the Beginning of the Episcopacy; for which they cite that famous Passage of St. Jerom, Antequam Diaboli instinctu, &c. i. e. Before such Time as through the Instinct of the Devil, Divisions in Religion began, and it was said among the People, I am of Paul, I am of Apollo, and I of Cephas, the Churches were governed by Common Councils of Presbyters; but afterwards every Presbyter reckoning such as he baptized, to be his and not Christ's, it was decreed over all the World, that one from among the Presbyters should be chosen and set over all the rest, to whom should belong all the Care of the Churches, that so the Seeds of Schisms might be destroyed; which universal Decree, as they guess, was made about the Year 140. Now not to dispute with them the Sense of this Passage, but allowing it to bear their Sense I shall only desire the Reader to consider,

First, That it is the Testimony of one who lived long after the afore-cited Witnesses, and so far less capable of attesting so early a Matter of Fact; for some of the Witnesses above-cited were such as lived in the Days of the Apostles; others, such as lived in their Days who lived in the Days of the Apostles, and certainly these were much more competent Witnesses of what was done in the Apostles Days than St. Jerome, who was not born till about the Year 330. almost one hundred Years after Origen the latest, and three hundred Years after Clemens the earliest of the above-cited Witnesses; and certainly to prefer the Authority of one single Witness, who lived so long after the Matter of Fact, to the unanimous Attestation of so many early Witnesses, is both immodest and irrational.

II. It is also to be considered, that St. Jerome was a Witness in his own Cause, in which Case Men of his Warmth and Passion are too apt to exceed the Limits of Truth; for the Design of that Passage was to curb the Insolence of some pragmatical Deacons, who would needs advance themselves above the Presbyters, which St. Jerome, being a Presbyter himself, takes in high Disdain, and as the best of Men are too prone to do, when their own Concerns are at stake, bends the stick too much t'other Way, and depresses the Deacons too low, and advances the Presbyters too high. For,

III. In other Places, where he is not biassed by Partiality to his own Order, he talks at a quite different Rate; so in Dial. advers. Luciferian. Dost thou ask why one that is not baptized by the Bishop doth not receive the Holy Ghost? Why it proceeds from hence, that the Holy Ghost descended on the Apostles. Where it is plain he places the Bishops in the same Rank with the Apostles, so also in Ep. 1. ad Heliodor. speaking of the Bishops of his Time, they stand, saith he, in the Place of St. Paul, and hold the Place of St. Peter, and in Psal. xlv. 16. Now because the Apostles are gone from the World, thou hast instead of these their Sons the Bishops, and these are thy Fathers, because thou art governed by 'em: And Ep. ad Nepot. What Aaron and his Sons were, that we know the Bishops and the Presbyters are. And therefore, as Aaron by divine Right was superiour to his Sons the Priests, so is the Bishop above his Presbyters; all which are as plain Contradictions to that famous Passage of his (understanding it as the Presbyterians do) as one Proposition can be to another: and whether is a Man more to be credited when he speaks without Bias or Partiality, or when he speaks in his own Cause, and under the Influence of his own Interest?

IV. It is further to be considered, that the Decree of which St. Jerome here speaks, by which the Government of the Church was translated from a Common Council of Presbyters to a single Bishop, must according to his own Words be Apostolick, and consequently much earlier than the Presbyterians will allow it; for it was made at that Time when it was said among the People, I am of Paul, and I am of Apollos, and I of Cephas; and this, as St. Paul tells us, was said in his Time, and therefore this Decree must be made in his Time, and that St. Jerome did mean so, we are elsewhere assured from his own Words; for so in his Book, de Eccles. Script. he tells us, that immediately after the Ascension of our Lord, St. James was ordained by the Apostles to be Bishop of Jerusalem, Timothy by St. Paul Bishop of Ephesus, Titus Bishop of Crete, and Polycarp by St. John Bishop of Smyrna. So that either he must here expressly contradict himself, or else the Decree of which he speaks must have been made immediately after the Ascension of our Lord, and consequently be a Decree Apostolick.

V. It is yet farther to be considered, that if any such Decree, of changing the Church Government from Presbyterial to Episcopal, had been made by the Apostles, it is strange we should not find the least mention of it in Scripture; and if it had been made after the Apostles, about the Year 140. it is as strange we should have no mention of it in Ecclesiastick Antiquity; for an universal Change of the Government of the Church, from one kind to another, is a Matter of such vast Moment, that had the Apostles made a Decree concerning it, they would doubtless have been very solicitous to publish it through all the Churches, and to have transmitted down to Posterity some standing Record of it; which yet they were so far from doing, that they have not given us the least Intimation of it in all their Writings: And had it been made afterwards about the Year 140. to be sure all primitive Antiquity would have rung of such a publick and important Alteration: But on the contrary you see both Clemens and Ignatius, who lived before that Period, testify that the Church was not governed in their Time by a Common Council of Presbyters; but by Bishops; Hegesippus, Irenæus, and Dionysius of Corinth, who lived in that Period, are so far from taking Notice of any such Détree of Alteration, that they testify the Government of the Church by an uninterrupted Succession of Bishops, even from the Apostles themselves; and as for Irenæus, who gives us an Account of the Succession of the Roman Bishops from St. Peter down to the Time when he himself was at Rome, it was as easy for him to know who they were that succeeded from St. Peter, as it is for us to know who succeeded from Archbishop Whitgift in the Chair of Canterbury, he being no farther distant from the one than we are from the other. And though through the Ambiguity or Defect of the Records of some Churches, this Succession be not equally clear in all, yet in the most eminent Churches, such as Jerusalem, Rome, Antioch and Alexandria, the Successions are as clear as any Thing in Ecclesiastical History. And is it not much more reasonable to conclude what was the Government of those Churches that are not known, from what we find was the Government of those that are, than to question those Ecclesiastical Records that are preserved, because of the Uncertainty of those that are not? For though we do not find in all Churches an exact Catalogue of all their Bishops; yet we can't produce any one Instance, in any one ancient Church of any other Form of Government than the Episcopal; and therefore we may as well question whether ever there was any such Thing as an ancient Monarchy in the World, because many of the Histories of the Monarchs are defective as to their Names, and the Order of their Succession; as whether there was ever any such Thing as a primitive Episcopacy in the Church, because the Records of several Churches are defective as to the Names and Successions of their Bishops. Since therefore this Story of St. Jerom's universal Decree is not only altogether unattested, but also directly contradictory to the concurrent Testimony of all Antiquity, how can we reasonably look upon it otherwise than as a meer Figment of his own Fancy? Especially considering,

VI. And lastly, How odiously this Conceit of his reflects upon the Wisdom of our Saviour and his Apostles; for the Apostles, devolving the Government of the Church upon Common Councils of Presbyters, was, as he himself tells us, the Occasion of sundry Schisms and Divisions, for the Removal of which, the Church afterwards found it necessary to dissolve those Presbyteries and introduce Episcopacy in their Room; and this Jerome approves as a very wise and prudent Action; For, saith he, the Safety of the Church depends upon the Authority of the High-Priest, or Bishop, to whom if there were not given all supreme Authority, there would be as many Schisms in the Churches as there are Priests. So that according to him, had the Church continued under that Government which the Apostles left in it, it must unavoidably have been torn in Pieces with endless Schisms and Divisions; and if so, either the Apostles were very imprudent in not foreseeing this, or very neglective in not preventing it; so that had not the after-age taken care to supply the Defect of their Conduct, by erecting a wiser Form of Government than they left, the Church had infallibly run to ruin. This is the unavoidable Consequence of St. Jerom's Hypothesis; which therefore I can look upon no otherwise than as a meer Device of his own Brain, snatched up in haste to defend his Order against the Insolence of those factious Deacons, that flew in the Face of the Presbytery.

This therefore being removed, which is the main, and indeed the only considerable Objection against the universal Conformity of the Primitive Church to the Episcopal Government, it remains, that if any Credit may be given either to those Writers that lived in the Apostolick Age, or to those who immediately succeeded them, it is evident from their unanimous Testimonies, that the Episcopacy is nothing else but only the Apostolick Superiority derived from the Hands of the Apostles in a continued Succession from one Generation to another; and to reject their Testimony is not only very unreasonable (there being at least as much reason why we should reject all ancient History) but also of very dangerous Consequence, since 'tis from thence that we derive the very Canon of Scripture, and so we may as well reject it in this Instance as in the other.

IV. And lastly, That the rightful Government of the Church of Christ is Episcopal, is evident also from our Saviour's declared Allowance and Approbation of the primitive Practice in this Matter, viz. in those Seven Epistles which he sent by St. John to the Seven Churches of Asia, all which he directs particularly to the Seven Angels of those Churches, whom he not only styles, the Seven Stars in his own right Hand, or Seven Lights of those Seven Churches, vide Rev. i. 20. and Rev. ii. 1. but in every Epistle particularly owns them for his Angels or Messengers. If therefore we can prove that these Seven Angels were at that time the Seven Bishops that presided over both the Clergy and the Laity of those Seven Churches, they will be an unanswerable Instance of our Saviour's Allowance and Approbation of the Episcopal Order. In order therefore to the clearing this Matter I shall shew,

First, That they were single Persons.

Secondly, That they were Persons of great Authority in those Churches.

Thirdly, That they were the Presidents or Bishops of those Churches.

First, That they were single Persons, is evident, because they are all along mentioned as such; the Angel of the Church of Ephesus, is the singular Number; the Angel of the Church of Smyrna, and so of all the rest; and so every where in the Body of the Epistles they are all along address'd to in the singular Number; I know thy Works and thy Labour; nevertheless I have a few Things against thee; remember whence thou art fallen, repent, and do thy first Works; and the like, in all which our Saviour plainly writes to them as to single Persons: It is true, what he writes to them, he writes not only to them personally, but also to the People under their Government and Inspection; and therefore sometimes he mentions the People plurally; so Chap. iii. ver. 10. The Devil shall cast some of you into Prison; and so ver. 13. and ver. 23. but this is so far from arguing that these Angels were not single Persons, that it argues the quite contrary; since if they had not, what reason can there be assign'd, why our Saviour should not mention them plurally, as well as the People? I know 'tis objected, that the Angel of the Church of Thyatira is mentioned plurally, Chap. ii. ver. 24. But unto you I say, and unto the rest of Thyatira, where by you, it is supposed must be meant the Angel, and by the rest of Thyatira, the People, to which I answer, that in the ancient Greek Manuscripts, and particularly in that of St. James's, α, or and, is left out; and so the Words run thus, but unto you the rest of Thyatira, or to the rest of you at Thyatira, which is set in Opposition to those of Thyatira that had been seduced into the Sect of Jezabel, and therefore cannot be understood of the Angel who is all along mentioned in the singular Number; therefore had he not been a single Person, no Account can be given why he should be mention'd single, and the rest of Thyatira plurally. But then,

Secondly, That these single Persons were of great Authority in those Churches is evident not only by that honourable Title of Angel, that is given them, which plainly shews them to be Persons of Office and Eminence, and not only by our Saviour's directing his Epistles to them, to be communicated by them to their several Churches, but also from that Authority which the Angel of Ephesus exercised there, and which the Angels of Pergamus and Thyatira ought to have exercised, but did not: For as for the Angel of Ephesus, he is commended for trying them which said they were Apostles, and were not, and discovering them to be Liars, which Words plainly denote a juridical Trial and Conviction of some Person or Persons, who pretended to apostolical Authority, but upon Examination amination were found to be Cheats and Impostors; and then as for the Angel of the Church of Pergamus, he is blamed for having in his Church those that held the Doctrine of Balaam, or of the Nicolaitans; which plainly shews, that he had Power to remedy it by casting them out of the Church; for if he had not, how could he have been justly blamed for suffering them? And the same may be said of the Angel of the Church of Thyatira, who is also blamed for suffering the Woman Jezabel, which was not in his Power to prevent, unless we suppose him to have Authority to eject her and her Followers. But then,

Thirdly and lastly, That these single Persons were the Presidents or Bishops of those Churches, is also evident from the most primitive Antiquity; for so in the anonymous *Tra*ct of Timothy's Martyrdom recorded in Biblioth. Pat. n. 244. we are told, that when St. John the Apostle returned from his Exile in Patmos, which was two or three Years after he wrote his Revelations, ὡπὲς δὲ ἐαυτῶν, ἐπὶ τὰ συμπάρων ὁπισκόπων τῶν Ἐφεσίων ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι μητροπόλεως, i. e. that being assisted with the Presence of the Seven Bishops of that Province he assumed to himself the Government of it. Now that these Seven Bishops were the same with those Seven Angels he wrote to in his Revelations is evident, because all those Seven Churches in which those Seven Angels presided, lay within the Circuit of the Lydian or Proconsular Asia, of which Ephesus was the Metropolis; and therefore who else can we so fairly suppose these Seven Bishops to be, by whom he governed the Province of Ephesus, as the Seven Angels of those Seven Churches, which were all of them within that Province? And St. Austin expressly calls the Angel of the Church of Ephesus, the Præpositus Ecclesiæ, i. e. the Governour of the Church, Ep. 162. and speaking of those Seven Angels, he styles them Episcopi sive præpositi Ecclesiarum, the Bishops or Governours of the Churches, Comment. in Revel. So also the Commentaries under the Name of St. Ambrose, referring to these Angels in 1 Cor. c. xi. expressly tells us, that by those Angels he means the Bishops; and that they were so is most indubitably evident of the Angel of the Church of Smyrna in particular, who could be no other than St. Polycarp, who was most certainly made Bishop of Smyrna some Years before the writing these Epistles, and continued Bishop of it a great many Years after; for so Ignatius, who was his Cotemporary, in his Epistle to that Church styles him, Polycarp your Bishop; and earnestly exhorts his Presbyters and Deacons, as well as the Laity, to be subject to him; and Irenæus who personally knew him, hath this Passage concerning him: Πολύκαρπος ὁ ἔμμενος ὑπὸ Ἀποστόλων μαθητευθεὶς, &c. Polycarpus was not only, instructed by the Apostles, and did not only converse with many of those who had seen our Lord, but by the Apostles who were in Asia, was made Bishop of Smyrna, Euseb. Hist. l. iv. c. 15. and in their Encyclical Epistle of his Martyrdom, the whole Church of Smyrna style him Bishop of the Catholick Church of Smyrna, ibid. So also Polycrates, Bishop of Ephesus, who was Thirty-eight Years old when Polycarp suffered, tells us, that he was Bishop and Martyr in Smyrna, Euseb. Hist. l. v. c. 24. and the same is attested by Tertullian, Eusebius and St. Jerom, and indeed by all Ecclesiastick Antiquity: So that 'tis a plain Case, that one of these Angels, to whom St. John writes, was Bishop of the Church whereof he styles him the Angel, and since one was so, to be sure all were so; especially considering that very near, if not at the very time when these Epistles were written, we have certain Accounts that there were Bishops actually presiding in these Seven Churches. So within twelve Years after these Epistles were written, Ignatius, in his Epistle to the Ephesians makes mention of Onesimus their Bishop, whom he exhorts them all, as well Presbyters and Deacons, as Laity to obey. That there was also at the same Time a Bishop in Philadelphia, is abundantly evident from Ignatius his Epistle to that Church, though he doth not name him; and about the same Time Carpus was Bishop of Thyatira, as the ancient Roman Martyrology testifies, and Segasius of Laodicea, vide Euseb. Hist. l. iv. c. 25. And Melito Bishop of Sardis, ibid. and as for the Church of Pergamus, Pergamus, Paræus, in his Commentary on Chap. ii. of the Revelations, proves out of Aretas Cæsariensis, that Antipas, that faithful Martyr, mentioned Rev. ii. 13. was Bishop of it immediately before the Angel of that Church to whom St. John wrote; and that that Angel was one Gaius, who, as he proves out of Clemens, immediately succeeded Antipas in the Episcopal Chair. Since therefore it is apparent that at the writing these Epistles to these Seven Churches there was a Bishop actually presiding in one of them, and that about the same Time there were Bishops presiding also in all the rest, there can be no Colour of Reason to doubt, but that all those Churches had Bishops in them when St. John wrote to them; and if so, to be sure those Bishops being the Governours of those Churches, and having the Charge of them committed to them, were those very Angels whom St. John wrote to, because he all along writes to them as to those who were the Overseers and Governours of their respective Churches; and if those Angels were Bishops, then in them our Saviour expressly allows and approves of the Episcopal Order, since he not only dignifies them with the Name of Angel, but calls them Stars in his own right Hand.

The Sum of all therefore is this, if our Saviour's own Institution, seconded by the Practice of his Apostles upon it, and succeeded by the Conformity of all the Primitive Churches to it, and this Conformity of theirs, authorized by the express Approbation of our Saviour, be a sufficient Argument of the Divine Right of any Form of Church-Government, then must the Episcopal Form, which hath all these Things you see to plead for itself, be of Divine Right and Ordination. Having thus shewn at large what that Ecclesiastical or Spiritual Government is, which Christ hath established in his Church, I proceed, Thirdly and lastly, To shew what are the proper Ministries of this Government in the Kingdom of Christ; and these are of two Sorts: First, such as are common to the Bishops, or Governours of the Church with the inferiour Officers; and secondly, such as are peculiar to the Bishops or Governours. First, such as are common to the Bishops, together with the inferiour Officers of the Church; and these are, 1. To teach the Gospel: 2. To administer the Evangelical Sacraments: 3. To offer up the Publick Prayers and Intercessions of Christian Assemblies.

I. To teach the Gospel, which is the first Ministerial Act mentioned by our Saviour in the Commission which he gave his Apostles, Go teach all Nations, Matth. xxviii. 19. and accordingly the Apostles declare, Acts vi. 2, 4. that preaching the Word was one of the principal Employments appertaining to their Office; but yet it is evident, that it never was restrained to their Office; for not only the Apostles, but the Seventy Disciples also were commissioned to preach the Gospel by our Saviour, Luke x. 9, 10, 11. and even in the Apostles Days, not only they, but Philip also, and Stephen, and Lucius of Cyrene, who were no Apostles, did yet preach the Gospel to the World; and besides the Apostles there were Prophets, Teachers, and Evangelists, that preached the Gospel as well as they. But yet as for the Office of Preaching, it is plain that none were ever admitted to it, but either by immediate Commission from our Saviour, or by Apostolick Ordination, or by an immediate miraculous Unction of the Holy Ghost, by which they were inspired with the Gift of Preaching, and enabled freely and readily, and without any Study of their own to explain, and prove, and apply the Doctrines of the Gospel to their Hearers; and that either in their own or other Languages, as occasion required; which Gift was the same with that which is called in Scripture, the Gift of Utterance; and it being bestowed upon them for the Publick Benefit and Edification of the Church, the very bestowing it, (without any other Ordination) was an immediate Mission from the Holy Ghost; only they who pretended to it, were to be tried by such as had the Gift of discerning of Spirits, vide 1 Cor. xii. 10. compared with 1 Cor. xiv. 29. and if upon that Trial their Pretence was found real, they were own'd and receiv'd without any more ado, as authorized Preachers sent by the Holy Ghost; and it was upon this extraordinary Mission, as it seems very probable, that those extraordinary Offices of Prophets and Evangelists were founded, both which included Authority to preach the Gospel; and therefore upon the Cessation of this extraordinary Mission, those Offices ceased immediately with it, as depending wholly upon it; and from thenceforth none were ever admitted to the Office of Preaching, but by ordinary Mission and Ordination from the Apostolate derived to the Bishops and Governours of the Church. For though there are some very early Instances of learned Lay-Men, that were admitted to preach upon some emergent Occasions, and upon special licence from the Bishop; yet can there no one Instance be produced of any that were admitted to the Office of Preaching, without Episcopal Ordination.

II. Another of the Ministries common to the Bishops with the inferiour Clergy is the Administration of the Evangelical Sacraments; for it was to his Apostles, and in them to their Succeffors, that our Saviour gave the Commission of baptizing all Nations, in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost: and of doing this, (i. e. of consecrating and administering the Holy Eucharist) in Remembrance of me: but yet it is evident, that this Ministry was not so confined to the Apostolick Order, as that none but they were allowed to exercise it; for even in the Apostles Days Philip and Ananias, who were no Apostles, baptized, and St. Peter commanded the Brethren with him, who were no Apostles, neither to baptize those Gentile Converts upon whom the Holy Ghost descended, Acts x. 48. and there is no doubt, but when those Three thousand Souls, Acts ii. were all baptized at one time, there were a great many other Baptizers besides the Apostles; and that Passage of St. Paul, 1 Cor. i. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. where he tells us, that he baptized none in the Church of Corinth, though it were of his own planting, except Crispus, Gaius, and the Household of Stephanus, is a plain Argument, that when the Apostles had converted Men to the Christian Faith, they generally ordered them to be baptized by the inferiour Ministers of the Church that attended them; and then as for the Consecration of the Holy Eucharist, though when any of the Apostles were present, it was doubtless ordinarily performed by them; yet considering how fast Christianity encreased, and how frequently Christians did then partake of this Sacrament, it is not to be supposed that the Apostles could be present in all Places where it was administered, nor consequently that they could consecrate it in every particular Congregation: For though it was a very early Custom for the Bishop to consecrate the Elements in one Congregation, and then send them abroad to be administered in several others; yet this was only upon special Occasions: But ordinarily they were consecrated in the same Places where they were administered; in all which Places, it was impossible either for the Apostles at first, or after them for their Succeffors, the Bishops, to be present at the same Time; and therefore there can be no doubt but the Consecration as well as the Administration, was ordinarily performed by the inferiour Presbyters, in the Absence of the Apostles and Bishops. But it is most certain that none were ever allowed in the Primitive Church to Consecrate the Eucharist, but either a Bishop or a Presbyter. And as for Baptism, because it is in some degree more necessary than the Eucharist, as being the Sign of Admission into the New Covenant, by which we are at first intitled to it, not only Bishops and Presbyters, but in their Absence, or by their Allowance, Deacons also were authorized to administer it; for so even in the Apostles Days Philip the Deacon baptized at Samaria, Acts viii. 12. and afterwards not only Deacons, but Laymen too were allowed to administer it in Case of Necessity, when neither a Deacon, nor Presbyter, nor Bishop could be procured; that so none might be debarred of Admission into the New Covenant that were disposed and qualified to receive it: But the Churches allowing this to Laymen only in Cases of Necessity, is a plain Argument that none had a standing Authority to administer it, but only Persons in Holy Orders. For that Authority which a present Necessity creates, is only present, and ceases with the Necessity that created it.

III. And lastly, Another of the Ministries common to the Bishops with the inferior Clergy, is to offer up the Publick Prayers and Intercessions of Christian Assemblies: For to be sure none can be authorized to perform the Publick Offices of the Church, but only such as are set apart and ordained to be the publick Officers of it. Now Prayer is one of the most solemn Offices of Christian Assemblies; and therefore as in the Jewish Church, none but the High Priests, and Priests and Levites, who were the only publick Ministers of Religion, were authorized to offer up the publick Prayers of the Congregation, vide 2 Chron. xxxix. 27. so in the Christian none but Bishops, Priests and Deacons, who alone are the publick Ministers of Christianity, are authorized to offer up the publick Addresses of Christian Assemblies; it is their peculiar λειτουργίᾳ τῷ κυρίῳ, i. e. to perform the publick Offices to the Lord, Acts xiii. 2. for so the Word λειτουργία, signifies publick Service, and is used to denote those publick Services, (of which one was offering up the Common Prayers of the People) which the Priests in their Turns performed in the Temple, vide Luke i. 23. and hence it is, that the Ministers of the Christian Religion are called λειτουργοὶ, Rom. xv. 16. because it is their proper Business to officiate the publick Services of the Christian Church; and accordingly in Rev. v. 10. the four and twenty Elders, (that is, the holy Bishops of the Church, as appears by their having Crowns of Gold or Mitres on their Heads, in Allusion to the High Priest's Mitre, chap. iv. ver. 4.) are said to have every one of them Harpes and Golden Viols full of Odours which are the Prayers of Saints, referring to the Incense which the Priests were wont to offer in the Sanctuary, which Oblation was a mystical Offering up the Prayers of the People, vide Luke i. 10. which plainly intimates, that as it was one Part of the Office of those Jewish Priests to offer the Incense, and therewithal the Prayers of the People, so is it also of the Publick Ministers of Christianity, to offer up the Prayers of Christian Assemblies. And as in the Jewish Church not only the Priests, but the Levites also communicated with the High Priests in this Ministry of offering up the Prayers of the Congregation, so in the Christian Church, not only the Presbyters, but the Deacons also, always communicated in it with their Bishop. Having thus given an Account of those religious Ministries which are common to the Bishops with the inferiour Officers of the Church, I proceed in the next Place to shew what those Ministries are which are peculiar to the Bishops or Governors of the Church, all which are reducible to four Particulars: 1. To make Laws for the Peace and good Order of the Church. 2. To ordain to Ecclesiastical Offices. 3. To execute that spiritual Jurisdiction which Christ hath established in his Church. 4. To confirm such as have been instructed in Christianity.

I. One peculiar Ministry of the Bishops and Governours of the Church is to make Laws and Canons for the Security and Preservation of the Church's Peace and good Order; and this is implied in the very Essence of Government, which necessarily supposes a Legislative Power within itself, to command and oblige the Subject to do or forbear such Things as it shall judge conducive to the Preservation or Disturbance of their Common-weal, without which Power no Government can be enabled to obtain its end, which is the Good of the Publick. Since therefore the Church, by Christ's own Institution, is a governed Society of Men, we must either suppose its Government to be very lame and defective, which would be to blaspheme the Wisdom of our Saviour, or allow it to have a Legislative Power inherent in it. But that de facto it hath such a Power in it, is evident from the Practice of the Apostles, who, as all agree, had the Reins of Church-Government delivered into their Hands by our Saviour; for so in Acts xv. 6. we are told, that upon Occasion of that famous Controversy about Circumcision, the Apostles and Elders came together to consider of this Matter; where by the Elders, by the Consent of all Antiquity, is meant the Bishops of Judæa, vide Dr. Hammond on Acts xi. Note B. And after mature Debate and Deliberation this is the Result of the Council, it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater Burthen than these necessary Things, Things, ver. 28. so that those necessary Things specified in the next Verse were, it seems, laid upon them as a Burthen, i. e. legally imposed on them as Matter of Duty; for herein it is plain the Apostles exercised a Legislative Power over those Christian Communities they wrote to, viz. in requiring 'em to abstain from some Things which were never prohibited before by any standing Law of Christianity; and as the Apostles and primitive Bishops made Laws by common Consent for the Church in general, so did they also by their own single Authority for particular Churches, to which they were more peculiarly related. Thus St. Paul after he had prescribed some Rules to the Corinthians for their more decent Communication of the Lord's Supper, tells them, that other Things he would set in order when he came among them, 1 Cor. xi. 34. but how could he otherwise do this than by giving them certain Laws and Canons, for the better Regulation of their religious Offices; so also 1 Cor. xvi. 1. the same Apostle makes mention of an Order or Canon, which he gave to the Churches of Galatia, which he enjoins the Church of Corinth also to observe, and in 1 Tim. v. he gives Timothy several Ecclesiastical Rules, to give in Charge to his Church, ver. 7. so also Tit. i. 5. he tells Titus, that for this Cause he left him in Crete, with Apostolick or Episcopal Power; that he might set in order the Things that were wanting, i. e. that by wholesome Laws and Constitutions, he might redress those Disorders, and supply those Defects which the Shortness of St. Paul's Stay there would not permit him to provide for. By all which Instances it is abundantly evident, that the Governours of the Church have a Legislative Power inherent in them both to make Laws by common Consent for the Regulation of the Church in general, and to prescribe the Rules of Decency and Order in their own particular Churches. For what the Apostles and primitive Bishops did, to be sure they had Authority to do, and whatsoever Authority they had, they derived it down to their Successors. And accordingly we find this Ecclesiastick Legislation, was always administred by the Apostles Successors the Bishops, who not only gave Laws both to the Clergy and Laity in their own particular Churches, but also made Laws for the whole Church by common Consent in their holy Councils, wherein during the first four general Councils no Ecclesiastick beneath a Bishop was ever allowed a Suffrage, unless it were by Deputation from his Bishop; and though in making Laws for their own Churches they generally conducted themselves by the Advice and Counsel of their Presbyters, and sometimes also admitted them into their Debates both in their provincial and general Councils; yet this was only in preparing the Matter of their Laws. But that which gave them the Form of Laws was purely the Episcopal Authority and Suffrage; and whatsoever was decreed either by the Bishop in Council with his Presbyters, or by the Bishops in Council among themselves, was always received by the Churches of Christ as authentick Law. It is true, this Legislative Power of the Church (as was shewn before,) extends not so far as to controul the Decrees of the Civil Sovereign, who is next to, and immediately under God in all Causes, and over all Persons supreme, and is no otherwise accountable by the Laws of Christianity, than he was by the Laws of Natural Religion; and therefore as the Civil Sovereign cannot countermand God's Laws, so neither can the Church the Civil Sovereigns: But yet as next to the Laws of God, the Laws of the Civil Sovereign are to be obeyed; so next to the Laws of the Civil Sovereign the Laws of the Church are to be obey'd.

II. Another peculiar Ministry of the Bishops and Governours of the Church, is, to consecrate and ordain to Ecclesiastical Offices. For that those holy Ministries which Christ himself performed while he was on Earth, such as preaching the Gospel, administering the evangelical Sacraments, &c. might be continued in his Church throughout all Generations, he not only himself ordained his twelve Apostles a little before he left the World, to perform those Ministries in his Absence, but in their Ordination transferred on them his own Mission from the Father, deriving upon them the same Authority to ordain others that he had to ordain them; that so they might derive their Mission to others, as he did his to them, through all succeeding Generations; for this is necessarily implied in the Commission he gave them, John xx. 21. As my Father hath sent me, so send I you; that is, I do not only send you with full Authority to act for me in all Things as my Father sent me to act for him; but I also send you with the same Authority to send others, that I now exercise in sending you; for unless this be implied in their Mission, he did not send them as his Father sent him; unless he gave them the same Authority to propagate their Mission to others, that his Father gave him to propagate his Mission to them, how could he say, that he sent them as his Father sent him? Since he must have sent them without that very Authority from his Father, which he then exercised in sending them. Now the Persons whom he sent were the eleven Apostles, as you will see by comparing this of St. John with Luke xxiv. 33, 36. Mark xvi. 14. Matth. xxviii. 16. in all which Places we are expressly told, that it was the Eleven he appeared to when he gave this Commission, and consequently, it must be the Eleven to whom he gave it. This Commission therefore of sending others being originally transferred by our Saviour upon the Apostolick Order, no others could have right to transfer it to others, but only such as were admitted of that Order; none could give it to others, but only those to whom Christ gave it; and therefore since Christ himself gave it to none but Apostles, none but Apostles could derive it; and accordingly we find in Scripture, that all Ecclesiastick Commissions, were either given by the Hands of some of those first Apostles who received their Commission immediately from our Saviour, or else by some of those secondary Apostles, that were admitted into Apostolick Orders by them; which secondary Apostles, as was shewn before, were the same with those whom we now call Bishops; for so in Acts vi. 3, 6. the Seven first Deacons we read of were ordained by the Apostles, the whole Number of the Disciples being present, but the Apostles only appointing and laying their Hands on them, and in Acts xiv. 23. we are told, that Paul and Barnabas, two of the Apostles, ordained Elders in every Church, that is, of Lystra, Iconium, and Antioch; and though these two were ordained Apostles of the Gentiles by certain Prophets and Teachers in the Church of Antioch, Acts xiii. 1, 3. yet there is no doubt but those Prophets and Teachers were such as had received the Apostolick Character, (being ordained by the Apostles Bishops of the Churches of Syria) for otherwise how could they have derived it? For so Judas and Silas are called Prophets, Acts xv. 32. and yet verse 22. they are said to be ἡγούμενοι ἐν τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς, that is, Rulers among the Brethren, or Bishops of Judæa, and afterwards we find that Ordination was confined to such as had been admitted to the Apostolate; for so the Power of laying on of Hands in the Church of Ephesus was committed by St. Paul to Timothy, whom he himself by the laying on of Hands had ordained the Apostle or Bishop of that Church, 2 Tim. v. 22. 1 Tim. i. 6. so also the Power of ordaining in the Church of Crete was by St. Paul committed to Titus, whom he had also ordained the Apostle or Bishop of that Church, Tit. i. 5. For this Cause left I thee in Crete to ordain Elders in every City. Thus all through the whole Scripture-History, we find the Power of Ordination administered by such, and none but such, as were of the Apostolick Order, viz. either by the Prime Apostles, or by the secondary Apostles or Bishops. And if we consult the primitive Antiquities, which to be sure, in Matters of Fact at least, are the best Interpreters of Scripture, we shall always find the Power of giving Orders confined and limited to Bishops, which is so undeniable, that St. Jerom himself, who endeavours his utmost to equalize Presbyters with Bishops, is yet fain to do it with an excepta Ordinatione, Ep. ad Evagr. Quid facit excepta Ordinatione Episcopus quod Presbyter non faciat? What can the Bishop do, except ordaining, that the Presbyter may not do also?

• that

III. Another peculiar Ministry of the Bishops and Governours of the Church, is to execute that Spiritual Jurisdiction which Christ hath established in it, i. e. to cite such as are accused of scandalous Offences before their Tribunals, to inspect and examine the Accusation, and upon sufficient Evidence of the Truth of it, to admonish the Offender of his Fault; and in case he obstinately persist in it, to exclude him from the Communion of the Church, and from all the Benefits of Christianity, till such Time as he gives sufficient Evidence of his Repentance and Amendment, and then to receive him in again. For that Christ hath established such a Jurisdiction in his Church is evident from that Passage, *Matt. xviii. 16, 17, 18, Moreover, if thy Brother shall trespass against thee, go tell him his Fault between him and thee alone; if he shall hear thee, thou hast gain'd thy Brother; but if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the Mouth of two or three Witnesses every Word may be established, i. e. that thou mayst be able, in case he doth not then amend, to produce sufficient Testimony of his Guilt before the Church's Tribunal, to which thou art next to apply thyself; and if he shall neglect to hear them, i. e. to promise Amendment upon their Admonition, take them along with thee and tell it to the Church, that so she may examine the Matter, and upon thy proving his Guilt by sufficient Witness may authoritatively admonish him to amend; but if he neglect to hear the Church, let him be unto thee as an beaten Man and a Publican, i. e. give him over for a desperate Sinner, as one that is to be ejected from the Communion of the Church, and no longer to enjoy the common Benefits of a Christian; for verily I say unto you, that it is to you of the Church, before whom this obstinate Offender is cited and accused, (for now he speaks no longer in the singular Number) Whatsoever ye shall bind on Earth shall be bound in Heaven, and whatsoever ye shall loose on Earth shall be loosed in Heaven, i. e. whomsoever ye shall for just Cause eject from the Communion of the Church into the State of a beaten Man and a Publican, I will certainly exclude out of Heaven, unless he reconcile himself to you by Confession, and promise of Amendment, and if thereupon you pardon him, and receive him into the Church's Communion, I will most certainly pardon him too, if he perform his Promise: For that by binding and loosing upon Earth our Saviour means excluding out of the Church, and receiving in again, is evident from that parallel Passage, Matt. xvi. 19. I will give unto thee the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt bind on Earth shall be bound in Heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt loose on Earth shall be loosed in Heaven; where by the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, is plainly meant the Authority of a Steward to govern his Church or Family; for so Isa. xxii. 21, 22. God promises Eliachim, that he would cloath him with the Robe of Shebna, who was over the Household, ver. 15. i. e. Steward of the King's Family, and that he would commit Shebna's Government into his Hand, &c. and then it follows, And the Key of the House of David will I lay upon his Shoulders, so he shall open and none shall shut; and he shall shut and none shall open; that is in short, I will make him the Governour of the Family, and give him Power to admit or exclude what Servants he pleases; and accordingly by the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, must be meant the Government of the Church; for so Keys denote Authority to govern, vide Rev. iii. 7. and by binding and loosing, the Power of shutting out of, or readmitting into it; and therefore in John xx. 23. this binding and loosing is thus expressed, whose Sins ye remit or loose shall be remitted or loosed, whose Sins ye retain or keep bound shall be retained or kept bound; for though the Words are different from those in St. Matthew, yet they are of the same Import and Signification, and consequently our Saviour's Meaning must be the same here as there, viz. whose Sins you loose from the Penalty of Exclusion from the Church, I also will loose from the Penalty of Exclusion out of Heaven; and whose Sins you keep bound or obliged to that Penalty, I will also keep bound and obliged to this.*

This is the spiritual Jurisdiction which Christ hath established in his Church, to bind or loose, suspend or restore, excommunicate or absolve; and this he hath wholly deposited in the Episcopal Order: For in all the above-cited Places it was only to his Apostles that he derived this Jurisdiction, they alone were the Stewards to whom he committed the Keys and Government of his Family; and it was to them alone that he promised, that they should sit upon twelve Thrones, judging judging the twelve Tribes of Israel; that is, to rule and govern the Spiritual Israel, which is the Christian Church, even as the Phylarchæ, or Chiefs of the Tribes, governed the Twelve Tribes of natural Israel, Matth. xix. 28. and hence in that mystical Representation of the Church by a City descending from Heaven, Rev. xxi. the Wall of it is said to have twelve Foundations, and upon them twelve Names of the twelve Apostles, ver. 14. and those twelve Foundations are compared to twelve precious Stones, to denote their Power and Dignity in the Church, ver. 19, 20. and the Wall being exactly meted is found to be One hundred and forty-four Cubits, that is, twelve times twelve, to denote that these Twelve Apostles had each of them an equal Portion allotted him in the Government and Administration of the Church, ver. 17. This Spiritual Jurisdiction therefore, of governing the Church, and administering the Censures of it, being by our Saviour wholly lodged in the Apostolate, none can justly claim or pretend to it but such as are of the Apostolick Order; and accordingly in the Apostolick Age we find it was always administered either immediately by the Apostles themselves, or by the Bishops of the several Churches to whom they communicated their Order: for thus in the Church of Corinth it was St. Paul who pronounced the Sentence of Excommunication against the Incestuous Person; for I verily, as absent in Body, but present in Spirit, have judged or pronounced Sentence already, as though I were present, concerning him that hath done this Deed, 1 Cor. v. 3. and what he orders them to do, ver. 4, 5. was only to declare and execute his Sentence; and 2 Cor. xiii. 2. he threatens them that heretofore had sinned, that if he came again, he would not spare them; and that by his not sparing them he meant, that he would proceed against them with Ecclesiastical Censure, is evident from verse 1. In the Mouth of two or three Witnesses shall every Word be established; which are the very Words of our Saviour, Matth. xviii. 16. when he instituted the Power of Censuring; and then verse 10. he tells them, that he wrote these Things being absent, lest being present he should use Severity, according to the Power which the Lord had given them to Edification, and not to Destruction; by which it is plain, he means the Power of Excommunicating: and 1 Cor. iv. 21. he threatens to come to them with a Rod; that is, to chastise them with the Censures of the Church; and with this Rod, as he himself tells us, he chastised Hymenæus and Alexander, two stickling Hereticks in the Church of Ephesus, whom he delivered unto Satan, that they might learn not to blaspheme, 1 Tim. i. xx. and as he frequently executed the Censures of the Church in his own Person, so he derived this Spiritual Jurisdiction to Timothy and Titus, whom he ordained Apostles or Bishops of the Church of Ephesus and Crete; for so he orders Timothy, against an Elder receive not an Accusation but before two or three Witnesses; which plainly implies his Authority to examine and try the Causes even of the Elders themselves, when they were accused, and to punish them if he found them guilty; for so it follows, Them that sin rebuke before all, that others also may fear, 1 Tim. v. 19, 20. so also he exhorts Titus to exercise this his Spiritual Jurisdiction; A Man that is an Heretick, after the first and second Admonition, reject, Tit. iii. 10. which plainly implies, that he had an Authority inherent in him, as he was the Apostle or Bishop of Crete, to cite, examine, admonish and censure Persons of erroneous Principles: And the same Authority, it is evident, was inherent in the Angels or Bishops of the Seven Churches of Asia. Thus the Bishop of Ephesus had Authority to try such as said they were Apostles and were not, and to convict them for Liars, Rev. ii. 2. and the Bishop of Pergamus is blamed for tolerating the Sect of the Nicolaitans in his Church, ver. 14, 15. and so also is the Bishop of Thyatira, for suffering that Woman Jezabel, ver. 20. which plainly implies, that the Authority of curbing and correcting those profligate Sectaries, was inherent in them; else why should they be blamed any more than others, for not restraining them? From all which it is evident, that the Power of Christian Jurisdiction was originally seated in the Apostolate; and that throughout the Apostolick Age it was always exercised by such, and only such, as were admitted into that Sovereign Order, viz. either by the Twelve prime Apostles, or by those secondary Apostles whom whom they ordained Bishops of particular Churches; and accordingly we find in the Primitive Ages the Bishops were the sole Administrators of this Spiritual Jurisdiction, and though ordinarily they administered it with the Advice and Concurrence of their Presbytery, yet this was more than they thought themselves obliged to; for thus St. Cyprian, in the Time of his Recess, did by his own single Authority excommunicate Felicissimus, Augendus, and others of his Presbyters, Ep. 38, 39. and when Rogatianus, a Bishop of his Metropolitick Church, complained to him in a Synod of a disorderly Deacon, he tells him, that pro Episcopatus vigore & Cathedrae auctoritate, i. e. by his own Episcopal Authority, without appealing to the Synod, he might have chastised him. And the Fifth Canon of the First Nicene Council plainly shews, that it was then the Judgment of the Catholick Church, that the Power of Spiritual Jurisdiction was wholly seated in the Bishops; for it decrees, that in every Province there should be twice a Year a Council of Bishops, to examine whether any Person, Lay or Clergy, had been unjustly excommunicated by his Bishop; which shews, that then this Sentence was inflicted by the Bishop only; though afterwards, to prevent Abuses, it was decreed in the Council of Carthage, that the Bishop should bear no Man's Cause but in the Presence of his Clergy; and that his Sentence should be void, unless it were confirmed by their Presence; but yet still the Sentence was peculiarly his, and not his Clergies. In some Churches, indeed, the Bishops did many times delegate Power to their Presbyters, both to excommunicate and absolve (as perhaps St. Paul himself did in the Church of Corinth;) but in this Case the Presbyter was only the Bishop's Mouth, and his Sentence received all its Force from that Episcopal Authority he was armed with.

IV. Another peculiar Ministry of the Bishops and Governours of the Church, is to confirm such as have been baptized and instructed in Christianity; which Ministry was always performed by Prayer and laying on of Hands, upon which the Party so confirmed received the Gift of the Holy Ghost. It is true, upon the first Institution of this Imposition of Hands, the extraordinary Gifts of the Spirit, such as speaking with Tongues, &c. were many times consequent; but from hence it doth no more follow, that it was intended only for an extraordinary Ministry that was to cease with those extraordinary Gifts that accompanied it, than that Preaching was so which at first was also attended with miraculous Operations. The great Intendment of those extraordinary Effects, was to attest the Efficacy of the Function; and doth it therefore follow, that the Function must cease, because those extraordinary Effects did so, after they had sufficiently attested its Efficacy, and consequently were of no farther use? If so, then all the other Ministries of Christianity must be expired as well as this. And what though those extraordinary Gifts of the Spirit are ceased? Yet since our Saviour hath promised a continual Communication of his Spirit to his Church, is it not highly reasonable to believe, that he still continues to communicate it by the very same Ministry of Prayer and Imposition of Hands, whereby he communicated it at first; and that he now derives to us the ordinary Operations of it in the same way that he first derived the extraordinary ones? Especially considering that this laying on of Hands is placed by the Apostle in the same Class with Baptism, and made one of the Principles of the Doctrine of Christ, Heb. vi. 1, 2. and therefore must without all doubt be intended for a standing Ministry in the Church, and as such the Church of Christ in all Ages has thought herself obliged to receive and practise it; but as for the Administration of it, it was always appropriated to the Apostles and Bishops. So in Acts xix. 5, 6. it was St. Paul that laid his Hands on the Ephefians after they were baptized in the Name of Jesus, whereupon it is said, that the Holy Ghost came upon them; and in Acts viii. we read, that when St. Philip by his Preaching and Miracles had converted the Samaritans, and afterwards baptized them, St. Peter and St. John, two of the Apostles, were sent to lay Hands on them, upon which it is said, that they received the Holy Ghost, ver. 17. by which it appears, that this Ministry of Confirmation appertained to the Apostles; since

St. Philip, though a worker of Miracles, a Preacher, a prime Deacon, and if we may believe St. Cyprian, one of the Seventy-two Disciples, would not presume to assume it, but left it to the Apostles as their peculiar Province: And accordingly in the Primitive Church it was always performed by the Hands of the Bishops; for though from later Ages some probable Instances are produced of some Presbyters, that confirm'd in the Bishop's Absence, or by his Delegation; yet in all Primitive Antiquity we have neither any one Canon for it, nor Example of it; from whence we may fairly conclude, that this Imposition of Hands for Confirmation was peculiar to the Apostles, in the Original, and to their Successors the Bishops in the Continuation of it.

S E C T. XI.

Of Christ's Regal Acts in his Kingdom.

HAVING in the foregoing Section given an Account of the several Ministers which Christ employs in the Administration of his Kingdom; we proceed in the next place to enquire what those Acts of Royalty are, which he himself exerts in his Kingdom, and by which he perpetually rules and governs it; and these may be distributed into three Orders:

First, Such as he hath performed once for all.

Secondly, Such as he hath always performed, and will still continue to perform.

Thirdly, Such as are yet to be performed by him before the Surrender of his Kingdom.

First, One Sort of the Royal Acts of our Saviour, are those which he hath performed once for all; and these are reducible to three Particulars.

1. His giving Laws to his Kingdom.

2. His Mission of the Holy Spirit to subdue Mens Minds to the Obedience of those Laws, and to govern them by them.

3. His erecting an External Polity or Form of Government in his Kingdom.

I. One of those Regal Acts, which Christ hath performed in his Kingdom once for all, is giving Laws to it; and this he performed while he was upon Earth in those excellent Sermons and Discourses which he then preached and delivered to the World. For though he preached as a Prophet, yet it was as a Royal Prophet, as one that had Regal Authority to Enact what he delivered into Laws; for he was a King while he was upon Earth, vide p. 853, 854, &c. so that all his Prophecies were enforced with his Regal Authority, and he commanded as he was a King whatsoever he taught as he was a Prophet. Indeed, had he been a mere Prophet, he could not have obliged Men by any Legislative Authority of his own to believe and obey him; his Declarations had had no farther Force in them than as they expressed the Will and Command of the Almighty Sovereign of the World; and if what he declared had not been Law before, it could not have been made Law by his declaring it. But being a Royal Prophet, his Words were Laws, and all his Declarations carried a commanding Power in them. And hence the Gospel is called the Law of Christ, Gal. vi. 2. and the Law of the Spirit of Life in or by Christ Jesus, Rom. viii. 2. and that Command of loving our Neighbour as our self is called the Royal Law, i. e. the Law of Christ our King, Jam. ii. 8. for this our Saviour calls his Commandment, John xv. 12. and his new Commandment, viz. that ye love one another even as I have loved you, John xiii. 34. and not only this, but all other Duties of the Gospel are called his Commandments, John xiv. 21. and Mat. xxviii. 20. by all which it is evident, that in revealing his Gospel to the World he did not only perform the Part of a Prophet, but also of a Legislator, and that by his own inherent Authority; as he was a King, he stamp'd those Doctrines into Laws, which he taught and deliver'd as a Prophet. And such as his Kingly Power is, such are his Laws and Commandments;
he

he is a Spiritual King, a King of Souls, of Wills, and of Affections, and accordingly his Laws are Spiritual, and do extend their Obligation to the Souls, and Wills, and Affections of his Subjects. For they not only oblige our outward Man, but also the inmost Motions of our Heart; they lay their Reins upon our Thoughts and Desires, as well as upon our Words and Actions, and give Directions to our inward Intentions, as well as to our outward Actions: So that to satisfy their Demands, it is not sufficient that we do well, unless we also intend well; that the Matter of our Actions be good, unless the Aim and Design of them be so also: For according to the Tenor of these Spiritual Laws, a bad Intention unconsecrates the best Actions, and converts even our Prayers and our Alms into the most loathsome Cheats and Dissemblations, vid. Matth. vi. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 16, 17, 18. and as they oblige our inward Intentions to good Ends, so they also restrain our inward Concupiscence from evil Objects, so far forth at least as it falls under the Command and Disposal of our Wills. For they not only forbid us the doing of evil Actions, but also the consenting to them, and even the taking pleasure in the Contemplation of them; and the very Affection to any bad Action, if it be voluntary and consented to, is in the Construction of these Laws the same with the Commission of it; for so Hatred is construed Murder, 1 John iii. 15. Covetousness, Theft or Robbery, Mark vii. 22. inordinate lusting after a Woman, Adultery, Matth. v. 28. and so in general the wicked Will is, in the Construction of these Laws, the wicked Action it chuses and consents to. Thus the Laws of our Saviour (to whose all-seeing Eye our inmost Motions are as obvious as our most open Practice) do as well take notice of our vicious Affections, those internal Springs and Fountains of Iniquity, as of the vicious Actions which stream out from them; and we are as well accountable to them for harbouring the Desire of Sin, when we have not the Convenience or Opportunity to act it, for consenting to it (though we never commit it) whenever Opportunity occurs, yea, and for indulging to ourselves the phantastick Pleasures of sinful Meditations, which are but the antepasts of the Actions, and as the Twilight to a dark Night, but the first Approaches toward the Deeds of Darkness, as for the sinful Actions themselves. This therefore is the common Nature of the Laws of our Saviour, that they are all of them Spiritual, and do in the first Place lay hold upon our Wills, and bind our inward Man, and from thence extend their Obligation to the outward Actions. They begin with that which is the Principle of all moral Good and Evil, and by rectifying the Spring and Wheels of our Will and Affections within, communicate a regular Motion to the Hand of our Practice without.

But for our better understanding the Nature of these Laws and the Obligations they devolve upon us, it will be necessary to consider them more particularly, they being all reducible under two Heads: First, the Law of Perfection: And secondly, the Law of Sincerity. Both which require of us the same Instances of Piety and Virtue, though not in the same Degree, nor under the same Penalty.

I. There is the Law of Perfection, which requires the utmost Degrees of every Christian Virtue, which in the several States and Periods of our Lives, we are capable of attaining to. For so we are enjoined not only to do, but to abound in the Work of the Lord: not only to have Grace, but to grow in it, to perfect Holiness in the Fear of the Lord, and to be perfect as our Father in Heaven is perfect. For the Nature of God is the Standard of that Perfection whereunto we are obliged to aspire, and our Growth in Piety and Virtue is never to come to a Period, till we are pure as he is pure, and holy as he is holy, i. e. till we are arrived to infinite Holiness, which because our finite Nature can never do in any Period of Duration, therefore we are to be growing on to Eternity. So that this Law by prescribing no Limits to the Degrees of our Growth, hath cut out Work enough for us to imploy all our Faculties for ever. Not that it is a Sin against it for a Man to be short or defective of the utmost Degree of Perfection; for it requires no more of us than what is within our present Possibility bility, which always increases proportionably to our present Improvements. When we are arrived but to one degree of Virtue, it is no Sin against this Law of Perfection that we do not thence immediately ascend to six or seven, because it is not in our Power, and no Law can oblige to an Impossibility; but when we have acquired one, that gives us Power to acquire a second, and that a third, and so on ad infinitum. Thus our Obligation to be more and more perfect, increases proportionably to the Improvement of our Power; for the End of all Power either to be good or to do good, is to be good, and to do good; and therefore the more Power we have to be good, the better we ought to be, otherwise our Power is in vain. While we are but Babes in Christ, or Beginners in Religion, we have not that Strength and Power as when we are Men, and have made a considerable Progress; and therefore we are not then obliged to all those Degrees of Growth and Perfection, but whatsoever Degree is within our Power in the indifferent Stages of our Growth and Progress, that we are actually and immediately obliged to; and so long as we are defective in it, we are Offenders against the Law of Perfection. As for Example, Mark xii. 13. our Saviour commands us to love the Lord our God with all our Heart, with all our Soul, with all our Mind, and with all our Strength; that is, that we should always love him as much as we can; but it is as much in our Power to love him still more, when we love much, as when we love him little: And so we are equally bound still to love him as much as we can, when we have ten Degrees of Power, as we were when we had but one. So that by this Command we are obliged always to love God as much as we are able, and thereby to be always augmenting our Ability to love him, and as our Ability increases, to be always loving him more and more for ever. Now the Penalty by which this Law obliges us, is not eternal Damnation, (and God forbid it should, for then I doubt no Flesh would be saved) but only the Depravation of some degrees of future Happiness, which is no more than what is the natural Consequence of all Defects of Goodness; for so essential is Goodness to our future Happiness, that proportionably as we fall short of the one, we must necessarily be defective of the other; and accordingly the Scripture tells us, that proportionably to our non-improvements in this Life, God will subtract from our reward in the Life to come. For he that soweth sparingly, saith the Apostle, shall reap sparingly, and he that soweth abundantly shall reap abundantly, 2 Cor. ix. 6. And our Saviour by a Parable, doth expressly teach us, that our future Reward shall be apportioned to the Degrees of our present Improvements, Luke xix. where he represents himself as a Master coming to take Account of his Servants, among whom he had intrusted a Stock of ten Pounds, delivering to every one an equal Share. The first by an extraordinary Diligence had improv'd his Pound into ten, and he is rewarded accordingly with the Government of ten Cities, verse 16, 17. the other had been faithful, though not altogether so diligent, and by his one Pound had gained five, and accordingly he is made Lord of five Cities, verse 18, 19. By which he plainly declares, that by so much as we fall short of those Improvements we might have made in Piety and Virtue, so much he will subtract from our future Reward. So that the Sense of the Law of Perfection is this, as you would not incur the Forfeiture of some degrees of your Happiness in the other Life, be sure you imploy your utmost Diligence in this, to improve yourselves in every Grace and Virtue of Religion.

II. There is the Law of Sincerity, which requires the Being and Reality of all Christian Graces and Virtues in us, together with the proper Acts and Exercises of them, as we have Opportunity, and doth no farther forbid those gradual Defects of them, which are within our possibility to supply, than as they are the Effects of our gross, continued, and wilful Neglect, and so inconsistent with Sincerity. Now the Reality of these Christian Virtues in us, consists in the universal and prevailing Consent and Resolution of our Wills, to regulate our Practice by them, so as not wilfully to admit of any Thing that is contrary to them upon any Occasion or Temptation whatsoever; and so long as this Re-resolution continues firm and prevails in our Practice, we are just in the Eye and Judgment of this Law of Sincerity, though we do not always exert it to the utmost of our possibility. He therefore who hath so submitted his Will to God, as to be thoroughly resolved, without any Reserve, to obey him, and not to do any thing that is contrary to his Will, either against Knowledge, or through affected Ignorance, or Inconsideration, hath in this Resolution the real Being of all Christian Virtues in him; and so long as this holds, he stands uncondemned in the Judgment of the Law of Sincerity. But though this Resolution includes in it the Being and Reality of all Christian Virtue, yet doth it not include the utmost possibility of it; nor doth it at all follow, that because I am sincerely resolved to conduct my Life by the Laws of Piety and Virtue, therefore I must be in all respects as pious and virtuous as it is possible for me to be, considering my present State and Circumstances. I may be sincerely resolved, and yet not be always equally diligent and active. I may now be exceeding vigilant and watchful, and what I am now I may always be, if I always exert the utmost of my possibility; yet it may so happen anon, that though I am sincerely resolved still, I may be more remiss, supine, and inadvertent, and in this Posture a Temptation may surprize me, before I am aware, and hurry me into an Action against which I am firmly resolved: And there is no doubt, but even the best of Men might have been much better than they are, had they always kept pace with their possibilities, and applied themselves with their utmost Skill and Diligence to the Methods and Ministries of Improvement. Now though not to exert our utmost Power in the Avoidance of Evil, and the Improvement of ourselves in Virtue and Goodness, is doubtless a Sin, yet it is only a Sin against the Law of Perfection, the Penalty of which is only deprivation of some degree of our future Reward; but so long as we keep up a prevailing Resolution in our Wills to govern our Lives by the Laws of Piety and Virtue, we stand clear in the Eye of the Law of Sincerity, the Penalty of which is no less than everlasting Exile from the Presence of God into the dark and horrible Regions of endless Misery and Despair; only this Proviso it admits, that if after we have sinned against it, we reassume our good Resolution, and heartily repent and amend, we shall be released from the Obligation to this dreadful Penalty, and be restored to that happy State of Grace and Favour, from whence we fell by our Transgression. So that the great Difference between the Law of Perfection and the Law of Sincerity is this, that the Penalty of the latter is much more severe: But the Duty of the former much more comprehensive. Having thus given this brief Account of our Saviour's Legislation and Laws, I proceed to the

II. Of those Regal Acts which Christ hath performed in his Kingdom once for all, and that is, his Mission of the Holy Spirit to subdue Mens Minds to the Obedience of his Laws, and to govern them by them. For so the Apostle makes the Mission of the Spirit to succeed the triumphal Progress of our Saviour to his Coronation in Heaven, Eph. iv. 8. He ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, he gave Gifts unto Men; where, by the Gifts which he gave, we are to understand the Holy Spirit, and in him all those extraordinary Gifts which he poured out upon his Church on the Day of Pentecost; for so Acts ii. 33. St. Peter makes the Effusion of the Spirit by Christ to be the Consequence of his Advancement to his universal Royalty, therefore being by the right Hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the Promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear. Now the End for which he sent his Spirit, was to supply his Room when he went from Earth, and in his Absence, to preside as his Vicegerent in his Kingdom below. vid. p. 587, 588, &c. Since therefore this blessed Spirit acts as our Saviour's Agent, whatsoever he doth, that our Saviour doth by him. So that all those Operations he performs, in order to the subduing us to the Obedience of Christ, and to the governing of us when we are subdued, are truly the Operations of Christ himself. It is he that conquers and governs us by his Spirit, our Hearts are the Territories which Christ invades by him, and his Inspirations are the Victorious Arms by which Christ conquers and subdues them. Our Wills are the Thrones on which Christ sits, and rules, and governs by him, and his holy Suggestions are the awful Powers by which Christ himself commands our Obedience. But what it is that this blessed Spirit doth, and hath done in order to the subduing Men to Christ's Laws, and governing them by them, hath been already shewn at large, vide p. 599, &c. And therefore of this I shall need say no more at present.

Christ

III. And lastly, Therefore, another of those Regal Acts which Christ hath once for all performed in his heavenly Kingdom is, his erecting in it an external Polity and Government. What this Polity is, and what are the Functions of it, hath been shewn at large, and it is as well by this external Government, as by the internal Ministry of his Spirit, that Christ now rules his Kingdom; for in all just and lawful Things, the lawful Governors of his Church do act by his Commission and Authority, as being substituted by him the visible Representatives of his Person, and the Executors and Administrators of his Power and Dominion. Whilst therefore they act within the Compass of their Commission, they act in his Stead, and as his Vicegerents; and whatsoever they bind he binds, and whatsoever they loose he looses; their Commands are his, their Decrees and Sentences are his, and all their authoritative Acts carry with them the same Force and Obligation, as if they had been performed by him in his own Person. For it is he that wills and speaks, and acts by them, because they will, and speak, and act by his Authority. For so he himself declares to them, Luke x. 16. He that heareth you heareth me; i. e. because I speak by you, and he that despiseth you despiseth me, and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me; because my Authority is in you even as my Father is in me; and therefore he who despises mine in you, despises my Father's in me, whence mine in you is derived. Your Authority is mine, and mine is my Father's, and therefore he who rejects yours doth therein reject both my Father's and mine. And this Authority is given them by Christ for the same End, that his Authority was given him by the Father; for he came into the World to seek and to save lost Souls, Luke xix. 10. He came not to judge the World, but to save the World, John xii. 47. and to call Sinners to Repentance, Mark ii. 17. And upon the very same Errand he sent all those whom he appointed to propagate and govern his Kingdom in his Absence; for he set them up as so many Lights to the benighted World, to reduce Men from those dangerous Paths in which they were wandering to eternal Misery, and shew them the Way to everlasting Happiness; and all the Power he devolved upon them was for Edification, and not for Destruction, 2 Cor. xiii. 10. and to them he hath committed the Care and Charge of Souls, whose Blood he will one Day require at their Hands, if they miscarry through their Neglect or Default, Heb. xiii. 17. And that he might the better secure these precious Beings, for whom he shed his Blood from miscarrying for ever, he placed this spiritual Polity in a Subordination of Officers, and made the Inferiour accountable for their Charge to the superior Officers, as well as both accountable to himself. So that whereas had he placed it in co-ordinate Hands, there had been only one Soul accountable to him for each particular Cure or Charge of Souls, because then each single Pastor would have been supreme in his particular Cure, and consequently no other Pastor, or Pastors, would have been accountable for not calling him to account; now each particular Cure of Souls is under the Charge and Inspection of several Orders and Degrees of Pastors; who in their several Stations are all accountable for it to the Tribunal of Christ. For first, the inferior Pastor, who hath the immediate Charge of it, and is obliged by his Office to teach and instruct it by good Example and Doctrine, and to administer to it the holy Ordinances of Christianity, stands accountable to Christ for every Soul in it that miscarries through his Neglect or Omission; next, the Bishop stands accountable for not correcting the Neglects and Misdemeanors of the inferior Pastor,

Pastor, and then the Metropolitan for not taking Cognizance of the Default of the Bishop. Thus in that excellent Form of Government which Christ hath established in his Kingdom, he hath made all possible Provision for the Safety and Welfare of Souls; for according to this Oeconomy he hath taken no less than a threefold Security, every one of which is as much as a Soul amounts to, that every Soul within every Cure shall be plentifully supplied with the Means of Salvation; that so none of them might miscarry but such as are incorrigibly obstinate. So that now if any Soul, within the Dominion of our Saviour, perish for want of the Means of Salvation, there are no less than three Souls one after another, besides it self, accountable to him for its Ruin. Having thus shewn what these Regal Acts are which Christ hath once for all performed in his Kingdom; I proceed,

II. To declare what those Regal Acts are which he hath always performed, and doth always continue to perform: And these are reducible to four Particulars.

First, His pardoning penitent Sinners.

Secondly, His punishing obstinate Offenders.

Thirdly, His protecting and defending his faithful Subjects in this Life.

Fourthly, His blessing and rewarding them in the Life to come.

I. One of the Regal Acts which our Saviour always hath, and always continues to perform, is, his pardoning and forgiving penitent Sinners; which being one of the Articles of our Creed, I shall endeavour to give an Account of it more at large: The Apostle defines Sin to be a Transgression of the Law, 1 John iii. 4. Now the Law obliges us under a certain stated Penalty to do and forbear what it commands and forbids; whenever therefore we transgress the Law, we are thereby obliged to undergo the Penalty it denounces; and this is that which we call the Guilt of Sin, viz. its Obligation to Punishment; and it is this Guilt which Pardon and Forgiveness relates to. For to pardon is nothing else but only to release the Sinner from the Obligation he lies under to suffer the Penalty of the Law. Now the Penalty of the Law of God for every known and wilful Sin, is no less than everlasting Perdition; and therefore from this it is that we are released by that Pardon and Indemnity which the Gospel proposes. So that the Pardon or Remission of Sins, whereof we are now treating, consists in the loosing of sinful Men from that Obligation to eternal Punishment, whereunto they have rendered themselves liable by their wilful Disobedience to the Law of God. Since therefore this Pardon consists in the Release of Offenders from the penal Obligation of the Law, it must be a Regal Act; because the Obligation of the Law can be dispensed with by no other Authority but that which made it: And therefore since to make the Obligation of the Law is an Act of Regal Authority, to release or dispense with it must necessarily be so also; and accordingly forgiveness of Sin is in Scripture attributed to our Saviour as one of his Regal Rights, Acts v. 31. Him hath God exalted with his right Hand to be a Prince and a Saviour for to give Repentance to Israel, and Forgiveness of Sin. So that now it is by Christ immediately that our Sins are pardoned, and our Souls released from those Obligations to eternal Punishment in which they have involved us: For the Father judgeth no Man, but hath committed all Judgment to the Son, John. v. 22. So that now it is by him immediately that the Father judgeth us, i. e. absolves and condemns us; for so Col. iii. 13. the Apostle exhorts them to forbear and forgive one another, even as Christ forgave them. And Col. ii. 13. Christ is said to have forgiven them all Trespasses. It is true, Forgiveness of Sin is in Scripture frequently attributed to the Father as well as to the Son: So 1 John i. 9. If we confess our Sins, he (i. e. the Father) is faithful and just to forgive us our Sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness; and Eph. iv. 32. Forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's Sake hath forgiven you. From whence it is plain, that Forgiveness of Sin appertains to God as well as Christ, and that both have their appropriate Shares in it; and therefore since it is impossible that the same individual Action should proceed from two distinct Agents, in this Act of Forgiveness the Father must must do something which the Son doth not, and the Son must do something which the Father doth not. They must both of them act an appropriate Part in it, and each have a distinct Agency from each other. For the fuller Explication therefore of this Article, I shall endeavour to shew; First, what it is which the Father doth in forgiving Sins; and Secondly, what the Son doth.

I. What it is that the Father doth in this Act of Forgiveness of Sin? To which in short I answer, That the Father's Part herein is to make a general Grant of Pardon to Offenders, upon such a Consideration as he shall think meet to accept, and with such a Limitation and Restriction as he shall think fit to make; which general Grant is nothing else but those glad Tydings of the Gospel, which he proclaimed to the World by Jesus Christ; viz. that in Consideration of Christ's Death and Sacrifice, he would freely forgive all penitent and believing Sinners their personal Obligation to eternal Punishment, and receive them into Grace and Favour. So that in forgiving our Sins, there are these three Things peculiar to God the Father: First, his making a general Grant of Pardon to us. Secondly, his making it in Consideration of Christ's Death and Sacrifice. Thirdly, his making it with those Restrictions and Limitations of Faith and Repentance.

First, One thing peculiar to God the Father in forgiving Sins is, his making a general Grant of Pardon and Forgiveness to Sinners. For the Law against which all Men had sinned, and by which they were obliged to eternal Punishment, was strictly and properly the Law of God the Father, who being the first and supreme Person in the Godhead, was consequently always the first and supreme in the Divine Dominion. Now the Divine Dominion consisting (even as all other Dominions do) of a Legislative and Executive Power, the Father must be supreme in both, and consequently the Laws of the Divine Dominion must be more especially and peculiarly his. And hence it is called, The Will of the Father, Matth. vii. 21. so in the Lord's Prayer, the Divine Law is in a peculiar manner styled the Will of God the Father: Thy Will be done on Earth as it is in Heaven; Matth. xii. 50. our Saviour styles it, the Will of his Father which is in Heaven: and elsewhere the Commandment of his Father, vide John xii. 5. Matth. xv. 3, 6. Mark vii. 8, 9. by all which it is evident, that the Divine Law, against which we have all offended, and by which we are obliged to Punishment, is appropriately and peculiarly the Will and Commandment of God the Father; and it being so, the Right of exacting or remitting the Punishment of this Law, must be peculiarly and appropriately inherent in him. For the Penalty of the Law is due to him whose Law it is, and it is he alone can loose us from it who bound it upon us; so that it was the Father's Peculiar, as to give the Law, so to indemnify Offenders from the Penalty of it; and accordingly we find that publick Grant of Pardon, which through Jesus Christ is made to Sinners, is in Scripture every where attributed to the Father; so we are told, that it is God who for Christ's sake hath forgiven us, Ephes. iv. 32. And that it is God who hath set forth Christ to be a Propitiation through Faith in his Blood, to declare his Righteousness for the Remission of Sins that are past, that he might be just, and the Justifier of them that believe in Jesus, Rom. ii. 25, 26. that it was God who was in Christ reconciling the World to himself, not imputing their Trespases unto them, 2 Cor. v. 19. And in a Word, that it is God who is faithful and just to forgive us our Sins, and to cleanse us from all Unrighteousness, 1 John i. 9. where his being faithful and just, plainly refers to some publick Grant and Promise, by which he hath obliged himself to penitent Offenders. And indeed the whole new Covenant, in which this publick Grant of Remission of Sins is contained (vide Heb. viii. 12.) is the Act and Deed of God the Father: It was he that in Consideration of Christ's Death and Sacrifice granted this grand Charter of Mercy to the World; for seeing it was to the Father that that Sacrifice was offered, in Consideration of which the new Covenant was granted, (vide Ephes. iv. 2. compared with Col. i. 20.) the Grant of it must necessarily be from the Father. And as it was the Father that made this publick Grant of Remission to Sinners; so

II. It was he that made it in Consideration of Christ's Death and Sacrifice; for so, Christ himself tells us, that it was by commandment which he received from his Father, that he laid down his Life, John x. 17, 18. and when he was going to offer up himself upon the Cross, he tells his Disciples, As the Father gave me Commandment, even so do I; arise, let us go hence, i. e. to execute that Command which the Father hath given me, to lay down my Life for the Sheep, John x. 15. from whence it is evident, that it was the Father who exacted the Death and Sacrifice of Christ in consideration of that publick Grant of Forgiveness which he made to the World; for it was through his Blood that we have Redemption, the Forgiveness of Sins, according to the Riches of his (i. e. the Father's) Grace, Ephes. i. 7. and that Blood of his was an Offering and a Sacrifice to God for a sweet smelling savour, Ephes. v. 2. So that it was God the Father that did both exact and accept the Sacrifice of Christ, which as I have shewed at large, Seet. 4. was in consideration of his pardoning and forgiving Sinners.

III. And lastly, It was God the Father also, that made this Grant of Forgiveness to us with these Restrictions and Limitations of our believing and repenting. For as the Promises of the Covenant were his, in which Remission of Sin is proposed to us, so must the Conditions of it be also, by which it is limited and restrained. Because it can belong to none but the Giver to limit and conditionate his own Gifts and Grants: Now the Conditions of our Forgiveness are Faith and Repentance; or rather, the Condition of it is such a Faith, such a lively and active Belief in Jesus Christ, as doth beget in us sincere Repentance and Renovation of Life: For so St. Paul tells us again and again, that it is by Faith that we are justified or pardoned, Rom. iii. 28. c. v. v. 1. Gal. ii. 16. Chap. iii. 24. Where by Faith it is evident he doth not mean any one single Act of Faith, of what kind or denomination soever, but Faith, as it is the pregnant Root and active Principle of Repentance and Newness of Life. For it is granted on all Hands, that that Faith which acquits and justifies us before God, must be lively and operative; and indeed unless it be so, it is not distinguishable from Presumption, which is only the Carcase or lifeless Image and Portraiture of Faith. So that if this be justifying, it is all one whether you call it justifying Faith or justifying Presumption; and he that can lay hold on the Righteousness of Christ, though it be with prophane and sacrilegious Hands, will be as certainly justified as the most bumble and penitent Soul. At which rate a Man may rest upon Christ without coming to him, and lay hold upon him at the greatest Distance from him; he may lean upon his Merits in open Defiance to his Laws, and embrace and crucify him together. It being granted therefore, that that Faith which justifies us must be lively and operative; it is from hence most evident, that the Condition of our Justification is no one single Act of Faith, but comprehends in it all that Repentance and new Obedience, which is the Effect of the Life and Operation of Faith. For if to make it the Condition of our Justification, it be necessary that our Faith should work by Love, and be operative and obediential; then that it should be lively and operative, is as necessary to our Justification as that it should be Faith; for where only an Accident or Mode of a Thing is made a Condition with the Thing, it is equally a Condition with the Thing itself. As for Instance, if I promise one such a Reward, upon Condition he presents me with such a Book, so bound and of such an Edition; it is equally a Condition, and as much influential on the Man's Right to my Promise, that it should be so bound, and of such an Edition, as that it should be the Book for which I condition: And so in any other Instance you can bring, either in Fact or Fiction; and the same Reason holds good, whether we take Faith for a Condition or an Instrument (as some improperly enough call it) for if to be lively and operative is a necessary Qualification to make Faith an Instrument of our Justification, then its Liveliness and Operation is instrumental to it: For that Mode of a Thing which makes it instrumental, is as really instrumental as the Thing itself. As for Instance, a Knife is an Instrument of cutting, but it is its Sharpness that makes it to be so; and therefore it is as instrumental to cutting cutting, that it should be sharp, as that it should be a Knife. And, indeed, whether we consider either the Form or Matter of our Justification and Pardon, it will evidently appear, that that Faith which justifies us, must be such as includes in it Repentance and New Obedience. For as for the Form of Justification, it is a juridical Act founded upon a legal Process, in which there is always a Judge, a Criminal, and a Law; and here the Judge is God, the Criminal, Man, the Law, the Law of Sincerity, or those affirmative and negative Commands of the Christian Religion, that are established with the Threats of eternal Condemnation; for so James ii. 12. the Apostle tells us, that we must be judged by the Law of Liberty, i. e. the Moral Law, as it is expounded and perfected by our Saviour; for so ver. 8. If ye fulfil the Royal Law, Thou shalt love thy Neighbour as thyself, ye do well. So that that Law of Liberty, by which we must be judged, is this Royal Law, and this Royal Law, is the Moral Law, which requires us to love our Neighbour as ourselves; now this Moral Law is to be considered under a Two-fold Notion, as it is a Law of Works, and as it is a Law of Grace. As it is a Law of Works, it exacts perfect and unfinning Obedience, and neither promises Grace to enable us to keep it, nor admits Repentance, when we have broken it. As it is a Law of Grace, it exacts only sincere Obedience, and both promises Grace to enable us thereunto, and admits Repentance, in case of wilful Disobedience. Now considering it under the first Notion, it is the same with the Law of Nature, as such, it obliges all Men, that are in the State of Nature, or without the Pale of Christianity, who have neither Promise of Grace to enable them to obey, nor yet of Pardon upon Repentance after they have once disobeyed it. In which forlorn Condition, they remain till such Time as they embrace Christianity, and are by Baptism admitted into the Kingdom of Christ, and from thenceforth the Obligation of it, as it is a Law of Works, ceaseth, and it obliges them only as it is a Law of Grace, i. e. as it is a Law which exacts of them only sincere Obedience, and promises both to assist them to obey, and upon their Repentance to pardon their Disobedience, so that considering the Moral Law, as it is a Law of Works, it neither justifies or accounts just any but the perfectly innocent, nor yet indulges Pardon to any that have offended upon any Condition whatsoever; and therefore the Infidel World, who alone are under the Obligation of it, are said to be Strangers from the Covenants of Promise, having no Hope, i. e. no Hope founded upon Promise, none but what an absolute and unpromised Mercy affords them, Ephes. ii. 12. And then if we consider it, as it is a Law of Grace, it justifies or accounts just none but the sincerely Obedient, and indulges Pardon to no Offenders whatsoever, but such as are sincerely penitent; so that we Christians who alone are under the Obligation of it can neither be justified by it, but upon our sincere Obedience, nor when we fail of that be pardoned by it, but upon our unfeigned Repentance. Since therefore it is by the Moral Law, considered as a Law of Grace, that God doth judge us, he can acquit us by it upon no other Terms, but only our performing of what it requires, i. e. our hearty Repentance for our past Sins, and sincere Obedience for the future. For seeing it requires this of us under the Penalty of eternal Condemnation, we are obliged by it to this Penalty, till we have performed what it requires; and to be at the same Time acquitted by a Law and obliged to the Penalty of it, is a Contradiction; did this Law of Grace require of us nothing but Faith, and threaten Condemnation for nothing but Infidelity, then indeed our bare believing in Jesus were sufficient to discharge us from our Obligation to its Penalty; but since it also requires of us Repentance and sincere Obedience, under the same Penalty that it requires Faith, our Faith cannot be sufficient to discharge us from its Penalty, unless it be such as includes in it Repentance and sincere Obedience. In short, the Law of Grace condemns us as well for Impiety, Injustice and Uncharitableness, as for Infidelity; and therefore we cannot be acquitted by it upon forsaking our Infidelity, unless we also forsake our Impiety, &c. and while we continue in any one wilful Sin, for which it condemns, it is impossible, impossible, that at the same Time we should be acquitted and pardoned by it ; so that unless our Faith be such as doth include in it a Renunciation of all wilful Sin, or, which is the same Thing, Repentance and sincere Obedience, we cannot be acquitted upon it by the Law of Grace.

And then if we consider the Matter of our Pardon and Remission, which is nothing but a releasing us from our Obligation to Punishment, it will from thence also appear, that that Faith upon which we obtain our Pardon, must be such as works in us sincere Repentance and Obedience. For the Punishment to which we are obliged by the Law of Grace, consists in the Loss of Heaven, as well as in the positive Torments of Hell; and therefore our Pardon must include a Release from both: But to be released from our Obligation of losing Heaven, is the same Thing as to have a Right of enjoying it conferr'd upon us: so that the Faith upon which we are pardoned and forgiven, is the Faith upon which we are intitled to Heaven, as all agree, includes in it Repentance and sincere Obedience. For these two Things are of undoubted Certainty, that every Man shall go to Heaven that dies intitled to it; and that no Man shall go to Heaven that dieth in Impenitence, and wilful Disobedience. For it is our keeping the Commandments of God that gives us a Right to the Tree of Life, Rev. xxii. 14. And our keeping God's Commandments, is that Holiness without which no Man shall see God, Heb. xii. 14. And accordingly in Scripture the Remission of our Sins is attributed to our Repentance and Obedience, as well as to our Faith, so Acts iii. 19. Repent ye therefore and be converted, that your Sins may be blotted out, when the Times of refreshing shall come from the Presence of the Lord. And in Eph. i. 7. If ye walk in the Light, as he is in the Light, you have Communion with him, and the Blood of Christ cleanseth you from all Sin. So also Acts x. 34, 35. God is no respecter of Persons; but in every Nation, he that feareth him, and worketh Righteousness, is accepted of him. From whence it is evident, that when the Scripture makes mention of Faith only in the Matter of our Justification, it is to be understood of Faith in the greatest Latitude, as comprehending Repentance and sincere Obedience; for how can we be justified by Faith only, and yet be justified by Obedience too, unless our Obedience be included in our Faith? And indeed the Scripture plainly declares, that Faith itself is not at all available with God, unless it be accompanied with sincere Obedience. So Gal. v. 6. In Christ Jesus neither Circumcision availeth, nor Uncircumcision, but Faith which worketh by Love, and what he means by Faith working by Love, he tells us, Gal. vi. 16. Circumcision is nothing, and Uncircumcision is nothing, but the new Creature; and what he means by the new Creature, he also tells us, 1 Cor. vii. 19. Circumcision is nothing, and Uncircumcision is nothing, but keeping the Commandments of God; so that the only thing which avails us with God, is Faith working by Love. Faith working by Love is the new Creature, the new Creature is keeping the Commandments of God; and in James ii. 26. we are told, that as the Body without the Spirit is dead, so Faith also is dead without Works; that is, it is altogether ineffectual. For so if you compare the 14 and 17 Verses of this Chapter, you will find that those two Phrases, Faith cannot save, and Faith is dead, doth both signify the same Thing. Since therefore Faith itself without Obedience is unavailable, when the Scripture makes mention of our being justified by Faith, it must necessarily be understood of Faith comprehending Obedience.

And thus you see what God the Father's Part is in remitting our Sins, viz. that it consists in granting to us an universal Act of Pardon and Indemity, in Consideration of our Saviour's Sacrifice, and upon Condition of our sincere Repentance and future Obedience. And this is the Ground-work and Foundation of all Remission of Sins; without which our Saviour himself hath no Right to pardon and forgive us; for since the Law, against which we have all sinned, was peculiarly from God the Father, as he is the Fountain of Divinity, and consequently the Head of the Divine Dominion, it was he peculiarly that was the Party offended, and consequently it was he to whom our Obligation to Punishment was due, and by whom alone it can be released and remitted; and as the Grant of Remission was wholly in his Will and Pleasure; so was it also to accept the Consideration and appoint the Conditions of it. So that now as none can be pardoned but upon his Grant, so neither can his Grant be available to any, but upon that Consideration which he hath accepted, viz. the precious Sacrifice of his own Son, and upon such Conditions as he hath appointed, viz. Faith working in us sincere Repentance and Obedience; and accordingly our Saviour, in all that he doth in the Part he acts in forgiving Sins; proceeds upon, and according to this Grant of his Father; for 'tis in the Right of and upon the Consideration and Condition of this Grant that he forgives us, nor can he forgive any by any other Right than that which it gives him, or upon any other Consideration than that which it hath admitted, or upon any other Condition than that which it hath specified and determined. And this brings me to the second Head I proposed, which was to shew what it is that the Son doth in forgiving Sins.

In short therefore, the Part which our Saviour bears in it, consider'd as King under God the Father, is to make an actual and particular Application of this general Grant of his Father to particular Sinners, upon their Faith and Repentance. For the Father's Grant is only a general Promise, that we shall be pardoned for Christ's Sake, whenever we sincerely believe and repent; but the actual pardoning us consists in the Application of this general Promise to us in particular, by which the general Promise of Pardon is converted into a particular Sentence of Pardon. For the Promise says thus, Whosoever believes and repents shall be pardoned; the particular Application of the Promise says thus, Thou dost believe and repent, and therefore by virtue of that Promise, I pardon and forgive thee. And this is the proper Part of our blessed Saviour, who having first obtained this Promise of his Father, by his Sacrifice upon Earth, and then still continuing to obtain of him by his continual Intercession in Heaven, Royal Authority to dispense that Promise to us, vid. p. 779, &c. doth by virtue of that Authority actually pardon us upon our actual Repentance. So that as soon as ever we perform the Condition of God's Grant of Pardon, our Saviour (who knows the inmost Thoughts of our Hearts, and perfectly discerns our Sincerity) immediately pronounces our Sentence of Pardon, and by a particular Application of that general Grant to us, absolves us from our Obligation to eternal Punishment, and freely receives us into Grace and Favour. For though the Completion and Publication of our Pardon is reserved for the Day of Judgment, when we shall be absolved from all Punishment, (i. e. not only of eternal Misery, but also of corporal Death and temporal Sufferings) in the publick View and Audience of the World; yet it is certain, that every penitent Believer in Jesus is actually pardoned by him in Heaven, as soon as ever he believes and repents; that is, he is, in foro Christi, and before the Tribunal of his Royal Judgment, absolved from the Obligation to suffer eternal Misery which he lay under, during his State of Impenitence; and Christ in his own Mind, Judgment and Estimation hath judicially thus pronounced concerning him, By virtue of my Father's Grant to all penitent Offenders, and of that Royal Authority which he hath committed to me, I freely release thee from all that vast Debt of everlasting Punishment which thou hast too justly incurr'd by sinning against him. Thus as the Father forgives us virtually by that publick Grant of Mercy, which for Christ's Sake he hath made to all penitent Offenders; so the Son forgives us actually by that Royal Authority, which the Father hath given him to make a particular Application of that his general Grant to us upon our actual Repentance; and as it is by the Father's Grant that the Son pardons us, so it is by the Son's Application of it that the Father pardons us; and therefore we are said, in or by Christ to have Redemption through his Blood, even the Forgiveness of Sin, Col. i. 14. i. e. to be forgiven for the Sake of his Blood; in Consideration whereof, God the Father hath given him Power to forgive us; for so he himself tells us, that all Power in Heaven and Earth was given him, Matth. xxviii. 18. and there is no doubt but in all Power, the Power of forgiving Sins was included; for so St. Peter tells us, that through his Name, i. e. by his Authority or judicial Sentence, Whoever believeth in him shall receive Remission of Sins, Acts x. 43.

And thus you see what the first Regal Act is, which our Saviour hath always performed, and will always continue to perform, viz. forgiving of Sins.

II. Another of his Regal Acts of this kind, is, punishing obstinate Offenders: For as he mediates for his Father, in ruling and governing us, he must be the Minister of his Father's Providence; and being so, whatsoever divine Punishments are inflicted upon Offenders, are to be look'd upon as the Strokes of his Hand, and the Ministries of his Power; for he hath the Keys of Death and Hell, i. e. the Power of punishing both here and hereafter, Rev. i. 18. and accordingly he threatens the corrupt Churches of Asia, that he would remove their Candlestick, and that he would fight against them with the Sword of his Mouth, that he would come upon them as a Thief, and that he would spew them out of his Mouth, Rev. ii. 5, 3, 16. and chap. iii. ver. 16. all which is a sufficient Proof, that the Punishment of Offenders, both here and hereafter, is committed to him, as a Branch of that Royal Authority with which he is invested by the Father; in the Execution of which Commission he many Times chastens bad Men in this Life, in order to their Reformation and Amendment; for as many as I Love, saith he, (i. e. with well to) I rebuke and chasten, Heb. iii. 19. and many Times persecutes them with exterminating Judgments, thereby hanging them up in Chains, as it were, as publick Examples of his Vengeance, to warn and deter the World from treading in their impious Footsteps. For so he threatens Jezebel and her Followers; I gave her space to repent of her Fornications, and she repented not; behold, I will cast her into a Bed, i. e. into a Bed-rid and irrecoverable Condition, and them that commit Adultery with her into great Tribulation, and I will kill her Children with Death, and all the Church shall know that I am he which searcheth the Reins and Heart, and I will give unto every one of you according to your Works, Rev. ii. 21, 22, 23. And though for wise and gracious Ends, he oftentimes spares bad Men in this Life, and sometimes shines upon them a continued Day of Prosperity, without any Cloud or Interruption; yet he always overtakes them with the fearful Storms of his Vengeance in the Life to come. For no sooner do their Souls depart from their Bodies, but they are immediately consigned by his Warrant into the Hands of evil Angels; those skilful, spiteful, and powerful Executioners of his Justice, under whose savage Tyranny, they endure all the Tortures and Agonies, that Wrath and Power of Devils, together with their own awakened Consciences, and furious and unsatisfied Affections are able to inflict. Of which see Part I. chap. 3. For that the Souls of bad Men are transmitted into a State of Wretchedness and Misery, immediately upon their Separation from their Bodies, is evident from the Parable of Dives and Lazarus; wherein in the first Place, Dives immediately after his Death, is said to be in great Torment in Hell, and this while his Body lay buried in the Grave, Luke xvi. 22, 23. which is a plain Argument, that in all that Interval between Death and the Resurrection of the Body, the Souls of bad Men abide in a State of Torment; for secondly, this Torment of Dives's Soul in Hell, was then when his Brethren were living upon Earth, and under the teaching of Moses and the Prophets, ver. 27, and 28, 29, 30, 31. which shews, that our Saviour supposes it to be at that very Time when he delivered this Parable; and consequently he supposes all bad Men, who were then dead, and whose Condition he represents by that of Dives to be then in Hell, and there suffering unspeakable Agonies and Torments; and if so, then it's plain, that whenever impenitent Souls leave their Bodies, they are carried by Devils into some dismal Abode, and there kept under a perpetual Discipline of Torments; and in this deplorable State they remain expecting that fearful Day of Accounts, when their Condition through their re-union to their Bodies, and that dread of bodily Torment, they must then be condemned to, will be rendred yet far more intolerable.

III. Another of those Regal Acts which our Saviour bath always, and always will continue to perform, is, his protecting and defending his Kingdom in this World. For thus he promises his faithful Church of Philadelphia, Because thou hast kept the Word of my Patience, I also will keep thee from the Hour of Temptation which shall come upon all the World, to try them that dwell upon the Earth, Rev. iii. 10. By which it is plain, that the Power of protecting and defending his Subjects is inherent in Christ, as an essential Part of his Regal Authority; and this Power he continually exercises now he is in Heaven: For it was for this End, among others, that he promises to be with his Church to the End of the World, Matt. xxviii. 20. namely, to guard and defend it by his Providence against the outrageous Attempts of its numerous Enemies. For it is for this End that the Father bath put all Things in subjection under him, and that he bath left nothing that is not put under him, Heb. ii. 7, 8. that so having the universal Government of all Things in his Hand, he might, by his over-ruling Providence, render them all subservient to the Interest of his Church: For so Eph. i. 21. we are assured, that the Father bath put all Things under his Feet, and given him to be Head over all Things to his Church; i. e. hath vested him with an universal Power over all Things, that so he might order and direct them all to the Interest and Advantage of his Church. And accordingly now he is in Heaven, the Defence and Preservation of his Church is the great Business which he intends upon Earth: There he now sits looking down from his Throne with a watchful Eye, to observe all the Motions, and trace out all the dark Designs of her Enemies; and from thence he stretches forth his Almighty Hand to guard and defend her against them, to repel or over-rule their Malice, to drive back their venomous Darts upon themselves, or to temper their Poyson into Physick, and extract a healing Balm out of the Stings of those Scorpions. In which how careful and diligent he hath been is abundantly manifest from the glorious Success; for considering the vast Opposition that hath been made against it, even from its Infancy, how is it possible it could ever have subsisted, had it not been guarded by an invisible Hand? No sooner did this Light upon a Hill appear in the World, but all the four Winds immediately conspired to blow it out; yet, (which is miraculous to consider,) still the harder they blew the brighter it flamed; and though for the first three hundred Years it was the main and almost constant Exercise of the Power and Policy, the Wit and Cruelty both of Devils and Men to suppress and ruin it, yet still it ~~thrived~~ and encreased under the most powerful Means of its Extirpation. It conquered by suffering, gathered Strength by bleeding, and, like a head-strong Flood, still the more it was checked the more it swelled and overflowed, till at length it filled the Earth as the Waters cover the Sea: Which if well considered, is an amazing Instance of the vigilant and powerful Providence of our Saviour, which hath not only preserved this burning Bush from consuming, but made it spring and flourish in the Flames. And though since those primitive Persecutions he hath many Times, for wise and gracious Ends, let loose the Wolves upon his Flock, and permitted them to worry, and sometimes almost to devour it, yet still he hath kept a strict and steady Rein upon their Power and Malice, and when they have served his Ends, hath check'd and stopp'd them in their savage Career; and when they have thought the trembling Prey their own, hath stretched out his own Almighty Arm, and snatched it from their devouring Jaws. So that while they are clubbing all their Power and Policy against it, He that sits in the Heavens laughs them to scorn, the Lord bath them in derision, and doth contemn their impotent Malice, which he can manage as he pleases; he can either prevent the mischievous Effects of it, or cause them to recoil upon themselves, or make those very Persecutions, with which they design to destroy his Church, the Means of its Inlargement and Propagation; and what in his own infallible Wisdom he thinks best, that he hath always done, and will always do for his Church and People: For many a Time have they afflicted me from my Youth may Israel, or the Church of Christ, now say; many a Time have they afflicted me from my Youth, yet have they not prevailed against me; the Plowers have plowed upon my Back, they have made long Furrows, but the Lord is righteous, he hath cut asunder the Cords of the Wicked; and in his own due Time will confound and turn back those that hate Sion.

And as he exerciseth a most vigilant Providence over his Church in general, so doth he also over all the faithful and obedient Subjects of it, whose Interest is as dear and precious to him as his own Blood; for they are not only the Purchase of his Blood, but also the Trophies and Conquests of his Spirit, which makes them his by a double Propriety, and more peculiarly intitles them to his Care and Protection; they are living Members of his own Body, and as such he feels their Pains by a most tender Sympathy; and therefore his Providence is as much concerned for their Defence, as his Eye-lid is to defend the Apple of his own Eye, Zech. ii. 8. and therefore though he exercises a merciful Providence over all Men, yet these he incloses out of the Common of the World, and fences about with a peculiar Care. These are his Jewels, and he keeps them in his Treasury under the strongest and most inviolable Security. He is always watching over them for good, and it is his peculiar and continual Concern to protect and defend them, to keep off Temptations from their Souls, and Calamities from their Bodies, and so to over-rule and direct the Course of Things, as that whatever befalls them may centre in their Happiness. For though he many Times corrects them with his own Hand, and permits them to be oppressed and afflicted by others, yet still he doth it with a most gracious Intention, either to cure or prevent some Disease in their Minds, or to excite and exercise their Graces, or to wean them from the Love of this vain World, and discipline them for a blessed Eternity; and whatsoever Evils happen to them in the Course of his Providence, still he takes Care to extract good out of them, and so to contrive and order the whole Scene of Affairs, as that in the Issue all Things may still work together for good to them that love God, and are called according to his Purpose, Rom. viii. 28.

IV. And lastly, Another of those Regal Acts which our Saviour hath always, and doth always continue to perform, is his blessing and rewarding all his faithful Subjects in the Life to come; for this, as he himself declares, he hath Power to do; so Rev. ii. 7. To him that overcomes, will I give to eat of the Tree of Life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God; i. e. I will admit him into a participation of the blessed Immortality of Heaven; so also Rev. iii. 21. To him that overcomes, I will grant to sit with me on my Throne, even as I have overcome, and am sat down with my Father on his Throne: And he promises the Bishop of the Church of Smyrna in particular, Be thou faithful to the Death, and I will give thee a Crown of Life; Rev. ii. 10. In all which Places he expressly declares his Royal Authority to reward his faithful Subjects, when they leave this World, with the Joys and Felicities of the World to come: And this Authority he is continually exercising in his heavenly Kingdom; for whenever any faithful and obedient Souls depart from their Bodies, he presently sends forth his Angelick Messengers to conduct them safe to the immortal Regions, and there to lodge them in some one of those blissful Mansions in his Father's House, which he went before to prepare for them; where, free from all the Disturbances of Flesh and Blood, and of a vexatious and tumultuous World, they live in continued Ease, Content and Joy, wrapt up with the ever-growing Delights of contemplating, loving and imitating God, and of the most wise and amicable Society and Communication with each other, in the Enjoyment of an endless Bliss and Pleasure; for so we are assured from Scripture, that the Happiness of the Righteous doth commence from the Moment of their Departure hence. So Rev. xiv. 13. Blessed are the Dead that die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their Labours, and their Works do follow them; and with St. Paul it was the same Thing to depart from hence and to be with Christ, Phil. i. 23. which necessarily implies, that upon his Departure he expected to be immediately with Christ; and elsewhere he teaches, that to be at home in the Body was to be absent from the Lord, and to be absent from the Body to be present with the Lord, 2 Cor. 5, 6, 8.

neither

neither of which can be true, if the Souls of good Men go not to Heaven immediately when they go from hence; but that they do so, is as plain as Words can express it, in that Promise of our Saviour to the penitent Thief, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, this Day shalt thou be with me in Paradise, Luke xxiii. 43. From whence it evidently follows, that even in the very Article of a true Penitent's Death, Heaven's Joys do attend his departing Soul to receive it immediately when it is dislodged from the Body. Thus in the very moment of its Departure hence, the pious Soul is transported to those blessed Abodes beyond the Stars, which are the proper Seat and pure Element of Happiness, where the blessed Inhabitants live in a continued Fruition of their utmost Wishes, being every Moment entertain'd with fresh and enraving Scenes of Pleasure, where all their Happiness is eternal, and all their Eternity nothing else but only one continued Act of Love, and Praise, and Joy, and Triumph; where there are no Sighs, or Tears, no Intermixtures of Sorrow or Misery, but every Heart is full of Joy, and every Joy is Quintessence, and every happy Moment is crowned with some fresh and new Enjoyment. But of this blessed State I have given an Account at large, Part I. Chap. 1. and 3. And this is that blessed Reward with which our Saviour crowns his faithful Subjects immediately upon their Departure hence; so that he doth not permit them to lie sleeping in the Dust unrewarded, till the End of the World, but as soon as they have finished their Work upon Earth, admits them to the Joy of their Master, to all the Felicities that their separated Spirits are capable of in those several Degrees and Measures of Perfection which they there arrive to; in which happy State they remain during their Separation from the Body, expecting the farther Completion of their Happiness in a glorious Resurrection, by which their Bodies and Souls being re-united, their whole humane Nature shall be filled with Bliss, to the utmost Stretch of its Capacity.

And now having shewn what those Regal Acts are, which Christ both always performed, and doth always continue to perform, I proceed in the

III. And last Place, to shew what those Regal Acts are, which are yet to be performed by him, before he surrenders up his Kingdom, and these are reducible to three Heads:

First, He is yet farther to extend and enlarge his Kingdom by the Conquest of its Enemies.

Secondly, He is yet to destroy Death, the last Enemy, by giving a general Resurrection.

Thirdly, He is yet to judge the World.

I. He is yet farther to extend and enlarge his Kingdom by a more universal Conquest of its Enemies. For if we consult the ancient Prophecies, concerning the vast Extent of our Saviour's Kingdom, we shall find that there are a great many of them, which as yet were never accomplished: So Psal. ii. 8, 9. Ask of me and I will give thee the Heathen for thine Inheritance, and the uttermost Parts of the Earth for thy Possession; thou shalt break them with a Rod of Iron, thou shalt dash them in pieces like a Potter's Vessel; whereas hitherto it is certain Christ was never possessed of the uttermost Parts of the Earth, nor did he ever yet break his incorrigible Opposers with a Rod of Iron, or dash them in pieces like a Potter's Vessel; so also Dan. vii. 4. it is foretold of Christ, that there should be given him Dominion and Glory, and a Kingdom, that all People, Nations and Languages should serve him, and that all Dominions should serve and obey him, ibid. ver. 27. so also Dan. ii. 34, 35, 44, 45. that the Stone cut out without Hands, by which all agree is meant the Kingdom of Christ, should become a great Mountain, and fill the whole Earth, and that it should break in pieces and consume all those other Kingdoms. Thus also it is foretold, that the Lord should be King over all the Earth, Mich. v. 4. and that there should be but one Lord, and his Name one, Zech. xiv. 9. and that he should have Dominion from Sea to Sea, and from the River to the Ends of the Earth, Psal. lxxii. 8. and that all Kings should fall down before him, and all Nations serve him, ibid. ver. 11. and that all the Ends of the Earth should remember and turn to the Lord, and all Kindreds of the Nations worship before him, because cause the Kingdom shall be the Lord's, and he shall govern among the Nations. These, and sundry other such like Prophecies there are, which, as yet is certain, were never accomplished according to the full Import and Intent of them. Wherefore we may certainly conclude, that there is a Time, yet to come, before the Consummation of all Things, wherein our Saviour will yet once more display the victorious Banner of his Cross, and, like a mighty Man of War, march on conquering and to conquer, till he hath confounded or converted his Enemies, and finally consummated his Victories in a glorious Triumph over all the Powers of the Earth. For the Scripture not only foretels this Universal Conquest of his, but also describes and delineates the whole Method and Progress of it, which upon laying the Scripture Prophecies together, in their proper Train and Series, seems to me to be this, That the opening of this great Scene of Providence, will be the Conversion of the Jewish Nation, those obstinate and hitherto implacable Enemies of our Saviour, whom notwithstanding they have been a thousand times over conquered, slaughtered and oppressed, and do to this Day continue scattered over the Face of the whole Earth, he hath preserved by a strange and unparallel'd Providence, for above Sixteen hundred Years together, a distinct and separate People from all the Nations of the Earth, to shew his mighty Power in them, and once more render them, what they have always been, the Subjects of his miraculous Conduct. For by

* Ezek. xxxix. 28, 29.

Isa. xxxii. 13, 14, 15.

Isa. lix. 20, 21. compared with Rom. xi.

26, 27.

† Isa. lxvi. 8. Zach.

3, 9.

* Zach. xii. 10.

a wonderful Effusion of his Holy Spirit upon them, such as that was on the Day of Pentecost, though far more extensive, * he will all of a sudden, and in a most surprising manner, † open the Eyes of this blinded Nation, and powerfully convince them of the Error and Wickedness of their Infidelity and Malice against him, whereupon with one Heart and one Mind they shall return to the Lord, and with penitent Tears wash off the Guilt of the Blood of their Saviour, * which like an Hierloom, hath hitherto descended upon them, from one Generation to another; for thus, Rom. xi. 25, 26. I would not, Brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this Mystery, that Blindness in part is hapned to Israel, æxæus s, till when the Fulness of the Gentiles be come in, and so all Israel shall be saved, as it is written, there shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, &c. from whence it is plain, that that Blindness which then hapned to Israel, and which continues on them to this Day, shall one Day be remov'd, viz. about that Time when the Conversion of the Gentiles shall be compleated, and that then all Israel (and not a small Remnant of them as at first) shall be saved; so also, 2 Cor. iii. 14, 16. But their Minds are blinded, (meaning the People of Israel) for until this Day remaineth the same Veil untaken away, in the reading of the Old Testament; nevertheless when it shall turn to the Lord, the Veil shall be taken away; where he first supposes, that Israel, that till then was blinded, and that till now remains so, should turn unto the Lord, and then asserts, that then the Veil of Ignorance, which hindered 'em from discerning Christ in the Figures and Prophecies of the Old Testament should be removed from before their Eyes.

And now the Jews being thus converted by the Power of our Saviour shall under his victorious Banners be conducted into the holy Land, and repossessed

* Jer. xxxii. 37, 40, 41.

Ezek. xxxvi. 24, 25.

chap. xxxvii. 21, 22,

25. Amos ix. 14, 15.

Isaiah xi. 11, 12.

† Joel iii. 1, 2, 9, 14.

Mich. iv. 11, 12. Isa.

xxiv. 21, 22. Zeph.

iii. 8. Isa. lxiii. 1, 6.

Isa. xxxiv. 1. Isa. lix.

16, 17. Zach. xiv. 13.

Hag. ii. 22. Zach. xii.

2, 3, 4.

of their ancient native Countrey *, whither they shall be close pursued with mighty Hosts of the Eastern Infidels, and be reduced by them into imminent Danger of utter Desolation; in which Extremity of theirs, our blessed Saviour shall make bare his Almighty Arm, and in a most miraculous Manner confound and scatter those mighty Swarms of Infidels, and crown his Israel with Victory and Triumph †. The Fame of which miraculous Events, spreading far and wide, even to the utmost Ends of the Earth, shall in a little Time convince all the heathen World of the Truth of Christianity, and prevail with the Kingdoms of the Earth, to become the Kingdoms

doms of our Lord, and of his Christ *. And now the Kingdom of Christ in this World being arrived to its full Extent and Growth, Truth and Peace, Charity and Justice shall reign and flourish over all the Earth. Now all the World shall be Christendom, and Christendom shall be restored to its ancient Purity. For now he who is to come with the Fan in his Hand, will thoroughly purge the Floor of his Church, from all that Chaff of Superstition and Idolatry, Schism and Heresy, Irreligion and Immorality, with which it is almost totally covered; and the true Faith, the sincere Piety, the generous and unaffected Virtue, which Christianity teaches and prescribes, shall be the universal Livery and Cognisance of the Christian World *. For much about the Time of this Conversion of the Jews, and that glorious Call of the Gentiles thence ensuing, that corrupt and degenerate Faction of Christians, whom the Scripture calls the mystical Babylon, and the Antichrist, and which for several Ages hath been the great Nusance of Christendom, will in these Western Parts of the World, muster up all its Forces to destroy and extirpate the purser Professors of Christianity, by a general Persecution †; in which Attempt, for some time, this Faction will be very prevalent and successful ‡, when all of a sudden the Kings and Princes of the Earth, who have hitherto been Partakers with it in its foul Impostures and Corruptions (being either awaken'd by those miraculous Conversions of the Jews and Eastern Gentiles, or convinced of their Errors, by the powerful Impressions of his Spirit, in whose Hands the Hearts of Kings are) will turn their Swords upon this Antichristian Faction, whose Cause they have hitherto espoused, and conspire to root out from off the Face of the Earth *; which being effected, the Western Church will universally reform itself according to the Standard of the Church of Jerusalem, which will then be, in a literal Sense, the Mother of us all †. Thus partly by destroying, and partly by converting its Enemies, our Saviour will yet mightily enlarge the Borders of his Kingdom, and advance it to the utmost Pitch of Purity and Splendour that this State of Mortality will admit; and in this happy State he will preserve and continue it for several Ages, ‡ till a little before the Commencement of the General Judgment, at which Time the Devil, who had been hitherto chained up, will be loosed again, to work in the Children of Disobedience, to excite them to delude and deceive the World again, and to persecute the sincere Professors of Christianity with incessant Cruelties*, when all of a sudden, and while they are securely triumphing in the Success of their Villanies, they shall be surprized with the Day of Judgment †, which like a Thief in the Night shall come upon them, and put an End to all their Mischiefs for ever.

* Isa. lxxvi. 16, 18, 19, 20. Isa. lx. 1, 6. Jer. xiv. 33. Isaiah lxi. 7. Ezek. xxxviii. 16, 21, 22, 23. Rom. xi. 12.

* Psal. lxxii. 7. Isaiah lxxvi. 12. and Chap. 23. 4. Mic. iv. 3. Jer. xxxii. 39. Zeph. iii. 8, 9. Ezek. xix. 21, 22. Isa. ix. 7. and Chap. ii. 20. Hab. ii. 14.

† Revel. xiii. 7.

‡ Dan. vii. 21, 22.

* Rev. xvii. 16, 17.

† Isaiah lx. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.

‡ Rev. xx. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 16.

* Rev. xx. 7, 8, 9.

† Rev. xx. 10, 11, 12, 14, 15.

II. Another of those Regal Acts which he is yet to perform, is to destroy Death, the last Enemy, by causing a General Resurrection of the Dead, which being one of the great Articles of our Creed, I shall insist more largely upon it, and endeavour,

First, To prove the Certainty of the Fact.

Secondly, To explain the Manner how it will be performed.

I. I shall endeavour to prove the Certainty of the Fact, viz. that our Saviour shall raise the Dead; which is as plainly and frequently asserted in holy Scripture, as any Proposition contained in it; for so 2 Cor. iv. 14. we are assured, that God will raise us up by Jesus Christ, i. e. by his Personal Power and Agency; and accordingly, John vi. 39, 40, 44, 54. Christ promises us over and over again, that he will raise us up at the last Day; and xi. 25. he thus declares himself to Martha, I am the Resurrection and the Life, he that believeth lieveth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and John v. 28. he tells us, that the Hour is coming, in which all that are in the Grave should hear his Voice, And of the Truth of this he hath given a most sure and certain Pledge by his own Resurrection, which not only demonstrates the Possibility of the Thing, that the Dead may rise, but also gives ample assurance that they shall. For that he hath in him a Power to raise the Dead, is evident by his raising himself; and to be sure that Power and Spirit that was in him when he raised himself, is able to raise all those in whom it resides. Whoever therefore hath the Spirit of Christ, that Spirit by which he rose from the Dead, hath the Power of the Resurrection in him; which Power to be sure will not be always in vain, but one time or other will most certainly be reduced into Act: For so the Apostle assures us, Rom. viii. 11. If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal Bodies, by his Spirit that dwelleth in us. And indeed considering that Christ in dying and rising from the Dead, acted as our Head and Representative, we may justly conclude, that as when he laid down his Life, he laid it down for ours; so when he took it up again, he took up ours with it; and consequently that he virtually raised us by the same Spirit, whereby he actually raised himself; because he hath not only Power, but also Will, as he is our Head and Representative, to raise us even as he raised himself. So that we are already risen in our Causes, since our Head and Representative is risen, and hath the same Power to raise us, as he had to raise himself; and hence he is called, the First-born from the Dead, and we the Sons of the Resurrection, Col i. 18. because our Resurrection is now in the same Causes, that is, in the same Will and Power, as his was before he arose. And, therefore, as also he is called the first Fruits of them that rise, that is, the Pledge and Handseal of the General Resurrection; because he is risen with the same Will and Power to raise us, that he had when he arose to raise himself; and hence we find the Apostle argues from the Resurrection of Christ to the General Resurrection, 1 Cor. xv. 12. Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the Dead, how say some among you, that there is no Resurrection of the Dead? If we are all agreed, that Christ is risen, what reason can any Man have to doubt of the General Resurrection? But if there be no Resurrection from the Dead, then Christ is not risen, ver. 13. To say that we shall not rise, is by Consequence to deny the Resurrection of Christ; because that very same Will and Power which must have been the Cause of Christ's Resurrection, if he be risen, must be the Cause of ours, if ever we rise; and therefore if it be insufficient to raise us, it could never have been sufficient to raise him, and consequently he cannot be risen. If it be objected against this reasoning of the Apostle, that our Resurrection will be far more difficult to accomplish than Christ's was, because his Body was never corrupted, nor were the Parts of it ever dispersed, as ours will be, long before the Resurrection; and therefore, that Cause which was sufficient to raise Christ, may not be sufficient to raise us: It may easily be answered, that to the infinite Power by which Christ was raised, all possible Things are equally easy; and therefore allowing our Resurrection to be but possible, it must be every whit as easy to that infinite Power by which Christ was raised, to reduce all our scattered Atoms into one Mass again, and to re-organize them into a Humane Body, and re-unite it to its ancient Soul, as it was to quicken the yet uncorrupted Body of our Saviour. So that all the Question is, whether the thing be possible; for if it be, it will be every a whit as easy to the omnipotent Cause of our Saviour's Resurrection, to raise our Bodies as it was to raise his. But, I beseech you, why should it be thought more impossible for God to raise a dead corrupted Body, whose Parts are all dispersed and scattered throughout the vast Wilderness of Matter, and re-unite it to its primev Soul, than it was at first to create the Matter of it, and then form it into a humane Body, and animate it with a humane Soul? He who at the first Creation could separate the confused Mass of Matter into so many distinct Kinds and Species of Beings, can, doubtless, at the general Resurrection, as easily separate the same Matter into its distinct and several Individuals. For, what should hinder him who numbers the Stars of the Heavens, the Sands of the Sea, and the Hairs of our Heads, from keeping an exact Account of all our scattered Particles, and from knowing what Dust belongs to every Body, and what Body to every Soul? Or how can it be difficult to him whose Power is as immense as his Knowledge, to recollect all the Parts of this curious Piece of Clock-work which he both made and took in sunder, and to restore every Pin into its proper Place, every Spring to its due Vigour and Activity, and every Wheel to its primitive Figure and Motion? If it be farther objected, that there is an impossibility in the Nature of the Thing, for the same dead Body after it is corrupted, and its Parts all dispers'd, to be re-united and raised to Life again; I answer, that since these dispersed Parts of our Bodies do not perish, but are safely laid up in the Chambers of Nature, however they are scattered, or where-ever lodged, they are all within the Ken of God's Knowledge, and within the Reach of his Power; and so long as they are so, why should their Separation render it impossible for them to be re-united how and when he pleases: If you say, that in that perpetual Course of Transmutation which the Matter of humane Bodies runs, it may happen, and sometimes doubtless it doth, that the same Particles at several Times are incorporated into several Bodies: As for Instance, when one Man eats either the Flesh, or that which hath the Flesh or Substance of another in it, and digests it into a Part of his own Body or Substance; in which Case, how is it possible at the Resurrection, that the Substance or Matter of this Part should be re-united to them both? To this I answer, that considering that scarce the hundredth Part of what we eat is digested into the Substance of our Bodies, and that all the rest we render back again into the common Mass of Matter by sensible or insensible Evacuations; though we should suppose one Man to have eaten up the whole Substance of another's Body, yet he retains but one Part of an hundred; and what should hinder an omnipotent Power from raising the Body he hath devoured out of the ninety-nine Parts which he lets go again? And then considering that in seven Years Time the whole Substance of our Body changes, he must, if he live so long, evacuate that one Part which he retained, and so the whole will at last be worn off from the Matter and Substance of his Body. Nay, suppose this Devourer to feed altogether upon Man's Flesh, as some affirm the Cannibals do, and that in the last seven Years before his Death, he devours one hundred humane Bodies weighing two hundred Pound a-piece; according to this Computation, the utmost he can be supposed to digest of the Flesh of these hundred Bodies into the Substance of his own, amounts not to above two Pound of each, so that of the two hundred Weight of bodily Substance, whereof these devoured Bodies did consist, there will still remain one hundred ninety-eight, undigested into the Substance of the Devourer; which we may easily conceive is sufficient Matter out of which to reproduce the same Bodies: For we many Times lose as much of our Substance in a Sweat, and a great deal more in a Consumption, as these devoured Bodies do in their being eaten and digested; notwithstanding which our Bodies continue numerically the same: But as for the Bodies of these Man-eaters, there is no doubt but they carry with them a great deal of other Substance to their Graves, besides that of Man's Flesh; for the Liquor which they drink with it, the Bread which they eat with it, and the other accidental Nourishments which they receive with it, goes into the Substance of their Bodies as well as that; and these being at least one half of their Nourishment, must constitute at least one half of their Bodies. What then should hinder, but that at the Resurrection the other half of them, which consists of Man's Flesh, may be separated from them, and restored to those humane Bodies they devoured; and if so, then each of them shall recover its whole Substance again, and not want so much as one Particle of all that Matter whereof they were composed when they were eaten: For it is but just, that they should be made to refund those unnatural Spoils, which they barbarously ravished from the Bodies of other Men. But then you will say, How shall the Body of the Cannibal that eat them be raised, when according to this Account it must be deprived of one half of the Substance it died withal? I answer, that to this remaining half of his bodily Substance, there may, without any Repugnance to its being raised the same Body, be added out of the common Mass of Matter, as much new bodily Substance as is sufficient to redintegrate it in all its Parts; for the Resurrection of the same Body, doth not necessarily imply that all the same Matter shall be raised, and no other, and no more. For if all shall be raised in the most perfect Stature and Proportion of humane Bodies, as there is no doubt but they shall, then Infants and Dwarfs, and such as die of Consumptions must have new Matter added to that which they die withal; and therefore the Resurrection of the same Body can imply no more than this, that every Body shall be raised out of the same Matter, so far as it will go; and therefore if this remaining half of the Substance of the Cannibal's Body, will not go far enough to redintegrate his whole Body at the Resurrection, there is no doubt but God will add new Substance to it, which will no more hinder it from being the same numerical Body, than the Reparation of an House with new Stones and Timber hinders it from being the same numerical House. For suppose that God by a Miracle should in an Instant restore a Man to his full Bulk, the Substance of whose Body is half pined away by a lingering Consumption, this would not at all hinder, but that still it would be the same numerical Body. Why then should the Addition of new bodily Substance to the remaining half of the Matter of the Cannibal's Body at the Resurrection, hinder it from being raised numerically the same?

And this I conceive is sufficient to clear the Doctrine of the general Resurrection from all Pretence of Repugnancy and Contradiction. But suppose after all, that there should be some rare and singular Instances, wherein it will be impossible in the Nature of the Thing for the same numerical Body to be raised again; this would no more impeach the Truth of a general Resurrection of the same Bodies; than Enoch's and Elijah's not dying, do the Truth of the Maxim of the Author to the Hebrews, It is appointed for all Men once to die. If therefore in any Instance it should be impossible in the Nature of the Thing for God to raise the same Body, it will be sufficient to serve the Purpose of Rewards and Punishments, for God to cloath the same Soul in a new Body. For it is the Soul that individuates the Man, and makes him to be the same Person though he hath not the same Body. We have not the same Matter about us when we are ten Years old, that we were first cloathed with when we were born; and as he who shall be rewarded or punished ten Years hence, for a Virtue or a Crime, which he acts now, will be rewarded or punished in the same Body, though not in the same Matter; so he who shall be rewarded or punished at the Resurrection for the Good or Evil which he doth in this Life, will be rewarded or punished in the same Person, though it should not be in the same Body. But it being more congruous to the Accuracy and Exactness of the divine Justice, that it should be in the same Body, as well as in the same Person, and it being every whit as easy to an infinite Power, to restore to our Souls the same Bodies as to cloath them in new Ones (for within the Compass of Possibilities, all Things are equally within the reach of Omnipotence) Men's Bodies shall be universally rebuilt at the Resurrection out of those old Ruins and Materials, in which they did Good or Evil in this Life; and if there should happen some particular Instances wherein such a numerical Resurrection should be in itself impossible, these will be only a few Exceptions from that general Rule, which rather confirm than destroy it. For thus from Scripture we are assured, that they who sleep in the Dust of the Earth shall awake, Dan. xii. 2. and that all that are in the Grave shall hear Christ's Voice and come forth, John v. 28, 29. that the Sea shall give up the Dead which are in it, and that Death and Hell, i. e. the Grave, shall deliver up the Dead which are in them, Rev. xx. 13. All which Expressions, Expressions, according to the literal Sense of them (from which, without necessary Reasons, we ought not to depart) do plainly import a Resurrection of the same numerical Bodies. Our Resurrection therefore being a possible Thing, as easy to an omnipotent Power, as Christ's was, and therefore his Resurrection is a most certain Pledge of ours; since he arose as our common Head and Representative, and consequently rose with the very same Will and Power to raise us which he had to raise himself.

Having thus proved the Truth of the Matter of Fact, viz. that Christ will raise us at the last Day; I proceed in the next Place to the Manner of the Fact, how it is that he will raise us. In treating of which, I shall regulate myself by that Account which the Apostle gives of it, 1 Cor. i. 5. in which he having proved at large the Truth of the Resurrection, from verse 12. to the 35th, he comes to answer an Objection concerning the Manner of it; but some Men will say, how are the Dead raised up, and with what Body do they come? In answer to which, he gives a large Description of it, and by the Similitude of Seed, explicates the Manner how it shall be performed, till he comes to ver. 42. where he applies the Similitude to the Matter in Hand; so also is the Resurrection of the Dead; and then goes on with a farther Enlargement on it to the End of the Chapter. So that this so also refers both to what went before, and to what follows. So also, i. e. so as I have already in Part described, and shall farther explain in my ensuing Discourse; this so therefore referring to the whole Description, implies these five Particulars, of which the whole consists.

First, So is this mortal Body to be the Seed and material Principle of our Resurrection.

Secondly, So must this Seed die and be corrupted, before it be quickned and revived.

Thirdly, So is the dead corrupted Body to be raised and quickned by the Power of God.

Fourthly, So is it to be raised by the divine Power, into the proper and natural Form of an humane Body.

Fifthly, So is this humane Body to be changed and altered in its Resurrection.

I. So is the Resurrection of the Dead, i. e. so is this mortal Body to be the Seed and material Principle of the Resurrection. For this is plainly implied, ver. 36. Thou Fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die. Intimating, that as the Seed is the material Cause of the Ear of Corn which afterwards springs up, so are these mortal Bodies which we sow in the Earth, at least the main materials of those immortal ones into which we shall be quickned at the Resurrection. Perhaps as the Seed digests and incorporates into itself the Juices of the Earth, and shoots them up together with its own Substance into the Stalk and Ear; so in some particular Instances at least, there may be other Matter at our Resurrection interwoven with the appropriate Substance of our mortal Bodies, and together with it spring up into immortal ones. Yet from the Apostle's Comparison it is apparent, that this very mortal Body which we sow in the Grave shall be at least the Seed and Embryo which shall receive our Soul at the Resurrection, and by that (supposing other Matter be added to it) assimilate and digest it into its own Substance. Now though to reproduce the scattered Particles of our dissolved Flesh, and extricate them out of all those other Substances whereinto they have been woven and entangled, may seem to us at first View an impossible Performance; yet that it is not so, I have already demonstrated; and if a Parcel of Quick-silver, after it hath run a tedious Course of Alteration, shifted itself out of its natural Form, into that of Vapour, out of a Vapour into an insipid Water, out of Water into a white or red or yellow Powder, out of that into a Salt, and thence into a malleable Metal, may by a skilful Artist be reduced out of all those various Contextures, into its natural Form of plain and running Mercury; why should we think it either impossible or difficult for a Being of immense Knowledge and Power, to watch the wandering Particles of our corrupted Bodies, through all their successive Alterations, and to retrieve them out of all those Substances, into which they shall be finally resolved; to take out of one Body, what belongs to another, and restore to each its own; and finally to incorporate them altogether into their natural Forms and Figures?

II. So is the Resurrection of the Dead, i. e. so is this Seed of our mortal Body, to die and be corrupted, before it shall be raised again. That which thou sowest is not quickened unless it die; intimating, that as the Parts of the Seed are separated in the Ground, and dissolved into a liquid Jelly, before it springs up into a Stalk and Ear; so this mortal Body of ours must be corrupted, its Parts must be dispersed and dissipated from one another, before it quickens and springs up again at the general Resurrection; and indeed the Body must naturally corrupt, when once it is separated from the Soul that enlivens it; and that before it is raised and glorified, the Soul should remain for some Space separated from it, seems highly necessary. For the Nature of Souls is such as requires a gradual and leisurely Progression out of one State into another, their Faculties are such as cannot in a natural Way be improved but by degrees, or qualified in an Instant for two extream Conditions, without a Miracle. But as for this mortal State, and that of the Resurrection, they are two such remote and distant Extreams, as that our slow-paced Natures, cannot travel from one to the other under a long Space of Time; and for a Soul to pass in one Instant out of an earthly into an heavenly, out of a fleshy into a spiritual, out of a mortal into an immortal Body, seems too great a Leap for a Being, whose Nature confines it to a gradual Improvement. For how should a Soul which hath been so long immured in mortal Flesh, so long accustomed to its sensual Pleasures, so clogged and incumbered with its unweildy Organs, so pinioned and hampered by its brutish Appetites; how, I say, is it possible in a natural Way, for such a Soul to be immediately disposed to act and animate an heavenly Body? And therefore it is requisite that for some Time at least it should continue in a separate State, there to innure itself to a heavenly Life, and by a continued Contemplation, and Love, and Imitation of God to ripen gradually into the State of the Resurrection, and to contract a perfect Aptitude to animate an heavenly Body; that so its Powers being enlarged and improved by Exercise, it may be able to manage that active fiery Chariot, and be prepared to operate by its nimble and vigorous Organs, which till the Soul is rendered more sprightly and active, by long and continual Exercise, will be perhaps too swift for it to keep pace withal. It is true, the Apostle tells us of some Souls, that in an Instant shall be fitted for, and with these heavenly Bodies, 1 Cor. xv. 51, 52. Behold I shew you a Mystery, we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a Moment, i. e. those good Men who are living just before the Resurrection, shall suffer no Separation of their Souls from their Bodies; but the beggarly Vestment of their Flesh, while it is upon them, shall in an Instant be transformed into a glorious and immortal Robe; which to be sure it would not be, unless in the same Instant also, their Souls were made fit to wear it. But then it is to be considered that both will be miraculous; and, for ought I know, it will be as great a Miracle immediately to fit an imperfect Soul for a glorified Body, as immediately to change a gross and corruptible Body into a glorious and immortal One. And therefore though some Souls shall be immediately qualified to operate by glorified Bodies, without any intermediate Space of Separation; yet this being extraordinary and miraculous, is only an Exception from the general Rule of Providence, which is to leave Things to proceed and act according to the regular Course of their Natures; and if Souls are so left, as ordinarily to be sure they are, it is highly requisite that they should be allowed some space of Separation from their mortal Bodies, before they are clothed with their immortal Ones; and consequently, that this mortal Body should be corrupted and dissolved before it is quickened and glorified.

III. So is the Resurrection of the Dead;—that is, so is the dead corrupted Body to be raised and quickened by the Power of God; so ver. 37, 38. That which thou sowest thou sowest not that Body that shall be, but bare Grain, perhaps of Wheat, or of some other Grain, but God giveth it a Body as it pleaseth him; in which he plainly intimates, that as a Grain of Wheat sown in the Ground is only the Seed or material Principle of the Stalk and Ear that spring up from it; but God is the principal efficient Cause that forms the Matter, and enlivens it, and causes it to spring up and ripen: So though these mortal Bodies which we sow in the Grave are the Seed and Matter out of which our immortal one shall spring, yet it is God that must recollect this Matter; reduce it into a Body again, and reunite it to its ancient Soul. For this is such a Performance as doth require an Almighty Agent; it is he alone can trace our scattered Atoms through all those Generations and Corruptions wherein they have wandered, and retrieve them out of all those other Bodies whereinto they have been finally resolved. It is he alone can separate them into the several Masses whereunto they originally appertained, and order, distinguish and distribute those rude Masses into their various Parts, and connect and joyn one Part to another. It is he alone that can recognize those undistinguished Heaps into humane Bodies, and reunite them to their primitive Souls. And accordingly we find, that this great Article of the Resurrection is in Scripture resolved into the Power of God: For so our Saviour attributes the Sadducees Denial of the Resurrection, to their not knowing the Scripture and the Power of God, Matth. xxii. 29. which plainly implies, that the Power of God must be the Cause of the Resurrection. So 2 Cor. i. 9. St. Paul tells us, that he was brought into a great Extremity, that so he might not trust in himself, but in God that raiseth up the Dead; and 1 Tim. vi. 13. I charge thee, saith he, before God that quickeneth all Things. And indeed to quicken our Bodies when they are dead, requires the same Power as it did at first to create and form them. For as at their first Creation they were formed out of the pre-existing Matter of the Earth, so at the Resurrection they must be reproduced out of the same Matter again; and as at the Creation all those distinct kinds of Beings we behold lay shuffled together in one common Mass, 'till the fruitful Voice of God separated this united Multitude into their distinct Species; so at the Resurrection, after these mortal Bodies are crumbled into Dust, and that Dust is scattered through all that confused Mass again, it is God alone whose powerful Voice can command them back again in their proper Shapes, and call them out again by their single Individuals; so that as our first Existence was only a real Echo to God's omnipotent Fiat, so will our Return into Existence be to his Almighty Surge. The Scripture indeed seems to affirm, that the holy Angels will be employed in this great Transaction, though what they are to do in it is not only expressly related; only 1 Thess. iv. 16. the Apostle seems to intimate, that their Office will be to collect the scattered Relicks of our Mortality; for there he tells, that the Lord himself shall descend from Heaven with a Shout, with the Voice of the Archangel, and the Trump of God; upon which the Dead in Christ shall rise first. Which popular Description seems to import, that as by a loud Voice or a Trumpet it was anciently the Custom of the Jews, and other Nations, to summon Assemblies, and particularly by a Trumpet to collect and rally their Armies: So at the Resurrection our Saviour, by the Ministry of his Angels, under the Conduct of their Archangel, will assemble and rally our scattered Atoms, and then by his Divine Power organize them into humane Bodies again, and reunite them to their proper Souls. For so Mat. xxiv. 31. Christ tells us, that his Angels shall with the sound of the Trumpet gather together his Elect from the four Winds. Which if you compare with the above-cited Text, you will find, that this sound of the Trumpet, by which the Elect are to be gathered, is to precede their Resurrection, and consequently, that it is not to gather them when they are raised, but to gather them to be raised; that is, to collect their dispersed Dust which hath been blown about upon the Wings of the Wind, in order to their being reintegrated into humane Bodies, and reformed with their Primitive Souls.

IV. So

IV. So is the Resurrection of the Dead, i. e. so are our dead Bodies to be raised again into the proper Form and Kind of humane Bodies; and this is implied in ver. 38. But God giveth it a Body as it pleaseth him, and unto every Seed his own Body, i. e. as to the Seed of Wheat, which dies in the Winter, God gives in the Spring the Body, or Stalk, and Ear of Wheat; so to this Mortal Body which we sow in the Grave, God will give at the Resurrection its own proper and specifick Form. For the Soul will have the same Faculties at the Resurrection, that it hath now in this Mortal State, and the Body is only in order to the Soul, its Parts and Members being all purposely contrived into fit Instruments for the Soul to work withal. These inward Faculties therefore continuing still and for ever the same, it is highly requisite, that at the Resurrection they should be refitted with the same Corporeal Instruments of Action: For the Soul is to the Body, what the Art is to the Thing that is formed by the Art; and therefore as the Thing formed is not perfect, so long as it is any way disproportionable to the Art which formed it; so neither can the Body be perfect, till in all its Parts it is every way appportioned unto the Faculties of the Soul; and how can the Matter of this corrupted Body be re-adapted to the natural Faculties of a humane Soul, unless it be raised again into an humane Body, and restored to its primitive Figure and Proportion? For should it be raised with more or fewer Parts than those it now consists of, it must either be defective or superfluous in its Parts, or the Soul must have more or fewer Faculties to employ them. It's true, after the Resurrection, the Scripture plainly tells us, that our Souls shall no longer exercise those their Animal Faculties of nourishing and propagating; that the Sons of the Resurrection shall neither marry, nor be given in Marriage, but that they shall be equal to the Angels of God, Matth. xxii. 30. and indeed since every individual Man will then be raised into an immortal State, there will be no need either that they should be nourished themselves, or that they should propagate any more Individuals to preserve their kind. But it doth not hence follow, either that the Soul shall be deprived of those animal Faculties, or consequently, that the Body shall be raised without the Organs, by which those animal Operations are performed: For though our Saviour's Body, after the Resurrection, had no need of Nourishment; yet it is plain, that it was raised again with its natural Instruments of eating and drinking, which he once actually used, to assure his Disciples of the Reality of his Resurrection; and though now those Parts are useless to him, as to that particular animal Operation, yet there is no doubt, but his Soul still uses them for other unknown Purposes, peculiar to his glorified State; or if he do not, yet since those Parts were necessary to the Perfection of a humane Body, and consequently, to the Redintegration of his humane Nature, it was requisite he should be raised with them, that so he might have corporeal Organs adapted to his animal Faculties, which it is plain were not extinguished by his Resurrection; and since the Resurrection of our Saviour's Body is in Scripture represented as the Pattern of ours (for he shall change our vile Body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious Body, Phil. iii. ver. 21.) we may hence warrantably conclude, that ours shall be raised as his was, compleat in all the Parts of an humane Body.

V. And lastly, So is the Resurrection of the Dead; i. e. so are these humane Bodies to be changed and altered by the Resurrection. So ver. 37. That which thou sowest, thou sowest not that Body that shall be, but bare Grain; intimating, that as the Seed, when it is sown, is nothing but bare Seed, though when it is quickned, it springs up into a long Stalk and Ear, which many times contains in it an hundred Grains; even so this mortal Body, which is only the naked Seed of our Resurrection, shall be very much altered from what it is, and changed into a more compleat and perfect Substance. For the more clear and distinct Explication of which, we will first consider the Change that will then be made in the Bodies of good Men; and secondly, the Change that will be made in the Bodies of the Wicked.

.First,

First, We will consider the Change that will then be made in the Bodies of good Men; which consists of four Particulars.

First, They will be changed from base and humble into glorious Bodies.

Secondly, From earthly and fleshy into spiritual and heavenly Bodies.

Thirdly, From weak and passive into active and powerful Bodies.

Fourthly, From mortal and corruptible into immortal and incorruptible Bodies.

I. The Bodies of good Men will be changed from base and humble into bright and glorious ones: so ver. 43. It is sown in Dishonour, it is raised in Glory; that is, when it is sown in the Grave, it is a base and abject thing, not to be endured above Ground for its ghastly Looks, and nauseous Stink and Putrefaction; but at its Resurrection it shall come forth in a bright and beautiful and venerable Form; for so our Saviour assures us, that after their Resurrection the Righteous shall shine forth as the Sun in the Kingdom of their Father, Matth. xiii. 43. that is, the Matter of their Bodies shall be refined and exalted into a bright and lucid Substance, which shall glitter like the Sun, and cast forth Rays of Glory round about them; and this, perhaps, is that Inheritance of the Saints in Light, that is, embodied in Light, which the Apostle speaks of, Col. i. 12. for when this dull Matter comes to be re-animated with a blessed and glorified Soul, it will doubtless derive from it a great deal of Beauty and Lustre. For if now our Soul, when it is overjoyed, can so transfigure our Bodies, fill our Eyes with such sprightly Flames, overspread our Countenance with such an amiable Air, and paint our Faces with such a serene and florid Aspect, what a Change will it make in our Resurrection-body, which being incomparably more fine and subtil than this, will be far more pliable to the Motions of the Soul? When therefore the happy Soul shall re-enter this softned and liquid Matter, ravish'd with unspeakable Joy and Content; how will its delightful Emotions change and transfigure it, how will its active Joys shine through and overspread it with an amiable Glory; especially when with this natural Energy of its glorified Soul, our Saviour himself shall co-operate to change this vile Body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious Body, according to the mighty working whereby he is able to subdue all Things to himself. Though now therefore the Matter of our Bodies is vile and sordid, and such as seems altogether incapable of such a glorious Change; yet according to the best Philosophy, there is no specifick difference in Matter, and if the vilest and most ignoble Matter, may by mere Motion, not only be crystallized but transformed into a flaming Brightness, as we are sure it may; if in lighting of a Candle that is newly blown out, by applying another to the ascending Smoke, this dark and stinking Substance may in the twinkling of an Eye be changed into a bright and glorious Flame; into what a refulgent Substance may the Matter of this mortal Body be changed, by the Concurrence of an infinite Power, with the vigorous Activity of a glorified Soul?

II. The Bodies of good Men will be changed from earthly and fleshy into spiritual and heavenly. So ver. 44. It is sown, saith he, a natural Body, it is raised a spiritual Body, where those Words σῶμα ψυχικόν, which we render a natural Body, may perhaps be better translated an animal Body, i. e. a Body suited and adapted to this animal Life, which the Beasts that perish enjoy in common with us; a Body that is sustained by animal Operations and recreated with animal Pleasures, and which by reason of its gross Substance, doth continually crave to be supplied with suitable Nourishment; and treated with gross and carnal Pleasures, which is the very thing that renders it so great a Cumber to the immortal Spirit that animates it. But at the Resurrection it will be improved into a spiritual Body, not that it will be converted into a spiritual Substance; for the Apostle's own Words do assure us, that it will still remain a Body, but the Spirituality of it will consist in this, that being wrought into a purser and finer Substance, it will no longer need or crave these animal Nourishments and Pleasures, but be perfectly fitted for and tempered to the Soul, and entirely resigned to its Use and Service; for it will then be refined from all those animal Appetites of eating, drinking and carnality, which do now too often not only render it unserviceable to the Soul, but also hurtful and injurious: So that then it will be in entire Subjection to the Mind, and all its Members will be devoted Instruments to the Service of Righteousness; so that now there will be no longer any Law in its Members, to wage War against the Law in the Mind, but the Mind will govern, and the Body obey without any Contest or Reluctancy; and as the Body will be wholly obedient to the Mind, so it will be perfectly adapted to its Service; for whereas now by reason of its gross Consistency, it is an unwieldy Luggage to the Soul, and doth very much clog and incumber her in her Operations; it will then be wrought into so fine and tenuous a Substance, as that instead of a Clog, it will be a Wing to the Soul: for its Consistence will be subtil as the finest Æther, and active as the purest Flame; it will have nothing that is gross or burthensome in it to retard or weary it in its Flights, to *rebat*e its Vigour, or slacken its Motion, but it will be all Life and Spirit, and Wing, and, like a perpetual Motion, be carried on with unwearied Swiftness by its own internal Springs, and being freed from all that Weight which now renders it so slow and heavy, it will be able to move, like a Thought, and to keep Pace with the most nimble Wishes of the Soul; so that what Hieroles saith of his spiritual Body, ὁ τῆ νοητοῦ τελεῖται ἡ ψυχῆς συνάπληται, i. e. that it is such a Body as is every way fitted to the intellectual Perfections of the Soul, will be true of this Resurrection-Body, which will be perfectly attuned to a perfect Mind, and fashioned into a most convenient Organ for it, whereby to exert its purest and most spiritual Operations.
from

III. The Bodies of good Men will be changed from weak and passive, into active and powerful Bodies; so ver. 43. It is sown in Weakness, it is raised in Power; that is, whereas the Body which we sow in the Grave is exceeding weak and infirm, liable to infinite Passions and Diseases, and can do but little, but suffer much; it shall be raised with a Temperament so pure and just, so hail and vigorous, that no Disease or Infirmity shall ever find any Place in it, or be able to cramp it in its Operations: For besides that, its elementary Qualities (if any such remain in it) shall be turned into such an exquisite Temper, that they shall never jar or disagree with each other, it shall be so spirited and invigorated by the blessed Soul that animates it, that nothing shall be able to impair its Health, or discompose its Harmony. So that it shall live for ever without Decay, move for ever without Weariness, fast for ever without Hunger, and wake for ever without any Need or Desire of Refreshment. * And, indeed, considering for what purpose our Bodies shall be raised, they have need to be very strong and vigorous; for they shall be raised on purpose to be the Organs and Instruments of the Operations of our glorified Souls, which being exceeding active as they are Spirits, but exceedingly more active as they are glorified Spirits, will require Bodies suitably strong and vigorous, such as can support their Joys, express their Activities, and keep Pace with their rapturous Emotions; to do which, will require a mighty Firmness and Vigour of Temper. Since therefore at the Resurrection God will fit and adapt our Bodies to the utmost Activity of our glorified Spirits, they must necessarily be supposed to be endued with unspeakable Strength and Agility, upon which Account they are called by the ancient Hebrews, Eagles Wings, upon which they suppose our glorified Souls shall be able to fly as fast, and as far as they please; and this I am apt to think is intimated in that Passage of St. Paul, 1 Thess. iv. 17. And they that are alive, and whose Bodies are changed in the State of the Resurrection, shall be caught up in the Clouds to meet the Lord in the Air; the Meaning of which is, not that they shall be snatched up from the Earth by any external Cause or Agent, but that their Bodies being changed into pure ethereal Flame, shall of their own accords ascend in them, as in so many fiery Chariots, to the Throne of their Redeemer in the Clouds; and from thence, when the Judgment is concluded, shall as nimbly ascend with him through all

all those spacious Fields of Air and Æther, that lie between that and the eternal Paradise of Blessedness: For that they shall be caught up by Angels, as some imagine, I see no reason to think; since our Saviour himself assures us, that at the Resurrection they shall be ἰσαγγελοι, and therefore shall not need their Help in this angelified State, either to waft them up into the Air, or from thence into the Heaven of Heavens; and if by their own Activity they shall be able to perform so vast a Flight, as 'tis from the Earth into the uppermost Region of the Air, and from thence into the supreme Region of everlasting Glory, we may from thence collect what a vast Power they will be endued with at their Resurrection. But this is most certain, that then they shall be perfectly released from all dolorous Passion, and continue in perfect Strength and Health, and Vigour for ever. So that whereas now our Bodies are exceeding weak and passive, a kind of walking Hospitals of Pains, Infirmities and Diseases; the Time will come, when our Soul shall be accommodated with a much more easy and convenient, as well as glorious Habitation, wherein it shall for ever forget those dismal Cries, O my Head, my Heart, my Bowels, and enjoy everlasting Rest and Freedom. Now she is in a travelling Condition, and the Inn she lodges at is mean and inconvenient, her Provision is coarse, her Bed hard, and her Rest continually interrupted with Noise and Tumult; but when she is once got home to her own House, her House not made with Hands, eternal in the Heavens, she shall there live in perfect Ease and Pleasure, free from all the Annoyances of Flesh and Blood, from all the Disturbances of Pain and Sickness, and from all the Toil and Fatigue, the Noise and Hurry of this mortal Condition, and with splendid State, delicious Fare, soft and quiet Repose, recompence herself a thousand-fold for all her present Travail and Weariness.

IV. And lastly, The Bodies of good Men will be changed from corruptible and mortal into incorruptible and immortal. So ver. 42, 53. It is sown in Corruption, it is raised in Incorruption, and this corruptible must put on Incorruption, this Mortal must put on Immortality, i. e. whereas this Body which we lay down hath, in the very Constitution of it, the Seeds of Mortality and Corruption, at the Resurrection it shall spring up into an incorruptible and immortal Substance, perfectly refined from all mortal and corruptible Principles; for so our Saviour pronounces of those who shall be accounted worthy to attain to this blessed Resurrection, that they cannot die any more, Luke xx. 36. which is a plain Argument, that our mortal Body shall not be merely varnished and gilded over with an external Glory and Beauty, but that all inward Principles of Corruption shall be utterly purged out of its Nature, so that it shall not be preserved immortal merely by the Force of an external Cause, but be so far immortal in itself, as not to have any Tendency to Death in its Nature and Constitution: For either it will be so liquid, that should its Parts be separated by any external Violence, like the divided Æther, they will immediately close again, or else so firm and compact, that no external Violence will be able to divide them; and thus having no Alloy of corrupt Principles in its Nature, no Quarrels or Discords between contrary Qualities, and being perpetually acted by a most happy, sprightly and vivacious Soul, which will every Moment diffuse a vast Plenty of Life and Vigour throughout all its Parts; it will be also secure from all inward Tendencies to Mortality; and being thus fortified both within and without, against all Attempts towards a Dissolution, what should hinder it from living for ever, and flourishing in immortal Youth? And thus I have endeavoured to give an Account of the happy Changes which good Men's Bodies will undergo in the general Resurrection.

But though they shall all of them be raised with unspeakable Advantages and Improvements, yet it is apparent from this, 1 Cor. xv. that they shall vastly differ in the Degrees of their Glory; so ver. 41. There is one Glory of the Sun, and another Glory of the Moon, and another Glory of the Stars; for one Star differeth from another Star in Glory, so also is the Resurrection of the Dead, i. e. as the Sun is more glorious than the Moon, the Moon than the Stars, and one Star than another, so shall our Bodies at the Resurrection be arrayed with different Degrees of Glory; and doubtless these Differences of Glory in our raised Bodies will arise from those different Degrees of Perfection to which their respective Souls have arrived; for the more perfect those Souls are, the more improved and accomplished Bodies they will require, because, according as they rise in degrees of Perfection, their Powers will be enlarged, and their Faculties rendered more active, and consequently will require Bodies more active and powerful. And therefore since at the Resurrection God will accommodate every Soul with a Body suitable to it in its utmost Exaltations and Improvements, we may reasonably conclude, that the several Bodies that are raised shall be more or less glorious, as the several Souls to which they appertain are more or less advanced in degrees of Perfection: For the Fitness and Congruity of Souls to glorified Bodies consists in their moral Perfection; and if upon an impossible Supposition, a wicked Soul should be mistaken for a pious one, and thrust into a glorified Body, it would not know what to do with, or how to behave itself in it, but, like a Swine in a Palace, would soon be weary of its Habitation, and impatiently long to be restored to its beloved Stye and Mire: For a glorified Body is an Instrument proper only for a glorified Soul to act and work with: It is purposely framed and composed for Contemplation and Love, for Joy and Praise and Adoration; and, what should a vicious Soul do with such a Body to whom those heavenly Exercises it was designed for are unnatural? 'Tis Piety and Virtue that fits and disposeth a Soul to animate and act in a glorified Body; and therefore I am apt to think, that as the animal Disposition of our Soul doth now co-operate with the divine Providence in the forming its animal Body into the Womb, so that divine and spiritual Disposition which the Soul doth contract before, and improve after its Separation from the Body, will co-operate with the Almighty Power of our Saviour in the forming its new Body at the Resurrection; and that as by the animal Plastick Power of our Souls, God did first form our animal Bodies, so by this spiritual Plastick Power of it, which is nothing but its moral Perfection, he will hereafter form our spiritual Bodies; and if so, then the more of that Perfection the Soul arrives to at the Resurrection, the more it will spiritualize and glorify its Body; and so still the more perfect it grows, the more it will improve its glorified Body in Beauty, Lustre and Activity, so that as through a transparent Glass we plainly discern the Size and Colour of the Substance contained in it; so perhaps through the still encreasing Degrees of the Body's Glory, the Degree and Size of the Soul's Perfection will appear. But whether this be true or no, which I confess is only my Conjecture, thus much is certain, that the Bodies of Men will be raised with different Degrees of Glory; and therefore since we are assured that the great End of the last Judgment will be to distribute to every one according to his Works, we have sufficient Reason to conclude, that the Bodies will be glorified more or less in Proportion to the Perfection of their Souls.

And thus I have endeavoured to give a brief Account of those happy Changes which good Mens Bodies must undergo at the Resurrection; I proceed therefore in the next Place to shew the woful Change that will then also be made in the Bodies of wicked Men; in which I shall be very brief, because we have but a very short and general Account of it in Scripture, where we are only told, that they shall awake to everlasting Shame and Contempt, Dan. xii. 2. and that they shall come forth to the Resurrection of Damnation, John v. 28. and that upon their Resurrection they shall be judged according to their Works, and cast into the Lake of Fire, Rev. xx. 13, 15. from whence it is apparent, that they shall be raised for no other end, but to be punished, to endure the Vengeance which shall then be rendered to them, even the Vengeance of eternal Fire; for that will be their Doom, Depart ye Cursed into everlasting Fire, prepared for the Devil and his Angels. Since therefore their Resurrection will be only in order to their being fetched from Prison to Judgment, and sent from Judgment to Execution; to be sure their Bodies will be raised in full Capacity to suffer the fearful Execution of their Doom; that is, with an exquisite Sense to feel, and an invincible Strength to sustain the Torment of eternal Fire: For since they must suffer for ever, they must be raised both passive and immortal with a Sense as quick as Lightning to perceive their Misery, and yet as durable as an Anvil to undergo the Stroaks of it, which to all Eternity will be repeated upon them without any Pause or Intermiſſion. Thus shall they be raised with a most vivacious and everlasting Sense of Pain, that so they may ever feel the Pangs of Death without ever dying: So St. Cyril Catech. Illum. 4. p. 26. οἱ ἀμαρτωλοὶ αἰώνια λαμβάνουσι σώματα ἵνα εἰς αἰῶνας ἔ ἀμαρτημάτων ὑπομείνωσι τὴν βασανον. i. e. wicked Men shall be cloathed with eternal Bodies, that in them they may suffer the eternal Punishment of their Sins; and so they shall have Strength to suffer as long as Vengeance hath Will to inflict: And therefore since it is the Will of divine Vengeance that they should suffer eternal Life, the divine Power will furnish them with such Bodies as shall be able to endure everlasting Scorching in that Fire, without being ever consumed by it; for at their Resurrection their wretched Ghosts shall be fetch'd out of those invisible Prisons, wherein they are now reserved in Chains against the Judgment of the great Day, to suffer in that Body wherein they sinned; and that therein they may be capable of lingring out an Eternity of Torment, they shall be re-united to it in such a fatal and indissoluble Bond, as neither Death nor Hell shall ever be able to unloose. And this is all the Account we have from Scripture concerning the Change that shall be made by the Resurrection in the Bodies of wicked Men, viz. That from weak and corruptible Bodies, they shall be changed into vigorous and incorruptible Ones, and be endued with a quick and everlasting Sense of all that everlasting Punishment which they are raised to endure.

Thus having given an Account at large of this second regal Act, which our blessed Saviour is yet to perform, viz. Raising the Dead; I proceed to the

III. And last, viz. his judging the World. In treating of which great and fundamental Article of our Faith, I shall endeavour,

First, To prove the Truth of the Thing, that our blessed Saviour shall judge the World.

Secondly, To give an Account of the Signs and Fore-runners of his coming to judge it.

Thirdly, To shew the Manner of his coming.

Fourthly, To explain the whole Process of his Judgment.

I. I shall endeavour to prove the Truth of the Thing, viz. that our Saviour shall judge the World, than which there is no one Proposition more frequently and plainly asserted in holy Scripture. Thus Acts xvii. 31. we are told, that God hath appointed a Day, in the which he will judge the World in Righteousness, by the Man whom he hath ordained; and that this Man is Jesus Christ we are assured, Acts x. 42. And he commanded us to preach unto the People, and to testify that it is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge of Quick and Dead. So also 2 Tim. iv. 1. I charge thee before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the Quick and the Dead at his appearing, and his Kingdom. And accordingly we are told, that we shall all stand before the Judgment-seat of Christ, Rom. xiv. 10. And all appear before the Judgment-seat of Christ, that every one may receive the Things done in his Body according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad, 2 Cor. v. 10. And to the same Purpose our Saviour himself tells us, that the Father judgeth no Man, that is immediately, but hath given all Judgment to his Son; and afterward he gives the Reason of it, because he is the Son of Man, John v. 22, 27. that is, because he dutifully complied with his Father's Will, in chearfully condescending to cloath himself in humane Nature, and therein to offer up himself a willing Victim for the Sins of the World; for so Rev. v. 9, 12. Worthy is he alone to receive the Book, (of Judgment) and to open the Seals thereof, because he was slain, and hath redeemed us to God by his Blood; worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive the Power and Honour, the Glory and Blessing appendent to his high Office of judging the World. From all which it abundantly appears, that this great Action of judging the World is to be performed by Christ. I proceed therefore to the Second general Head I proposed to treat of, which was to give an Account of the Signs and Fore-runners of his coming to Judgment: For before he actually appears, he will give the secure World a fearful Warning of his coming, by hanging out to its publick View a great many horrible Signs and Spectacles; for thus the Prophet Joel, Joel i. 30, 31. I will shew Wonders in the Heavens, and in the Earth Blood, and Fire, and Pillars of Smoak, the Sun shall be turned into Darknes, and the Moon into Blood, before the great and terrible Day of the Lord; which Prophecy of his is particularly exemplified by our Saviour, immediately after the Tribulation of those Days shall the Sun be darkened, and the Moon shall not give her Light, and the Stars of Heaven shall fall, and the Powers of the Heavens shall be shaken, and then shall appear the Sign of the Son of Man in Heaven, Matth. xxiv. 29, 30. and more particularly, Luke xxi. 11, 25. Great Earthquakes shall be in divers Places, and Famines, and Pestilences, and fearful Sights, and great Signs shall there be from Heaven, and there shall be Signs in the Sun, and in the Moon, and in the Stars, and upon the Earth, Distress of Nations with great Perplexity, the Sea and the Waves roaring; and then it follows, then shall they see the Son of Man coming. It is true, this Prophecy of our Saviour immediately respects the Destruction of Jerusalem, and was in Part accomplished in it; several of these very Signs being a little before the Calamity of that City actually exhibited to the publick View of the World, as both Josephus and Tacitus assure us; and several others of them were exhibited immediately after the Tribulation of those Days, in that prodigious Eruption of the Vesuvius in Campania, the woful Effects whereof were felt not only in Rome and Italy, but in a great Part of Africa, in Syria, Constantinople, and in all the adjoining Countries, Vid. Dion. Cass. lib. 66, 68. but it is apparent, that our Saviour here prophecies of the Judgment of Jerusalem, as it was a Type and Representation of the general Judgment; so that though his Prophecy respects Jerusalem's Doom immediately, yet through this it looks forward to the final Doom of the World; and therefore, as in foretelling the former, he prefigures the latter; so in foretelling the foregoing Signs of the former, he prefigures the foregoing Signs of the latter. And since he here intended the Signs of Jerusalem's Doom's-day, only for Types and Figures of those Signs, which shall forerun the Doom's-day of the World; and seeing that Types have always less in them than are in the Things which they typify, and prefigure, there is no doubt, but those Signs, which shall forerun the last Judgment, will be much more eminent and illustrious, than those of Jerusalem's Judgment, which were intended only to typify and prefigure them; and accordingly St. Jerome tells us of an ancient Tradition of the Jewish Doctors (to which our Saviour in this Prediction seems plainly to refer) that for fifteen Days together, before the general Judgment, there shall be transacted upon the Stage of Nature a continued Scene of fearful Signs and Wonders, the Sea shall swell to a prodigious Height, and make a fearful Noise with its tumbling Waves; the Heavens shall crack Day and Night with loud and roaring Thunders; the Earth shall groan under hideous Convulsions, and be shaken with quotidian Earthquakes; the Moon shall shed forth purple Streams of discoloured Light; the Sun shall be cloathed in a dismal Darknes; and the Stars shall shrink in their Light, and twinkle like expiring Candles in the Socket; the Air shall blaze with portentous Comets, and the whole Frame of Nature like a Funeral Room, shall be all hung round with Mourning and with Ensigns of Horror; and when these fatal Symptoms appear upon the Face of the Universe, then shall the Inhabitants of the Earth mourn, and the Sinners in Sion shall be horribly afraid, being loudly forewarned by these astonishing Portents of the near Approach of their everlasting Doom.

Having

Having thus briefly shewn what shall be the Signs of our Saviour's coming to Judgment, I shall proceed to

III. The Third General, which was to shew the Manner and Circumstances of his Coming; and here we will first consider the Place from whence he is to come; Secondly, the State in which he is to come; Thirdly, the Carriage on which he is to come; Fourthly, the Equipage with which he is to come; Fifthly, the Place to which he is to come.

I. The Place from which he is to come, which is no other than the highest Heavens, where he now lives and reigns in his exalted and glorified Humanity; for him must the Heavens receive till the Time of the Restitution of all Things, Acts iii. 21. in that bright Region of eternal Day, that Kingdom of Angels and of Spirits of just Men made perfect; he is to reign in Person till the last and terrible Day, and from thence he is to begin his Circuit, when he comes to keep his general Assizes upon Earth, for he is to be revealed from Heaven with his mighty Angels, 2 Thess. i. 7. and to descend from Heaven with a Shout, 1 Thess. iv. 16. so that in the Close of those dreadful Alarms which he will give the World, by the preceding Signs of his Coming, he will arise from his Imperial Seat, at his Father's right Hand, and descend in Person from those high Habitations of inaccessible Light, and every Eye shall see him as he comes shooting like a Star from his Orb, and the Sight of him shall affect the whole World with unspeakable Joy or Consternation. The Righteous, when they see him, shall lift up their Heads and rejoyce, because they know he is their Friend, and brings the Day of their Redemption with him; they shall congratulate his Arrival, and welcome him from Heaven with Songs of Triumph and Deliverance: But as for the Wicked, they shall shriek and lament at the Sight of him, as being conscious to themselves, that by a thousand Provocations they have render'd him their implacable Enemy; the Sense of which will cause them to exclaim in the bitter Agonies of their Souls; "O yonder comes he whose Mercies we have spurned, whose Authority we have despised, whose Laws we have trampled on, and all the Methods of whose Love we have utterly baffled and defeated; and now forlorn and miserable that we are, how shall we abide his Appearance, or whither shall we flee from his Presence? O that some Rock would fall upon us, or that some Mountain would be so pitiful as to swallow us up and bury us from his Sight for ever. But woe are we! within these few Moments the Rocks and Mountains will be gone, the Heavens and Earth will melt away, and nothing will be left besides ourselves for his fiery Indignation to prey on." Thus shall the Sight of the Son of Man descending from his Throne in the Heavens to judge the World, inspire his Friends with unspeakable Joy, and strike his Enemies with Terrour and Confusion.

II. We will consider the State in which he is to come, which shall be far different from that in which he came Sixteen hundred Years ago. Then, he came in an humble and despicable Condition, clouded with Poverty and Grief, and oppressed with all the innocent Infirmities of humane Nature; but, at the last Day he shall come in his glorified State, clothed in that celestial Body which he now wears at the right Hand of God: For so, Acts i. 11. the Angel assures his Disciples, This same Jesus which is taken up from you into Heaven, shall so come in like manner as you have seen him go into Heaven; that is, he shall return to Judgment in that self-same glorified Body wherein you now see him ascend: And what a glorious one that is we may partly learn from that Majestick Description of it, Rev. i. 13, 14, 15, 16. In the midst of the Seven Candlesticks was one like the Son of Man, his Head and his Hair were white as Wool, as white as Snow, his Eyes were as a Flame of Fire, and his Countenance was as the Sun shining in its Strength. And partly from his Transfiguration on the Mount, which was but a short Essay and Specimen of his Glorification; for it is said, that his Face did shine as the Sun, and that his Raiment was white as the Light, white with those Beams of Glory, which, from his transfigured Body Body shone through all his Apparel, Matth. xvii. 2. when therefore he descends from Heaven to judge the World, it shall be with this glorified Body, this Body of pure and immaculate Splendor, with its Hair shining like Threads of Light, its Eyes sparkling with Beams of Majesty, and its Face displaying a most beautiful Lustre, and its whole Substance shedding forth from every part a dazzling Glory round about it; and this I conceive is that which he himself calls his own Glory, Luke ix. 26. When he (i. e. the Son of Man) shall come in his own Glory; that is, the Glory of that illustrious heavenly Body, wherein he is now array'd; besides which bright and luminous Robe, in which, like a Meridian Sun, he shall visibly shine over all the World, the afore-cited Text tells us, that he shall also come in the Glory of his Father; by which I conceive is meant that which the Hebrews call the Shechinah, and the Scripture the Glory of the Lord, viz. a Body of bright shining Fire, in which the Lord was especially present, and with which, as the Psalmist expresseth it, he covered himself as with a Garment, Psal. civ. 2. for in 2 Thess. i. 8. we are told, that he shall be revealed from Heaven with flaming Fire; and so he descended on the Mount in Fire, Exod. xix. 18. and that Fire is called the Glory of the Lord, Exod. xxiv. 17. That Fire therefore in which our Saviour shall be revealed from Heaven, seems to be of the same Nature with that fiery Shechinah or visible Glory of the Lord, in which he descended on Mount Sinai, though doubtless it will be far more glorious, as being designed to adorn a far more glorious Solemnity. And this Glory being added to the natural Brightness and Splendor of his glorified Body, will cause him to outshine the Sun, and drown all the Lights of Heaven in the conquering Brightness of his Appearance. So that when he comes forth from his æthereal Palace, and appears upon the eastern Heaven, that immense Sphere of visible Glory which will then surround him, will, in the twinkling of an Eye spread and diffuse itself over all the Creation, and cause both the Heavens and the Earth to glitter like a flaming Fire.

III. Thirdly, We will consider the Carriage on which he is to come, which, as the Scripture tells us, shall be a Cloud; so Acts i. 11. the Angels tell his Disciples, who stood gazing after him as he was ascending into Heaven, the same Jesus which is taken from you into Heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into Heaven. Now, if you would know how that was, the ninth Verse will inform you, where it is said, that he was taken up, and a Cloud received him out of Sight, and therefore as he ascended into Heaven on a Cloud, so in like manner he shall from thence descend upon a Cloud also; and accordingly our Saviour himself declares, that we shall see the Son of Man coming in the Clouds of Heaven in Power and great Glory, Matth. xxiv. 30. So also, Matth. xxvi. 64. Hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting on the right Hand of Power, and coming in the Clouds of Heaven. And in this very Manner do the Jews expect the Coming of their Messias, as appears by that Gloss of one of their ancient Masters, on Dan. vii. 10. Si meruerint Judæi veniet in nubibus Cæli; which Raimund. Pug. Fid. thus explains, If ever the Jews deserve that the Messias should come, he shall come gloriously, according to the Prophet Daniel, that is, in the Clouds of Heaven. And then he tells us farther, Ideo moderni Judæi dicunt Messiam non venisse, quia non viderunt eum venire in nubibus cæli: Therefore do the modern Jews say, that the Messias is not yet come, because they never saw him coming in the Clouds of Heaven. And it seems very probable that the great Offence which the High Priest took at our Saviour's saying, that they should hereafter see him coming in the Clouds of Heaven, Matth. xxvi. 64, 65. was this, That it was a Tradition among them, that the Messias should so come, and that therefore he looked upon that Saying of our Saviour as a blasphemous Pretence to his being the Messias; as much as if he should have said, though I have done enough already to convince you that I am the Messias, yet you shall hereafter see that very Sign of my being the Messias, upon which you so much depend, and without which you will not believe, viz. my coming in the Clouds of Heaven;

Heaven, which therefore I am apt to think is the Sign of the Son of Man in Heaven, of which our Saviour speaks, Matt. xxiv. 30. For so not only the Jews do character their Messias, but also the Heathens their Gods cloathed in a Cloud. Thus Homer, Iliad. lib. 5. represents God coming to Diomedes, νεφέλην εἰλύμενον ὤμους, with his Shoulders wrapp'd in a Cloud; and so also Virgil represents Jupiter coming to assist Æneas, Æn. 7. — Radiis ardentem lucis & auro Ipse manu quatiens ostendit ab æthere nubem; i. e. shewing him a Cloud from Heaven, flaming with Rays of Light and Gold. So that to appear in Clouds, it seems, was looked upon both by Jews and Gentiles as a divine Sign and Character; and accordingly this Sign was given by our Saviour to the Jews, in that glorious Representation of a Captain with his Legions issuing out of the Clouds a little before the Destruction of Jerusalem, recorded at large both in Josephus and Tacitus, and will hereafter be given to the whole World in a far more glorious Manner, at the opening of the Day of Judgment; for then, as the Psalmist expresses it, he will make the Clouds his Chariots, and ride down from the Heavens on them in a triumphal Procession, shining with unspeakable Glory and Majesty: So that as when he ascended a bright and radiant Cloud was prepared to receive and carry him up to the Seat of the Blessed; so when he descends there will be a vast Sheet of condensed Æther in the Form of a radiant Cloud (and such its probable was that on which he ascended) prepared to receive him, and to waft him down from above, to the Place appointed for the general Assizes; and this very Cloud, or bright ætherial Substance, on which he shall come, will perhaps be that Throne of Glory, in Matth. xxv. 31. on which he shall sit, whilst he is administering Judgment to the World; for this Substance being not only naturally luminous, but also accidentally illuminated from the Sun of Righteousness whom it bears; will, to be sure, be sufficiently glorious to deserve the Name of a Throne of Glory.

IV. Fourthly, We will consider the Retinue and Equipage with which he shall come, which, as the Scripture tells us, will consist of innumerable Myriads of Saints and Angels; for immediately upon the Notice that he is going down to solemnize the general Judgment, all those blessed Spirits of just Men made perfect, whom he hath redeemed and glorified from the Beginning of the World, shall forsake their Mansions of Glory to attend him in his Progress; for so Enoch prophesied of old, Behold the Lord comes with ten thousand of his Saints to execute Judgment on the ungodly, Jude xiv. 15. and that by these ten thousand, he means the whole Body of the Church Triumphant, is evident by that Passage of St. Paul, 1 Thess. iii. 13. where he prays, that they might be established in their Christian Course till the coming of the Lord Jesus with all his Saints; and indeed, since they are all to re-assume their Bodies, and to be made Partakers of the glorious Resurrection, it's necessary that they should all come down along with him and return to this Earth, where the old Matter of those Bodies lies, wherein they are to be re-invested: And to this illustrious Retinue, of glorified Saints shall be joined the heavenly Hosts of the holy Angels; for so Christ himself tells us, that he shall come in his own Glory, and in his Father's, and of his holy Angels, Luke ix. 26. and that he shall come in his Glory, and all his holy Angels with him, Matth. xxv. 31. And St. Paul tells us, that he shall be revealed from Heaven with his mighty Angels, 2 Thess. i. 2. And as the Angels shall come down along with him, so in all probability they shall come in a glorious Appearance, cloathed in bright æthereal Bodies, in which to adorn the Triumphs of that glorious Day, they shall be conspicuous to all the Inhabitants of the Earth. Neither shall their coming with him be only for Shew and Pomp; but the Scripture plainly tells us, that they shall minister to him in that great Transaction: For at his issuing forth from the Heaven of Heavens, these mighty Hosts of Angels shall march before him, with the Archangel in the Head of them, who, with a mighty Voice or Sound, like that of a Trumpet, shall send forth an awakening Summons to all the Inhabitants of the Grave to come forth and appear before the Judgment-Seat; at which tremendous mendous Voice, which with an all enlivening Power, shall be reverberated through all the Vault of Heaven, and penetrate the most secret Repositories of the Earth, the Dead shall rise, and the Living shall be changed and transfigured, and all shall be set before the dread Tribunal to undergo their Trial, and receive their Doom: For so, 1 Thess. iv. 16. For the Lord himself shall descend from Heaven with a Shout, with the Voice of the Archangel, and the Trump of God, and the Dead in Christ shall rise first; and in 1 Cor. xv. 52. the Resurrection of the Dead is made the Consequence of the sounding this Trumpet, for the Trumpet shall sound, and the Dead shall be raised incorruptible; and so also Mat. xxiv. 31. our Saviour tells us, that at his coming on the Clouds of Heaven, he will send his Angels with a great Sound of a Trumpet, and they shall gather together his Elect from the four Winds; from whence it is evident, that the Angels shall then minister to him in raising the Dead, and assembling them to Judgment; and hence that which is called the Voice of the Archangel in the above-cited, 1 Thess. iv. 10. is elsewhere called the Voice of the Son of God, John v. 25. because as it will be animated by his Power, so it will be pronounced by his Authority; and as they shall minister to him in raising the Dead to be judged, so shall they also in executing his Sentence and Judgment; for so Matt. xiii. 41, 42. he tells us, the Son of Man shall send forth his Angels, and they shall gather out of his Kingdom all Things that offend, and them which do Iniquity, and shall cast them into a Furnace of Fire, there shall be wailing and gnashing of Teeth. From whence it's evident, that when he hath pronounced Sentence on the Workers of Iniquity, he will, by the Ministry of his Angels, chase them into that everlasting Fire, whereunto he hath doomed and devoted them. Thus when he comes to judge the World, all his holy Angels shall come with him, and that not only to contribute to the Glory and Splendour of his Circuit, but also to minister to him in his Judgment; so that his Retinue shall consist of all the Inhabitants of Heaven, who shall all come forth together with him, and bear him Company in this his triumphant Progress through the Skies: By which we may easily imagine what an amazing Spectacle his coming down from Heaven will be to the Inhabitants of the Earth, when they shall see him descend from his imperial Seat, far above the starry Skies, with all the Train-Bands of Heaven about him, the Captain of the angelical Host in the Front of innumerable Angels marching before him, and with his mighty Trump ringing a Peal of Thunder through the Universe, and with ten thousand thousands of the Spirits of just Men made perfect, following after him with Crowns of Glory on their Heads, and Songs and Hallelujahs in their Mouths; O blessed Jesu! how will this glorious and dreadful Sight confound thy Enemies, and ravish thy Friends, make those that hate thee tremble and gnash their Teeth, and those that love thee, lift up their Heads and shout for Joy!

V. And lastly, We will consider the Place to which he is to come, concerning which, all that is certain from Scripture is this, that when he comes down from Heaven, he will fix his Throne or Judgment Seat in the Air, at such a convenient Distance from the Earth, as shall render him visible to all its Inhabitants. For so 1 Thess. iv. 17. it is said of the Righteous, that after their being raised or changed, they shall be caught up in the Clouds, to meet the Lord in the Air; which is a plain Argument, that the Lord will sit in Judgment on them in the Air, since thither they will be caught up to him after they are raised and judged. Thus in that very Air, which is now the Seat of the Devil's Empire, shall Christ fix his Throne to manifest to all the World, the Consummation of his Victory over the Powers of Darkness. There shall he sit in Majesty and Glory, where now the Devil and his Angels reign, and in the publick View of the World, shall even in their own Dominion spoil those bellish Principalities and Powers, and having chained them at his Chariot-Wheels, make a Shew of them openly, triumphing over them; there where they now domineer and tyrannize over this wretched World, shall he set his Foot upon their Necks, and from thence shall he tread them down into everlasting Darkness and Despair. Thus

Thus that he may expose himself to the more publick View; and the Devil to the more publick Shame and Confusion, he will chuse to keep his general Assizes in the Air. Being therefore arrived into the airy Regions, after a long and glorious Progress, from the highest Heaven, there he shall sit down upon the Throne of his Glory, as some think, over against Mount Olivet, the Place from whence he ascended, whither all People, Nations and Languages shall be gathered before him to receive their everlasting Doom. And now let us imagine with ourselves in what a glorious and tremendous Majesty, he will appear to the World from his Judgment Seat, whence every Eye shall see him shine in his own, his Father's, and his Angels Glory, who in a bright Corona shall sit round about him like so many Stars about a Sun; and where, as the Prophet Daniel describes him, chap. vii. ver. 9, 10. he shall exhibit himself to publick View, cloathed in Garments as white as Snow, with the Hair of his Head like the pure Wool, sitting on a Throne like the fiery Flame, and its Wheels as burning Fire, with a fiery Stream issuing out from before him, and thousand thousands ministring unto him, and ten thousand Times ten thousand standing before him, whilst the Judgment is set, and the Books are opened. And thus I have given a brief Account from Scripture of the Manner and Circumstances of his coming: From whence I proceed to the

IV. And last General I proposed to treat of, viz. to explain the whole Process of this Judgment. And that we may proceed herein the more distinctly we will consider it with respect to those twofold Objects; viz. the Righteous and the Wicked, about which it is to be exercised; for it is plain from Scripture, that they are not to be judged promiscuously one among another as they come, but the Sheep are to be separated from the Goats, the Good from the Bad, and to be tried and sentenced apart from one another, Matth. xxv. 32, 33. And he, i. e. the Son of Man, shall separate them from one another, as a Shepherd divideth his Sheep from the Goats, and he shall set the Sheep on his Right Hand, and the Goats on the Left; in which Separation the Precedency will be given to the Sheep or Righteous, who are to be judged first; for so the Scripture assures us, that the Dead in Christ are to rise first, and that after they have undergone their Judgment, they are immediately to be wafted up into the Air, there to meet the Lord, and to sit as Assessors with him in that Judgment, which he shall afterwards pass upon the Wicked, vide 1 Thes. iv. 15, 16, 17. compared with 1 Cor. vi. 2. In explaining therefore the Process of this Judgment, we will treat of it in the same Order wherein it will be transacted, beginning first with the Judgment of the Righteous; in which according to the Scripture Account of it, there are these five Things implied: 1. Their Citation or Summons. 2. Their Personal Appearance before the Judgment Seat. 3. Their Trial. 4. Their Sentence. 5. Their Assumption into the Clouds of Heaven.

I. This Judgment of the Righteous includes their Citation or Summons, which as was observed before, is to be performed by the Voice or Trump of the Arch-angel, i. e. by an audible Shout or Noise made by the Prince of Angels, and sounding throughout the Universe, like the mighty Blast of a Trumpet. For as it was anciently the Manner of Nations, to gather their Assemblies by the sound of a Trumpet; so by the same Sound the Scripture tells us, God will assemble the World of Men to Judgment, and that this shall be a real audible Sound like that of a Trumpet, though proceeding from no other Instrument than that of the Arch-angel's Mouth, I see no reason to doubt; because with such a Noise we read God did descend upon Mount Sinai, Exod. xix. 16. and why may we not as well understand the One in a literal Sense as the other, it being no more improper in the Nature of the Thing, for God to proclaim by such a Sound his coming to judge the World, than it was, his coming to give Laws to Israel. But then together with this mighty Voice or Trump of the Arch-angel, there shall proceed from Christ a divine Power, even his Holy Spirit, by which he raised himself from the Dead, by whose omnipotent Agency all those holy Relicks of the Bodies of his Saints, which are now scattered about the World, shall be gathered up, re-united, and re-organized into glorious Bodies; for so the Apostle attributes the Resurrection of our Bodies to the Holy Ghost; Rom. viii. 11. For if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the Dead dwell in us, he that raised up Christ from the Dead, shall also quicken our mortal Bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in us; and the old Materials of their Bodies being thus re-united and reformed by the powerful Energy of the Holy Ghost, accompanying the Sound of the Arch-angel's Trump, those saintly Spirits, which anciently inhabited them, and which are now come down from Heaven with their Saviour, shall every one re-enter its own proper Body, and animate it with immortal Vigour and Activity, and whilst the dead Saints are thus arising, those who shall then be living, and have not tasted Death, shall by the same Almighty Power be changed, transformed and glorified in the twinkling of an Eye, 1 Cor. xv. 51, 52. which being transacted, they shall all be gathered together, by the Ministry of the Holy Angels, from all Parts of the Earth, before the Judgment Seat of Christ, Matth. xiii. 27. For,

II. This Judgment of the Righteous doth also include their Personal Appearance before the Judgment Seat. What this Judgment Seat will be, hath been briefly hinted before, viz. a vast Body of luminous Æther, condensed into the Form of a bright and radiant Cloud, and placed in the Region of the Air, at a convenient Distance from the Earth, streaming with Light from every Part and casting forth an unspeakable Glory; for which Cause it is called the Throne of his Glory, and is described by St. John to be a great white or refulgent Throne, Rev. xx. 11. out of which Lightnings and Thunders are said to proceed, Rev. iv. 5. which implies, that it will be a Cloud, it being from Clouds that Thunders and Lightnings do proceed. And before this glorious Tribunal or bright Judgment Seat, shall all the Assembly of the Righteous appear to undergo a merciful Tryal, and receive a happy Doom. Here shall the glorious Company of the Apostles, the goodly Fellowship of the Prophets, the noble Army of Martyrs, the holy Church throughout all the World, both Militant and Triumphant, meet, and in one entire Body present themselves before their blessed Redeemer; who looking down from his exalted Throne, shall at one View see all the Congregation of his Saints before him, and with infinite Complacency survey the Fruit of the Travail of his Soul, and the mighty Purchase of his precious Blood; for so the Apostle tells us, that we must all stand before his Judgment Seat, Rom. xiv. 10.

III. This Judgment of the Righteous doth also include their Tryal; for so the Apostle assures us, We must all appear (i. e. we Righteous as well as others) before the Judgment-seat of Christ, that every one may receive the Things done in his Body, 2 Cor. v. 10. which plainly implies, that even the Righteous shall undergo an impartial Tryal of their Deeds; that so they may receive a Reward proportionable to them; and more expressly, Rom. xiv. 12. he tells us, that we must every one of us give an Account of himself to God, and if every one, then to be sure the Righteous must as well as the Wicked; not that there will be any doubt of the Righteousness of the Righteous in the Breast of the Judge, to whose All-seeing Eye, the darkest Secrets of all Hearts lie open; but yet for other Reasons, it is highly convenient they should undergo a Tryal as well as others: As first, for the more solemn and publick Vindication of their wronged Innocence, that all that Infamy and Scandal with which their malicious Enemies have bespattered them, may be wiped off before Men and Angels; and that being assailed before all the World, they may triumph for ever in a bright and glorious Reputation. And Secondly, that all those brave and unaffected Acts of secret Piety and Charity, to which none but God and themselves were conscious, may be brought into the open Light, and to their everlasting Renown, proclaimed throughout all the vast Assembly of Spirits; for then we shall see all those modest Souls unmask'd, whose silent and retired Graces do make so little Shew and Noise in the World, and all their humble Pieties and bashful Beauties, which scarce any Eye ever saw but God's, shall be exposed to the publick View and general general Applause of Saints and Angels. Thirdly, They shall be tried also for the Vindication of God's impartial Procedure in proportioning their Reward to their Virtue; that so the Degrees of each Man's Proficiency in Piety and Virtue, being exposed to the View of the World by an impartial Tryal, Angels and Men may be convinced, that in distributing the different Degrees of Happiness the Almighty Judge is no way biassed by a fond Partiality or Respect of Persons; but that he proceeds upon immutable Principles of Justice, and doth exactly adjust and balance his Rewards with the Degrees and Numbers of our Deserts and Improvements; that so even those that are set lowest in those blessed Forms and Classes of glorious Spirits, may not envy those that are above them, or complain that they are advanced no higher; but every one may chearfully acknowledge himself to be placed where he ought to be; as being fully convinced, that he is only so many Degrees inferiour to others in Glory, as they are superiour to him in Divine Graces and Perfections. Fourthly and lastly, The Righteous shall undergo this Trial for the more glorious Manifestation of the Divine Mercy and Goodness: For which Reason I am apt to think that even their Sins, of which they have dearly and heartily repented, shall in this their Trial be exposed and brought upon the Stage; that so in the free Pardon of such an infinite Number of them, the whole Congregation of the Blessed may behold and admire the infinite Extent of the Divine Mercies, and be thereby the deeper affected with, and more vigorously excited to celebrate with Songs, of Praise the Goodness of their merciful Judge. For these Reasons the wise Man tells, Eccles. xii. 14. that God shall bring every secret Thing to Judgment, whether it be good, or whether it be evil; which Proposition, being universal, must extend to the Righteous as well as to the Wicked. But yet though their Sores shall be then laid open, it shall be done by a soft and gentle Hand, by a serene Conscience, and a smiling Judge, who without any angry Look, or severe Reflection, or any other Circumstance, but what shall contribute to the Joys and Triumphs of that Day, shall read over all the Items of their Guilt, and then cancel them for ever. For,

IV. This Judgment of the Righteous doth also include their Sentence. Although to us whose Operations are so slow and leisurely, by reason of the Unwieldiness of these fleshly Organs, with which we act, such a particular Trial as hath been before described of such an infinite Number of Men and Women may seem to require an unreasonable Length of Time, yet if we consider that then both the Judge, and those who are to be judged shall be array'd in spiritual Bodies, in which they will be able to act with unspeakable Nimbleness and Dispatch, we shall find that a little Time comparatively may very well suffice for so great a Transaction; for the Judge being one that can attend to infinite Causes at once without any Distraction, and they who are to be judged, being by reason of their Spirituality, in a Condition to attend to every one's Trial, while they are undergoing their own, I see no reason we have to imagine, that they shall be tried successively one after another; and if not, why may we not suppose, that we shall all be tried together at the same Time, and consequently that the Trial of all may be transacted in as short a Time as the Trial of one. And that they shall all be tried together, is very probable, since it is apparent from Scripture, that they shall all be sentenced together, for thus Matth. xxv. 34. Then shall the King say to those on his right Hand, i. e. to them all together, Come ye Blessed, &c. Having first by an accurate and impartial Trial manifested their Integrity to all the World, he shall arise out of his flaming Throne, and with an audible Voice, and smiling Majesty, pronounce their Sentence all together in these, or such like Words, Come ye blessed Children of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the beginning of the World; to which welcome Sentence they will doubtless all immediately resound a joyful Choir of Hallelujahs through Heaven and Earth; Allelujah, Salvation, and Glory, and Power to be the Lord our God, for true and righteous are his Judgments; Salvation be unto our Lord that sitteth on the Throne, and to the Lamb; for wonderful are thy Works, O Lord God Almighty, just and true are thy Ways, O thou King of Saints. And now all their Business being finished here below, they shall from henceforth be no longer detained in this Vale of Tears and Misery, but with overjoyed Hearts shall take their Leave of it for ever. For,

V. And lastly, Another Thing implied in this their Judgment, is their Assumption into the Clouds of Heaven. For their blessed Lord having thus publicly acquitted and pronounced them blessed, they shall immediately feel the happy Effect of it; for now he will no longer suffer them to stand below at the Bar, but from thence will call them up to his Tribunal, there to give them a nearer Access to his beloved Person, and more intimate Participation of his Glory. At which powerful Call and Invitation of his, they shall in an Instant all take Wing together, like a mighty Flock of pure and innocent Doves, and fly aloft into the Air, singing and warbling as they go to meet their Redeemer in the Clouds of Heaven. For so the Apostle, in 1 Thess. iv. 17. Then (that is, after their Resurrection and Judgment) we which are alive and remain, who never died, but only have been changed and glorified, shall be caught up together with them, who shall be raised from the Dead, into the Clouds, to meet the Lord in the Air, and so we shall be ever with the Lord. For to be sure that rapturous Love which the Sight and Sentence of their Saviour hath by this Time kindled in their pious Breasts, will wing their Souls with vehement Desire to be with him, and then being clothed with glorified Bodies, that are as vigorous and active as their Souls; as nimble and expedite as their Thoughts and Wishes, it will be in their Power soon to accomplish their Desire, and fly from hence up to the Throne of their Lord.

And now this being the first general Meeting of the blessed Jesus and his Church; the first Interview that ever was between the heavenly Bridegroom and his holy Bride; O the dear Welcomes, the infinite mutual Congratulations that will pass between them; How will they now melt in Love and dissolve in mutual Flames! Now when like long absent Lovers, they are safe arrived into each others Arms, never, never to be parted more.

And now this joyful Meeting being consummated, they begin to prepare for a most dreadful Solemnity, and that is the Judgment of the Wicked: In order to which the Judge will reassume his Throne, and place his Saints all round about in shining Circles, Ten thousand thousand together, that so as his Assessors, they may bear a part in the ensuing Judgment: For this the Apostle asserts as a notorious Principle of our Christian Faith; Know ye not that the Saints shall judge the World, 1 Cor. vi. 2. that is, that they shall not only accuse and condemn the wicked World by the holy Example of their Lives; but also, that they shall give their Votes and Suffrages to that dreadful Sentence which Christ shall pass upon them. And now the Judge and his Assessors being set, proceed we to the

II. Second Judgment, which is, that of the Wicked, in which there are also five Particulars included: First, their Citation: Secondly, their personal Appearance: Thirdly, their Trial: Fourthly, their Sentence: Fifthly, their Execution.

I. Their Citation: For the first Judgment being finished, it is probable a new Summons will be given by the Voice or Trump of the Archangel, to assemble the wicked World to their Judgment, upon hearing of which, all those wicked Souls that have left their Bodies, and been hitherto confined in some dark Prison of the Creation, shall be forced to leave their dismal Habitations, in which they would a thousand times rather chuse to continue for ever, if they might have their own Option, than to undergo that fearful Judgment whereunto they are cited; but being dragged into the open Light again, by those Devils who have been hitherto their Jailors, they shall every one be forced to put on those old accursed Bodies of theirs, in which they contracted those *Crimson Guilt*s which now they must expiate in eternal Flames; and now the Souls of the Dead, being shut up in their Bodies again, like Prisoners in a sure Hold, and there secured by an immortal Tie from ever making another escape escape, the Bodies of the Living shall by a miraculous Change be render'd at once so tender and sensible, that the least Touch of Misery shall pain them, and yet so strong and durable, that the greatest Loads of Misery shall never be able to sink them; and thus being all of them put into an immortal Capacity of suffering and thereby prepared to undergo the fearful Doom which awaits them, they shall from all Parts of the World be driven before the Judgment Seat of Christ. For,

II. This Judgment of the Wicked implies also their personal Appearance at our Saviour's Tribunal: For so St. John in his prophetick Vision of the Day of Judgment, saw the Dead both small and great standing before God, Rev. xx. 12. and in Matth. xxv. 31, 32. we are told, that when the Son of Man sits down upon the Throne of his Glory all Nations shall be gathered before him; that is, the impure Goats as well as the innocent Sheep, as he afterwards explains himself. And now, good Lord, what a tragical Spectacle will here be? An innumerable Number of self-condemned Wretches assembled together before the Tribunal of an Almighty and implacable Judge, quaking and trembling under the dire Expectations of a fearful and irrevocable Doom, and with weeping Eyes, pale Looks and ghastly Countenances, aboding the miserable Fate that attends them. For thus it is represented, Rev. i. 7. Behold he cometh with Clouds, and every Eye shall see him, they also which pierced him, and all Kindreds of the Earth shall wail because of him; and well they may, considering how they treated him, and what little Reason they have upon that account to expect any Favour at his Hands; for to be sure the Sight of him must give a dreadful Alarm to their Consciences, and suggest to them the sad Remembrance of the innumerable Provocations they have given him. Look up, O ye miserable Creatures, see yonder is that glorious Person whose Authority you have so insolently affronted, whose Name you have so impiously blasphemed, whose Mercies you have so obstinately rejected, behold with what a stern and terrible Majesty he sits upon yonder flaming Throne, from whence he is now just ready to exact of ye a dreadful Account for all your past Rebellions against him; but, O unhappy and forlorn! see how they droop and hang their Heads, as being both ashamed and afraid to look their terrible Judge in the Face, whose incensed Eye sparkles upon them with such an insufferable Terror and Indignation as they are no longer able to endure, but are forced in the bitterest Anguish and Despair, that ever humane Souls were seized with, to cry out to the Rocks and Mountains to fall upon them, and to hide them from the Face of him that sits upon the Throne, and from the Wrath of the Lamb.

III. Another Particular imply'd in this Judgment of the Wicked, is their Trial; for so 1 Cor. iv. 5. we are told, that in this fearful Day of Reckoning, God will bring to light the hidden Things of Darkness, and make manifest the very Counsels of the Heart; and this will be no hard Matter to effect, considering that he who is to be the Judge of these guilty Criminals, hath been a constant Witness to all their Actions, that his all-seeing Eye hath traced them all along through all their secret Mysteries and dark Intrigues of Iniquity, and hath kept an exact Record of them in the Book of his Remembrance; so that to convict them of their Guilts, he will need do no more but only produce his own Registers, and expose what he hath there recorded to the View of the World; and there the Wretches will see themselves transcribed, and all their abominable Actions exactly copied from their first Originals; there they will find all their secret Machinations, their dark Cheats, their lewd Imaginations, and hypocritical Intentions recorded in the most legible Characters; and perceiving themselves thus shamefully unstrip'd and uncas'd before the World, their very Inwards dissected, and the smallest Threds and Fibres of their Hearts laid open and exposed to the View of Men and Angels, their own Shame and intolerable Rack of their Consciences will force them to confess their Charge, and proclaim themselves guilty before all that vast Congregation of Spirits. But, O the inexpressible Horror and Confusion these wretched Souls will then be seized with when they shall shall see themselves thus publicly unmasked and turned inside outwards, and be forced to stand forth like so many loathsome Spectacles before God and his Angels, without any Excuse or Retreat for their Shame, without any Veil to hide their Infamy and Blushes! when their filthy Practices shall be no longer confined to the Talk of a Town or a Village, but be proclaimed in the hearing of all the rational World: O now it would be happy for them if as formerly, they could drown the Retorts of their Conscience in Noise and Laughter, and forget its cutting Repartees, which were always uneasy to bear, but impossible to answer. But alas! those jolly Days are gone, and now in despite of themselves they must listen with Horror and Confusion of Face, to what those two great Judges, Jesus and their own Consciences unanimously give in Charge against them. Thus he whose piercing Eye doth now penetrate their Hearts, and ransack every Corner of their Souls, will in that great Day of Discoveries bring forth all that secret Filth that is there reposed, and expose it for an infamous Spectacle to the publick View of Men and Angels.

IV. Another Particular implied in this Judgment of wicked Men is their Sentence. Their Trial being now over, in which their Guilt hath been sufficiently evinced and detected to their everlasting Infamy and Reproach, they will by this Time have received the Sentence of Death within themselves, and stand condemned in the Judgment of all the World; the Righteous Judge, who is too great to be overawed, too just to be bribed, and too much provoked to be intreated, whose Ears are now for ever stopped, and whose Bowels are impenetrably hardened against all farther Overtures of Mercy, will with a stern Look and terrible Voice, pronounce that dreadful Doom upon them, Go ye cursed into everlasting Fire prepared for the Devil and his Angels; which though it be of a horrible Import, will appear so just, considering the horrible Things which have been charged and proved against them, that it will be immediately seconded with the unanimous Suffrage of all that bright Corona of Glorified Saints that sit as Assessors round the Throne, who with one Consent will all cry out together, Just and Righteous art thou, O Judge of the World, in all thy Ways: But, O the fearful Shrieks and Lamentations that will then be heard from those poor condemned Creatures! For if A Lord have Mercy upon thee, A take him Jailer from an earthly Judge, be able to extort so many Sighs and Tears from a hardened Malefactor, what will A go ye cursed from the Mouth of the righteous Judge of the World, and when so many Millions of Men and Women shall be all involved together in the same Doom, and all at once lamenting their dismal Fate; Lord, what a horrible Out-cry will they make? Now in the bitter Agonies of their Souls they will cry to Heaven for Mercy, Mercy; but alas! poor Souls, they cry too late; their Judge was once as importunate with them to have Mercy upon themselves; but because when he called they refused, when he stretched forth his Hands they regarded not, now when they call he will not answer, when they cry he will not hear, but will laugh at their Calamity, as they did at his Counsel, and mock when their Fear and Destruction is come upon them.

V. And lastly, Another Particular implied in this Judgment of the Wicked, is the Execution of their Sentence. For immediately after their Sentence is past, by which they stand doomed to everlasting Fire, an everlasting Fire shall be kindled round about them, a Fire, which within a few Moments shall spread itself over all this lower World; and convert the whole Atmosphere about us into a Furnace of inextinguishable Flames: For then all those fiery Particles which are every where intermingled with these Terrestrial Bodies, and have hitherto been kept within their proper Limits, shall be disintangled and set free from those more gross and sluggish ones that now bind and fix them, and swarm together like so many Sparks into one huge Globe of Fire, which from the lowermost Center of the Earth, shall spire up and kindle upon all that airy Heaven above, and with one continued Flame fill all the vast Expanse; all that fiery Matter which is now dispersed up and down within the Entails of the Earth, shall by degrees gather together into Rivers of Fire, with rolling to and fro within, to force their Way into the open Air, will perhaps produce those prodigious Earthquakes, of which our Saviour speaks, by which at length the Earth being cleft and torn, it shall every where vomit out Torrents of Fire from its flaming Bowels; and at the same time the Sea shall boil and swell, and roar like Water in a Seething-pot, 'till 'tis all evaporated by the struggling Flames from below, which having rarified its Waters into Vapours, shall kindle those Vapours into Flames; and at the same Time also the Heavens above shall groan and crack with incessant Thunder, accompanied with thick and fearful Flashes of Lightning, which joining with those vast Streams of Fire, that will be continually issuing out of the Earth and Sea, will make such a prodigious Deluge of Flames, as will quickly overflow the whole World. For thus we are assured from Scripture; that the Elements shall melt with fervent Heat, and the Earth and the Works that are therein, shall be burnt up, 2 Pet. iii. 10. So also St. John in his Vision of the Day of Judgment, Rev. xx. 11. I saw a great white Throne; and him that sat on it, from whose Face the Earth and the Heaven fled away, and there was found no Place for them; not that the Matter of them shall be annihilated, but the Form of them shall be destroyed by their being converted into an everlasting Fire; and in this Fire shall those condemned Wretches live and suffer to eternal Ages. Hence it is called the Vengeance of eternal Fire; and we are told, that it will be in flaming Fire, that the Lord Jesus will render Vengeance to all that know not God and obey not his Gospel, 2 Thess. i. 8. And that this flaming Fire shall be the Conflagration of the World, that of St. Peter seems plainly to imply, 2 Pet. iii. 7: But the Heavens and the Earth which are now — are kept in store reserved unto Fire, against the Day of Judgment and Perdition of ungodly Men; and being reserved unto Fire against the Day of Perdition of ungodly Men, we may justly conclude, that the Fire it is reserved to, will be the Perdition of ungodly Men. Thus upon our Saviour's pronouncing those dreadful Words, Go ye cursed into everlasting Fire, the Persons concern'd will immediately perceive the dire Effects; for all on a sudden they will see the Clouds from above, and the Earth from beneath casting forth Torrents of Fire upon them, which in an Instant will set all the World in a Blaze about their Ears: At the Sight of which, all this wretched World will be turned into a mournful Stage of Horrors, in which the miserable Actors being seized with inexpressible Amazement to see themselves all on a sudden encompassed on every Side with Flames, will raise a hideous Roar and Out-cry, Millions of burning Men and Women shrieking together, and their Noise shall mingle with the Archangel's Trumpet, with the Thunders of the dying and groaning Heaven, and the Crack of the dissolving World, that is sinking into eternal Ruins. In which miserable State of Things, whither can the poor Creatures fly, or where can they hope to find a Sanctuary? If they go up to the Tops of the Mountains, there they are but more openly exposed to the dreadful Lightnings of Heaven; if they go down into the Holes and Caverns of the Rocks, there they will be swallowed up in the burning Furnaces of the Earth; if they descend into the Deep, there they will be soon overtaken with a Storm of Fire and Brimstone; and wherever they go, the Vengeance of God will still pursue them with its everlasting Burnings. And thus having no Retreat left them, no Avenue to escape out of this burning World, here they must remain for ever surrounded with Smoak, and Fire, and Darkness, and wrap'd in fierce and merciless Flames, which like a Shirt of burning Pitch will stick close to, and pierce through and through their passive Bodies, and for ever prey upon, but never consume them.

force

And now the Almighty Judge having seen his dreadful Sentence executed, will arise from his Throne, and from thence return to the Seat of the Blessed in a solemn and glorious Triumph, with all his holy Myriads of Angels and Saints, who as they follow him through the Air and Æther, will with loud Hosannas and triumphant Acclamations celebrate the Praises of their Redeemer. Thus shall the Ransomed of the Lord, return with him, with Songs to the heavenly Zion, and everlasting Joy shall be upon their Heads, and everlasting

Praises

Praises in their Mouths. For being arrived into those blissful Regions; there in those glorified Bodies, which they put on at their Resurrection, they shall live for ever in unspeakable Pleasures and Delights, and be entertain'd not only with all that Happiness which they enjoy'd in the State of their Separation, when they were only blessed Spirits; but also with all the Satisfaction and Delights that their glorified Bodies can require and enjoy. So that now their Blessedness shall be consummate, and all the Capacities of their humane Nature compounded of Body and Soul, shall be fulfilled with Bliss, till they overflow and can contain no more. But wherein the Happiness of their glorified Bodies shall consist, I shall not presume to enquire, the Scripture being silent concerning it. And what the Happiness of their Souls shall be, hath been shewn at large before, Part I. c. 3, 4. So that as to that State of eternal Life, in which our Saviour shall place his faithful Servants, in the Conclusion of this great Judgment, I need say no more of it in this Place.

S E C T. XII.

Concerning the Conclusion and Surrender of the Kingdom of Christ.

WHEN our Saviour hath finished that last and most glorious Act of Royalty, viz. judging the World, and hath finally condemned to everlasting Fire the irreclaimable Enemies of God, and crowned all his faithful Subjects with eternal Glory and Beatitude; the Apostle tells us, He shall deliver up the Kingdom to God, even the Father, 1 Cor. xv. 24. For our better understanding of which, we are to consider, that the Kingdom of Christ is two-fold: First, Essential, as he is God essential, and doth subsist in the Divine Essence, by the super-eminent Perfections of which he being exalted above all Things, hath an essential Right of Dominion over all Things; and this is co-eternal with himself, and is as inseparable to him as his Being; this he can no more deliver up than he can his Godhead, which without ceasing to be can never cease to be supreme over all Things. But then in the second Place, there is his mediatorial Kingdom, which is that of which we have hitherto been treating, and this, as hath been shewn before, was by solemn Compact and Agreement conferr'd upon him by the Father, upon condition that he should assume our Nature, and therein make Expiation for our Sins; in consideration whereof the Father obliged himself to grant a Covenant of Grace to the sinful World, and to constitute him the Mediator of it; by which mediatorial Office he is authorized to rule for God according to the Tenour of that gracious Covenant, as well as to intercede for us; and in ruling for God according to that Covenant, he is to crown and reward all such as return to, and persevere in their Duty, with everlasting Happiness, and to render eternal Vengeance to all such as obstinately persist in their Rebellion. So that when this is done (as it will be in the Conclusion of the Day of Judgment) the whole Business of his mediatorial Kingdom is at an end; then the Covenant, of which he is now Mediator, will be compleatly executed, and consequently his Mediation will cease, as being of no farther Use, and having no farther Part to act. For now God and Man being made compleatly one, the Office of a Mediator ceases of its own accord; for a Mediator is not a Mediator of one, Gal. iii. 20. and therefore the two Parties being perfectly united, there is no farther Use of a Mediator between them. Wherefore as our beatifick Vision will supercede the Necessity of his prophetick Office, to teach and instruct us; as our Perfection and intire Fruition will supercede the Necessity of his priestly Office, to offer and intercede for us; so the Security of our Possession of both will supercede the Necessity of his kingly Office, to protect and defend us; and therefore when our Affairs are once reduced to this happy Issue, his kingly Office, as well as all other Parts of his Mediatorship, will for ever cease. But since this great Mystery is no where expressly delivered in Scripture, but only in that forecited, 1 Cor. xv. I shall endeavour to give a brief Account of the whole Passage, which lies in ver. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28. Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the Kingdom to God, even the Father, when he shall have put down all Rule and all Authority, and all Power, for he must reign till he hath put all Enemies under his Feet; the last Enemy that shall be destroyed is Death: for he hath put all Things under his Feet: but when he saith all Things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted which did put all Things under him, and when all Things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him which did put all Things under him, that God may be all in all; the whole Sense and Meaning of which Passage, I shall cast into these Propositions;

First, That the Kingdom or Dominion here spoken of, was committed to him by God the Father.

Secondly, That he is to possess this Kingdom and Dominion so long and no longer, as till all Things are actually subdued to him.

Thirdly, That during his Possession of it, he is subject to the Father.

Fourthly, That after his delivering it up to the Father, he will be otherwise subject to him than he is now.

Fifthly, That the Son being thus subjected to the Father, all Power and Dominion shall from thenceforth, be immediately exercised by the Deity.

I. That the Kingdom or Dominion, here spoken of, was committed to him by God the Father; and this is expressly affirmed, ver. 27. For he (i. e. the Father) hath put all Things under his Feet, which Words are a Quotation of Psal. viii. 6. Thou madest him to have Dominion over the Works of thy Hands; thou hast put all Things under his Feet; which Words are to be understood literally of the first Adam, but mystically of the second; as is evident not only because 'tis here applied to Christ by St. Paul, but also by the Author to the Hebrews, Heb. ii. 7, 8. where he expressly tells us, that it was God the Father that crowned Christ with Glory and Honour, and that did set him over the Works of his Hands, and put all Things in Subjection under his Feet; and accordingly our Saviour himself declares, that all Power in Heaven and Earth was given him, i. e. by the Father, and that it was the Father that committed all Judgment to him; and the Apostle expressly tells us, that it was God that exalted him with his own right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, Acts v. 31. From all which it is evident, that the Dominion which the Apostle here treats of, is not the Essential Dominion of Christ, which as he is God Essential, is Co-eternal with him; but that mediatorial Dominion which was committed to him by the voluntary Disposal of his Father, and which once he had not, and will hereafter cease to have.

II. That he is to possess this Kingdom or Dominion so long as, and no longer than till all Things are actually subdued unto him. So ver. 24. you see the Time of his delivering up this Kingdom, is then, when he shall have put down all Rule, and all Authority and Power; i. e. till he shall have converted and destroyed all those Powers of the Earth, that oppose themselves against him; for so ver. 25, 26. For he must reign till he hath put all Enemies under his Feet, the last Enemy that shall be destroyed is Death; which plainly implies, that when he hath conquered all Enemies, and destroyed Death, which is the last Enemy, by giving a glorious Resurrection to his faithful Subjects, then, and not till then his mediatorial Reign is to conclude: For so, Psal. cx. 1. to which the Apostle here refers; the Psalmist brings in Jehovah the Father, thus bespeaking Jehovah the Son, The Lord said unto my Lord, sit thou at my right Hand, until I make thine Enemies thy Footstool. Now to sit at the right Hand of God, when ever 'tis applied to our Saviour, doth in Scripture always denote his possessing and exercising this his mediatorial Kingdom; so that the Meaning of the Psalmist is this; the Father hath commissioned his Son to continue the Exercise of his mediatorial Dominion, till such Time as either by the Dint of his Almighty Vengeance he hath trampled all his Enemies under Foot, or by the Power of his Grace reduc'd them voluntarily to prostrate themselves before him; and indeed, the End for which this Kingdom of our Saviour was erected, was to subdue the rebellious World to God, and either to captivate Men into a free Submission to his his heavenly Will, which is its first Intention; or if they will not yield, to make them the Triumph of his everlasting Vengeance; which end at the Day of Judgment, will be fully accomplished: For then the Fate of all the rational World will be fixed and determined; then the faithful Subjects will be crowned, and the incorrigible Rebels condemned, and executed, and so, one way or t'other, all Things will be subdued unto him. So that from henceforth the End and Reason of this his mediatorial Dominion will cease, and when the End of it ceaseth, he who never doth any thing in vain, will immediately deliver it up into those Hands from whence he received it. For when he shall have put down all Rule, and all Authority and Power; i. e. conquered and subdued all that resisted and opposed him, then cometh the End when he shall have delivered up the Kingdom to God even the Father.

III. That during his Possession of this Kingdom, he is subject to the Father. So ver. 27. But when he saith all Things are put under him, it is manifest that he (i. e. the Father) is excepted, which did put all Things under him. As if he should say, Do not mistake me; for when I say all Things are put under him, my Meaning is, all Things, except God the Father, for it was he that did put all Things under him; and it's manifest that he who gave him this Superiority over all Things, must himself be superior to him; and indeed, considering Christ as mediatorial King, he is no more than his Father's Viceroy, and doth only act by Deputation from him, and rule and govern for him; and hence the Father styles him his King, Psal. ii. 6. Yet have I set my King upon my holy Hill of Zion. So that now he is subject to the Father in the Capacity of a Vice-King, to a supreme Sovereign, and whatsoever he doth in this Capacity, he doth in his Father's Name, and by his Authority; for he mediates as for Men with God, in doing which he is our Advocate; so for God with Men, in doing which he is our King. God's Part is to govern us, and our Part is to sue to him for Favour and Protection, and both these Parts our Saviour acts as Mediator between God and us: He acts our Part for us in being Advocate, and God's Part for him in being King. So that in that Rule and Government which he now exercises over us, he is only the supreme Minister of his Father's Power and Dominion, and as the Father reigns by his Ministry, so he reigns by the Father's Authority. But though now while his mediatorial Kingdom doth continue, he is subject to the Father in the Administration of it, yet from this Passage of St. Paul it is evident,

IV. That when he hath delivered it up to the Father, he will be otherwise subject to him than he is now; for so ver. 28. and when all Things shall be subdued unto him; that is, actually, and as they will be at the Day of Judgment, when the Good are crowned, and the Wicked consigned to that fearful Execution, Then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that did put all Things under him; which necessarily implies, that then he should enter into a different State of Subjection to the Father, from that wherein he was before. Why then shall the Son himself be subject to him? Was he not subject to him before? Yes, doubtless he was; and therefore either this then must be impertinent, or then he shall be so subject to him as he was not before; before he was subject to him, as he was his mediatorial King or Viceroy, as he reigned under him, and by his Authority; but then he is to be subject to him after a different Manner: For the Explication of which it is to be considered, that now the Son considered as Mediator, reigns under God in the Right of what he did, and suffered in his human Nature hypostatically united to his Godhead; for it was because he humbled himself, and became obedient to the Death, even the Death of the Cross, that God highly exalted him, Phil. ii. 8, 9. Now 'twas as he was Man; that he became obedient to Death, and 'twas in the Right of that Obedience that God exalted him to his mediatorial Kingdom; so that now as Mediator he not only reigns in his human Nature, but in Right of the Passion of his human Nature; his mediatorial Kingdom is the Purchase of his Blood, by which he both obtained the New Covenant for us, and Regal Power to execute it upon us. When therefore he hath executed it to the full (as we are sure he will do at the Day of Judgment) this Regal Power of his which he purchased with his Blood, will cease, as having fully accomplished that for which it was given and intended. And now he being to reign no longer in right of the Sufferings of his human Nature, his human Nature will be subject to the Father in a more different Manner than it was before: Before it was subject to him as authorized in consideration of its Passion to reign and govern under him; but then having delivered up its Reign and Government, it will be subject to him in a more private Capacity, as the Presidents of the Roman Empire were subject to Cæsar while they governed under him, but when they rendered back their Character, they became his Subjects in a more private Station. Not that the Humanity of Christ shall be any way depressed or degraded by his delivering up his mediatorial Kingdom; but as an Ambassador, after he is discharged of the Burthen of his Embassy, doth still retain the Honour and Dignity of it, so the human Nature of Christ, after he hath surrender'd up its mediatorial Dominion, shall still remain as highly exalted in Honour, Dignity and Beatitude as ever; and Angels and Saints shall for ever render to it the same religious Respect and Veneration, as they did before he surrendered it; for it shall still remain hypostatically united to his Godhead, and so God shall for ever reign in it, tho' it shall not for ever reign with God: So that it being still the Temple of the Deity, and all the glorious Atchievements it made during its Humiliation and mediatorial Reign, reflecting still the same Honour and Praise, and Glory upon it, it will to Eternity be as great and glorious throughout all the heavenly World, as ever it was in the full Splendor of its Kingdom; so that in this respect what the ancient Fathers added to the Nicene Creed is most true, his Kingdom shall have no end, because, without possessing it, he shall for ever enjoy the Glory and Honour, and Beatitude of it.

V. And lastly, That the Son being thus subjected to the Father, all Power and Dominion shall from thenceforth be immediately exercised by the Deity; that is to say, by God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost; for so ver. 28. Then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that did put all Things under him, that God may be all in all. Where the Variation of the Person is very observable; for it is not said, that the Son shall be subject to him that did put all Things under him (i. e. the Father) that he may be all in all, but that God may be all in all; that is, the Tri-une God-head subsisting in three Persons, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; for had he meant the Father only, he ought, according to the common Rules of Speech, to have said he, or the Father, of whom he had been before speaking, instead of God; nor can it be reasonably supposed, that after the Resignation of the mediatorial Kingdom, the Father only shall act and reign, and the Son and Holy Ghost sit still for ever and do nothing; but the Meaning is, that this mediatorial Kingdom ceasing, in which the Son as Man as well as God now reigns, there shall from thenceforth be no other Kingdom or Dominion exercised in that celestial State, but what is Essential to the Godhead, in which the Son and Holy Ghost subsisting together with the Father, shall for ever reign together with him: for this I take to be the Meaning of that Phrase, that God may be all in all; that is, that he may rule and govern all Things immediately by himself, that his immediate Will may reign alone in all, and be the proximate Guide of all that blessed World, that there may be no mediate or mediatorial Governor between him and us to exact our Obedience, and convey to us his Favours and Rewards, but that we may render all our Duty immediately to him, and derive all our Happiness immediately from him; so that as now Christ the Theanthropos, or God-man, is all in all, Col. iii. 11. because the Father doth all Things, and governs all Things by him, having given him all Power in Heaven and Earth; so when this Oeconomy ceases, God alone, or the Tri-une God-head shall be all in all, because he shall do all Things, and govern all Things by himself immediately. Thus, when the Son of Man is subjected to him that did put all Things under him, that one divine Essence, whence all Things did proceed, and in which the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost subsist, shall, from thenceforth, resume all Rule and Dominion to itself, and only the Son of God, together with the Father and the Holy Ghost shall reign. But yet in this purely divine Government, there is no doubt but those divine Persons will still continue to act in Subordination to each other, according to that natural Subordination in which they are placed by their personal Properties: For the Godhead being communicated from the Father to the Son, the Father, in the Order of Nature, must necessarily be Prior to the Son, and the same Godhead being communicated to the Holy Ghost from the Father and the Son, both Father and Son must also, in Order of Nature, be prior to the Holy Ghost: So that between these sacred Three, there is an internal necessary Subordination, that can never be altered or inverted; and therefore there is no doubt, but that as they will always be subordinate, so they will always act subordately. The Father as the first, the Begetter and the Fountain of Divinity will be always first and supreme in the divine Monarchy; the Son, as begotten by him, will still reign in Subordination to him, and the Holy Ghost, as proceeding from both, will continue to reign in Subordination to both. Thus to everlasting Ages only the Trinity in Unity shall reign, and by its own immediate Will and Influence, rule and bless all that heavenly World, over which it spreads its Almighty Wings, and so it shall be all in all.

S E C T. XIII.

Of the Reason and Wisdom of this Method of God's governing sinful Men by his own Eternal Son in our Nature.

THough we are not either by our natural Reason or Revelation, to fathom the Depth of the divine Wisdom, or to trace out all the Reason of its Methods and Conduct, yet upon diligent Inquiry, we can plainly discern the Traacts of an admirable Wisdom in all the stated Methods of Providence; and though we cannot say, that this or that is the main or only Reason why God doth so or so, (for infinite Wisdom may have infinitely greater and infinitely more Reasons of its Actions than our short-sighted Reason can at present discover) yet by comparing one Action of his with another; and diligently observing the Drift and Tendency of them all, how they concur to one common End, and subserve each other to promote and accomplish it, we cannot avoid discovering Reason enough in them to convince and satisfy us, that they all proceed from a most wise and intelligent Agent; and this more especially in the admirable Oeconomy of the Mediation, viz. the eternal Son of God's assuming our Nature, and therein becoming our Prophet, Priest, and King: For what Reasons there are why he should assume our Nature therein to be our Prophet and our Priest, hath been shewn before. And now we shall proceed so far as our short Inquiries will reach, to shew what admirable Reason there is why he should be our King also, to rule and govern us in the same assumed Nature, wherein he is our Prophet and our Priest; of which, according to the best Light that Revelation affords us, there are these five Reasons assignable.

First, That he might govern us in a Way more accommodated to this degenerate State of our Natures.

Secondly, That he might the more effectually cure and prevent the spreading Contagion of Idolatry.

Thirdly, That he might the more powerfully encourage our Obedience.

Fourthly, That he might oblige us to himself with a stronger Tie of Gratitude and Ingenuity.

Fifthly, That he might give us the more ample Assurance of our future Reward,
I. God governs us by his own eternal Son in our Natures the better to accommodate his Government to this our degenerate State, which renders us extremely extremely unfit to be governed immediately by God. It is true, whilst Man continued in his Primitive Innocence and Perfection, he was in a Condition fit to converse with God Face to Face, and to live under his immediate Dominion; for then his Sense being under the Conduct of his Reason, and all his brutal Affections intirely subjected to the Government and Directions of his superior Faculties, he was as much ruled and influenced by the Objects of his Reason, as he is now by those of his Sense, and was as powerfully moved and affected by what he only knew and believed, as he is now by what he sees and feels; so that then God, that great invisible Spirit, who is removed from all the Perceptions of bodily Sense, and is only perceivable by our Reason and Faith, did as powerfully impress Man's Hopes and Fears, and all the other Principles of Action in him as he could have done, had he appeared as amiable and dreadful to the Man's Sight and Feeling, as he then did to his Faith and Reason. In this State and Condition therefore Man was duly qualified to be governed immediately by God, to receive his Impressions, and to be moved and acted by the over-ruling Influence of his immense Perfections. But when once he had degenerated from this pure and blessed State of his Nature, and had thrown off the Government of his Reason, and subjected himself to the tyrannick Sway of his brutal Appetites, he thereby unqualified himself to live under God's immediate Dominion: For now he being govern'd by his sensual Appetites, and they by the sensual Objects that surround him, scarce any thing else can strike upon his Hopes and Fears, but what is carnal and sensual; or if any thing else doth, to be sure some carnal Object immediately interposes and breaks the Stroke, and renders it faint and ineffectual; so that now God, who is solely the Object of our Faith and Reason, can scarce be admitted to speak with our Hopes and Fears, by which we are made to be governed; or if he be, his soft still Voice is immediately drowned in the perpetual Clamour which these sensitive Goods and Evils raise about us. Wherefore having thus unqualified ourselves by our Apostasy from the primitive State of our Nature, to live under the immediate Wing and Government of God, and he being resolved in tender Commiseration to us, not to abandon us for ever, did, in his infinite Wisdom, project a new Method of governing us more accommodated to this our degenerate State, viz. by uniting himself to sensible Matter, and therein addressing to our bodily Senses in audible Voices, visible Appearances, and finally in our own Form and Nature, which, of all other sensible Things, we are most apt to be affected with, to love, and honour, and reverence, and obey: For so immediately after his Fall, God appeared to Adam, probably in a glorious human Form, and spake to him in an audible Voice, and afterwards he did the same to the Patriarchs, and to the whole Nation of the Jews from Mount Sinai, among whom he also dwelt in a visible Glory; by which Means he acquired to himself the same Advantage of governing those sensual Men that sensible Objects had, which, by striking on their bodily Sense, did more powerfully insinuate themselves into their Wills and Affections. But all these sensible Appearances of God, were only as so many præludia, to his assuming our Nature into personal Union with his Godhead, and therein exhibiting himself familiarly to the bodily Senses of Mankind, which, though he now ceases to do, as being exalted far above our Sight, on the right hand of God the Father, there to reign, till the Consummation of all Things, yet seeing we believe he is there visible in himself, clothed in a most glorious human Form, we can by Imagination supply the Want of our Sight of him, and reach him by our inward Sense, though we cannot come at him by our outward; and whereas, were he a mere Spirit, we could have no Imagination of him, because Imaginations are nothing but the Images of sensible Things, we can now by the Strength of our Imagination fetch him down from the Heavens when we please, and set him before our Minds in all that venerable Majesty, wherein he sits at the right Hand of his Father. So that though he be never present to our outward Sense, yet, which is almost equivalent, when ever we have occasion to converse with him, we can make him present to our inward, viz. our Fancy and and Imagination; into this spacious Gallery of the Pictures of sensible Things, our Mind can walk when it pleases, and there behold him in Effigy, though it cannot see him Face to Face; and considering how much we are governed in this degenerate State of our Nature by Fancy and Imagination, as well as by Sight and Feeling, it is doubtless a most advantageous Circumstance of God's Government of the World, that he governs us by one whom we can fancy and imagine, when we cannot see or feel him. There are a great many Men that never saw the King, who yet are over-awed by the Imagination they have of his Majesty and Greatness; whereas were not the King a Man, but a pure invisible Spirit, they could form no Imagination of him, the want of which would very much abate, if not utterly extinguish, the Awe and Reverence of his Person.

Considering therefore how much we are governed by our Sense in this State of our Apostacy, it was doubtless a wonderful wise Contrivance of God, who is a pure Spirit, to assume to himself some sensible Matter, that therein by presenting himself to our outward or inward Sense, he might strike the deeper Awe on us, and thereby the more effectually rule and govern us. But of all sensible Matter, none could be so proper to this Purpose as a human Form, in which we are inured and accustomed to be governed, and of which, as was hinted before, we have, of all sensible Things, the greatest Love and Veneration, during this our Degeneracy; therefore by which we are so unqualified to be governed by God immediately, God the Father hath most wisely contrived to govern us by God-man, i. e. by his own eternal Son, hypostatically united to our Natures. But when once Mankind is recovered out of his lapsed Condition, when our Sense is perfectly subdued to our Reason, and all our Faculties are reduced into their Primitive Order, then we shall return under God's immediate Dominion, for then God-man shall deliver up the Kingdom, and God shall be all in all.

II. God now governs us by his own eternal Son in our Natures, to cure and prevent the spreading Contagion of Idolatry. There is no one Vice to which our corrupt Nature is more propense, and of which it hath been more universally tardy, than that of Idolatry; for as for other Vices, they have their peculiar Provinces, and such a Vice is more predominant in such a Clime and Temperament of Air: In one Nation Pride reigns, in another Intemperance, in another Treachery, and in a fourth Malice and Revenge; but as for Idolatry, it is an universal Monarch, to whose Empire all the World hath been enslaved and subjected, and notwithstanding all the Care which God hath taken to prevent it, it hath spread like the Plague, till it became the Epidemical Disease of human Nature. Now to be sure such an universal Effect must necessarily be owing to some universal Cause; and what other can that be than the universal Degeneracy of human Nature from its primitive Life of Reason into a Life of Sense? For while Man was under the Government of his Reason, he was as much influenced by dry Arguments, as he is now by his Sense, and the full Reason he had to believe that there is an invisible Divine Being presiding over all Things, did as vigorously excite him to adore and worship him as the Sight of him could have done, had he appeared to his bodily Eyes in a Glory proportionable to the immense Perfections of his Nature. But when once his Sense had usurped the Throne of his Reason, and enslaved him to its Empire, the Case was quite altered, now Reason and Argument have very little Influence on him, unless it be back'd with some Impressions of his Sense, and his predominant Affections are those that are raised by the Strokes of sensible Objects upon the Sensories of his Sight, and Taste, and Feeling, which the Divine Substance and Perfections can never touch, they being purely spiritual; by which Means that Communication and Intercourse which was between God and Man, whilst Man was governed by Reason, is mightily distributed and interrupted, though it be not altogether stopp'd and intercepted; for still our Reason (which was not extinguished by the Degeneracy of our Natures) suggests to us, that there is a God, and inspires us with an awful Sense of his Divine Perfections, which still maintains in us religious Inclinations and Affections, whereby we are importuned and sollicited to adore and worship; but we being under the Government of Sense, are thereby naturally inclined either to look upon God, who is in himself a pure invisible Spirit, under the Notion of a sensible Being, and as such to worship him, (for so anciently some adored the Sun for God, others the universal material Nature, others such and such particular Parts of it) and in this consists that gross Idolatry of worshipping false Gods, or at least to blend our Conceptions of him with corporeal Phantasms; and then to express those Phantasms in outward visible Images, by them to excite and direct our Worship to him (for so in most Nations the supreme Numen was heretofore adored in Statues and Images of several Shapes and Figures copied from the several Images, by which they represented him to themselves in their own vain and roving Imaginations) and herein consists that more refined Idolatry of worshipping the true God in a false manner. Thus the general Cause of all Idolatry is nothing but the general Apostacy of human Nature from the Life of Reason to the Life of Sense, by which we are naturally inclined either to transform God into a gross and sensible Nature, or at least to assist ourselves in conceiving of and adoring and worshipping him by sensible and visible Objects. To prevent which, God hath been graciously pleas'd to assume some material Substance, and therein from time to time to exhibit to Mens Eyes a visible Presence of himself, which in Scripture is frequently called Glory of the Lord, and by the ancient Jews the Shechinah or Habitation of God, and consisted of a shining luminous Matter, which exhibited a glorious Lustre of Flame or Light set off with thick and solemn Clouds; whence it is probable he is said, to cover himself with Light as with a Garment, Psal. civ. 2. and in this glorious Appearance he conducted Israel through the Red Sea and Wilderness, came down upon Mount Sinai, and was seen by Moses and the Elders of Israel; and from thence removed into the Tabernacle, where he fixed his Abode between the Cherubims, and from whence he frequently display'd himself before the whole Congregation in the Beams of that visible Glory which he there assumed, as the Symbol of his special Presence; and by thus doing he took a most wise and effectual Course, not only to raise and excite their Devotion, but also to restrain and confine it within its proper Bounds and Limits; for while Men are under the Government of Sense, there is nothing hath that Prevalence with them to excite their Affections, and fix their Thoughts as material Phantasms; so that God, by exhibiting to them a visible Presence of himself, and thereby impressing their Imaginations with a material Phantasm of his Presence and Glory, did at once both spur their Affections, and bridle their Fancies from roving into wild Similitudes of him, and thereby take an effectual Course to prevent the worshipping him by those outward Images which they exemplified from the Similitudes which they framed of him in their own Fancies; and having this visible Glory to entertain their Fancies, they had the less Temptation from their Sense to hunt after sensible Similitudes and Representations of him, that outward Shechinah, which they sometimes saw, being a sufficient Help to raise up their groveling Minds and carnal Affections to the Contemplation and Worship of his invisible Glory; and that that outward visible Glory, in which he appeared to them, was intended for this Purpose, seems plainly imply'd in Deut. iv. 12. where Moses tells them, that when God spake to them out of the midst of the Fire, they heard the Voice of the Words, but saw no Similitude; and so again, ver. 15. from whence he infers, Take ye therefore good heed unto yourselves, lest ye corrupt yourselves, and make ye a graven Image, the Similitude of any Figure, the Likeness of Male or Female, &c. ver. 16, 17. where by their seeing no Similitude, is not meant that they saw nothing; for God himself had promised Moses, that the third Day he would come down in the Sight of all the People on Mount Sinai, Exod. xix. 11. and therefore in all probability they saw the Fire or visible Glory, in which he descended; for it is expressly said they saw it afterwards, Exod. xxiv. 17. but this Fire shining without any determinate Form or Shape, they might very well be said to see no Similitude; for by Similitude it is evident he means a determinate Shape, ver. 16. where he bids them beware of making the Similitude of any Figure; so that the People saw God only in an unfigured Flame, or visible Glory, that was cast into no determinate Shape (though within that it is probable, as was shewn before, God appeared to Moses and the seventy Elders in a glorious human Shape.) And this it seems God deemed a sufficient Help to enable them to fix their Thoughts on, and determine their Worship to himself; and therefore he strictly charges them to content themselves with this, and not let their Fancies rove, as they were too prone to do, after formed Similitudes and Images of him, lest those Images should create in their Minds false and opprobrious Notions of him, and cause them to imagine the immense Godhead; as the Heathen did, to be like unto Gold and Silver, or Stone ingraven by Art, and Man's Device, Acts xvii. 29. Thus Men being degenerated into a Life of Sense, and thereby render'd extremely propense to Idolatry, to worship God by Images, and thereupon to form blasphemous Notions of him, as if he were such a one in himself as those Images represented him, God was pleased to exhibit to them a sensible Presence of himself, that thereby he might the more effectually excite their Awe and Reverence, and at the same time restrain their Imaginations from debauching their Minds with unbecoming Similitudes of his infinite Being and Perfections.

And for the same Reason that God, under the Old Law, appeared to the Jews in a visible Glory, he afterwards appeared to this lower World, and doth still continue to appear to the upper, personally united to a human Body and Soul; for so St. John represents Christ's assuming of human Nature (who, before he assum'd it, was that God who appear'd to the Jews from their Tabernacle in that Shechinah of visible Glory) to be only a removing out of one Tabernacle into another, out of the Tabernacle of the Law into the Tabernacle of human Nature, John i. 14. The Word was made Flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his Glory, the Glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of Grace and Truth; where instead of he dwelt among us, in the Greek it is ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν, i. e. he tabernacled, or dwelt as in the Tabernacle among us, he removed his Abode out of the old Tabernacle, and took a new Habitation in human Nature; for that this is the Apostle's Meaning is evident from what follows, and we beheld his Glory, which plainly refers to that glorious Light or flaming Substance, called the Glory of the Lord, in which of old he was wont to display himself before the Congregation of Israel from between the Cherubims. And in this very Glory St. John says he beheld him, viz. at his Baptism and Transfiguration, at both which Times he was seen by them shining in the very same Glory, wherein of old he was wont to shine out of the Old Tabernacle; and therefore it is added, that this Glory wherein St. John beheld him, was the Glory as of the only begotten of the Father, i. e. it was the very same Glory with that wherein the only begotten was heretofore wont to display himself from the Tabernacle of Moses; so that the Meaning of the Words seems at least to be this, He dwelt among us in our Nature, just as heretofore he did in the Mosaick Tabernacle, and in this Tabernacle of our Nature we twice beheld him shining forth with the same Glory, wherein he was wont to shine out of that Old Tabernacle, from between the Cherubims. Since therefore Christ dwelt in our Nature in the same manner, and therein appear'd in the same visible Glory, that he formerly did in the Old Tabernacle, there is no doubt, but he did it for the same Ends and Purposes; and therefore since one of the Ends of his dwelling in that Tabernacle was to restrain Men from running into Idolatry, there is no doubt, but among others he intended this End also in assuming our Natures, than which there can be no visible Appearance in Nature more proper to excite our sluggish, and to determine our roving Devotions upon him: For since in this Life of Sense which we now lead, we need a sensible Presence of God to raise up our Minds and Affections to him, in what Presence could he have appear'd to us more proper for this End than that of our own Nature? a Presence which is not confused like that of the Old Tabernacle, which was only a Mixture of shapeless Lights and Shadows; but distinct and determinate, and of our own Form and Shape, which, of all others, is most

most familiar to, and most beloved and revered by us, and consequently of all others is most apt to encourage our Prayers, and enflame our Zeal, and raise our Admiration. For in what sensible Appearance could God have more powerfully affected our Sense, than in that which we are most inclined to love, most prone to trust to, and most accustomed to reverence and obey; and than that in which alone we discern the Image of God, and the Reflections of those divine Attributes of Wisdom and Goodness, and Truth and Justice, for which we reverence and adore him? There being therefore no visible Substance in which God could more advantageously exhibit himself to us, in order to the exciting our Worship to him, and determining it upon him than that of a humane Form, he thought meet to assume our Natures into a personal Union with his Divinity, and therein to rule and govern us. So that now the Humanity of our Saviour, is the Tabernacle and Shechinah of God; wherein the Fulness of the Godhead dwelleth bodily, and these two Natures united in Person and Glory, are the immediate Object of our Worship; wherefore as the ancient Jews fell upon their Faces, and worshipped when they beheld the Shechinah or Glory of the Lord, their Imagination being thereby assisted, and their Affections excited, Lev. ix. 24. So when we by our internal Sense or Imagination look up to the glorified Humanity of our Saviour in Heaven, it is our Duty to raise up our Affections to Heaven, by that sensible Shechinah of God, and thereupon to fall down and Worship. But as the Jews, when they fell down before their Shechinah, did not worship the visible Light or Glory separately from God, but as it was united to and assumed into Conjunction with him, so neither ought we to worship our Shechinah, viz. the Humanity of our Saviour, separately from his Divinity, but in Union and Conjunction with it; and in short, as it was utterly unlawful for the Jews to worship God in any other Shechinah or sensible Appearance, either unshapen or shaped, than in that glorious One which he himself vouchsafed to them, that being sufficient to affect their Sense, and thereby to raise up their Minds and Affections to him, so is it utterly unlawful for us Christians to worship God in any other Shechinah, Image, Similitude, or visible Appearance, than that of the glorified Humanity of our Saviour, that being sufficient to assist our Imaginations, and elevate our Hearts and Devotions to him. For though we cannot behold his glorified Humanity with our bodily Eyes, now he is removed into Heaven, yet so neither did the Jews the Glory of the Lord (at least but very rarely) after the Ark, whereupon it sat, was removed into the Holy of Holies, which was a Figure of Heaven, yet as they being assured it was there, could easily view it in their Imaginations, and thereby assist their Devotion; so we being assured from Scripture, that Christ's Humanity is in Heaven, can look up thither in our Imagination, and by beholding its Glory there, lift up our heavy Minds and Affections to the eternal Divinity that inhabits it; so that if we Christians make any other Shechinah or Image to worship God in, besides his own Humanity, which he himself made, and wherein he now dwells above in the Heavens, we are of all false Worshippers the most inexcusable; because by assuming our Humanity, God hath vouchsafed to us such an Image and Shechinah of himself, as is of all others the most proper and effectual to excite and determine our Devotions.

III. God hath chosen to govern us by his own eternal Son in our Natures, that he might thereby the more powerfully encourage us to Obedience, for now we have all the Assurance in the World, that the great Design of his Government is to do us good, and to advance our Happiness; and that under his blessed Empire, we shall be sure to enjoy all the Graces and Favours that can be wisely indulged on his Part, or modestly expected on ours. Had he governed us immediately by himself, we could not have been so secure of our Interest in him, as we have Reason to be of our Interest in his Son hypostatically united to our Nature; because the divine Nature, considered purely as such, is infinitely distant from ours, and has no other relation to it, than as it is the common Cause of all Things; and being so distant in Nature from us, it would have been hard for us to imagine how he could be touched with the same tender and compassionate Regard for us as he would be, if he were nearer allied to us; especially when we reflected upon our own Demerit, and considered that by our Sins we had set ourselves at a wider Distance from him, than we were by our Natures; this together with that Anxiety, which naturally arises in guilty Minds, could not but have rendered us very suspicious of God's Intentions towards us, had he governed us immediately by himself; but now that he governs us by his own Son clothed in our own Nature, at his Hands we may with full Confidence expect a most gracious and merciful Treatment. For now we are assured, we have a close and most intimate Interest in him, by reason of his Kindred and Alliance to us in the same common Nature, which makes him every Man's another self under different Accidents and Circumstances; and his Nature being perfectly happy, and perfectly pure from all irregular Passions and Appetites, cannot but be affected with a most tender Regard to all the Individuals of its own kind; because being completely happy himself, he can have nothing farther to desire for himself, but that his kindred, by Nature, who are all his own Substance, dilated and multiplied, may be happy too; and being intirely good, he can have nothing of that fordid Selfishness in him which doth too often contract and narrow our Benevolence, and cause us like Serpents to infold ourselves within ourselves, and to turn out our Stings to all the World besides: Upon both these Accounts therefore as he is a perfectly happy and perfectly good Man, he cannot but bear a hearty and universal good Will to Mankind; and that he doth so, he hath given us too many dear Experiments to make the least doubt of it; for while he was among us, he all along prefer'd our Interest before his own, he made himself poor to enrich us, exposed himself to Contempt to raise us to Glory, took upon him our Guilt to release us from Punishment, and willingly underwent a most miserable Death, that we might live happily for ever. In all which he gave us the most glorious Demonstrations, how infinitely dear the humane Nature, of which he participated, was to him in all those numberless Individuals into which it hath been multiplied. The Consideration of which is exceedingly pregnant with Encouragements to Obedience: For seeing God governs us by one who is as well our Brother by Nature, as our King by Office, seeing he carries our kind in his own Person, and is Flesh of our Flesh, and Bone of our Bone, we may certainly depend upon it, that he will be as kind and as gracious to us as his Government and our Happiness, which is involved in it, will permit him; that so long as we are sincere to him he will compassionate our Weakness, and that when we have gone astray from him, he will graciously receive us upon our humble Submissions, that he will not load us beyond our Strength, nor punish us beyond our demerit, but that he will readily assist us in all our Needs, and tenderly pity us in all our pitiable Cases, and kindly accept of our honest Endeavours, and reward them beyond all our Hopes and Expectations; in short, that nothing shall be able to separate us from his Favour, but only our own Obstinacy and wilful Rebellion; and that though in this Case he will be angry with us; yet he will wait to be gracious again in Expectation of our Repentance, and not hastily abandon us to everlasting Ruin, till we have sinned ourselves past all hope of Recovery. For as to all these Things the humane Nature in him is our constant Advocate, which being our Nature as well as his, makes our Case its own, and is as much concerned for us, as it could reasonably be for itself, if it were in our Circumstances; than which, what higher Encouragement to Loyalty and Obedience, can there be given to ingenuous Minds, to consider that he who reigns above in the Heavens, and hath the Disposal of my Fate, is my Kinsman by Nature, who by assuming my Substance, hath assumed my Interest; so that whatsoever he doth for me, he doth it for himself, that is, for his own humane Nature that is in me, and that therefore 'tis impossible, but he must continue kind to me, whilst I continue dutiful to him, seeing that without great Provocation he can never be unkind sure to his own Nature. For this Reason therefore God governs us by his Son in our own Nature, that so by this his near kindred to us, he might the better assure our diffident Mind of a most gracious and merciful Treatment at his Hands, and thereby excite us to a free and cheerful Obedience to him.

IV. God governs us by his own eternal Son in our Nature, that so he might the more powerfully excite our Gratitude and Ingenuity, and thereby oblige us to render him a more free and generous Obedience, which is the Obedience he delights in, and that alone which answers the End of his Government; for that which he aims at in governing us, is to subdue the Rebellions of our Natures against the eternal Laws of right Reason, that thereby he may render us more and more rational, and consequently more and more prepared to participate of the Happiness of a rational Nature, which is never to be effected by a forced and constrained Obedience; for so long as our Obedience is forced, our Wills and Affections are unsubdued, and all our outward Submissions, are only the Disguise of a treacherous and rebellious Nature; we would still fly out into Acts of Rebellion, but we dare not; our Inclinations are as stiff and obstinate as ever, and the Restraint which our Fear lays upon them, is so far from conquering them, that it only heightens and inrages them. Till therefore our Obedience becomes generous and free, and doth proceed from a willing Mind, from a Mind that is influenced by ingenuous Motives, it will signify little or nothing to the Amendment of our Nature; which notwithstanding its beautiful rinde and outside, will still remain corrupt and rotten at the Core. Now to render us freely and willingly obedient, what more effectual Method could God have taken than this, of governing us by his own Son in our Nature? For in this our Nature he was our Priest; and as I shewed before, it was infinitely reasonable he should be so; and by what more endearing Motive can we be obliged to obey him than this, that now he is in Heaven, he rules and governs us in that very Nature which he sacrificed for us, when he was upon Earth; and that it is in that individual Humanity which as our Priest he offer'd up for us on the Cross, that he now reigns over us, at the Right Hand of God; so that he who is now our King was once our Sacrifice, and that not by constraint, but by his own free Offer and Consent? For to redeem the Lives of our Souls, which by a thousand Guilts were forfeited to the Vengeance of God, he freely chose to assume our Nature, and therein to undergo our Punishment, that so we might escape and be happy for ever; and being governed, as we are, by a King that died for us, that willingly died a woful shameful Death, to ransom our Lives from Death eternal, what Monsters of Ingratitude must we be, if we still persist in our Rebellions against him! When I consider that he who exacts my Obedience, hath spent his own Heart's Blood for me, that he who requires me to sacrifice my Lusts to him, did cheerfully sacrifice his own Life for me; how can I grudge to comply with his Demands, without Blushing and Confusion? O ungrateful! had he been as backward to die for thee, as thou art to submit to him, thou hadst been a Wretch, a miserable desperate Wretch for ever. With what Face then canst thou pretend to any thing that is modest or ingenuous, tender or apprehensive in humane Nature, that thinkest it much to render him those Duties, which he demands of thee, and which he demands for no other Reason, but because they are necessary to thy Happiness, when thou knowest he never thought it much to pour out his Soul for thee in the bitterest Agonies and Torments, that ever humane Nature endured? If therefore it be possible to work up our degenerate Natures into a free and cheerful Obedience to God, one would think this Consideration should do it, that he whom God hath constituted our King to demand our Obedience, demands it in our own Nature, which he assumed that he might die for us, and thereby release us from that dreadful Obligation we were under to have died for ever. So that now while his Authority bespeaks our Awe and Reverence, his Blood bespeaks our Gratitude and Ingenuity, and that in such Language, and with such powerful Rhetorick and Persuasion as is impossible for us to resist, unless we are resolved to outvy the Devils themselves in Ingratitude, who though they have been audacious enough to outface the Authority of their Maker, were never so much Devils yet as to turn a deaf Ear to the vocal Blood and Wounds of a Redeemer.

V. And lastly, God governs us by his own eternal Son in our own Natures, that thereby he may give us the more ample Assurance of our future Reward. Had he continued to govern us by himself immediately, we had wanted one of the most encouraging Instances of his immense Bounty in rewarding Obedience, that ever was given to the World; and that is his Advancement of our Saviour to that mediatorial Royalty, which he now exercises at the right Hand of the Majesty on high; for had our Saviour been God only, he had been incapable of Reward, his Happiness, as such, being so immense, as that it can admit of no Addition; but being Man as well as God, he is thereby capacitated for all that vast Reward, which the Possession of his mediatorial Kingdom, together with an everlasting Heaven, includes; and all this Reward is the Product of that perfect and profound Obedience, which he rendered to his Father whilst he was in this World. So that now in him by whom God hath promised to reward our Obedience, we have an illustrious Instance of God's Liberality in rewarding Obedience; by his happy Fate, we may be fully assured, that we shall not serve God for nought, but that the Reward of our Obedience shall ten thousand-fold exceed the Labour and Difficulty of it; for he is a Man as well as we, though he be hypostatically united to God; and this Man for some few Years faithful Service upon Earth, for revealing God's Will to Men, and exhibiting a perfect Example of Obedience to it, for exposing himself to some temporal Calamities, and finally, for offering up himself a spotless Victim for the Sins of the World, is now advanced to the utmost height of Bliss and Glory, that it is possible for a Creature to arrive to; he is set far above all Principality and Power, he is served and adored, as the only Potentate under God the Father, throughout all the heavenly World; he is worshipp'd and celebrated by Cherubim and Seraphim, by Arch-angels and Angels, he is extoll'd in the Songs of the Patriarchs and Prophets, the Apostles and Evangelists, the Confessors and Martyrs; and his Name is resounded with everlasting Praises and Thanksgivings, throughout all the vast Choir of the Spirits of just Men made perfect; and in a Word, he hath all Power given him both in Heaven and Earth, and to his all-commanding Will the whole Creation is subjected. In this ever blessed King, therefore, by whom God now rules us, we have for the Assurance of our hope of a future Reward, the most stupendous Instance of it, that ever was given to the World. And indeed, since the great End of Christ's Mediation was to reduce Men to their Duty, by giving them a sure and certain Hope of the Remission of their Sins at present, and of a glorious Reward hereafter, it was highly convenient that itself should be an Example of its own Design, and that the glorious Part of it should be made the Reward of the more painful and difficult; that so having in the Mediation itself, a signal Instance of God's immense Liberality in rewarding Obedience, we might thereupon the more confidently expect that glorious Recompence of Reward which God hath promised to those that obey him, and he thereby the more vigorously excited to our Duty. And hence our Saviour proposes himself to us as an Instance of the Reward of Obedience, To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my Throne, even as I have overcome, and am sat down with my Father on his Throne: As much as if he should have said, that upon your overcoming the Difficulties of your Duty, you shall receive a most glorious Reward, you need not at all doubt, having so illustrious an Example of it in myself, who having conquer'd the difficult Parts of my Mediation, which was to teach you as a Prophet, and to expiate for you as a Priest, am now crowned with the Reward of transacting the glorious Part of it; i.e. Sitting with my Father on his Throne, and there reigning with him in unspeakable Glory and Beatitude; and accordingly the Apostle bids us, Look unto Jesus the Author and Finisher of our Faith, who for the Joy that was set before him, endured the Cross, despised the Shame, and is sat down on the right hand of the Throne of the Majesty on high, Heb. xii. 2.

S E C T. XIV.

That Jesus Christ is this Mediator, of whom we have been treating.

HAVING in the foregoing Sections explain'd at large the Nature and Offices of the Mediator between God and Men; all that now remains, is to prove, that Jesus Christ, the Author of our Religion, is the Person whom God; hath ordained and constituted this Mediator between him and us. And that he is so, he himself openly averr'd, whilst he was upon Earth, and afterwards proclaim'd it to the World by the Mouth of his Apostles; but this singly by itself is no Argument at all of the Truth of the Thing, because a Deceiver might have averr'd the same Thing; and since there were sundry Pretenders to this Office as well as he, it was necessary there should be some other Evidence of his being invested with it, besides his pretending to it; otherwise it would have been impossible for us to distinguish him from those that falsely pretended to it; and accordingly he himself tells us, John v. 31. If I bear Witness of myself, my Witness is not true, i. e. If I can produce no other Testimony of my being the Mediator than my own bare Word, you have no Reason at all to believe me; and therefore he tells us, that he had not only John's Witness to it, who was his Forerunner, but also a much greater than John's, even the Witness of his Father; ver. 32, 33, 36, 37. Now there are three Ways by which his Father testified for him; all which do abundantly evince his being the true Mediator. First, by sundry ancient Predictions of him, which were all exactly accomplished in him; for the Testimony of Jesus, saith St. John, is the Spirit of Prophecy, Rev. xix. 10. Secondly, by sundry Voices from Heaven, by which the Father proclaimed him his well beloved Son. Thirdly, by Miracles, which by the Power of God he frequently wrought in his own Person, while he was upon Earth, and in the Persons of his Followers after his Ascension into Heaven. To treat of all which would require a Volume by itself: and therefore for the first of these Ways, I shall refer the English Reader to the Reverend Mr. Kidder's Demonstration of the Messiah; wherein the Testimony of Prophecy is handled at large, with very great Strength and Clearness of Judgment. And as for the second Way of God's bearing Witness to Jesus, viz. by Voices from Heaven; I refer the Reader to our learned Dr. Hammond's Reasonableness of the Christian Religion, at the End of his Practical Catechism; it being my Intent to insist only upon the third and last way of God's attesting Jesus to be the Mediator, viz. by Miracles; for this way our Saviour himself most insists on and appeals to. So in the afore-cited John ver. 36. But I have a greater Witness than that of John; for the Works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same Works that I do, bear Witness of me, that the Father hath sent me. So also John x. 25. The Works which I do in my Father's Name, they bear Witness of me; and in John xv. 24. Our Saviour makes the inexcusable Aggravation of the Jews Infidelity to be this, that they would not be convinced by all those miraculous Works which he had done among them; If I had not done among them the Works which none other Men did, they had not had Sin, but now have they both seen and hated me and my Father. In these and sundry other Places, our Saviour appeals to those miraculous Works which he did; as to a certain Testimony from God, that he was the only true Messiah or Mediator between God and Men. And, indeed, seeing the great Aim and Design of our Saviour's Mediation, is to advance the Honour of God, and the Perfection of Souls; and seeing how admirably it is framed and contrived to promote those blessed Ends; Miracles are a most certain Attestation of the Truth of it: For though the Scripture tells us of false Miracles wrought by the Power of evil Spirits, and History furnishes us with innumerable Instances of it; yet it is against all Reason to imagine, that ever evil Spirits would exert their Power to attest a Doctrine so infinitely repugnant to their own Temper and Interest. Had the Design of our Saviour's Mediation been to alienate Mens Minds from God and

Goodness,

Goodness, we might have justly concluded all his miraculous Works to be nothing but magical Tricks perform'd by Confederacy with the Devil. For how could we have imagined, either that God or any good Spirit, would ever have employ'd his Power to propagate a Doctrine so infinitely repugnant to his Will and Nature; seeing it is equally incredible, either that a bad Religion should be the Will of a good God, or that the God of Truth should bear false Witness to a Lye; And, therefore we always find, that those false Miracles, effected by evil Spirits, whereof the Scripture and History make mention, were always wrote to deprave Mens Minds with vicious Principles, and to seduce Men from God, to Superstition and Idolatry, or to confirm them in it; but that an impious Spirit should ever work Miracles to promote true Piety, to inspire Mens Minds with great and worthy Thoughts of God, and suitable Affections towards him, that a malicious, proud, unjust and revengeful Spirit, should by miraculous Signs endeavour to reduce the World to the Practice of Charity, Humility, Justice, Patience, Meekness, and Equanimity, is infinitely incredible: And therefore since the Doctrine of our Saviour's Mediation doth, above all the Religions that ever were professed in the World, most powerfully oblige us to these and all other Instances of Piety and Virtue; we may depend upon it, that though the Devil had known it to be a Lye, he would never have been so great a Fool as to cheat the World into the Belief of it; for though he loves to deceive, yet there is nothing in Nature he more hates, than to deceive Men into Piety and Virtue, because hereby he deceives himself, and betrays his own Interest in the World, The Miracles of our Saviour therefore being all designed to attest a most pure and heavenly Doctrine, a Doctrine that is throughout exactly conformable to the Nature of God, and infinitely abhorrent to the Genius of Devils, must necessarily be the Effects of a Divine Power; because to work Miracles for the Attestation of such a Doctrine, could be neither agreeable to any other Nature, nor serviceable to any other Interest but God's.

Now of all the miraculous Testimonies which God gave to our Saviour, there is none to which he did so often appeal, and upon which he did so much stake the Credit of his Doctrine, as that of his own Resurrection from the Dead; for thus when he had perform'd that heroick Act of Zeal, whipping the Money-changers out of the Temple, and the Jews required some Sign of him, by what Authority he did it, he bad them destroy this Temple, pointing to his own Body, and in three Days I will raise it up again, John ii. 19. So also, when the Pharisees desired him to give them some Sign of his being the true Messias, he tells them, that no other Sign should be given them, but only the Sign of the Prophet Jonas; for as Jonas was three Days and three Nights in the Whale's Belly, so shall the Son of Man be three Days and three Nights in the Heart of the Earth; which necessarily implies, that after that he should rise again, Mark viii. 12. and accordingly we find that after he was risen and ascended, the principal Business of his Apostles was to testify his Resurrection to the World; for so, Acts i. 22. St. Peter makes this to be the Reason why it was necessary, that one should be chosen into the Apostolate, to supply the Room of Judas, that he might be a Witness with them of Christ's Resurrection. And in Acts iv. 33. we are told, that with great Power the Apostles gave Witness of the Resurrection of the Lord Jesus; and still when they were to prove any Article of the Christian Faith, this they urge as the great Argument. Thus from the Resurrection of Christ, St. Paul proves, the General Resurrection, 1 Cor. xv. so also Acts xvii. 31. he proves that God hath appointed a Day wherein he will judge the World in Righteousness, by that Man whom he hath ordained, viz. Christ Jesus, by this very Topick, whereof he hath given Assurance unto all Men, in that he hath raised him from the Dead: And 1 Pet. i. 3. that Apostle makes Christ's Resurrection from the Dead to be the great Motive of Credibility by which God hath begotten them again into a lively Hope of future Happiness; so also, Acts ii. 36. Therefore (saith the same Apostle, i. e. because God had raised him from the Dead, ver. 24.) let all the House of Israel know that God hath made this same Jesus both Lord and Christ; and Rom. i. 4. he is said to be de- clared the Son of God, by the Resurrection from the Dead; yea, so undoubted an Argument is this of Christ's being the true Messias or Mediator, that the Jews themselves were convinced, that they must either allow him to be so, or else outface the Truth of his Resurrection; which put them upon all possible Ways of stifling the Report of it, knowing that if once it obtained Credit in the World, the last Error would be worse than the first, Matth. xxvii. 64. from all which it is evident, that it was taken for granted, not only by Christ himself and his Apostles, but even by his most avowed Enemies, that supposing his Resurrection to be true, it would from thence undeniably follow, that he was the Messias or Mediator.

clared

In the Management of this Argument therefore, I shall endeavour these two Things:

First, To prove the Truth and Reality of this miraculous Attestation, which God gave to our Saviour, viz. by raising him from the Dead.

Secondly, To shew what an excellent convincing Argument this is, of the Truth of his Doctrine or Mediation.

I. I shall endeavour to prove the Truth and Reality of this miraculous Attestation, which God gave to our Saviour, viz. by raising him from the Dead; which being a Matter of Fact, independent from all necessary Causes, is capable of no other Proof to those who were not Eye-witnesses of it, but only that of credible Testimony. Thus that Julius Cæsar was kill'd in the Senate-House, is a Matter of Fact, the Truth of which is acknowledged by all the World, and that Man would be accounted little better than mad, that should make the least doubt of it; and yet we have no other way of proving this, but only by the concurrent Testimony of credible Historians, which being as great an Evidence as the Matter is capable of, is as much as any reasonable Man can require to induce him to believe it. For although Testimony be the only Evidence by which Matters of Fact can be proved; yet it is such an Evidence as hath Force enough in it to induce any reasonable Man to believe its Proposals: And there are Ten thousand Things which we do as firmly assent to upon the Evidence of Testimony, as to any Propositions upon the Evidence of mathematical Demonstration. If therefore the Resurrection of our Saviour be but sufficiently attested, that is as good an Argument of the Truth of it, as the Nature of the Thing will bear; and when it is made but as apparent that a Thing is, as it could possibly be if it really were, there is no farther Proof of it can be reasonably expected; and if notwithstanding this, Men will not believe, it is impossible that any Reason should convince them: But in this Testimony of our Saviour's Resurrection there is as much Evidence and Credibility, as there can be in any Testimony whatsoever. For to give a Testimony of the utmost Force of Credibility, six Things are requir'd: First, That they that give it, should be certainly informed of the Truth of what they do attest. Secondly, That there should be a Concurrence of a sufficient Number of Witnesses. Thirdly, That there should be no visible Reason to suspect their Truth and Integrity. Fourthly, That there should be no apparent Motive to induce them to give false Witness. Fifthly, That they give some great Security for the Truth of what they say. And Sixthly, That they also produce some certain Sign or Token of the Reality of their Testimony. And when all these Circumstances do concur in a Testimony, they render it as highly credible as it is possible for a Testimony to be. Now in that Testimony which we have of our Saviour's Resurrection, there was, as I shall shew in the Particulars, a full Concurrence of them all. For,

I. They who testified it, were certainly informed whether it were true or no; for they declare that they were Eye and Ear-witnesses of it, Acts iii. 15. and relate at large the familiar Conversation they had with him after his Resurrection, Acts x. 41. and they tell the Story of it with so many Circumstances, that it is impossible they should be deceived: For at his Resurrection they find the Stone rolled away from the Mouth of his Sepulchre, and no Body therein, although though it was guarded by Soldiers; so that it was impossible for any Body to steal him away; and that it was his own Body wherein he arose, and no aërial Phantasm, evidently appears by what he did to convince St. Thomas, who would not believe; unless he might put his Hand into the Hole of his Side, and see the Print of the Nails that pierced his Hands, to which our Saviour readily condescended; and so far were the Apostles from being over-credulous, that when he appeared to them after his Resurrection, it is said, that they suspected him to be a Spirit, or walking Ghost, and to convince them of their Mistake, he was fain to appeal to the Judgment of their Senses, Handle me, and see me, saith he, for a Spirit hath not Flesh and Bones as ye see me have, Luke xxiv. 39. and afterwards, more fully to satisfy their yet scrupulous Minds, he eat and drank in the Midst of them, ver. 43. Now, the more suspicious and incredulous they were at first, the greater Evidence it is, that they were thoroughly informed of what they testified, that there was an undeniable Evidence in the Thing, else how could it have satisfied such scrupulous and incredulous Persons, and that they were far from being willing to be abused themselves, or from having any Design to abuse the World. And that their outward Sense was not imposed upon by the Strength of their Imagination, is evident, in that he conversed with them forty Days together, which was too long a Time for their Senses to mistake an Image of their Fancies for a Reality. For how is it conceivable, that so many Persons as pretended to see him after his Resurrection, should for forty Days together imagine that they saw him, heard him, eat and drank with him, when in reality all this Scene of Things was nothing but a Dream or Specêtre of their own Fancies? That their Fancies should create and represent a Person to them frequently appearing to them, preaching and instructing them, giving out Commissions, and administering holy Ordinances to them? That their Fancies should draw them out to the Mount of Olives after a Specêtre, that was visible no where, but upon the Stage of their own Imaginations, and there represent it carried up into Heaven on a Cloud? Surely, if they were in their Wits, it was impossible for them to believe such a Train of Things to be real, had they been only the Images of their Fancies: And yet that they were in their Wits, is as apparent as the Sun, both from their unanimous Consent in the Relation of the Fact, with all its Circumstances, and from those wise and sober Writings which they left behind them, which abound with excellent Morals, solid and coherent Reasonings, strong and powerful Persuasions, without the least Intermixture either of flat Impertinence, or ranting Enthusiasm; which is a plain Demonstration, that they were certainly informed concerning the Matter of Fact which they testified, whether it were true or false.

II. Another Circumstance requisite to render a Testimony highly credible, is, the Concurrence of several Witnesses; of which we have a remarkable Instance in this Testimony of our Saviour's Resurrection. For if those Five hundred Brethren and upwards, who, as St. Paul tells us, saw our Saviour after he was risen, 1 Cor. xv. 6. you add the Congregation of the Disciples he appear'd to, when he baffled the Infidelity of St. Thomas, together with those great Assemblies that saw him in the Mount of Galilee, and upon Mount Olivet, from whence he ascended; it is not improbable, but that there were some Thousands of Persons that saw him after his Resurrection, among all whom, we find the most exact Agreement both in the Matter and Circumstances of what they did attest, which, had it not been true, must have been morally impossible. For how could so vast a Number of Men have so punctually agreed in the same Story, had it been a Lye? especially when they were so narrowly sifted, so craftily examined, and cross examined, as doubtless these Men were (or at least would have been, had there been any just Ground to suspect them) by the Jewish Magistrates, who were all of them profess'd Enemies to our Saviour and his Doctrine. For had their Testimony been forged, it is not imaginable how they should foresee what Questions the Magistrates would propose to them; nor consequently, how they should agree what Answers to return to their several Interrogatories: so that when they came to be examined, they must of necessity have thwarted and contradicted one another, another, at least in some Circumstances of Time or Place, or the like, by which means the whole Forgery must have soon been unravelled, and the Credit of it for ever dash'd out of Countenance. But that no such Thing ever happened, is evident by the Credit which their Testimony found, even among those who had the best Opportunities of examining whether it were true or false; for the Truth of Christ's Doctrine depending upon the Truth of this Story of his Resurrection, there can be no doubt, but the Jewish Magistrates, whose Interest made them Enemies to Christ, would not have been wanting, had they thought it feasible, to try all Ways to disprove the Truth of it; and if they did not, no other Reason can be given of it, but only this, that the Truth of the Thing was so notorious, that it would have been ridiculous for them to attempt the disproving it; but if they did, it had been a very easy Matter for them, had it been a Lye, to have detected it: For the Number of the Witnesses being so great, and the Jews having every Day Opportunity of conversing with them, they might have easily trapp'd them in their Relations, it, being impossible, that among a great Number of conspiring Impostors, there should be always an exact Harmony and Agreement: For suppose that such a Story as this were told in London, that a certain Man dwelling at Westminster, and pretending himself to be the Son of God, and the lawful Heir of the Crown of England, had preach'd up a new Religion, requiring all People, under Pain of Damnation, to embrace his Doctrine, and submit to his Government; and that as a Sign of the Truth of all this, he had publickly declared, that three Days after his Death he would rise again: Whereupon the last Friday was sev'n-night he was put to Death by the Magistrates, and notwithstanding he was buried, and his Sepulchre dammed up with a huge Stone, and a Guard of Soldiers set to watch it, lest his Profelytes should steal him away, yet the Sunday following he arose, and hath since been seen by several hundreds, if not some thousands of the Neighbourhood, many of whom had touched and handled him, eat, and drank, and conversed familiarly with him, among whom there was Peter such-a-one, Thomas such-a-one, John such-a-one, naming some twenty or thirty Persons well known among the Neighbours, who could give a more particular Account of the Matter, and tell the Names of most of the Persons that were Eye-witnesses with them: Why now, it cannot be supposed, but that as soon as ever this formal Rumour began to spread (especially if it found Credit among the Multitude, and the pretended Witnesses of it should be so bold as to go and assert it before the King and Council, as the Apostles did before the Rulers of the Jews) I say, it cannot be supposed, but that Care would be taken, that the Matter should be immediately sifted, and the several neighbouring Justices required to call these Witnesses to account; who, by pumping and examining, promising and threatening them, could not fail of extorting the Truth from them in a very little while: For it is impossible but they must have found them faltering in the relation of their Story, and counter-witnessing one another. John would have told it with this Circumstance, and Peter with the contrary, and Thomas would have thwarted and contradicted them both; so that when they came to compare their several Relations with one another, in all probability they would have found as great a Confusion among them, as there was in the Language of the Bricklayers of Babel. And therefore though at first perhaps the Story might have seemed plausible, and a great many credulous People might have believed it, yet every Day would have render'd it more suspicious, and the Truth must at last have triumph'd and prevailed: But yet though the Eye-witnesses of our Saviour's Resurrection were thus sifted and examined over and over, their Relation every one Day got Ground and Credit even in Jerusalem itself, where the Thing was transacted, and where every one might easily inform himself concerning the Credit of the Relaters, and the Circumstances of their Relation; insomuch that forty Days after, it was so far from being dash'd out of Countenance, that at one Sermon of St. Peter's, there were no less than three thousand Persons Converted to the Belief of it ; and so it still grew and increased, till at last in despite of all the Wit and Malice of its Opposers, it was embraced and acknowledged throughout all the World ; which is an undeniable Evidence of the exact Agreement there was in the Testimony of the several Witnesses of our Saviour's Resurrection.

III. Another Circumstance requisite to render a Testimony highly credible, is, when there is no visible Reason to suspect the Honesty and Integrity of the Attestors ; which Circumstance did also concur to credit the Testimony of our Saviour's Resurrection : For that the first Testifiers of it were Men of a clear and unsuspected Honesty, will appear to any Man that seriously considers either the Doctrine which they taught, or the Genius of their Followers, or the Manner of their Testimony, or the Success it had among those who were best able to satisfy themselves whether they were honest or no. First, As for their Doctrine, there is nothing can be more contrary to lying, dissembling and hypocritical Reservation, it strictly requires Plainness and Simplicity of Speech, and that our Words should be the Images and Interpreters of our Minds, it brands and stigmatizes all Deceit and Falseness with a most infamous Character, and irrevocably consigns all wilful Lyars to the miserable Portion of the Father of Lyes. If then they believed their own Doctrine, it is not to be imagined they would ever have defended it with Frauds and Impostures ; and whether they believed it or no, it is hardly supposable, that they would have so loudly declaimed against Dishonesty, had they been at least visibly dishonest themselves ; since by condemning it in others, they must have libelled themselves, and imblazoned to the World their own Shame and Infamy. And then, Secondly, As for the Genius and Temper of their Disciples and Followers, it's plain, that there never was any Thing more open and sincere : For such was the ingenuous Simplicity of the Primitive Christians, that they thought it a Disparagement to be put to their Oaths, thinking it sufficient for every good Man to give this Assurance of his Truth, ἀληθῶς λέγω, I speak truly ; and when they were most severely examined by their bloody Persecutors, concerning their Faith, they never either denied or concealed it, counting it a most impious Thing to dissemble the Truth ; and though when they were questioned, they could easily have either denied or evaded it, yet they scorned to live upon such base Terms, to be beholden to their Hypocrisy for their Lives ; yea, so conspicuous was their Honesty to all the World, that the Heathen themselves were forced to acknowledge it : For so Pliny, in the Account which he gave the Emperor Trajan of the Christians, tells him, That after the strictest Enquiry he could make of them, even of those who had renounced Christianity, he found this to be the greatest Fault they were guilty of, that they used harmlessly to meet to worship Christ, and at those Meetings to bind themselves by a Sacrament, that they would not do any Wickedness, that they would not steal, nor rob, nor commit Adultery, nor falsify their Words, nor with-hold any Thing wherewith they had been intrusted, where ever it were required at their Hands. Such was the Temper of the immediate Disciples of the Eye-witnesses of our Saviour's Resurrection ; and is it likely that the Scholars would have proved so honest, had they not been taught by the Example, as well as by the Doctrine of their Masters ? For to be sure, had the Apostles been dishonest, their immediate Disciples must needs have known something of it ; and being acquainted with it, they would doubtless have resolved either not to continue their Disciples any longer, or else to have imitated them in all their secret Cheats and Knaveries ; and so from the Masters to the Disciples, Dishonesty would have been propagated from one Generation to another ; but since the contrary happen'd, it's plain, that the first Propagators were Men of very honest and sincere Minds ; which will yet farther appear, if we consider, Thirdly, the Manner of their Testimony, which they delivered with the greatest Plainness and Simplicity of Speech, the greatest Freedom and Assurance of Spirit, and the greatest particularity, as to all its Circumstances. They never went about to involve their Sense in ambiguous Words, or to recommend it to the World in a pompous Style, in pedantick Flourishes, or flattering Insinuations, which is the Way of all Impostors: But as Men that were well assured of the Truth of what they said, they exposed it to the World in the most naked and simple Expressions, and so left it to recommend itself; they did not whisper their Testimony in Corners, as if they were either afraid or ashamed to produce it in the open Light; but with the greatest Confidence and Assurance they published it in the midst of Jerusalem, yea, and before the Sanhedrin itself; where, if it had been false, 'twas impossible but it should be detected; and whereas 'tis the Way of Impostors to reserve themselves in Generals, knowing that should they descend to Particulars, 'twould be hard for them to avoid Discovery or Contradiction; the Apostles did not only report a general Story of Christ's Resurrection, but related it with all its most minute and particular Circumstances; nor did they change or alter any one of them upon different Examinations before different Examiners, but still persisted with the greatest Constancy to themselves, and Harmony with each other; so that if ever there might be any Thing gathered of the Temper of Persons from the particular Manner of their Discourses, we may certainly discern the greatest Fidelity in the Apostles in the Manner of their expressing themselves to the World. But then in the fourth and last Place, the Credit which they found among those who were best able to satisfy themselves whether they were honest or no, is a further Evidence of their Fidelity; for had they not been Men of known Honesty, it is not to be imagined that they could ever have obtained so much Credit in a Place, where they were so intimately known, and among Persons with whom they every Day conversed with the greatest Openness and Freedom; especially considering how contrary their Testimony was to the Genius and Interest of those who gave Credit to them, many of whose Hands had been imbrued in the Blood of our Saviour; by which they were obliged, in their own Vindication, so far as in them lay, to disprove the Story of his Resurrection; because, if that proved true, it proved them guilty of the most monstrous Impiety that ever was acted, viz. the Murder of the Son of God. And is it likely that the Murderers of our Saviour would ever have believed the Story of his Resurrection, which was so clear an Evidence of his Innocency, and their own Guilt, had they had any Reason to suspect the Veracity of those that attested it; and yet in despite of themselves, great Numbers of them were forced to believe it, although as soon as they did so, they were pricked at the Heart with the Sense of their horrid Impiety, and forced to cry out in a bitter Agony of Conscience, Men and Brethren, what shall we do to be saved? And as for those of them who had no Hand in his Murder, to be sure they were greatly prejudiced against the Belief of his Resurrection, because upon that depended the Truth of his Doctrine, which plainly contradicted a great Part of that Religion in which they had been educated, and of which they were infinitely zealous; and therefore to be sure they would never have given Credit to it, had they not had undeniable Evidence of the Truth and Integrity of those that testified it, especially when it was so easy for them to satisfy themselves about it: For 'tis not imaginable they would ever have entertained so ungrateful a Story, but upon the most strict Enquiry into the Credit of its Relators; and if upon Enquiry they had found the least Flaw either in them, or in their Testimony, if they could have convicted them of any dishonest Practices for the Time past, or caught them tripping or contradicting one another in what they testified at present, they would soon have made the World ring of it, and the Jews who were dispersed through all the neighbouring Nations, would have divulged to all the World their fraudulent Practices, and posted them up where-ever they came for infamous Knaves and Lyars; which must have infallibly blasted the Credit of their Testimony, and caused it to have been hissed out of the World for a fulsome Imposture. Wherefore since no such Thing ever happened; but contrariwise the Credit of their Report of Christ's Resurrection, did, in despite of all the Wit and Malice of its Opposers, every Day spread and encrease, even in Jerusalem itself, where the Thing was acted, and where the Reporters of it lived, and that not only for a few Days or Months, but from Year to Year, even till Jerusalem itself was destroyed; since, I say, all this is so evident, what greater Argument can we desire of the Truth and Integrity of those that attested it? And supposing them to be honest, their Testimony must be true, because it was not Matter of Opinion, in which it is possible for the wisest Men to be mistaken, but Matter of Fact, of which they had certain Information from their own Senses; and he who says that he saw such a Thing, and it's evident that his Senses were not imposed on, lies against his own Conscience, if it be not true that he saw it.

IV. Another Circumstance requisite to render a Testimony highly credible, is, that there is no apparent Motive to induce the Attestors of it to testify falsely. For whether they are honest or no, we cannot well suppose, that in a Matter of Importance they will testify falsely, without some great Motive inducing them thereunto; but as for the Witnesses of our Saviour's Resurrection, had they not been certain of the Truth of it, they could have no imaginable Motive to induce them to attest it; for they could never hope to reap the least Advantage from it either here or hereafter; not here, for their Lord had told them before-hand, that if they would be his Disciples, they must suffer Persecution; and they themselves could not but foresee, that by testifying his Resurrection, they must infallibly alarm all the World against them, because the Doctrine which they confirmed by it was extremely opposite both to the present Religion and Interest of the Jews, and to the common Theology of the Gentiles; and that therefore by going about to establish it, they must in effect proclaim War against all the World, and consequently expose themselves to the utmost Rigour and Severity that the Wit and Malice of Men could invent or inflict; which must be a very sorry Motive sure to induce Men in their Wits to undertake the Propagation of a known Imposture. But perhaps it may be thought they did all this for the Glory and Reputation of being the Founders of a new Seet. But from whence, I beseech you, could they promise themselves Success? not from their Master Jesus, who, if their Testimony was not true, they could not but know was still detained under the Power of the Grave; not from God, whom, if they testified falsely, they were conscious they wickedly belyed in suborning his Power and Veracity to bear Witness to a Falseness; not from the Force and Charms of their own Eloquence or Sophistry, for that they pretended not to; not from their Riches, for their Staves and Scribes were all the Treasure they carried with them; nor from any Authority or Power they had, or ever were like to have; for how could such poor illiterate Persons as they, ever expect to arrive to an Authority great enough to contest with all the Power and Wisdom of the World which was armed against them; in a Word, not from any Proneness they found either in Jews or Gentiles, to embrace the Doctrine which they designed by this their Testimony to confirm and assert, that being every where gain-said and opposed by the Interests and Affections of both; and if their Testimony was not believed (as 'twas very unlikely it should, if it had not been true) what could they expect but to be branded to all Posterity, as a Company of infamous Cheats and Impostors? So that unless they had been assured that their Testimony was true, they had all the Reason in the World to expect that it would prove the most fatal and unprofitable Lye that ever was invented or broached among Mankind; since it was so far from promising them any worldly Advantage, that it visibly exposed them to all the Miseries and Calamities of human Life. And then if they knew this Story of Christ's Resurrection, which they attested, to be a Lye, they had a great deal less Reason to expect any Advantage from it in the World to come: For either they believed that Religion which they sought to confirm, by attesting this Story, or they did not; if they did not, how could they hope to fare ever the better in the other World for endeavouring to propagate a false Religion in this? If they did, how would they hope to be made happy hereafter, by telling a Lye for that Religion which excommunicates Lyars out of the Kingdom of Happiness? Since therefore if their Testimony had been false, they could expect to reap no Advantage from it in either World, doubtless they would never have been so mad as to assert and attest it, had they not known it to be true; for what Man in his Wits would ever tell a Lye, that hath no reason to expect any other Fruit from it, but only to die for it here, and to be damned for it hereafter?

a Lye

V. Another Circumstance requisite to render a Testimony highly credible, is, that the Testifiers of it do give some great Security for the Truth of what they say; and therefore it is required by human Laws, that in all great Matters of Fact the Witnesses should give the Security of their Oaths, or of some great Pledge to be forfeited by them, in case their Testimony prove false. But never did any Men give greater Security of their Truth, than the Witnesses of our Saviour's Resurrection; for they sealed their Testimony with their Blood, and rather chose to undergo the most witty and exquisite Torments, than to recant any Part or Circumstance of what they had seen and testified concerning it: For of all the Apostles, who were the chief Witnesses of it, there was only one that escaped a violent Death, and he, as the Ecclesiastical Story tells us, had not been delivered from it but by a Miracle. And doubtless those other Disciples, who saw and conversed with our Saviour after he was risen, and together with the Apostles, bore Witness of it to the World, did proportionably run the same Fate: And how is it imaginable, that so many should all turn so mad together, as to lay down their Lives for a Pledge of the Truth of a Story, which they knew to be all a mere Cheat and Imposture? Some Men indeed have suffered Martyrdom for professing Propositions that were false, but then they thought them to be true; but no Man in his Wits ever died in the Defence of an Assertion which he knew to be false. But as for the Testifiers of our Saviour's Resurrection, they did all of them witness upon certain Information, and did assuredly know whether their Testimony were true or false; so that if Christ did not rise, as they reported, they died in the Defence of a known Lye, which is such a piece of Folly, as doth exceed all Instances of Extravagance. Suppose that Æsop should have died a Martyr to his own Fables, or that the Author of the Seven Champions should have laid down his Life in the Defence of St. George's killing the Dragon, would not all the World have concluded them incurably distracted? But as for the Apostles, their excellent Writings are a sufficient Demonstration, that they were Men of very sound Intellectuals, and therefore though we should suppose them to be so wicked as to love lying for its own sake, we cannot suppose them to be so mad as to love it better than their own Lives, as they must necessarily do, if their Testimony of our Saviour's Resurrection were false. But supposing that one or two of them should have proved so frantick, yet it is incredible that so many hundreds of Men and Women should all agree together at the same time in the same mad Project, viz. to throw away their Lives for no other Purpose but only to cheat and abuse the World; and that no one of them should be induced, by all the Hopes and Fears that were set before them, to confess and discover the mad Conspiracy. When they began to report the Story, they could not but foresee the Consequence of it, viz. that they must either recant it, and thereby proclaim themselves Impostors to the World, or else lay down their Lives for it. So that had they known it to be false, it would have been a Prodigy of Impudence in them, and Folly together, not only without Hope of Benefit, but within Prospect of a certain Ruin, to have divulged a known Lye to the World, and under the severest Persecutions to have persisted in it without the least Regret of Conscience, or Concernment for their own Ease and Safety. There never was the like Instance among Men, and I dare say, there never will be, so long as Men love themselves, and continue in their Wits; and to imagine that of the Witnesses of our Saviour's Resurrection, of which there is no parallel Example among Mankind, is an Argument that we have much more Inclination than Reason to be Infidels. This therefore is plain, that the Witnesses of Christ's Resurrection gave as great a Pledge of the Truth of their Testimony, as it was possible for mortal Men to do; and if those Men may not be believed, who attest a Thing upon certain Knowledge, and seal it with their Blood, there is no Credit can be given to any human Testimony; because a Man's Life is the greatest Security that he can possibly give for his Honesty.

Resur-

VI. Another Circumstance requisite to render a Testimony highly credible, is, that the Witnesses do give some certain Sign and Token, that what they testify is true; and this the Eye-witnesses of our Saviour's Resurrection did: For in token that what they said was true, they themselves wrought sundry Miracles in his Name; for so we read of the Apostles, that they went forth and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the Word with Signs following, Mark xvi. 20. and that with great Power, i. e. miraculous Works, the Apostles gave Witness of the Resurrection of the Lord Jesus, Acts iv. 33. and also at Iconium the Lord gave Testimony to the Word of his Grace, and granted Signs and Wonders to be done by their Hands, Acts xiv. 3. And the same was done by St. Stephen at Jerusalem, Acts vi. 8. and by St. Philip at Samaria, Acts viii. 6, 7. and by St. Paul at Ephesus, Acts xix. 11. And St. Paul assures us, That from Jerusalem, and round about unto Illyricum, the Gospel had been preached by him, with mighty Signs and Wonders, and by the Power of the Holy Ghost, Rom. xv. 19. all which Things being recorded in an Age, wherein, if they had been false, they might easily have been disproved, it had been the wildest Project in the World for the Apostles to have pretended to them, had they not been notoriously true; for they must needs think, that all the World being prejudiced against them, would be sure to keep a very strict and watchful Eye on them; and that if upon the severest Inquiry, they were at any time taken tripping in this their Pretence of working Miracles, their Fraud would soon ring through all the World, which must unavoidably prejudice their Cause a thousand times more than all the Miracles they pretended to, could advance it; and for Men that had the Eyes of all the World upon them, falsely to pretend to work such innumerable Miracles as they did, and this not in Corners, but in publick View, and to name the Places where they wrought them, and where they knew there were Thousands that could and would certainly detect and disprove them, would have been the most prodigious Instance of Impudence and Folly together that ever was acted by Men in their Wits. But so notoriously true was the Matter of Fact, that their most inveterate Enemies amongst both Jews and Gentiles, have not the Confidence to deny it, although indeed they attribute it, even as the Jews did our Saviour's Miracles, to the Power of Magick; for so in their Talmud, Traſtat. de Idol. c. 1. the Jews celebrate St. James the Apostle as eminent for the Gift of Miracles, by whom the Nephew of Rab. Samuel being bit of a Serpent, would not be cured, because every Disciple of Jesus was wont to heal in his Name. And Lib. Sabbath. Jerofol. they tell us of a Son of Rab. Jose, who having swallowed Poyson, was cured by a Christian in the Name of Jesus. And as for the Heathen Julian himself, he confesses that St. Paul did very wonderful Things; for he says, that he was the greatest and most expert Magician that ever was, vid. Cyril. Alex. lib. 3. and the same he pronounces of St. Peter also, ib. lib. 9. So also Celsus frequently charges the Christians with doing their mighty Works by the Power of some Dæmon, adding a Fiction of his own, viz. That they had received from Christ certain magical Books, by which they were instructed to perform all their Miracles, vid. Origen. cont. Cels. p. 302. and several other Places; which is a plain Confession, that such Miracles were commonly performed by Christians: But that they did not perform them by any Confederacy with evil Spirits, as these bad Men affirm, is evident, because one of their greatest and most common Miracles was dispossessing these evil Spirits of Mens Bodies, and their own Temples and Oracles: For the Truth of which, they often provoke their Adversaries in their Writings and Apologies, to come and make Experiment of it. Thus St. Cyprian in his Epistle to Demetrian, Proconsul of Africa, O that thou wouldst but hear and see, when the Devils, whom thou worshipping, are adjured and tortured by us, and with the spiritual Rods and Torments of our Words are ejected out of the Bodies they possess, when howling and roaring in a human Voice they confess the Judgment to come: Do but come and see, whether these Things we say are not true. And a little after, If thou wilt come, saith he, thou shalt see those whom thou worshippest for Gods, stand bound and tremble as miserable Captives under our Hands. Others of them appeal to the Consciences of the Heathens themselves, who had been Spectators of their miraculous Victories over these Infernal Spirits. So Minutius Fælix, All these Things are very well known to a great many of yourselves, that your Gods are forced by us to confess themselves Devils, when, by the Torment of our Words, and by the Fire of our Prayers, they are chased out of human Bodies; even Saturn and Serapis, and Jupiter, and the greatest of those Gods you worship, being overcome, with Sorrow are forced to acknowledge what they are; and though it be to their Shame, especially when you are present, yet they dare not lye, but being adjured by the true and only God, they quake and tremble in the Bodies they possess, and either leap out immediately, or vanish by degrees. Others of them offer to make the Experiment, even before the Tribunals of the Heathen, and to answer for the Success with their own Lives. So Tertullian in his Apologetick, Let any Man that is apparently acted by one of your Gods, be brought before your own Tribunals; and if that supposed God being commanded by any Christian to speak, doth not confess himself to be a Devil, as not daring to lye to a Christian, take that malapert Christian and pour out his Blood immediately. Yea, how often, saith he, a little after, only upon our touch of and breathing upon possessed Persons, are these Gods you adore, forced to depart out of their Bodies with Grief and Reluctancy, you yourselves being present, and blushing at it. And these Things, as Origen tells us, Cont. Celsi. lib. 7. were ordinarily performed even by the meanest Christians, which is a plain Argument that it was done merely by the Power of Jesus, without any Conjuration or magical Art. And can we imagine that the Devil, without any Constraint from some superiour Power, would ever have quitted that Tyranny he had so long exercised over the Bodies and Consciences of Men, who had hitherto adored and worshipped him; or that he would ever have confessed himself to be a Devil to those Men who sought the Ruin of his Kingdom, and made use of his Confessions to that purpose, had he not been forced to it by the Authority of the Father of Spirits? Is it likely, he would have exerted his Power to the Ruin of his own Interest, and the Amendment of those Souls he had inslaved and captivated, as he must necessarily have done, should he have impowered the Witnesses of our Saviour's Resurrection, to confirm their Testimony by Miracles? And since they all along declared they did them in the Name and by the Power of Jesus, to be sure if it had not been so, the God of Truth would never have impowered them to impose such a Cheat upon the World. These Miracles of theirs therefore were plain Signs and Tokens of the Truth of what they did attest, viz. that Jesus was risen from the Dead; and that not only as they were so many Divine Seals, by which God himself did confirm their Testimony, whose Goodness and Veracity could never have permitted him to set the Seal of his miraculous Power to a Lye: But besides this, the Apostles Miracles were so many plain Demonstrations that Jesus was risen, and alive, since they did them all in his Name, and by his Power: For how is it possible, that Jesus could have impowered them to do Miracles, had he been still among the Dead, and in a State of Inactivity? A dead Man can do nothing himself, much less can he impower others to do Miracles. So that by those miraculous Works which the Apostles did by the Power of Christ, they did in effect thus bespeak the World; Look here, O incredulous World, if nothing else will persuade you that our Lord is risen, and alive, behold the vital Operations which he exerts in us his Disciples, tho' of ourselves we are as impotent as you, yet no sooner do we invoke our great Master's Name, and implore his Aid, but we are presently enabled to perform mighty Things beyond the Power of any mortal Agent; without any other Charm but his powerful Name, we raise the Dead, bind the Devils, restore the Blind, recover the Lame, and cure all manner of Diseases; and is not this as plain a Token of his being alive, as if he were now standing before you in our room, and doing all these Things in his own Person? If he were dead still, he could not act in us, as you see him do; and therefore if nothing else will convince ye that he is alive again, behold these mighty Powers which he exerts in us; and be at length persuaded by these sensible Tokens of his Activity, which we produce before your Eyes, that he is risen from the dead: For it is worth observing, that this Gift of Miracles was never so plentifully communicated to the Apostles as after Christ's Ascension into Heaven; for before he ascended, he commanded them to tarry at Jerusalem, till they had received the Gift of the Holy Ghost; or, which is the same Thing, the Gift of Miracles, Acts i. 4, 5. and this Gift, as he himself tells them, ver. 8. was to enable them to bear Testimony to him unto all the World; for he being now ascended into Heaven, they could no longer produce his Person to convince Unbelievers of the Truth of his Resurrection; and therefore to supply this Defect, Christ gave them the Gift of Miracles, that that might be instead of his bodily Presence a plain and sensible Token of his being restored to Life again. And indeed this was as certain a Sign of it, as if he had continued upon Earth, and openly conversed among Men in the View of the World; for the most certain Sign of Life is Action, and by what hath been said, it is apparent, that Christ did not more visibly act in his own Person, when he was upon Earth, than he did in the Persons of his Apostles after he ascended into Heaven. These miraculous Operations therefore, which they perform'd by the Power of Jesus, were all of them so many plain and sensible Signs and Tokens of the Truth of what they did attest, viz. That Jesus was risen from the Dead. So that considering all these Circumstances of the Apostles Testimony, I dare boldly affirm, that from the Beginning of the World to this Day, there never was any Matter of Fact more sufficiently and credibly testified than this of the Resurrection of our Saviour; and by raising him from the Dead, God hath bore Witness to him before all the World; that he really is what he pretended to be, the true Messiah and only Mediator between himself and us.

Which brings me to the Second Head I propos'd, to shew what an excellent convincing Argument this is of the Truth of our Saviour's Doctrine and Mediation, and how effectually it justifies his Pretence of being the true Messiah and only Mediator. 'Tis true, all the Miracles which our Saviour wrought while he was upon Earth, were plain Demonstrations of his being sent from God; and therefore to these, as I shewed before, he frequently appeals in his excellent Disputations with the unbelieving Jews; and when John Baptist sent to inquire of him whether he were the Messiah or no; he returns no other Answer but this, Go and shew John those Things which ye see and hear, that the Blind receive their Sight, and the Lame walk, the Lepers are cleansed, and the Deaf hear, and the Dead are raised up, and the Poor have the Gospel preached unto them, Matth. xi. 4, 5. But his own Resurrection being the greatest Miracle that he ever performed, to this both himself and his Apostles did most commonly appeal; inasmuch that St. Paul, 1 Cor. xv. 14. says, That if Christ be not risen, then is our Preaching vain, and our Faith vain; because this being the grand Miracle upon which Christ staked the Credit of his whole Doctrine; if this had failed, there had been no Reason to give any Credit to any thing that he taught. The Resurrection of Christ therefore is a certain Evidence of the Truth of his Doctrine; only as it was the greatest of his miraculous Works, it proved his Doctrine no otherwise than his other Miracles did; but it was the highest Proof of it, as it was the greatest of his Miracles, Wherefore to shew what an excellent Proof of his Doctrine his Resurrection was, I shall endeavour to shew that Miracles in general, and particularly this of Christ's Resurrection, are the best Evidences of a Divine Revelation, that the Nature of the Thing will bear, and this I shall do, by shewing,

First, That this is the most proper and convenient Evidence.

Secondly, That it is the most certain and infallible.

Thirdly, That it is the plainest and most popular.

Fourthly, That it is the shortest and most compendious.

I. First, That this Evidence of Miracles is the most proper and convenient to prove the Truth of any Pretence to Revelation: For as for the intrinsic Arguments drawn from the Nature and Quality of the Revelation, they may prove it indeed to be wise, and good, and holy, but how they should prove it to be immediately revealed from God, I cannot apprehend: For as for the moral Writings of the Heathen Philosophers, they were most of them very good, and wise, and holy; but yet it doth not hence follow, that the Authors of them were immediately inspired when they wrote them; notwithstanding their Goodness, they might be, and doubtless were, the Dictates of their own natural Reason, and so may any other Doctrine how good soever it be; and though the Authors of such Writings may pretend to be inspired, yet that is no Argument that they are. For all that I know, they may pretend to it, to give Credit to their Doctrine, or they may think themselves inspired when they are not; so that they have no other way to convince me that what they pretend is true, but only by giving me some certain Sign and Token, that they are really inspired from above; and no Sign can reasonably convince me of this, but such a one as I have reason to believe God alone did enable them to give me: for so long as I have just reason to suspect that the Sign which they give me was produced either by their own Power, or by the Power of some other Agent besides God; it is no Sign at all to me of their being inspired by God. Miracles, therefore, being the only Signs we can reasonably believe are produced by the immediate Power of God, 'tis they alone can indicate a Man's being immediately inspired by God. For how can I be assured, that what a Man saith is immediately revealed to him by God, unless God himself give me some Sign or Token, that he is so? And how can I know that this or that is a Sign or Token from God, unless it be something so extraordinary and miraculous, as that all Things considered, I may reasonably conclude 'twas God alone that produced it? I confess, indeed, a Miracle singly is not sufficient to demonstrate any Doctrine to be of Divine Revelation; for unless the Doctrine itself be good, at least unless it hath no apparent Evil in it, there is no Miracle whatsoever can prove it to be Divine. For there is no Argument in the World can persuade a reasonable Man to believe God against himself; but to believe a bad Doctrine to be the Will of God, because it is confirmed by Miracle, is to believe God's Power against his Goodness; and it is not more certain that God doth will what he confirms by Miracles, than that he doth not, cannot will Iniquity; nay, of the two, I should rather believe a good Doctrine to be from God, barely because it is good, than that a bad Doctrine is so, because it is confirmed by Miracles; it being more possible for a wicked Impostor to work a Miracle, than for a holy God to will Sin. But yet the Goodness of a Doctrine singly considered, and without the Confirmation of Miracles, is no certain Proof that 'tis of Divine Revelation. 'Tis true, those Things in any Doctrine which are morally good, and founded upon eternal Reasons, may be demonstrated true by moral Arguments, without any additional Confirmation by Miracles; but if the Doctrine contain in it any Proposition that is Matter of pure Revelation, and cannot be known without it, it is hardly possible to prove such a Doctrine true without producing some miraculous Sign of its Truth and Divinity. As for instance, how can a Man know that God hath appointed Jesus to be the Mediator between himself and us, which is Matter of pure Revelation wholly depending on the free-will of God, unless God himself gives us some miraculous Sign, by which we may know, that it is his Will and Appointment? And therefore we find, that there is no Revelation or Pretence of Revelation, but what lays claim to this Way of Confirmation. Thus the Mosaic Religion was confirmed by sundry great and stupendous Miracles, and even the false Religion of the Heathen pretended to this way of Confirmation also; for generally they established their superstitious Rites by magical Tricks and Incantations, they conjured their Dæmons into their consecrated Images, and made the lifeless Stocks to move and speak, they pretended to effect extraordinary Cures by the Invocation, of their Idols, they often raised the Devils they adored by their Charms and Inchantments, and made them appear in strange visible Shapes, to their superstitious Votaries, and by these and such like miraculous Pretences, they introduced all their idolatrous Ceremonies; which is a plain Evidence, that they thought Miracles to be the most proper and natural Arguments of the Truth of any Revelation; and since the Thing is capable of no better way of Demonstration, it is an unreasonable thing not to be satisfied with this; for he who will not believe that a thing which may be is, without an impossible Proof of its Existence, is unreasonably resolved, right or wrong, not to believe it. So that this way of Christ's proving his Doctrine by his Miracles, and particularly by his Resurrection, being the best and most proper; if we will not believe it upon this Evidence, we are incurable Infidels, whom no Reason in the World can convince or persuade.

II. This Evidence of Miracles is the most certain and infallible Medium to prove the Truth of any Pretence to Revelation. For if God give a Man Power to do Miracles, in token that what he says is true, he thereby sets his own Seal to the Truth of it; and if we are satisfied, that the Miracle was wrought by the Power of God, and yet will not believe the Doctrine it seals, we do in effect give the Lye to God himself; for a real Miracle wrought to confirm a Doctrine, gives as great a Certainty of the Truth of that Doctrine, as we can have of the Truth of God, which is the Foundation of all the Certainty in the World; because if once it be granted that God may work a Miracle to attest a Lye, we can have no Security of his Truth; but for all that we know, every thing that he saith or doth may be an Imposture; and if so, for all we know, he may have deceived our Faculties too, and then there is nothing can be certain to us. The Miracles of Christ therefore, and especially this of his Resurrection, gives us as great Certainty of the Truth of his Doctrine, as we can have of any thing. For that he was raised by the Power of God, is evident, because he was really dead, his Heart was pierced, and the vital Bonds were broken, which render'd him utterly incapable to raise himself; and supposing that there be some Agent in Nature besides God, that was powerful enough to raise him, yet we are sure the Devil would not do it, because, as was shewn before, he must thereby do a thing infinitely contrary to his own Temper, and apparently destructive to his Interest and Kingdom; nor would any holy Angel have done it, without a special Command and Commission from God, which is the same thing as if God himself had done it immediately. So that 'tis plain, Christ's Resurrection must be effected either by the immediate Will, or by the immediate Power of God; and whether it was one way or t'other, 'twas a most certain Evidence of the Truth of his Doctrine; because it cannot be imagined, that the God of Truth would either way have raised him from the Dead, had he been an Impostor, since in so doing, he must have taken the most effectual Course to impose a Cheat upon Mankind. For whilst he was alive he promised to rise again the third Day, and gave this as the great Sign to the World, whereby they should know that he came from God; upon the hearing of which, all unprejudiced Minds (especially considering the Nature of his Doctrine) had abundant Reason to conclude thus with themselves, If this Man make good his Word, we can no longer doubt, but that he was sent from God; for to be sure, he cannot rise, unless God raise him, and it can never enter into our Thoughts, that the God of Truth will raise him, on purpose to delude and deceive us. When therefore he was actually risen, they could not, without being guilty of the most unreasonable Obstinacy, make any father Scruple of his Truth and Veracity.

There was about Six hundred Years ago, a certain Jew called El David, who gave out that he was Christ, and drew a great many Profelytes after him, upon which he was apprehended, and brought before an Arabian Prince, who asked him what Miracle he could do, to convince him that he was not an Impostor? To which he answer'd, Sir, Cut off my Head, and in a little Time you shall see me alive again: Which he said, to prevent some greater Torments which he feared would be inflicted on him for deluding the People. Whereupon the Prince Prince replied, A greater Sign than this thou canst not give; and therefore if after I have beheaded thee thou recoverest to Life again, both I and all my People, and all the World sure, will acknowledge thee to be a Messenger from God. And presently he commanded him to be beheaded, and there was an end of the Cheat. And so there would doubtless have been of the Christian Religion, if Jesus had not been raised from the Dead; for he said just as this El David did, Kill me, if you please, and when you have done so, you shall see I will live again; and upon this I stake all the Credit of my Doctrine. And therefore since it came to pass according to his Word, we have all the Reason in the World to resolve, with that Arabian Prince, to believe and acknowledge him to be sent from God: For, if there be a God that loves Sincerity and Truth, as we are sure there is; we are equally sure he will not conspire with an Impostor to cheat and delude the World; and yet this he must have done, had Jesus been a Deceiver, when he fulfilled this miraculous Sign of his Resurrection, upon which he suspended all the Credit of his Doctrine. So that now we have the same Certainty of the Truth of our Faith, as we have of the Truth of our Knowledge; for the Truth of our Knowledge supposes, that there is a God, whose Goodness will not suffer us to be deceived in those Things which we clearly apprehend; and the Truth of our Faith supposes, that there is a God whose Goodness will not suffer him to deceive us in such Things as he hath given us sufficient Reason to believe: For he who gives me a sufficient Reason to induce me to believe a false Proposition, is guilty of seducing me into a false Belief; and therefore, since God, in raising Christ from the Dead, hath given us a sufficient Argument to induce us to believe that he sent him, it necessarily follows, either that he did send him, or that he is guilty of deceiving and abusing us.

III. This Evidence of Miracles is the plainest and most popular to confirm a Revelation. If the Principles of revealed Religion were to be proved by natural Reason and Philosophy, the Arguments of it would be too thin and subtile for vulgar Capacities, and Men would never be fit to be catechized into their Religion, till they had been train'd up in the Schools, and there instructed in the Intrigues of Logick and Discourse; for the generality of Men are capable of no other Notices of Things but what are immediately impress'd upon them by the Objects of Sense; nor have they Skill enough so exactly to compare simple Terms, as to connect them into true Propositions, and from these to deduce their true and natural Consequences. These are Things that require far more Leisure and Skill than Mens Education and Affairs will ordinarily afford them: So that had there not been some plainer and easier Way found out, to prove the Truth of Christianity than this, it had been a Religion fit only for the Schools of Philosophers; and the Vulgar, who are not capable of close and strict Discourse, and have neither Time nor Skill enough to trace the Footsteps of Truth through all the Intricacies of Reasoning and Discourse, must have been damned to eternal Infidelity. And this, without doubt, was one main Reason why the moral Philosophy of the Heathen had so little Influence upon the People; because the Arguments by which its Principles were proved and demonstrated, were too fine and subtile for vulgar Apprehensions; insomuch that there were but few, in comparison, that could comprehend the Strength and Force of them; And in all probability, as little Effect would Christianity have found in the World, had it not been proved and demonstrated by such Evidence as is adapted to all Capacities; as for instance, the Immortality of the Soul is one great Principle of the Christian Religion; but now, had we no other way of proving this Principle than by Philosophical Arguments, how impossible would it have been to convince the Vulgar of the Truth of it? For, first we must have proved that the Soul is immaterial, by shewing that its Operations, such as Free-will and Reflection, are incompetent with Matter; from hence we must have inferr'd, that it is immortal, by shewing that what is immaterial hath no quantitative Extension, and consequently is incapable of Division and Corruption. Now, I beseech you, what Jargon, what unintelligible Glibberish would this appear to vulgar Understandings? What an insignificant Noise would such fine Speculations make in the Ears of an honest Plowman? But now the miraculous Resurrection of our Saviour is so plain and intelligible a Proof of it, that every Man may apprehend the Force of it, that hath the free Use of his own Faculties: For it is but arguing thus, and the thing is clearly prov'd; Christ told the World, whilst he was alive, that the Soul is immortal, and that there are everlasting Habitations of Weal or Woe prepared for her in another World; and in token that what he said was true, he promised that the third Day after his Death he would rise again, which he could never have verified, had not God given him power to do it; and to be sure God would never have given him this Power, had not his Saying been true: Wherefore, since God did impower him to rise again, it is plain that he thereby approved the Truth of his Saying, and justified his Doctrine to the World. This is such a plain and intelligible way of arguing, that the shallowest Minds may easily apprehend the Force of it; wherefore, since God designed Christianity to be a Religion as well for the Vulgar, as for the more refined and elevated Understandings, it was highly reasonable that the way of proving its Principles should be plain and intelligible to all Capacities of Men.

IV. And lastly, This Evidence of Miracles is the most short and compendious way of proving the Truth of Revelation. One Reason why the moral Philosophy of the Heathen had so little Influence on the Vulgar, was, because their Way of proving the Principles of it was so long and tedious; for they were fain to prove them by Parcels; and when they had convinced their Auditors of the Truth of one Proposition, they proceeded to another; and so they were fain to prove them all singly and apart by distinct and different Arguments; which was so tedious a way, that the Vulgar had not Leisure enough to attend so great a Variety of Reasonings, nor yet Capacity enough to retain them: But he that works a real Miracle, in token that such a Doctrine is true, proves it all at once, and needs not trouble himself to demonstrate one Proposition after another: for by giving a miraculous Sign of the Truth of such a Doctrine, God doth openly approve every Proposition contained in it; because it cannot be supposed, that the God of Truth would approve any Doctrine in the Gross, if any Part or Proposition of it had been false, since in so doing he must necessarily have abused our Understandings, and wittingly betrayed us into a false Belief; which to affirm of God, is equally absurd and blasphemous. When therefore God raised our Saviour from the Dead, he did by that one Act openly avow the Truth of his whole Doctrine, and proclaim to all the World, that every Article in it is as true as Truth itself. So that now we need not trouble ourselves to hunt out for several Arguments to prove the several Articles of our Faith; for this one Argument serves instead of all, That God, by sundry Miracles, and particularly by raising Jesus from the Dead, hath given Testimony, that the Doctrine which he taught is a true Revelation of his Mind and Will to the World. And thus you see what a clear and excellent Evidence Christ's Miracles, and especially his Resurrection, is of the Truth of his Doctrine: No wonder therefore that the Apostle doth so much prefer it above all other Evidence, as we find he doth, 1 Cor. ii. 4. For, saith he, my Speech and my Teaching was not with the enticing Words of Man's Wisdom, but in Demonstration of Spirit and Power; that is, I did not go about to convince ye with Rhetorical Harangues, or sine Philosophical Reasonings, but I clearly demonstrated the Truth of what I preached by the Miracles, which, through the Power of the Divine Spirit, I wrought amongst you. So that whether we consider the Certainty of Christ's Miracles, but especially of his Resurrection, or the powerful Evidence which they give to his Doctrine, I doubt not but upon an impartial View of the Whole, it will appear, that we have all the Reason in the World firmly to assent to the Truth of Christianity; and consequently to this Article which comprehends it all, that Jesus Christ is the Mediator between God and Man.

NOTES.

PAGE 339. Line 15. (a) For thus Tertullian, Hunc (i.e. τὸ λόγον) Zeno determinat factitorem, qui cuncta in dispositione formaverit, eundemque & Fatum vocari, & Deum, & animum Jovis. Apologes. 36. Pam. i. e. This Word, Zeno declares to be the Maker of the World, who formed all Things in a due Temper, and is called Fate, and God, and the Soul of Jupiter. And the ancient Orpheus calls him the λόγον θεόν, and the ἀνατὸς ἀθάνατον, i.e. the divine Word, and immortal King, Clem. Strom. l. 5. p. 607. So also Numenius the Pythagorean, as he is quoted by St. Cyril, contra Jul. l. 8. calls the Father the first, and the Word the second God. So also Plotinus, Enn. 5. l. 5. c. 3. καὶ θεὸς αὐτὴν ἡ φύσις, (speaking of this Divine νῦς or λόγος) καὶ θεὸς δεύτερος, i.e. and this Nature is God, a second God. And as for the Jews, it is evident from the Septuagint, and Philo, and the Chaldee Paraphrase, that by the Word they meant a divine Person; for Ezek. i. 24. the Septuagint hath changed shaddai, the undoubted Name of the Omnipotent God, into λόγον, the Word; which to be sure they would not have done, had they not thought this Word a divine Person: And then as for Philo the Jew, who lived in the Age when this Gospel was written, he expressly calls this Word δεύτερος θεός, next to the Πατήρ τῶ πάντων, i.e. a second God next to the Father of all Things, Quaest. & Solut. And elsewhere he tells us, Ὁ λόγος ὁ θεὸς ὑπερῶν πάντων ἐστὶν ὁ κόσμος καὶ προσκύεται καὶ ὑποκύπτει τῷ θεῷ ὡς γινώσκῃ. The Word is superior to the whole World, and more ancient and general than any thing that is made, Leg. Allegor. lib. 2. And again, speaking of the World's being the Temple of God, Ἐ, ὁ, faith he, καὶ ἀρχιερεὺς ὁ πρωτόγονος αὐτῷ θεῷ λόγος, i.e. in which Temple the High-Priest is the first-born Divine Word of God, de Somn. And in his Book de Profug. he thus discourses of this Word, Ὁ δ' ὑπερῶν τέτων λόγος θεός, εἰς ὁμοίαν ἐκ ἑλθὼν ἰδίαν, αὐτὸ μὲν τὸ καὶ αὐθιγὸν ἰμμερὲς ὦν, ἀλλ' αὐτὸς οἰκὸν ὑπάρχων θεῷ, τῷ ἰοντῶν ἀπαρτισταὶν ὁ προσκύεται, ὁ ἰλυτάτω, μὲν δὲ ὄντος μισθὸν ἀλατρίματος, ὁ μὲν ὅτι ἐστὶν ἀψάδδως ἀφιδουρόμενος, i.e. This divine Word is superior to all Things, it hath no visible Species by which it may be likened to any sensible Thing, but is itself the Image of God, the most ancient of all Intelligibles, and next to the most High, between whom and him there is no Medium. A great many other Instances I could give out of this ancient Writer, but these are sufficient to prove what I intend, viz. That by the Word, he meant a divine Person. And then for the Chaldee Paraphrase, which is one of the most ancient Monuments we have of Jewish Learning, there is nothing more frequent in it than to signify by this Phrase the Word, a divine Person; for instead of Jehovah or God, in the Hebrew Text they commonly insert, the Word of Jehovah, to which Word they attribute personal Actions, by which it is evident, that they looked upon it as a divine Person; thus, for Instance, they attribute Speech to him, Gen. iii. 22. where instead of God said, they render it, the Word of God said; Exod. xx. 1. instead of the Lord said, they render it, the Word of the Lord said. Again they attribute Hearing to him, Deut. xxxiii. 7. where instead of the Lord heard, they insert, the Word of the Lord heard. And Gen. iii. 22. instead of the Lord said, behold the Man is become as one of us; the Jerusalem Targum runs thus, the Word of the Lord said, Behold Adam whom I created, is the only begotten in the World, even as I am the only begotten in the highest Heavens. And Exod. xix. 3. Instead of Moses went up unto God, in the Edit. Compluten. it is, Moses went up into the Presence of the Word of God. So also in Exod. xvii. 7. instead of I will establish my Covenant between me and thee, it is, I will establish my Covenant between my Word and thee. Again, Gen. xix. 24. the Paraphrase is, And the Word of Jehovah sent benign Showers upon Sodom and Gomorrha, to try them if they would yet repent of their evil Works; which when they saw, they concluded, doubtless our evil Works are not yet revealed before the Lord, wherefore there was sent down upon them a Shower of Fire and Brimstone from the Word of Jehovah in Heaven. So also on Gen. xxviii. 20, 21. Onkelos thus paraphraseth, If the Word of the Lord will be my helper, and lead me in the Way which I go, the Word of the Lord shall be my God. And on Gen. v. 24. the Jerusalem Targum expressly asserts, that Enoch was drawn up to Heaven by the Word of the Lord. And also on Gen. xxii. 14 the same Paraphrase affirms thus, that Abraham worshipped and called upon the Name of the Word of Jehovah, and said, thou art Jehovah, &c. And on Deut. xviii. 19. thus both Onkelos and Jonathan paraphrase, He that refuses to hearken to my Words, my Word shall take Vengeance upon him. And to name no more, on those Words of the Hebrew Text, Hos. xiv. 5. I will be as the Dew of Israel; Jonathan thus descants, I, by my Word, will receive their Prayers, and have Mercy on them. A great many other Instances I could give, but these I think are sufficient, to expose the great Immodesty of Crellius, who, in a set Discourse, will needs persuade the World, that by the Word, in the Chaldee Paraphrase is no where meant a Person, but merely the Speech or vocal Word of God: For how is it imaginable that by this Word they should mean no more than that, when they so commonly attribute to it personal Actions, such as speaking, hearing, seeing and desiring; drawing up Men to Heaven, raining down Fire and Brimstone from Heaven, and taking Vengeance upon Men? With what tolerable Propriety can these Things be attributed to a vocal Word? How can a Covenant be made between Man and the outward Speech or Declaration of God? What Nonsense would it be to worship and invoke the Name of God's vocal Word, and to say of it, thou art Jehovah? With what tolerable Sense can God's Declaration be called God, or God's only begotten in Heaven? Lastly, How can God be said to receive our Prayers, and to have Mercy upon us by any such outward Declaration? Since therefore it is evident, that by this Word they meant a Person, and since to this Person they ascribe not only the Name, but the Worship of God, it is plain, they believed him to be a divine Person; and that which is the Sense of this ancient Paraphrase in this Matter, was without doubt the Sense of the Jews, in the Age wherein it was written. And accordingly Chalcidius ad Timaeum, in that Book where he professes to explain the Doctrines of the holy Sect, i.e. the Jews, delivers this as their Sense of this divine Word, Et ratio Dei Deus est humanis rebus confusus qua causa est hominibus bene beatèque vivendi, si non concessum sibi munus à summo Deo negligant, i.e. This Logos, or Word of God, is God taking Care of humane Affairs, and is the Cause or Principle by which Men may live well and happily, if they do not neglect this Gift which the supreme God hath granted to them. And to the same Purpose Celsus, speaking the Sense of the Jews, expressly tells us, Εἶπε ὁ λόγος ἐστὶν ὑμῖν υἱὸς θεοῦ καὶ ὑμεῖς ἐκινῶμεθα, i.e. We agree with you, that the Word is the Son of God.

Page 339. Line 15. (b) Nay, and that by this Word, the Jews mean, not only a real and divine Person, but even that very Messias himself, of whom St. John here speaks, is evident, considering that they the Platonick Schools frequently style him; and so Plato himself, ὁ (i. e. κόσμος) ἔταξε λόγος ὁ πάντων δημιουργός, i. e. which World the Word, which of all Things is the most divine, framed and set in order; Epinom. and Philo call him, ἔργων Θεῷ, δι' ὃν κόσμος κατεσκευάσθη, the Instrument by whom God made the World; Phil. Lib. Chereb. So St. John affirms of his Word, That all Things were made by him, and without him was not any Thing made that was made, ῥ. 3. Again, as they affirm of their Word, that de is τὸ ἐν, i. e. if I may coin a Word, the Be-er; and that this Be-er, ἡ νεκρὸν, ἡδὲ ἡ ζῶν, ἡδὲ ἡ νῦν, νῦν δὲ καὶ ζῶν, καὶ ἐν ταύτῃ, i. e. is not a dead Be-er, that is, neither Life nor Mind; but that Mind and Life and Be-er are the same Thing, Plotin. Enn. 5. l. 1. c. 2. So St. John affirms of his Word, That in him was Life, ῥ. 4. As they affirm, that the Life or Being of their Word was Knowledge or Understanding, ἡδὲ ᾧ οὐκ ἔστος δυνάμει, ἡδὲ ἔστος ᾧ αὐτῷ, ἡ δὲ ῥήσις αἴθερ, i. e. neither is this Mind or Word in Potensia; neither is itself one thing, and its Knowledge another, but its Knowledge is itself, or its own Being, ibid. l. 3. c. 5. So St. John affirms of his Word, That his Life was the Light of Men, i. e. that it consisted of Knowledge, which is the Light of human Minds, ῥ. 4. As they affirm, that the φῶς τὸ νεκρὸν, i. e. intelligible Light proceeded ἐκ λόγου, from the Word, Phil. de Opif. mund. and that πᾶν φῶς ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ, i. e. that all Light is from this Word or Wisdom, Arist. apud Euseb. præp. p. 324. So St. John tells us of his Word, that he was the true Light which lighteth every Man that cometh into the World, ῥ. 9. In short, as they style their Word ὁ Θεός, i. e. the Son of God, Plot. Enn. 5. l. 8. c. 5. And again, πρῶτος Θεός, ὡς πρῶτον καλὸν, καὶ παρ' αὐτῷ γινώσκον κόρον, i. e. the Son or Child of God, the full beautiful Mind, even the Mind that is full of God; as also πρεσβύτερον ὡς ὁ ἦ ἔλατ ἀνέτειλε πατρὶς, i. e. the most ancient Son of the Father of the Universe, Phil. l. cui Tit. Deterius perfectiori semper infestum esse. And also πρῶτοκεν ὡς Θεός, i. e. the First-born Son of God, ib. lib. 1. de Agricult. So St. John styles his Word the only begotten Son of the Father, ῥ. 14. 18. Thus from first to last, St. John discourses of his Word, and in the same Phrase and Language gives the same Account of him as the Jewish and Gentile Divines did of theirs; so that he must be supposed either to mean the same thing by him, viz. a divine eternal Person, or to design to make the World believe he meant so; for he who speaks or writes must either equivocate and dissemble his Meaning, or mean according to the vulgar Acceptation of the Words or Phrases he speaks or writes: So that supposing St. John doth here sincerely express his own Meaning, no Man that understands the common Use and Acceptation of his Phrases, can reasonably understand them any otherwise than of a divine Person; and whether this were not his Meaning, at least in all Appearance, I appeal to a very indifferent Judge, viz. Amelius, a Pagan Philosopher, who very well understood the Language and Doctrine of the Gentile Schools, concerning the divine Logos or Word, so often mentioned in their Writings, and who casting his Eyes upon this Discourse of St. John doth with all Confidence pronounce this to be the Sense of them, ἔστος αἴθερ ὡς ὁ λόγος, καθ' ὃν αἰεὶ ὄντα, τὰ γινώσκοντα ἐγίνετο, ὡς ἂν καὶ ὁ Ἡρακλείτης αἰῶνας, καὶ ἡ Διὶ ἐν ὁ βρεβάρει αἰεὶ ἐν τῇ τ' ἀρχῇ τάξει τε καὶ αἰῶνα καθιστηκόω, πρὸς τὸ εἶναι εἶναι, καὶ εἶναι εἶναι δι' ὃ πᾶν ἀπλῶς γινώσκον, ἐν ᾧ τὸ γινώσκον ζῶν καὶ ἐν πεφικνίω, i. e. this was that Word who, according to Heraclitus, existed from Eternity, and made all Things, and whom, by Jupiter, the Barbarian places in the Order and Dignity of a Principal, declaring him to have been with God, and to be God, and that all Things were made by him, and that in him all Things that were had Life and Being. Vide Euseb. præp. Evan. 450.

Page 345. Line 15.] (d) For thus Porphyry, as St. Cyril quotes him, Ἄχρη τελὴν ὑποστάσεων τ' εἶναι προελθὼν ὡς αἰεὶ, εἶναι δὲ τὸ μὴ ἀνωτάτω Θεόν, τὸ ἀγαθόν, μετ' αὐτὸν δὲ καὶ δυνάμεν τὸ δημιουργόν, τελὴν δὲ καὶ τὸ πᾶν κόσμον ψυχῇ, ἄχρη δὲ ψυχῇ τ' εἰσότητι προελθὼν, i. e. the divine Essence extends itself to three Persons, whereof the highest God is the Good; after him the Second is the Maker of the World; and the third is the Soul of the World; for to this Soul the divine Essence extends itself. And of these three divine Persons Plotinus hath treated at large, whom he expressly calls, τρεῖς Ἀρχικαὶ διαιρέσεις, three Persons that are Principals, viz. the Good or the One, the Mind and the Soul; assuring us, that these Doctrines concerning this divine Trinity, μὴ καινὰς, μὴ ἰνὸν, ἀλλὰ παλαιὰ μὴ ἐργαστὰ μὴ ἀνακτιστὰ, τὰς δὲ νῦν λόγους ἐξηγητὰς ἐκείνων γεγονέναι μαρτυρίας πιστοτατάς τὰς δόξας ταύτας παλαιὰς εἶναι τοῖς αὐτοῖς τῷ Πλάτωνα γράμμασι ἥτις τὸ μὴ καὶ παρερρίδης πρῶτον τ' τοιαύτης δόξης, i. e. that they were not new, or of yesterday, but were anciently, though obscurely taught; and that what is now discoursed concerning them, is only a farther explication of them; but we have faithful Witnesses that these Doctrines were taught of old, and particularly in the Writings of Plato himself, before whom also Parmenides deliver'd them. And indeed Plato very frequently mentions these three divine Persons; particularly, Phileb. p. 30. Σοφία μὲν καὶ νῦν ἀνὸ ψυχῆς σὺν ἀντικεινῇ ἡσυχίᾳ. ὡς ἐν τῇ τῷ Διὶ ἐρεῖς φύσει βασιλικὴν μὲν ψυχῇ, βασιλικὴν δὲ νῦν ἐγγίγνεται, i. e. but Wisdom and Mind can never be or act without Soul, where in the Nature of God there is a kingly Soul, and kingly Mind. And indeed so ancient is this Doctrine of three divine Persons subsisting in the Godhead, that Proclus calls it, ἡ τ' ἐκείνων Θεῶν παράδοσις, the Tradition of the three Gods, in Timæ. Plat. p. 93. for so they sometimes call these three Persons three Gods, tho' as themselves elsewhere explain it, they are three only Subsistences in the same indivisible Essence. And the same Proclus calls this Doctrine of the Trinity Θεοπαράδοτος Θεολογία, which faith he, φησὶ συμπληρωτὴ τὸν κόσμον ἐκ τ' αὐτῶν τελῶν, i. e. the divinely inspired or deliver'd Theology, which teaches that this World was compleated by these three. By these and sundry other Testimonies that might be produced, it is evident, that the ancient Divines of the Gentiles acknowledged a Trinity of Persons in the Godhead, the last of which they called ψυχὴ, or Soul; for so the Chaldean Oracle quoted by the above-named Proclus, Μετὰ δὲ πατρικῆς διανοίας,

ψυχὴ ἐν ἡμῖν,

i. e. after the paternal Mind, which in our Language is God the Son, I Psyche or Soul dwell; and this Psyche, or, as our Scriptures phrase it, Holy Ghost, they style ψυχὴν θεοτάτην, the most divine Psyche, ἢ δὲ καὶ Θεὸν ὡς τις δικαίως ὁ δαίμονα ἦποι, i. e. whom we may truly say is God and not a Demon, Plotin. Enn. 3. l. 5. c. 2. and the same Author tells us of this Psyche, that it is λόγος τῷ καὶ ἡ ἐνεργεῖα τις, i. e. that it is the Word of the Mind or Son, as proceeding from him, and the energy or active Power by which he operates; all which exactly accords with the Catholick Doctrine concerning the Holy Ghost.

Page 345. Line 15.] (e) For so the above cited Philo, Ἦνικα ὁ Θεὸς δαρυφερόμενος διὰ δυοῖν τ' ἀνωτάτω δυνάμεων, ἀρχῇ τε αὐτῇ ἀγαθότητι, ὡς ἂν ὁ μέγας τελειὸς φαντασίας ἐνεργεῖται τῇ ἐργασίᾳ ψυχῇ, ὡς ἐκείνη μεμύρηται μὴ ὁδωδὸς, ἀπερὲς ἡσυχίας αὐτῇ, μεμύρηται δὲ τὰ ὅλα, i. e. when God accompanied with his two highest Powers, viz. Empire and Goodness, the Middle being one, he impressed three Phantasms on the sensitive or visive Soul, viz. of Abraham, each of which exceed all measure; for these his Powers are all immense, but themselves measure all Things, De Sacrif. Abel & Cain. Now, that that by these Powers, he means the second and third Person in the Tri-une Godhead is apparent, because he afterwards calls God and these his Powers, τὰς τρεῖς Μεasures, the three Measures, and tells us, ὅτι ὁ ἀρχαῖος αὐτῶν ὁ ὑπερέκκειται τοῖς δυνάμει αὐτῶν, ὃς καὶ αὐτῶν ἐξέρχεται, ὃς ὁ αὐτῶν ἐμφανισθῆναι, ἰ. e. that the supreme God is superior to these Powers of his, and is to be seen without them, and appears in them; which plainly shews, that by these two Powers he means some Things that are really distinct from that God whose Powers they were; and therefore since before he had told us that they were both immense, what else can he mean by them but those two divine Persons, the Son and the Spirit of God? To the same purpose he discourses, Lib. de Cherub. where after he had given some uncertain Guesses at the mystical Sense of those Cherubs that guarded Paradise, he thus concludes, ἄνθρωπος δὲ ποτὶ τὴν ἐκπαυσίαν λόγου πρὸς ψυχῆς ἡμῶν, εὐθὺς τὰ πάλαι διοληπτόν, ὃ καὶ ἂν οὐκ εἶδε μανθάνει, ὃν ἰὼν δυνάμει ἀπονημονεύσας ἰδῶν, ἰ. e. but I remember I have heard something more learned from my own Soul, which, being often seiz'd with a divine Enthusiasm, prophecies of Things which it understands not, which so far as I can remember, I will here deliver. By whi h solemn Preface he gives us notice, that some very great Mystery is to follow, and then he goes on, ἔλεγε δὲ μοι, καὶ τὸ ἴδιον οὕτως ὅτι ὁὖν δύο τὰς ἀρχαῖας εἶναι καὶ πρῶτας δυνάμεις ἀγαθότης καὶ ἰσχύς καὶ αγαθότης ἢ τὸ πᾶν γινώσκον, ἰ. e. My Soul said to me, with that only true God there are two supreme and first Powers, viz. Goodness and Power, and that by the first all Things were made, and by the second all Things that were made were governed. Since therefore, as I have shewn before, he frequently asserts, that all Things were made by the Son of God, it is evident, that by Goodness here he means the same Son; and if so, what else can he mean by Power but Psyche, or the Holy Ghost? And these three divine Persons he elsewhere styles, τὸ ἐν, διαποικίον, ἔλεον δυνάμει, ἰ. e. the Being, the Ruling, and the benefick Power, l. 2. de Agric. Noe. Thus far this learned Jew, whose Writings, being originally in the Greek Language, have been delivered down to us without any considerable Alterations; but it is not to be expected that those Writings of the ancient Jews, which are written and preserved in their own Language, should be so express in this Article of the Trinity as those of the Gentiles; because for several Ages they were solely in the Possession of the modern Jews, by whom this Article hath all along been obstinately rejected, and therefore may reasonably be supposed to be castrated by them in all those Places where they more openly countenanced the christian Verity against them; but yet after all, there are sundry Passages remaining in them, which do very much favour this Article: Thus Voisn. in Proem. Pug. fid. quotes this Passage from the Book Reschit Choemah, c. 3. Tres sunt Dii, ut explicatur in Zohar his verbis, Quis est sensus, inquit R. Jose, horum verborum. Deut. iv. 7. Cui sunt Dii propinqui, dicendum erat, cui est Deus propinquus; Sed est Deus superior; est Deus timoris Isaac, est Deus inferior, et ita dicuntur esse Dii propinqui, ἰ. e. there are three Gods, as it is explained in the Words of the Book Zohar, R. Jose said, what is the Meaning of those Words, Deut. iv. 7 to whom the Gods are near, whereas it should have been said, to whom God is near; but there is the superior God, there is the God of the Fear of Isaac and there is the inferior God, and so they are said to be Gods that are near. And Martin Raimund, Pug. fid. p. 396. quotes a Passage out of Mid. asch Tillim, in which there is mention made trium Proprietatum quibus creatus est mundus, ἰ. e. of three Proprieties or Persons by whom the World was made. And to the same Purpose Rissangelus, in his Notes upon the Book Jezerah, quotes two Passages out of Imre Binah, Tria sunt primaria et primordialia capita et coeterna, idque testatur splendor eorum numerationesque intellectuales in aeternam testantur Trinitatem Regis: There are three prime and primordial Heads and Co-eternal, and this their own Light testify s. and the intellectual Numerations do eternally testify the Trinity of the King, p. 3 et 36. So also Ainsworth on the first of Genesis quotes another Passage from R. Simeon Ben Jocai in Zoar to the same purpose, which is this, Come and see the Mystery of the Word Elohim, there are three Degrees, and every Degree by itself alone; and yet notwithstanding they are all one, and joined together in one, and are not divided one from another. But, to name no more, Grotius makes mention of some ancient Cabbalists, quoted in a Book called Additamenta ad Lexicon Hebraicum Schindleri, who distinguish God in Tria Lumina or quidem nonnullis iisdem quibus Christiani nominibus Patris, Filii sive verbi, et Spiritus sancti, ἰ. e. into three Lights, which some of them call by the same Names we Christians do, viz. Father, Son or Word, and Holy Ghost; and indeed, as their most ancient Writings do frequently make mention of the Word, under the Notion of a divine Person, as hath been shewed before; so they do also the Ruach Hakkodesh, or Holy Spirit, to whom their most ancient Writers attribute all Prophecy or Revelation; for so, as I find them quoted by learned Men in Pirche, R. Eliezer, c. 39. R. Phineas, inquit, requievit Spiritus Sanctus super Josephum ab ipsius juventute usque ad diem obitus ejus, ἰ. e. the Holy Spirit rested upon Joseph from his Youth, till the Day of his Death. And c. 33. R. Phineas ait, postquam omnes illi interfecti fuerant, viginti annis in Babel requievit Spiritus Sanctus super Ezekielem et eduxit eum in convalla Dora et ostendit ei multa ossa, ἰ. e. R. Phineas said, after they were all slain, the Holy Spirit rested twenty Years upon Ezekiel in Babylon, and led him forth into the Valley of Dora, and shewed him a great Number of Bones; and indeed it was a proverbial Speech of the Jewish Masters, as Maimonides tells us, Mofe Nev. Part 2. c. 35. Majestas divina habitat super eum et loquitur per Spiritum Sanctum, ἰ. e. the divine Majesty dwells upon such a one, and he speaks by the Holy Ghost; and that by this Holy Spirit they anciently meant a real Person, is evident, for so Jonathan's Paraphrase on Gen. i. 2. Spiritus misericordiarum qui est ab ante Dominum, stante super faciem aquarum, ἰ. e. the Spirit of Mercies who is from before the Lord, standing upon the Face of the Waters; and Berschit Rabba, speaking of the Spirit that moved upon the Face of the Water, Gen. i. 2. expressly affirms, Hic est Spiritus Regis Messie. this is the Spirit of Messias the King. So *Ead. Hal. c. 12. Tempore Regis Messie quando constabitur erit regnum ejus et omnis populus ad ipsum collectus, recensentur singuli ex ore Spiritus Sancti: In the Time of Messias the King, when his Kingdom shall be established, every one shall be called over by the mouth of the Holy Ghost: In which Places there are Things and Actions expressly attributed to the Holy Ghost, which are proper only to a Person; and since by him they understood a Person, they must necessarily suppose him a divine Person, since by what follows it evidently appears, that in their own Scriptures divine Perfections were ascribed to him; and by what hath been said, that they believed three divine Persons in the Godhead, and accordingly Eusebius tells us, ἰδοὺ οἱ πάντες Ἑβραῖοι θεολόγοι καὶ πάντες οἱ ἄλλοι πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐσθλῶς καὶ τρεῖς καὶ ἑνὶ δυνάμει ἄγιοι πνεῦμα προσηγορίας ἀποδοῦναι ὅθ' ἰ καὶ ἰσχυρίαν θεοφροσύνην, ἰ. e. all the Hebrew Divines do acknowledge after the most high God, and after his first-born Wisdom, a third holy Power, whom they call the Holy Ghost, affirming him to be God, by whom the Prophets were inspired, *Prap. Evan. p. 327.

OF THE
CHRISTIAN LIFE.

PART III.

To the RIGHT HONOURABLE

Sir G E O R G E T R E B Y,

Lord CHIEF JUSTICE of the COMMON-PLEAS.

My LORD,

THOSE excellent Treatises of Christian Life, which were published some Years since by the learned Author, have, I doubt not, in a great measure answered his Design in writing them, which was to do as much good as he could to the World; and had he lived to finish the other Parts of it, we might have had such a compleat Body of Christian Institutions in our own Language, as would have highly contributed towards a Revival of true Piety among us. For, besides those Pieces which have already seen the Light, 'twas the AUTHOR's Design to proceed to a particular Explication of the several respective Duties which Men are obliged to render to God, their Neighbours, and Themselves; and for a Conclusion of all, he proposed a distinct Treatise of Ecclesiastical Duties.

The two Discourses of Justice and Mercy, which I now present to Your LORDSHIP, were intended as a Part of that Duty which we owe to one another, and which, with other Enlargements, had the AUTHOR liv'd, would have made a Volume of themselves. And the Discourse of Mortification is likewise a Part of what he designed for the Explication of that Duty which Man owes himself, which was also intended for another distinct Volume. Besides these he proposed a particular Examination of those great Duties which God requires; which together with the other Volumes would have compleated the whole Design. In Justice therefore to the Memory of this incomparable Person, I thought myself obliged to communicate to Your LORDSHIP this short Account of him. The Design which he proposed was great and noble, and I am sure those Pieces which he hath already published, do loudly speak the excellent Qualifications with which God had endowed him to conquer it; had not a laborious Station, and, what was worse, a very sickly Constitution at last interrupted him from the Prosecution of it.

As for these Remains, they are faithfully transcribed from the Author's Manuscript; and Your LORDSHIP may easily discern that they are his true and genuine Offspring by Your Perusal of them. I know Your LORDSHIP hath a very high Value and just Esteem for the Memory of that great and good Man, and that is a prevailing Inducement to take into Your Protection those Works which he hath left behind him. To You they address themselves, and I doubt not but under that Character which Your LORDSHIP bears, they will be sufficiently recommended to the World; and that they may effectually promote the Good of it, is the hearty Prayer of most Obedient

Your Lordship's

Humble Servant,

J. GALE.

OF THE
CHRISTIAN LIFE.

PART III.

CHAP. I.

Of Justice, as it preserves the natural Rights of Men; and particularly in Reference to their Bodies.

HAVING in a former Discourse asserted and explain'd the Nature of moral Good and Evil in human Actions; I shall now distinctly consider the Sum of all that moral Duty, which we owe to God and to our Neighbour; as the Prophet hath compriz'd it in these Words, He hath shewed thee, O Man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, to love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God? Micah vi. 8. I begin with that Duty which God requires of us towards our Neighbour; and 'tis all imply'd in the two distinct Virtues of Justice and Mercy.

In discoursing of Justice, I shall endeavour these two Things: 1. To shew what that Justice is which is requir'd of us towards our Neighbour. 2. To prove that it is grounded upon such immutable Reasons as do render it a moral Good.

I. I shall endeavour to shew, what that Justice is which is owing to our Neighbour. In general, therefore, Justice consists in giving to every one his due; in which Latitude it comprehends all Matter of Duty: For every Duty is a Due to God, or our Neighbour, or our Selves, and accordingly every Performance of every Duty is a Payment of some due; and, as such, is an Act of Righteousness. And therefore in Scripture good Men are frequently styled Righteous, and the whole of Virtue and Goodness is called Righteousness, because it is a Payment of some due, either to God, our Selves, or our Neighbours. But Justice being here considered as a distinct and particular Virtue, must be understood in a more limited Sense; viz. for Honesty in all our Dealings with Men, or giving to every Man his due with whom we have any Intercourse. And wherein this consists, will best appear by considering what those Things are which are due from one Man to another, or what those Dues and Rights are which Men may claim by the eternal Laws of Righteousness. And these are twofold, 1. Natural, and 2. Acquired.

I begin with the First, viz. The natural Rights of Men, which are such as appertain to Men, as they are reasonable Creatures, and dwelling in mortal Bodies, and joined to one another by their natural Relations, and by Society. For in all these Capacities there accrue to Men certain natural Rights which we are obliged in Justice not to violate, but so far as we can to secure and make good to one another.

First, Therefore, we will consider Men as dwelling in mortal Bodies.

Secondly, As rational Creatures.

Thirdly, As joined to one another by natural Relations.

Fourthly, As naturally united in Society; and I will shew what Rights there are redounding to them from all these Respects and Considerations.

I. We will consider Men as dwelling in mortal Bodies, in which there is a twofold Right accruing to them: 1. a Right to their Bodies: 2. a Right to their bodily Subsistence.

I. As dwelling in mortal Bodies, they have a natural Right to their Bodies, and to all the Parts of them; for their Bodies being the Tenement which the great Landlord of the World hath allotted to their Souls during their abode in this terrestrial State, are upon that Account their undoubted Right; which unless they forfeit, they cannot be deprived of without manifest Injury and Injustice. For if God gave this Body to my Soul, it is certain that immediately under him my Soul hath a Right to it, and holding in Capite as it doth from the supreme Proprietor, is Tenant at Will to none but him, for this its earthly Habitation: So that antecedently to all human Laws and Constitutions, every Soul is vested with a natural Right to its own Body; as being placed in, and put in Possession of it by the God of Nature; and, till by its own free Act it hath alienated or forfeited its Right, there is none but God, (who hath reserved to himself the sovereign and absolute Disposal of it) can justly either dispossess a Soul of its Body, or of any Part or Member of it; or offer any Violence to the Body, or put it any farther out of its Soul's Disposal, than God himself hath done by placing it under the outward Restraints of Government. So that for any one either to kill or dismember a Body, whose Soul hath not forfeited its Right to it; to enslave or imprison a Body, whose Soul hath neither alienated nor forfeited its Right to dispose of it, is a Piece of high and crying Injustice. In short, God hath placed the immortal Soul of Man in the Tenement of a mortal Body, in which it hath thereupon the Right of a Tenant at Will, that holds at the Pleasure of his Landlord; by whom it is impowered to enjoy it for its own Habitation, to defend it against outward Violence, and dispose of it for its own Needs and Conveniences. So that unless he be impowered by God, there is no Man can rightfully destroy or dismember, or without his Consent, enslave or imprison another Man's Body; unless it be in Defence of his own Life, Livelihood, or Liberty, which every Man hath a natural Right to defend. But then, since for the common Good and Defence of all, God hath placed his reserved Authority over our Bodies in the Hands of human Government, it is no Violation of the Right of our Souls, for the Government under which we are placed, to destroy or dismember, enslave or imprison our Bodies, whenever by offending others, we render it necessary for the Defence and Good of All. And since the Government hath, so far as the Common-Weal requires, God's own Authority over our Bodies in its Hands; it is no more injurious to our Souls, for That to dispose of our Lives and Members, Livelihoods and Liberties, for the common Security and Good, than if God himself should do it immediately; since the Government doth it by his Right and Authority, which is paramount to all the natural Rights of our Souls. But for any others, either to take away the Life, or Members of another's Body, except it be necessary for their own Defence; or to enslave, or imprison another's Body, except it be upon free Consent, or just Forfeiture, is an outrageous Invasion of the natural Rights of human Souls.

II. As Men dwell in mortal Bodies, they have also a Right to their bodily Subsistence. For, for God to give them a Tenant's Right in their mortal Bodies would be very insignificant, unless we suppose he hath therewith given them some Right to those outward Goods, that are necessary to their Maintenance and Subsistence: For God being the supreme Proprietor of this lower World, as well as of those Tenements of Flesh we live in; it must needs be supposed, that, as by placing our Soul in this Body, he hath given her a Right to it; so by placing our Body in this World, he hath given it a Right to such a Portion of this World's Goods, as are necessary to its Repair and Maintenance. And though in the unequal Division of the World, that now is, he hath given to some a larger Share of it than to others; yet it is not to be supposed he hath so appropriated All to some, as to leave nothing for all the rest. For as all Men are equal in their natural Faculties and Indowments, so according to original Constitution they were also equal in their outward Properties and Possessions; and all Things being promiscuously exposed to the Use and Injoyment of All, every one from the common Stock assumed as his own Right what he needed. And as for the Inequality and private Interests that are now among us, they were By-blows of our Fall; for it was Sin that introduced our Degrees and Distances, that devised the Names of Rich and Poor, begot Ingrossings and Inclosures of Things, and forged those two pestilent Words Meum and Tuum, which have since ingendred so much Strife and Mischief in the World. And though God hath made these Inclosures Rights by his long and continued Permission of them, yet he hath not thereby parted with his own Right to them: He by an immutable Right is still paramount of all his Creation, and every thing in it unalienably belongeth to him. And as for those inclosed Properties, with which he hath vested us in such unequal Proportions, he hath committed them to us as Stewards, and not transferred them upon us as Masters; and so without any Injury to us, may appropriate what Part of them he pleaseth to what Use he pleaseth; which when he hath done, we cannot without manifest Injustice otherwise dispose of that appropriate Part, than to the Use and Service for which he hath appointed it. Now out of every Man's Estate and Property he hath actually reserved some appropriate Portion to be disposed of to the Poor and Needy, who have nothing else to subsist by; and in this Part of our Estates the Poor have the same Right from God, that we have in all the other Parts of it. So that this World being now cantoned out so very unequally among Men, yet according to God's Allotment every Man hath Right to such a Share of it, as is at least sufficient to keep him from being starved, or pinched with Extremity of Need; and in this Method God hath assigned to every Man a Child's Portion, which in some fair Way or other ought to be obtained, viz. either by legal Right, or by humble Request; which latter, in Conscience, ought to take effect, as well as the former. For now according to this latter Constitution he hath appointed the Rich to be his Stewards and Treasurers for the Poor; with a strict Charge that they dispense to every one his Meat in due Season. The Honour of distributing is conferred on the former, as a Trial of their Fidelity and Bounty; the Right of receiving is conferred on the latter, as a Trial of their Patience and Gratitude: And thus God hath wisely projected, that all his Children should be both effectually, and quietly provided for; that one Man's Abundance should supply another's Wants, that so there might be an Equality, as St. Paul expresses it, 2 Cor. viii. 14. For since no Man can enjoy more than he needeth, and every Man ought to have so much as he needeth, there could be no great Inequality among Men, if Things were administred according to the Institution of God. But if out of our Abundance we refuse to relieve the poor Man's Necessities, we are unjust both to God and him; to God, because we misapply his Goods, and cross his Orders; to him, because we wrongfully usurp and detain from him the Portion which God hath allowed him; and so under a Vizard of Right, and Possession, we are no better than Robbers in the Account of God; when by refusing to relieve our Brother's Necessities we spoil him of his Goods; his Goods I say, by the very same Title that any Thing is ours, even by the free Donation of God. 'Tis the hungry Man's Bread which we hoard up in our Barns, his Meat that we glut, and his Drink that we guzzle; 'tis the naked Man's Apparel that we shut up in our Presses, and do so exorbitantly ruffle and flaunt in, and what we deny out of our Abundance to an Object of real Pity, and Charity, is in the Account of God an unjust Usurpation of his Right. For by the Institution of God, I owe every Man this Right; not to see him pine, and perish for Want, whilst I surfeit, and swim in Plenty. And thus you see what Rights appertain to a Man in his first Capacity, viz. as inhabiting a Mortal Body.
that

CHAP. II.

Of Justice in preserving the Rights of Men, consider'd as Rational Creatures.

II. I Proceed in the Second Place to observe, That there are other Rights accruing to Men, as they are Rational Creatures; for it is this, indeed that gives a Right to common Justice to be governed by Laws, and by Rewards and Punishments, that we are free and rational Agents who can chuse or refuse, and determine our selves which way soever we think fit or reasonable. For without Reason, and Free-will, we could no more be capable of Laws, nor subject to Rewards and Punishments than Stones or Trees are: For no Law can oblige a Being that hath no Power over his own Actions; nor can he deserve to be rewarded when he doth well, nor punished when he doth evil, if it be not in his Power to do otherwise; and therefore Beasts cannot be said to do either justly, or unjustly towards one another; because whatsoever Good, or Evil they do one another, they do it necessarily, and it was not in their Power to do otherwise. But because Men are free Agents, and have Power to determine themselves either to do Good or Evil to one another; therefore of Right they claim of each other the mutual Performance of such Goods, and Forbearance of such Evils as agree or disagree with the State and Condition of their Natures. And hence every rational Creature hath a Right to be used and treated by those of his own kind, agreeably to the State of his rational Nature; and for one Man to treat another otherwise, is not only hurtful, but also injurious. Now the Rights which one rational Creature may by the Condition of his Nature claim of another, may be reduced to these four Particulars;

First, Every Man has a Right to an equitable Treatment from every Man.

Secondly, Every Man hath a Right to judge for himself so far as he is capable.

Thirdly, Every Man hath Right not to be forced, or impelled to act contrary to the Judgment of right Reason.

Fourthly, Every Man hath a Right to be respected by every Man according to the Dignity of his Nature.

* I. Every Man hath a Right to an equitable Treatment from every Man; that is; to be treated according to the Measures of that Golden Rule of Equity prescribed by our Saviour, Matth. vii. 12. Therefore all Things whatsoever you would that Men should do unto you, do ye even so to them, for this is the Law and the Prophets, i. e. In all your Intercourses with Men, suppose you had exchanged Conditions with them, and that you were in theirs, and they in yours; and be sure you do them all that Good, which, upon a due Consideration of the Case, you could reasonably expect or desire of them, if you were in their Persons and Circumstances. And this Right of being treated by others, as they would expect to be treated by us, supposing they were in our Circumstances, arises from that Equality of Nature that is between us, which gives every one a Right to be equally treated by every one, and to claim all those good Offices from others, which they might reasonably claim of him, if they were in his State and Circumstances. For we being all propagated from the same Loins, and Partakers of the same Nature, every ry Man in the World is by Cognation of Blood, and Agreement of Nature, every Man's Brother and Kinsman. We are all but so many several Streams issuing from one common Source, but so many several Twigs sprouting from the same Stock; we are all of us but one Blood derived through several Channels; but one Substance multiplied, and dilated into several Times and Places, by the miraculous Efficacy of the divine Benediction. We are all fashioned according to the same original Idea, resembling God our common Father; we are all endowed with the same Faculties, Inclinations, and Affections; and do all conspire in the same essential Ingredients of our Nature: and there is nothing doth distinguish, or diversifie us, but what is Accidental to our Being; such as Age and Place, Figure and Stature, Colour and Garb; so that every Man is not only our most lively Image, but in a manner our very Substance, or another our self, under a small Variation of present Circumstances: which Circumstances are to be considered in every Application of the above-named Rule of Equality to our Actions. If I am superiour to another, either in my Place, or Relation, or in the Goods of my Mind, or Fortune; I am only obliged by this Rule, to do that by him which I might reasonably desire he should do by me, were he as much my Superiour, as I am his. But when all Men naturally as such are equal, and do stand upon even Terms and level Ground, there ought to be no other Inequality in their mutual Treatment of one another; but what is owing to the Inequality of their Circumstances: and he who doth that to another Man, which upon good Reason he would not have another do to him in the same Circumstances, doth unjustly usurp a Superiority over him, which neither Nature nor Providence allows of. For there is no Proposition in the Mathematicks more self-evident than this, Paria paribus conveniunt, equal Things agree to equal Persons; and therefore since we are all equal by Nature, whatsoever Things are due to me, must by the same Reason be due to another in the same Circumstances; and therefore he that denies to another Man that which he conceives he might justly claim of him in the same Condition, unjustly with-holds from him a right that is due to him, as he is his Equal in Nature.

II. Every Man hath a Right to judge for himself so far as he is capable: for we must either suppose that every Being hath a Right to use its own Faculties, or else that it hath its Faculties in vain: for to what purpose serve its Faculties, if it hath no Right to make use of them? And to what purpose serveth our Faculty of Reason, but only to judge for our selves in all such Matters as fall within the Sphere of our Cognizance? Which if our Reason be debarred of, it stands for a lonely Cypher in our Natures, and is altogether useless and insignificant? And if in any Thing our Reason hath a Right to judge for us, then much more in Matters of Religion, in which our highest and most important Interest is concerned. So that to deny it the Right of judging for us here, is to render it useless in our greatest Importance, and to disable our best Faculty from being serviceable to our best Interest. 'Tis true, there are sundry Controversies about religious Matters, which every Man's Reason cannot judge of; the Arguments pro and con depending either upon Criticisms of Language, or Metaphysical Niceties, or ancient Histories; which are all beyond the Comprehensions of Persons of mean and vulgar Understandings: who are therefore obliged in all such Matters as these, to submit to the Determination of their lawful Guides and Governours. But as for the great and necessary Matters of Religion, they are plain and obvious to the meanest Understanding; and consequently herein every Man ought to exercise his natural Right of judging for himself, and not swallow his Religion blindfold, without trying it by the Test of his Reason. And certainly they who remove the Cognizance of Religion out of the Court of Reason, take away that which doth most properly and naturally fall under its Determination. For Religion is the chief End of Man's Creation, as he is a reasonable Being, and thereby capable of Religion: and to be sure where the End is natural, the Means must be so too. And therefore as Horses that were made for Burthen, have a natural Ability to bear; and as Birds that were made to fly, have a Faculty and Wings for that Purpose; so rational Souls that were made for Religion, must needs be supposed to have some Power naturally placed in them, for the Exercise, and Judgment and Choice of it. And what else can that be but their Reason? So that to deny Men the Liberty to judge for themselves in that which is their natural End and highest Interest, is as great a Piece of Violence and Injustice as can be offered to human Nature. And of this very Matter the Church of Rome is highly guilty; for it commands Assent without Evidence; and imperiously requires Men to believe her Doctrines without Examination; to rely implicitly upon her Authority, and swallow down her Faith by the lump, without ever inquiring whether it be Physick, or Poison. For the leading Principle of the Romish Religion is this, that the Churches Authority is the Reason of our Faith, and that Men are bound to believe what she believes without any farther Proof or Evidence; by which tyrannical Procedure she uses her wretched Children, as the Philistines did Sampson, first puts out their Eyes, and recreates herself with their Blindness and Ignorance. For unless they wink hard, and believe at a venture whatsoever she proposes, they are sure to feel the Edges both of her Spiritual and Temporal Swords; and though they are never so modest, peaceable and humble in their Dissents, to incur her Anathema's, which have always the Sting of Fire and Faggot in the Tail of them. Now what is this but to force the Opinions of Men, and drive their Reason from its Throne of Judicature; for he that punishes a Man barely for his Opinion, doth in so doing endeavour to rob him of his natural Right of judging for himself; which is the greatest Tyranny in the World, it being an Exercise of Dominion over the Minds of Men, which are subject only to the Empire of God. 'Tis true, if in judging for themselves Men take up Opinions that are vicious, or destructive to Government, their wicked Practice is justly punishable according to the Proportion of its Malignity; for otherwise Men's Right of judging for themselves will soon be made a Sanctuary for all the Villanies in the World. And though no Man ought to be punished barely for his Opinion, yet he may be justly punished for practising his Opinion, though his Practice be indifferent in its own Nature. For indifferent Things, which God hath neither commanded nor forbidden, are the proper Matter of all human Laws; and therefore if upon a false Opinion that what the Law enjoins is not indifferent, but sinful, I practise contrary to the Law, I am justly punishable; because my Mistake alters not the Nature of the Thing. If it be indifferent, it is a proper Object of human Laws, whether I think it so or no, and as such may justly be imposed; and the Imposition being just in it self, our not complying with it is justly punishable. Once more; though no Man ought to be punished for his Opinion, yet he may be justly punishable for making a publick Profession of it; for there is no doubt but Men may be restrained by Laws from propagating their little Opinions into Factions, and dividing themselves upon every different Persuasion into opposite Parties. Otherwise it will be impossible, considering the Passions of Men, to maintain any Unity, or Concord in civil or sacred Societies. And therefore where such Restriction is, Men ought to be satisfied with this, that they freely enjoy their Liberty of Opining, and are not deprived of their natural Right to judge for themselves; and so they ought either to keep their little Opinions to themselves, or at least not to vex and disturb the Publick by a fierce Endeavour to propagate them to others. And this due Deference to Men's natural Right of judging for themselves, hath been always punctually observed in the Church of England; for it neither damns, nor censures, persecutes, nor destroys Men upon the Score of Difference in Opinion; provided their Opinion doth not lead them to wicked or seditious Practices; but hopes well, of all that live well, and receives all into its Communion that desire it; provided they believe but the Apostle's Creed, and the Doctrine of the four first general Councils: 'Tis true, it forbids Men so to profess their Dissents to the Articles of its Doctrine and Discipline, as to seduce her Children from her Communion, and list them into Factions against her; and this every Church must necessarily do, that values its own Peace and Preservation: But it pretends not to invade the Liberty of their Thoughts, or to lay rigid Restraints on their Opinions; and so long as they dissent from us modestly and peaceably, they may enjoy their own Opinions, and our Communion too. And as for those foreign Communities of Christians that differ from us, we pass no severe Sentences against them; but do believe, and hope, and earnestly pray, that the God of all Mercies will pity their Errors, and connive at their Defects, and finally unite them to us for ever in the blissful Communion of the Church Triumphant. Nor doth our Religion obtrude it self upon the Minds of Men, by the bare Warrant of an imperious Authority; but fairly appeals to our Understandings, and casts it self upon the Tryal of our Reason; exacting of us no farther Assent, than what the Evidence claims upon which it is founded; and is so far from exacting of us a blindfold Assent to it without Examination, that it readily exposes it self to the severest Enquiry, and asks no other Favour but to stand, or fall by the impartial Sentence of our Reason. It tells us both what we are to believe, and why; and not only allows, but requires us to examine the Grounds and Reasons of it; in all which there is not the least Shadow of imposing on Men's Minds, or usurping on their Rights of judging for themselves. But alas! 'Tis not only the Church of Rome that is guilty of this unnatural Tyranny; for how many are there of all Parties among our selves, that cannot endure the least Contradiction, but expect all Judgments should bow to theirs, and receive their imperious Dictates for Oracles; and are ready to censure all that dissent from them, as Men of reprobate Minds, and to bate and persecute them, because they cannot believe as fast as they? As if no Man had a Right to carry his Eyes in his own Head, but they; and their Understandings were to be a Rule and Standard to the whole World. If another Man differs from me, do not I differ as much from him? And hath not he as much Right to judge for himself as I? But he is mistaken, you will say, and I am not; and possibly he is as confident, that I am mistaken and not he; and if I think I cannot be mistaken, I am more mistaken than he: But certainly it is neither Presumption for him to know more than I, nor Sin to know less. What then is to be done, but to leave one another in the quiet Possession of each other's Right; and not to hector and swagger upon every Difference in Opinion; because he that differs from me, hath as much Right to judge for himself as I, though he refuses to prostrate his Understanding to mine; which for any Man to expect, is a most unjust Invasion of the common Rights of human Nature.

III. Every Man hath a Right not to be forced, or impelled to act contrary to the Judgment of right Reason. For right Reason is the natural Guide of all reasonable Creatures; 'tis the Light of their Feet, and the Lanthorn of their Paths, and the Star by which they ought to direct their Courses. And what can be more unjust, than to force any Man to act against that which is the Law of his Nature? For if he who gave me my Nature, gave me right Reason for the Law and Guide of it, I must necessarily have an undoubted Right to a full and free Permission to follow it; otherwise he hath given me a Law in vain. And if I have a Right to a full Permission to follow the Law of right Reason, then for any Man to impel me to act counter to it, either by Hope or Fear, or any other Motive, is a high Injustice to my Nature. For he who induces me to do any wicked, or unreasonable Action, which I should not have done, had not he induced me to it, doth in so doing, so far as in him lies, not permit me to follow the eternal Laws of right Reason. As for Instance, the Law of right Reason requires me, when I pretend to give Evidence to any Matter of Fact, to testify nothing but the Truth to the best of my Knowledge; he therefore who endeavours, either by Promises or Threats, to suborn me to testify falsely, doth thereby hinder me, so far as in him lies, from hearkening to the Call of right Reason. Again, right Reason requires me to make good my Promises, whether they be to my Superiours, Inferiours, or Equals; and much more when I confirm them with an Oath; he therefore who by any means endeavours to persuade me to falsify my Word or Oath, doth in so doing, so far as in him lies, not permit me to follow what right Reason prescribes. Once more, right Reason commands me to bridle my Appetite with Temperance and Sobriety; he therefore that by Force, or Persuasion, endeavours to make me drunk, doth, to the utmost of his Power, with-hold and restrain me from following that which is the Law of my Nature. In a Word, he who by Command or Threat, Promise or Persuasion puts me upon any sinful Action, is not only guilty in the Sight of God of the Sin which I commit by his Inducement, but also of doing a high Injustice to my Nature, of putting it out of its true Bias, and not permitting it to move and act according to the Laws of Reason; which is a Piece of the most outrageous Violence that can be offered to a rational Creature. Besides that by inducing another Man to sin, I do, as far as in me lies, betray him to eternal Punishment; which is as barbarous an Injustice to his Soul, as the Devil himself can be guilty of." For should not I call that Man a treacherous Villain, who, while he pretends to embrace his Friend, should secretly stab him to the Heart? And is it not a much more bloody Villainy, under a specious Pretence of Kindness and Good-fellowship, to stab my Brother to the Soul, and wound him to eternal Death? But whilst, like a heedless Wrestler, I thus cagerly endeavour to give my Brother a Fall, it is a thousand to one but I fall with him, and bear him Company to eternal Torment.

IV. Fourthly and lastly, Every Man hath a Right, as he is a reasonable Creature, to be respected by every Man, according to the Dignity of his Nature. For as in particular Kingdoms the King is the Fountain of Honour, and every Man under him ought to be respected according to that Rank and Degree of Dignity, which the royal Stamp hath imprinted on him; so in the universal Kingdom of the World, God is the Fountain of Honour, and every Being under him ought to be treated and respected according to the Dignity of its Rank, and suitably to that Character of Perfection which God hath imprinted on its Nature. Since therefore Man is so highly advanced by God in the Scale of Beings, as being not only a sensitive, but a rational and immortal Creature, he hath a Right to be treated as such by all that are of his Class and Order. And for a Man to treat a Man otherwise, is wrongfully to depose and degrade him from that noble Rank of Being, wherein the God of Nature hath placed him. For whatsoever his outward Condition may be, I ought to consider him as a Man, as one that is placed in the same Rank of Being with my self; though he be my Slave or Vassal, I ought to respect him as an Individual of my own Kind, and not use him rudely, harshly or contemptuously like a Dog; though he be poor and mean in his outward Circumstances, yet I ought to regard him as a Branch that is sprung out of my own Stock, and not to contemn or despise him, as if he were a Creature of an inferiour Species; though he should be a Fool, or a Mad-man, yet I ought to respect him as my Brother Man, i. e. endowed with the same Faculties with my self, though through the unhappy Defect of his bodily Organs he cannot exert and exercise them; and not to scorn and deride him, as if he were an Ape, or a Baboon, that seemed to be made on purpose to be laughed at: Yea, though (which is worst of all) he should be a lewd or wicked Man, yet I ought to consider him as a Stem of my own Root, and not abuse, disdain or vilify him, as if he were only a two-legged Brute, or an upright Animal. So that there is a Respect that is eternally due to humane Nature; where-ever it is, or whatever Disadvantages it is attended with, it is stamped with the Image of God, and that ought to be revered by the whole Creation. And therefore whoever uses a Man inhumanely, affronts both God and his own Kind, and violates the most sacred Right of humane Nature. If therefore we would render to Men their natural Right and Due, we must take Care not to behave our selves rudely and insolently, superciliously and contemptuously towards them; and we must endeavour, as much as in us lies, to accommodate our selves to their particular Tempers, and not be froward and untractable, or tenacious of our own Humour, especially when it lies in another Man's Way; but be apt to recede and give Place, that there may be room for other Mens Humours as well as ours. For what Reason is there, that our particular Humour should take up all the World? We have no more Right to be morose and inflexible, than other Men; and should they be as unyielding as we, we must either stand at a perpetual Bay, or resolve to jostle with every one we meet, till we have forced all to give Way, or they have forced us. For whilst we want this Complaisance towards others, we are in Society like irregular Stones in a Building, which take up more room than they fill; and till they are polished and made even, will not permit others to lie near them. This Respect therefore we owe to humane Nature, which is common to all Men, to file off that unmanly Sharpness and Ruggedness of Humour, which renders us perverse and untractable in our Conversation; that so we may be able to compose ourselves into such respectful, courteous and obliging Deportment towards all Men, as is due to the essential Dignity of humane Nature. And thus you see what Rights are accruing to Men as they are rational Creatures, and consequently what Acts of Justice, as such, they owe to one another.
and

CHAP. III.

Of Justice in preserving the Rights of Men, as united together by Natural Relations; and as joined together in Society.

III. WE will consider Men as rational Creatures united together by natural Relations, such as Parents and Children, Brothers and Sisters, and consanguineous Kindred, in which several Relations they have their peculiar Rights appertaining to them. Thus Parents by giving Nurture and Education to their Children, have a natural Right to be beloved and revered and obeyed by them; and for Children to withhold these Dues from them is not only a foul Ingratitude, but a great Injustice; they owe their Parents for their Lives and Limbs, for the Health of their Bodies, and the Use of their Faculties; and what a small Composition is there in their Love and Obedience for so great a Debt? They borrowed their Being from their Parents, and therefore are their natural Subjects, Properties and Pensioners; and to be sure every Lord hath a Right to the Obedience of his Subject, every Owner to the Disposal of his Property, every Benefactor to the Love of his Pensioner; and consequently every Parent, who is all these together, to all these Respects and Duties from their Children. And so on the other Hand, Children have a Right to be treated as Children to their Parents, that is, as their natural Images and Copies, as Parts of their own Substance, as Flesh of their Flesh, and Bone of their Bones, or as themselves derived and multiplied; which gives them a natural Right to be dearly beloved and kindly treated, to be fed and cloathed, instructed and provided for by their Parents, according to their Power and Ability: And for any Parent not to render these Dues and Rights to his Children, is not only an unnatural Cruelty, but a barbarous Injustice. And then for Brethren and Sisters and consanguineous Relations, their partaking of the same Blood and Substance, as being coined in the same Mint, and more immediately derived from the same Root and Fountain, gives them a natural Right to be mutually beloved, and esteemed, and relieved, and assisted by one another; and they cannot be unkind, ill-natur'd, or hard-hearted towards one another, without breaking all the Ties of Nature, and being unjust Violaters of its sacred Rights. These in short, are the Rights which accrue to Men, as united together by natural Relations.

IV. Fourthly and lastly, We will consider Men as rational Creatures joined together in Society: And because Society is natural to Men, and that not only as they are rational Creatures, but as they were always born and bred in Society; therefore whatsoever Rights accrue to them from hence may be justly ranked among those Rights which are Natural. And Men being by Nature united in Society with one another, there doth from thence accrue to us a Right to all that is necessary to the obtaining the common Benefits of Society; otherwise our being united in Society would be perfectly insignificant to us. Now the common Benefit of Society is mutual Assistance, Comfort and Support; to the obtaining of which these Things are absolutely necessary. First, Love. Secondly, Peace. Thirdly, Truth. Fourthly, Repute. Fifthly, Protection. Sixthly, Communication in the Profits of Inter-course. To all which every Man must have a Right by Virtue of his being in Society; otherwise he is in Society to no Purpose. These Things I shall but very briefly insist on, because I have handled most of them at large upon another Occasion.

I. By Virtue of our being united in Society, we have a Right to be beloved of one another. For being all incorporate Members of one Body, we naturally owe each other a mutual Sympathy and Fellow-feeling of each other's Pains and Pleasures; without which we can never be concerned as we ought to succour and relieve one another. If I partake in another's Joys and Sorrows, it is my Interest to contribute all I am able to his Happiness; but unless I am Partner in his Fortunes, it will be indifferent to me whether he be happy, or miserable. And as it is Sympathy that engages us to a mutual Assistance, so it is Love that engages us to a mutual Sympathy; it is Love that confederates our Souls, and causes us to espouse one another's Interests; and therefore so far as we fall short of this, we must necessarily fall short of the End of our Society, which is to aid and assist one another: Which we shall never do, unless we are constantly inclined to it by a mutual Benevolence. But while we hate, and malign one another; our being united together in Society will only furnish us with surer Means and fairer Opportunities to wreck our Spite upon each other. So that not to love one another, while we are thus associated, is not only uncharitable, but unjust; since we thereby rob one another of one of the most necessary Means to obtain the End of our Society. For when Mens Hearts are divided, 'tis impossible their Hands, should be long united in a mutual Defence and Assistance; so that by withdrawing our Love from each other, we do so far as in us lies, excommunicate one another from the common Benefits of Society; which since we have all a natural Right to, is highly dishonest and injurious.

II. By Virtue of our being united in Society, we have a Right to Peace; that is, to live peaceably and quietly our selves, so long as we do not causelessly vex and disturb others. For Society being nothing but an united Multitude, it is indispensably necessary to the Preservation of its Union, that every individual Member should quietly comport himself towards every one, in that Degree and Order wherein he is placed; because as the Health of natural Bodies depends upon the Harmony of their Parts, so doth the common Good of Societies, or political Bodies. It is Peace and mutual Accord which is the Soul that doth both animate and unite Society, and keep its Parts from dispersing, and flying abroad into Atoms; which nothing but Force and Violence can hinder them from, when once they are broken and divided. For he that cannot enjoy his Peace in Society, is in a worse Condition than if he were out of it, and lived in some solitary Desert alone by himself: For there is no Solitude so dismal, as a vexatious and quarrelsome Society. Whilst therefore Men are of an unpeaceable Temper, and do affect to live like Salamanders, in the Fire of Strife and Contention; they are the common Pests and Nuisances of Society: For where-ever they dwell, they lay an Imbargo on all sociable Communion, stop all the Interchanges of good Offices between Men, turn all Conversations into Tragedies, and convert all Societies into Maps, and Images of Hell, that black and dismal Region of dark Hatred, fiery Wrath and horrible Tumult. And whereas by the fundamental Laws of Society, every Man hath an undoubted Right, not to be disturbed in the Enjoyment of his innocent Pleasures, not to be hindred in the advancing his lawful Profits, not to be interrupted in the Prosecution of his reasonable Designs, not to be detained in his Afflictions, or vexed and grieved with causeless Aggravations of them; it is the proper Business of litigious Spirits to invade and overthrow these Rights, and, so far as they are able, to turn every Man out of the Possession and Enjoyment of them. So that they are a publick Offence and Injury to Mankind; and ought to be looked upon as so many common Barretors in the World. In short, every Man by Virtue of his being in Society hath a Right to Peace, so long as he demeans himself justly and peaceably towards others; he therefore that disturbs another Man's Peace, unless it be in Defence of his own, or other Mens Right or Peace, is an Infringer of the natural Rights of human Society.

III. By Virtue of our being united in Society, we have a Right to Truth; that is, we have a Right to know the true Sense of each other's Minds and Intentions, whensoever we pretend to report and discover it by our Speech; for it is only our Speech that capacitates us for a rational Society. Our Words are the Credentiaries and Intelligencers of the Society and Intercourse of our Minds: and it is only by these that Souls do correspond and communicate their Thoughts to one another: It is by these that they mutually divert their Sorrows, and mingle their Mirth; impart their Secrets, communicate their Counsels, and make mutual Compacts and Agreements to supply and assist each other. And indeed Words are the Rudders that steer all human Affairs, the Spring that set the Wheels of Actions a going; and the Hands work, the Feet walk, and all the Members and all the Senses act by their Direction and Impulse; and there is scarce any Communication, or Intercourse among Men, but what is transacted by their Speech. So that if Men were under no Obligation to express their Thoughts truly to one another, there could be no such thing as human Society in the World; for it is impossible their Minds should converse, while their Words do falsely echo and report their Thoughts. In a word, Society and Conversation being the great Bank and Exchange of Souls, Truth and Integrity herein is the one publick Faith of Mankind; which every Man virtually engages himself to keep, by being and continuing a Member of human Society. For human Society being a Society of Minds, implies in the very Nature of it an universal Contract and Agreement to signify fy our Minds truly to one another; and therefore since Words are the natural Instruments by which this Signification is made, every Man by Virtue of that Contract hath a Right to have the true Meaning of every Man's Mind in his Words, to have every Man turn himself inside outward to him whensoever he speaks, and to measure his Words by his Meaning, and his Meaning, so far as he is able, by the Truth and Reality of Things. And therefore whosoever lies or equivocates to another, by laying Ambushes in his Words, or lurking behind them in reserved Meanings, doth thereby injuriously deprive him of the natural Rights of Society. And therefore by the way, whatsoever the Romist Casuists may pretend, Equivocation is as great an Injustice as Lying; being directed to the same End and Purpose, viz. to rob those whom we speak to of their Right to our Meaning and Intention, which he who equivocates doth as effectually, as he that lies. So that in reality an equivocating Jesuit is as great an Outlaw to Society, as a common Liar; nor can his ambiguous Words be any more depended on than false ones, for the Signification of his Meaning; but if what he falsely or equivocally affirms to be his Mind and Meaning, he attests with his Oath, he doth not only thereby wrong Man, but horribly affront God. For an Oath is a solemn Invocation of God to bear Witness to what we assert or promise; and therefore if what we assert be false, we call God to witness to a Lye; which is to suppose either that there is no God at all, or, which is a thousand times worse, that God is as great a Liar as our selves. For he that calls God to witness what he saith, must be presumed to believe that God will witness for him, and consequently that God will witness falsely, if what he says be false; which is such a Blasphemy against the God of Truth, as no Vengeance can sufficiently expiate. And as in the Matter of Affertion every Man hath a Right to Truth, so he hath also in the Matter of Promise; provided he be promised nothing but what is lawful and possible: And therefore for any Man to promise what he intends not to perform or go back from his Promise, when he lawfully may, or can perform it, is an Act of unjust Rapine; and I may every whit as honestly rob another of what is his without my Promise, as of what I have made his by it, he having an equal Right to both, by the fundamental Laws of Society; but if he promises with an Oath, as in Matters of Publick Trust and Administration we usually do, he doth not only owe a just and punctual Performance unto Man, but to God himself, whom he calls to witness that what he swears he intends to perform, according to the true and natural Meaning of his Words; and he solemnly invokes God to avenge his Non-performance. So that if he fail of what he hath promised by his Oath, or doth not execute it according to its true Meaning; he is guilty not only of a high Injustice to Man, but of a horrid Prophanation of the Name of God; whom he hath solemnly called to witness to a Lye, whose Wrath he hath imprecated on his own Head, and whose Justice he hath obliged by a dreadful Contract severely to avenge his Perjury. He therefore who lies, equivocates, or forswears himself; whether it be in asserting or promising, violates that universal Contract truly to signify our Meaning to another, which human Society implies, and upon which it is founded; and whilst he doth so, there is no Intercourse can be had with him, but he is a Creature by himself, an Enemy to the World, that lives in a State of War with all Mankind, and out of all Laws and Obligations of human Society: And so whilst he continues in it, and pretends to observe its natural Rights, he doth by his Equivocations and Lyes, wrong and injure all he converses with.

IV. By Virtue of our being united in Society we have a Right to Credit, and to a fair Estimation among one another. For the great End of human Society is, that by their mutual Intercourses Men might aid and assist one another; and it is for this Purpose that Men combine themselves into Societies, that thereby they may enjoy a delightful Conversation, void of Fear, Suspicion, Suspicion, and Danger; and by exchanging their Labours, Counsels, and Commodities may be mutually helpful and beneficial to one another. And this End no Man can ever attain, without having a fair Credit and Estimation among those with whom he deals and Converses: For who will trust to a Man of a lost Reputation? Or who would willingly have any Intercourse with one whom he cannot trust and confide in? Credit is the main Sinew that holds Society together, and there is scarce any Conversation or Dealing between Man and Man, but what requires a mutual Trust and Confidence in one another. Since therefore all Trust and Credit is founded upon good Reputation, every Member of our Society, who hath not forfeited his good Name, hath a natural Right to be well reputed and spoken of; and whosoever either by false Witness, publick Slanders, or private Whisperings, endeavours to attain an innocent Man's Reputation, doth thereby injuriously attempt to exclude him from the Conversation of Men, and shut the Door of humane Society against him. And this, how lightly soever it may be thought of, is one of the highest Acts of Injustice that one Man can offer to another; for a good Name, saith Solomon, is rather to be chosen than great Riches, and loving Favour rather than Silver and Gold, Prov. xxi. 1. And indeed in its Consequences it is much more so to every Man, because upon his good Name his Ability to do good to himself, or Friends, or Neighbours, the Success of his Affairs, his best Comforts, chiefest Interests, and dearest Conveniences of Life, yea and sometimes his Life itself depends: So that in defaming of others, we commonly rob, sometimes murder, and always injure them; and there are no Damages so irreparable, no Wounds so incurable, no Scars so indelible as those of a slandrous Tongue. For wheresoever its venomous Arrows fall, no Eminency of Rank, Dignity of Place, Sacredness of Office, no Innocence of Life, Circumspection of Behaviour, Benignity of Nature and Deportment, can protect Men against them; no Force can resist, no Act can decline them, no Vindication assail their mischievous Impressions, but still aliquid adhærebit, let the Innocence they wound be never so well cured, some Mark of Dishonour will remain. Whosoever therefore either forges, or spreads, or rashly entertains a Slander against any Man, doth in so doing injuriously offend against the natural Rights of Society, and is at once a Thief, a Ravisher and a Murderer; a Robber of the good Name, a Deflowerer of the Reputation, and a Murderer of the Honour of his Neighbour. And yet, good God, how strangely doth this unjust and villainous Practice prevail in all Societies and Conversations of Men! Among whom it is grown so common to asperse causelessly, that no Man wonders at it, few dislike it, and scarce any detest it, but whilst the black-mouth'd Calumniator is blustering against all that stand in his way, and exhaling his poisonous Breath from his venomous Heart; he is heard not only with Patience, but with Pleasure, and looked upon as a Man of a notable Talent, and judged very serviceable to the Party he is engaged in. So that now this odious Vice is grown a fashionable Humour, a pleasing Entertainment, a Knack of carrying on some curious Feat of Policy; and so epidemical is the Mischief grown, that it is dangerous for a Man who hath any Sense of Honesty or Justice, to come into any Conversation, without being tempted to wish himself sequestered from Society, and to cry out with the Prophet Jer. ix. 2, 3. O that I had in the Wilderness a Lodging-Place of way-faring Men, that I might leave my People, and go from them; for they are an Assembly of treacherous Men, and they bend their Tongues like a Bow for Lies.

V. By Virtue of our being united in Society, we have a Right to Protection from one another: For it was for this Reason that God brought us forth in a State of Society, and linked us to one another by the Inclinations of our Nature; that so we who are singly a sort of the most defenceless Creatures, whom Nature hath not furnished either with the defensive or offensive Armour, which is natural to other Creatures, might by an Union of Forces be able to secure ourselves against foreign Outrage and Violence, and being associated for this End by the Law of our Nature, we are thereby obliged, so far as we are able, to defend one another. All Mankind are one Body, incorporated by the Charter of Nature, whereby every Member is obliged to stand by and assist his Fellow, so long as he acts as a Member, and keeps within the Rules of humane Society. Whilst therefore I do not by offending others, offend against the Charter of Nature, I have a Right to be defended by every Man, so far as he hath Power and Opportunity; and whosoever offends me, ought to be looked on and proceeded with as a publick Offender against the Corporation of Mankind. For the Whole is concerned in every Part, and as he that bruises the Toe offends the Body, and engages every Member against him; so he who wrongfully hurts any Member of the human Society, is thereby injurious to the Whole, and ought to be repell'd and opposed by every Member of it: And he who refuses to aid his Fellow-member, when injuriously struck at, and it is in his Power, is a Traitor to the common Cause, a falsehearted Turn-coat and base Defserter of the Society of Mankind. He that can patiently sit still, and hear his Brother's Name torn in pieces by a slanderous Tongue, when it is in his Power to purge and vindicate him, robs him of the common Rights of a Man: He that can see his Brother's Life injuriously exposed, either by open Violence or secret Practise, when it is in his Power to rescue him, treats him like an utter Alien and Foreigner to Mankind; he that can suffer a Brother to be robb'd of his Estate, or defrauded in his Property, when it is in his Power to defend and right him, unjustly with-holds from him what he owes him by the Charter of humane Society; and in so doing doth not only offend against his Brother in particular, but also against the whole Society of which he is a Part and Member. So that in short, as we are all united by the God of Nature into the same Corporation, we are obliged in Justice manfully to defend each other's Lives, Estates, and Reputations; and if we wilfully permit any Fellow-member to be murdered, slandered, robbed, or cozened, when it is in our Power to prevent it, we do not only wrongfully with-hold from him his natural Right to be defended by us, but foully betray the common Interest of Mankind; for both which we shall one Day give a dear Account to the supreme Head and Sovereign of all Societies.

VI. Sixthly and lastly, By Virtue of our being united in Society, we have also a Right to share with one another in the Profits of our Commerce and Intercourse. For as of all other Creatures we are the best fitted for Society, by reason of that peculiar Faculty we have of communicating our Thoughts and Minds to one another: so of all other Creatures we stand in the greatest need of it, by reason of our Insufficiency to supply and relieve ourselves. For as for other Creatures, after they come into the World, they are much sooner able to help themselves than we; and after we are most able to help ourselves, there are a World of Necessaries and Conveniencies without which we cannot be happy, and with which we cannot be supply'd without each other's Aid and Assistance. And therefore God created us in Society, and imprinted sociable Inclinations on our Natures; that being by them combined and united together, we might be mutually helpful to one another, and ready to assist and supply each other, according to our several Talents and Abilities, with such Necessaries and Conveniencies of Life as the Condition of our Nature requires. This therefore being one main End of our Society, viz. to be dutiful Ministers of God's Providence towards one another, in supplying those Wants and Necessities which he hath made, and which he hath made to be supplied by our mutual good Offices and Ministeries; every Man hath thereupon a Right to be aided and assisted by every one with whom he hath any Dealing or Intercourse; and to have some Share of the Benefit of all that Exchange, Traffick, or Commerce, which passes between him and others. For every Man hath a Right to his own Labour and Industry; and therefore if another be be benefited by mine, it is but just and equal that I should be benefited by his; that he should so exchange Labour, or Commodities with me, as that my Necessities should be served as well as his own; and that while he reaps what I sow, and enjoys the Harvest of my Labour, he should repay me such a Share of his, as my Convenience and Necessity calls for. But if he ingross all the Profit of our Exchange and Commerce to himself, he is rather a Wen of the Body Politick, that draws all the Nourishment to himself, and starves the neighbouring Parts, than a regular Member, that contents itself with such a Share as is proportionate to its own Bulk and Magnitude, and gladly permits his Fellow-members to live and thrive as well as he. So that for any Man in his Dealings with others, to take Advantage from their Necessity or Ignorance, to oppress or over-reach them; to use them cruelly, so as wilfully to damnify them, or hardly, so as either to rake all the Advantage to himself, or not to allow them such a competent Share of it as is necessary to support and maintain them according to their Rank and Station; is an injurious Invasion of that natural Right, which the very End and Design of human Society gives them.

And thus you see what are the natural Rights of Men, considered as rational Creatures inhabiting mortal Bodies, and united to one another by natural Relations and Society; all which Rights are inherent in them antecedently to all human Laws and Constitutions; and though there had never been any other Law but that of Nature, yet they might have justly claimed them of one another, as eternal Dues which no Laws can cancel, no Custom dissolve, no Circumstances make void or abrogate. So that to do justly with respect to Men's natural Rights, is to render them what we owe them by the Obligations of Nature, as they are rational Creatures; to treat them equitably, to do them all the good we can justly desire they should do to us, if we were in their Circumstances; quietly to permit them to judge for themselves, without endeavouring to tyrannize over their Minds by persecuting, censuring and reviling them, because they are not of our Opinion; to suffer them freely to comply with the Dictates of right Reason, and not to put them either by Force, Command, or Presumption upon any wicked and unreasonable Act; in a word, to pay them all those fair Respects that are due to the Dignity of human Nature, to treat them courteously, and humanly, and not to bespeak or use them as if they were so many Dogs, or brute Animals; these are eternal Dues, which every rational Creature owes to his own kind, and which we cannot withhold from one another without high Injustice to humane Nature. But then as we are rational Creatures inhabiting these mortal Bodies, we are obliged in Justice not to maim or destroy or captivate one another's Bodies; unless it be in the necessary Defence of our own Lives, Estates, or Liberties; not to deprive one another of our necessary Livelihood and Subsistence; but out of our Abundance to supply the pinching Necessities of the Poor and Needy. These things we owe one another as we are all the Tenants of God, sent down into this lower World, and quartered in these Houses of Clay; and if we rob one another of what we are thus intitled to by the present State and Condition of our Being, we are extremely unjust to God and to each other. Again, as we are rational Creatures united to each other by natural Relations, we are obliged to render to each other all those Respects and Duties, which the Nature of our Relation calls for; as we are Parents, to love, and instruct, and make suitable Provision for our Children; as we are Children, to love and reverence, succour and obey our Parents; as we are Brethren or natural Kindred, to love and honour, succour and relieve one another: And if we withhold from each other any of these Rights or Dues, which the Nature of our Relation calls for, we make an injurious Inroad upon the most sacred Rights and Inclosures of Nature. Lastly, as we are rational Creatures united to one another by natural Society, we owe Love and Peace, Truth and Credit, Protection and Participation of Profit to one another. Whilst therefore we hate and malign, and vex and disturb each other; whilst we lye and equivocate, and violate our Promises and Oaths; whilst we refuse to defend each other's Lives, Estates and Reputation; and usurp all the Profits of our Exchange and Intercourse; not allowing those whom we deal with a sufficient Share to subsist and live by; we trample upon all the natural Rights of human Society, and demean ourselves as open Enemies and Outlaws to Mankind.

Wherefore in the Name of God, if in this degenerate Age, whereinto we are fallen, Christianity hath quite lost its just Power and Dominion over us; let us be honest Heathens at least, though we resolve to be no longer Christians: If we will needs be deaf to the Voice of our revealed Religion, yet for Shame let us attend to the Voice of our Nature, and not leap down at once from the Perfections of Christians into the wretched Condition of Beasts and Devils. Oh! for the Love of God and the Honour of those noble Natures he hath given us, stop at Men at least, though you are fallen from Christianity; and do not by your Cruelty and Inhumanity, Frauds and Calumnies, Oppressions, Lyes, and shameless Perjuries, at the least approach towards that at which Humanity starts with Horror and Amazement; do not defame and scandalize your Natures, and render your selves a Shame and Reproach to the Name of Men, by these your outrageous Invasions of the common Rights of human Nature.

CHAP. IV.

Of Justice, as it preserves the Acquired Rights of Men; and particularly those which arise from Sacred and Civil Relations.

I Proceed now to the second Sort of human Rights, which Justice between Man and Man relates to, viz. such as are not natural to them either as rational Creatures, or as dwelling in mortal Bodies, or as joined to one another by natural Relations, or as naturally united in Society; but are acquired subsequently to the Rights of Nature, by that mutual Intercourse which passes between Men in their Society with one another. Which Rights though they are not natural, but accidental, are yet founded on the Rights of Nature, and therefore ought to be preserved as sacredly and as inviolably as these: For whatsoever Rights Men do acquire in the Performance of the common Rights of Nature, are equivalent with them, as being founded on the same Reasons. Now all those Rights which are not natural, are acquired one of these Ways; either, First, by sacred and civil Relations; or Secondly, by legal Possession; or Thirdly, by personal Accomplishments; or Fourthly, by outward Rank and Quality; or Fifthly, by Bargaining and Compact.

I. There are some Rights acquired by sacred and civil Relations, and of these there are several Sorts.

First, There is the Relation of Sovereign and Subject.

Secondly, Of subordinate Magistrates to the Sovereign and People.

Thirdly, Of Pastors and People.

Fourthly, Of Husband and Wife.

Fifthly, Of Friend and Friend.

Sixthly, Of Masters and Servants.

Seventhly, Of Truster and Trustee.

Eighthly, Of Benefactor and Receiver.

Ninthly, There is the Relation of Debtor and Creditor: Of the proper Rights of each of which Relations I shall give as brief, an Account as I can.

I. There is the Relation of Sovereign and Subject; which is the highest and most sacred of all those Relations that are not natural. For God being the supreme Lord and Sovereign of the World, all lawful Power and Authority must be derived from him; for as in particular Kingdoms the King is the Fountain of Authority, from whence executive Power descends upon subordinate Magistrates: So in the universal Monarchy of the World, God is the Fountain of all Power and Dominion; from whom all Authority and Right of Government descends upon Princes and Governours; and whosoever exercises Dominion in the World without divine Authority, is an Usurper in the Kingdom of God. But then the Derivation of this Authority from him is either immediate, or mediata: those who are supreme under him derive their Authority immediately from him, and are the Channels by whose Mediation he derives Authority to their subordinate Magistrates; so that the subordinate Magistrates of particular Kingdoms derive their Authority from God by the Hands of their Kings, but the Kings themselves derive theirs from God's own Hands immediately: And whatever the particular Form of any Government be, whether it be Monarchy, or Polyarchy, that which is supreme in it under God must be immediately from him. So far from true is that modern Maxim of some Jesuited Politicians, viz. That Civil Government is the People's Creature; which by necessary Consequence excludes God from being the supreme Governour of the World; for if he be absolutely supreme, there is none can be supreme immediately under him, but by an Authority derived immediately from him. So that the Relation of Sovereign hath this Right unalienably appendant to it, to be accountable to none but God; from whom alone it holds its Authority, and to whom alone it is subjected. And therefore for Subjects to call their Sovereign to Account, is both to arraign God's Authority, and to invade his Peculiar; to set our selves down in his Throne, and summon his Authority before us, and require it to submit its awful Head to our Doom and Sentence; which is as high and impious an Injustice, as can be offered either to God, or Man; and (till Popery, that Fardle of religious Impostures, set Treason and Rebellion abroach) as abhorrent to all Christian Principles and Practices; as Hell is to Heaven, or Darkness to Light. But then since Sovereigns are God's Vicegerents, and do reign by his Authority, they have also an inseparable Right to be obeyed in all Things, wherein they do not interfere with the Commands of God; for in obeying them we obey God, who commands by their Mouths, and wills by their Laws, and Edicts: And as he who refuses to obey the Vice-Roy's command, doth in so doing disobey the King himself, unless he commands the contrary; so he who disobeys his Sovereign who is God's Vice-Roy, doth in so doing disobey God, unless it be where God hath countermanded him. So that while he commands only lawful Things, he hath an undoubted Right to be obeyed; because his Commands are stamped with divine Authority, and are thereby rendered sacred, and inviolable. Again, since Sovereigns are the supreme Representatives of God's Power and Majesty upon Earth, as being his immediate Substitutes; they have also an unalienable Right to be honoured and reverenced by their Subjects, because they bear God's Character, and do shine with the Rays of His Majesty; before which every Creature in Heaven and Earth ought to bow and lie prostrate: And therefore for Subjects to contemn and vilify their Sovereigns, and to expose their Faults, and uncover their Nakedness, and lampoon and libel their Persons and Actions, is an Affront to God's own Majesty, and an unjust and impious Prophanation of that divine Character they bear about them. Once more; since Sovereigns are substituted by God for the common Good, to protect the Innocent, and avenge the Injured, and guard the Rights of their People against foreign and intestine Fraud and Violence; they must hereupon have an undoubted Right to be aided and assisted by their Subjects; because without their Aid, it will be impossible for them to accomplish the Ends of their Sovereignty. And therefore for Subjects to refuse to aid their Sovereign with their Purfes, or Persons, when legally required, or by any indirect Means to withdraw themselves from his Assistance, whenever his Necessities call for it, is to detain from him a just Right that is owing to his Character and Relation. And as these Rights are all implied in the Relation of a Sovereign, so are there others implied in the Relation of a Subject; for sovereign Power being ordained by God for a publick Good, to guard and defend the Innocent, to shelter and relieve the Oppressed, to fence and propagate true Religion, and adjust and balance private Rights and Interests; every Subject hath a Right to be protected by it, so far as it is able, in his Person and Legal Rights, in his just Liberties and Privileges, and sincere Profession of true Religion; and that Sovereign who doth not employ his Power to these Purposes, but through wilful and affected Error, or Ignorance imposes a false Religion on his People; or betrays, oppresses, or enslaves them himself, or permits others to do it either out of Malice, or Carelessness, is an injurious Invader of their Rights and Properties; and though he be not accountable to any earthly Tribunal, shall one Day answer for it at the Tribunal of God.

II. There is the Relation of subordinate Magistrates to the Sovereign and People, such are the Judges and Justices, the Governours of Towns, Cities and Provinces, and the like; who by Virtue of that Authority, which is stamped upon them, and which they derive, as I told you from God, who is the Head and Spring of all Power and Dominion, have by Virtue of that a Right to be honoured and reverenced and obeyed by the People according to the Degree and Extent of their Authority. For where-ever it is placed, Authority is a sacred Thing; as being a Ray, and Impress of the Divine Majesty, and as such may justly claim Honour and Reverence from all Men; and whoever contemns the lowest Degree of it, offers an Affront to the highest. He who contemns subordinate Magistrates who are vested with the King's Authority, doth therein contemn the King; and he who contemns the King, who is vested with God's Authority, doth therein contemn God. Whatsoever therefore the personal Faults and Defects of Magistrates may be, Men ought to consider that their Authority is a sacred thing, and, as such, challenges their Reverence and Obedience by an unalienable Right; and that therefore to behave themselves frowardly, stubbornly, or irreverently towards a lawful Magistrate, is to detain from him his Rights, and offer an unjust Affront to his Character, which, how good soever they may be in other Instances, doth in this bespeak them highly dishonest and injurious. And as the Relation of subordinate Magistrates intitles them to the People's Reverence and Obedience; so the Relation which the Prince and People bear to them, intitles them both to their Fidelity, Vigilance and Justice. For subordinate Magistrates are the King's Trustees for himself and his People; and in their Hands he deposits the Honour, Security and Rights of his own Crown and Dominion, together with the Safeguard and Protection of the just and legal Rights of his People. So that upon their Acceptance of this Trust, by which they engage themselves faithfully to discharge it, the King acquires a Right to their faithful and vigilant Care, to see that his Authority be reverenced, his Laws obeyed, his Person, Government and Properties secured; the People acquire a Right to be protected by them in their Persons, Reputations, Liberties and Estates; and so far as they are wilfully failing either towards the King, or the People, in any of these Matters, they do unjustly detain the King's or the Peoples Rights, or both; they betray the Trust committed to them, falsify their own Engagements, and under the Mask of Authority are publick Robbers of Mankind.

III. There is the Relation of Pastors and People; for since out of his tender Care to the Souls of Men, God hath instituted an Order of Men to administer to them those holy Ordinances, by which he conveys his Grace and Spirit, to instruct them in their Duties, admonish them of their Errors, and warn them of their Dangers, and guide them to eternal Happiness; there doth from hence arise a near and sacred Relation between the People and their respective Guides and Pastors. They are joined together by the Ties and Obligations of Religion, which gives them a mutual Right in one another; and which gives the Pastor a Right to be diligently attended to by the People in his religious Ministrations, to be construed in the best Sense, and fairly treated and complied with in all his pious Reproofs and Admonitions; to be honoured and revered for his Works sake, to partake with the People in their Temporals, as they do with him in his Spirituals, and to be supported by them, according to their Ability, with a fair and honourable Maintenance; and they who are wanting to their Pastor in any of these Particulars, deprive him of that which is as much his Right in Conscience, as any thing can be theirs in Law. And then as for the People, They have also a Right to have holy Things duly and regularly administred to them by their Pastor, to be taught and instructed by him with wholesome Doctrine and Example, to be prudently admonished of their Faults and Dangers, and counselled and advised by him in all their spiritual Straits and Exigencies; and he who is wilfully failing in the faithful Discharge and Payment of these Dues is a Thief and a Robber of his Peoples Souls; that so far as in him lies, rifles them of that which ought to be dearer to them than their Estates, or Lives, even the Bread of Life without which they cannot live, but must starve and perish for ever; and if they do, it is by his unjust Neglect to render them their Dues, and their Blood will be required at his Hands.

IV. There is the Relation of Husband and Wife, who having mutually bestowed themselves upon each other, and sealed the Deed by Matrimonial Vow, are thereby interwoven into one another and morally compounded into one Person. For Marriage is an Union of Persons, and Incorporation of two into one by moral Ties and Ligaments: So that between Husband and Wife there is the nearest and dearest Union that can be between two natural Persons; they are each other's Property and Inclosure, having by mutual Vows made over and exchanged themselves for one another, by Virtue of which they have a mutual Right in each other's Person, and cannot bestow themselves away from one another, without being guilty of the most outrageous Injustice. For the Husband is one half of the Wife, and the Wife of the Husband; and therefore whenever they alienate themselves from each other, they rob one another of one half of themselves. And it is this that doth so much inhanche the Sin of Adultery beyond that of simple Fornication; because when the Husband disposes his Body to another Woman, or contrariwise, he is not only guilty of an unbounded, rambling Lust, which is the proper Malignity of simple Fornication, but also of a foul and monstrous Injustice. For he having made himself his Wife's by Promise and Vow, cannot give away himself from her without being impiously injurious, without robbing God of his Vow, and robbing her of himself, for whom she exchanged herself. And consequently they who endeavour to seduce the Wife from the Husband, or the Husband from the Wife, are guilty of a horrid Injustice, in attempting to rob God and Man of that which is most dear and precious to them, and to break through Vows and sacred Fences to trespass on their Neighbour's Inclosure, which how common soever it may be in this degenerate Age, is certainly one of the blackest Villanies in Nature. And as Husband and Wife have a mutual Right to each others Persons, so they have also to each others dearest Love and Affection: For no Relation doth so nearly intitle and interest Persons in one another as that of Marriage; nor consequently, that gives them so great a Right and Title to each others Hearts and Affections. Matth. xix. 5. For this Cause shall a Man leave Father and Mother, and shall cleave to his Wife, and they two shall be one Flesh; and then no Man ever yet bated his own Flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, saith the Apostle exhorting to matrimonial Love, Eph. v. 29. Husband and Wife are one by a moral Union of Persons, and therefore for them to hate and abuse one another would be as unnatural, as for a Man to hate and tear his own Flesh. Again, As they have a mutual Right to each other's Persons and Affections, so they have also to each other's Help and Assistance: Hence the Apostle calls them Yoke-fellows, implying, that they ought to draw together, and mutually assist one another in their common Concerns and Interests. For in the Union of their Persons their Interest is combined and united; so that that which is the one's is the other's: Their Meums and Tuums are confounded together, and their Fortunes make a common Stock wherein they are Partners with one another, and are intitled to the promiscuous Use and Enjoyment of it. And being Sharers in the same Interest, they ought to be mutually helpful and bear a Part of each others Cares and Burdens: For when they are both intitled to the same Fortunes and Interests, it is by no Means just, that the one like a slothful Drone should dwell at Ease in the Hive, and devour the Hony, whilst the other like a laborious Bee goes forth and toils to gather it. These are the common Rights and Dues, which Husband and Wife owe one to another: But then the Husband having the Superiority, hath a Right to be reverenced and obeyed by his Wife in all things that are fair and honest, to be entertained with a gentle Behaviour, addressed to with soft Entreaties, and treated with a sweet Compliance; and therefore for a Woman to behave herself per-versly towards her Husband, to controul his Will in indifferent Matters, and if he will not yield, to teaze and weary him with her four Looks, or clamorous Words, or provoking Deportment, is not only a great Dishonour to her own Head, but a high and shameful Injustice, for which she must one Day account to God, as well as for her other Iniquities. And then on the other Hand, the Wife being no otherwise inferiour to the Husband, than the Body is to the Soul, or the Bosom to the Head, ought not to be treated by him as his Slave and Servant, but as a Part of himself, i. e. with all Lenity and Forbearance, Tenderness and Complaisance; and, as Plutarch saith, the Husband's Empire over the Wife ought to be soft and chearful, to be alloyed and sweeten'd with the greatest Condescension and Officiousness: And that Soul is not more unrighteous to its Body, that starves, or macerates, or evil intreats it; than the Husband is to his Wife, who behaves himself churlishly, sourly, or imperiously towards her. Col. iii. 19. Husbands love your Wives, saith the Apostle, and be not bitter against them, i. e. be not morose and rough; stern and severe in your Carriage towards them; but be sure you use them with all that honourable Regard, prudent Compliance and endearing Familiarity that is due to them as they are Parts of yourselves.

V. There is the Relation of Friend and Friend, which I put next to that of Husband and Wife, because it is next to it in Respect of Nearness and Affinity. For Friendship is the Marriage of Souls, and Interests and Counsels, the Union or Exchange of Hearts, the Clasp of mutual Affections, or true Love-knot that ties Mens Hearts and Minds together. For as for the Matter of Friendship, it is Love and Charity; but as for the Form of it, it is Charity appropriated to such particular Persons; so that Charity is Friendship in common, and Friendship is Charity inclosed. In a Word, Charity is Friendship expanded, like the Force of the Sun when he rises above the Horizon, and shines upon the World; but Charity is Friendship contracted, like the Rays of that glorious Light drawn into the Center of a Burning-glass; and made more warm and active by their Union. When therefore Men have contracted particular Friendships, and espoused their Souls and Minds to one another, there doth from thence arise a new Relation between them beyond what common Charity creates; from which new Relation there accrue new Rights to the related Parties. For mutual Friendship is not a Metaphysical Nothing, created merely for Contemplation, for such as are contracted in its holy Bands, to stare upon each other's Faces, and make Dialogues of News and Prettinesses, or to look Babies in one anothers Eyes; but it is a substantial and important Virtue, fitted for the noblest Purposes, to be an Alloy to our Sorrows, an Ease to our our Passions, a Discharge of our Oppressions, a Sanctuary to our Calamities, a Counsellor of our Doubts, a Repository of our Secrets, and an Improvement of our Meditations; a Champion to our Innocence, and an Advocate for our Interest both with God and Men; to these brave Purposes serves every real Friendship, and without these it is only the empty Name and Shadow of Friendship. When therefore Men combine and unite together in this close and near Relation, they give each other a Right to themselves to all the above-named Uses and Purposes, to be Guides and Comforts to each other in their Doubts and Sorrows, Monitors and Remembrancers in their Errors and Oblivions, Shelters and Refuges in their Oppressions and Calamities, and faithful Trustees and Secretaries to each others Confidences and Thoughts. These are the great Rights of Friendship, which whosoever detains or with-holds from his Friend is a false and unjust Correspondent in that brave and noble Relation: For, when we mutually contract particular Friendship with one another, it is to these great Purposes, or it is not Friendship; and, when to these Purposes we have once joined Hands, and struck particular Amities with one another, we are bound by the Ties of common Honesty and Justice, so far as we are able, to make good our Contract to all those Intents and Purposes it extends to.

VI. There is the Relation of Masters and Servants. For between Master and Servant there are mutual Engagements, which are either expressed in their Contract, or implied in their Relation; and whether there be any formal Contract between them or no, their very Relation is an implicate Bargain, and supposes a mutual Engagement to one another. By being a Servant to another, I put my self into his Hands and Disposal; and devote my Time, and Pains and Labour to him; by Virtue of which he acquires a just Right to my Time and Service, my Fidelity and chearful Obedience: And therefore if either by Gaming, Loitering, or Company-keeping, I alienate my Time from him; or if by my Sloth and Idleness I rob him of my Pains and Labour, or by my hypocritical Eye-Service, or betraying his Trusts, or wasting or embezzling his Goods, I deprive him of my Truth and Fidelity; or if lastly by my Stubbornness and Obstinacy I purloin from him my Duty and Obedience, I am a dishonest and unjust Servant, and however I may escape now, must one Day expect to give an Account to my just and all-seeing Master in Heaven. Accordingly in Scripture Servants are enjoined to obey their Masters in all Things, Col. iii. 22. and to do Service to them with Good-will, Eph. vi. 7. to serve them with Single-ness of Heart, not to purloin their Goods, or answer them again in a froward and surly Manner, Tit. ii. 9, 10. Since then they stand obliged to these Duties, both by Precept of Scripture and the natural Engagement of their Relation, it is plain they cannot act contrary thereunto, without openly transgressing the Laws of God, and trespassing on the Rights of Men. And so on the other Hand, by being a Master to another, I stand engaged to maintain and protect him in my Service, to pay him the Wages, or teach him the Trade for which he serves me; not to out-task his Ability, nor impose any thing on him but what is tolerable and merciful; to correct him with Gentleness, Prudence, and Mercy, and not to restrain him too rigidly from fitting and healthful Recreation; and above all, to admonish him of his Faults, instruct him in his Duty, and give him all chearful Encouragements to well-doing. For I ought to consider, that I am Master of a Man of the same Kind with my self, that hath a Right upon that Account to be treated humanly; which if I do not, instead of being a just Master, I am a savage Tyrant; and also I should consider that I am Master of an immortal Man, who upon that Account hath a Right to be treated religiously, that hath a Soul to be saved, and an eternal Interest to be secured; which if I take no Care of, I treat him rather as my Dog than my Servant, as a Beast that perishes, than as a Man that is to live for ever. So that if any of these Ways I am wanting to my Servant, I am a Transgressor of that Rule of Righteousness that is founded in my Relation to him; and though the crying Necessities of his Soul and Body cannot penetrate my Ears, nor move my Adamantine Bowels to a more just and pious Treatment; yet the Cry of those Wrongs and Injuries I do him by my unjust, inhumane and irreligious Usage, will certainly penetrate the Ears of God, and provoke his Vengeance to a dire Retribution of it.

VII. There is the Relation of Trustees to those that trust them: For he who trusts another doth thereby create a very near and intimate Relation to him: So far forth as he trusts him, he puts his Case into his Hands, and deposits his Interest in his Disposal, and thereby creates him his Proxy, or his second self. So that when I accept of the Trust which another offers me, whether it be to be an Arbitrator in his Cause, or an Executor of his Will, or a Guardian to his Children, or a Keeper of any Pledge or Depositum he commits to me, I do thereby enter into a close Alliance and Relation with him; I put on his Person, engage to supply his Place, to act as his Representative, or alter ego, and so far as he trusts and confides in me, to do for him as if the Case were my own, to determine his Cause, to execute his Will, and dispose of his Children, and secure his Pledges to him, as if I were himself, and those were all my own. And by entering into this near Relation to him, I give him a Right, so far forth as he intrusts me, to my Skill and Care, Fidelity and Industry; all which by putting on his Person I have listed and engaged in his Service. So that if by my own Carelessness or Neglect, I suffer any of his Trusts to miscarry, I am highly dishonest and injurious to him; because I undertook to do for him all that I can suppose he would have done for himself, had he been Master of my Skill and Ability. But if for a Bribe, or to serve my Interest, I betray the Trust he committed to me, or convert it to my own Advantage, I rob him more basely and infamously, than if I bad him stand, and demanded his Purse on the High-way: For then I had robb'd him in the Person of an Enemy, but now I rob him in his own, and make use of that Trust to betray his Interest, by which I was as much obliged to secure and defend it, as if I had exchanged Persons with him, and his Interest were my own; and to betray his Interest for my own Advantage, when he had made me his second self, and I had engaged myself to be so, is a piece of the most inhumane and disingenuous Perfidiousness and Injustice; because by thus doing I abuse his good Opinion of me, for which I stand obliged to him, into an Occasion of betraying him. So that in effect I have borrowed his Person, which he freely lent me, only to rob and despoil him; and from his Confidence in my Truth and Fidelity, by which he was justly intitled to it, have basely taken Occasion to defraud him of that Trust, which he freely deposited in my Hands and Disposal.

VIII. There is the Relation of the Benefactor to the Receiver. For he who doth good to another, doth thereby contract a Relation to him; because in doing good to him he espouses his Interest, and in espousing his Interest he espouses himself; he performs the Part of his Brother, of his Father, and his God, whose highest Character and Eulogium is to be good, and to do good; and consequently in all these Capacities he stands related to him. And by Virtue of this Relation he acquires a Right in the Person obliged to be esteemed and beloved by him; to be pray'd for and requited by him, whenever he hath Opportunity and Ability. For there is always a Right acquir'd by Benefits, where there was none antecedently: He who doth a good Turn deserves and merits of him that receives it; and what he deserves, he hath a Right to. So that every Receiver is Debtor to his Benefactor; he owes him all the Good he receives from him; and is always obliged to a thankful Acknowledgment, and whenever he hath Opportunity to an equivalent Requital. For though my Benefactor gives me his Benefit freely, as having no need of it himself, or at least not so much as I, and therefore cannot legally demand a Repayment of it; yet whatsoever he gives me he deserves of me, and whenever our Circumstances change, and he hath my Need, and I his Ability, I am in Conscience as much obliged to repay it, as if he had lent me upon Bond. In this Case my Ability is Security for for the Benefit I owe him, and his Need is a just Demand of it; and therefore since what he hath merited of me is his Due, I am extremely unjust, if when his Needs do demand it, I do not repay him so far as I am able. But if either I am not able to repay him an equivalent Benefit, or he hath no need or occasion for it, I am bound in Justice to express my Gratitude to him in thankful Remembrances and Acknowledgments, to take all fair Occasions to own and celebrate his Goodness, and by all the little Services I can render him to express a forward Willingness to make him a full Requit. For as in Matter of Debt, he who cannot pay all must compound and pay so far as he is able; so in the Matter of Benefits, he who cannot make a compleat Requit, is obliged in justice to make some small Composition, and pay so much in the Pound as his Ability extends to; and if he can do no more, to express a grateful Sense of them, and give thankful Words for beneficial Deeds; which all generous Benefactors esteem the noblest Requit. But he who receives Benefits without some thankful Acknowledgment, acts the Part of a Swine, that greedily devours the Acorns, and never looks up towards the Tree from whence they drop: And he who requites Benefits with Injuries, acts the Part of a Devil, that would fain have thrown that blessed Being out of Heaven, who created and placed him in it.

IX. Ninthly and lastly, There is the Relation of Creditor and Debtor: For he who lends to another Man, and gives him Credit either for Money or Commodities, or accepts of his Security for what he lends to another, doth thereby contract a Relation to him; by which he acquires a Right to be justly repay'd according to Contract and Agreement. For lending and crediting doth not alienate the Property; the Debtor hath only a Right to use what he borrows for his present Conveniency or Necessity, but the Property remains in the Hands of the Creditor, who hath the same Right to it as when it was in his own Possession. And it being so, the Rule of Common Justice obliges us that we do not borrow more than we have a fair Prospect of Repaying; unless he that credits us knows our Inability, and is willing to run the Hazard. For he who engages himself in Debt beyond what he can reasonably hope to repay, takes that from his Creditor upon Promise of Payment, which he knows he is never likely to restore him, which is at least as high an Injustice, as if he had taken it by Force and Violence. And the same is to be said of borrowing upon false or insufficient Securities, such as bad Mortgages, counterfeit Pawns, or insolvent Bonds-men; for he who takes up his Neighbour's Goods or Money upon such Securities, as he knows are incapable of repaying him, doth as manifestly wrong him, as if he had taken them by Stealth, or Robbery. And since our Debts are our Creditor's Rights, if we would be just Debtors, we must neither reckon what we owe to be our own; nor so dispose of it, as to put it out of our Power to restore it to the true Proprietor: He that hath so much of his own, and so much of other Mens, ought not to spend, or give, as if it were all his own. For if he that hath borrowed one thousand Pounds and is worth another, lives to the utmost Height and Proportion of two Thousand, he must necessarily spend upon what he hath borrowed, and put it out of his Power to restore it; and in so doing rob and despoil his Creditor, to maintain himself in his Prodigality. And as Debtors ought to be careful so to dispose of what they owe, as that they may be able to repay it; so they ought to be no less careful to repay it upon due Demand, or according to Contract and Agreement. For as it is unjust to deprive a Creditor of his Money, so it is unjust to deprive him of the Use and Possession of it, any longer than he consents and agrees to it; because as he hath Right to his Money, so he hath Right to possess and use it. And therefore for Debtors to defer and protract their Payments without their Creditors Consent, when it is in their Power to discharge them, to put them upon fruitless Attendances, and make Advantages of their Money against their Consent, and beyond their Contracts and Agreements, is a Degree of Injustice next to that of robbing and despoiling them of it; because by thus doing they do not only force their Creditors to waste their Time in tedious Attendances, and take them off from their other Businesses, but also rob them of the Use and Possession of their Money, which they have as much Right to, as to the Money it self. And if to defer Payment be so unrighteous in a Debtor, then to refuse and deny it, or take indirect Courses either to abate, or avoid it, is much more unrighteous; because this is not only to deprive a Creditor of the present Use and Possession of his Property, but of his Property too; and how can that Man call any thing he possesses his own Right and Property, whilst he thus denies another his? So that by an indispensable Rule of Justice, every Debtor is obliged rather to strip himself of all, and cast himself naked on the Providence of God; than by denying his Debts, or indirectly shifting the Payment of them, to feather his Nest with the Spoils of his Neighbour. When therefore by refusing to pay what we owe, we force our Creditors upon costly, or troublesome Suits to recover their own; or by pleading Protections, or sheltering our selves in a Prison, we avoid being forced to it by Law; or by fraudulent Breakings, we necessitate them to compound our Debts, and accept a Part for the whole; which soever of these ways we take, I say, to deprive our Creditors of their Rights, we are inexcusably dishonest, and unrighteous. And though by these, or such like knavish Evasions, we may force them to acquit and discharge us, yet we cannot force God in whose Book of Accounts our Debts are recorded, as well as in theirs; and it concerns us sadly to consider, that there is nothing can cross or cancel them there, but only a full Restitution; and that if they are not cancelled there, all the Tricks and Evasion in the World will never be able to secure us from a dismal Reckoning, and a more dismal Execution.

And thus you see what those acquired Rights are, which are due from Man to Man upon Account of their civil and sacred Relations.

CHAP. V.

Of Justice as it preserves the Rights of Men acquired by Legal Possession.

II. THERE are other Rights acquired by legal Possession. For when there was but one Man, he was Lord and Proprietor of all this lower World; but when he had propagated a Family from his Loyns, and that Family was by degrees branched into several Tribes; he sent forth these Tribes under the Conduct of their Heads, Fathers, and Princes, to go and take Possession of such and such Portions of his Earth, as their Numbers, Necessities and Conveniences required; which when they had done, the Prince and Father of each Tribe divided his Land among the Members of it, and shared it into particular Properties, proportionable to the Merit, or Number of the particular Families contained in it; and when any of these Tribes became too numerous and burthensome to the Land that was thus divided among them, they sent forth Colonies from among themselves, to take Possession of the next unpeopled Country bordering upon them; which when they had done, the Leader of the Colony divided it among his Followers; and so as they increased and multiplied, they spread themselves from Country to Country, till they had shared the World into Nations, and divided the Nations into distinct and particular Properties, and Families. And this Division was the Original Law, by which each Family claimed as its Property the Share that was allotted to it: And since the Father of Mankind was intitled by God, who is the supreme Proprietor, to all this terrestrial Globe, he had an undoubted Right to divide it among the several Tribes that descended from him; and therefore since he impowered the Heads and Princes of his Tribes, to take Possession of such and such Portions, and divide it among their Families; not only each particular Tribe had an undoubted Right to the Portion allotted to it by him that was Head of them all, but each particular Family had an undoubted Right to the Share that was allotted to it, by him that was the Head of the Tribe it belonged to. And thus, you see the first Division of the World among Men was the great Law of Property; and that whatsoever Men were possessed of by it, they had an undoubted Right and Title to; and upon this Law all the Meum's and Tuum's, the particular Rights and Properties that are now in the World are founded. For though in process of Time not only the Tribes and Colonies inroach'd upon one another, till the stronger by swallowing up the weaker grew into Kingdoms and Empires; but even the particular Families also of these Tribes and Colonies inroach'd upon each other, and either by Fraud or Oppression robbed their Neighbours of their Original Share; so that those Rights and Properties which were made by the Primitive Divisions, seem for the most Part, if not altogether extinguish'd; yet it is to be consider'd that the Laws now extant do suppose all Alienations of Property from the first Owners to have been made according to that Original Law of Division; which Law did not so irrevocably entail on those Tribes and Families their appropriate Shares, but that they might either sell or give them away, or forfeit them; and if either of these ways those Shares have passed through all successive Generations till now from Tribe to Tribe, or Family to Family, the present Possessors are justly intitled to them by that Original Law of Division. And that they have thus passed, all Laws now extant do suppose: The Law of Nations supposes those Countries that are held by Right of Conquest, to have been justly forfeited to the Conqueror; and that unless they are so, his Conquest is Robbery, and not Right: The municipal Laws of Countries do suppose the Estates of particular Families to be held by the Right of Donation or Purchase from the true Proprietor, and that unless they are so, their first Possession was a Theft and not a Right: And therefore neither the Law of Nations, nor the Law of Countries do allow either Conquerors, or Families to be rightful Possessors of their Conquests, and Estates, so long as there appears any just Claim against them. But though the first Possession should be obtained either by unjust Conquest, or by Fraud and Oppression; yet if it continue in the Lineage or Family of the unjust Possessor, till all just Claim against it be extinguish'd, the Law must suppose it to be obtained justly, because there appears no Evidence to the contrary. And indeed when a Dominion, or an Estate, which was at first unjustly obtained, hath been so long successively possessed, as that no Man can produce a just Claim and Title to it, it must be either the present Possessor's, or no Body's: But then when God, who is the supreme Proprietor of all, doth by his providential Permission continue an ill-got Possession, till all lawful Claim to it is worn out, he doth thereby intitle the present Possessor to it, and creates it his Right and Property. For though God's Providence can be no Rule against his revealed Will, nor consequently can authorize any Man to possess what another hath a just Claim to, because his revealed Will forbids it; yet it is to be considered, that when no Man can justly Claim what I possess, I wrong no Man in possessing it, and consequently am in no wise forbidden it by God's revealed Will: And therefore in this Case by his providential Continuance of the Inheritance of it to me, he gives me free leave to possess it; and that Leave is an implicit Conveyance of a just Right and Title to it. So that Legal Possession, when there is no just or legal Claim against it, is an undoubted Right, a Right founded on the free Donation of God, who is the supreme Proprietor of all things: And therefore Justice obliges us not to rob, or deprive Men of what they are intitled to by Law; nor to despoil any Man by Stealth, or strip him by Violence, or defraud him by Craft and cunning Insinuation.

of any Right or Property to which the Law intitles him; because by thus doing we do not only wrong Man of that Right which by legal Conveyance he derives from God, but we also wrong God himself, by presuming to alienate his Bequests, and to reverse and cancel his Donations. For he who by Stealth, or Robbery, or Fraud, deprives another of his Property, doth impiously invade God's Right of bestowing his own where he pleases; and refuses to stand to that Division, and Allotment which his Providence hath made in his own World: He doth in effect declare in his Actions, that God hath nothing to do to share his World among his Creatures, that he will not endure him to reign Lord and Master in his own Family of Beings, nor allow his Providence to carve and distribute his own Bread and Meat among his Children; but that he will snatch from every one's Trencher, and carve what he pleases for himself out of every Man's Commons and Allowance. So that to deprive another, you see, of what he is legally possess'd of, is a high, and crying Injustice against God and Men: For he that will needs have more of God's Goods than God hath given him, is an impious Robber of God; and he that will needs have those Goods of God which he hath given to another, must be an unjust Robber of Man. If therefore we have injuriously deprived another of his legal Rights, we are bound by all the Ties of Religion towards God, and of Honesty towards Men, to make what Restitution we are able: For it is certain that my wrongful Seizure of what is another Man's doth not alienate his Right to it, so that he hath the same Right to it while I keep it from him, as he had at first when I took it from him, and consequently till I restore it to him, I persist to wrong him of it; and my detaining it is a continued Repetition of that Fraud, or Theft, or Oppression, by which I wrongfully seized it. And whilst I thus persist in the Sin, the Guilt of it abides upon me; and I am justly responsible to the Tribunal of Heaven, for being a Robber of God and Men. Whilst therefore I unjustly detain what is another's Right, I keep the Earnest-penny, which the Devil gave me to intitle him to my Soul for ever; and so long as I possess the Spoils of my injured Brother, I maintain so many Evidences to give Testimony against me, and to raise a Cry on me as high as the Tribunal of God.

CHAP. VI.

Of Justice in Reference to the Rights acquired by personal Endowments, or outward Rank.

III. THere are other Rights acquired by personal Accomplishments, such as Wisdom and Learning, Integrity and Courage, Generosity and Goodness, which do naturally render Men exceeding useful and beneficial to the World; and therefore by these Men acquire a just Right to be highly esteem'd and honour'd by all that know them. For Praise and Honour are the natural Dues, the Birthright and Patrimony of Excellency; which by its own inherent Merit challenges Esteem and Veneration: He who excels another hath a Right to be preferr'd before him in the Esteem and Value of the World; to have his Light reflected with a more glorious Splendour, and his Excellencies resounded with higher Eulogiums. Now the Excellency of a Man consists in the Graces and Ornaments of his Mind; and as we do not esteem a Ship to be excellent, because it is curiously carved and inlaid, but because it is exactly fitted to all the Purposes of Navigation; as we do not account a Sword to be excellent, because it hath a rich Hilt, or embroidered Scabbard, but because it hath a keen Edge, a sharp Point, or a good Guard and Temper: So none but Fools will esteem a Man to be excellent, because he hath a great Estate, or a comely Body, or wears fine Cloaths and rich Trappings; but because because he hath a brave and a goodly Mind; a Soul well adorned with intellectual or moral Accomplishments. These are the Glories of the Man, whereas all the rest are only the Imbellishments of his Case and Outside. So that the true Stamp of Nobility is upon the Minds of Men; and consists in those Graces of Understanding and Will, whereby we represent and resemble God, who is the Pattern of Excellency, and the Fountain of Honour. So that true Honour is nothing else but a due Acknowledgment of Mens Minds and Wills, or their own intellectual or moral Accomplishments echo'd and reverberated upon them in just Acknowledgments and Commendations; which to withhold from one that truly deserves them is great Injustice and Dishonesty. For he who detains from a worthy Person those honourable Acknowledgments that are due to his Virtues, robs Virtue itself of one of the fairest Jewels in her Diadem, and that is her Honour and Glory: He strips and despoils her of her Garments of Praise, steals from her her native Rays and Lustre, and buries her alive in Darkness and Obscurity; and therefore since to rob a virtuous Person of his Honour and Reputation is so great an Outrage to Virtue itself, it must needs be highly unjust and dishonest. And herein consists the great Iniquity of Detraction, and of lessening or debasing Mens deserved Praises and Commendations; which is a higher Injustice than to pick their Purses: For he that clips or embases a Man's Honour, robs him of his best and dearest Property; and whilst he sucks the Veins of another's Reputation to put Colour into the Cheeks of his own, he lives upon the Spoils of his Neighbour; and is every whit as injurious to him, as if he should pull down his House about his Ears to build himself another in its Ruins. And yet how common is this unrighteous Practice among Men? How doth this groveling Serpent lurk almost in every Hedge, to snap at the Heel of every nobler Creature that passes by? Infomuch that a Man can hardly mention in any Company another Man's Excellencies, but presently some little Viper or other will be perking up to sting and spit Poison at him; and if he can say nothing against him, yet something he will seem to know, and with a crafty Nod and Shrug, a malicious Smile or Sneer, suppress and conceal it; and if he chance to speak of another, what Care doth he take to stifle what may commend, and blazon what may shame and disgrace him? like the envious Panther, that shadows in dusky Colours all the graceful Parts and Features, but carefully exposes the Spots and Blemishes to open View. These, and a thousand other Tricks of Detraction are frequently practised in all Conversations; but certainly did Men but consider what a villainous Injustice this is, and how much it provokes God, who will one Day make a strict Inquisition for Mens good Names, as well as for their Blood, they would never dare to allow themselves in such a crying Injustice towards one another,

IV. There are other Rights acquir'd by outward Rank and Quality, whether it be in respect of titular Dignity, or of Wealth and large Possessions; by both which Men do require a Right to civil Respect and outward Obedience. For as for the several Degrees of Nobility, Titles and Places of Dignity, by which Men are advanced above the vulgar Class into the upper Form of Mankind, there are so many Marks and Badges of Honour; by which the King, who is the Fountain of Honour, and who by smiling on a Clod of Earth can, with the April Sun, prefer it into a gay Flower, doth raise and ennoble Men, advance them into a higher Orb, a more illustrious Rank and Station in the World. Now though by virtue of this titular Dignity, we are no farther obliged to reverence or esteem Men, than their Wisdom or Virtue deserves; yet are we bound to give them their due Titles, and demean ourselves towards them with that outward Preference, Observance and Ceremony, which their Degree and Quality requires; otherwise we rob them of those Rights, which the King, who is Master of outward Respects and Precedencies, hath bestowed upon them. For the Royal Stamp upon any kind of Metal gives it an extrinsic Value, and determines the Rate at which it is to pass among Coins; though it it cannot raise its intrinsic Worth, nor make that which is but Brass to be Gold. And as titular Dignities intitle Men to an outward Respect and Observance, so also doth Wealth and large Possessions: For these are Badges of Honour as well as the other, only the other we receive from the King, but these from the King of Kings. For when God bestows upon one Man a larger Fortune and Possessions than on another, he doth thereby prefer and advance him into a higher Sphere and Condition; and when God hath set him above us, it is just and fit that we should rise and give place to him. And though a wise, or virtuous poor Man hath more Right to our Esteem, than a fortunate Knave or Fool, who in all his Glory is but a Beast of Burthen in rich Trapping and Caparisons; yet forasmuch as in outward Rank and Condition God hath preferred the latter, he hath the Right of Precedency, and of outward Respect and Observances, and ought to be treated with greater Obeisance and Regard.

CHAP. VII.

Of Justice, in Reference to the Rights acquir'd by Compact.

V. Fifthly* and lastly, There are other Rights acquir'd by Bargaining and Compact: For Compacts being a mutual transferring of Rights, wherein the Person with whom I bargain makes over such a Commodity to me for so much Money or other valuable Thing, the Right whereof I make over to him; we mutually owe this Right to one another, to deal truly and honestly in making, and sincerely and faithfully in discharging our Compacts and mutual Engagements with each other. For since the End of Commerce and buying and selling is mutually to assist and furnish one another with the Necessaries, and Conveniencies of Life; both Buyer and Seller must thence have a Right accruing to them so to buy and sell, as that they may be mutually assisted by one another; as that the Buyer may have the Worth of his Price, and the Seller the Worth of his Commodity: For otherwise instead of mutually assisting, the one must necessarily depress and damnify the other. What the exact Measure is, which in matter of buying and selling ought to be observed between Man and Man, is, I confess a difficult Question, and hardly capable of being nicely determined; especially by us who are so little acquainted with the Affairs of the World, the Necessities of Things, and the particular and hidden Reasons of some Sorts of Traffick and Dealing: And therefore that I may not venture beyond my Depth in the Determination of this Matter, I shall only prescribe such general Rules of Righteousness to conduct our Bargains and Contracts, as being impartially applied to particular Cases, may secure Men from dealing wrongfully and injuriously with one another. And they are these; First, Use Plainness and Simplicity in all your Dealings. Secondly, Impose upon no Man's Ignorance and Unskilfulness. Thirdly, Take no Advantage of another's Necessities. Fourthly, Subtract not from the Commodity or Price, for which you have contracted. Fifthly, Go not to the utmost Verge of what thou conceivest to be lawful. Sixthly, In doubtful Cases chuse the safest Part.

I. Use Plainness and Simplicity in all your Dealings: Do not by disparaging another Man's Commodity, or over-valuing your own, endeavour to draw on an advantageous Bargain; neither ask far beyond, nor bid much below the Worth of Commodities. Say not you cannot take less, or give more, when you know you may with fair Advantage and Profit. Pretend not what is false, cover not what is true; but so far as in you lies, fit your Affirmations and Denials to the Understanding of the Person you deal with: And do not lie in Ambush behind your Words to trap and ensnare him. For in Bargains not only that which is false is unjust, but also that which deceives.
and

II. Impose upon no Man's Ignorance and Unskilfulness. Whilst you keep within the Latitude of lawful Gain, you may use your Skill against another Man in driving a Bargain; for in an ordinary Plenty of Commodities there is an ordinary Price, which those that deal in them know and understand, and when the Contractors equally understand the Price, there can be no Deception or Injustice on either Side. But if he whom I contract with be ignorant or unskilful, I must not rate his want of Understanding, or set a Tax upon his Ignorance, but use him not only justly but ingeniously, as one that reposes a Trust in me and casts himself upon my Equity; considering that to take Advantage from his Simplicity to abuse and defraud him, would be not only Injustice but Inhumanity.

III. Take no Advantage of another's Necessities. Do not wring and squeeze a poor Man when he is driven to your Doors by his Wants, and forced to sell his Wares to supply his Necessities; but give him the same Price you would have done, supposing he wanted your Money no more than you needed his Commodity. And if the poor Man be forced to buy of you upon Trust, increase your Price no higher than what is necessary to make you Recompence for the Loss, which according to the Rules of Trade you must sustain by your Forbearance; reckoning also the Hazards you run which ought to be charitably and prudently estimated. For he who makes Advantage of another's Necessities, robs the Spittle, and adds Oppression to Misery; which is not only Injustice but Barbarity.

IV. Subtract not from the Commodity or Price, for which you have contracted. For he who buys a Commodity by Weight or Measure, hath a Right to as much of it as the common Standard allows him; to have a full Standard Pound, or Pint, or Bushel according as he bargains or contracts, and to subtract any thing from what he hath bargained from, whether it be by false Weights or Measures, or by falsely weighing or measuring, is no better than Theft and Robbery. And so on the other Hand, he who sells a Commodity hath a Right to the Money for which he sold it; and therefore for the Buyer either knowingly to pay him uncurrent Coin, or forcibly to detain from him any Part of the Price agreed on, is a manifest Violation of the eternal Rules of of Righteousness.

V. Go not to the utmost Verge of what you conceive to be lawful, for he who goes to the utmost of what is lawful, ventures to the Brink of a Precipice, where he stands in imminent Danger of falling into it. For it is a short and easy Passage from the utmost Limit of what is lawful, to the nearmost of what is sinful: So that he, that will go as far as he may, will never be able to avoid going sometimes farther than he should; especially when he is led on by Interest, and hath a tempting Prospect of Advantage before him, which is wont to blind the Eyes of Men, to warp their Judgment, to tincture their Minds with false Colours and undue Apprehensions of Things. Wherefore in that Latitude of lawful Gain which is allow'd you, use Favour towards the poor and necessitous, Ingenuity towards the ignorant and unskilful, and Moderation towards all.

VI. Sixthly and lastly, In doubtful Cases chuse the safest Part: For not only a good, but a quiet Conscience is to be valued above the greatest Gain; and that Man hath but little Regard of his Conscience, that will venture to expose it to a Wound to get a Shilling more in a Bargain. Wherefore if we would be safe, we must make this a constant Rule of Action, in Matters of Duty to do the most, in Matters of Privilege and Divisions of Right, or Proportions of Gain, in all doubtful Cases, to chuse the least, which to be sure is always the safest. For if in buying and selling I make any Advantage which which I doubt is unlawful, I stake my Conscience at a Lottery, and throw Cross and Pile whether I shall be guilty or innocent; and thus to play and dally with my Innocence is but one Degree of Presumption from being wilfully guilty.

These are the general Rules by which we ought to conduct ourselves in our Compacts and Bargains, if we mean to avoid that crying Sin of defrauding and over-reaching one another; which how crafty and politick soever it may seem to Men that do not regard the Issue and Event of Things, it will in the End be found to be one of the greatest and most unprofitable Follies. For alas, while I am over-reaching my Brother in his Estate, there is an invisible Cheat at my Elbow that is chousing me out of my Heaven and my Soul! So that in fine, the whole Scene of Knavery resolves into this; the Devil is angling with a less Fish to catch a greater, baiting his Hook with my Brother's Property, that so when I have taken and devoured that, he may take and devour me. And so I have done with the first thing proposed in handling this great and comprehensive Duty of Justice, or Honesty between Man and Man, which was to shew what it is, and how far it is extended.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the eternal Reasons of Justice.

I PROCEED in the next Place to shew what those eternal and immutable Reasons are, which render Justice morally good. I have elsewhere shewed at large, that that which makes a thing morally good is this, That its Obligation is founded in some eternal and immutable Reasons: So that we are obliged to practice it by such Reasons as can never cease or change, or alter with Times or Circumstances: And that this is the Difference between positive and moral Duties, that the one are founded upon temporary and changeable Reasons, and so may and will one time or other cease to oblige us; as the Sacrifices of the Jews have done, and the Sacraments of Christians will do; whereas the other being backed with everlasting Reasons can never cease to oblige us. Wherefore to demonstrate Justice to be a moral Duty, or one of those moral Goods which God hath made known to us; it will be necessary to produce some eternal and unchangeable Reasons whereby it binds and obliges us; and of such I shall produce these Four:

First, The eternal Proportion and Congruity, of Justice to the Nature of Things.

Secondly, The eternal Conformity of it to the Nature of God.

Thirdly, The eternal Correspondency of it with the Divine Providence and Disposals.

Fourthly, The eternal Necessity of it to the Happiness of Men.

I. One eternal Reason, by which we stand obliged to do justly, is the eternal Proportion and Congruity of Justice to the Nature of Things. For there are in Nature eternal Respects of Things to Things, which are as fixed and unalterable as the Nature of the Things themselves: As for instance, some Things are naturally more perfect than others, such as the superiour Kinds and Orders of Beings; others are naturally equal in Perfection, such as the Individuals of the same kind of Beings; others are naturally less perfect, such as the inferiour Ranks and Species of _____; and since Nature hath thus ranked and placed Things either above, or below, or equal to one another, every Being in the World must naturally respect every one, either as it is superior or inferior or equal; and these Respects are as inseparable to their Nature, as those Degrees of Perfection are which constitute their Kinds and Orders. So that were all the Beings in the World rational, and understood but their mutual Respects and Relations to one another, they would thereby be obliged to demean themselves towards each other suitably to that Rank and Form of Being wherein Nature hath placed them; and by their Actions to acknowledge themselves superior or inferior or equal to one another, according as they excel, or equal, or come short of one another in Degrees of natural Perfection. And herein consists the strict and proper Notion of doing justly, viz. in treating my Superiors, Inferiors, and Equals as such, in respecting my Equals equally, and my Superiors and Inferiors according to the Degree of Superiority and Inferiority wherein they are placed. So that Justice consists in acting congruously to those eternal Respects, which things bear to one another; or in a practical Acknowledgment that the Beings above me, below me, and equal to me, do bear such a Respect to me as they really do; that they are just so much my Superiors, so much my Inferiors, or so much my Equals, as God and Nature hath made them. For among Beings that are capable of understanding those Respects and Relations they bear to one another, it is a natural Due that they should own one another to be what they are, and mutually signify by their Actions and Behaviour what Respects and Relations they bear to one another; that by Reverence and Submission they should own those above them to be their Superiors; that by Grace and Condescension they should own those beneath them to be Inferiors; and that by Equity or Equality of Usage and Behaviour, they should own those who are level with them to be their Peers and Equals. These are the natural Expressions of our Acknowledgment of those mutual Respects and Relations we bear to one another, which not to acknowledge, is in effect to deny one another to be what we are, to thrust one another out of our Places, and invade each other's Rights and Peculiars. So that in short Justice is nothing else but the great Balance of the rational World, which weighs out to every Part of it what is due from every one in those respective Ranks and Relations wherein God and Nature hath placed them; and so long as there remains any Proportion of Nearness or Distance, of Superiority, or Inferiority, or Equality, among rational Beings, that will be a firm and unanswerable Reason why they should deal justly and righteously towards one another; because dealing justly is nothing else but a practical Owning and Acknowledgment of these Respects and Relations; which so long as they continue, every Being must be obliged to acknowledge, that hath any Capacity to know and understand them. For since God hath given me Reason to understand that all those Beings which are of my own Kind and Order, are my Equals by Nature, I cannot but conclude that they ought to be equally dealt with; since equal Things must necessarily belong to equal Beings in the same Circumstances. And from this Principle whereon that golden Rule is founded, to do as we would be done by, all the particular Instances of Justice between Man and Man are naturally derived. So that the Obligations of Justice, you see, do immediately grow out of the Nature of Things, and those Respects and Relations they bear to one another: And therefore till the Nature of Things be utterly unravelled, and their Respects to one another for ever cancelled and reversed, every rational Being must be obliged to be just; that is, to acknowledge, so far as he understands it, the Respect and Relation he bears to all other Beings; by demeaning himself submissively towards his Superiors, equally towards his Equals, and condescendingly towards his Inferiors. And whatsoever we are obliged to by the Nature of Things, we are obliged to by the Author of Nature; whose Works are as real Signs and Expressions of his Will, as his revealed Declarations: And therefore since he framed and constituted us with such Respects and Relations to one another, that is as plain a Signification that it is his Will we should demean our selves accordingly, as if he had proclaimed it by a Voice of Thunder from the Battlements of Heaven. Since therefore God hath thus ingraven the Obligations of Justice upon the Nature of Things, they must abide for ever, and be as eternal as those Respects and Relations are which Things bear to one another.

II. Another eternal Reason by which we are obliged to do justly, is the Conformity of it to the Nature of God. For Justice is one of the brightest Jewels of God's Diadem, one of those most glorious Attributes which do eternally crown and adorn his Nature, and determine his Will, and direct his Actions. Just and true are thy Ways, thou King of Saints, Rev. xv. 3. Righteous art thou, O Lord, and upright are thy Judgments, Psal. cxix. 137. Are not my Ways equal, and are not your Ways unequal? saith God himself appealing to the Consciences of his Subjects, in Ezek. xviii. Consonantly to all which is the Assertion of Plato, Θεὸς ἑδραμῇ ἑδραμῶς ἀδικεῖ, ἀλλ' ὡς οἶόν τε δικαιοτάτῃ. God cannot be said to be unjust in any Respect whatsoever, but is in all Kinds just to the utmost Possibility. And of Temptation to deal injuriously by his Creatures: He wants none of their Rights to enrich himself, needs none of their Happiness to augment his own; which is so boundless and secure, that it can neither admit of any Increase, or be liable to any Diminution. What then should move him either to deprive his Creatures of any Good that is their due, or to inflict on them any Evil that they have not deserved; when he can serve no End of his own, nor reap any Advantage to himself by it? For all Injustice springs out of Want and Indigence, which being utterly excluded from the Nature of God, it is impossible there should be any unjust Inclination, or Tendency in him. And as by the infinite Self-sufficiency of his Nature he is secured from all Temptation to Injustice, so, by the infinite Goodness of it, he stands unvariably bent and inclined to deal justly and righteously by his Creatures. For Goodness is nothing but an Inclination of Nature to bestow more Good than is due, and inflict less Evil than is deserved; which Inclination being inseparable to the Nature of God, it is impossible for him either to with-hold from us any Right, or to punish us wrongfully, without doing Violence to himself, and committing an Outrage on his own Nature. So that the Nature of God is a Law of Righteousness to himself, by which his Will and Actions are constantly determined to what is just and equal; to require nothing of us but what is possible, to proportion our Burthens to our Strength, and our Strength to our Burthens, to satisfy all his Engagements to us, and not with-hold from us any of those Goods which we can claim by the Title of his gracious Promises; in a word, to proportion the Evils of our Sufferings to the Evils of our Sin, and not to plague us for nothing, or for what we cannot help, or beyond the Guilt and Demerit of our Fault; and whatsoever else is just from a God to a Creature, he is unchangeably determined to chuse and act by the Law of Righteousness in his own Nature. Since therefore the Nature of God is the great Exemplar and Pattern of all reasonable Natures, as being itself the most perfectly reasonable; whatsoever is imitable in it we are eternally obliged to copy and transcribe into our own, and consequently since he is eternally just, that is an eternal Reason why we should be so. By dealing justly with one another we act like God, whose Nature is the Standard of ours; and 'tis certainly fit that all reasonable Beings should deal by one another, as God who is the most reasonable deals by them; that they should chuse and act in Conformity to him who is the Pattern of Goodness, and the Rule of Perfection. And herein consists our Conformity to him, that we live by the Law of his Nature; and therefore so long as that Law determines him to deal justly by us, it ought to determine us to deal justly by one another. So that the Obligations of Justice are as eternal as the Nature of God; for so long as he is righteous, we are bound to be righteous in Conformity to him; and therefore since he cannot cease to be righteous without ceasing to be happy and good, or which is all one, to be God, We can never cease being obliged to be righteous so long as God is.

III. Another eternal Reason by which we are obliged to do justly, is the Agreement and Correspondency of it with the divine Providence and Disposals. For God being the supreme Lord and Proprietor of Beings, all those Rights and Properties which we claim of one another must be originally derived from him; even as the Claims of the Under-Tenants are from the Head-Landlord. All those natural Rights we are invested with, we derive from him who is the Author of our Nature; who by creating us what we are, and uniting us by natural Ligaments to one another, hath endowed us with all those Rights which we claim as rational Creatures dwelling in mortal Bodies, and joined together by natural Relations and Society. So that to deal justly by one another, or with respect to our natural Rights, is only to allow one another what God hath entailed upon our Natures, and mutually to render those Dues to each other, which he hath entitled us to by the very Frame and Condition of our Beings; and for us to with-hold from one another those Rights which God hath consigned to us by the State and Formation of our Nature, is to quarrel with his Workmanship, and declare our selves dissatisfied with the State of his Creation. For whatsoever I have a Right to as I am a Man, I have a Right to by the State and Condition of my Nature; and therefore he who allows me not that, allows me not to be what God hath made me; permits me not to enjoy that State and Condition of Nature wherein God hath created and placed me. For whatsoever I have a Right to as I am a Man, I have a Right to from God who made me a Man; and therefore he who denies me the Right of my Nature, thrusts me down from the Form wherein God hath placed me, and uses me as if I were not what God hath made me; whereby he doth in effect fly in the Face of my Creator, and quarrel with God for making me what I am. In a Word, it is eternally Reasonable that I who am the Creature of God, should pay so much Reverence to his all-creating Wisdom and Power, as to treat every Creature suitably to the State and Condition of its Creation; and consequently to treat Men as Men, that is, as Beings endowed by God with the common Rights of human Nature; which if I do not, I alienate from my own Kind what God hath endowed it with, and so in effect do disallow of his Endowments, and impiously call in Question the Rights of his Creation. For either I must own, that God ought not to have constituted human Nature with such Rights, which would be to impeach his Creation; or that I ought to render it those Rights which result from its Frame and Constitution; and therefore when by my Actions I disown that I ought to render them, I do in effect quarrel with God's Creation for entailing such Rights upon human Nature, and declare that I am resolved not to be concluded by it; but that I will for ever defy the Laws of the Creation, and will not abide by that Rule and Order which it hath established in the Nature of Things. If therefore it be reasonable, eternally reasonable for Creatures to act agreeably to the Order of their Creation; this is an eternal Reason why we should render to one another those Rights which God hath bequeathed to us by the Constitution of our Natures.

And as our natural Rights are derived to us from God by his Creation, so are our acquired also derived from him by his Providence, who having reserved to himself the sovereign Disposal of all our Affairs, is our Founder and Benefactor, upon whom we all depend for every Right and Property we acquire by our Conversation and Intercourse with one another: and that this is mine, and that yours, is owing to the Providence of God, which carves out to every one his Portion of Right, and divides as he sees fit his World among his Creatures. So that Justice as it refers to acquired Rights, consists in allowing every Man to enjoy what God hath given him by his all-disposing Providence: And if God hath an eternal Right to share his own Goods among his own Creatures as he pleases, then that is an eternal Reason why we should allow one another to enjoy those Portions which he hath shared and divided to us. For by depriving another Man of what God's Providence hath given him, I do not only rob him of his Right to enjoy it, but I also rob God of his Right to dispose it. For while I with-hold or take away what God hath given to another, I take his Goods against his Leave, and impiously invade his Province of bestowing his own where he pleases: And whilst I thus carve for my self out of those Allowances which he hath carved to others, I live in open Rebellion against his Providence, and am an Out-law to his Government. For this in effect is the Sense and Meaning of my wrongful Incroachments upon other Mens Rights, that I will not be concluded by that Division and Allotment of Things which God hath made; but that I will divide and carve for my self, and live at my own Allowance; that I will not suffer him to share his own World, nor endure him to reign Lord and Master in his own Family of Beings, but e'en live as I list, and take what I can catch without asking God's Leave, who is the supreme Proprietor and Disposer. So that to deal unjustly by Men, whether it be in respect of their natural, or acquired Rights, is a direct Opposition to the divine Ordination and Disposal; and therefore if it be eternally reasonable for us who are God's Creatures and Subjects, to comply with the Order of his Creation and the Disposals of his Providence, that is an eternal Reason why we should deal justly with one another.

IV. Fourthly and lastly, Another eternal Reason why we are obliged to do justly, is the everlasting Necessity of it to the Happiness of Men: For Justice is the Pillar and Support of all Society, without which it is impossible for rational Beings ever to live happily with one another. For while I deal unjustly by others, I draw all Men into a Combination against me; who having all the same tender Sense of their own Interest and Happiness as I have of mine, must be sufficiently jealous of all Designs and Incroachments on their Rights and Properties; and consequently be ready to conclude from my Injustice towards one, that I am prepared to do mischief to many for the Advancement of my own Ends: So that when once I am remarked for a Person that bears no Regard to Right and Wrong, it becomes the joint and equal Interest of all to declare open War against me, and treat me as an open Enemy without Mercy and Compassion. So that one unjust Man in a Society is a common Disturbance to all the rest, for by every single Injury he doth, he alarms the Jealousy of every Man, every Man having Reason to conclude that he shall be served by him in the same kind, if he should happen to fall into the same Circumstances: And as he disturbs others, so he cannot securely enjoy himself; for how can that Man be secure that acts as an Enemy to Mankind, and for that Reason hath just Cause to suspect that every Man is his Enemy who is conscious to his injurious Behaviour? The Fear of which must necessarily deprive him of all Satisfaction for the present, and of all Security for the future. So that unjust Persons are a Plague to themselves, and others; and like frightened Porcupines they are disturbed within, whilst they dart their Quills at all without them. What a dark rude Chaos then would this reasonable World be, should Justice and Righteousness forsake it; should Rapine and Violence, Falsehood and Oppression reign, and the strongest Arm be sole Arbitrator of Right and Wrong; should all Promises and Professions be converted into Traps and Snares; and every Man lay Ambushes in his Words, and lurk behind them in reserved Meanings, only to wait an opportunity to surprize and ruin every one he converses with? What would the Consequence of this be, but the disbanding of all Society, and the converting of this human World into a Den of Wolves and Cannibals? For by reason of Mens continued Experience of each others Falseness and Insincerity, all mutual Trust and Confidence would be banished from among them; and every one would be forced to stand upon his guard in a constant Expectation of Mischief from every one; and so all their Intercourse would consist in a Trade of diabolical Knaveries, in doing and retaliating Injuries, and in circumventing and playing the Devils with one another. Which would be such a dreadful full State of Things, that I verily believe, were it left to my Opinion, I should rather chuse to languish out an Eternity in some dismal Dungeon alone, and there converse only with my own silent Griefs, than to dwell for ever in the Garden of the World, accompanied with such false and villainous Creatures. But now, do but turn the other End of the Perspective, and imagine that you saw Judgment running down like Water, and Righteousness as a mighty Stream, that you beheld a World of upright People, balancing all their Actions and Intercourses in the impartial Scale of Justice, and mutually weighing to one another their natural and acquired Rights without any Respect or Partiality, the Superiours graciously condescending; the Inferiours chearfully submitting, and the Equals dealing equally with one another! O good God! What a blessed and happy People would this be? With what Content and Satisfaction, Peace and mutual Security would they deal and converse with one another? Here would be no Quarrels or Contentions, no Jealousies or Suspicions, no dark Designs or false Pretences; but every one would converse with every one with the greatest Openness and Freedom, and all would be inviolably safe in each other's Sincerity and Justice: Here would be no justling or rencounting, no clashing or interfering of Interests; but every one would sit happy and contented under his own Vine without any unjust Desire of trespassing on his Neighbour's Inclosure, or disquieting Fear of being ejected from his own. O! were I but an Inhabitant of such a World as this, though of the lowest Rank and Form; how should I despise and pity the most prosperous Circumstances of this unrighteous World we live in? And how loth should I be to change my World for any other, but that of Angels and of glorified Spirits? O Justice, Justice, would Men but call thee down from Heaven again, and permit thee to rule and govern their Actions, into what a blessed World wouldst thou convert this Stage of Rapine, Cruelty and Blood! How wouldst thou separate this dark Chaos, and distinguish its Confusions into Order and Beauty! How soon wouldst thou reform it into an Emblem of Heaven, or lively Figure of that celestial Æther, where all is Harmony, and Light, and Peace, and Love, and Happiness! If therefore it be eternally reasonable that Men should study their own Happiness, that is an everlasting Reason why they should deal justly by one another; since without so doing it is for ever impossible for them to be happy. These are the eternal and immutable Reasons, which constitute Justice a moral Good, and do eternally oblige us to deal justly by one another.

And now what remains, but that we betake ourselves to the Conscientious Practice of this great and comprehensive Virtue, to give to every Man what is due to him either by Constitution, or by just Acquisition; to deal with every Man with whom we have any Intercourse, as with a Rational Creature; to treat him equitably, and do him all that Good which we might reasonably expect from him, if we were placed in his Circumstances; to allow him the Liberty to judge for himself, so far as he is capable, and not endeavour to impose our Opinions upon him by violent and forcible Means; to leave him at Liberty to follow the Dictates of right Reason, and not seek to debauch him by Persuasion or Threatnings, into immoral and vicious Courses; to treat him humanely and suitably to the Dignity of his Nature, and not use him like a Dog, or as if he were an Animal of an inferiour Species? For all those things are due to him as he is a rational Creature, and cannot be denied to him without high Injustice. Again, to deal with him as he is a rational Creature placed by God in a mortal Body; and neither to ravish his Body to satisfy our Lust, nor to maim or destroy it, unless it be in our own Defence; nor to captivate and enslave it, unless it be upon free Consent, or upon just Forfeiture; nor to suffer it to perish for want of bodily Sustenance, so long as it is in our power to support and relieve it. These things he hath a Claim to, as he is the Tenant of God, and cannot be denied without foul Injustice. Once more; to use him as a rational Creature united to me by natural Relations; if he be my Father, to honour and reverence and obey him; if he be my Child, to love and instruct instruct him, maintain and provide for him; if my Brother or Sister or con-fanguineous Relation, to cherish and advise, support and assist him according to my Ability. These are the Dues of Natural Relation, and cannot be withheld without great Unrighteousness. Lastly, To treat him as one whom God and Nature hath united to me in the Bands of human Society, to love him, and live peaceably with him, to speak Truth to him, and when I am lawfully called to swear nothing but Truth concerning him, and perform my Promises and Oaths to him, so far as it is lawful and possible; not to blast his Reputation, but to defend his Person, good Name and Estate, so far as I am able, and to allow him a competent Share of all those Profits which accrue to me from my dealing and intercourse with him. These are the natural Dues which Justice requires me to render him, and which I cannot withhold from him without being injurious to the human Nature within him. And as I am obliged in Justice to render to every one his natural Dues, so I am no less obliged by it to render him his acquired ones; to render him whatsoever is due to him upon the Account of any sacred, or civil Relation to me; not to intrench upon his legal Possessions either by Fraud or Violence; to render him those Honours and Respects which are owing to his personal Accomplishments; or to his outward Rank and Quality; and not to defraud, oppress, or over-reach him in his Contracts and Bargains with me. These are the Particulars as I have shewed at large, to which this comprehensive Virtue extends itself; and Oh that now having seen upon what everlasting Reasons it is built, we would be persuaded to betake ourselves to the serious Practice of it!

CHAP. IX.

Of the Sinfulness, and Unreasonableness of Injustice.

AFTER the Explication of the immutable Reasons and Grounds of Justice, it may be proper to add some Motives, and Considerations against Injustice.

And First, Consider the great Repugnancy of Injustice to the Terms, and Conditions of the Christian Religion. I know there are some People that look upon Honesty and Justice, as one of the beggarly Elements of Religion, a sort of Heathen Virtue belonging to carnal and mere moral Men, that are utterly unacquainted with the Spirit and Power of Godliness: And accordingly in the Room of this, and such like moral Virtues, they have foisted in a sort of Spiritual Religion as they call it; which consists in a certain Model of Conversion and Regeneration, that is made up of nothing but a mere fanciful Train of Dejections and Triumphs, that are most commonly either the Effects of a distempered Blood, or the unaccountable Freaks of an over-heated Fancy: and if they find they have been converted secundum artem, i. e. that they have undergone those frightful, sorrowful, or joyous Passions, which this stated Method of Regeneration includes, all their after-Religion is nothing else but a leaving and rolling on Jesus Christ. And whilst they should be governing their Wills, their Tongues, and their Actions by the eternal Rules of Justice and Goodness, they are imploy'd, as they think in a higher Dispensation; in forming odd Schemes of spiritual Experiences, and attending to the inward Whispers and Incomes, and With-drawings of the Spirit of God; all which are commonly nothing but only the Effects of a melancholly Fancy tinged with religious Fears, and flush'd with a natural Enthusiasm. But whatever it be, it is doubtless a dangerous Mistake for Men to take up with any Religion, which doth not principally insist upon the eternal Laws of Morality; And though Justice or Honesty in our Dealings with Men will never singly recommend us to

God,

God, unless it be conjoyn'd with Mercy, Sobriety, and Godliness; yea, though all these together will never recommend us to God, unless their Imperfections be purged and expiated by the all-sufficient Merit of our blessed Saviour; yet without Justice, and Honesty, all our Religion is a damnable Cheat; and all the Merit of our Saviour will be as insignificant to us, as it is to the Devils, or damned Ghosts. For his Merit is no Refuge for religious Knaves, his Wounds no Sanctuary for spiritual Cheats, or Lyars, or Oppressors: And for such Persons as these, to shelter themselves in our Saviour's Propitiation, is to prophane and desecrate it; and thereby to cause those vocal Wounds to accuse them, which were made to plead for them; and to provoke that eloquent Blood to cry aloud for Vengeance against them, which in its native Language speaketh far better things than the Blood of Abel, Heb. xii. 24. For Justice is a Duty of that indispensable Necessity, that God will not, yea, to speak with Reverence, cannot dispense with it: And so far was our Saviour from ever designing to obtaining a Dispensation from it, that the great End of his dying to obtain our Pardon for our past Unrighteousness, was to encourage and oblige us to live more justly and righteously for the future. For so the Apostle tells us, Tit. ii. 14. That he gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all Iniquity, purifie unto himself a peculiar People zealous of good Works: And notwithstanding all that he hath done for us, he hath plainly assured us by his Apostles, that no unrighteous Person shall inherit the Kingdom of God, 1 Cor. vi. 9. and that the unjust shall be reserved unto the Day of Judgment to be punished, 2 Pet. ii. 9. That the Wrath of God is revealed from Heaven against all Unrighteousness of Men, Rom. i. 18. and that they shall all be damned that take Pleasure in Unrighteousness, 2 Thess. ii. 12. And if these Things be so, then as ever you hope to enter into the Kingdom of God, to escape his unquenchable Wrath, to hold up your Heads at his Tribunal, and not to be condemn'd to everlasting Horror and Confusion; be persuaded to fly from all Unrighteousness, and use all honest Care to deal justly and righteously with all Men.

II. Consider the great Vanity, or Desperateness of Injustice: For if the Wrong and Injustice you do to another Man be such as is repairable, you must resolve to repair it, or to perish for ever. For he who doth not repair an Injury when he is able, doth every Moment continue and repeat it; and though the first injurious Act were transient, and did expire and die in the Commission, yet because it leaves a permanent Evil behind it upon the good Name, or Estate of my Neighbour, I am as much obliged, if I am able, to remove the Evil from him, as I was at first not to bring it upon him, and all the while I neglect to remove it, I wilfully continue the Evil upon him, and in so doing continue wilfully injurious to him. As for instance, when I wilfully asperse another Man's Reputation, my Sin dies not with my slanderous Breath, but survives in the evil Effects of it; and till I have endeavoured to purge his stained Reputation, and to restore him his good Name again by a fair and ingenuous Vindication, I am a Slanderer still, and accountable for all those hard Thoughts, and injurious Words which I have occasion'd others to think or speak against him. Again, when I rob, or defraud another Man of his Estate, or any part of it, the Sin doth not cease with the transient Act of Stealth, or Cozenage, or Violence, which ends and expires in the Commission; but continues so long as the Damage and evil Effect of it remains: Whilst therefore he suffers in his Estate by my injurious Act, and 'tis in my Power to repair it, I continue injuring him; and till I have made him all the Restitution I am able, I am a Cheat, or a Thief, or a Robber. Since therefore Injustice is a damnable Sin, as I shewed you before, it necessarily follows, that whenever a Man deals unjustly by another, he must at the same time either resolve to undo his own Act, or to run the Hazard of being undone for ever; the former of which is a ridiculous Vanity, and the latter a desperate Madness. For what a Vanity is it, for a Man to do what

what he resolves to undo, to slander with a Purpose to vindicate, and cheat with a Resolution to refund, that is, to do an evil Thing with a Purpose to be never the better for it? If you resolve to restore what you wrongfully take from another, why do you take it? Is it so cheap a Matter to be wicked, that you should covet to be wicked for nothing? That you should contract a Guilt which will bind you over to eternal Punishment, with an Intention to part with all that temporary Gain which tempted and invited you to it? What is this but to weave a Penelope's Web, to do and undo, and build Castles of Cards, to blow them down again; and which is more vain and nonsensical, to swallow deadly Poison for our Health and Ease, which we know will rack and convulse us, with a Purpose to vomit it up again, without gaining either Health, or Ease by it? For he who wrongs another with a Purpose to make him Restitution, doth an evil Action with an Intent to get nothing but Guilt by it. You say, you intend to restore to him what you wrong him of, and if so, for what End do you wrong him? Unless it be to render yourself more criminal and guilty: For when you have restored to him what you have wrongfully deprived him of, what can remain to you but only the Guilt of a wrongful and injurious Action? So that for Men to deal unjustly by others with an Intent to make them Restitution, is the greatest Vanity and Nonsense in the World; but then to do it without such an Intent, is the most desperate Madness. For since every wilful Act of Injustice binds Men over to eternal Punishment, and since nothing but Restitution, so far as they are able, can release and absolve them from that dire Obligation, it necessarily follows, that he who deals unjustly by others without any Intent of making them Restitution, doth by his own Act wilfully oblige himself to endure an eternal Punishment. For he knows, that what he gains unjustly from another must be restored, or his Soul must be lost, and therefore if he resolve upon that Gain without an Intent to restore it, he doth in effect stake his Soul to it, and freely oblige himself to endure Hell-Fire for ever, in Consideration of the present Gain he acquires by his unjust dealing. For he who knows that such a Potion, however sweetned and made palatable is compounded with the Juice of deadly Night-shade, and yet wilfully swallow it without any Intent to disgorge it again, doth thereby voluntarily murder and destroy himself: And so who knows that such an unjust Gain, how tempting soever it may look for the present, hath an everlasting Horror and Anguish intermingled with it, and yet wilfully seizes it without any Intent to refund it; doth freely consent to undergo the Evil to enjoy the Good of it, and shake Hands upon this desperate Bargain, that upon Condition he may reap such an unlawful Profit, he will freely surrender up his immortal Soul to the Pangs and Agonies of Eternal Death. For in every Temptation to deal unjustly, the Devil cheapens our immortal Soul, and the unlawful Gain with which he tempts us is the Price he bids for it: And though sometimes he bids exceeding low, yet if we take his Price, though it be but a Penny, we thereby strike the fatal Bargain, and by our own Act and Deed, consign and deliver our Souls to him to be his Slaves here, and his Martyrs hereafter. And what greater Madness can a Man be guilty of, than to sell his Soul and all his Hopes of Happiness for ever, for the trifling and momentary Gains of an unjust Action?

III. Consider the manifest Inexcuseableness of Injustice in itself: For, as I have shewed you at large, all Justice between Man and Man is reducible to that general Rule, Do as you would be done by; i. e. Do all that Good to others, which you could reasonably expect they should do to you, if you were in their Circumstances, and they in yours: And this is so plain a Rule, that no Man can plead Ignorance of it, who doth not wilfully shut his own Eyes. 'Tis true, whilst Laws, though never so plain and useful in themselves, are yet obscure and perplexed in their Promulgation, or over-numerous, they may prove a Snare, rather than a Guide, and make more Controversies than they can decide, and lose much of their force by being spun out into nice and subtle Disputes: they may fall short of their Aim, by not being able to reach the greater Part of those Persons whom they designed to direct; who either have not Leisure sufficient to attend to; or Capacities to understand them, or Sagacity to apply them in all Opportunities of Action. But as for this general Rule of Justice; it is always at Hand, and we carry it about us in our own Breasts: for this is the peculiar Advantage of this Rule, that by it we may very easily discern all the Specialities of our Duty, without looking Abroad, or having recourse to external Instructions. So that by it we may be perfect Lawgivers, skilful Judges, and faithful Casuists to our own Souls: For it is legible to those that have no Letters, and lies open and obvious to the most Rude and Ignorant. We need not search ancient Records, or dark Repositories, revolve and ruminate upon old Sentences, or new Glosses, or rove about the World to examine the various Customs and Constitutions of Countries: we need not soar to Heaven, or dive to Hell in quest of our Duty: For if we will but return into our Selves, and look into our own Hearts, there we may find it copied and engraven in legible Characters. For when any Opportunity of dealing justly by another, presents itself to us, it is but asking our Selves how we would be dealt by in the same Circumstances; and our Answer to that is our Duty to those we deal with: I know very well how I should expect to be used if my Neighbour and I had changed Persons and Circumstances: my own Heart tells me, that I should think it reasonable to expect such Measures from him, and that therefore he hath just Reason to expect the same from me. So that in most Cases of Justice between Man and Man, every Man, if he pleases, may be his own Casuist: for it is but exchanging Persons, and Circumstances with his Neighbour, which is quickly done, and then applying this general Rule to his particular Dealings with him; and his own Heart will soon tell him what he is to do, and very rarely, but never grossly, misinform him. For by thus changing the Scales, and making another Man's Case my own, I take the fairest and readiest Way to understand what is right and due to him: for now to be sure my Passion, and Self-Interest will not incline me one way more than another; and even that Selfishness, which inclines me to wrong another Man for my own Advantage, will likewise render me unwilling, when the Scales are changed, that another Man should wrong me; and that Self-conceit, which makes me apt to scorn and despise another, will make me unwilling to be scorned and despised my self; and so when I consult my self how I would be dealt by, those very Passions which incline me to wrong others, will instruct me to right them. So that there is no Rule in the World can be press'd with fewer Incumbrances, or darkned with less Intricacy; none that can lie open, to larger Use, or be readier to present Application, or more obvious to all Sizes of Apprehension than This, which is the Measure and Standard of our Dealings and Intercourses with one another. So that there is no pleading Ignorance to excuse, or palliate any great Violations of the Laws of Righteousness; since in all Matters of Moment every Man may easily understand how he ought to deal by every Man, if he would but take care to consult the Oracle in his own Breast, and ask himself how he would expect to be dealt by, were he placed in the Circumstances of those he deals with. And when Men won't understand their Duty, when it lies so plainly before them; or won't do their Duty, when they do understand it; what Colour of Excuse can be made for them? Were the Rule of our Duty so obscure as that we could not easily apprehend it, the Weakness of our Understanding might partly excuse the Error of our Wills, and render it pitiable and pardonable, though not altogether innocent; but when it lies so full in our View as that we cannot but discern it, if we will but open our Eyes, and fairly consult our own Minds and Thoughts, our Understanding is acquitted, and our Will only is chargeable with our Folly, and Wickedness: so that now we sin at our own Peril, and leap Head-long into mischief with our Eyes open. But as for Injustice, the Guilt of it is so open and visible, that however our other Sins may be excused by our Ignorance; and mitigated or connived at upon the score of the natural Defects of our Understanding, this can admit of no Cloak, or Extenuation; because whenever a Man deals unjustly by another, his Conscience will be sure to tell him (if he puts the Question to it) that he would not be so dealt with, were the Case and Circumstances his own. So that when we come to give up our Accounts at the Tribunal of God, and to answer for our unrighteous Dealings with one another, they will so stare us in the Face, that we shall be able to make no Excuse or Apology for them; but our own Consciences will be forced to cry Guilty, Guilty, to anticipate our Doom, and when it is past, to approve and second it with a Just and Righteous art thou, O Lord, in all thy Ways. For when the Rule of Justice lies so very plain, and open to our very Faculties, what can be said if we do unjustly, but that we are obstinate and wilful and incorrigible Robbers, that can claim no Indulgence, deserve no Pity, and pretend to no Mitigation of our Stripes, since we knew our Master's Will and did it not?

IV. Consider the Fruitlessness and Mischievousness of unjust Dealing to our Selves. For the usual Bait of Injustice is Gain and Profit, we deplume our Neighbour's Wings with an intent to feather our own Nests, and invade other Men's Properties to enrich our Selves with their Spoils: This is the common Game that Fraud and Oppression pursues and flies at, though usually they fly short or beyond it, and instead of enriching Men do finally damage, and impoverish them. For how successful soever unjust Dealing may sometimes prove to the raising a Man's Fortune and Estate, 'tis in its natural Tendency an effectual way to impair and ruin it, because by dealing unjustly, he makes it every Man's Interest to forsake and abandon him, and in effect sets a Cross upon his own Door to warn all Customers from entering. For who would willingly have to do with a Knave, that always lies upon the Catch, waiting Opportunities to rook and cozen him; with whom he can neither speak, nor act securely, but must be forced to stand upon his own Guard with him, and treat him with the same Circumspection and Cautiousness as Conjurers do their Devils, for fear of being snapt and torn in pieces by him? And how is it possible for a Man to thrive, when no Body cares to deal with him; when his House is haunted, and his Frauds and Cozenages appear like Spectres at his Door, to frighten all Men from his Shop and Conversation? And accordingly you see that Justice and Honesty in Dealing is so absolutely necessary to Mens thriving in the World, that even they who are not Honest, are fain to seem so: but for a Man to seem to be Honest, there is no way so certain and secure, as to be really so; for if he be not, it is a thousand to one but the Events of Things will one time or other unmask and discover him. No Man can be secure of Privacy in an unjust Action, but let him carry it never so secretly and demurely, one Accident or other will draw the Curtain, and bring to light the Fraud and Villany behind it: and when it doth, what will Men say: He has cheated me once, and that was his Fault, but if he cheat me again it will be mine as well as his; and I shall richly deserve the second Wrong, if I will take no warning by the first. So that how much soever a Man may gain by a present Cheat, he is sure, if he be discover'd, to lose his Correspondent, by whom in a few Years he might have honestly gotten ten times more: besides that, either his Resentment of the Injury he hath received, or else his Charity to others, will oblige him to divulge the Knavery, and to warn others by it not to have any Thing to do with the detected Knave that wrong'd and abus'd him. And when once a Man's Credit is blasted by the report of a foul and dishonest honest Action, it is a thousand to one but he will lose back in his Trade all that he gain'd by his Cheat, and twenty times more; and then if once he begin to sink, there is no recovering of him; for Estate and Credit are the two Wings that bear Men up in the World, and therefore if, when he hath clipt the Wings of his Credit, his Estate should fail him too, he must decline and sink without Remedy. For Credit is like a Looking-Glass, which when only sullied by an unwholsome Breath may be wiped clean again; but if once it is crack'd, it is never to be repaired. So that considering all, Fraud and Injustice is as great an Error in Politicks, as in Morals, and doth bespeak a Man to have as little Wit, as Honesty; and in plain English, to be as much a Fool, as a Knave. But suppose the best, and that which sometimes happens, that a Man should thrive by his Fraud and Injustice, and grow great and prosperous in the World; alas! what Comfort can he take in his ill-gotten Wealth; when every Part of it throws Guilt in his Face, and awakens some dire Reflection in his Conscience? For, as I shewed you before, of all Sins that of Injustice admits the least Excuse and Mitigation; the Sense of it clings so close to a Man's Conscience, that he can never pluck it off without pulling away his Conscience with it, and rooting out of his Mind all the Sense of Religion, and of Good and Evil. So that unless the Man turn an assured Atheist, or a stupid Sot, it will be impossible for him to enjoy his unjust Possessions, without great Recoilings and Convulsions of Conscience; because his unjust Possessions will, like the Adulterer's Bastard, be a standing Reproach to him, and a perpetual Remembrancer of his Guilt and Shame. And when that which a Man enjoys and lives upon, when the Meat which he gluts, and the Drink which he guzzles, the Cloaths which he rustles and flaunts in, shall thus reproach and upbraid him; O wretched Man! We are the Price of thy Innocence, thy Soul, and thy Eternal Happiness; for us thou hast damn'd thy self, and freely consign'd thy immortal Spirit to everlasting Horror and Confusion; when his Bags and Coffers cry Guilty, Guilty, and he sees a Mene Tekel on the Walls of every Room in his House, and every Thing he enjoys wispers some Accusation against him; what Comfort can he take in the Purchase of his Frauds and Oppressions; Were it not a thousand times better for him to have lived contentedly on a brown Morsel, than thus to fare deliciously every Day with a vex'd and a tormented Mind; And yet this is commonly the Fate of unjust Possessors, who under the Disguise of a cheerful Countenance too commonly wear woful Hearts, and, like Tragedies bound in gilded Covers, are only gay and splendid without, but full of Stabs and Wounds, within. But suppose that in a continued Tumult of Excesses and Riots, they should make a shift, whilst they live, to drown the Cries of their guilty Consciences; yet in all probability whenever Death threatens, or approaches them in a Disease, and sets them within ken of Eternity, their Conscience in despite of them will rouse and awake; and raise a hideous out-cry against them: for now their Last Will and Testament will set before them a woful Catalogue of uncancelled Guilts, and every ill-gotten Penny they have there bequeathed, will put them in Mind of their approaching Damnation; and dictate Dread and Horror to their Consciences, which in a desperate rage will fly in their Faces, and tell them to their Teeth, that they are Cheats and Knaves and Reprobates; that their Legacies are the Fruits of their Sins, the Purchase of their Frauds and Oppressions; and that for that which they are now bequeathing to others, they have long ago bequeathed their Soul to the Devil, who now stands ready to seize on it, and carry it away to those dark Prisons of Horror, where he keeps his miserable Slaves under a dreadful Expectation of their eternal Judgment. So that should any Man chance to thrive, and grow rich by Injustice, yet 'tis a thousand to one but either living or dying, or both, his Riches will prove a far worse Plague to him than Poverty it self; and if so, who but a mad Man would ever abandon himself to a Folly so fruitless and mischievous?

Fifthly and Lastly, consider the high Provocation that Injustice gives to God. For God, as I have shewed you before, is the Author of those Rights which Men are invested with, whether they be natural, or acquired: and being the Author of them, he is more especially obliged to assert and vindicate them, to maintain his own Bequests and Donations, and not suffer those to go unpunish'd, who presume to purloin or alienate them from their rightful Owners. For he who wrongfully deprives a Man of any Right; deprives him of what God hath given him, snatches God's Goods out of those Hands in which he hath trusted and deposited them; and in so doing robs God himself, and seizes his Goods without his Leave. So that every unjust Invasion of another's Rights is an Injury to God, who is the supreme Proprietor, from whom all Right and Property descends. For since every Man's Right is derived from, and founded on the Right of God, whosoever trespasses on the one, must necessarily invade the other: all that is ours we hold by Tenant-Right from the great Landlord of the World, whose supreme and Independent Propriety is the Ground, and Foundation on which all our just Claims and Properties depend. He therefore who by Fraud or Violence dispossesses any Tenant of God, or seizes any part of the Property which he hath farmed out to him; doth in so doing eject the Landlord, as well as the Tenant, and so far as in him lies turn God out of his own World, and usurp his eternal Right and Dominion. And so long as he holds what God hath set to another, he holds not as a Tenant of God, but as a Robber and an Invader of him: when he seiz'd his unjust Possession, he snatched God's Goods out of his Hands; and while he detains them, he doth in effect declare that he will keep God's Goods in despite of him; that as he hath already thrust him out of this Part of his Creation, so he is resolved to keep him out as long as he is able, and never to permit him to re-enter upon it, so long as he can maintain and defend it against him. Since therefore we claim by God's own Tenure, and all our Rights do finally Issue and resolve into his; he is peculiarly concerned to assert, and vindicate them, because they are all his own. Hence is that Passage quoted by S.^t Paul from God's own Mouth, Vengeance is mine and I will repay it, Rom. xii. 19. for what is Vengeance, but only a Retribution of Punishments for Wrongs, and Injuries received; And therefore since all Rights are God's, and consequently all Wrongs do redound upon him, Vengeance, or Retribution of Wrongs must necessarily be his Right and Prerogative; and it being his, he will be sure to repay it one time or other: and though he may defer it a while out of wise and gracious Ends, yet in the long run it will appear that his Forbearance is no Payment, and the longer he is repaying the Principal, the greater Sum the Interest of his Vengeance will at last amount to. For what higher Outrage can you do to God who is an immortal Being, infinitely removed from all Passion and Suffering, than to break in upon him as you do by every Act of Injustice, and despoil him of his Goods, and rattle his House before his Face; to turn him out of Doors as it were, and shut up his own Creation against him; and in effect to tell him, that from henceforth you are resolved to be your own God; to live at his Allowance no longer, but to carve and divide for your Selves; and that so far as you are concern'd, he shall have no more to do in his own World, but that you will supply his Place in his Family, and order his Affairs, and dispose of his Goods, as you think convenient. Which is such an Intolerable Indignity, as cannot but kindle a Resentment in the most indulgent Nature, and arm even an infinite Patience with Thunderbolts: and accordingly if you consult either sacred, or Prophane History, you will find that there is no one Sin which God hath so remarkably punished in this World, as this of Injustice between Man and Man. For this he hath been observed, to plague not only the unjust Persons themselves with such Judgments, as have echoed and resounded their Crimes; but hath many times entailed a Curse upon their Posterity; which like a flying Scourge hath pursued them Generation after Generation, and marked their Descendants with dire Events, like a Coat of Arms charged with Crosses and Crosslets: For this he hath pursued whole Nations to utter Ruin and Desolation; and 'twas for this that he cut off his own People the Jews, and converted his beloved Sharon into an eternal Desart. And if his Vengeance thus smoke against Injustice in this Life, which is the School of Discipline; how will it burn against it in the other, which is the Stage of Execution! If the Posterity of the Unjust be thus rack'd for it upon Earth, how will the Unjust themselves roar for it in Hell! In a Word, if these temporary Flashes and Eruptions of God's Vengeance against Unrighteousness be so dreadful, how terribly must it flame against it within the bottomless Vulcano's of everlasting Burnings! Wherefore as you would not provoke an infinite Vengeance which you can neither withstand or indure, it concerns you diligently to avoid all Unrighteousness in your Dealings and Intercourse with Men; which if you take Care to do, and to add to your Justice Mercy, to your Mercy Sobriety, and to your Sobriety walking humbly with God, you shall be sure not only to escape his Vengeance both here and hereafter, but also from these Seeds of Holiness to reap everlasting Life.

Judgments,

CHAP. I.

Of Mercy, as it relieves the Miseries of the Soul.

AFTER the Consideration of Justice, that of Mercy is to follow: And the proper Object of Mercy being Misery, it will be requisite in order to the explainning of this Virtue, to consider what those human Miseries are which it relates to, and what are the particular Acts of Mercy which belong to them. Now the Miseries which Men are liable to in this Life are reducible to these Heads: First, Either they are such as do affect their Souls; or, Secondly, Such as do affect their Bodies.

I. The Miseries which do affect the Souls of Men; which may all be comprehended under these five Heads: 1. Sorrow and Dejection of Mind. 2. Errors and Mistakes in Matters of lesser Importance. 3. Blindness and Ignorance in Things of the greatest Moment. 4. Malice and Obstinacy of Will in destructive and mischievous Courses. 5. Impotency or want of Power to free and recover themselves of them.

I. One of the Miseries which affects Mens Souls is Sorrow and Dejection of Mind, which like a Consumption in the Body, preys upon the Soul, dispirits its Faculties, and renders them faint and languid in all their Operations. By Sorrow of the Heart, saith Solomon, the Spirit is broken, Prov. xv. 13. And indeed Sorrow is that Sense of the Soul by which it feels and perceives its own Miseries, and without which it could no more be affected with calamitous things, than Iron is with the Blows of the Hammer. This is the Sting by which all sad Accidents do wound and inflame our Spirits, and with which the least Title in the World can make us miserable in the most prosperous State, and turn all our Enjoyments into Wormwood. Sorrow therefore and Dejection of Mind being the Point and Edge of all our Miseries, is upon that Account a most proper Object of Mercy; whose peculiar Province it is to ease and relieve the Miserable. Whensoever therefore we do converse with the Sorrowful and Dejected, the Law of Mercy requires us to do what we can to support support and relieve them; and that first by sympathizing with them, by sharing their Griefs, condoling their Sorrows, and pitying their Calamities, or as the Apostle expresses it, Rom. xii. 15. By weeping with those that weep; which upon the first breaking out of great Sorrow is the properest Remedy we can administer. For when a Passion is in its Rage and Fury, it is no more to be pacified with Reason and Discourse, than the Northern Wind is with a Lecture of Consolation; and till it hath tired itself a while with the Transports of its own Rage, to endeavour to check it with Arguments would be as vain an Attempt, as to dam up the Cataracts of Nile with a Hurdle; which instead of suppressing their Violence would but cause them to roar the louder, and to swell and break forth into more impetuous Torrents. The best Course therefore that can be taken at present, is to humour and gratify the Passion by condoling with it the Calamity which caused it. For as the fiercest Creatures are more easily tamed by gentle Management, by soothing and stroking and being kindly treated; so the best Expedient to mitigate violent Sorrows is, to soothe and indulge them till their Violence is abated; to conform ourselves to them, and mingle our Tears and Lamentations with them. And accordingly we find that to be pitied and condoled is a real Ease and Comfort to the Miserable; and that so far as we partake with other Mens Griefs, we do translate them out of their Breasts into our own: So that by sympathizing with them, we take part of their Sorrows from them, which like Dimensions may be so divided by us, as to become at least insensible, if not indivisible. Wherefore, since 'tis not the Tears of their own Eyes only, but of their Friends Eyes too, that do exhaust the Current of their Griefs; which falling into many Streams will run more peaceably, and by degrees contract themselves into narrower Channels; it is an Act of Mercy that we owe to the Sorrowful to condole and sympathize with them in their Afflictions. And not to do so, or instead of that, to be either insensible of their Sorrows, or to take no other Notice of them, but to mock at, and deride them, is a certain Argument of a cruel and barbarous Temper. And as we ought to sympathize with them in their Sorrows, so, when they are capable of it, we are obliged by the Laws of Mercy to use our best Endeavour to support and comfort them under their Heaviness, as the Apostle exhorts, 2 Cor. i. 4. sometimes by lessening and extenuating their Affliction, sometimes by applying to them the Consolations of Religion, sometimes by representing to them the Evil of immoderate Sorrow, and sometimes by diverting them with innocent Pleasantry, and Chearfulness. For Sorrow diverts the Mind from all comfortable Thoughts, and like a black Perspective-Glass represents all Objects mournfully and tragically: So that unless others will have Mercy on it and thrusts Comforts into its Mouth, it will have no Mercy on itself, but sit pining and languishing under incessant Grief and Discontentedness. Wherefore to chear and comfort dejected and sorrowful Minds, is both a great and necessary Act of Mercy; as on the contrary for any Man causelessly to afflict and grieve another, to add Weight to his Sorrows, and Wormwood to his Gall, and take Pleasure in his Griefs and Vexations, is not only inhumane but diabolical: For to rejoyce in the Afflictions, and to recreate with the Sorrows of the Miserable, is the blackest Character that can be given to a Devil.

II. Another of the Miseries which affect Mens Souls is, the Errors and Mistakes they are liable to in Matters of less Importance. The Understandings of Men are naturally weak and short-sighted, apt to be imposed upon by Shews of Truth, and to swallow Lyes for Realities, when they are gilded with a fair Probability: And though we make loud Boasts of Certainty, and Demonstration, yet God knows many times our Certainties are the Dictates of our wild Imaginations, and our Demonstrations prove nothing but our own Confidence. For Prejudice, Error, and Inadvertency are as incident to our Minds, as Diseases are to our Bodies; and there are certain Springs and Principles in all Mens Understandings, which do render them liable to be turned about by strange and unaccountable Impulses. And generally our Affections are apt to creep into and mingle with our Arguings, so that in most of our Disputes the Argument on both Sides is commonly lost, and the Controversie determines in a Conflict of Affections. And in a Word, the Generality of Men are unalterably determined in their Opinions by their Fear or their Hope, or their Prejudices, or the Prepossession of their Educations; which, like so many Whirl-pools, having once sucked a Man in, do most commonly keep his Head under Water, and never permit him to emerge and recover himself: And if the Prejudices of our Education happen to be false, in all our Reasonings from them we do only spin out one Error from another, and so our Thoughts wander in a Labyrinth, wherein the farther we go, the more we lose our selves. And as our Understandings are very dim sighted, so the Paths wherein we seek after Truth, are commonly very obscure and intricate: For whilst we rack our Brains with nice and curious Speculations, we generally but delude our Reason with the little Images and airy Phantasms of Things; while we weary our Eyes with laborious Reading, our Books prove often the Tombs, than the Sbrines of Truth; and while we pursue it through the stormy Seas of Controversie, there we are tossed with endless Doubts and Difficulties, which like the rolling Waves croud one upon the Neck of another. And thus we grope to and fro in the dark, and 'tis a very great Acquist, if in our Search after Knowledge we do but discover our own Ignorance. 'Tis true, as for those necessary Truths which are the Fundamentals of our everlasting Well-being, God hath taken Care to propose them to us in so clear a Light, that no Man can be ignorant of them who sincerely inquires after them: But commonly the remoter any Truth is from a necessary Article, the less plain and obvious it is to our Understanding; and therefore if in these we do err and mistake, it is not to be wondered at, considering how weak our Understanding is, and what disadvantageous Prospect it hath. And tho' these our Mistakes are many Times caused by a corrupt Bias in our Wills, by a factious Prejudice, or an over-weening Self-conceit, by a carnal Interest, or a supine Neglect of the Means of a better Information; which according as they are more or less wilful, do render our Errors Sins of Infirmity, or damnable Heresie: Yet very often they are meerly the Effects of a weak-sighted Mind, that is either unavoidably seduced with false Shews, or innocently tinged with false Prejudices: And in this Case they are not our Crimes, but our Miseries. For we can no more be obliged not to err in our Opinions, than not to be Sick or Hungry; all that we are bound to is to understand, as well as we can and if when we do so, we should happen to be deceived, we have a just Claim to Mercy and Commiseration. And the proper Acts of Mercy which this miserable Case requires, are first Forbearance and Tolerance; with all lowliness and meekness, with long suffering, forbearing one another in love; as the Apostle expresses it, Ephes. iv. 2. that is, abstaining from all harsh Judgments and severe Censures, from all peevish Separations from our Communion and Charity, and mutually treating each other with all the Candor and Forbearance, Lenity and Indulgence; that a pitiable Case requires and deserves. For if I am in the Right, and my Brother in the Wrong, to be sure it is my Happiness, and perhaps 'tis only his Misery; and what an unmerciful Part is it for me to damn or censure, or rigorously treat him, meerly because it is his Lot to be miserable, and mine to be happy? What if he hath had the ill Luck to have his Brains cast into a different Figure from mine, by reading different Books, or keeping different Company, or being prejudiced by a different Education; is it reasonable that I should hate or severely judge him, because he hath been unfortunate, and perhaps could no more prevent those little Errors wherein he differs from me, than he could the Moles on his Skin, or the different Colour of his Hair and Complexion: What is this but to load the oppressed, ed, and heap Misery upon Misery, which is the most unmanly Cruelty? In this Case therefore the Laws of Mercy require us, as private Christians, to bear with one another's Mistakes, to make the most candid Judgment and Construction of them, and interpret them in the most favourable Sense; and not to separate from one another for Trifles, or fly out into Bitterness and Animosity upon every little Opinion which we judge false and erroneous.

II. Another Act of Mercy which this Case requires, is to endeavour by all prudent and peaceable Ways to rectify one another's Mistakes. If I behold my Brother's Understanding labouring under the Misery of Error, Mercy will incline me, so far as I am able to endeavour his Relief and Recovery; an Error in the Understanding being as great a Misfortune, as a Wound or a Disease in the Body; and what merciful Mind can behold that noblest Part of a Man diseased and affected, without being strongly inclined to administer what it can towards its Health and Recovery? And as Mercy will incline us to it, so it will direct us to the properest Means of effecting it; for if it be Mercy and Compassion that moves me to rectify my Brother's Mistake, it will move me to endeavour it with the Spirit of Meekness, which, as the Apostle assures us, Gal. vi. 1. is the most likely Expedient to restore him; that is, calmly and compassionately to represent to him his Error, so that he may see it is not my Design to expose or upbraid him, to insult over his Folly, or to triumph in his Confutation; but merely to set his Understanding to rights, and to rescue it from the Mistakes in which it is unfortunately entangled. And this, if any thing, will dispose him to listen to my Reasons, and make way for my Arguments to enter into his Mind; whereas by deriding his Error, or persecuting it with sharp and bitter Invectives, I shall engage his Passion to defend it, as well as his Reason; for witty Jest and severe Sarcasms may provoke an Adversary, but will never convince him. And as Mercy will direct me to treat my erring Brother with Meekness and Compassion, so it will also instruct me to teaze and importune him with perpetual Disputacity; for this will look rather an Affectation of wrangling with him, than a Desire of convincing him; but to wait the fairest Opportunity of remonstrating his Error to him, when he is most at Leisure, and most disposed to attend to Reason and Argument. For Errors, like Paper Kites, are many times raised and kept up in Mens Minds, by the incessant Bluster of ever-fierce Opposition.

III. Another of the Miseries which affect Mens Souls is Blindness and Ignorance in Things of the greatest Moment, which is doubtless one of the greatest Miseries that can happen to a Soul in this Life. For the Interests of Souls are everlasting, they being born to live happily or miserably for ever; and their Happiness depending upon the right Use of their Liberty, and this upon their Knowledge to use and determine it; it will be impossible for them to attain to eternal Happiness, or escape eternal Misery, without Knowledge to steer and direct them, so that whilst they are ignorant of those Truths, by which their Liberty is to be governed, and their Choices and Actions to be determined to eternal Happiness, they are under a very remote Incapacity of being happy. And what a miserable Case is this, to have an eternal Interest at stake, and not to know how to manage it? To be travelling on this narrow Line, or Frontier which divides those boundless Continents of everlasting Happiness and Misery, and not to see one Step of our Way before us, nor to perceive whither we are going, till we are gone beyond Recovery? Should you behold a blind Man walking upon the Brink of a fatal Precipice, without any Guide to direct his Steps, and secure him from the neighbouring Danger, would not your Hearts ache and your Bowels yearn for him? Would you not call out to him and warn him of his Danger, and make all the Haste you could to take him by the Hand and conduct him to a Place of Safety? And is it not a much more deplorable Sight, to see a poor ignorant Wretch walking blindfold on the Brinks of Hell, and for want of Sight to direct him Heaven-wards ready to blunder at every Step into the Pit of Destruction?

Can you behold such a miserable Object with a regardless Eye, and yet pretend to Pity or Compassion? Can you sit still and see him cast himself into the Mouth of such horrid and amazing Danger, without warning him of it, and endeavouring by the best Instructions you can give him to lead him off, and direct him to eternal Happiness? Surely did we but duely understand the Worth and the Danger of Souls, such a woful Spectacle could not but affect our Bowels, and excite us to employ all our Power to convince him of the Danger he is running into, and instruct him how to avoid it. For this is the proper Act of Mercy which this miserable Case calls for, viz. to endeavour to dispel that fatal Ignorance which surrounds Mens Minds, and to enlighten them with all those Principles of Religion which are necessary to conduct them to eternal Happiness. For it is not so great a Piece of Mercy to give a starving Man Bread, as it is to inform an ignorant Sinner and feed his famished Mind with the Bread of Life; because without the former 'tis only his Body will die, whereas without the latter his Body and Soul will die for ever. When therefore we know any Persons to be grossly ignorant of God and Religion, the Laws of Mercy require us to use all prudent Means to instruct and inform them; and if they are in our Power, as our Children and Servants are, to take care to train them up in the Fear and Nurture of the Lord, to catechize and instruct them in the Doctrines of Faith, and season their Minds with the Principles of pure Religion; that so understanding their Duty, and the vast and indispensable Obligations of it, they may not leap blindfold into eternal Perdition. For whilst we train them up in Blindness and Ignorance we do in effect predestinate them to eternal Ruin, and like those barbarous Parents that offered up their Children to Moloch, devote them as so many Sacrifices to the Devil. Wherefore we stand obliged, not only in Fidelity to God, who hath committed their Souls to our charge, and will one Day require an Account of them at our Hands; but also in Mercy to them, that they may not perish eternally for lack of Knowledge; to take all possible care to instruct their Minds in the Duties and Obligations of Religion. And as Mercy obliges us to instruct our Children and Servants who are in our power and disposal, so it also obliges us to instruct others whom we know to be ignorant of God and their Duty; to take all fair Opportunities to insinuate the Knowledge of divine Things to them, and to cultivate their rude and barbarous Minds with the Principles of Vertue and Religion; or at least where we cannot be admitted to do them this good Office our selves, or our endeavouring it may be looked upon as a Piece of Sauciness and Pedantry, to recommend their miserable Case to others who have more Authority with them, or from whose Hands it may be better taken. For sure if we have any Mercy or Compassion in us, we cannot sit still, and see a miserable Wretch wandering in the Dark upon the Confines of eternal Ruin, without endeavouring by some way or other to reduce and light him back to Heaven. Hence 2 Tim. ii. 25, 26. 'tis made a necessary Act of Mercy, Meekly to instruct those that oppose themselves, that is, out of Ignorance of the Gospel, if God peradventure will give them Repentance to the acknowledging of the Truth, that they may recover themselves out of the Snare of the Devil who are taken captive by him at his Will.

IV. Another of the Miseries which affect Mens Souls, is Malice and Obstinacy of Will in mischievous and destructive Courses; which is doubtless one of the greatest Infelicities that can happen to a Man on this Side Hell. For to be obstinate in mischievous Courses, is but one Remove from the forlorn Condition of a damned Soul, which being fixed and determined to Evil by the invincible Obstinacy of its own Will, lies under a fatal Necessity of being its own eternal Hell and Devil: So that every Degree of Obstinacy in Wickedness is a nearer Approach to eternal Damnation, and will at last inevitably center in it, if it be not stopped in its Course and Progress, and cured by a timely Application. Now what a deplorable Sight is this, to see a wretched Soul obstinately pursuing his own destruction, and oven forcing his way to Hell through all the Resistances of his Religion, and Reason, and Conscience together? Should you see a mad Man break loose from his Chain, and run his Head against a Wall, or catch up a Knife or Dagger and thrust it into his own Breast, and repeat Stab after Stab, in despite of all your Counsels and Dissuatives, would you not pity and lament his Case, and heartily wish him deprived of all that Liberty which he employs only to his own Destruction? And is it not a much more lamentable Spectacle, to see a wild and desperate Soul break loose from those Ties of Religion and Conscience which bind it to its Duty and Happiness; and in a deaf and obstinate Rage seize on the Weapons of Perdition, and plunge them into its own Bowels, and by repeated Acts of Wickedness embrace its Hands in its own Blood; whilst the blessed Spirit, with its own natural Sense of God, are struggling with it in vain, and fruitlessly endeavouring to disarm its desperate Fury, that it may not wound it self to eternal Death? What merciful Heart can forbear wishing. O would to God this miserable Soul had no Will, that it had not the Liberty to chuse or act! Would God it were a Stone, or a Tree that have no Power to dispose of, or determine their own Motions, rather than be thus left at liberty as it is, only to murder and destroy it self: But since to wish thus would be in vain, who that hath any Pity can sit still and see a miserable Wretch thus outrage himself, without endeavouring to hold his Hands, and bind him down with Reason and good Counsel? And this is the proper Act of Mercy which the miserable Case in hand requires, viz. When we see an obstinate Sinner resolutely pursuing his own Destruction, to endeavour by prudent and seasonable Reproofs, by pious and compassionate Counsels, and Admonitions, to reclaim him from the Error of his Way. For thus our holy Religion directs us to exhort one another daily while it is called to day, lest any of us should be hardened, i. e. irrecoverably hardened, through the deceitfulness of Sin, Heb. iii. 13. And how acceptable a Work this is to God, St. James informs us, chap. v. 19, 20. Brethren if any of you err from the Truth, and one convert him, let him know that he who converteth a Sinner from the Error of his Way shall save a Soul from Death, and shall hide a Multitude of Sins. Whereas by permitting Men to run on in their Sins without any Check or Disturbance, under a Pretence of Complaisance and Civility, is as much as to say; Sir, you are going headlong to Destruction, and go you are like for me; for my part whether you are damned, or saved, is much at one to me; if you are minded to make an Experiment of Damnation, much good may it do you; I know should I attempt to hinder or disturb you, you will think me rude and troublesome, and therefore rather than I will run the hazard, e'en let the Devil take you. And would it not be a high Compliment, if you saw a Man plunging a Sword into his Bowels, to cry, Sir, I would hold your Arm, but that I am afraid you will be angry with me? 'Tis true, this merciful Work of Reproof and Admonition ought to be managed with a great deal of Caution: If the Person we reprove be out of our Power, we ought to observe the mollia tempora fandi; to forbear him till his Passion is down, or his intemperate Draught digested, till his Mind is sedate and calm, and best disposed to attend to and receive a pious Admonition: For he who reproves a Man when his Mind is disordered by Passion or Intemperance doth but preach Patience to a Northern Wind, which the more he endeavours to resist, the louder it will storm and bluster. But then when he is fit to receive a Reprehension, we ought to give it with the greatest Privacy: If he offend in publick Conversation, where there are other Witnesses of it besides our selves, unless the Matter be highly scandalous, it is sufficient for the present that we express our Dislike of it by the Severity of our Looks; and the Seriousness of our Behaviour; and afterwards between him and our selves, to remonstrate to him the Folly and Danger of his Sin. For to reprove Men publickly looks more like Malice, than Mercy; especially till we have first made Trial of private Reprehensions, and found them ineffectual. But then with our Reproofs we ought to take Care that we do not intermingle Lightness, or Drollery on the one Hand, nor Passion, or sharp Invectives on the other;

other; but that we perform this merciful Office with the greatest Modesty, Seri-ousness, and Compassion; first endeavouring to anticipate the Offender's Displeasure, with kind and gentle Insinuations of our unfeigned Respects and Benevolence towards him; then representing his Crime to him with such a compassionate Sense of the Evil and Danger of it, as may convince him that that which renders us so severe to his Sin, is nothing but mere Mercy and Charity to his Soul: For to reprove a Man lightly, or passionately, looks more like a Design to deride, or reproach him for his Sin, than to reclaim him from it. Lastly, we ought to take great care that the Matter we reprove him for be really culpable, that we do not reprehend him for any innocent Freedom, no nor for every trifling Indecency; but only for plain and unquestionable Trespasses upon Religion; lest he should look upon our Reproofs as the Language of a supercilious and morose Spirit, that affects to domineer and find fault, and as such should despise and reject them. To avoid which it is highly adviseable, that while we reprove what is evil in him, we should commend what is good; that so our bitter Pill being sweetned with a due Commendation, may be rendred more palatable, and so go down with less Difficulty. But if the Offender whom we reprove be under our Power and Government, to our Reproofs and Admonitions we are obliged in Mercy to add Correction, if Necessity requires: for when it is come to that Pass, that our Child or Servant must smart or be damned, 'tis a cruel Softness and Indulgence, not to chastize him. Were your House on Fire, you would think it a Mercy to be rescued from the Flames, though you were dragged out by the Hair of the Head: And when the Flames of Hell are kindling about your Child or your Servant, would it not be much more merciful to snatch him away, though with Smart and Violence, than to stand still and let him perish for fear of hurting him? 'Tis true, Correction ought not to be used till gentler Means have been tried and found ineffectual: For Blows are Arguments for Beasts and for beastly Natures, fit only to be applied to stubborn and obstinate Tempers that are insensible of Reason and Persuasion; But when they are applied, it ought to be done with the greatest Tenderness and Compassion, when our Minds are calm, and our Passion allayed; that so the Offender may be sensible we do it not to wreak our Spleen, or vent and ease our Fury, but meerly to reclaim and amend him: The Sense of which will cause the Correction to operate more kindly in him, to affect his Ingenuity, as well as his Fear, and to melt him with the Mercy, whilst it breaks him with the Severity of it. This therefore is the Mercy which we are obliged to exercise towards obstinate and stubborn Offenders.

Fifthly and Lastly, Another of the Miseries which affect Men's Souls is Impotency, or Want of Power to recover themselves out of their vicious Courses; for a vicious State doth so miserably weaken and disable Men's Faculties, so impair the Health and Vigour of their Minds, that it is not in their Power to help and recover themselves out of it. For to their Recovery it is necessary, first, that their Thoughts should be determined to a fixed and exact Consideration of the Evil and Danger of their Sins, and of the blessed Hopes which God hath set before them to tempt them to renounce and forsake them: And then that these Considerations should so prevail upon and influence their Wills, as to captivate them into a thorough Resolution of Amendment; both which Effects are out of the Reach of the Sinner's Power considered singly, and without the Concurrence of the Divine Grace. For his Mind is so depressed, and bowed down towards these earthly and sensible Objects which have been hitherto the sole Companions of his Thoughts, that it is not able to raise up it self to the Consideration of Divine Things: And though now and then, a good Meditation may break in upon him, and seize upon his Thoughts; yet it cannot hold them a quarter of an Hour together; they are so roving and slippery, so backward and averse to any Thing that is serious and divine; So that unless the Divine Spirit lays hold upon them, and by his Powerful and Importunate Inspirations confines and fixes them, the Man will never be able to reduce them to any fast and steady Consideration. And when with the Holy Spirit's Assistance he hath effected this, he hath a perverse and obstinate Will to deal with; which no Considerations will be able to determine to a fixed Resolution of Amendment, but what are set home upon his Mind, and continually actuated and enlivened with the vigorous Influence of the Spirit of God. So that of himself every habitual Sinner is a most weak and impotent Creature, that with all the Powers of his Mind and Will, the utmost Efforts and Strugglings of his own Faculties, is not able without a supernatural Aid to rescue himself from Sin and Misery. For how many sorrowful Instances do we every Day converse with of Men, who in their sober Thoughts will sadly lament their own Follies, and blush in the Morning when they remember how their Brains were set a float by their last Night's Intemperance; who yet when the next Temptation beckons them to their Lust again, return as greedily to it as ever; and though, when they have repeated their Sin, they curse it and resolve against it, yet when they are tempted, sin again, and then weep and call themselves miserable: but still alas! the same Inchantment confines them to the same Circle? Now in this, Philosophy is at a stand, nor can there any other rational Account be given of it, but only the miserable Frailty and Impotence which Men contract by vicious Courses. What then is to be done for these miserable Persons in this their forlorn and helpless Condition? Why, besides all the above named Instances of Mercy, which we are obliged even for Pity's sake to apply to them; we are also bound in Mercy earnestly to recommend their woful Condition to the God of all Grace and Compassion, to beseech him to commiserate their Impotence, and with the out-stretched arm of his Grace to touch their dead Souls, and to raise them up into Newness of Life. For though in all Cases of Misery, Prayer is a proper Act of Mercy, yet there is none that doth so much need and call for our Prayers as this: For in all other Cases, either it is in the Power of the Miserable to help themselves, or it is in the Power of the Merciful to rescue and relieve them, or their Miseries are such as will quickly end and expire into eternal Ease; but as for the Misery of the obstinate Sinner, it is such as God alone can remedy, and such as if it be not remedied the sooner, will quickly determine in endless and remediless Misery. Wherefore if we have any Bowels of Mercy or Compassion in us, how can we sit still and see an impotent Sinner bound as it were to the Stake of Perdition, and not able to escape, though he sees the Flames of Hell rising round about him; without lifting up our Eyes to God, in whom alone his Help and Salvation lies, and earnestly imploring him to commiserate the perishing Wretch, and to snatch him from his approaching Ruin? Wherefore as the Law of Mercy obliges us in general to pray for all that are in Misery, so more especially for these wretched Creatures, who are already within the Suburbs of endless Misery; and unless God stretches forth his Arm and saves them, will be within a few moments beyond the reach of Prayer and Mercy. And thus you see what those Instances of Mercy are, which we are obliged to exercise towards the Souls of Men: And for the Enforcement of our Duty herein, I shall subjoyn some Considerations to excite our Christian Compassion.

I. Consider the inestimable Worth of those Souls, upon which your Mercy is to be employed. I confess, were the Souls of Men of the same Alloy with their Bodies, whose highest Pleasures do consist in the Gratification of a few brutish Senses, and are nothing else but the agreeable Touches of certain little Skins and Arteries, which are as inconsiderable as a Lutestring; and which, after they have repeated these Pleasures some Twenty or Thirty Years, do commonly expire into Insensibility and Rottenness; were, I say, their Souls of the same Make and Frame, it were not so much to be admired that we are so indifferently affected towards them. But these precious Beings ings are of a much nobler Constitution, their Faculties are made to relish Godlike and Angelical Delights, to drink for ever of that Divine Nectar of Contemplation, and Holiness, and Love, and to feast upon those Joys with which God entertains himself, and all his Choir of Angels: And as they are born to much higher Pleasures and Enjoyments, than those wretched Bodies which inclose them; so they are also made for an infinitely longer Life and Duration: for they must live for ever in inconceivable Happiness or Misery; and when their Bodies are mouldred into insensible Dust, be partaking either of the Raptures of Angels, or of the Horrors and Agonies of Devils. And can I think my self obliged in Mercy to feed and cloath the Body of my Child or Servant, the Body which within a few Days in despite of all my Care and Pains will resolve into a Clod of stupid Earth! and yet be altogether unconcerned what becomes of that precious Soul, which must be the Subject of an everlasting Happiness or Misery? Is it possible I should be so careful and solicitous as I am; to heap up great Fortunes for my Children, that so they may swim in Plenty a few Moments, wear fine Cloaths, and fare deliciously every Day, and at last go down to the Worms with Pomp; and in the mean time neglect that immortal Being within them, which, when all the Wealth I provided for them is shrunk into Six Foot of Earth and a Winding-sheet, must be a glorified Spirit, or a dammned Ghost? Sure did we but seriously consider, with what vast Capacities of Happiness or Misery, the Souls of Men are framed and constituted, and what proportionable Fates do attend them; we should be much more solicitous than we are, not only to secure our own Souls, but also to make a timely Provision for the Souls of our Children and Relations.

II. Consider how much you are interested and concerned in the Fate of the Souls of others, but especially of your Children and Servants. For in this State of Danger wherein we are placed, God hath committed us to one another's Care, with a strict Injunction that we should exhort one another daily, while it is called to Day, lest any of us be hardened through the deceitfulness of Sin, Heb. iii. 13. And if when it is in our Power to prevent it, we suffer our Brother to be irrecoverably hardened in his Sin, we are accountable for it at the Tribunal of God, who will one Day severely charge us for this our cruel Unfaithfulness to our Brother, in suffering him to miscarry for ever, without admonishing him of his Danger, and endeavouring to rescue him from it by our charitable Counsels and Persuasions: So that if we suffer him to fall by neglecting to exhort and admonish him, in all probability he will not fall alone, but pull us down along with him into Eternal Perdition. Wherefore it concerns us for our own Sakes, so far as we have Opportunity, to discharge all Offices of Mercy towards the Souls of others; lest whilst they perish through our Neglect, we should be involved in their Ruin. But then as for our Children and Servants, their Souls are more immediately committed to our Care and Conduct, as being placed under our Power and Disposal by God's over-ruling Providence; which by bestowing them upon us, and placing them with us, doth in effect thus bespeak us; These precious Souls I intrust in your Hands, to be educated and trained up to Eternal Happiness: See you give me a good Account of them; for if they perish through your Neglect, whenever I make Inquisition for Blood, I will certainly require it at your Hands. How then shall we be able to lift up our Heads, when God shall demand of us, what are become of those precious Jewels which he committed to our Trust? If through our barbarous Neglect they should happen to be lost and forfeited to Eternal Misery; if through a wretched regardlessness of their Eternal Interest, we have not instructed and admonished them; if through a cruel Fondness and Indulgence we have not reprov'd and corrected them; or if by our wicked Conivance or Example we have encouraged and soothed them up in any destructive Course of Action; and so they should finally miscarry: Lord, what a dreadful Account shall we have to give, when we come to appear at thy Tribunal!

nal! Where the Blood of our Children and our Servants Souls shall joyn with our own *Personal Guilt*s, to cry aloud for Vengeance against us. Wherefore if we have no Pity or Compassion for them, yet let us at least be so merciful to our selves, as not to omit those Offices of Mercy, which we are obliged to render to them.

III. Consider what a mighty Influence your Mercy may have upon their Welfare. It is not to be imagined how many Souls might be saved from perishing, were we but so kind and merciful as to distribute the Bread of Life to one another, according as we have Ability and Opportunity: How many a dark Mind might be enlightened by our sound and pious Instructions? How many a Head-strong Will might we curb and restrain by our prudent and seasonable Reproofs and Admonitions? And how can we tell, but these our merciful Endeavours may, through the Concurrence of Divine Grace, prove blessed Means of their final Recovery and Happiness? And if so what better Office can we do in the World; or what higher Dignity can we aspire to, than to be the Saviours and Redeemers of Souls? And if by our Instructions and Admonitions, we might do so much Good in our common Conversation among Men; how much more might we do in our own Families? For our Children and Servants being under our Power and Government, will upon that Account receive our Admonitions with greater Awe and Reverence; and consequently comply with them with greater Ease and Readiness. And then we having the Conduct of their young and tender Years, in which their Minds and Manners may be easily shaped into any Form, it is in our Power to stamp upon them what Impressions we please: So that would we but now take Care to instruct their Minds, and regulate their Wills with wise and good Principles and Admonitions, we might easily impregnate their Natures with strong Dispositions to Vertue and Religion; and so by degrees cultivate those Dispositions into a State of Grace, and habitual Goodness. And when this blessed Effect is so much in our Power, what a cruel Neglect is it not to contribute towards it so far as we are able? Should you see a Mother deny a Morcel of Bread to her famish'd Child, when she hath enough and to spare; or strip it stark naked in a deep Winter's Frost, and expose it on the Mountains to be starved with Cold; would you not brand her for a Monster of her Sex, and exclaim against her with the greatest Detestation and Abhorrence? And yet, alas! that unnatural Cruelty which we should so much abhor in another, we our Selves are too often guilty of in a much higher Degree. For by neglecting to instruct and educate our Families in Religion, we deny them the most necessary Thing in the World, even that which is the Food and Raiment of their Souls; without which they cannot live, but must necessarily starve and famish for ever: and therefore by how much more precious their Souls are than their Bodies, and by how much more deplorable eternal Death is than temporal, by so much the more barbarous and inhumane are those Parents who do not institute their Children in Religion, than those who suffer them to perish with Hunger or Cold. For are you such Infidels as to imagine, that they are born only for this Life, and that there is nothing beyond the Grave in which they are concerned? If not, what Account can you give of this your unnatural Neglect of them? If you think they must live for ever when they are gone out of this World, why then do not you take care that they may live in the other World, as well as in this? O improvident that we are! Can we be so much concerned that they may be happy for a Moment, and yet so indifferent whether they are happy or miserable for ever? Are their Souls such Trifles, or their everlasting Fate such an indifferent Matter, as that when it is so much in your Power, you think it not worth your while to concern your Selves so much about them? Wherefore in the Name of God, consider with your Selves, what an infinite deal of Good you are capable of doing them by your pious Instructions and Admonitions; and what an unnatural Barbarity it would be to omit and neglect it.

CHAP. II.

Of Mercy, as it relieves the Miseries of the Body.

I Shall now proceed to the second Sort of Miseries, viz. such as do affect Men's Bodies; under which I shall shew you what Acts of Mercy this kind of Miseries require of us, Now these as the former may be reduced to Five Heads:

First, Natural Blemishes and Defects.

Secondly, Sicknesses and Diseases.

Thirdly, Outward Force and Violence injuriously offered to them by those in whose Power they are.

Fourthly, Civil or arbitrary Punishments inflicted on them for Injuries received.

Fifthly, Want of outward Necessaries.

I. One of the Miseries which affects Mens Bodies is their natural Blemishes and Defects; such as Lameness or Crookedness, the Want of our Senses, or the Disproportion of our Parts, or Features; all which are real Infelicities, for as much as they render our Bodies either less useful to our selves, or less graceful and amiable to others. And indeed our Body being an Object of Sense, is usually much more remarked and taken notice of, than our Soul which is an invisible Being; and consequently the Defects and Blemishes of our Bodies lying more in view, are much more liable to be reflected on both by our selves and those we converse with, than the Stains and Deformities of our Minds and Wills; which being placed out of sight, are less exposed to Observation: Which is the Reason that our Corporeal Defects are so grievous to us, because being so apparent as they are both to our own and others Senses, they do not only upbraid us to our Selves, who being led by Sense or apt to value our selves by sensible Graces and Perfections; but are also prone to create a mean and contemptible Opinion of us in the Minds of others; the very Suspicion of which, if we are not raised above such mean Considerations, will be exceeding apt to grieve and afflict us. In this Case therefore the Law of Mercy requires us not to contemn or undervalue Men, not to upbraid or reproach them upon the account of any bodily Blemish or Defect; but to overlook these as inconsiderable Flaws of their Case and Outside, and render them all those Honours and Respects which the Graces and Vertues of their Minds deserve: Considering that the Body is not the Man, but the immortal Mind that inhabits it; and that many times the richest Diamonds wear the roughest Coats and Outsides; that those natural Blemishes are Infelicities which Men could not prevent, and which they cannot rectifie; that it is not in their Power to order Nature in their own Composition, but that what they had there, was such as they could neither give themselves, nor yet refuse, when it was bequeathed to them; and that therefore to deride and expose them for any Mishap or Blemish in their Composition, is to fling Salt into their Wounds, to fret and inflame their Misery. And yet alas! How common a Practice is this to sport with the Deformities of Men, as if God and Nature had designed them for so many Finger-buts of Scarn and Derision; to make them the Themes of our Jest and Laughter; which is a lamentable Instance of the foul Degeneracy of Human Nature, that can thus play upon Misery, and turn that which is an Object of Pity and Compassion, into a Triumph of Mirth and Drollery: for certainly how light and trifling soever it may appear through the common Practice of it, it is a Sign of barbarous Ill-nature for Men to deride those Defects and Blemishes in another, which he is too prone to grieve at, but yet cannot help, as being his Infelicities and not his Faults.

II. Another of the Miseries which affect Mens Bodies is Sickness and Diseases; by which the Strength of our Nature is gradually exhausted, the Vigour of our Spirits watted, the Activity of our Parts cramped and abated, and our Bodies are rendred through incessant Pains and Weakness not only useless, but burthensom to our Souls. In this case therefore the Law of Mercy requires of us to render to our sick Friends, Neighbours and Acquaintance all such good Offices as do any way conduce to their Support, Refreshment, or Recovery. As first, if their Sickness be such as will safely admit of Discourse and Conversation, we are obliged in Mercy to visit them, provided that our Company will be acceptable; and to endeavour by our Discourse to cheer their drooping Spirits, to intermix their sorrowful Hours with the Pleasures of good Conversation, and to administer to their wearied Thoughts, the Supports and Comforts of Religion. For cheerful and good Discourse is many times better than the richest Cordial, it makes the Patient to forget his Pain, or at least allays and mitigates his Sense of it; it diverts his Thoughts from their sorrowful Themes, and entertains them with brisk and sprightly Idea's, it raises the languishing Heart, and like David's Musick, charms the Rage of those evil Spirits which infest it with their unnatural Hearts. So that by visiting our sick Friends, when they are willing to admit of our Conversation, and able to bear it, we many times prove their best Physicians, and administer to them the greatest Relief and Ease; and therefore if, when we might do them so much good by our Company, we needlessly withdraw or absent our selves from them, we are very much wanting in our Charity and Mercy towards them. But then as we are obliged in Mercy to visit them, when their Case will safely and conveniently admit of it; so we are also obliged by the same Mercy to render them all those necessary Assistances, which either their Souls or Bodies do require and need; to endeavour to awaken their Minds into serious Thoughts and Purposes, to advise them of their Duty, and to resolve their Doubts, to comfort and support them with the blessed Hopes of Religion, and to take all fair Opportunities to prepare their Souls for a happy Death and a glorious Eternity; that so whether they recover or no, this temporary Sickness of their Bodies may contribute to the eternal Health of their Souls. And then in order to their Recovery, we stand bound by the Laws of Mercy to contribute what we are able to their bodily Ease and Refreshment; to be ready to serve them in all their Necessities, and to help them when they cannot help themselves; to compassionate their Grievs, and bear with their Peevishnesses, and to the best of our knowledge to direct them to the ablest Physicians, or the most suitable Means; and if they are poor and indigent, to supply them with all such Remedies as are necessary to their Health and Recovery: And lastly, to be their earnest Advocates at the Throne of Grace, that the God of all Power and Goodness in whose Hands are the Issues of Life and Death, would commiserate their Sorrows and refresh their Weariness, and either remove their Sickness, or Sanctifie it to their eternal Health.

III. Another of the Miseries which affect Mens Bodies, is outward Force, and Violence from those in whose Power they are; such as Captivity and Imprisonment, Persecutions or cruel Torments. All which do importunately sollicit the timely Succours of our Mercy and Compassion. For so, for the first of them, viz. Bondage and Captivity, it is a sore and comprehensive Misery that commonly draws a long and heavy Chain of Calamities after it; for 'tis not only a Deprivation of our Liberty, which is one of the dearest of all our temporal Blessings, but also a Confiscation of it into the Hands and Disposal of our Enemies. And when our Persons are exposed to the Will and Tyranny of our Enemies, what can be expected from them in this degenerate State of Human Nature, but a cruel and barbarous Usage; to be worn out with Stripes and Hunger and intolerable Labour, and to be forced to pine away our wretched Lives is unpitied Anguish and Vexation of Soul; especially if those whom we are enslaved to, happen to be Enemies to our Religion, as well as Country; which is the Case of those miserable Captives with whom our Mercy is most concerned; who being under the Power of those that are sworn Enemies to the Name of Christ, must upon that account expect to be treated with much more Rigour and Severity; there being no Enmity so fierce and cruel, as that which is back'd and set on by Conscience, and enraged with Zeal for Religion. And when Men are ill treated not only as they are Slaves, but as they are Christians, what a hazardous Temptation are they under to renounce their Christianity, and to exchange their Hopes of Heaven for their Liberty, and to enslave their Souls to ransom their Bodies? And when both their Souls and Bodies are thus exposed to Wretchedness and Misery, what woful Circumstances can render them more proper Objects of our Mercy? Wherefore in this Case we are obliged in Mercy, when any fair Opportunity is proposed to us, to contribute to their Ransom proportionably to our Ability; and so far as it is consistent with the publick Benefit, to solicite their Cause both with God and Men; to beseech him to support and preserve them, and to persuade all those with whom we have any Power or Interest, to a liberal Concurrence towards their Relief, and Redemption.

And then as for Imprisonment, which is a Sort of Captivity too; what a calamitous Condition is it for a Man to be shut up in a close and unwholsome Durance, to dwell with Hunger and Cold, and be confined to a hard Lodging, a dark Solitude, or a wretched Company; to be sequestred from the Conversation of his Friends, from the Comforts of Diversion, and from his Business and Employment, and all Opportunities of making Provision for his poor Family? All which unhappy Circumstances do commonly meet in the State and Condition of Prisoners, and render it exceedingly wretched and miserable. In which Case the Mercy which is required of us is, first to visit them in this their uncomfortable Solitude and Confinement, supposing that they are our Friends and Acquaintance; and to endeavour by our Conversation to divert their Sorrows, to raise and strengthen their Hopes, and to cheer them with fresh Assurances of our Friendship; and then to use all just Endeavours to mollify their Adversaries, to vindicate their Innocence, or to Compound their Debts, if they are not able to discharge them. But whether they are our Friends or Acquaintance, or no, the Law of Mercy obliges us, as we have Opportunity and Ability, to relieve their Necessities, to redress their Injuries, and if it be just and feasible, to contribute to their Enlargement, that so they may enjoy themselves with Comfort, and by their honest Industry make Provision for those who depend on them.

And then lastly, for bodily Torments and Persecutions, you need not be told what a Misery that is; for your own Sense will inform you, how dolorous it is to Flesh and Blood, to be cruelly scourged, beaten and abused; to be pinched with Hunger, harrassed with Labour, and dispirited for want of necessary Ease and Refreshment; and therefore as Mercy binds you by the strictest Obligations, not to inflict these Evils upon your Children, or Servants, or any others that are in your Power and Disposal; so it also engages you to endeavour the Relief of all such unhappy Persons, whom you know to be thus cruelly treated; to intercede in their behalf with those their hard-hearted Parents, Masters, or Conquerors, by whom they are thus unmercifully dealt with, to remonstrate to them their Cruelty and Inhumanity, and to endeavour, by such Arguments as are most likely to affect them, to reduce them to a more merciful Temper and Treatment: And if in despite of your Arguments they still persist in their Cruelty, to use all just and lawful ways to curb and restrain them, to complain of them to those who have power to correct them, and to rescue the miserable Wretches out of their Power and Disposal.

And then as for those who are unjustly persecuted for their Conscience and Religion, who to secure their Souls, and their Loyalty to God and their Saviour, are forced to fly from their Habitations and Countries, or to submit themselves, to Spoil and Depredation, to Imprisonment and Famine, Torture and Death; these doubtless are of all others the greatest Objects of our Mercy, because they suffer for our common Master and in our common Cause, which ought to be dearer to us than our own Lives; because our Religion suffers with them, and what they suffer we must suffer (unless we will renounce our Religion) if ever we are reduced to their Circumstances. And can we with unconcerned Hearts behold our persecuted Brethren, flying into our Arms for Succour before the mighty Nimrods of the Earth, with their Souls, their Consciences, and their Religion in their Hands; and with pitiful Looks beseeching us to deliver them from the dreadful Dilemma they are put to, of delivering up their Souls or Bodies for a Prey; without Agonies of Pity and Compassion? And if we have any Mercy or Compassion for them, by what more suitable Acts can we express it, than by a kind and welcome Reception of those who fly to us for Succour, and a free and liberal Contribution towards their Relief and Substance; and by assisting those with the Charity of our Prayers, whom we cannot reach with the Charity of our Alms; or as the Apostle expresses it, by remembering those that are in Bonds, that is, so as to pity them and pray for them, and if it were in our Power, so as to visit and Comfort and relieve them, as being bound with them, and also with the same effect to remember those that suffer Adversity as being our selves also in the Body. Heb. xiii. 3.

IV. Another of the Miseries which affect Men's Bodies is Civil or Arbitrary Punishments inflicted on them for Injuries received. For all considerable Injuries do give us a right to punish the Offender, either by a due Course of Law, or else immediately by our own Power and Authority. If by Nature or Compact the Offender be put under our Power and Disposal, his Offence gives us a Right to correct him by our own Authority; if not, his Offence gives us Right to appeal to the publick Tribunals, and there to exact of him such Penalties as the Law denounces in the case. Now because Mens Souls are out of the reach of all human Punishments, and liable only to the Lash of the Father of Spirits; therefore we can exact no other Penalties of Offenders, but only such as do affect their Bodies with Shame, or Pain, with Loss of bodily Goods, or wearisome Labour, or Confinement of Liberty; all which being miseries to the Body, are proper Objects of our Compassion and Mercy. And what Mercy these Miseries require, may be easily collected from the natural End of Punishment, which is not so much to offend the Guilty, as to defend the Innocent, not so much to hurt or damnify the Offender, as to restrain him from hurting himself, or others; and to warn others, by the Example of his Punishment, not to imitate the Example of his Offence. So that according to its true and natural Design, Punishment is rather an Act of Mercy, than an Act of Revenge; the End of it being to do Good, and not to retaliate Evil; to defend my self, or others against the Offenders, or else to defend the Offenders against themselves, or to defend others against the prevailing Infection of their lewd and pernicious Examples: and whosoever punishes to vent and ease his Spleen, or gratify his Malice with the Hurt and Mischief of the Offender; transgresses the End of Punishment, and under Pretence of Justice sacrifices to his own Cruelty. No Man hath Right to do another Hurt, unless it be necessary to some good End; for to hurt without any Reason is a brutish Savageness, and to hurt without a good Reason devilish Rancour: He therefore who hurts another meerly to hurt him, acts with the Intention of a Devil, who doth mischief for mischiefs sake, and plagues his wretched Vassals meerly to recreate himself with their Miseries, and pacify his own black Rage and Malice. Since therefore the End of Punishment is doing good, it ought to be executed with a good Will, and a kind and benevolent Intention; not to discharge or rage, or tickle and recreate our Malice, but either to vindicate our own Right, or to reclaim the Offender, or to terrify others from his Sin by his Sufferings. This therefore is the first Thing which the Law of Mercy requires of us, in respect to our punishing Offenders, that we should always always do it with a good and benevolent Intention. But then,

II. It also requires us not to exact Punishment for small and trifling Offences: for since the End of Punishment is doing good, it is Cruelty to exact it for slight and inconsiderable Evils: because in this Case the Punishment is a greater Hurt than the Offence. And what Reason can I have to hurt another for such small Offences, as do little or no hurt either to my self or others, but only to gratifie my own Revenge and Malice? As for Instance, suppose that in a Heat of Passion a Man should give me the Lye, or call me by an ill Name, or treat me with reproachful Language; and thereupon I should strike or wound him, or prosecute him with a vexatious Suit at Law: In this Case it is plain, my Punishment would hurt him more than his Offence could hurt me, and consequently my Design in punishing him would be to do Hurt and not Good; and to design to do Hurt is Malice and Cruelty. Wherefore in Case of lighter Injuries, the Law of Mercy requires us wholly to remit and forgive them: and not rigidly to exact the Hurt of the Offender for such trifling Offences, as do no great Hurt either to our Selves, or others.

III. The Law of Mercy also obliges us not to punish an Offender, when we can do no Good by it either to our Selves, or to him, or to others; for in this Case to punish can serve no other End, but to fulfil the Lust of our Revenge and Malice. As for Instance, suppose I have a poor Insolvent Debtor, that owes me a great deal and can pay me nothing; and it were in my Power, not only to cast him into Prison, but to force him to languish away his wretched Life, so what End should I inflict this Punishment upon him? I cannot hope to recover my own by it, for a Prison, we say, will pay no Debts; and where nothing is, nothing can be expected: I cannot design to reform him by it, since Prisons are commonly the most fruitful Nurseries of Wickedness: I cannot aim to warn others by it, for what Warning can oblige Men to do that which is impossible? What End can I propose then, but only the humouring of a wrathful Mind, and to glut it with Revenge and Mischief? and if this be the Point I drive at, I run from all the Rules of Mercy.

IV. The Law of Mercy also obliges me not to punish an Offender, so long as the End of punishing him is fairly attainable by gentler Means. For if when I can obtain my End of an Offender by Persuasion and Forbearance, I rather chuse to extort it from him by Punishment; it is plain that I have a cruel Intention towards him, and do affect to hurt and mischief him; for when I may obtain my End of him by Forbearance or gentle Persuasions, why should I chuse to force it from him by Rigour and Severity; but that I am either insensible of his Hurt, or else do take Pleasure to afflict and grieve him? Wherefore in all such Punishments as are within our Power, the Law of Mercy obliges us, first to try softer and gentler Ways, and make a long and thorough Experiment of the Methods of Kindness, Persuasion and Forbearance; and if by these we can obtain our End and conquer the Offender, and vindicate our own Right, to remit our Right of punishing him, and forbear all Rigour and Severity. For Punishment is our last Remedy, and ought never to be applied to Offenders, till gentler Means have been tried, and defeated.

V. The Law of Mercy also obliges us to inflict no more Punishment on Offenders, than what is absolutely necessary to the obtaining those good Ends we design by it. For he who punishes an Offender more than is needful to the natural End of Punishment, can design no other End by it but what is cruel and barbarous: and whatsoever is more than needful either to the Vindicating our own Right, or the Reforming the Offender, or the giving fair Warning to others, serves to no other Purpose but to gratifie our own Revenge and Fury. So far as Punishment is needful to these good Ends, it is not only lawful, but good: but all beyond what is needful to these, is perfect Savageness and Cruelty. When therefore for the obtaining these Ends, we are necessitated to punish an Offender, the Law of Mercy obliges us first to try lighter and gentler Punishments; and if by these we cannot obtain our End, to proceed in our Severities by Degrees, and not to fly to extreme Rigour, till we have found all gentler Corrections ineffectual. For if a lighter Punishment will do the Work, it is Cruelty to lay on a heavier: and whether it will or no, is no otherwise to be known than by Trial.

Sixthly and Lastly, the Law of Mercy also requires us, always to punish short of the Offence, i. e. where the Punishment is in your Power, and you are not determined by a legal Necessity to use the utmost Extremity. For where you are legally obliged either to judge, or prosecute an Offender, there you are to proceed by the Measures of the Law which obliges you, and which usually determines you to the kind, and degrees of the Punishment to be inflicted: but where the Matter is wholly in your Power, either to remit of, or augment the Punishment, there the Law of Mercy obliges you not to exact the utmost. For if you punish more than the Offence deserves, you are unjust and tyrannical; because as your Right to punish accrues from the Offence that is done to you, so your Right to punish to such a Degree accrues from the Degree of the Offence; which you cannot exceed without exceeding your Right, and exacting more Punishment of the Offender than he owes you. So that every Degree of Punishment which exceeds the demerit of the Fault, is lawless and licentious Violence, to which we can pretend no Right, and by which we do an injurious Outrage to the Offender. And as when our Punishment exceeds the Offence, we punish without Justice; so when it equals the Offence, we punish without Mercy. For the utmost Degree of just Severity admits no Intermixture of Mercy; the Office of which is to relieve the Miserable, and consequently to relieve them, when they have injured and offended us, of some part of the Evils and Miseries they deserve. Wherefore as he is an unmerciful Creditor, who rather than abate the least part of his Due, will strip his poor Debtor to the Skin, and reduce him to the utmost Pinch and Extremity of Need: so he is an unmerciful Punisher, that exacts to the full Demerit of the Fault, and stretches his Right of punishing to the utmost extent, to make the Offender miserable. In this Case therefore the Law of Mercy requires us to follow the great Example of God, who in the midst of Justice doth always remember Mercy; who makes large Abatements of his Right to punish us, and never exacts of us the utmost Plagues and Sufferings which our Iniquities deserve. Conformably to which excellent Pattern, we are obliged in punishing others to intermingle Mercy with our Severities; and proportionably to the Offender's Penitence, or the pitiable Circumstances of his Fault, or the Misery and Necessities of his present Condition, to make an equitable Abatement, and Defalcation of his Punishment. And thus you see what that Mercy is which is required of us with respect to our punishing of others.

Fifthly and Lastly, Another of the Miseries which affect Men's Bodies, is want of the outward Necessaries of this present Life, such as Meat and Drink, Lodging and Apparel; the Want of which cannot but render our Life exceeding wretched and miserable. For what an insupportable Grievance is it to our Nature, to be pinched with an impatient Hunger, or suffocated with a burning Drought; to be forced to prey upon it self for want of other Fuel, or to appease its furious Appetites with loathsome, heartless or unwholsom Sustenance; to see a hungry Family crying about us for want of Bread, and have little or none to give them; to behold our Children shivering with Cold, and drooping with Famine, and not be able to succour and relieve them; whilst our pined and miserable Carcasses are either covered with loathsome Rags, or nakedly exposed to the Injuries of the Weather, and more destitute and unprovided than the Foxes and Birds, for want of a Hole, or Nest where to lay their Heads? These are Circumstances miserable enough to move a Heart of Stone to Pity and Compassion: In this Case therefore we are obliged by the Law of Mercy,

Mercy, first, to a tender Sympathy and Commiseration; to affect our Souls with a soft and compassionate Sense of the Wants of our poor Brethren, to put our Selves in their Case, and represent their Condition to our own Hearts and Affections, as if it were our own; and thereby to endeavour and excite in our selves a proportionable Feeling of their Calamity and Misery. And to this we are universally obliged, whether we are high or low, rich or poor, whether we are in Circumstances to relieve the Needs of others, or to need Relief for our selves; for so the Precept runs universally, Finally be all of one Mind, having Compassion one of another, Love as Brethren, be pitiful, be courteous, 1 Pet. iii. 8. And as we are universally obliged to compassionate those that are in Need, so we are also bound, according as we have Opportunity and Ability, to succour and relieve them. Indeed, if we are poor and needy, we are by no Means obliged to pinch our selves or our Families, to relieve the Necessities of others; for the Desire of Self-Preservation being of all others the most vehement Passion which God hath implanted in our Natures; he doth thereby not only warrant but direct us to take Care of our selves in the first place, and not to sacrifice the Means of our own Preservation to the Needs and Necessities of others. And then our nearest Relatives being next to our selves, we are obliged in the next place to relieve them, and consequently in all Competitions for our Relief and Mercy, to prefer the Wants and Necessities of our own Families. But though we may not be able, without wronging our Families, to give Alms to our Necessitous Brother; yet if by representing his Necessities to others who are better able to relieve him, if by soliciting his Cause and begging Relief for him, for which he perhaps is ashamed to do for himself, we can any way contribute to his Succour and Support, we stand strictly obliged to it by the Laws of Mercy; and this, if we can do no more, will be as acceptable to God as the most liberal Alms. For where the Deed is impossible, God always accepts the Will for it, and reckons all these good Works in our Account, which he knows we would do, if we were able. But when he hath furnished us with Means, as well as Opportunities, to relieve the Necessitous, he expects the Deed, as well as the Will, from us; knowing that we cannot sincerely will the Deed, if when it is in our Power, we do not effect it. Hence is that of the Heb. xiii. 16. To do good and to communicate, forget not, for with such Sacrifice God is well pleased. And accordingly the Apostle bids Timothy, 1 Tim. vi. 17, 18. To charge them that are rich, i.e. whose Enjoyments do exceed their Necessities, that they do Good, that they be Rich in good Works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate. And how necessary the Deed is to the Sincerity of the Will, when it is in our Power, that Passage of St. John doth fully evidence, 1 Eph. iii. 17. But who so hath this Worlds Good and seeth his Brother have Need, and shutteth up his Bowels of Compassion from him, how dwelleth the Love of God in him? This therefore is an Act of Mercy indispensably due from us to those who are in Necessity, to contribute according to our Ability towards their Relief and Support; and accordingly, Alms, which signifies a Gift to one that is in Need, comes from the Greek Word ἐλεημοσύνη, and that from ἐλεῶ, which signifies Mercy; which plainly denotes it to be one of the greatest and most principal Acts of Mercy that we owe to the Miserable.

CHAP. III.

Of Almsgiving, as to the Manner of performing it; and some Motives thereunto.

WE have seen that Almsgiving is one of the Principal Acts of Mercy; and it being so, I shall more largely insist upon it, and endeavour to shew,

First, The Manner in which it ought to be performed: And Secondly, To press the Performance of it by some Considerations.

I. The Manner in which this Duty of Almsgiving ought to be performed; and that in those following Particulars:

First, It ought to be performed with a good and merciful Intention.

Secondly, Justly and Righteously.

Thirdly, Readily and Chearfully.

Fourthly, Liberally and Bountifully.

Fifthly, Timely and Seasonably.

Sixthly, Discreetly and Prudently.

I. This Duty of Almsgiving ought to be performed with a good and merciful Intention, not merely to court the Applauses and Commendations of Men, to bring our Names in Vogue, or to serve our secular Designs; but chiefly and principally to express our Gratitude and Duty to God, and Confidence in Him; who hath not only filled our Cup, but crowned it with an over-flowing Plenty, thereby enabling us to relieve others, and thereby constituting us Trustees for the Poor and Needy, with a strict and inviolable Charge to give them their Food in due Season; to which he hath annexed a Bill of Credit under his own Broad Seal, to repay us the Principal of our Alms with a Thousand-fold Interest: With Respect therefore to these mighty Reasons, and out of a tender Commiseration to our poor Brethren, we ought to perform our Alms; that so like Curls of holy Incense they may ascend to Heaven, and breath a sweet smelling Savour into the Nostrils of God, for 'tis by this alone that they are consecrated into an acceptable Sacrifice to him, and rendered true Piety and Devotion; whereas if we give our Alms merely, or mainly to be seen of Men, or to serve a worldly Interest, they proceed not from Mercy but Self-Love. And since all Acts that are materially good, do receive their Form and Denomination from the Intention; such Pharisaical Alms can be denominated neither Pieties, nor Mercies, but are a sordid Traffick for Applause and Interest; and hence our Saviour cautions us, Take heed that ye do not your Alms before Men, to be seen of them; otherwise ye have no Reward of your Father which is in Heaven: Therefore when thou dost thine Alms, do not sound a Trumpet before thee, as the Hypocrites do in the Synagogues, and in the Streets, that they may have Glory of Men; Verily I say unto you, they have their Reward, Matth. vi. 1, 2.

II. This Duty of Almsgiving ought to be performed with Justice and Righteousness, that is, we ought not to give that in Alms which is none of our own, supposing it hath a rightful Owner, to whom we can make a Restitution of it. For what we have wrongfully got, is none of ours, but his whom we have wrongfully deprived of it; and to him we are bound in Conscience to restore it, in Case he be living, and we know where to find him; if not, to his lawful Heirs, or Assigns: But if either the Party be dead whom we have wrong'd of it, or we cannot find him, or any Heir of his, that can lawfully claim it; it is not only lawful, but necessary for us to bestow it upon the Poor and Needy. For where there is no visible Owner, the Property reverts immediately into the Hands of the Supreme Lord of the World; who hath settled it as a Pension on the Poor, to eek out the narrow Provisions which his Providence hath made for them. But to give Alms out of those unlawful Gains, which we are obliged in Justice to restore to the rightful Owners, is to make our selves the Thieves, and the Poor the Receivers. For to do Alms, is to give away something of our own to remedy another's Want or Misery; and therefore to give away one Man's Right, to supply another's Necessity, is not so much an Alms, as a Robbery. By this Rule therefore Debtors that owe more than they can pay, are obliged in Conscience not to intrench upon their Justice by their Mercy; nor to disable themselves from being just to their Creditors, by being merciful to the Poor. For though to relieve the Poor be nakedly, and abstractedly good yet it is to be considered, that particular Actions are good, or bad, according as the Circumstances are, which adhere to them: And when that Action which is nakedly good, happens to be cloathed with an evil Circumstance, it is so far evil and unlawful. And therefore when my relieving the Poor is accompanied with this evil Circumstance, of defrauding my Creditors of their Due, I am so far bound in Conscience not to relieve them; because if I do, I must relieve them unjustly: This therefore we are especially to take Care of, that our Alms be just and righteous.

dead

III. This Duty of Almsgiving ought to be performed readily and cheerfully. For this is the Apostle's own Direction. Every Man according as he purposeth in his Heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of Necessity; for God loveth a cheerful Giver, 2 Cor. ix. 7. And indeed if we give Alms out of a Principle of Mercy and Compassion, it is impossible but we must do it cheerfully; because by Compassion we make others Miseries our own, and so by relieving them, we relieve our selves, and are Partakers with them in the Comfort of those Reliefs we afford them. For when I see a Man struggling with Want, and groaning under a sharp Necessity, if I relieve him, I ease and refresh my own yearning Bowels; and the Human Nature within me, which is common to us both, doth by a kind of sympathetick Motion, exalt and raise up it self, and swells with a generous Pleasure. So that if Mercy be the Spring of my Alms, they will flow with a free and cheerful Current, because all the while I am watering others, I shall feel the Refreshment of my own Streams. When therefore we bestow our Alms with a grudging and unwilling Mind, 'tis plain that it is not Mercy, but Shame, or Fear; or Importunity that moves us, and if so, there is no Virtue in them, nor can we expect that any Reward should attend them. For to contribute towards another's Relief, because we are ashamed, or afraid to do otherwise, is rather paying a Tax, than giving an Alms, and when nothing can be wrung out of me, but what is distrained by Importunity, I give not for the Poor's Relief, but for my own Peace and Quiet: And what Virtue is it for a Man to give, only to get rid of a Dun, and ease himself of a troublesome Importunity? Wherefore to render our Alms virtuous, and rewardable; it is necessary that they should be performed with a free and cheerful Heart; that they should flow, like Water from a Spring, in natural and unforced Streams, and not be pump'd from us with Shame, or Importunity.

IV. This Duty of Almsgiving ought to be performed liberally, and bountifully; according to the Proportion of our Estate and Abilities. For the Design of those Alms which are the Fruits of Mercy, is to redress the poor Man's Misery, to satisfie his hungry Bowels, and rescue him from the pinching Necessities under which he groans and languishes: And this being the Design of Mercy, it measures its Alms accordingly, and proportions them to the craving Necessities it supplies. And its Aim being not only to rescue the Miserable from extreme Misery; but also according to its Power, to render them Happy; it doth not think it sufficient to rescue the Necessitous from extreme Want and Famine, but doth also covet to render their Lives Happy, and give them a comfortable Enjoyment of themselves. For merely to keep a Man from famishing, looks rather like a Design to prolong his Torment, and spin out the Duration of his Misery, than to contribute to his Ease and Happiness; and if we design his Happiness, as we must do if we design mercifully, we shall endeavour not only to enable him to live, but to live comfortably, and accordingly proportion our Alms. 'Tis true, the Liberality of our Alms is to be measured, not according to the Quantity of them; but according to the Proportion they bear to our Power and Ability; and though I should give five times less than one who hath ten times my Estate, yet I should be as liberal as he, according to the Proportion of my Ability: And accordingly the indigent Widow's two Mites are pronounced by our Saviour a more liberal Alms, than the much more which those which were rich cast into the Treasury, Mark xii. 42, 43, 44. Because they cast in of their Abundance, but she of her Want. And therefore though (as I shall shew by and by) it is impossible to determine the Measures of Alms, which we are obliged to, because the particular Measure of our Ability is so various; yet this to be sure the Law of Mercy exacts, that in Proportion to our Estates and Circumstances, they should be liberal and bountiful. For he who gives in such slender Proportions as bring little or no Relief to the Receiver, acts as if he design'd rather to mock him, than to supply his Necessities; or as if he intended rather to keep him alive for a Prey to a long and lingering Misery, than to render his Life happy and comfortable.
the

V. This Duty of Almsgiving ought to be perform'd timely and seasonably, i. e. in the Nick of Opportunity, when the poor Man's Necessities call loudest for it, and our Relief and Succour may be most beneficial to him. To such Poor indeed as do always want, our Alms can never be unseasonable, because their Necessities do always call for them: But there are some particular Seasons when their Wants call louder, as in Times of Sickness; or Scarceness of Work; or Dearness of Provisions; or in the Beginning of Arrests; before the Prison hath devoured them; or after a great Loss, when their Fortunes are sinking; and a small Support may keep their Heads above Water; or in a Word, when they are young and capable of Work, or Instruction, and their Parents are not able to dispose of them, when the placing them out to some honest Calling may prevent their turning Thieves or Beggars, and render them useful to the World; or when they are setting up their Trades with an insufficient Stock, and a little Help may encourage their Diligence, and advance them to a comfortable Livelihood. These and such like are the proper Seasons of Almsgiving; in which by tending our helping Hand, we may rescue many a poor Wretch out of a deep Abyss of Misery, and render their future Condition happy and prosperous. Wherefore the Law of Mercy obliges us, not only to bestow our Alms, but to bestow them at such Times and Seasons wherein they are most needed, and may do the greatest Good; that we should not reserve them to our last Will and Testament, like Medlars that are never good till they are rotten; but embrace all Opportunities, while we are living, to give timely Reliefs to the Necessitous. For he who defers his Alms, when such proper Seasons are presented, is so far the Cause of all the consequent Calamities which the Poor do suffer by the Want of them: And since the Design of Mens Alms is to relieve the Sufferings of the Poor, 'tis doubtless a Degree of Cruelty to prolong their Sufferings, by needlessly delaying to relieve them. You would think her a cruel Mother, that having Bread enough and to spare, should rather chuse to afflict her Child with a long, unsatisfied Hunger, than to content its craving Appetite, by giving it its Food in due Season: And sure 'tis a great Defect of Compassion unnecessarily to prolong the Sufferings of our indigent Brother, though it be but for a Day or an Hour, when we have a present Opportunity to relieve him: And since whatsoever Relief we do design him, he must necessarily lose so much of it as the Time of our Delay amounts to; Mercy obliges us to relieve him quickly, and not to suffer him to pine away, whilst our Charity is growing.

Sixthly and lastly, This Duty of Almsgiving ought to be performed discreetly and prudently: For thus the Psalmist tells us, Psal. cxii. 5. A good Man sheweth favour and lendeth, and will guide his Affairs with Discretion. And indeed unless Prudence be the Dispenser of our Alms, Mercy will miss of what it aims at and designs by them; which is to do good to the Poor, to supply their craving Necessities, and give them a comfortable Enjoyment of themselves: Instead of which, if we do not manage our Charities with Prudence, we shall many times create Necessities by supplying them, and increase and multiply the Miseries of the World by an unskilful Endeavour to redress them. For it is with Alms, as it is with Estates, where half of the Riches doth consist in the Discretion of the Owner; and those very Charities, which being distributed by a blind Superstition, or a foolish Pity, do many times do more Hurt than Good; might have been improved into a plentiful Provision for the Necessities of the World, had they been wisely ordered and disposed. But what Harvest can the World reap from this precious Seed of our Alms, when they are sown with a careless, or unskilful Hand? When they are either thrown on a Heap to useless or superstitious Purposes, or scattered at all Adventures without any Distinction of the cultivated from the fallow Ground; so that the Birds of Preys, the useless Vagrants, Drones and Beggars devour and eat them up, whilst the Modest, Impotent and Laborious Poor are utterly destitute and unprovided? Since therefore the Design of Mercy is to do Good with its Alms, to comfort and relieve the Poor, and supply their pinching Necessities; it is doubtless very necessary in order to this End, that it should be conducted by Prudence and Discretion; which ought more particularly to guide and direct our Alms; First, in the Method of Provision of them. Secondly, In the Choice of the Objects of them. Thirdly, In the Nature and Quality of them. Fourthly, As to the Proportions of them. Fifthly, In the Manner of bestowing them.

I. We ought to exercise our Prudence as to the Method of providing our Alms. For herein Prudence will direct us, not only to be Frugal in our Expenses, to pare off our Superfluities, and to be diligent and industrious in our Callings, that we may have to give them that need; but also out of our Incomes and Profits to consecrate a considerable Proportion to pious and charitable Uses. And herein the Apostle gives us an excellent Rule, 1 Cor. xvi. 2. Upon the first Day of the Week let every one of you lay by him in Store as God hath prospered him, that there be no Gatherings when I come: which though it doth not carry with it a necessary and indispensable Obligation, it being impossible for many Men to take a weekly Account how God hath prospered them, and to lay by accordingly; yet thus far at least it is a very wise Direction to us, that as oft as we cast up our Accounts, whether it be weekly, monthly, or annually, we should in Proportion to our Increase devote some convenient Share of it, as a private Bank or Treasury for charitable Uses; that so we may not be to seek for Alms upon sudden and emergent Occasions, but may have a Store ready by us, to supply our daily Expence and Distribution. And if we take care not to alienate, or imbezile what we have thus devoted to our private Corban, we shall always give with Chearfulness, having by us a Stock designed to no other End but that of Charity.

II. We ought also to exercise our Prudence in the Choice of the Objects of our Charity, so as to take care that they be such as do truly need and deserve it. For unless we do so, we shall many times encourage Vice, instead of relieving Poverty; and be tempted by the clamorous Importunities of idle and vicious Persons, to prostitute our Alms to their Sloth and Intemperance. For how often do we see the imprudent Charities of well disposed Minds poured into those Sinks of Filthiness; and like the Sacrifices of Bel, devoted to the importunate Lusts of a Company of idle Drones and Beggars; that are not so properly the Members, as the Wens of the Body Politick, as being utterly useless to all its natural Ends, and only serving to deform and bring Diseases upon it, and to draw away the Nourishment of it from its useful Parts and Members? Now what a Shame and Pity is it, that these precious Fruits of Mercy should be thus abused and misemployed, to pamper a Company of devouring Vermin; whose Business it is to croak about the Streets, and wander from Door to Door; whilst many a poor industrious Family, that hath more Mouths to feed than Hands to work, lies drooping under its Wants and Necessities? Wherefore though the former are not to be altogether neglected, when their Needs are real and urgent; yet certainly Prudence will direct our Charity to such Persons, as have either fallen from Riches to Poverty, and consequently are less able to toil and drudge for Bread, or else to such as are either worn out by Labour, or disabled from it by Sickness, or oppressed with such a numerous Charge of Children, as do exceed their utmost Industry to maintain. In such good Grounds as these, Prudence will advise us to sow the main of our Charities, and not to throw it away with a careless Hand upon the barren Rocks and Highways, to be devoured by Vermin, and Birds of Prey.

III. We ought to exercise our Prudence, in determining the Nature and Quality of our Alms. And herein Prudence will direct us, to prefer those Alms which may serve a poor Man for a constant Provision, and put him in a fixed Way of Living, before those which are transient, and do only help in a Pang of Need; which do just hold him up from perishing for an Hour, but do not take him out of the deep Waters. Wherefore if the Person, to whom we design a Relief, be fit and able to work, or hath been bred up in any honest Occupation, 'tis a much wiser Charity, to provide him an Employment, or to contribute towards the Setting him up in his Trade, than barely to relieve his present Necessity; because by this means we relieve him both for the present and the future, and convert our Alms into a standing Maintenance. Upon which Account 'tis doubtless a very prudent Charity to contribute to the Erection and Maintenance of Publick Work-houses for the Poor, where they and their Children may be provided with such Work as they are capable of; and thereby be inured to Industry, and enabled to support themselves. And as prudent Charity prefers such Alms as do draw after them a lasting Effect and Benefit, before such as do only supply a transient Necessity; so it also chuses, if it be consistent with Convenience, to give its Alms in kind, rather than in Value, to give Cloaths to the Naked, and Food to the Hungry, Physick to the Sick, and Books to the Uninstructed: for though Money indeed will answer all these Needs, yet we are not sure it will be always laid out upon them.

IV. We ought to exercise our Prudence also in stating the Proportions of our Charity; that is, what Proportion of our Income, or Increase we ought to devote to charitable Uses, and in what Proportion we ought to distribute. For as for the first of these, when all is done, every Man must be his own Casualist. The Jews indeed had a Proportion fix'd and stated to their Hands; for there was a double Tithing prescribed to them by the Law of Moses, viz. the every Year's Tithing, which was an annual tenth Part of their Increase, for the Maintenance of their Priests and Sacred Officers; and then there was a third Year's Tithing, which amounted to the thirtieth Part of their Increase, and that was devoted for the Supply and Maintenance of the Poor: And if such a Proportion were required of the Jews, we may be sure a greater is required of us, whose Righteousness must exceed the Righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, if ever we mean to enter into the Kingdom of God. But since God hath not determined the exact Proportions of our Charity, it is impossible for us to do it, where there are such different Circumstances and Abilities in this Matter; therefore we must leave Men, who best understand their own Condition, to the Guidance of their own Conscience and Discretion; who are in the first Place to consider what is requisite to support them in the Condition of their Birth, their Place, or Office, or Family, and to the Discharge of their several Obligations. For Prudence doth not require of all the same Proportions of Charity; some may afford a twentieth, others a thirtieth, and to others whose Children and Dependants are numerous, or whose Fortunes are clogged and entangled, the hundredth Part may be over-measure. Wherefore according as the Heap is, the wise Man is to sow and distribute: subtracting not only what will support his Life, but also what will maintain the Decency of his Estate and Person; and that not only as to present Needs, but also as to future Necessities, and very probable Contingencies. But yet in the Stating of this Matter, it is doubtless much safer to exceed, than to fall short of our due Proportions; for as for exceeding, we have many holy Persons for our Precedents; we have Christ himself for our Voucher in the fore-named Case of the Poor Widow, and a vast Treasure in Heaven for our Reward. Wherefore in the Determination of this Case, Christian Prudence will direct us not to be too nice and curious, too fond and partial to our Selves, in stretching our Needs and Conveniences beyond their just Dimensions; but to take easie and moderate Measures of them, and to spare what may be decently spared from superfluous Servants, idle Meetings, unnecessary Feasts, and chargeable Garments, and Diversions; and if we thus pare off our needleless Expence, and lay aside the Surplusage for Charity, the Consequence will be this; the Poor will be more plentifully relieved, and our Selves will be more able to do it, and we shall reap more Pleasure and Profit from laying out upon the Back and Bellies of the Poor; than from wasting it on our own Vanity. And now having fixed the Proportions of your Estates for Charity, you ought in the next Place to advise with your Prudence in what Proportions to distribute it: and here Prudence will direct you to differ in your Distributions, according to the different Circumstances of those whom you design to relieve by them. To such as are of a lower Rank, Prudence directs to give by little and little, according to their emergent Necessities; yet so as not always to limit your Alms to their bare Necessities, but sometimes to extend them even to their Refreshment and Recreation: that so together with their Toil and Drudgery, they may now and then enjoy some Sabbath for the Ease of Human Nature: But to such whose Fortunes are by Loss and Accident sunk and declined, both Decency and Mercy requires us to enlarge the Proportion of our Alms; considering how great a Fall it is from Plenty to Necessity, and consequently how much more is necessary to raise up such dejected Creatures, who are so unexperienced to Misery, into any Degree of Comfort or Self-enjoyment.

tenth

Fifthly and Lastly, We ought to exercise our Prudence also in the Manner of bestowing and conveying our Alms; so as that we may oblige both by what we give, and by the way of our giving it. And accordingly Prudence will sometimes direct us to search and find out just Needs, and prevent the Poor from asking, by surprizing them with a Kindness which they did not look for: By which Means we shall strengthen their Faith in the Providence of God, who thus creates them Friends out of the Dust, and brings them Supplies without, and beyond their Expectations. And then in giving, Prudence dence will direct us not to upbraid the Want, or insult over the Miseries of those we give to; for that would be to feed them with a Bit and a Knock, and to sophisticate our Mercy with Cruelty. And when any miserable Creature would borrow, or beg of us, Prudence will advise us not to turn him away with Scorn; nor yet to remove him at a Distance, with Signs of Disdain, or contemptuous Violence; but if we see Reason to grant him his Request, to do it with ready and open Hand, that so the Freedom of our Charity may raise and enhance the Comfort of it; and that that which we design for a Relief and Succour, may leave no Sting behind it in the Mind of the Receiver. And above all we ought to take especial Care, not to oppress the Modesty of the Humble, especially of those who have been wont to give, and not to receive; not to relieve them with lofty Looks, or angry Words, or a scornful and severe Behaviour; not to expose their Poverty by the divulging our Charity, or conveying it to them in the open View of the World; but to hand our Relief to them in such a secret and benign, courteous and obliging Manner, as that they may receive it with Cheerfulness, and without Blushing and Confusion. And then as for those whose constant Necessities have habituated them to ask, and receive with more Confidence, and Assurance; our Prudence will direct us to convey our Alms to them with such a Mixture of Severity and Sweetness, as neither to encourage them to grow upon our Charity, nor drive them into Desperation of it.

I now proceed to press and enforce the Practice of this great Duty, with some Motives and Arguments, which are these that follow. First, Almsgiving is imposed upon us as a necessary Part of our Religion. Secondly, 'Tis recommended to us by the Examples of God, and of our Saviour. Thirdly, it is a substantial Expression of our Love and Gratitude to God, and our Saviour. Fourthly, it charges an high Obligation to us upon the Accounts of God and our Saviour.

I. Consider that to give Alms is imposed upon us as a necessary Part of our Religion; that is, when God hath furnished us with Abilities and Opportunities to do it. For where we cannot give Money to relieve the Poor, our Pity and our Prayers are accepted for Alms: For if there be a willing Mind, (says the Apostle) that is a Charitable Heart, it is accepted according to that a Man hath, and not according to that he hath not, 2 Cor. viii. 12. But where a Man hath, it is his indispensable Duty to do accordingly; for pure Religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their Affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the World, Jam. i. 27. And that this Visitation is to be performed with an open and a liberal Hand, the same Apostle informs us, Jam. ii. 15, 16. If a Brother or a Sister be naked and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, depart in Peace, be ye warmed and filled, notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the Body, what doth it profit? That is, if instead of Food and Raiment, you only give him fair Words and good Wishes, what doth it profit him? Or what Advantage can you expect to reap by it? And to the same purpose, 1 John iii. 17. But whose hath this World's good, and seeth his Brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the Love of God in him? That is, let him pretend what he pleases, he hath not one Spark of Love to God or true Religion in his Bosom. So that for Men to pretend to Religion, who are able to relieve the Poor, and yet refuse it, is one of the greatest Mockeries in the World; for howsoever Mens Covetousness may bribe their Conscience to dispense with the Obligations of Almsgiving, as if it were only a carnal Ordinance, or useless Relique of Popery; a holy Cheat, a devout Drunkard, a pious Fornicator are not greater Contradictions in the Sense of Scripture, than a hard-hearted, a stingy, and a Hide-bound Saint. For though our Religion doth by no means warrant us in such a vain and fond Opinion of our good Works, as to think we merit Heaven by them; or to presume to drive a Bargain with God, by putting our good Works into the Balance with an infinite and eternal Reward, our Hopes of which we wholly owe to the infinite Goodness of God through Jesus Christ; yet it requires them of us as a necessary Condition, upon which God hath entailed all our future Bliss, and without which we can never hope for Admittance into the Kingdom of God. So that if we are able to relieve the Poor, and yet will not when we have Opportunity; by shutting up our Bowels against them, we shut the Door of Heaven against our selves; and must one Day expect to receive the same Answer from God, that we give to them; I have nothing for you, no Mercy, no Heaven for such unmerciful Wretches, as would rather suffer their poor Brethren to perish, than part with a Penny to relieve them. For of this Doom our Saviour himself hath fairly forewarned us, Matth. xxv. 41, 42, 43. Go ye cursed into everlasting Fire; for when I was hungry, ye fed me not, when I was naked, ye clothed me not: So that from any Encouragement our Religion gives us, we may as well hope to go to Heaven without Faith and Repentance, as without giving of Alms according to our Ability and Opportunity.

into

II. Consider that giving of Alms is highly recommended to us by the Examples of God, and our Saviour. For as for God, the whole Series of his Providence is little else but a continued Dole of Alms and Charities to his Creatures: It was his Charity that founded this vast and magnificent Hospital of the World, that stocked it with such a numberless Swarm of Creatures, and endowed it with such plentiful Provisions for the Support and Maintenance of them all; so that we do all of us live upon his Alms, and depend upon his boundless Charity, for every Breath of Air we draw; for every Bit of Bread we eat, and for every Rag of Clothes we wear. And indeed what are all the good Things of this World but so many Effluxes and Arguments of his Almighty Liberality? Look every where about Nature, consider the whole Tenor of his Providence, survey all the Works and Actions of his Hands, and you shall find them all conspiring in that amiable Character the Psalmist gives of him, Psal. cxix. 68. Thou art good, and thou doest good. So that in relieving the Necessities of others we act the Part, and the best Part too of the Almighty Father of Beings; who sits at the upper End of the Table, and carves to his whole Creation. Hence St. Gergory Nazianzen, speaking of the Charitable Man, saith that he is τῷ ἀτυχῶντι Θεός, ἢ ἔλεον τῷ Θεῷ μιμησάμενος, εἶδεν γὰρ ὅτως ὡς τὸ ὀποιοῦν ἀνθρώπου ἔχει Θεὸς. i. e. A God to the Unfortunate, imitating the Mercies of God: For Man hath in nothing so much of God as in doing good; which is doubtless the most Divine and Godlike Thing, that a Creature is capable of. What then can be more honourable, or more becoming a Creature, than to tread in the Footsteps of God, to transcribe his Nature and Actions, and be a kind of Vice-God in the World? Surely did we but understand and consider how divinely magnificent it is to supply the Necessities, and contribute to the Happiness of others; we should court it as our highest Preferment, and bless God upon our bended Knees for deeming us worthy of such an illustrious Employment, and that among the numerous Blessings he hath heaped upon us, he hath vouchsafed to admit us to share with himself in the Glory of doing good.

And as the Example of God doth highly recommend to us relieving of the Poor and Miserable, so also doth the Example of our Saviour. For it was for this that he left his Father's Bosom, and came down from Heaven into our Nature, that he might relieve a poor perishing World, and rescue it from eternal Ruin. And what a glorious Recommendation of Charity is this, that the Son of God chose rather to do good upon Earth than to reign over Angels in Heaven? And while he was here, the sole Employment he thought worthy of himself, was to relieve the Miserable, to feed the Hungry, to cure the Blind and the Lame, to restore the Sick, to instruct the Ignorant, and reclaim the Rebellious. This was the Drift of all his Actions, this the Subject of his Miracles, and this the Scope of all his Doctrines: So that his whole Life was nothing else but a continued Train of Beneficences, for the Apostle tells tells us in the xth of the Act. 38. that he went about doing Good. Consider this therefore, O thou hard-hearted Christian, that stoppest thy Ears, against the poor Man's Cries! What would thy blessed Lord have done, had he been in thy Case and Circumstances! Would He, who had so much Compassion on the Multitude, as to work a Miracle to feed them, have turned that miserable Wretch away as thou dost, without the least Dram of Comfort and Relief? Would he, whose Heart and Hand was always open to the Poor and Miserable, have despised the poor Man's Moans as thou dost, or shut his Bowels of Compassion against him? Do but peruse the Pattern of his Life, and scan over his whole Behaviour; and see if there be any one Action in all that great Ex- amplar, that doth not upbraid thee, and cry Shame upon thee for entitling thy narrow, cruel, and stingy Self a Disciple to such a merciful, generous, and li- beral Master; and if so, learn for the future either to be so honest as to follow his Rule and Example, or else so modest as to disclaim thy Relation to him.

III. Consider that giving of Alms is a most substantial Expression of our Love and Gratitude to God, and our Saviour. How much we are obliged to express our Gratitude to God, for these our outward Enjoyments and Abi- lities to do Good to others, is evident from hence; because we receive them from him, and do hold them in virtue of his Donation. For to suppose our selves independent Possessors of them, is in effect to divest God of his Dominion, and to strip him into an insignificant Cypher, that only sits above in the Heavens, like an Almighty Sardanapalus, with his Arms folded in his Bosom; and no further concerning himself in the Affairs of this lower World, than to look down from his Throne, and please himself to see Men scrambling for their several Shares of it. But if we suppose him, as we have infinite Reason to do, the Almighty Author, and supreme Disposer of all Things; then we must acknowledge, that 'tis from his overflowing Bounty that we derive what- ever we possess; that 'tis the Gold of his Mines that enriches us, the Crops of his Fields that feed us, the Fleeces of his Beasts that cloath us, and that every good Thing we enjoy is handed to us by the Ministry of his all-disposing Providence. And since we owe all to his Bounty, and in our greatest Flourish are but his Almsmen and Pensioners; how deeply are we obliged to return upon him in the Oblations of Love and Thanksgiving? And since Love and Gratitude consist either in the Affection of the Mind, or in the verbal Signification of it, or in the effectual Performance of good Things, to the Person whom we thank and love; this last is the most compleat and substantial Expression of the Reality of our Words and Affections. For though Good-Will is indeed the Root of Love and Gratitude; yet that lying under Ground and out of Sight, we cannot conclude its Being and Life without visible Fruits of Beneficence to the Person whom we thank and love: And as for good Words, they are at best but the Leaves of Love and Gratitude; but 'tis good Works that are the real Fruits of them, by which their Sincerity is demonstrated. For as no Man doth ever impress a false Stamp upon the finest Metal, so costly Thanks and Love are seldom counterfeit. It is to decline spending their Goods, or their Pains, that Men do so often forge and feign, pretending to make up in wishing well the Defects of doing so, and paying down Words instead of Things: But where Works are wanting, there is no Expression of our Love or Gratitude can either be real in itself, or acceptable to God. So that we may spare our Breath, if we keep back our Substance; for our close Hand giveth the Lye to our full Mouth, and all our verbal Praises of God, when we will part with nothing for his sake, are only so many empty Compliments, and down-right Mockeries. But then do our Love and Gratitude to God discover their Reality, when it appears by our Actions that we think nothing too dear for him; when for his sake who hath fed and cloathed us and abundantly supplied our Necessities, we are ready upon all Opportunities to feed and cloath and supply the Necessities of others. And can we think any Thing too dear, by which we may express our Gratitude to Him, upon whose over-overflowing Bounty we depend for every Blessing we have, or hope for; who hath provided not only this Temporal World for our Bodies, but also an Eternal Heaven for our Souls; and hath sent his Son to us from his own Bosom to tread our way to it, and conduct us thither; or can we think any Thanks too costly for that blessed Son, who never grudged to come down from Heaven into this Vale of Miseries, and pour out his Blood for our sakes? Was it not much harder for him to part with Heaven, than 'tis for you to part with a little Money? And can you think it much to bestow an Alms for his sake, who never grudged to lay down his Life for yours? This is the Argument of the Apostle, 2 Cor. viii. 9. For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich.

IV. Consider that giving of Alms charges an high Obligation to us, upon the Accounts of God and our Saviour. For God lends the poor Man his Name; and allows him to crave our Succours for his sake: he gives him Credit from himself to us for what he stands in need of, and bids him charge what he receives upon his own Account, permitting to reckon himself obliged thereby, and to write him down our Debtor: So that when we stop our Ears to the Cries of the Poor, he reckons himself repulsed by us, and interprets it as a rude Affront offered to his own Person, it being offered to one that bears his Name, and wears his Livery. For the poor Man's Rags are the Badges of his Relation to God, and his Wants are the Mouths by which God himself intreats our Relief, and Succour; assuring us that he will reckon it to our selves, and accept it as kindly at our Hands as if we had relieved him in his own Person. For he that bath pity upon the poor, (saith the Wise Man) lendeth unto the Lord, Prov. xix. 17. in which one Sentence methinks there is more Rhetorick, than in a whole Library of Sermons: And surely did we but understand, and consider it in its full Emphasis, we should not need such Volumes of Instructions, but might easily learn to be charitable by an Epitome. "O blessed God! That thou should'st own thy self my Debtor, "only for repaying the a Part of what thou hast lent me, and of what is "still thy own by an unalienable Propriety; that thou who art the great "Landlord of the World, should'st thus acknowledge thy self indebted to "thy poor Tenant, for paying thee a small Quit-rent, a Pepper-corn of "Homage for what I hold in thy Right, and by thy Bounty! And yet thus it is, he lends us our Estates, and then writes himself our Debtor, for that small Part which we repay him in Works of Piety and Charity. And as God puts our Alms to his own Account, so doth our Saviour also: For so, Matth. xxv. 40. In as much (says he) as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my Brethren, ye have done it unto me; that is, I account my self obliged by it, and do receive it at your Hands with the same Kindness and Acceptance, as if you had been with me in my State of Humiliation, and shewed me all this Mercy in my own Person. And when both God and my Saviour do send a poor Wretch to me in their own Name, and Person, and desire me for their Sakes and upon their Accounts to relieve him: Can I be either so ungrateful to them, to whom I am indebted for all that I have or do hope for, or so wanting to my own Interest, as to neglect so fair an Opportunity of making them some Return of their Favours, and thereby obliging them to heap more Favours upon me? For when in giving to the Poor I give to God and my Saviour, what glorious Compensations may I expect from such kind and liberal Paymasters: He that soweth bountifully shall reap bountifully, says the Apostle, speaking of Alms, 2 Cor. ix. 6. for he sows in the richest Soil, in the fruitful Hands of God, and his Saviour; where one Seed being nourished with infinite Bounty never fails to increase and multiply a Thousand-fold. For God is not unrighteous, to forget your Work and Labour of Love which ye have shewed towards his Name, in that ye have ministered to the Saints and do minister, Heb. vi. 10.

1

Though

Though, he may sometimes defer, yet he never forgets to return a charitable Work: So that you may safely reckon upon it, that so much as you have bestowed in Works of Charity, so much with vast Increase and Interest you have secured to you in the Hands of God; who will either return it to you hither in temporal Blessings, or, which is a thousand times better, repay it to you with infinite Interest in the Weight of your eternal Crown. For so our Saviour promises the young Man, that if he would give what he had to the Poor, he should have Treasure in Heaven, Matth. xix. 21. So that by giving Alms we make the Earth tributary to Heaven, and in a nobler Sense than the new System of Astronomy teaches, advance it into a Celestial Body; and consequently enrich not only our Selves, but our Wealth too, by thus transmitting it to Heaven before us, as it were by Bills of Exchange, to be repaid us when we come there in an everlasting Treasure of Happiness. And when by relieving the poor Man's Needs, we may thus transmute our Dross into Gold, and, which is more, our perishing Gold into immortal Glory, What Man in his Wits would refuse any fair Opportunity of making such a blessed Exchange?

CHAP. IV.

Of the eternal Reasons and Grounds of Mercy.

HAVING shewn at large what Mercy is, and to what particular Duties it extends, I shall now proceed to the second Thing, viz. the Eternal Reasons upon which it is founded and rendered Morally Good. Which I shall reduce to these five Particulars;

First, The Suitableness of it to the Nature of God:

Secondly, The Convenience of it with the Frame and Constitution of Human Nature:

Thirdly, The near and intimate Relation of those Persons to us upon whom our Mercy is to be exercised:

Fourthly, The Equitableness of it to our own State and Circumstances:

Fifthly, The Necessity of it to the tolerable Well-being of Human Society.

I. One eternal Reason upon which Mercy is founded and render'd morally Good, is the Suitableness of it to the Nature of God; which abounding as it doth with all the possible Kinds and Degrees of Perfection, is an infinitely full and everlasting Fountain of Happiness to itself; so that it cannot wish for any Kind, or at any Degree of Blessedness beyond the Enjoyment of it self, and those infinite Complacencies it takes in its own essential Beauty and Perfections: And having such an inexhaustible Treasure of Happiness within it self, it can have no need of, or Dependence upon any Thing without it; nor consequently be liable to any Temptation to oppress, or render others miserable, either for the Security, or Augmentation of its own Revenues: And as he who is infinitely happy can have no Temptation to render others miserable, so his own Happiness cannot but incline him to render the Miserable Happy. For so from a Natural Principle of Self-Love, every Being stands inclined to beget, and propagate its own Likeness and consequently every Being that is Happy, cannot but be inclined to make others so, so far as it consists with its own Interest. Since therefore God is not only Happy in himself, but so securely Happy, as that he can contribute what he pleases to the Happiness of others without any Prejudice to his own; his own Self-Love, must necessarily incline him to beget his own Likeness on his Creatures, and so Propagate his Happiness Happiness through the World. And being thus inclined by his own Self-Love to transform all other Beings into his Likeness, that is, to make them happy as he is happy; he must needs be tenderly affected with the Miseries of his Creatures, and immutably inclined, so far as it is just and wise, to succour and relieve and render them happy. Thus Mercy, you see, which is a good Will to the Miserable, doth most necessarily result from God's own Self-Love; and consequently is an inseparable Principle of his Nature: And accordingly God proclaims himself to Moses, Exod. xxxiv. 6, 7. The Lord, the Lord God merciful and gracious, long-suffering, abundant in Goodness and Truth, keeping Mercy for Thousands, forgiving Iniquity and Transgressions: And hence his Mercy is said to be everlasting, Psal. c. 5. and to be from everlasting, Psal. ciii. 17. and to endure for ever, Psal. cvi. 1. and he is said to be Rich in Mercy, Ephes. ii. 4. and is styled the God of all Grace, 1 Pet. v. 10. and the Father of Mercies, 2 Cor. i. 3. Now the Nature of God is the supreme Example, and Pattern of all rational Natures; and so far forth as ours do swerve and deflect from his, they are maimed and imperfect. For his Will is our Law, not merely because 'tis his Will, but because it is over-ruled by the infinite Perfections of his Nature, by his Wisdom and Justice, his Mercy and Goodness; which if upon an impossible Supposition, he should Will contrary to, that Will would be no Law, i. e. it would have no Force upon our Consciences to oblige us to obey it. So that the supreme Law is the Nature of God, by which his Will is, and all other Wills ought to be concluded and determined; and whatsoever we discover in his Nature either by Reason, or Revelation, that is communicable to ours, we ought to follow and imitate it as our sovereign Pattern and Exemplar. Since therefore both Reason and Revelation do so plainly discover a most merciful Inclination in the Nature of God; this is an everlasting Reason why we should be merciful: And this is the Reason our Saviour urges, Luk. vi. 36. Be ye merciful, as your Father also is merciful; that is, Let it be seen that you are the Children of God, by your Participation of his Nature, which is infinitely Benevolent to the Miserable; for there is nothing sinks you farther from God, or renders you more unlike him, than a cruel and unmerciful Temper: 'Tis this that blackens and deforms your Souls, that wreaths and distorts them into a contrary Figure, to the most amiable Nature of the Father of Spirits. For as the highest Perfection is the Nature of God, and that is a most merciful one; so the lowest Imperfection is the Nature of Devils, and that is a most cruel one: And therefore as by Mercy we incline towards the Nature of God, which is the Land-mark we ought to follow; so by Cruelty we decline towards the Nature of Devils, which is the Sea-mark we ought to avoid.

II. Another eternal Reason upon which Mercy is founded and rendered morally Good, is the Convenience of it with the Frame and Constitution of human Nature; in which the wise Author of Nature hath implanted a natural Sympathy between those that partake of it, in each others Pains and Pleasures. So that tho' the human Nature be largely diffused and spread through infinite Numbers of Individuals, which by vast Distances of Time and Place are separated from one another; yet as if it were but all one common Soul, operating in several Bodies in several Times and Places, it feels almost in every one Body, what it enjoys, or suffers in every other; and whether it be pleased, or offended in one Individual, is pleased or offended in them all: And though the Sense be quickest in that Individual Part or Member of human Nature, upon which the Pain or Pleasure strikes immediately, yet all the rest, how distant soever in Time or Place, as soon as they have notice of it, are sensibly touched, and affected with it. For thus when we read, or hear of the Calamities of other Men, our Bowels yearn by a natural Sympathy, though they are never so distant from us, and are no otherwise related to us than as they partake of our Natures; and though they are long since dead, and out of the Reach of any Assistance, yet their Miseries, without any Motives of Reason or Discourse, strike us into a soft Compassion; yea, though we know the Calamities which we read or hear of, to be nothing but Romantick Fictions, yet the very Imagination of them is ready to melt us into Tears, in despite of our Will and our Reason. Nor is this visible only in Persons that are adult, but even in little Children; who as soon as they are capable of taking notice of Things, do without any Reason express themselves pained and afflicted with the dissembled Griefs and Sufferings of those that attend them. All which are most evident Instances of that general Sympathy, which naturally intercedes between all Men; since we can neither see, or hear of, nor imagine another's Miseries, without being touched with a sensible Pain and Affliction.

Against which I know no other Objection can be urged but this; that there are sundry Instances of Men, who seem to have arrived to that Degree of Cruelty, as to take Pleasure in afflicting others; and are so far from Sympathizing with their Pains, that they rather seem to be recreated with them. To which I shall only answer these two Things: First, That that Delight which some Men take in plaguing and afflicting others, proceeds not from their natural Temper, but is rather to be attributed to some violent Effervescency, and Transport of their Nature; such as are outrageous Anger, or deep and inveterate Revenge; under both which Nature is discomposed and disordered, and chased into a preternatural Ferment: And accordingly when it is cooled again, and reduced to a composed Temper, instead of rejoycing in the Mischiefs it hath done, it usually bewails and laments them, and reflects upon them with a great deal of Horror and Remorse. Which is a plain Argument, that human Nature in it self is very tender and compassionate, how much soever it may be accidentally transported, by unnatural Passion super-induced upon it. Secondly, Suppose what is objected be true, that there are some Natures so cankered, and diaboliz'd, as to be really pleased with the Pains and Miseries of others; the Instances of this kind are so few; that they are only so many Exceptions to a General Rule; and therefore ought rather to be looked upon as so many Monsters of Men, than as the Standards of Human Nature. For as we do not look upon it as natural to Men to be born without Hands or Feet, though there have been Instances of such monstrous and unnatural Births; so neither ought we to think it natural to Men to be cruel and unmerciful, because of a few Devils in human Shape, that have pulled out their own Bowels of Compassion. If we would understand what is human and natural, we must take our Measures from those who in all other Cases do live most conformably to the Laws of Nature; and to be sure the more regular Mens Natures are, the more you will find them abounding with Pity and Compassion. For hence it is that Mercy and Compassion are called good Nature and Humanity, and their contraries, Ill Nature and Inhumanity, because as the former are inseparable Properties of well-formed and regulated Natures; so the latter are such hideous Deformities of Nature, as do in effect divest us of our Manhood, and render us a kind of Monsters among Men. By all which it is evident, that the great Creator hath framed and composed our Nature to Mercy, and implanted in it a tender Sympathy and fellow-feeling of each others Miseries; by which, as by a Voice from Heaven, he doth eternally call upon us to let out these our natural Compassions into Acts of Mercy towards one another. For the Voice of Nature is a genuine Eccho, and Repetition of the Voice of God; who, by creating in us such a tender Sympathy with one another, doth most expressly signify that it is his Will that we should mutually succour and relieve each other. For to what other End should he create in me such a Feeling of my Brother's Miseries, but only to provoke me by it to ease and succour him? Why should he cause me to partake, as I do, of other Mens Pains and Pleasures, but to excite me thereby to use my best Endeavour to assuage their Pains, and advance their Pleasures? Since therefore the God of Nature hath made my Neighbour's Misery my Pain, and his Content my Pleasure; and by the indissoluble Bands of mutual Sympathy hath linked our Fortunes and Affections together, so that 'tis for my own Ease to ease him, and for my own Pleasure to please him; this is an eternal and immutable Reason, why I should be merciful to him.

III. Another eternal Reason upon which Mercy is founded, and by which it is constituted morally Good is the near and intimate Relation of those Persons to us, upon whom our Mercy is to be exercised. For there is, between Men and Men, a most intimate Kindred and Relation; as being all derived from one common Root, whose prolifick Sap hath sprouted into infinite Branches, which, like Boughs of Nebuchadnezzar's Tree, have spread themselves to all the Ends of the Earth. And as we are all Children of the same Parents, and consequently Brethren by Nature; so we do all Communicate of the same Nature, as being compounded of the same Materials, and animated with the same Forms, having all the same Faculties, Inclinations, Appetites, and Affections; and being only so many several Copies, transcribed from the same Original: And there is no other Difference between us, but what is made by Things that are extrinsick and accidental to our Natures. So that in short we are all but one and the same Substance, attired in a diverse Garb of Circumstances, divided into several Times and Places, and diversify'd by the little Accidents of Colour and Stature, Figure and Proportions: In all which perhaps within a little while we shall differ as much from our Selves, as we do now from other Men. For do but compare your Selves in your Youth, or in your Health, or in your Prosperity, with your Selves in your Age, or in your Sickness, or in your Adversity; and you will find as much Difference between your Selves and your Selves; as you do now between your Selves and Others: So that in reality other Men are as much you now, as you are your Selves in other Circumstances; we being all the same in every stable, essential Ingredient of our Natures, and being only diversified by such Accidents from one another, as will in a little time diversifie us from our Selves. Thus the Apostle says, Acts xvii. 26. He hath made of one Blood, that is, of one Nature, all Nations of Men to dwell on the Face of the Earth. There being therefore such a close Conjunction, such a strick Union of Natures between Men and Men, so that every other Man is every other Man's self, a few trifling Circumstances excepted; this is an everlasting Reason, why we should treat Them as we do our selves, with all Compassion and Humanity. For to commiserate one who is my other self, is that which I am obliged to by my own Self-love, which God hath made an eternal Law to my Nature: 'Tis to feed a Member of my own Body, and nourish a Branch of my own Root; yea, 'tis to feed and succour my own Nature, that is only individuate from mine by I know not what Metaphysical Principle, and cloathed in different Accidents, and Circumstances. So that now the very same Self-Love, which doth so importunately instigate us upon all Occasions to redress our own Miseries, ought in all Reason to provoke us to relieve and succour other Men; since all the Miseries They endure, are the Miseries of our own Nature: insomuch that we run their Fortunes, and by a natural Communion are Partakers of their Pains and Pleasures. For the human Nature which is common to Us and Them, endures the Smart of their Afflictions, and bleeds through every Wound that is given them; so that by pouring into those Wounds the Balsam of our Mercy, we do an Act of Kindness to our selves, and wisely consult our own Preservation. As on the contrary, by dealing cruelly, and unmercifully by other Men, we do affront and violate our own Natures; and most unaturally thwart that Principle of Self-Love, which God hath implanted in us for our own Preservation. For he whom thou treatest with so much Contempt and Cruelty, is thy own self individuated into another Person; and wears thy Nature under other Circumstances: He is a Man of thy Manhood, Flesh of thy Flesh, and Bone of thy Bone; and no Man ever yet bated his own Flesh, but nourisheth and cheriseth it, Eph. v. 29. Wherefore thou canst not deal cruelly by him, without wounding thy self through his Sides, and committing an unnatural Outrage upon the Human Nature, whereof he is equally Partaker with thee.

IV. Another eternal Reason upon which Mercy is founded, and rendered morally good, is the Equitableness of it to our own State and Circumstances: for no Man ever was, or ever can be so happy, as not to have Need of Mercy for himself. The best of Men are Sinners before God, and for that are liable without a World of Mercy to be rendered miserable for ever; and there are very few whose Conversations with Men have been so inoffensive, as ne'er to have merited severe Retributions at their Hand: And how happy and prosperous soever a Man's outward State and Circumstances may be at present, he cannot be secure, but the next turn of Affairs may tumble him Headlong thence into Wretchedness and Calamity. Now since every Man might have been, or may be miserable, what can be more just or equitable, than that we should deal with those that are so, as we would be dealt by if we were so? Put the Case then, as you may very reasonably do, that You were now as miserable, as that wretched Creature is that craves your Succour and Relief; would not you desire Relief with the same Importunity that he doth? Doubtless you would; the Sense of Misery, and the Desire of Mercy being naturally inseparable: Well, but why would you desire it? Why, Because you are miserable, you would say: And hath not he the same Reason to desire it of you? You may want what he desires, and if you should, you cannot deny but you should desire the same: And is there not all the Reason in the World, why you should grant him what you would ask for your self, if you were in his Circumstances, and he in yours? This therefore is eternally reasonable, that we should give, and ask by the same Measures; that we should grant that Succour to those that are miserable, which we should think fit to ask or desire of them, were We as miserable as They, and They as happy as We. For since we are all of us naturally equal, whatsoever is fit for one, must be fit for another in equal Circumstances. Either therefore it is not fit, that I should desire Relief from others when I am miserable, or else it is fit, that I should grant Relief to others when they are so: Which if I refuse, I must condemn my self, either for being unreasonable in desiring Mercy when I need it, or for being unjust in denying Mercy when I am asked it. I know, I may be miserable my self; and if ever I am, I know I cannot forbear desiring others to succour and relieve me: And can I blame them for desiring that of me, which I could not forbear desiring of them, were I in their Circumstances, and they in mine? And yet of Necessity I must either blame them for desiring of me what they do, or blame my self for refusing them what they desire; since whatsoever is just for them to desire of me, is very fit and reasonable for me to grant them: and if ever I should happen to want Relief, with what Face can I desire or expect it, who am deaf and inexorable to the Wants of others? So that if I will show no Mercy, I were best take heed that I never need any, for if I should, it will be very unreasonable for me to expect it, because by my unmerciful Treatment of others, I have made a Precedent against my self; against which which it would be Imprudence for me to plead for Mercy, either with God, or Men. With what Face can I supplicate for Mercy from the Hands of others, when I have so plainly declared by my Actions, that were I in their Stead, and they in mine, I would never grant them what I ask for? And when my Actions do thus loudly deprecate the Mercies which I pray for, and enter such an unanswerable Caveat against my Claim and Pretence to them, it is but modest to let fall my Suit, and give up my Hope of Mercy for ever.

Fifthly and lastly, Another eternal Reason upon which Mercy is founded and rendered morally good, is the Necessity of it to the tolerable Well-being of human Societies. That God is good and merciful to his Creatures, hath been sufficiently demonstrated from the infinite Beatitude of his Nature; which being an unbounded Ocean of Bliss and Happiness to it self, must needs be abundantly communicative of Bliss and Happiness to others, according to the Capacities of their Natures. Since therefore human Nature, of all these sublunary ones, contains the largest Capacities of Happiness; we may be sure that God not only designs its Welfare, but that he hath made all the Provisions for it that are necessary in order thereunto. Notwithstanding which, you see he hath at present exposed it to so many evil Accidents, and Contingencies, that unless those that are Happy will take some Care of the Miserable, and we will all of us mutually succour and relieve one another, there is not a sufficient Provision made for our tolerable Well-being in this World. Since therefore it is evident even from the eternal Principles of God's Nature, that he is so infinitely kind and benevolent to us; and yet notwithstanding this, he hath placed us in a Condition wherein we need one another's Mercy, and cannot be happy without it; it necessarily follows, that it is his Will and Pleasure that whereinfoever he hath left us unprovided, we should mutually provide for one another; and that our own Mercy should be instead of a Counterpart to supply those Defects and void Spaces, which his Providence hath left us in our present Happiness. For we being free Agents, God did not so provide for our Happiness as to exclude our own Virtue from having an Hand in it; but hath only taken Care so to dispose and order our Affairs, as that we may be Happy; if we will contribute our Part, and behave our selves towards him, our selves, and one another, so as is most conducive to our own, and one another's Welfare. Since therefore he designs that all should be Happy, and in order thereunto, tho' he hath not actually made them so, yet hath fairly provided that all may be so; it is plain that he hath left something to be done on our Part, and expects we should every one contribute what we are able towards every other Man's Happiness. When therefore God places another's Happiness, or any Degree of it within the Power of my Mercy; it is plain that it is with an Intent, I should employ that Power to make him happy; and consequently that if I lavish out upon my own Pleasures and Conveniences that Power to relieve the Miserable with which he hath entrusted me, and so permit them to continue miserable, I am an unfaithful Steward to his Trust, and responsible to him for all their Miseries. In short, since God by the eternal Bent and Inclination of his Nature aims at, and intends our Happiness; but yet hath put us into a Condition, wherein without the Assistance of each other's Mercy we cannot be tolerably happy; this is a plain Demonstration, that it is his Will we should assist and further his Intention, by being merciful to one another. Whilst therefore God permits Misery in one, that is an immutable Reason why he should exact Mercy from one another; since without that he can never obtain his End, which is the Happiness of all. For, as since by the Laws of Generation he hath ordered all Men to come into the World weak and helpless, and unable to provide for themselves; he was bound bound in Goodness to oblige their Parents by a natural Sympathy and Affection, to nourish and take Care of them, till they grow able to take Care for themselves; that so they might not be utterly abandoned: So since he hath thought good to expose us here to so many Miseries and Calamities, he stood obliged by the eternal Benignity of his Nature, to oblige us by all the Bowels of Mercy to succour and relieve one another, 'till we are grown up to that Perfection of Happiness wherein we shall have no more need of Succour; that so at present we may not be left destitute and forlorn, but may find all that Relief in one another's Mercy, which is wanting to us in his immediate Providence. For 'tis for wise and merciful Ends that he permits us to be miserable here, to correct our Follies, and polish and cultivate our Nature, and train us up under a severe Discipline into a State of everlasting Happiness; and therefore for the Redress of these Miseries, which for our Good he is fain to inflict upon us, it was necessary he should consign us to the Protection of one another's Mercy: that so this for the present might be a Cordial to our Griefs, a Supply to our Wants, an Ease to our Oppressions, and a Sanctuary to our Calamities; till Misery hath effected the gracious End she designed it for, and then he will release our Mercy from its Work, and permit it to enjoy an everlasting Sabbath. But so long as he thinks fit to continue us in this State of Misery, his own Benignity will oblige him to oblige us to assist and comfort one another, by the mutual Exercise of our Mercy; that so being instead of Gods to one another, we may not be utterly abandoned to Wretchedness; but by mutually succouring each other might all of us be tolerably happy; which we should all of us, most certainly be, were we but so benign and merciful to one another, as he expects and requires.

CHAP. I.

Of the Nature of Mortification.

GOD having made us free Agents, and planted in our Natures an uncontrollable Liberty of Choice; in Wisdom he hath so ordered and disposed Things, that as we cannot be miserable unless we will, so neither shall we be happy whether we will, or no. For as his Goodness would not suffer him to make us necessarily miserable, so neither would his Wisdom permit him to entail our Happiness on our Natures, and make it inseparable to our Beings; for should he have done so, he must have altered the Laws of his own wise Creation, and made those Beings to act necessarily, which he made to act freely. For Happiness is the End of all our Actions; and therefore should God have made that necessary to us, he must have made us to act towards it with the same Necessity as inanimate Bodies do towards their proper Center; and consequently there would have been no such Thing, as a free Agent in the lower World. That we may always act therefore according to the Condition, and Frame of a free Nature, the Foundations of all our Happiness and Misery are laid in the right Use, or Abuse of our Liberty; and do immediately spring out of the Wisdom, or Folly, of our own Choices: So that if we chuse wisely according to the Laws of Virtue and right Reason, we do thereby advance towards that happy and heavenly State we were created for; as on the contrary, if we chuse foolishly according to the rash Counsels of our own vicious Appetites and sensual Inclinations, we thereby sink our selves deeper and deeper towards the Abyss of endless and inconceivable Misery. For such is the Frame and Constitution of our Natures, that we cannot be good and miserable, nor vicious and happy; and accordingly the Apostle sets before us the inevitable Fate of our own Actions, Rom. viii. 13. If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye through the spirit do mortify the deeds of the Body, ye shall live.

What these Deeds of the Flesh, or Body are, the Apostle tells us, Gal. v. 19. 20, 21. The works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like; and they which do such things, shall not inherit the kingdom of God. This is the Muster-roll of that formidable Army of Wickednesses, with which we are to engage, and which we must vanquish, or perish for ever. If ye mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live, i. e. If ye kill and destroy them, if ye wholly cease from them, both as to the outward Act of them, and the inward Appetite and Inclination towards them: For Mortification doth not only consist in a formal Abstinence from the outward Act of Sin, or a superficial Skinning over the Orifice of its Wounds; but searches to the very Bottom of that putrid Core within, and eats out the inward Corruption, from whence those outward Blisters arise: It purges the Heart as well as the Hands, and drains those impure Inclinations, which are the Springs of all Impiety and Wickedness.

But to handle this Subject more particularly. I shall do three Things;

First, Shew wherein Mortification consists.

Secondly, What are the proper Instruments of it.

Thirdly, What are the most prevailing Motives of it.

I. Wherein doth Mortification consist? I answer in these three Things.
 1. In Abstinence from the outward Acts of Sin. 2. In not consenting unto any Sin. 3. In a constant Endeavour to extinguish our involuntary Sins.

I. Mortification requires Abstinence from the outward Acts of Sin: For it is impossible that any Man should mortify his Lusts, while he indulges himself in the free Practice of them; because Practice is the Fuel that foment and feeds the inward vicious Inclinations, and both pampers and enrages the lustful Appetite of the Soul. For that Delight which we reap from acting our own Concupiscences, doth but increase and provoke them; it being natural to Men, when they have been pleased with any Action, to be more vehemently inclined to repeat it; the Delight which they found in the former Enjoyment provoking their Desires to enjoy it again. So that we may as well hope to put out a Fire by a continual feeding it with Fuel, and blowing it into Flame; as to mortify a Lust, whilst by our continued practising it we nurse and cherish it, and do at once both feed and irritate its Flames. If therefore we would ever mortify the Lusts of the Flesh, we must strictly restrain our selves from all outward Acts of them: For whilst we indulge our selves in these, we feed our Disease, and pamper our bad Inclinations into vicious Habits, and our vicious Habits into sinful Necessities.

II. Mortification consists in the Dissent of our Wills from all sinful Proposals. 'Tis no Piece of Mortification for a Man to abstain only from the outward Acts of Sin, if in the mean time his Will is so far consenting to it, as that he would practise it, were it not for some intervening Hindrances, or for want of a fair Opportunity. For in the Eye of God, to whom our inmost Thoughts and Purposes are all open and unmasked, the Will to Sin is the Sin that is willed, though it should never proceed into Action: With him it is acted as soon as it is conceived, and it is conceived as soon as ever it is thought of with Consent: It grows in the Delight we take in the Speculation of it, but is ripened in the Resolution of committing it. For when once we are resolved upon it, our Heart hath done its utmost towards it; and so our Consenting to it makes it perfect Sin, though it should never break out into Action. So that 'tis Nonsense to talk of mortifying our Sin, while it hath the Consent of our Wills, for though it is more dangerous in the Action, and approaches nearer to a Habit, because the Consent continues all the while we commit it, and is confirmed by the Pleasure we reap in the Commission, yet still it is Sin, though it is only consented to; and it lives in the Purpose though it breaths not out into the Practice. Our Enemy is not conquered, when it is only shut up within its Hold; and it doth but fortify itself within, while it wants Opportunities to sally out into Action. If we do not Sin, only because we cannot, or because we want Opportunity, we are but Devils in Chains; and never the less guilty, because we cannot do as much Mischief as we would: For he that would Sin if he could, hath sinned already as far as he is able; and so is every whit as criminal in the Account of God, as he that doth Sin when he can. The Mortification of our Lusts therefore doth necessarily imply the withdrawing the Consent of our Wills from them, and the final divorcing them from the Embraces of our Choice: For while they enjoy our Consent, they live in us, and rule us, though they should never have the Opportunity to come abroad into our Practice.

III. Mortification consists in a constant Endeavour to subdue our involuntary Appetites and Inclinations to Sin. It is not sufficient that we do not practise Sin, nor consent to the Practice of it; but we must make it our constant Endeavour to wean, and abstract our selves from those evil Tendencies and Inclinations, nations, which we have contracted by our former Sins: For though these Inclinations remaining in us are no farther our Sin, than we do yield and consent to them; yet while we patiently harbour them within our Bosoms, and do not honestly endeavour to smother and extinguish them, they are chosen and voluntary, and have the very Bane and Formality of Sin in them. Though we should be disabled from Acts of Adultery, yet while we retain with Delight our Inclinations towards it, and quietly please our selves in the fantastick Joys of it; while we freely entertain its lewd and filthy Ideas, and suffer them to walk to and fro upon the Stage of our Fancies without Check or Controul, we are still adulterous in the Sight of God, to whom our Lust is as obvious within the Closet of our Minds, as upon the Theatre of our Practice. We must not think therefore that our Sin is mortified, because we neither practise nor consent to the Practice of it; for while we have any Inclinations to Sin remaining in us, we must endeavour to subdue and conquer them. If we do not, we have only forced our Enemy into his last Retreat, where by our own Neglect we give him Opportunity to rally and reinforce himself against us: For our Sin still lives in our Inclination to Sin, and will soon, if it be not beaten thence, recover its broken Forces, and grow as formidable as ever. 'Tis true, he that doth not consent to his own evil Appetites, but constantly denies them those vicious Gratifications which they crave, takes an infallible Course to starve and destroy them: For as these were first raised in us, and afterwards nourished into Nature by our vicious Practices; so by refusing to practise those Sins which they incline us to, and by practising the contrary Virtues, we shall by degrees abate the Strength and Vigour of them: And as they decay, so holy Inclinations will spring up in their room; which being heightned and made intense by a constant Practice of Holiness, will by degrees expel these our vicious Inclinations, and grow into Nature and Habit. But merely to abstain from the outward Acts of Sin, is a tedious way of mortifying our inward Inclinations towards it; for vicious Appetites will live a great while, even upon innocent Gratifications. Though we should be drunk no more, yet if we indulge our selves the utmost Liberties of Sobriety, that will continue our Appetite to Intemperance: Though we should abstain from all outward Acts of Lasciviousness, yet unless we deny our selves some of the lawful Pleasures of the Body, these will foment our wanton Inclinations: Though we should not suffer our Rage and Spite and Malice to express themselves in any prohibited Actions; yet if we allow our selves even in lawful Anger, and just Resentments of Injuries, this will for a great while preserve and keep alive our most black and devilish Propensions. And besides that, this way of abstaining merely from Sin will make the Business of Mortification tedious, it is so full of Hazard and Difficulty: For he that only abstains from Sin, and gratifies his Inclinations as far as lawfully he may, is every moment in danger of exceeding the Line that parts the utmost of what is lawful from the nearest of what is sinful. For Inclination, like all other Motions, is always swiftest when it is nearest its Center; and when once it is within the Reach and Attraction of its beloved Voice, then it hurries towards it with Fury and Impatience; infomuch that many times our Conscience proves too weak to stop the Course of its impetuous Motions: And then when once it hath tasted the Forbidden Pleasure of its Sin, it immediately recovers all its impaired Strength, and many times grows more fell and outrageous than ever; and so the Ground we got in a Month's Abstinence from our Sin, we lose again in a moment's enjoying it; by which Means the Work of Mortification becomes extremely difficult and hazardous. Wherefore if ever we mean to conquer our bad Inclinations, we must not only abstain from the Sins we are inclined to, but also from the Occasions of them. If it be Sensuality we must starve it out by prudent Fasting and Abstinence; if Devilishness, we must force it out by thwarting and contradicting it in the Course of our Practice, and keep it at the greatest distance from it : For evil Inclinations are not to be mortify'd without Force and Violence, and like crooked Staves, the speediest Way to make them straight, is to keep them bent for a while the contrary Way. This therefore is implied in our honest Endeavour to mortify our involuntary Inclinations to Sin, that we do not only forbear the Sin it self, but avoid the Occasions that lead to it; and deny our selves those lawful Liberties, which do nearly approach it, and set us upon the Brink of it. And thus you see wherein Mortification consists, namely in abstaining from the outward Act, and inward Consent to Sin, and in a constant Endeavour to mortify those involuntary Inclinations to Sin, which we have contracted in any former Course of wilful Sinning

CHAP. II.

Of the Means, and Instruments of Mortification.

HAVING explained wherein Mortification consists, I proceed in the next Place to consider what are the Means and Instruments of it: And these are chiefly these six;

First, Faith.

Secondly, Consideration.

Thirdly, Resolution.

Fourthly, Discipline.

Fifthly, Frequent receiving of the Sacrament.

Sixthly, Constant Prayer.

I. Faith, or a thorough Belief of the Truth of our Religion; which will furnish us with such Arguments against our Lusts, as all the Temptations they can muster up will never be able to resist. Hence St. John tells us, that This is the victory that overcometh the World even our faith, 1 Epist. v. 4. where by the World we are to understand all those Temptations to Sin, that do arise from these outward worldly Objects wherewithal we are here surrounded. Faith therefore must needs be a mighty Instrument of mortifying our Sins, it being the Victory whereby we overcome all the Temptations to them: And indeed a firm Belief of the mighty Arguments of Christianity is in it self such an efficacious Means to dissuade us from sinning, that one would think it were impossible for the most bold and resolute Sinner to withstand it. For who but a mad Man would prostitute himself to the Charms and Flatteries of a base Lust, that believes that Promise which proposes a Heaven of immortal Joys to dissuade him from it? Who would be frighted into any Sin by the most amazing Danger that can threaten, or befall him, that credits that Threat which denounces a Hell of endless and intolerable Woes against every wilful Transgression? Did we but believe, that it cost the Son of God his dearest Blood to redeem us from our Sins; how could we be so disingenuous to our best Friend, as to harbour those Lusts that were his Murderers, and which he abhors more than the Spear that pierced his Side, or the Nails that gored his Hands and Feet? Yea, how could we be so fool-hardy as to dally with those Sins, which are so infinitely odious unto God, that he would not be atoned for them by any meaner Sacrifice than the the Blood of his own Son? In a word, did we but believe, that we must all appear before the Judgment-Seat of Christ, to give a strict Account for whatsoever we have done in the Flesh: What Temptation could there be great enough to balance our Fear of that dreadful Tribunal? Doubtless, did we but heartily believe our Holy Religion, there is nothing in all the World would be so terrible as Sin to us; the mighty Arguments of the Gospel would so over-awe us, that we should not be able to think of it without Horror and Amazement; the very Sight of it would scare us like an Apparition, and cause us to run away from it in as great a Fright, as if the Devil himself were at our Heels. For, Lord! can I be so stupid, as to hug my Lusts, while I believe that I shall rue for it to all Eternity? Can I be so senseless of my own Interest, as to treat and entertain those Vices, which I verily believe will rob me of all that an everlasting Heaven means? No, no; Did I but believe the Propositions of the Gospel, doubtless I should sooner trust my Body among ravenous Cannibals, than my Soul among my Sins; and think my self much safer among Vipers and Scorpions, than in the Embraces of my Lusts; which whilst they wrap themselves in amorous Folds about me, sting me with an everlasting Venom. But our Misery is, that we are most of us Christians by Chance; and have taken up our Religion upon Trust, without ever satisfying our selves of its Credibility, or troubling our selves to enquire why or wherefore, we profess it: So that though perhaps we do not absolutely disbelieve, yet neither can we be properly said to believe it; it being a Matter we never troubled our selves about, so as to enquire whether it be true or false; and therefore it is no great Wonder, that it hath so little Effect upon us. For how can it be expected, that we should be affected with that which we do not believe; or be persuaded to part with those Lusts that are so dear to us, upon Proposals that we give no Credit to, and of whose Truth or Falshood we never troubled our selves to enquire? Let us therefore but satisfy our own Reason of the Truth of our Religion, by considering impartially those mighty Evidences it is founded upon; and then it will soon captivate our Souls into the Love and Obedience of it; and none of our Lusts will be able to withstand its mighty Force and Efficacy, but will all be forced to fall down before it, as Dagon did before the Ark of the Lord. This therefore is the first Instrument of Mortification, viz. A hearty Belief of the Christian Religion.

II. Another Instrument of Mortification is Consideration. For we have no other Way to mortify our Lusts, but only by Reason and Argument, and 'tis impossible that any Arguments should persuade us, unless we duly consider the Strength and Force of them. 'Tis true, our Religion furnishes us with sufficient Arguments to baffle all the Temptations of Sin; But what will it signify to have good Arguments in our Bibles, while they are out of our Thoughts, and are not at all regarded by us? Do we expect they should cure our Souls, as Charms and Amulets do our Bodies, merely by being written upon Paper, and worn in our Bosoms? Why then may they not as well charm a Swine into Cleanliness, or a savage Tyger out of his natural Fierceness and Cruelty? But alas! all the Arguments in the World to an inconsiderate Mind, are but like so many Arrows shot against an Anvil, where they cannot stick, but are forced to rebound and fly off again without making any Impression on it. And hence in the Parable of the Seed, the Reason which our Saviour assigns why it prospered not in the High-way, the Stony, and Thorny Ground, was either that they considered not at all, or not enough, Mat. xiii. 19, 20, 21, 22. either they were wholly inconsiderate, so that the Seed of God's Word lay scatter'd upon the Surface of their Minds, like Corn upon the High-way, to be picked, and devoured by the Fowls of the Air; or they considered but a little so that the divine Seed being not thoroughly rooted in them, them, produced only a present Fit, and Pang of Religion, which in the Heat of the next Temptation withered and died away; or else they considered but by halves, their Minds being all over-grown with worldly Cares and Thoughts, which quickly choked that Holy Seed, and rendered it barren and unfruitful. This Inconsideration, you see, will render the most powerful Motives insignificant; and it will be to no Purpose for Religion to knock at the Door of our Souls, while our Reason is asleep, and our Understandings deaf to its Importunities. But would we be but so true to our own Interest, as to inure our Selves to a thorough Consideration of our Religion, that would arm us with such invincible Arguments, as none of our Lusts would be able to withstand; and we should have so many good Thoughts, like Guardian Angels, perpetually encamped about us, that whensoever the Devil or the World besieged us, they would find our Souls impreguably fortified against all their Batteries. If in the Morning before we go into the World, we would sit down a while, and take a little Pains to antidote our Souls with such Thoughts as these; O my Soul! now am I going into the Midst of a Crowd of Temptations, where ever and anon one bad Object or other will be beckoning to me, and inviting me unto that which is evil; let us therefore consider a little what Answer we shall return to all their Importunities: By and by perhaps some great Opportunity of Gain may present it self before thee, to tempt thee to a Fraud or Cozenage; but alas! what a poor Recompence will a little Money be for all that Eternity of Misery, whereunto I shall consign my self by it? Can I carry this sorry Pelf thither with me? Or if I could, can I bribe my Flames, or corrupt my Tormentors with it? And shall I for such a trifling momentary Gain, incur such an everlasting Damage? When I have thus answered this Temptation, perhaps immediately after some amorous Object may present it self to court me to the Harlot's Bed: but, O my Soul! will the Pleasures I am promised there compensate the Loss of all that Heaven of immortal Joys, which I shall forfeit by it? And if they will not, as doubtless they will not, shall I be so childish, as for the Pleasures of a Moment to extinguish all my Hope of being pleased for ever? And when thou hast thus baffled this Temptation, perhaps thou mayest be solicited anew with some importunate Invitation to Intemperance; but, O my Soul! remember the bitter Agonies that thy Saviour endured upon the Score of thy Sins; how this among the rest filled his deadly Cup, and vomited it full of Gall and Vinegar; and can I be so senseless as to make light of any Sin, the Guilt whereof was so heavy as to crush the Lord of Life into his Grave? Shall I be so disingenuous as to gratifie any Lust, that had a Hand in the Murder of my dearest Saviour, my Saviour who loves me a thousand times better than I love my self? And now no sooner hast thou repulsed this Temptation, but perhaps some other may assault thee; thou mayest be presented with a favourable Opportunity of treating thy Lusts so privately and securely, as that no Eye shall discover thee; and then how difficult will it be for thee to refuse such an inviting Occasion: But consider, O my Soul! thou art always and every where under the Inspection of thy Judge, by whose righteous Doom thou must stand or fall for ever; and he that sees what thou dost in private will one Day call thee to account, and openly unmask all thy Actions, and present them bare-fac'd upon the publick Theatre before all the World of Spirits: Unless therefore thou couldst find a Place to be wicked in where God might not see thee, 'tis in vain to promise thy self Coverts and Retirements; for he will one Day bring to light all thy Deeds of Darknes, and display thy Shame to the open View of the World: Would we, I say, but take the Pains every Morning before we enter into the World, to season and antidote our Souls with such Meditations as these, it would doubtless mightily contribute to the Mortification of our Lusts. For this would make the Arguments of our Religion so familiar to us, that no Temptations whatsoever would be able to baffle our Resolutions; which being back'd with such a strength of Reason, would stand like a Rock of Adamant, out-braving the Fury of those Waves that dash themselves selves against it, and forcing them to retire after all their threatening Rage in empty and insignificant Foams. For what Temptation can be too hard for that Soul, that is armed with the Hope of Heaven and the Fear of Hell; and is furnished with Arguments from all the Quarters of Reason and Religion, to oppose against it? This therefore is another of those Means and Instruments, by which we are to mortify our Lusts, viz. a serious Consideration of the Motives and Arguments whereby we are to oppose them.

III. Another Instrument of Mortification is a hearty and well-grounded Resolution; and indeed without a firm Resolution it is in vain for us to attempt the mortifying of our Lusts, or any difficult Undertaking whatsoever. For there is a wide Distance between Thoughts and Things, and 'tis much easier to discourse of Things than to pass them into Execution; for clear Reasonings are accompanied with a wonderful Delight, because there we engage only with Designs; and fighting only with the Idea's of Things, they will easily suffer themselves to be conquered by us, and taken captive at our Will; but when we pass into Practice, that will revolt and oppose us in the Execution, which was so very compliant to the Thought and Meditation; then you will find that you must wrestle stoutly with those Difficulties that will make Head against you, and that these will put you to a greater Proof of your Valour and Constancy than ever you did imagine; so that unless you are armed with a great Strength of Resolution, you will be beaten off at the first Attempt, and meeting with greater Resistance than you expected, be forced upon a base and cowardly Retreat. Now to form a firm Resolution requires a great deal of Prudence and good Conduct; for it is of a great Avail in all Cases to begin well; and as a Foundation well laid doth secure the Superstructure, so a Resolution well form'd will render the Execution of what we are to do a great deal more easie and feasible. Before we do resolve therefore on mortifying our Lusts, let us be sure to make use of the former Instrument of Mortification; that is, let us acquaint our selves with all those mighty Arguments against Sin, wherewith either our Reason or Religion can furnish us; and let us consider them over and over, till they are familiar to our Understandings, and our Thoughts have extracted the utmost Force of them; for which End it will be necessary for us to seek Direction from our Spiritual Guides. Then let us seriously consider with our selves, what it is that we are about to do, what Vices we must divorce, and what Virtues we must espouse; and let us thoroughly inform our selves beforehand of all the foul Ways, and steep Ascents, and dangerous Precipices that are in the Road of our Duty; and then as you go along in your Meditations, ask your own Hearts whether there be any Passage that they startle at, or whether notwithstanding all, they are seriously willing you should go on? Remonstrate to your own Souls, that in such a Place your Lust will be tempting you with the genial Pleasures of an adulterous Bed, and desire them to deal plainly with you whether they can be deaf to those bewitching Invitations; tell them that before you have gone many Paces farther, the Wants of poorer Men than your selves will be soliciting your Charity, and desire to know of them whether they are willing you should do good and trust God for a Repayment; represent to them how highly you may be provoked at the next Step by the injurious Carriage of some insolent Adversary, and know of them whether they are willing to contain their savage Passions within the Bars of Reason and Sobriety; and so go on in your own Thoughts through all the Paths of your Duty, and never cease putting these and such like Questions distinctly to your own Souls, till they give an express Consent to every Duty that presses for a Resolution. And it will very much conduce to the settling of a fixed Judgment in you, if you do not conclude too soon, but weigh all these Things over again; if you would ask your selves the next Morning, whether you still continue of the same Mind, and whether whether your former Consent was not the Effect of a present Heat, or whether now after the Cool of the Night you do still allow of it; for in all probability if you resolve in Haste, you will repent at Leisure. And this, I doubt not, is the Bane of most of our good Resolutions; that generally they are the Effects of some transitory Passion, and not of a sober Judgment and serious Deliberation; for when Men resolve well in Heats of Passion, they resolve to do they know not what themselves, but swallow their Religion by the Lump, without considering the Particulars of it; and so they do by their Duty, as Men do with bitter Pills, which they can swallow whole, but when they come to chew, those prove so distasteful, that presently they spit them out again. When therefore you have calmly considered with your selves all the Arguments against your Sins, and all the Difficulties of forsaking them, and you have reason'd your Wills into an express Consent to part with them for ever; then betake your selves to your bended Knees, and in the most solemn Manner devote your selves unto God: O Lord, I acknowledge, I have been a great Offender against thee, and that my past Life has been nothing else but a continued Rebellion; but now I see my Folly, and am ashamed to think what a notorious Offender I have been; wherefore here I solemnly promise in thy dreadful Presence, and in the Presence of all thy holy Angels, that where-ever I have done amiss, I will do so no more; be Witness, O thou righteous Judge of the World, that here I shake Hands with all my darling Lusts, and bid them adieu for ever; wherefore be gone ye Soul-destroying Vipers, that have twined so long about me; away, ye wretched Idols, whom I have too long adored; for in the Name of God I am fully resolved never to entertain you more. And now having reduced our selves to a good Resolution of Mind, our greatest Difficulty is over; for so long as we keep our Resolution, we are invincible, and all the Powers of Hell will not be able to prevail against us. For our Wills are not to be forced by any Power whatsoever, and there is no Temptation in the World can make us return to our Sin, so long as we are heartily resolved against it; so that all we have now to do is to keep the Ground we have gotten, and not to suffer our spiritual Enemies to batter down those good Resolutions we have raised against them, which if we can but maintain will infallibly secure us against all their Power and Malice.

IV. Another Instrument of Mortification is a wise and prudent Discipline. When by Consideration we have brought our selves to a thorough Resolution of Amendment, then to confirm and secure our Resolution, there are sundry wise and prudent Methods to be used; as First, a frequent Repetition and Renewal of it. For at first our vicious Inclinations will muster up all their Strength against our Resolution, and a perpetual Contest there will be between them, till either the one or the other is subdued: But our good Resolution being yet but raw and infirm, will ever and anon be apt to flinch and retreat; so that unless we often renew and reinforce it, it will not long be able to withstand the Assaults and Importunities of our vicious Inclinations. Wherefore if we mean to be successful in this Work of Mortification, it will be necessary, for some Time at least till the Strength of our bad Inclinations is broken, that we should every Morning before we go abroad into the World renew our Vows and Resolutions of Obedience, and reinforce them with a serious Consideration of those great Arguments whereupon they were first founded; that we should go out of our Chambers armed as Men that wait for their Enemies, and not trust our own Souls among the Temptations of the World, till we have first chained up our Inclinations with new Vows of Fidelity. Let us therefore every Day as soon as we open our Eyes thus resolve with our selves; I am now going into a World of Temptations, where I shall be solicited both from within and without to falsify my Vows which I have made to my God, and to betray my own Soul into everlasting Perdition; wherefore I do here in the dreadful

dreadful Presence of God, and of my Saviour, and of all the heavenly Host, renew and ratify again the good Resolutions I have made, without any reservation or exception; and whatsoever Invitations I may have to the contrary, I will never revoke this promise which I now make, or any part of it: So help me, O my God. And if for a while we would but use our selves to this Method, I doubt not but we should quickly find our good Resolutions so strengthen'd and confirm'd, that the Gates of Hell would not be able to prevail against them; but if when we have made a Resolution against our Sins, we do not take care to confirm and renew it, we shall find the Strength of it will by degrees so decay and abate, that at last it will be foiled and baffled by every Temptation that encounters it. This therefore is one Part of that wise and prudent Discipline we are to exercise over our selves, when we are thoroughly resolved against our Sin, frequently to renew our Resolution.

II. Another Part of it is frequent Reflection upon and Examination of our selves. And indeed if we do not inure our selves to this, we shall very often sin unawares without either considering what we are doing, or reflecting upon what we have done; and while we can thus sin without Check or Controul, it will be in vain for us to make Resolutions of Obedience. For still the Pleasure of one Act will invite us to another, and so in the Hurry of our worldly Occasions, we shall go on to repeat Sin after Sin, without heeding what we do, or repenting of what we have done; and if we suffer one Sin to break through the Fence, that will open a Gap for others, to follow; and if these are not presently stopp'd by serious Reflection, they will make the Breach yet wider for others; till at last they have trodden down all the Enclosures of our Resolution, and laid open our whole Souls into a Common, and Thorough-fare of Iniquity. But now by inuring our selves to a frequent Reflection upon, and Examination of our own Actions, we shall in a great measure prevent those many Surprizes which otherwise will be unavoidable to us; and when at any Time we stumble at unawares, the Penance we shall undergo in reflecting upon our Fault will so embitter the Pleasure of it, as to render it incapable of seducing us again. Wherefore to secure the Mortification of our Sins, as it is necessary that every Morning we should renew our Resolution against it, so it is no less requisite that every Night (especially till we have made some considerable Progress) we should seriously examine our Performances, whether they have comported with our Resolutions; and if upon an impartial Survey of our own Actions we find that they have, let us lie down in Peace, blessing and adoring that Grace by which we have been preserved. But if we are conscious to our selves of any Breach that we have made upon our Morning Vows of Obedience, let us bitterly bewail our own Folly and Baseness, and reflect upon it with the greatest Shame and Indignation: What have I done, O wretched Traytor that I am, both to God and my own Soul? I have mocked the great Majesty of Heaven, with solemn Vows of Obedience, and broke the most sacred Ties to come at those Lusts which will be my Ruin; what can I plead for my self, base and unworthy that I am? With what Face can I go into his dreadful Presence, whom I so lately invoked to be Witnes to those Vows which I have this Day falsified? Yet go I will, though I am all ashamed and confounded, and confess and bewail mine Iniquity before him. And if we would but keep our selves a while to this strict Discipline, we cannot imagine how mightily it would contribute to the Mortification of our Lusts; it would make our Reason so vigilant, and our Conscience so tender, that in a little while we should be startled with every Appearance of Evil; and Death it self would not be so terrible, as Sin to us; the Pleasure of our Sin would be so allayed and abated by those stinging Reflections that would follow upon it, that it would be no longer capable of alluring and seducing us; us; and the Dread of that bitter Penance, which we must undergo at Night, would sufficiently secure us against the Temptations of the Day.

Thirdly and lastly, another Part of that prudent Discipline which we are to exercise upon our selves, is to keep our selves at as great a Distance from Sin, as prudently and conveniently we can. He that will mortifie his Sin, must at first not only abstain from sinning, but also from every thing that doth nearly approach and border upon it; as for instance, it is not sufficient to mortifie an intemperate Appetite, that we abstain from Drunkenness and Gluttony; but besides this, we must for a while at least be very abstemious till we have reduced our Appetite from its wild Exorbitances, and not indulge to our selves the utmost Liberties of lawful Eating and Drinking: it is not sufficient for the subduing our wanton Inclinations, that we abstain from Adultery and Fornication; but we must also forbear those Meats and Drinks, those Gestures and Societies, those Sights and Sports which are apt to administer Fuel to our immodest Flames: to tame our malicious and revengeful Passions; it is not enough that we abstain from all unjust Retaliations of Injuries; but we must moreover restrain our selves even from that lawful Displeasure and just Resentment which may safely be allowed to a meek and charitable Disposition. And under these strict Restraints we must keep our selves for a while, till we have worn off our evil Inclinations, by habituating our selves to the contrary Vertues; and then we may safely unloose our Bands, and return again to our lawful Freedoms. But if while we are strongly inclined to any Sin, we will venture as near to it as lawfully we may, it is a mighty Hazard but our Inclination will carry us a great deal farther than we should go. For generally the Transition out of the utmost of what is lawful into the nearest of what is sinful, is undiscernable; the κλίμα or Line that meets out a Vertue from its neighbouring Vice being commonly so small, that it is hard to distinguish where they part, or to find out the just Boundary where-to we may go and no farther; so that when we think we are only upon the Extremities of what is lawful, we are many times passed the Line, and are far gone within the Borders of what is sinful. So that unless we had an infallible Guide to accompany us in all our Actions and Circumstances, and to point out to us the particular Limits of Lawful and Unlawful; it is impossible we should be safe within the Neighbourhood of Evil; but like those who dwell upon the Confines of two hostile Countries, we shall still lie open to Invasion on every Side. For our bad Inclinations are never so impatient of Restraint, as when they are within Prospect of Satisfaction, and the Objects which attract them are near and easy to be enjoy'd; now they will struggle with all their Might against our Resolution, and taking a new Scent of those beloved Lusts whose alluring Relishes they had almost forgotten, with all the Ties of Conscience we shall hardly be able to withhold them from following the beloved Game. So that unless we keep our selves at a convenient Distance from Sin, our bad Inclinations will be always within View of Temptation; which the nearer it is, the more it will court and importune them; and while we keep near our Sin, and do not enjoy it, we do but tantalize our selves, and enrage our own Hunger by seeing a Bait before us which we dare not swallow. If ever therefore we mean to mortifie our Lusts, we must not only avoid coming at them; but so far as we can, approaching towards them: at least till we have so weaned our Inclination from them, that their Nearness ceases to be a Temptation to us. These are the Parts of that wise and prudent Discipline, which we are to exercise upon our selves, as a Mean and Instrument to mortifie our Lust.

V. Another Instrument of Mortification is frequent receiving of the Sacrament. And indeed I do not know any one more effectual Cause, or more fatal Symptom of the Decay of Christian Piety among us, than is the common and woeful Neglect of this solemn Ordinance, which, were it but frequented with that wise and due Preparation that it ought to be, would doubtless be highly instrumental to reform the World, and to make Men good in good earnest. For, besides that those sacred Elements are by God's Institution become moral Conveyances of the divine Grace, whereby our good Resolutions are nourish'd and confirm'd; there we have represented openly to our Senses one of the greatest Arguments against Sin in all our Religion, viz. the Passion and Sacrifice of our blessed Saviour: There he is represented to my Eyes in all his Wounds and Agonies, bruised and broken for my Sin, and bleeding to expiate my Transgressions. And, O my obdurate Soul, canst thou behold this tragical Spectacle, without Indignation against thy Sins which were the Cause of it? Does not thy Heart rise against thy Sins, whilst thou here beholdest him weltering in his Blood, and bearest those gaping Wounds it issues from, proclaiming them his Assassines and Murderers? But if thou hast not Ingenuity enough to prompt thee to revenge thy Saviour's Quarrel upon these his mortal Enemies, yet methinks Self-love would move thee not to be fond of thy Sins, when thou here beholdest how much the Son of God endured to expiate them. For how canst thou think of sinning without Trembling and Astonishment, who hast here before thine Eye such a dreadful Example of God's Severity against it? Does it not strike thy Soul into an Agony to behold this bloody Tragedy, wherein the all-merciful Father is represented so inexorably incensed against thy Sins, that he that was the most innocent Person that ever was upon Earth, and also the greatest Favourite that ever was in Heaven, could not with all his Prayers and Tears obtain thy Pardon, without undergoing for thee the bitter Agonies of a woeful Death? Sure if thou hast any one Spark of Love in thee either towards thy Saviour or thy self, this solemn Commemoration of his Passion cannot but affect thee with Horror and Indignation against thy Sins. But then as in this great Solemnity we do commemorate our Saviour's Passion, so we do also renew the Vows of our Obedience to him; which (as I have shewed you) is very instrumental in it self to the subduing of our Sins; but much more, when it is done in so sacred a manner. For as Feasting upon Sacrifice was always used as a federal Rite, both among the Jews, and Heathens, whereby God and Men by eating together did mutually oblige themselves to one another; so the Lord's Supper being a Feast upon the Sacrifice of Christ's Body and Blood, when we come thither we eat and drink of his Sacrifice, and do thereby devote ourselves in the most solemn Manner to his Service: We swear Allegiance to him upon his own Body and Blood, and take the Sacrament upon it, that we will be his faithful Votaries. When we take the consecrated Symbols into our Hands, we make this solemn Dedication of ourselves to God; Here we offer and present unto thee, O Lord, our Selves, our Souls and Bodies, to be a reasonable, holy and lively Sacrifice unto thee, and here we call to witness this sacred Blood that redeemed us, and those vocal Wounds that interceded for us, that from henceforth we oblige our Selves never to start from thy Service, what Difficulties soever we may encounter in it, and what Temptations soever we may have to forsake it. Now what can be a greater Restraint to us, when we are solicited to any Evil, than such a solemn and sacred Obligation? Methinks the Sense of that dreadful Vow that is upon us, should so overawe us, that we should not be able to think of sinning without Horror; For, Lord! how shall I dare to cheat and defraud my Neighbour, when 'twas but the other Day that I vowed to be honest, and took the Sacrament upon it? With what Conscience can I now hate or design Revenge against my Brother, when I so lately swore unto God upon the Body and Blood of my Saviour, that I would love and forgive all the World? Surely if Men had any Sense of God, any Dram of Religion in them, they would not be able after such Engagements to look upon any Temptation to Sin without Trembling: and whatsoever Pretences of Unworthiness Men may make to keep themselves from this Ordinance, I doubt not but the great Reason of their Neglect is this, that they love their Lusts, and are resolved whatsoever comes of it they will not part with them; and so they will not come to the Sacrament, because they must be obliged to renounce their Lusts there, which they are extremely unwilling to do. And if this be their Reason, as I fear it is, they are unworthy indeed, the more Shame for them; but it is such an Unworthiness as is so far from excusing their Neglect, that it is a foul Aggravation of it: For he that will not receive the Sacrament, because he will not renounce his Lusts, makes one Sin the Reason of another, and so pleads that for his Excuse which will be the Cause of his Condemnation. But if we are honestly resolved to part with all our Sins, and can but willingly devote them as Sacrifices to the Altar, we are sufficiently prepared for this great Solemnity, and shall be welcome Guests to the Table of our Lord: If we can sincerely pay our Vows at his Altar, we may confidently take the Cup of Salvation and call upon the Name of the Lord. And having thus chained up our Lusts by the Vows of Obedience we have paid there, it will be hard for them to shake off such mighty Fetters, or ever to get loose again from so strict a Confinement; especially if we take care to repeat this our Sacramental Vow as often as conveniently we can. For (as I have already shewed you) the frequent Renewal of our holy Vows and Resolutions does mightily tend to strengthen and re-inforce them: And therefore it is worth observing, how much Care Christ hath taken in the very Constitution of his Religion, to oblige us to a constant Repetition of our Vows and good Purposes. For at our first Entrance into Covenant with him, we are to be baptized; in which Solemnity we do renounce the Devil and all his Works, and religiously devote our selves to his Service: But because we are apt to forget our Vow, and the Matter of it is continually to be performed, and more than one World doth depend upon it; therefore he hath thought fit not to trust to our first Engagement, but so to methodize our Religion that we should ever and anon be obliged to give him new Security. For which End he hath instituted this other Sacrament, which is not like that of Baptism to be received by us once for all, but is to be often repeated; that so at every Return of it we might be obliged again to renew our old Vows of Obedience: And doubtless would we but follow this good Design of our Saviour, we should be far more successful in our Religion than we are. For till we come to a confirm'd State of Goodness, our holy Fervour will be very apt to cool, our good Purposes to slacken and unwind, and our virtuous Endeavours to languish and grow weary: So that unless we revive our Religion by frequent Restoratives, in a little Time it will faint, and die away. Wherefore to keep it alive, it is very necessary that we should come to our great Master's Table every Time we are invited by the solemn Returns of this holy Festival; that here we may renew our Vows, and re-invigorate our Resolutions, and repair our Decays, and put our sluggish Graces into a new Fermentation: And if we would thus frequently communicate with a due Preparation of Mind, we should doubtless at every Sacrament acquire new Life and Vigour, and our good Resolutions would every Day get Ground of our bad Inclinations, till at last they had totally subdued them.

VI. And lastly, Another Instrument of Mortification is constant Prayer. For besides, that by our sincere and honest Prayers we are sure to obtain Strength and Assistance from God, to enable us to vanquish and subdue our

our Lusts, he having promised to give his Holy Spirit unto every one that asketh it: Besides this, I say, by a constant and serious Devotion our Hearts will be filled with such an over-awing Sense of God, that in all our Actions we shall dread and revere his Authority, and be ready to tremble at every Thought of offending him. For there is nothing gives us such a quick Sense of God, as Prayer; that being the most immediate Address that we can make to him, and the highest Elevation of our Souls towards him. For we are a Sort of Beings that are a-kin to two Worlds, being placed in the Middle between Heaven and Earth, as the common Center wherein these distant Regions meet. By our superiour Faculties we hold Communion with the spiritual World, and by our inferiour with the corporeal one: But to this sensible or corporeal World we lie open and bare, all its Objects being present to us, and striking immediately on our Senses; whereas between us and the spiritual World there is a Cloud of sensible Things, which interrupts our Prospect of the clear Heaven above them; so that before we can perceive that which is Divine, we must remove this World out of the way, and withdraw our Souls from those Thoughts and Desires wherein these lower Things have entangled them; that so we may lie open to the Heavenly Light, and our cold Affections may be immediately exposed to the enlivening Warmths of the Sun of Righteousness. And hence arises the Necessity of holy Meditations and devout Prayers; the one being necessary to abstract our Minds from the Objects of corporeal Sense, and the other to inspire our Wills with divine Affections and Inclinations: For Meditation furnishes our Understandings with noble Thoughts and Heavenly Ideas; and Prayer carries out our Wills to the Love of them, and joyns our Affections fast to them; so that by the one we are tied in our Minds, and by the other in our Choice to the better World. For Prayer does naturally sublimate our gross, and earthly Passions; and by keeping our Minds intent upon God, it wings our Affections towards him, and animates them with Divine Fires: And we do never rise from our Knees after a devout Address unto God, without deriving a magnetick Vertue from him, and being sensibly touched with his Charms and Attractions. So that if we did but inure our selves to fervent Prayer, those holy Affections which we should suck in with our Devotions would be instrumental to extinguish our vicious Inclinations; and we should go every Day from the Throne of Grace with such a lively Sense of God, and such a vigorous Relish of divine Things, as would be sufficient to antidote us all the Day after against the Venom of any sinful Contagion. Wherefore if we are in good earnest, and do seriously intend the Mortification of our Lusts, let us every Day before we go into the World be seasoning of our Minds with holy Devotions; and while we are addressing unto God in the deepest Sense of his unbounded Perfections, and of our own Dependence upon him, let us pour out our Souls before him, and make an hearty Oblation of our Souls and Bodies to him. Let us offer up our Wills to him broken and contrite, that he may put them into what Form and Posture he pleases; shew him an Heart that quitteth all Interest in it self, and that would be only led and conducted by him; tell him that you are sensible, that to mortify your Lusts is far more difficult than to resolve to do it; and beseech him to enable you to be valiant in your Actions; as through his Grace you are already in your Minds and Hearts; that you may with as much Certainty, if not with as much Ease, do and effect, as you have projected and resolved. And having thus implored his Aid, and sincerely offered up your selves unto him, you have laid a strong Engagement upon him not to abandon you: For to be sure he will not throw away a Heart, that puts it self thus humbly into his Hands; nor suffer the Devil to make a Prey of that which hath been so affectionately devoted to him. For it was by the Concurrence of his Grace, with our own Faculties, that this Resolution of Submission to him was begotten in us; and can we think that the Father of Love will ever abandon his own Offspring, while it crys out to him, and with pitiful and bemoaning Looks implores his Aid and Compassion? Surely this cannot choose but move his Fatherly Bowels, and make them yearn and turn towards it, and by a strong Sympathy draw his compassionate Arm to aid and relieve it. Let us therefore but faithfully use our own Endeavours, and fervently implore God's Grace; and then to be sure he will never suffer that divine Fire which he hath kindled within us, to be over-born by our Corruptions; but will kindly cherish it with his own Influence, and touch it with an out-stretched Ray from himself, till it hath burned through all that Rubbish that oppresses it, and till it rises into a victorious Flame.

CHAP. III.

Of some Motives to Mortification, taken from the Mischiefs of Sin.

HAVING shewn you at large what are the proper Instruments of Mortification, I shall in the next place proceed to press you with some prevailing Motives and Arguments faithfully to employ and use them. And here I shall not insist upon those Arguments which arise from the Consideration of the future State, because these will fall in hereafter, when I come to discourse upon it: All the Arguments that I shall here urge therefore to press you to mortify your Sins, shall be drawn from the Consideration of those present Miseries and Inconveniencies which they bring you into. And these I shall rank under two general Heads:

First, Such as are outward and Bodily.
Secondly, Such as are inward and Spiritual.

I. The outward and Bodily Inconveniencies which our Sins bring upon us are chiefly these Four;

First, They destroy our Health and shorten our Lives.
Secondly, they stain our Reputation.
Thirdly, They waste our Estates.
Fourthly, They disturb even our sensual Pleasures and Delights,

I. Consider how your Sins destroy your Health and shorten your Lives. And to convince you of this, I need do no more than only to lead you into the Slaughter-houses of Death, and to shew you how thick they are hung round about with the numerous Trophies of Lust and Intemperance: Behold, there lieth an Adulterer choaked with the Stench of his own Rottenness; there a Drunkard fettered with Gouts, and drowned in Catarrhes and Dropsies; there a Glutton stifled with the Loads of his own undigested Meals; loe there lye the dismembred Martyrs of Revenge and Insolence, that have lost their Limbs upon the Field in a foolish Quarrel for Vanity and Mistresses; and there the Envoys of Rapine and Murder, whose infamous Carcasses have furnished the Scaffolds and the Gallows. These and such like woful Examples almost every Day's Experience presents to our View, which one would think were sufficient to warn Men of those Vices, which they so commonly find attended with such tragicall Effects: And indeed there is no Vice whatsoever, but does one way or other undermine our Health, and impair the Strengths of Nature For all Viciousness consists in an Excess either of our Passions, or our Appetites; and it is plain and obvious, how destructive to our Health the wild Excesses of our Appetites are: How naturally Wantonness doth melt our Strength, consume our Spirits, and rot our Bones: How Gluttony obstructs our Breath, oppresses our Stomachs, and drowns our Bodies in unwholsome Crudities: How Drunkenness inflames our Livers, corrupts our Blood, dilutes our Brains, and converts us into walking Hospitals of Diseases. And as for the Excesses of our Passion, it is no less apparent how much they disturb and discompose our Natures: Thus Anger we see fires the Spirits and inflames the Blood, and makes the Humours sharp and corroding: Thus immoderate Sorrow oppresses the Heart, dries the Bones, shrivels the Skin, and overcasts the Spirits with Clouds of Melancholy: Thus Envy swells the Hypochondries, which by drinking up the Nourishment of the neighbouring Parts, makes the whole Body lean and meager: And in a Word, thus excessive Fear stagnates the flowing Spirits, and turns the Blood into a trembling Jelly. And such Disorders as these, when they are frequent, must needs gradually undermine the Forts of Life, and hasten them into an untimely Ruine. Now is it not very strange, that those Men who are commonly so over tender of their Lives, should be fond of Diseases, and court their own Executioners? That they should chuse to swallow Sicknesses, and to drink dead Palsies, and foaming Epilepsies, and to pass through so severe a Discipline of Torments, only to get an Habit of destroying themselves? 'Tis true indeed, some there are that have been so naturalized to their Vices, that they cannot live, nor be well without them; that are sick while they are temperate, and are not able to sleep, but in a Sea of Liquor, and are fain to put themselves into Excesses of Passion to ferment their Blood, and rouse their drowsy Spirits: But then it is to be considered, that generally they bring themselves into this sad Pass by their own evil Habits and Customs which they acquire, by doing great Violence to themselves, and committing forcible Outrages on their own Natures. There is no unreasonable Passion, or Appetite can be necessary to our Health, or Ease, till we are first habituated to them; and before we can be habituated, we must undergo a tedious Course of Pain and Uneasiness; many a Fit of tormenting Rage must be endured; many an uneasy Draught and sickly Qualm and fainting Sweat must be undergone, before Wrath and Intemperance can be made easy and pleasant to us; and much more before they become necessary Remedies: And it is rare, if ever we have need of these Excesses, till by a long Course of Violence upon our selves we have first over-turn'd our natural Temper and Constitution. And what Man in his Wits would ever swallow Poyson, merely to force his Nature into a Reconciliation with it; when he is sure beforehand, that if he doth not die in the Experiment, (as 'tis a great Chance but he doth) yet that he must undergo many a Sickness and bitter Agony, before his Nature is so accustomed to it as to be preserved and nourished by it? But alas! by that time we are arrived to that Pitch of Intemperance, rance, as to be drunk without the Penance of a Surfeit or a Fever, the Heat and Vigour of our Nature is usually so quenched with crude Humours, our Spirits so drowned in Rheums, and Dropsies, and our Brains so drenched in Clouds of unwholesome Moisture, that all our Life after we are but so many walking Statues of Earth and Flegme; and having washed away all the Principles of Reason and Discretion in us, we grow old in Folly and Sottishness, and at the last die Changelings. Thus Sin you see, is a Disease to the Body; it wafts our Strength, and either makes the Candle of our Life to burn dim, or blazes it out into an untimely Period. Why then should we not be as earnest in the Cure of this, as we are of our other Diseases? For doubtless would we but as carefully apply the Means and Instruments of Mortification, as we do, when we are sick of a Fever or an Ague, the proper Remedies against them; we should quickly cure those Excesses of our Passions, and Appetites, which do so disease our Bodies, and disturb our Natures.
of

II. Consider how your Sins do stain and blemish your Reputation. For there is nothing in the whole World more natural to Men, than to admire Virtue and disesteem Vice wheresoever they find it: This we seem to do by a natural Instinct, antecedently to all our Reasoning and Discourse; and it is no more in our Power not to do it, than it is to chuse whether our Pulse shall beat, or our Blood circulate. For that Virtue is an Ornament, and Vice a Deformity to humane Nature, is a Proposition so self-evident, that at the first Proposal it commands the Assent of all Rational Beings; nor is it in any Man's Power so far to offer Violence to his own Faculties, as to believe Vice praise-worthy, or commendable, any more than it is to believe that to be white and straight, which he sees to be black and crooked: And accordingly you will find, that by all Mankind it hath ever been branded with an infamous Character, and looked on as a Disparagement to the noblest Accomplishments. For in all the Monuments of former Ages, never were any Man's Lusts and Intemperances recorded among the Titles of his Honour; nor was there ever any one canonized in the Records of Fame, for being a Villain, or a great Debauchée. But generally they are the Wise, or the Valiant, the Just, or the Merciful, the Chaste, or the Liberal, whose Names have been consecrated in History; and no Man ever acquired a glorious Memory, but it was either by being virtuous, or by seeming to be so. And though wicked Men, like Glow-worms, do sometimes shine in the Dark, where either their Vice is not seen, or is mistaken for Virtue; yet usually at the Approach either of Time, or Light, their Lustre vanishes and goes out in Stink and Dishonour. So that methinks had we any Regard to our own Reputation, we should scorn to harbour those infamous Lusts, which in the Opinion of all the World are so great Disparagements to us: For what a monstrous Shame is it to be despised by all wise Men, to be hooted at by Boys, to be talked of in Fairs and Markets, and pointed at and described by Appellatives of Scorn? And yet all this we expose our selves to for the sake of a few base Lusts, which cause us to rot above ground and to stink alive, and when we are dead will strew our Graves with Dishonour, and inroll our Names in the black Records of Infamy.

III. Consider how your Vices do waste and consume your Estates. For generally it is a very chargeable Thing to be wicked, there being few Lusts but do require a large Revenue to maintain them: For what a vast Expence is the Epicure at to provide Meat and Drink-Offerings for that there

Idol God his Belly? What an inestimable Charge is it to the prodigal ostentatious Fool to gratify all his Vanities, and plume the Wings of his fantastick Pride? How much does it cost the insatiate Wanton to make Provision for his unbounded Sensuality? How many a fair Estate hath there been spent in litigious Suits at Law; merely to improve a Quarrel, and gratify a silly Revenge? And how many a prosperous Trader hath undermined himself by his own Fraud and Knavery; whilst for a present dishonest Gain he loses a Customer, by whom he might have honestly gotten ten times more in seven Years Trade and Commerce? And indeed for the generality there is a World of ill Husbandry in being wicked; most of our Lusts being like the Holes of a Sieve, through which our Estate runs out as fast as we can pour it in: And I believe it were easy to demonstrate, that the Ruin of most Families, and the Beggary of most Persons, is owing to one Vice or other; and that where one is sunk by mere Misfortune, there are twenty ruined by their own Wickedness. Now what Man in his Wits would keep such a Company of devouring Lusts about him, that are perpetually spongeing upon his Estate, and eating the Bread out of his Childrens Mouths? Who would ever expose himself and his Family to the hazard of Want and Beggary, merely to gratify an unreasonable Passion, or to satiate a wild and intemperate Appetite? But perhaps you think that there is no great Danger of this; for whatever comes of it, you will take care of the main Chance, and be such good Husbands in your Wickedness, as to be sure not to impair your Estates by it. Alas, poor Men! you know not what you will be; for when once you are set into a Course of Wickedness, you are like so many eager Gamesters, that when they set to it, resolve to lose but a Crown, or a Piece at most; but when they have lost that, they double their Stakes in hope to recover all again, and so game on till they have no more to lose. And first perhaps your Lusts will be very modest, and content themselves with the cheapest Provisions you can make for them; but when once they have inveagled and drawn you in, they will still be craving more costly Entertainments, and will by degrees so encroach upon you, that you know not when or where you shall stop: So that 'tis in vain for you to talk what you will do, for either you must mortify your Lusts, or resolve to gratify them; and if you do the latter, there is no End of it; for like the Daughters of the Horseleech, they will still be crying Give, Give, till you have no more to give, and then they will prey upon your selves.

Fourthly and lastly, Consider how your Vices do disturb and interrupt even your sensual Pleasures and Delights. For how often do you embroil the Peace of your Families by your own peevish Passions, and disturb the whole Neighbourhood, with whom you might enjoy the Pleasures of a friendly Conversation? How many Enemies do you create your selves by your own Malice and Ill Nature, whom you might as easily oblige by Kindness and Good Will, at least to a fair Correspondence, if not to a Return of mutual Indearments? To how many Hazards and Difficulties, Jealousies and Disappointments, Impatiences of Desire and Fears of Discovery does Lasciviousness expose you? Whenas, would you but confin your vagrant Lusts within the holy Circles of Conjugal Chastity, you might entertain your Appetites with Innocence and Ease, with equal Pleasure and less Difficulty, with a pure Conscience, and without the Hazard either of Disappointment or Discovery. How do you perplex and entangle your selves by Lying and Knavery, consuming the Pleasure of your Lives within a winding Maze of little Tricks and intricate Contrivances?
And

And what shameful Retreats and false Colours and Daubings, are you fain to use to avoid Contradiction and Discovery? Whereas were you but honest and sincere in your Professions and Actions, your Way would be open and easy and uniform; where you might pursue all your Ends by the directest Means, and need never wander about in the Labyrinths of a mysterious Subtilty; where you may walk without blushing in the Sight of the Sun, and the View of the World, and have no Occasion to skulk into Coverts and Retirements. Once more, What miserable Drudges doth Covetousness make of us? It will not let us rest Day nor Night, but sends us about in everlasting Errands; now to be scorched in the Southern, anon to be frozen in the Northern Parts of the World; this Day it exposes us to be shipwrecked at Sea, the next to be terrified on Shoar; and all this to get a great Heap of Wealth, which when we have gotten, it will not let us enjoy: So that when we have what we so impatiently hungred after, we have only acquired a greater Necessity; because before we needed only what we had not, but now we need what we have too; our covetous Desires luring us off, and not enduring we should feed upon our own Quarry: And so after all our Toil, we shall need as much at least as we did before; only before we did not possess what we needed, whereas now we shall need what we do possess. But did we take the Pains to learn that great Lesson of Christian Contentment, we should then pursue the World with far less Vehemence, and enjoy it with far more Freedom: We should be industrious without that eager Solicitude, and if it pleased God to bless our Industry, we should neither waste what we have, nor want it; and many a happy Year we should enjoy that which now we consume in vexatious Care to keep, and restless Desire to increase it. How unpleasant is the Life of the intemperate Epicure, who lives in a continual Lethargy, and dozes away his time in Sottishness and Stupidity; and by perpetually sucking in Rheums and Defluxions, doth so weaken and dilute the Vigour of the Organs of Sense, that he perceives not the Briskness of his own Relishes; but after his delicious Gobbets are past his Throat, they load and oppress him, and his Stomach is fain to do Penance for the Folly and Extravagance of his Palate; and those deep Draughts wherein he seeks to drown his Conscience and his Melancholy, leave behind them such an Uneasiness both in his Body and Mind, as nothing can reprieve: For as soon as he hath slept away the Fumes of his Intemperance, he finds himself sick as well of Company as of Solitude, and is fain to endure all the four Regrets both of his Conscience and his Stomach. Whereas would but this Man govern his Appetite by the Laws of Temperance; would he eat to satisfy, and not to invite his Hunger, and drink to refresh and not to force and oppress himself; his Relish would be quick and vigorous, his Gust sincere, and his Digestion easy; and his Appetite being not overloaded with the foregoing Meal, would quickly return again and give a pleasing Relish to his next Morsel: When he rose from his Table, his Nature would not be burdened, but refreshed and recreated; his Eyes would not swim in Floods of Rheum, nor his Brains in Seas of Liquor; his Face would not be fired with the unwolsome Inflammations of his Liver, nor his Reason overcast with the Clouds and Vapours of his gorged Stomach; but after his frugal Meals, he would still find his Organs fresh and vigorous; and when he went to Bed, his Sleep would not be broken with so many unquiet Starts, nor sickly Qualms; nor in the Morning would he awake in a Fever; but all his Life would be serene and calm, and he would enjoy all that is pleasant in Luxury, and be only barred from the apparent Sting of it. Many other Instances I might add, but these I think are sufficient to demonstrate, that Vice is the great Disturber even of those sensual Pleasures and Delights that it promises to us : So that it plainly contradicts its own Pretensions, and though it invites to Pleasure, yet entertains us with nothing but Distraction and Uneasiness. The Cup of Fornication which it holds out to us, tho' 'tis spiced at the Top, is Gall and Wormwood at the Bottom; and all those Delights that it courts us with, are only so many painted Miseries; which though they may look amiable and inviting at a distance, yet upon a more considerate View will be found to be most wretched Cheats and Impostures. So that methinks were we but ingenious Epicures, that understood the Pleasures of the Body, and the true Methods of enjoying them; we should for their Sakes discard those Lusts, that are so contrary and destructive to them; and it would be as impossible for us not to hate our Sins, as not to love our Pleasures.

And thus you see, how many Mischiefs and Inconveniencies our Lusts bring upon us in respect of our Bodies and outward Circumstances; so that if we had no immortal Spirit to take care of, no Interest beyond the Grave to look after, yet methinks had we but Reason enough to understand, and Self-Love enough to pursue our present Welfare, that were sufficient to oblige us to mortify our Lusts. For so long as they live they will be Plagues to us, and we must never expect a quiet Possession of our own Happiness, till we have utterly destroy'd these mutinous Disturbers of it, that are as so many Thorns in our Eyes, and Goads in our Sides. But alas! 'tis not our bodily Happiness only that they interrupt, and invade; but (which is more intolerable) they poison our Souls with their contagious Breath, and scatter Plagues and Infection over our noblest Faculties. Which brings me to the second Sort of Motives, to persuade you to mortify your Sin, viz. those that are drawn from the present Mischiefs and Inconveniencies that it brings upon our Souls; which are chiefly these three.

First, It spoils our Understandings.

Secondly, It subverts the natural Sub-ordination of our Faculties.

Thirdly, It disturbs the Tranquillity of our Minds.

I. Consider how much your Sins do spoil and waste your Understandings. For Sin is an Affront to our Understandings, and a plain Contradiction to the Reason of our Minds; there being no Vice whatsoever but what is founded in Folly and Unreasonableness. Whilst therefore we live in Sin, we do so far lay aside our Reason, (which ought to be the Moderator of our Actions,) and abandon our selves to the Conduct of our own blind Appetites and head-strong Passions; which will naturally weaken our rational Faculties, and bring a lingering Consumption on our Understandings. For as our Powers are improved and perfected by Exercise, so they are impaired and wasted by Disuse and Inactivity; and therefore our Reason being such a Power as is not naturally to be perfected but by Action, it necessarily follows that the less active it is, the more imperfect it must be. Whilst therefore we live in Sin, or (which is all one) in the Neglect of our Reason, we consume and waste our rational Faculties; which being unemploy'd will naturally contract Rust, and grow every Day more weak and restive. For a Life of Sin is all transacted by Sense and Passion; Reason sits looking on, and having no Part in the brutish Scene, melts away in Sloth and Idleness: Its vital Powers freeze for want of Motion, and like standing Waters stagnate, and gather Mire till they corrupt and putrify. And besides this Decay that Sin brings upon our Understanding, by taking us off from the Exercise of it, it is also injurious to those bodily Organs, by which our Understanding, while we are in the Flesh, doth reason and operate. For our Body is as it were the musical Instrument, upon which our Mind sets all its Harmony, and by which it runs all the curious Divisions of Discourse: And the Blood and Spirits and Brain and other Parts of it are the Strings of this Instrument, upon the well-tuning of which depends all the Musick of Reason. But now there is scarce any Sin, that doth not some way or other indispose our Bodies for the Use of our Minds, and render them unfit, especially for the most perfect Exercise of our Reason. Thus Drunkenness dilutes the Brain, which is the Mint of the Understanding, and drowns those Images which are stamp'd upon it in a Deluge of unwholsome Moistures. Thus Gluttony clogs the animal Spirits, which are as it were the Wings of the Mind, and renders them incapable of performing the noblest and sublimest Flights of Reason. Thus Anger and Wantonness force up the boiling Blood into the Brain, and by that disorders the Motions of the Spirits there, confounds the Fantasms, and disturbs the Conceptions, and shuffles the Idea's of the Imagination into an Heap of inarticulate and disorderly Fancies. And how is it possible our Minds should strike true Harmony, when its Instrument is thus disorder'd, and all the Strings of it are so out of Tune? How should we understand well, while our Brains are overcast with the thick Fumes of sensual Lusts; and those Spirits, which should wing our Minds, are grown so lifeless and unactive, that they rather hamper and entangle them? For what Clearness is to the Eye, that Purity is to the Mind: As Clearness doth dispose the Eye to a quick and distinct Perception of material Objects; so Purity from Lust and Passion disposes the Mind to a more clear Apprehension of intellectual Ones; and the more any Man's Soul is cleansed from the Filth and Dregs of Sensuality, the brighter it will be in its Conceptions, and the more nimble and expedite in its Operations. For Purity doth naturally fit the Body to the Mind; it puts its Organs all in Tune, and renders its Spirits fine and agil, and fit for the noblest Exercises of Reason: Which they can never be, whilst they are subject to disorderly Passions, and drenched in the unwholesome Reeks of Sensuality and Voluptuousness. But besides this Mischief which Sin doth to our Understandings, by rendering our Bodies unapt, to all intellectual Purposes; it also dyes the Mind with false Colours, and fills it with Prejudice, and undue Apprehension of Things. For while our Souls are under the Sway of any disorderly Passion or Appetite, they will naturally warp our Judgments into a Compliance with their own Interest; and bribe us to judge of Things, not according to what they are, but according to what we would have them: And when our Judgments are thus bribed by our Interest, and swayed by our Passions, it is impossible we should judge truly of Things. For our Passions will discolour the Objects of our Understandings, and disguise them into such Shapes as are most agreeable to our Humour and Interest; and so our Opinions of Things will alter upon every Variation of our Humours, and our Thoughts, like Weather-cocks, will be wheeling about upon every Change of Wind. So that while we are encompassed with the Mists of sinful Prejudice, they will necessarily hinder the Prospect of our Reason, and obscure the Brightness of our Understandings; and the Clearness of our discerning Faculties. And thus you see, how natural it is to Vice to spoil and waste our Understandings, and to choke up those Fountains of Light within us with Clouds and Darkeness. And that it doth so is very apparent in Fact; for how much much wicked Men have lost their Reason, is apparent by the ridiculous Principles upon which they generally act; which generally are so very weak and absurd, that it would be impossible for Men to assent to them, were not their Understandings perished, and the Reason of their Minds woefully impaired and wasted. As for Instance; the desperate Atheist wishes that there were no God, upon this Principle, that it is better for Men to be without a God, than to be without their Lusts; than which there can be nothing more wild or extravagant: For it is plain that without our Lusts we can be happier than with them; whereas it is the common Interest of Mankind, that the World should be governed by infinite Goodness conducted by infinite Power and Wisdom; and no Man, or Society of Men can be happy without it. For take God out of the World, and you take away all Hope from the miserable, all Comfort from the sorrowful, and all Support from the dejected and calamitous; and at one blow cut in sunder all the Bands of Society; rase the Foundations of Virtue, and confound all Distinction between Good and Evil. And yet the besotted Wretch, for the sake of a paltry Lust that betrays him with a Kiss and stings him in the Enjoyment, would fain banish God out of the World; though it is apparent that in so doing he would do Mankind more Mischief, than if he should blow out all the Lights of Heaven, or pull down the Sun from the Firmament. And in the general, what more ridiculous Principles can there be thought, than such as these? That Sense is to be preferred before Reason, Earth before Heaven, Moments before Eternity; that the short-liv'd Pleasures of Sin, which expire in the Fruition, are sufficient to balance the Loss of an immortal Heaven, and the Sense of an eternal Hell; that 'tis Time enough to repent when we can Sin no more; and that God is so fond a Being, as that rather than ruin those that willfully spurn at his Authority, and trample upon his Laws, he will accept a few Tears and Promises to live well, when we can live no longer, in exchange for all the Duty we owe him; and that we may sit all the Day in the Lap of our Lusts, and enjoy them without controul, and then at Night when we can enjoy them no longer fly up to Heaven upon the Wings of a LORD HAVE MERCY UPON US. And yet a wicked Life is either built upon no Principles at all, or upon such as these which are ridiculous beyond all the extravagant Conceits of Fools or Madmen. 'Tis no wonder therefore, that the Scripture so frequently brands the Sinner with the infamous Character of a Fool; for if you measure him by the Principles he acts upon, there is not a greater Fool in Nature; which is a plain Evidence, how much Vice doth besot the Understanding of Men, and like those barbarous Philistines, puts out their Eyes, only to sport it self with their Follies and Extravagances. So that methinks had we any Reverence for our own Reason, by which we are constituted Men, and distinguished from the Beasts that perish; we should never endure those Lusts within our Bosoms, that do so much impair and waste it.

II. Sin subverts the natural Subordination of our Faculties. For the natural Order and Polity of our Natures consists in the Dominion of our Rational Faculties, over our sensitive Passions and Appetites; so that then only we live according to the Law of our Nature, when we eat and drink, and love and hate, and fear and hope, and desire and delight, according as right Reason prescribes. For the noblest Principle of human Nature is Reason, by which it is that we are constituted Men, and advanced into a Form of Beings above all sublunary Creatures; and this Reason of ours is implanted in us, by the great Author of our Beings, for no other End, but only to steer and direct us; to be an Eye to our blind and brutish Affections, to correct the Errors of our Imaginations, and bound the Extravagances of our Passions and Appetites, and to regulate the whole Course of our Actions; so as that we may demean our selves, as becomes such Beings as we are, and placed in such Relations and Circumstances. God therefore having compounded us of contrary Natures, viz. Rational and Sensual, which are pregnant with contrary Inclinations, and Affections; from hence arises the Necessity of all those Heroick Virtues, which consist in the Dominion of our Reason over the sensitive Affections and Appetites; such as Chastity and Sobriety, Meekness and Equanimity, and the like; all which are proper to us as Beings made up of contrary Principles, from whence spring those contrary Inclinations, in the good or bad Government whereof consists the Nature of Virtue and Vice. Whilst therefore we keep our brutal Passions and Appetites in Subjection to our Reason, we follow the genuine Current of human Nature; in which our best and noblest Principle rules, and all our inferiour Powers are regularly subordinate to it: But when we degenerate into a State of Sin, we thereby discompose the Harmony of our Natures, and put all our well-ranked Faculties into a strange Disorder and Confusion. For every Sin is a Rebellion either of our Passions, or Appetites against our Reason; and we never commit any known Evil, but we wilfully affront our own Understandings, and offer open Violence to those superiour Faculties that should rule and govern us. So that when by a Custom of Sinning, our Passions and Appetites have been train'd up for a while in Disobedience to our Reason, they will by degrees grow so head-strong and ungovernable, that it will be a hard Matter to restrain them within any Compass of Reason and Sobriety; and unless we take a World of Pains to suppress them, they will never leave rioting and tumultuating within us, till they have broke through all their natural Confinements into a licentious, wild, and boundless Anarchy; and having thus got head within us, and beaten our Reason from its native Throne, they will hurry us headlong into all manner of Follies and Extravagances. For now we shall act no longer from Reason, but from Sense; our Nature being turn'd upside-down, and the Cardinal Points of our Motion chang'd into quite contrary Positions; so that our Reason will stand us in no other Stead, but only to cater for our Flesh and sensitive Affections, and to make us Brutes with greater Luxury and Relish: And being thus wholly acted by our brutish Sense, and led only by the blind Instincts of the Flesh, our Reason will have no Hand in the Government of our Lives; but, like the Beasts of the Field, we shall live at random, and do Things, not because they are reasonable in themselves, but because they are pleasing to our unreasonable Affections and Appetites. Such a strange Disorder doth Sin bring upon our Natures; so miserably doth it blend and confound our Faculties, that were it not for our Speech and Shape, it would scarce leave us any remaining Character of Distinction from the Beasts that perish. For it dissolves our Reason into a mere sensual Sagacity, and enslaves that high-born Power to every base Passion and Appetite; and so reduces our well-formed Natures, into an undistinguished Chaos, where Sense and Reason, Brute and Man are shuffled together in an Heap of rude and undigested Ruins. So that methinks had we any Reverence for that excellent Nature that we carry about with us, that Nature by which we are allied to Angels, and do border upon God himself; we should never endure to harbour those inhuman Lusts, that do so disorder and confound it, that make such Spoils and Devastations within us, that do so disturb the Harmony of our Faculties, and disjoint the very Frame of our Beings.

III. Sin disturbs the Tranquillity of our Minds; and this naturally follows from the former: For the Mind of Man can never be at Ease, so long as its Bones are out of Joint, and all its Faculties so wofully disorder'd. For thus every Thing is at ease, so long as it is in its own natural State and Condition: But when once its Parts are displaced, or put into a Disorder, or distorted into an unnatural Figure; it is in restless Motion till it returns again to the specifick State and Posture of its own Nature. And so it is with the Mind of Man; which, while it preserves its own natural Station, and Superiority over our Affections and Appetites, is calm and quiet and serene, and enjoys within it self perpetual Ease and Tranquillity: But being thrown out of its native Throne, and led into Captivity by its own Vassals, it can find no Rest in this preternatural State; but like a disjointed Member is in perpetual Anguish and Anxiety; and having, like all other Things, an inward strong Propension to its own natural State and Condition, it will be perpetually struggling and contending towards it, till it hath quite wearied and tired out it self with its own vain and ineffectual Efforts; and then it will sit down and bemoan it self, and pine away with Grief and Dissatisfaction. And hence it is that in the Course of a wicked Life we feel such Contentions between the Flesh and the Spirit, such perpetual Broils between the Law in our Minds, and the Law in our Members; which proceeds from this natural Struggling, and Conatus of the Mind to recover its native Empire over our Affections and Appetites: From which it will never wholly surcease, till it is wholly subdued to the Will of the Flesh; and when it is so, it will be perpetually torn and distracted by those various, wild, and inconsistent Affections, whereunto it will be subjected. For so long as our Passions are subject to our Reason, there can be no Division among them; because nothing can divide our Passions, but only our proposing to our selves different and contrary Ends: But the Ends of Reason are all consistent with, and subordinate to one another, its lesser and inferiour Ends being only the Inns at which it baits upon the Road towards its superiour ones, and whilst we are under the Power and Conduct of one sovereign End, our Passions must necessarily joyn hand in hand, and walk together like Brethren in Unity. But when once they have shaken off the Yoke of Reason, and submitted themselves to the Dominion of Sense; among that great Variety of Ends and Objects which Sense proposes to them, they must needs be torn and divided one from another. For such is the Scantiness of sensual Goods, that we not being able to content our selves with any one of them, are fain to walk the Rounds in a constant Succession and Circle of Varieties; and then every one of these various Goods will create within us a various Desire: And so as Sense doth multiply its Temptations, we shall still multiply our Desires and Affections; and at every new Game that springs, we shall still let fly new Passions. But now the Ends of Vice are not only various, but also contrary to, and inconsistent with one another: For all Vices consisting in Extremes, either in Excesses or Defects, their Ends must be contrary too, and so they cannot but disagree; Excess and Defect being in themselves most contrary. And these contrary Vices must needs raise contrary Factions in the Mind, and people it with a Rabble of wild and inconsistent Passions; which will be always bandying one against another, and consequently embroiling the Soul in eternal Mutinies and Tumults. And this is the State of every vicious Man; he is divided into infinite Schisms and Separations; and like a barbarous Countrey, cantoned out into a World of petty Principalities, which are always together by the Ears, and continually invading one anothers Dominions. Now what a miserable Distraction must a Man's Mind be in, when it is thus jostled to and fro in such a Crowd of contrary and impetuous Passions; Pride shoves it one way, and Covetousness another; when Ambition thrusts it forward, and Cowardice pulls it back again; and so many different Lusts do, at the same Time, hurry it so many different and contrary Ways? How is it possible it should escape Adam's Fate, to be worried till it is torn in Pieces by its own Hounds? And therefore as we value the Peace of our own Minds, and would not have the inward Harmony discompos'd by the perpetual Jarrings of so many contrary Passions, it concerns us to subdue and mortifie our Lusts: For so long as we entertain these seditious Incendiaries, they will be perpetually raising Tumults within us, and our Minds will never be at quiet for them. For the only Way to keep our Minds at Peace, is to unite our Affections; which we can never hope to do, till we have subdu'd them to the Empire of our Reason. But when we come to be under the Command of that one supreme End which our Reason will propose to us, as the utmost Scope of our Desires; then and not till then will these scattered Rivulets of our Affections unite themselves in one and the same Channel, and flow towards one and the same Ocean: And then our Mind will be at Rest, and its contrary Passions being laid, which now like the boisterous Waves dash one against another, it will no longer be capable of being ruffl'd into a Storm; but in the midst of all the Changes of this World, will find it self perpetually inspired with the most calm and gentle Thoughts.

CHAP. IV.

Of Helps to Mortification, given us by the Spirit of God.

THE Motives and Arguments for Mortification, which arise from considering the Mischiefs and Inconveniencies of Sin, having been spoken to, I shall now proceed to such Helps to this Duty, as are given us by the Spirit of God: And I shall consider them under these four Heads;

First, The external Arguments and Motives of the Gospel.

Secondly, The external Providences of the divine Spirit by which he excites us to our Duty.

Thirdly, The Aids and Assistances which the holy Angels give us, who are the Agents and Ministers of the Holy Ghost.

Fourthly, The internal Motions and Operations of the Holy Ghost upon our Souls.

I. Let us consider the external Arguments and Motives of the Gospel; such as the Promises and Threats of it, the great Example of our Saviour described in it, together with all those mighty Considerations out of his Passion and Resurrection, his Intercession for us at the right Hand of God, and his Coming to judge the World in the last Day: All which are the Aids and Assistances of the holy Spirit, who hath revealed them to us, and demonstrated their Truth and Divinity by sundry miraculous Operations; which are therefore called the Evidences and Demonstrations of the Spirit. So that whatsoever there is in the Gospel to enable us to our Duty; whatsoever Counter-charms its Promises afford us against the Charms and Allurements of our own Lusts; whatsoever Antidotes its Threatnings prescribe us against the Terrours of the Devil's Temptations; whatsoever Motives there are in the Life or Death, Resurrection, and Intercession of our blessed Saviour, and in his final Judgment by which we must stand, or fall for ever: In a Word, whatsoever Arguments the Laws or Creed of our holy Religion offer us, either to incite us to our Duty, or to enable us to baffle the Temptations of Vice; they are all from the Spirit and consequently are to be reckon'd among those gracious Aids and Assistances which He affords us. And hence the Gospel which teaches us to deny Ungodliness and worldly Lusts, and to live soberly, righteously and godly, is called the Grace of God which bringeth Salvation unto all Men; Tit. ii. 11, 12. And in Rom. viii. 2. the Apostle calls it the Law of the Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus, by which he was made free from the Law of Sin and Death: Nay some times the Gospel is called the Spirit, 2 Cor. iii. 6. who also hath made us able Ministers of the new Testament, not of the Letter, but of the Spirit; i. e. not of the Law, but of the Gospel; for the Letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth Life:

That

That is, as he elsewhere explains himself, the Law is a Ministration of Death, but the Gospel brings Life and Immortality to light: And that this is the Meaning, is plain from what follows, ſ. 7, 8. but if the Ministration of Death written and engraven in Stones was glorious, (which is a plain Description of the Law of Moses) how ſhall not the Ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious? And conſonantly hereunto by the Spirit we may underſtand the Motives and Arguments of the Gospel.

II. Let us conſider the external Providences of the divine Spirit by which he excites us to our Duty, and doth many ways adminiſter to our Reformation; which are ſo conſiderable a Part of God's Grace and Aſſiſtance, that there are very few good Thoughts and Purpoſes that ſpring up in our Minds, which have not their Riſe from ſome external Event of divine Providence. And this we may eaſily obſerve, by following the Train of our own Thoughts, and purſuing the Stream of them to their Spring and Original: For though many Times we find good Thoughts injected into us we know not how, nor whence; yet, if we do but curiouſly obſerve the Riſe of our ſobereſt Thoughts and Purpoſes, we ſhall generally find that it is ſome external Accident or other that occasions them. Either our Sin betrays us into ſome great Shame or Infelicity, or our wicked Deſigns are baffled by ſome intervening Accident, or ſome remarkable Judgment meets us, as the Angel did Balaam, in the Road of our Folly and Wickedneſs, by which our ſtupid Conſciences are many Times ſtartled into Reflections; or by ſome good Providence we are directed to a ſerious Book, or faithful Guide, or link'd into ſome pious Family, or virtuous Aſſociation, by whole wiſe Admonitions, holy Examples, or friendly Reproofs, we are frequently inſpired with good Thoughts, and ſerious Reſolutions; and from theſe, or ſuch like Providences ordinarily ſpring the Beginnings of our Reformation. So that it is no mean Aſſiſtance that the divine Providence contributes to us; but by a thouſand Arts of Love; and Methods of Kindneſs which we take no Notice of, it adminiſters to our Recovery, and ſerves the everlaſting Interests of our Souls. Sometimes it removes Temptations from us, and keeps them at a diſtance, while our Luſt is hot and ready to take Fire, till it is cool'd and extinguiſh'd by ſober Counſels: Sometimes by indiscernible Accidents it ſuggeſts good Thoughts to us, and raiſes good Deſires in us, and then ſeconds thoſe Accidents with ſuch a Train of Events, as it knows will be moſt conducive to continue thoſe Thoughts, and to nurse up thoſe Deſires into fix'd and laſting Reſolutions: In a Word, it obſerves the mollia fandi tempora, and is infinitely watchful in the timing its Addreſſes, ſo as to ſtrike while the Iron is hot, and to interpoſe when we are moſt apt to be perſuaded and wrought upon. If therefore by theſe Aſſiſtances of the divine Providence we do mortify our Luſts, we do it by the Spirit; who doth ſo order and diſpoſe all thoſe outward Events, and Accidents, as may be moſt conducive to our Amendment.

III. Let us conſider thoſe Aids and Aſſiſtances, which the holy Angels give us, who are the Agents and Miniſters of the Holy Ghoſt; whom he ſends forth to ſuccour and aſſiſt us in the Diſcharge of our Duty. And hence Heb. i. 14. they are ſaid to be miniſtring Spirits ſent forth to miniſter for them who ſhall be Heirs of Salvation: And in purſuance of this their Miniſtry they are ſaid to pitch their Tents round about thoſe that fear God, Pſal. xxxiv. 7. and God himſelf hath promiſed to give his Angels charge over them to keep them in all their Ways, in the xci. Pſal. 11. which Expreſſions, I confeſs do immediately refer unto the outward and temporal Protection, which good Men do receive from the holy Angels: But ſince thoſe blessed and benign Spirits are ſo much concerned in human Affairs, we cannot but ſuppoſe that, ſo far as their own Ability, and the Laws of the inviſible World will permit them, they are ready to ſuccour our Souls, as well as Bodies; and to contribute to our eternal as well as temporal Interests; eſpecially conſidering that of our Saviour, Luke xv. 10. that there is Joy in the Preſence of the Angels of God over one Sinner that repenteth. And if they are ſo far concern'd in our Repentance, as to rejoyce in it, to be ſure sure they will and do promote it; since in so doing they contribute to their own Joy. Now the holy Angels, being the Ministers of the divine Providence, have great Advantages of assisting us in our Duties, and serving the Interests of our Souls; which Advantages to be sure their own Goodness and Benignity will prompt them to make the utmost Improvement of. They have many Opportunities to present good Objects to us, and to remove Temptations from us, of disciplining our Natures by Prosperities and Afflictions, and of ordering and varying our outward Circumstances, so as to render our Duty more facile and easy to us. And besides, as they are Spirits they have a very near and familiar Access to our Souls; not that they can make any immediate Impressions upon our Understandings, or Wills, which is a Sphere of Light to which no created Spirit can approach, but is under the immediate Oeconomy of the Father of Spirits: But yet being Spirits, I conceive, they may easily insinuate themselves into our Fancies, and mingle with the Spirits and Humours of our Bodies; and by that means suggest good Thoughts to us, and raise holy Affections in us. For that they can work upon our Fancies is apparent; else there could be neither Diabolical nor Angelical Dreams. And if they can so act upon our Fancies, as to excite new Images and Representations in them, they may by this means communicate new Thoughts to the Understanding; which naturally prints off from the Fancy all those Ideas, and Images which it sets and composes. And as they can work upon our Fancies, so they can also upon our Spirits and Humours; else they have not the Power of curing, or inflicting a Disease; and by thus working upon our Spirits they can in some measure moderate the Violence of our Passions, which are nothing but the flowing and reflowings of the Spirits to and fro from the Heart: And by working upon our Humours they can compose us to such a sedate and serious Temper, as is most apt to receive religious Impressions, and to be influenc'd by the Motions of the Holy Ghost. These Things I doubt not but the blessed Angels can do, and many Times do, though we perceive it not: And though possibly by the Laws of the World of Spirits they may be restrained from doing their utmost for us, that so we may still act with an uncontrouled Freedom, and be left under a Necessity of constant and diligent Endeavour, yet doubtless their Assistance is not wanting to us; but as the evil Angels are always ready to pervert and seduce us, so the good are no less ready to reform and recover us. And since whatsoever they do for us, they do as the Agents and Ministers of the divine Spirit; whatsoever we do by their Assistance, we do by the Holy Spirit.

IV. And lastly, let us consider the internal Motions and Operations of the Holy Ghost upon our Souls. For besides all those Assurances which the Holy Spirit vouchsafes to us by his Word, and his Providence, and his holy Angels; he does also very powerfully aid and help us by his own immediate Motions and Suggestions. For that the Ministrations of Religion have been always accompanied with the internal Operations of the Spirit, is evident from that miraculous Success that Religion hath found in the World: For I cannot imagine how Christianity, that never was beholding to humane Force and Power, but instead of that found all the Powers of the World armed against it, and had so many mighty Prejudices to combat, before ever it could be admitted to speak with Mens Reason; I say, I cannot imagine, how under such Circumstances it could have thrived and flourished as it did, had it not been accompanied with an invisible Power from above. For how did it triumph in its very Infancy over all the Power and Malice of the World, growing like the Palm-tree by Depression, and conquering in the midst of Flames? What wonderful Alterations did it make in the Lives and Manners of Men, transformed in an Instant the debauched and dissolute into Patterns of the strictest Temperance and Sobriety, and with its mighty Charms turning Wolves into Lambs, and Vultures into Turtle-doves? Which wondrous Effects were so very frequent, that the Heathens themselves took special Notice of them; which, as St. Austin tells us, made them to attribute its Success to the Power of Magick; thinking it impossible that it should do such Wonders, without the Assistance of some powerful Spirit. And indeed it is not to be supposed, how it could work such strange and sudden Alterations in Men, by its external Arguments and Motives, without a divine Power concurring with them and animating and enforcing them: And though now that Christianity hath gotten such footing in the World, and is become the Religion of Nations, the divine Spirit does not ordinarily work upon Men in such a strange and miraculous Way; but proceeds in more human Methods by joining in with our Understandings, and leading us forward by the Rules of Reason and Sobriety; so that whatsoever Aids it affords us, they work in the same Way, and after the same Manner, as if all were performed by the Strength of our own Reason; yet we have a standing Promise which extends to all Ages of Christianity, that to him who improves the Grace which he hath already, more Grace shall be given; that if we work out our Salvation with Fear and Trembling, God will work in us to will and to do; and that he will give his holy Spirit to every one that sincerely asks, and seeks it. For of the Performance of this Promise, there are none of us all but have had many sensible Experiences; for how often do we find good Thoughts injected into our Minds we know not how nor whence? How frequently are we seiz'd with strong and vehement Convictions of the Folly and Danger of our own wicked Courses, even in the midst of our loose Mirth and Jollity, when we are rock'd into a deep Security, when we have endeavour'd to chase good Thoughts from our Minds, or to drown them in Sensuality and Voluptuousness? How often have we been haunted with their Importunities, till we have been scar'd by them into sober Resolutions? And when we have complied with them, what Joys and Refreshments have we sometimes found in the Discharge of our Duty, to encourage us to Perseverance in Well-doing? All which are plain and sensible Instances of the internal Operations of the holy Spirit upon our Souls. So that when we comply with these inward Motions of the Holy Ghost, so as to forsake those Sins which they dissuade us from, we do then mortify the Deeds of the Body by the Spirit.

From the Consideration of these Benefits by the Spirit of God, many useful Inferences may be deduced: And First, from hence we may discern the Necessity of the Spirit, to enable us to mortify the Deeds of the Body. And indeed considering the Infirmity of our Natures, and the many Temptations we have to encounter, how we are habituated to a sensual Life before we are capable of exercising our Reason, and how much our Wills are bias'd by our carnal Inclinations; it is hardly to be imagin'd, how we should ever be able to retrieve our selves from the Power and Dominion of our own Lusts, without some supernatural Aid and Assistance. For tho' we have an Understanding capable of distinguishing between Good and Evil, and of discerning all those Advantages and Mischiefs that are inseparable unto virtuous and vicious Actions; though we have a Will that can comply with the Dictates of right Reason, and is no Ways determined and necessitated to Evil; and though we can do whatsoever we will: Yet if besides those Motives which arise out of the Nature of Virtue and Vice, we had not supernatural Arguments to assist us, our Inclinations would certainly prove too strong for our Reason. If the lascivious Wanton had no other Arguments to oppose against the Temptations of Lust, but that it vexes him with Impatience, fills him with mad and ungovernable Desires, torments him with Fear and Jealousy, betrays him into Sickness and Poverty, and the like; how can it be expected that such slender Arguments should prevail against the Importunities of his depraved Appetite? If the covetous Oppressor had no other Motive to confront his Lust with, but that his Injustice exposes him to the Hatred of those whom he injures, and violates the Laws of Society, and consequently is destructive of the publick Good, in which his own is involved; alas! what thin Arguments would these be to him in Comparison with the Temptations of a Bag of Gold? And though to these natural Arguments God hath added sundry supernatural Ones in the Re-

Revelations of the Gospel, such as are in themselves sufficient to check our most outrageous Appetites, and to baffle the strongest Temptations; Yet alas! our Thoughts are so squander'd among this great Multiplicity of carnal Objects that surround us, that did not the divine Spirit frequently suggest those supernatural Arguments to us, and by the powerful Influence of his Grace keep our Minds intent upon them, we should never recollect our selves to such a thorough Consideration of them, as is necessary to persuade our selves by them into a lasting Resolution of Amendment. So that we have very great need both of the outward, and inward Grace of God; for though we can deliberate what is best to chuse, and chuse what we find best upon Deliberation; yet we are like Men standing in bivio, between two contrary Reads, and are naturally indeed free to turn either to the Right Hand or to the Left; but on the left-hand Way there are so many Temptations perpetually beckoning to us, and inviting us unto that which is Evil, and our brutish Passions and Appetites are so ready upon all occasions to yield and comply with them; that we should certainly go that way, did not the holy Spirit importune us with strong Arguments to turn to the right-hand way of Virtue and Goodness.

II. We may learn from hence the Necessity of our Concurrence with the Spirit. For the Spirit of God works upon us in such a Way, as is most congruous to our free and rational Natures; that is, it doth not act upon us by mere Force, or irresistible Power, but addresses to our Reason, with Arguments and Persuasions, and so moves upon our Wills by the Mediation of our Understandings: But when he hath done all, he leaves it to our own Choice whether we will reject, or embrace his Proposals. For although I firmly believe, as no Man would be wicked, were he not invited by the Temptations of Sin, so no Man would be good, were he not solicited by the Grace of God; yet I see no Reason to imagine, that either the one or the other invades the Liberty of our Wills. The Temptations of Sin indeed incline us one Way and the Grace of God another; but when all is done, they leave us free to chuse or refuse, and neither the one nor the other forces or necessitates us. And hence the Successes of the divine Grace are in Scripture attributed to the Disposition, or Indisposition of the Subject it acts upon, so Matth. xi. 20, 21. Then began he to upbraid the Cities wherein his mighty Works were done; woe unto thee Corazin, woe unto thee Bethsaida; for if the mighty Works which were done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in Sack-cloth and Ashes. From whence I argue, that that Grace which would have converted Tyre and Sidon, was not irresistible; for if it had it would have converted Corazin and Bethsaida too: For how could they have resisted irresistible Grace? And why should it not have had the same Effect on the one, which it would have had on the other; had there not been something in the one which was not in the other, which did actually resist and vanquish it? And so likewise in the Parable of the Seed sown in the High-way, the stony, thorny and good Ground, Matth. xiii. the Reason why the Seed prospered in some, and not in others, is plainly resolved into the different Condition of the Soil: for as for those that either considered not at all, or not enough, the Seed of the divine Grace proved altogether ineffectual to them; but as for those who had so thoroughly considered its Proposals, as to form in their Minds a firm and settled Judgment of them, it produced in them a most fruitful Spring of Virtues and good Works. Which is a plain Argument that the Successes of God's Grace depend upon the Concurrence of our Endeavours with it; for had it wrought irresistibly upon these different Soils, it must have had the same Success in all. And indeed it is infinitely unreasonable to expect, that God should make us good irresistibly, without the free Concurrence of our own Will, and Endeavours; since by so doing he must offer Violence to the Frame of our Beings, and alter the established Course of our Natures; which consists in a free Determination of our selves, according to the Dictates of our own Reason. For that which is irresistible must necessitate the Subject upon which it acts; and therefore if we are impell'd to be good by a Power Power which we cannot resist, it is not in our Power to chuse whether we will be good or no. Wherefore though God be infinitely desirous of our Happiness, and ready to contribute whatsoever is necessary to promote it; yet he will not effect it by necessary Means and Causes, but in such a way only as is fairly consistent with the Liberty of our Wills: that is, he will not save us without our selves, whether we will or no; but take our free Consent and Endeavour along with him. And having done all that is necessary to persuade us, he expects that we should consider what he saith, and upon that, consent to his gracious Proposals, and express this Consent in a constant Course of holy and vertuous Endeavours: And if we will not do this, we cannot be sav'd, unless God work a Miracle for us, and alters the Course of Nature; which is the great Law by which his Providence doth govern all the Beings in the World. And this we have no Reason to expect, either from the Goodness of God's Nature or from any Revelation he hath made to us: Not from the Goodness of his Nature; for why is it not as consistent with that to govern us as free Agents, as to make us such; Not from any Revelation of his Will; for that indispensably exacts our free Concurrence with his Grace, and Assistance, and requires us to make our selves a new Heart, to cleanse our selves from all Filthiness of the Flesh and Spirit, and to work out our own Salvation with Fear and Trembling. 'Tis true God is also said to work in us to will and to do, to create in us a new Heart, and to create us in Jesus Christ unto good Works: Which seemingly repugnant Expressions can be no otherwise reconciled, but by supposing God and Man to be Joint-Causes contributing to the same Effect; so that where God speaks as if he did all, we must suppose the Concurrence of our Endeavours; and where he speaks as if we were to do all, we must suppose the Concurrence of his own Grace.

III. We may be assur'd from hence of the Certainty of Success, upon such a Concurrence of our Endeavours with the Spirit of God: which plainly implies the Assistances of the Spirit to be within our Power, as being in an inseparable Conjunction with our sincere and faithful Endeavours. And that they are so, is apparent; for as for the outward Assistances of the Spirit, which are the powerful Arguments and Motives of the Gospel, we have them always at hand, and may make use of them when we please; we have a free Access to this divine Armoury, and may at any time furnish our selves with sufficient Weapons to foil the most formidable Temptations: And as for the inward Aids of the blessed Spirit, God by his own free Promise hath inseparably entailed them upon our honest and pious Endeavours. Thus he hath promised to give his Grace to those who humble themselves, and to draw nigh unto them who submit themselves to him: Jam. iv. 6, 7, 8. and unto every one that hath, that is, improves what he hath, he hath promised it shall be given and that he shall have abundance, Mat. xxv. 29. and to every one that asks sincerely and honestly, he hath promised to give his Holy Spirit, Luk. xi. 13. And thus by his own free Promise he hath tied his Spirit to our Endeavours, so that we may have his Assistance when we please; he being confined by his own Promise to be ready at our Call, and to come in to the Aid of our Endeavours, whensoever we shall need and ask his Assistance. And having such a powerful Second engaged in our Quarrel, what Reason have we to doubt of Success and Victory? For what Lust is there so strong that we may not subdue? What Habit so inveterate, that we may not conquer? What Temptation so powerful that we may not repulse, whose endeavours are thus seconded with Almighty Aids from above? For now whatsoever the Divine Spirit can do in us, we can do; because we can do that, which being done, will infallibly oblige him to concur with us: And though we cannot conquer our Lusts in our own single Strength, yet we can by our Endeavours engage him on our side, who is both able and willing to enable us to conquer them. So that if we will, we may be invincible: And there is no Temptation can be too strong for us, if we do not by our own Sloth and Cowardice disengage the Almighty Spirit from assisting us.

IV. From hence we may perceive how much Reason there is for our continual Prayers and Supplications to God; since it is so apparent that our Victory over Sin, and consequently our eternal Welfare doth so much depend upon the Aids and Assistances of the Spirit of God; and since God is so ready to give his holy Spirit to us, whensoever we sincerely ask and desire it. Now the great Reason of Prayer is Want, and the greatest Encouragement to it is Assurance of Supply; but there is nothing in the World that we have more need of, and (if we faithfully seek it) nothing that we can have more Assurance of, than the gracious Influence of the Holy Ghost. We have as much need of it, as of our daily Bread; because our Souls will starve and famish without it: And we have as much Assurance of it, as the sacred Word of the God of Truth can give us; because he hath promised it to us who can as soon cease to be, as not to be faithful: And therefore if after so much Need and Encouragement, we do neglect our Prayers, and turn our backs upon the Throne of Grace; it is a plain Argument that either we are wretchedly insensible of our Need of God's Grace, or causelessly suspicious of the Truth of his Promise. And doubtless he that can pass Day after Day without putting up one Prayer to Heaven, that can venture himself among the infinite Snares and Temptations of this World, without imploring the divine Aid and Protection, is a very bold and fool-hardy Sinner; one that declares he regards neither God nor his own Soul, and that he cares not what becomes of him either here or hereafter. Methinks did we but soberly consider how much we want God's Grace, and how ready he is to afford it us; we should as soon venture to rush naked into a Battel among Squadrons of Swords and Spears, as to go at any Time into the World without God, to hazard our immortal Souls in the midst of such a numberless Battel of Temptations, without arming our selves by Prayer with the divine Grace and Assistance. Wherefore since we have so much Need, and (if we seek it) so much Assurance too of the Spirit of God; let us take that excellent Counsel of the Author to the Hebrews, Heb. iv. 16. Go boldly and importunately to the Throne of Grace, that we may obtain Mercy, and find Grace to help us in the Time of Need.

V. From hence we may perceive the indispensable Necessity of our faithful and sincere Endeavours, in order to the mortifying our Lusts. 'Tis a strange Principle which some Men have taken up, that if their Names are recorded in the eternal Roll of Election, they shall in Time be made good by an irresistible Grace; and that if they are not, they shall never be good at all, though they should endeavour it with their utmost Power and Diligence: And so they think, their best way is to lye still in the Harbour and expect the Event; concluding it in vain to begin their Voyage towards Heaven, without an irresistible Gale from thence. A Doctrine which I doubt too many Men have improved to their own everlasting Ruin; though it hath no Foundation at all in Reason, and hath nothing to support it self, but a few mistaken Phrases of Scripture. But he that shall impartially consult the whole Current of God's Word, will find that the ordinary Language and Sense of it is this; that God desires not the Death of a Sinner, but would have all Men to be saved; but because he would save us in such a Way as is congruous to free Agents, and not by fatal and necessary Means, therefore he indispensably exacts the Concurrence of our Endeavours; that we should run the Race that is set before us, and strive to enter into the strait Gate, and that by patient Continuance in well-doing we should seek for Honour and Glory and Immortality. And from any thing that God hath said to us, we have as much Reason to hope to be nourish'd without eating, as to be save'd without Endeavour. 'Tis true, God hath promised by his Grace to co-operate with us, to joyn in with our Faculties, and bless our virtuous Effays; but he is by no means obliged to work for us, while we sit idle; to mortifie our Lusts while we feed and pamper them; or to purifie our Minds, while we go on to pollute them with all the Filthiness of the Flesh and Spirit. No: if we would that God should assist us, we must do what we can for our selves: We can attend upon the ordinary Medns and Ministries of Salvation, we can ponder and consider the great Motives of our Religion, and abstain at least from the outward Acts of Sin, and implore the divine Aid to prosper and succeed our Endeavours. And if we will do but this, and what else is in our Power, let us then blame God, if we are not successful, and if we die in our Sins, let us charge his Decrees with our Ruin. But if we disregard the publick Ministries of Religion, and wilfully excommunicate all good Thoughts from our Minds; if we will comply with every Temptation to Sin, and refuse to crave Assistance from Heaven against it; we have none to blame for our Ruin but our selves. For God hath told us before-hand, that He will not save us without our selves; and therefore he that is to go along Journey, hath as much Reason to sit down in hope to be snatched up into the Air by a Whirlwind, and so to be carried on the Wings of it to his appointed Stage; as we have to neglect our Endeavours for Heaven, in Expectation to be haled and snatched up thither, by the Almighty Pulleys of an irresistible Grace. Let us not therefore upon this vain Presumption sit still any longer with our Hands in our Bosoms, lest we perish in our Sloth, and expose our Souls to everlasting Ruin, by an idle Expectation of being irresistibly saved.

VI. From hence we may discern the Possibility of keeping the Commands of God, in that God by his Spirit doth so powerfully aid and assist us. For supposing we cannot keep the divine Law by our own single Strength and Power, yet it is apparent that we can do that which will oblige the divine Spirit to assist and enable us to keep it; that is, we can do our Endeavour, which being done, entitles us to the Promise of divine Grace, and Assistance. And though we cannot do all our selves, yet since we can do so much as will certainly oblige God to impower us to do the rest; it is already in our Power to do all, if we will. He that is strong enough to carry a Burthen of an hundred Weight, but is required to carry two, may carry both; supposing that by bearing as much as he can, he shall certainly be enabled to carry the whole. Now God hath promised us by the Assistances of his Grace, whatsoever is wanting in the Power of our Nature; and therefore if we fall short of our Duty, and consequently of the Rewards of it, we can reasonably blame no one but our selves. For though we cannot do all in our own Strength, yet that we do not do all, is as much our Fault, as if we could; since we may do all through Christ, who would strengthen us, would we but do what we can. Let us therefore no longer cry out of the Impossibility of God's Commands, nor charge our Disobedience to them upon the unavoidable Weakness of our own Natures; since it is so plain, that our Sin is resolvable into no other Principle, but our own wretched Wilfulness and Obstinacy. But let us betake our selves to a serious and hearty Endeavour of doing our Master's Will; and if when we have done all that we can, we should then fall short of our Duty, and miss the Reward of it; we may then with good Reason call him an austere Master, for imposing tyrannical and impossible Commands, and expecting to reap where he hath not sown.

Seventhly and lastly, We may perceive from hence the Inexcusableness of Sinners, if they go on in their Wickedness. For God, you see, doth vouchsafe to us such plentiful Measures of his Grace and Assistance, that in the Strength of it we may mortifie our Lusts if we will, and work out our own eternal Salvation: But if we will be negligent, and rather chuse to perish in our Sin, than take the pains to subdue it by the Grace of God, our Folly is inexcusable; and no one can be charged with our Ruin, but our selves. For what could God have done more for us, than he hath already done? He hath solicited us to forsake our Sin with the most important Arguments and Motives, tempted our Hopes with a Heaven of immortal Joys, and alarmed our Fears with the Horrors of an endless and intolerable Damnation; so that we cannot go on in our Sin without leaping over Heaven into Hell, and wading through an infinite Ocean of Happiness into the Lake of Fire and Brimstone. He hath plainly told us, what the Event and Issue of our Folly will be; and warn'd us before hand that if we will be wicked, we must be miserable: So that if after this we do go on in our Sin, we run our selves upon a foreseen Damnation, and leap into Hell with our Eyes open. He hath promised, that if we will seriously attempt our own Recovery, his Grace shall be sufficient for us, to back our Endeavours and crown them with Success: So that if after this we do persist in our Folly, we chuse Destruction, and rush headlong into a Ruin which we might easily avoid. In a Word, he hath again and again suggested good Thoughts to our Minds, and by an importunate Iteration of them hath frequently courted us to repent, and live: So that if still we persevere in our Impenitence, we stop our Ears to the Addresses of Heaven, and do in effect tell God, that we will not hearken to him, though our Souls are at Stake, and 'tis no less than an everlasting Ruin that he dissuades us from. And what Remedy, or Excuse is there for such intolerable Obstinacy? So that it is a plain Case, God hath done so much for us, that there is not any Thing wanting to our everlasting Salvation, but only our own Wills; and if we will not comply with his Grace and Assistance, he will not save us whether we will or no. So that, when Inquisition shall be made for the Blood of our Souls, the utmost we can charge God with, is this; that he did not tie up our Hands, to keep us from murdering our selves, with the Cords of an irresistible Fate; and by his invincible Power drag us to Heaven, whether we would or no. But if we have so little Regard of our selves, as to spurn at our own Happiness, it is not fit that God should force it upon us; and it would be a mean and unreasonable Condescension in him, to prostitute the Rewards of Virtue to those that wilfully refuse them. Wherefore if we perish in our Sin, after God hath done so much for us, he may fairly wash his Hands in Innocency over us, and charge our Blood upon our own Heads: And how deplorable soever our Condition proves in the future State, God's Justice will triumph for ever in our Ruin; and our own Consciences, in Confort with all the rational World, will pronounce him to be most just and righteous in all his Ways.

CHAP. V.

Of the Eternal Reward of Mortification and Holiness.

THE Apostle having declared for our Encouragement, Rom. viii. 13. That if we mortifie the Deeds of the Body, we shall live; I shall now insist upon these two Propositions,

First, That there is a State of Everlasting Life, and Happiness prepared for good Men.

Secondly, That this their everlasting Happiness depends upon their mortifying their Lusts.

I. That there is a State of everlasting Life and Happiness prepared for good Men: The Truth of which I shall endeavour to prove by some plain and easy Arguments.

I. Because the Law of our Natures hath not a sufficient Sanction without it. That there is in us such a Law of Nature, by which Things and Actions are distinguished into good and evil; is every whit as evident, as that we have within us a Principle of Reason. For no Man using his Reason can ever think it indifferent in it self, whether we obey our Parents, or contemn them; whether we lye, or speak Truth; whether we be grateful, or disingenuous to our Benefactors: For between these Things there is such an essential Difference, that they can never be equal Competitors to a rational Approbation. And accordingly among all Mankind we may observe, that there are some Vices, which have as much the universal Judgment of Reason against them, as any false

Conclusion

Conclusion in the Mathematicks; and some Vertues, whose Goodness has been as universally acknowledged, as the Truth of any Principle in Philosophy. Wherefore since God hath created us with such a Faculty, as doth necessarily make such a Judgment of Good and Evil; this Judgment must be God's, as well as the Faculties which made it: And that, which is God's Judgment in us, must necessarily be a Law to us. God therefore having put such a Law into our Natures; we cannot but suppose, that he hath taken Care to enforce the Observation of it, by rewarding and punishing us, according as we obey, or violate it: For without the Sanctions of Rewards and Punishments, to induce Men to observe them, Laws are insignificant; and that Law-giver doth but petition his Subjects to obey; that doth not promise such Rewards, nor denounce such Penalties, as are sufficient to oblige them to it. And no Reward can be sufficient to oblige us to obey, that doth not abundantly compensate any Loss, or Evil we may sustain by our Obedience, no Punishment sufficient to deter us from disobeying, that doth not far surmount all that Benefit, or Pleasure we can hope to reap from our Disobedience. Since therefore God hath implanted a Law in our Natures, we must either suppose, that he hath not sufficiently secured it by Rewards, and Punishments; which is to blaspheme his Wisdom, and Conduct: Or else we must acknowledge, that he hath established it with such Rewards, and Punishments, as do make it far more adviseable to obey, than to transgress it; which that he hath done in all Instances, can never be proved, without granting the Rewards and Punishments of another World. For if there be no such Thing as future Rewards and Punishments, it is a Folly for any Man to concern himself about any Thing but his present Interest; and in Reason we ought to judge Things to be good or evil, only as they promote, or obstruct our temporal Happiness and Welfare. Now though it is certain, that in the general there is a natural Good accruing to us from all virtuous Actions, as on the contrary a natural Evil from all vicious Ones; and it is ordinarily more conducive for our temporal Interests to obey, than to disobey the great Law of our Natures: Yet there are a World of Instances, wherein Vice may be more advantagious to us than Virtue, abstracting from the Rewards and Punishments of another World. It is ordinarily better for me to be an honest Man, than a Knave, it is more for my Reputation, yea, and usually for my Profit too; and it is more for the publick Good, in which my own is involved: But yet pro hic & nunc it may be better for me, with respect only to this World, to be a Knave, than an honest Man. For whensoever I can but cheat so secretly and securely, as not to fall under the publick Lash, nor to impair my Reputation; and I can but gain more by the Cheat, than I shall lose in the Damage of the Publick; it will be doubtless more advantagious for me, as to my worldly Interest, to cheat than to be honest. And how often such fair Opportunities of Cozenage do occur, no Man can be insensible, that hath but the least Insight into the Affairs of the World. So that if God had not reserved Rewards and Punishments for us in another World, we should not have sufficient Motives universally to observe that great Law of Righteousness, which he hath given us: For whensoever we could cheat or steal securely, it would be highly reasonable for us to do it; because thereby we might promote our own temporal Happiness, which would be the only End we should have to pursue. And the same may be said of all other Laws of Nature, which without the great Motives of a future Happiness and Misery, could no longer induce any reasonable Man to obey them, than it is for his temporal Interest to do so. For suppose I can secretly stab, or poison a Man, whom I hate or dread, or from whose Death I may reap any considerable Advantage: What should restrain me from such a barbarous Fact; If you say, the Law of Nature; pray what Reward doth the Law of Nature propose sufficient to compensate the Dissatisfaction of my Revenge, or the Danger I run in suffering my Enemy to live? Or what Punishment doth the Law of Nature denounce, that is sufficient to balance the Advantage of a thousand or ten thousand Pounds a Year, that may accrue to me by his Death? If you say, the Law of Nature proposes to me the Reward of a quiet and satisfied Mind, If I forbear; and denounces the Punishment of a guilty and amazed Conscience, if I commit the Murder: I easily answer, that this Peace, or Horror, which is consequent to the Forbearance, or Commission of Murder, arises from the Hope and Dread of future Rewards and Punishments; which being taken away, to murder, or not murder will be indifferent, as to any Peace or Horror that will follow upon it: And this being removed, what Consideration will there be left sufficient to restrain me from the bloody Fact, when I have an Opportunity to act it securely, and am furiously spurred on to it by my own Revenge and Covetousness? So that if there be 'no Rewards and Punishments in another Life, to enforce the Commands of the Law of Nature; it is apparent, that no such Rewards or Punishments are annexed to it in this Life, as are universally sufficient to oblige Men to observe it. And is it likely, that the All-wise Governour of the World would ever impose a Law under an insufficient Sanction? That he would ever give out his Commands to his Creatures, and then leave it indifferent to them whether they will obey him, or no? As he must needs have done, if in all Circumstances it be not far better for us to obey him, than to disobey him. And if our Nature is so framed, as not to be effectually persuaded to Obedience, without the Motives of everlasting Rewards and Punishments, it is at least highly credible, that there are such: Because it would be unworthy of God, so to frame the Nature of one of his noblest Creatures, as to render it incapable of being governed by him without Falshood and Deceit.

III: That there is a future Happiness reserved for good Men in the other World, is highly probable from those Desires and Expectations of it, which do so generally and naturally arise in pure and virtuous Minds. We rarely, if ever, read of any virtuous Man of whatsoever Nation, or Religion, or Sect of Philosophers, whose Mind hath not been winged with earnest Hopes and Desires of future Happiness; and I know none that have ever denied, or despaired of it, but only such as have first debauched and vitiating the Principles of their own Nature. Such were the Sadducees and Epicureans, Sects that had drowned all that was human in them in Sensuality and Voluptuousness, and are branded upon Record for their shameful Indulgence to their own brutish Genius: And such are no Standards of human Nature, but ought rather to be looked upon as Monsters of Men; and therefore as we do not think it natural to Men, to be born with six Fingers upon one Hand, though there have been many such monstrous and unnatural Births; so neither ought we to judge either of what is natural or unnatural to Men, by those human Brutes, who by their perpetual wallowing in the Pleasures of the Body have monstrously disfigured their own Natures, and dissolved all that Reason, by which they are constituted Men, into a mere sensual Sagacity of catering for the Appetites of the Flesh. If we would know therefore what is human and natural to us, we must take our Measures from those who are least depraved, and are most conformable to the Laws of a rational Nature; who have preserved the natural Subordination of their Faculties, and reduced their Passions and Appetites under the Empire of their Reason: And these are the Men whom we call virtuous, and who, because they live in the Exercise of those noble Virtues which are proper to us Men, are to be looked upon as the Standards of human Nature: By whom alone we can judge of what is natural and unnatural to us. Now Virtue, and the Desires and Hopes of Immortality are so nearly'd, that like Hippocrates's Twins, they live and die together. For though while Men live a brutish and sensual Life, their future Hopes are usually drowned in their present Enjoyments; yet when once they recover out of this unnatural State, and begin to live virtuously like reasonable Beings, immediately they feel great Desires and Expectations of a future Happiness, springing up in their Minds, and rising higher and higher, proportionable to their Progress is in Virtue and true Goodness. Which is a plain Evidence, that these Hopes and Desires are natural to us, and that they are interwoven by the great Creator in the Frame and Constitution of our Souls. Now how can it consist with the Goodness of God, to implant such Desires and Hopes in our Natures and then to withhold from them the only Object that can suit and satisfy them? As if it were a Recreation to him, to sit above in the Heavens, and behold the Work of his Hands spending it self in weary Strugglings towards him, and gasping, all the while it continues in Being, after an Happiness it shall never enjoy. As for other Beings, we see they have no natural Desire in vain; the good God having so ordered Things, that there are Objects in Nature apportioned to all their natural Appetites: But if there be no State of Happiness reserved for good Men in the other World, we are by a natural Principle most strongly inclined to that which we can never attain to: As if God had purposely framed us with such Inclinations, that we might be perpetually tormented between those two Passions Desire and Despair, an earnest Propension after a future Happiness, and an utter Incapacity of ever enjoying it: As if Nature it self, whereby all other Beings are disposed to their Perfection, did serve only in Mankind to make them miserable; and which is more considerable, as if Virtue, which is the Perfection of Nature, did only contribute to our Infelicity, by raising in us Desires and Expectations, which without a future Happiness must be for ever baffled and disappointed. For if there be no future Happiness, either we may know it, or we may not; if we may not know it, why should we think that which reflects so much Dishonour upon God, viz. that he hath created in us Desires and Expectations, only to mock and tantalize them? But if we may know it, then do these Desires and Expectations seem to be created in us on purpose to torment us. For, for what other End can we desire to be eternally happy, who are only brought forth into the Light to be ere long extinguished, and shut up in everlasting Darkness? The Consideration of which must needs be an exceeding Torture and Affliction to us.

Progress

III. That there is a future Happiness reserved for good Men, is evident from the Justice and Equity of the divine Providence. That God is a most just and righteous Governour, is acknowledged by all that believe there is a God, and that he rules and governs the World: And if it be so, then his Justice must first or last discover it self in distributing Rewards and Punishments to Men, according as they obey, or violate the Laws of his Government. For what Justice can he express in governing the World, if he rules at random; if he never makes any Difference between the good and the bad, but rewards and punishes his Subjects promiscuously, without any Distinction between the Loyal and Rebellious? And yet in the ordinary Course of divine Providence in this World, we see little or no Distinction made between them; but as the wise Man hath observed, Eccl. ix. 2. All Things come alike to all, so that we cannot know God's Love or Hatred by any Thing that is before us; nay, many Times we see the wicked, as the Psalmist describes them, flourishing like a green Bay-Tree, Psal. xxxvii. 35. whilst the righteous are sorely oppressed and crushed under the Triumphal Chariots of their barbarous Enemies. So that were there no other State of Things, but what we see before us; it would be impossible for us, to give any tolerable Account of the just Retributions of the divine Providence. For if when we have all acted our Parts upon this Stage of Time, we were to lie down together, and sleep for ever in the Dust; how many Millions of good Men are there that have thought nothing too dear for God, and have not only sacrificed their Lust, but their Lives and Fortunes to his Service, who would have no other Recompence for so doing, but a miserable Life, and a woeful Death, and an obscure and dishonourable Grave? And on the contrary, how many Millions of Millions of wicked Men are there, whose whole Lives have been nothing but one continued Act of Rebellion against God, who have blasphemed his Honour, and affronted his Authority, and openly contemned all the Laws of his Government; and yet would undergo no other Punishment for so doing, but only to live prosperously, to die quietly, and then to be gloriously enshrined in Monuments of Marble? And can we think this, and at the same Time believe, that there is a righteous Providence which superintends the Affairs of the World? Certainly, If not to govern this material World, and to put Things into such a regular Course as may be suitable to their Natures, and the Operations for which they are designed, would argue some Defect of Wisdom in God; then doubtless, not to compensate Virtue and Vice, and adjust Things suitably to their Qualifications; but thus-crossly to couple Prosperity with Vice, and Misery with Virtue, would argue him deficient both in Wisdom, and Goodness, and Justice. And perhaps it would be no less expedient, with Epicurus to deny all Providence, than to ascribe to it such Defects; it being less unworthy of the divine Nature to neglect the Universe altogether, than to administer human Affairs with so much Injustice and Irregularity. So that either we must deny Providence, or (which is worse) deny the Justice of it; or believe that there is a future State, wherein all Things shall be adjusted, and good Men crowned with the Rewards of their Obedience, and the Wicked undergo the Punishment of their own Follies. For this we are sure of, that the Judge of all the World will do righteously, and that first or last he will distribute his Rewards and Punishments, according to the Merit and Demerit of his Subjects: And therefore because we see he doth not ordinarily do it in this World; we have great Reason to conclude, that he will do it effectually in the World to come.

Fourthly and lastly, That there is a State of future Happiness prepared for good Men, is evident from the Revelation of his Will, which God hath made to us by Jesus Christ. And this, I confess, is the most concluding Argument of all: As for the former Arguments, they render the Case so highly probable, that this at least must be acknowledged, that we have far more Reason to believe and expect a future Happiness, than we have to doubt or despair of it: But as for this last, it puts all out of Question, and leaves us no Pretence of Reason why we should doubt or suspect it. For eternal Happiness and Salvation, is the great Blessing which our Saviour hath promised us, to encourage us to Perseverance in Well-doing; and in that everlasting Gospel which he preached to the World, he hath in the Name of God proposed to us a Heaven of endless Joys and Felicities, and brought Life and Immortality to Light. So that if he were commissioned from God to make this great Proposal to Mankind, we have as much Security of a future Happiness, as we can have of the Truth of God; which is the Foundation of all the Certainty we have, whether in Philosophy or Divinity. Now that he was commissioned from God to promise what he did to us is apparent, because God himself by sundry Voices from Heaven declared him to be his Ambassador to the World; and proclaimed him his beloved Son in whom he was well pleased, and whom he had substituted the supreme Minister of his Grace and Goodness to Mankind; and what he declared in Words, he also demonstrated in Deeds. For when Christ was baptized, God sent down his holy Spirit upon him in a bright shining Flame, which spreading it self round his Head encircled his Brows, like a Crown of Sun-beams, and remained upon him: Which glorious Appearance answering to that visible Glory, by which God appeared from between the Cherubims, declared him to be the Temple of God, in whom the Fulness of the Godhead dwelt bodily, and in which he meant to take his Residence for ever. And accordingly after this visible Shechinah, or Glory disappeared, we find most palpable and apparent Signs of the Presence of God in him; for by this it was that he cured the Sick, and calmed the Seas, and raised the Dead, and wrought all those wondrous Works by which he proved his Mission from above. For so we are told, that he went about doing good and healing all that were oppressed of the Devil, for God was with him, Acts x. 38. And after all the Miracles that he did in his Life, by this Power er and Presence of God that was in him, being barbarously murdered, he rose from the Dead by the same Power, and ascended triumphantly to Heaven. Of the Truth of all which we have as clear and credible Testimony as ever was given to any Matters of Fact; the Report of them being handed down to us from those who were Eye and Ear-Witnesses; who in the Defence of what they testified exposed themselves to infinite Hazards, and at last confirmed their Testimony with their dearest Blood; which is the greatest Security, that any Witness can possibly give of his Honesty. For what should move them to testifie these Things, had they not known them to be true? It was apparently their temporal Interests to have concealed them; and their Religion, in which their eternal Interest was involved, prohibited them all wilfulful Lying under the Penalty of an endless Damnation: And would any Men in their Wits have maintained a known Imposture, when they were assured before-hand, that all they should gain by it was to die for it here, and to be damned for it hereafter? And if their Testimony be true, as we have all manner of Reason to believe it is, then what they testifie doth plainly denote the blessed Jesus to be the Holy one of God; from whom, as from his most holy Habitation, God would hereafter communicate all his Blessings to Mankind. And if so, then we are sure of eternal Life, upon Condition of our patient continuance in well doing: For whatsoever he hath promised us, he must have promised us from God, who dwelt in the sacred Temple of his Body, and from thence pronounced the Oracles of his Grace and Goodness, and manifested himself perpetually by sundry miraculous Effects.

From the Consideration of our future Happiness, many useful Inferences may be raised: And First, from hence we may perceive, what an unreasonable Thing it is for us Christians, immoderately to doat upon the World. I confess, if our chief, or only Interest were involved in this World, and we had no Hopes beyond the Grave; there were then some Excuse to be made for immoderate Sollicitude about the trifling Concerns of this present Life: But when it is so apparent, that we are born to higher Hopes, and are here but Candidates, and Probationers for an everlasting Preferment in the highest Heaven; methinks the Sense of it should make us blush at our own Follies, to think how busie we are in pursuing the fading Vanities of this World, whilst the great Interest of our Eternity is wholly neglected and forgotten. Blessed God! Who would imagine, that in a World peopled with immortal Spirits that must live for ever in unconceivable Happiness or Misery, the greatest Number of us should be such utter Strangers to the Thoughts, and Concerns of another World? That we who are so industrious in our temporal Affairs, as not to slip any Opportunity of Gain; but are so ready to court every Occasion, that tends to advance these our momentary Pleasures, Profits and Honours, should be regardless of those celestial Joys, which if we fall short of, we are undone for ever; and which if we arrive to, we shall be as happy as all the Beatitudes of an immortal Heaven can make us! O inconsiderate Beings that we are! Where is the Reason that constitutes us Men, that we should chuse thus crossly to the Nature of Things, when there is so vast a Disproportion between the Objects of our Choice, between Heaven and Earth, between Moments and Eternity, between the hungry and withering Joys of this World, and the eternally ravishing Pleasures of the World to come? Methinks if we had any Dram of Reason left in us, the Consideration that we are born to an immortal Crown, which nothing but our own Folly can disseize us of, were enough to inspire us with a noble Disdain of all these bewitching Vanities about us; and to make us look upon them as Things beneath us, Toys and Trifles, not worthy our scrambling for. When we consider, that there is an Heaven of endless Joys prepared for us, which if we will we may make as sure of, as we can of our own Beings; methinks so vast an Hope should raise our groveling Thoughts so high above this World, that when we look down upon it, it should disappear, or look like a thin blew Landskip next to Nothing; and all the Hurries and Scramblings of silly Mortals for little Parcels of Earth, should seem as trifling and inconsiderable to us, as the Toils and Labours of a little World of Ants about a Mole-hill. For how is it possible almost, that such little Impertinencies should take up our Thoughts, who have an Eternity of Weal and Woe before us? And when we have all that an everlasting Heaven means, to busie our Thoughts, and employ our Cares about, how can we engage with so much Zeal and Vigour in the petty Affairs of this World? Foolish and unwise that we are! Thus to neglect our most important Interests for every impertinent Trifle, to sell our Souls for a little Money, and give immortal Hallelujahs for a Song! And when we are born to such infinite Hopes, to chuse Nebuchadnezzar's Fate, and leave Crowns and Scepters to live among the Savage Herds of the Wilderness.

II. From hence we may learn, how vigorous and industrious we ought to be in discharging the Duties of our Religion. For how can we think any Pains too much, when an everlasting Heaven is the Reward of our Labour? What a poor Thing is it, that we should grudge to spend a few Moments here in the severest Exercises of Holiness and Vertue; when within this little While, in consideration of our short Pains, we shall have nothing else to do throughout a long and blessed Eternity, but to enjoy a Heaven of pure Pleasures; and bathe our Faculties for ever in fresh Delights; to converse with the Fountain of all Love and Goodness, and warble eternally Praises to him; and in the Vision of his Beauty and Goodness to live in everlasting Raptures of Joy and Love? O my Soul! what though thou toilest and labourest now to climb the everlasting Hills! yet be of good Heart, for it will not be long before thou art at the Top, where thou wilt find such pleasant Gales, and glorious Prospects as will make thee infinite Amends for all: Yea, though the Toil thou undergoest were abundantly more than it is; though instead of the Labour of mortifying thy Lusts, and living soberly, righteously, and godly, thy Task were to row in the Gallies, or dig in the Mines for a thousand Years together, yet methinks the Consideration that Heaven will be at last thy Reward, should be enough to sweeten, and endear it. O would we but often represent to our Minds the glorious Things of another World, what holy Fervours would such charming Thoughts kindle within us? And with how much Spirit and Vigour would they carry us through the weary Stages of our Duty? what Lust is there so dear to us, that we should not willingly sacrifice to the Hopes of Immortality? What Duty so difficult, that we should not cheerfully undergo, while the Crown of Glory is in our Eye? Surely did we but look more frequently to the Recompense of Reward, we should be all Life, and Spirit, and wing; our sluggish Souls would be inspired with an Angelical Vigour, and Activity; and we should run with Alacrity, as well as Patience, the race that is set before us: But alas! we look upon our Reward as a Thing a great way off; and 'tis, I confess, reserved for us within that invisible World whereinto our dull Sense is not able to penetrate; which is the Reason that we are not so vigorously affected with it. Wherefore to make amends for this Disadvantage, let us often revive the Considerations of Eternity upon our Minds, and inculcate the Reality and Certainty of our future Weal or Woe, together with the great Weight and Importance of them: Let us thus reason with ourselves; O my Soul! If it be so certain as it is, that there are such unspeakable Joys reserved for good Men, and such intolerable Miseries for the Wicked; why should not these Things be to me, as if they were already present? Why should I not be as much afraid to sin, as if the Gates of Hell stood open before me, and I saw the astonishing Miseries of those damned Ghosts that are weltring in the Flames of it? And why should I not as cheerfully comply with my Duty, as if I had now a full Prospect of the Regions of Happiness, and I saw the great Jesus at the right Hand of God with Diadems of Glory in his Hand, to crown those pure and blessed Spirits, who have been his faithful Servants to the Death? And doubtless would we but inure our Minds a little to such Thoughts as these, they would wonder-fully fully actuate all the Powers of our Souls, and be continually inspiring us with new Vigour in the Ways of Holiness and Virtue: For what Difficulties are there that can daunt our good Resolutions, while they are animated with this Persuasion, that if we have our Fruit unto Holiness, our End shall be everlasting Life? Rom. vi. 22.

III. From hence we may perceive, how upright and sincere we ought to be in all our Professions and Actions. For if there be such an Happiness reserved for us in Heaven, then doubtless, if we intend to partake of it, we must be sincerely good; because he that is the Donor of this glorious Reward, is a God that searcheth the Heart, and trieth the Reins, and is a curious Observer of our secret Thoughts, and most retired Actions; and consequently will reward us, not according to what we seem to be, but to what we really are. We may possibly cheat Men into a fair Opinion of us, by disguising our selves in a Form of Godliness, and facing our Conversation with specious Pretences of Piety: But that God, with whom we have to do, sees through all Dawblings, and Fucus's of Hypocrisy; and can easily discern a rotten Core, through the most beautiful Rind, that can be distended over it. So that we can never hope to obtain His Blessing, as Jacob did his blind Father's, by a counterfeit Voice, or exteriour Disguise of Religion: For all the fair Vizards of Hypocrisy are so far from hiding our Blemishes from God, that they lay them more open to his all-seeing Eye, and make them appear more monstrous and deformed. Wherefore, unless we are really good, we were better not to seem to be so; for mere Pretences of Piety will be so far from procuring Salvation for us, that they will but enhance and aggravate our Condemnation, and sink and plunge us deeper into Hell, instead of obtaining any Entrance for us into the Kingdom of Heaven. Since therefore there is such an immortal Reward prepared for us in the World to come, if we love our selves, or have any Regard for our most important Interest; we cannot but be in good Earnest for Heaven; and if we are so, we shall be sincere and upright in all our Actions, and the great Design of our Lives will be to approve our selves to God, and our own Consciences. If by giving Alms we hope to increase our Stock in that great Bank of Bliss above, we shall not care so much to blow a Trumpet when we do it, that so the World may take Notice of, and praise our Bounty; but our Rejoycing will be this, that we have approved our selves to God, from whom we expect the Reward of our Obedience. If we abstain from Sin with Respect to the future Recompence, we shall do it in private, as well as in the View of the World; knowing that where-ever we are, we are under God's Eye, who alone can make us happy, or miserable for ever. In a word, if we seriously mind the Glory that is set before us, we shall be as curious of our Thoughts, and secret Purposes, as if they were to be exposed, upon an open Theatre; considering that they are all open and naked to that God with whom we have to do, and upon whom the Hope of our immortal Happiness depends. For to what Purpose should we dissemble and play the Hypocrites, unless we could impose upon the Almighty, and make him believe that we are good; when we are not, and so steal to Heaven in a Vizard?

Fourthly and lastly, From hence 'tis visible, what great Reason we have to be cheerful under the Afflictions and Miseries of this World; considering what Glories and Felicities there are prepared for us in the World to come: Indeed all the Miseries of this World are more or less, as we have more or less Reason to be supported under them; but when we consider, that our Time here is but a Moment, compared with our everlasting Abode in the World to come, our present Happiness and Misery will appear to be very inconsiderable. We are now upon our Journey towards our heavenly Country and it is no great matter how rough the Way is, provided that Heaven be our Journey's End: For though here we want many of those Accommodations which we may expect, and desire; yet this is but the common Fate of Travellers, vellers, and we must be contented to take Things as we find them, and not look to have every Thing just to our Mind. But all these Difficulties and Inconveniencies will shortly be over, and after a few Days will be quite forgotten, and be to us as if they never had been: And when we are safely landed in our own Country, we shall look back from the Shore with Pleasure and Delight upon those boisterous Seas which we have escaped, and for ever blest the Storms and Winds that drove us thither. Wherefore hold, O my Faith and Patience, a little longer, and your Work will soon be at an End; and all my Sighs and Groans within a few Moments will expire into everlasting Songs and Hallelujahs: Νῦν μὲν αἱ ἡμέραι ἡμῶν πονηραὶ, ἀλλάί δέ τινες εἰσὶν ἀγαθαὶ ὥς νύξ ἔ διακόπτοι. ἔσται ᾧ ὁ Θεὸς αὐτῶν φῶς αἰώνιον, καταλάμπων αὐτὰς τῷ φωτὶ καὶ ἰαυτῇ δόξης. Now our Days are dark and gloomy, but the bright glorious Day is dawning, which Night shall never interrupt; for God himself is the eternal Sun, that enlightens us with the bright Rays of his own Glory. And what is a little cloudy Weather compared with an everlasting Sun-shine? Doubtless these light Afflictions which are but for a Moment, are not worthy to be compared with the Glory that shall be revealed in us. Let us therefore comfort our selves with these Things, and while we are groaning under the Miseries of this Life, let us encourage our selves with this Consideration, that within a little while all our Tears shall be wiped from our Eyes, and there shall be an everlasting Period put to all our Sorrows and Miseries; when we shall be removed from all the Troubles and Temptations of a wicked and ill-natur'd World, be past all Storms, and secured from all further Danger of Shipwreck, and be safely landed in the Regions of Bliss and Immortality. And can we complain of the Foulness of a Way, that leads into a Paradise of endless Delights; and not cheerfully undergo these short though bitter Throes, which like the Virgin-Mother's, will quickly end in Songs, and everlasting Magnificats? Cheer up therefore, O my crest-fallen Soul, for thy bitter Passion will soon be at an End; and though now thou art sailing in a tempestuous Sea, yet a few Leagues off lies that blest Port, where thou shalt be crowned as soon as thou art landed; and then the Remembrance of the Storms thou hast passed will contribute to the Triumphs of thy Coronation; and all the bad Entertainments thou meetest with in this Life will but make Earth more loathsome to thee while thou art here, and Heaven more welcome when thou comest there; and these thy light Afflictions, which are but for a moment, will work for thee a far more exceeding and eternal Weight of Glory, 2 Cor. iv. 17.

CHAP. V.

Of the Necessity of Mortification, to the obtaining of eternal Life.

I Come now to the second Thing proposed, namely, that the eternal Life and Happiness of good Men depends upon their mortifying the Deeds of the Body; and that it doth so, I shall endeavour to prove.

First, from God's Ordination and Appointment.

Secondly, From the Nature of the Thing.

I. From God's Ordination and Appointment. God, who is the supreme Governour of the World, hath proposed eternal Life, as an Encouragement to those who by patient Continuance in well-doing, seek for Glory, and Honour, and Immortality: And supposing that wicked Men could enjoy the Happiness of the other World, yet it would be inconsistent with the Wisdom of his Government to admit them to it. For should he reward Offenders with eternal Happiness, who would be afraid of offending him? And if once he rules with such a slack and indulgent Rein, as to take away all Reason of Fear from his Subjects, his Government must immediately dissolve into Anarchy and Confusion. And therefore to prevent this, he hath fairly warned us by his reiterated Threats, that if we live in Disobedience to his Laws, we shall be for ever banished from that Kingdom of Happiness which he hath prepared for those that love and fear him: So in Rom. viii. 13. we are assured, that if we live after the Flesh, we shall die: And in Gal. v. 19, 20, 21. we are told that the Works of the Flesh are manifest, which are these, adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like; of which I tell you before, as I have also told you in Times past, that they which do such Things shall not inherit the Kingdom of God: And so 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10. Know ye not (says the Apostle) that the unrighteous shall not inherit the Kingdom of God? be not deceived, neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with Mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the Kingdom of God: And to the same purpose the same Apostle tells us, that no whoremonger, nor unclean Person, nor covetous Man who is an Idolater, bath any inheritance in the Kingdom of God, Ephes. v. 5. All which dreadful Denunciations must be supposed to be conditional; for else they are not consistent with the Promise of Pardon to those that truly repent: So that the Meaning of them is plainly this, that if we persevere in these Lusts of the Flesh, and do not mortify them, we shall have no Part nor Portion in the Kingdom of God. Hence the Apostle exhorts us, Col. iii. 5, 6. Mortify therefore your Members which are upon the Earth, fornication, uncleanness, inordinate Affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry: For which Things sake the Wrath of God cometh on the Children of Disobedience: Which implies, that if they did mortify these Lusts, the Wrath of God should not come upon them; but if they did not, they should be liable to the divine Indignation among the Children of Disobedience. By all which it is apparent, that according to God's free Ordination and Appointment, our eternal Happiness and Welfare depends upon our mortifying the Deeds of the Body, since God hath so ordained, that if we do mortify them, we shall live, and that if we do not, we shall be for ever excommunicated from the Regions of Life and Immortality.

rules

II. This is also apparent from the Nature of the Thing: For if God had not excluded those that live in their Sins from eternal Life, by his own free Ordination; yet they must have been excluded, the future Happiness being so inconsistent with a vicious State, that it is impossible ever to reconcile them. For the Thing itself implies a Contradiction, and is not an Object of any Power, no not of Omnipotence it self; and God may as well make White to be Black while it is White, as a vicious Soul to be happy while it is vicious. For Happiness is a relative Thing, and doth in its own Nature imply a Correspondence and Agreement between the Faculty and the Object; and be the Object never so good in itself, yet if it doth not agree with the Faculty whereunto it is objected, it is Misery and Affliction to it. Though a Man should be entertain'd with all the delicate Relishes of Musick, yet if he hath not a musical Ear, it will be but a tedious ungrateful Din to him: And though his Appetite should be courted with all the rich Varieties in Nature; yet if they do not agree with his coarse and homely Palate, he will distaste and nauseate them. And so if a Man should be placed in Heaven among all the Joys with which that blessed State abounds; yet unless his Mind and Temper did suit and agree with them, they would all be so many Miseries and Torments to him; he would be afflicted even in Abraham's Bosom, and grope for Heaven in the midst of Paradise; and it would be impossible for him to be pleased with his Condition, till the Genius and Temper of his Mind were alter'd, and the Dispositions of his Soul were reconciled to that heavenly State. So that if we can demonstrate that there is and must be Antipathy and Disagreement ment in wicked Souls to the future Happiness; it will then be apparent from the Nature, and Reason of the Thing, that our Enjoyment of the future Happiness depends upon our ceasing to be wicked; or which is all one, upon our mortifying the Deeds of the Flesh. Now to evidence this Disagreement between wicked Souls, and the heavenly State, I shall do these three Things;

First, shew wherein the Felicities of the future State do consist.

Secondly, what the Temper and Disposition of wicked Souls will be in the future State.

Thirdly, how contrary such a Temper and Disposition must be unto such Felicities.

I. I am to shew wherein the Felicities of the future State do consist. And here I shall not presume to give you a particular Description of Heaven, the Felicities whereof the Apostle tells us are ineffable; but shall content my self to give you the general Account of it, which I find in the Revelation of the Gospel. In general therefore we may be secure of this, that Heaven is such an Happiness as is most suitable to a rational Nature; it being designed and prepared for reasonable Beings, to whom (as I have shewed) it would not be a Heaven, if it were not agreeable to their Natures. For should God have provided for us a Heaven of sensual Felicities, to gratifie the unbounded Licentiousness of our carnal Appetites; it would have been a Happiness fitter for Beasts than Men: And whilst our sensual and brutish Part had been feasted with everlasting Varieties of carnal Pleasures, our intellectual Powers, which are the noblest Ingredients of our Natures, must have pined away a long Eternity, for want of those Joys and Delights, which alone are proper and agreeable to their Natures. Now our proper Happiness, as we are reasonable Beings, consists in being perfectly rational, and in the Union of our Understandings, Wills, and Affections, with such Objects as are most agreeable to our rational Natures? And what is it to be perfectly rational, but to reason truly according to the Nature of Things; and to choose and refuse, and love and hate according to the Dictates of true Reason? And what is it to have our Understandings, Wills, and Affections united to such Objects as are most agreeable to our reasonable Natures, but only to know that which is most worthy to be known, and to choose and love that which is most worthy to be chosen and loved? When therefore our Understanding is become so clear and vigorous, as to reason aright, and penetrate into the Natures of Things; and our Wills, and Affections are perfectly compliant and harmonious with it; and all these are in conjunction with God, the Fountain of all Truth and Goodness; we are then arrived to the heavenly State of reasonable Natures. And therefore all that is positively affirmed of the heavenly Happiness in the Gospel, is only this; that it consists in our seeing God, and loving and resembling him, and being for ever associated with those blessed Spirits, that see and love and resemble him as well as We. And this doubtless is such a Felicity, as no mortal Language can express: For how will my Understanding triumph, when it is once emerged out of all the Mists and Clouds, with which it is here surrounded, into the clear Heaven of Vision, where it shall have a free and uninterrupted Prospect throughout the whole Horizon of Truth; when God and Heaven, and all the Mysteries of the other World shall be always present to my ravished Thoughts; how hail and sound, how light and expedite will my Soul be, when it is disentangled from all those unreasonable Passions, which here do clog and disease her? When all her jarring Faculties shall be reduced into a perfect Harmony, what a Heaven of Content and Peace will there spring up within her own Bosom? And when she is thus contempered to the divine Perfection, and inspired throughout with a God-like Nature, in what Raptures of Love and Extasies of Joys will she converse with God and blessed Spirits? This doubtless, if there were no more, is enough to make the Heavenly venly State unspeakably happy and blessed: And this together with perfect Freedom from Pains and Misery and Death, is all of Heaven that God hath made known to us in his Gospel: Here we are told that we shall be made perfect, that we shall see as we are seen, and know as we are known, and behold him that is invisible face to face: For yet it doth not appear what we shall be, says St. John, but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is, 1 Epist. iii. 2. There may be, and doubtless are sundry additional Felicities to these; but in these it is apparent the main of Heaven doth consist, because these are all that God hath plainly revealed, and made known to us.

II. The next Thing proposed was to shew, what the Temper and Disposition of wicked Souls will be in the future State. And this may be easily gathered, by considering wherein a wicked Temper consists; for doubtless with the same Temper of Mind that we are of in this World, we shall go into the other: For merely by going into the other World, Men cannot be alter'd as to their main State, though they may be perfected as to those good Dispositions that were here begun; so that he that is wicked here will be wicked there too, and that same Disposition of Mind that we carry with us to our Graves, we shall retain with us in Eternity. If therefore we would know, what the Temper of a wicked Soul will be in the future State, our best Way will be to enquire, what it is that we call a wicked Temper here; because it will be the same here, and hereafter. Now a wicked Temper consists of two Things; First, of Sensuality, and secondly, of Devilishness. By Sensuality, I mean an immoderate Propension of the Soul to the Pleasures of the Body; such an Head-strong Propension, as wholly diverts the Soul from all her nobler Delights to the brutish Pleasures of Intemperance and Wantonness and Gluttony, together with those other Lusts that are subservient to them, such as Fraud and Covetousness and Ambition, and the like: By Devilishness, I mean those spiritual Wickednesses, which do not so much depend upon the Body as the former, but are more immediately centered in the Soul, such as Pride, and Malice, and Wrath, and Envy, and Hatred, and Revenge, &c. which are the Sins of the Devil, by which those once glorious and blessed Spirits were transformed into Fiends and Furies. These are the venomous Ingredients of which a wicked Temper is composed. If you enquire therefore what the Temper of a wicked Soul will be in the future State; I answer, it will be the same there that it is here; that is, it will be sensual and devilish. As for the latter, there can be no doubt of it; for Devilishness, being immediately subjected in the Soul cannot be supposed to be separated from her by her Separation from the Body; and may as well abide in naked and separated Spirits, as it doth in the Apostate Angels. And as for Sensuality, though it cannot be supposed that a Soul should retain the Appetites of the Body, after it is separated from it; yet having wholly abandon'd it self to corporeal Pleasures while it was in the Body, it may, and doubtless will retain a vehement Hankering after a Reunion with it, which is the only Sensuality, that a separated Soul is capable of. For when she comes into the World of Spirits, her former accustoming her self unto the Pleasures of the Body will have so debauched and vitiating her Appetite, that she will be incapable of relishing any other Pleasures, but what are carnal and sensual, which because she cannot enjoy but in the Body, she must needs retain an earnest and vehement Longing to be re-united to it. For having never had any former Experience of the Pleasures of Spirits, when she comes into the other World, she will find her self miserably destitute of all that can be pleasant and delightful to her; and because she knows, that the only pleasures she can relish are such as are not to be enjoyed, but in conjunction with the Body, therefore all her Appetites and Longings must needs unite into one outrageous Desire of being embodied again, that so she may repeat these sensual Pleasures, and act over the brutish Scene anew. Which possibly may be the Reason, why such sensual Souls have appeared so often in Church-yards and Charnel-houses, Union with the Body being that which these wandering Ghosts have the most eager Affections to, and that they are most loth to be separated from; which makes them perpetually bover about, and linger after their dear Consort, the Body; the Impossibility of their Re-union with it not being able to cure them of their impotent Desires, but still they would fain be alive again. Virgil,

—Iterumque ad tarda reverti
Corpora: quæ lucis miseris tam dira cupido?

And this, I doubt not, was one great Reason of those extraordinary Abstinencies, and bodily Severities that were imposed by the Primitive Church; that by this Means they might gently wean the Soul from the Pleasures of the Body, and teach it before-hand to live upon the Delights of separated Spirits; that so it might drop into Eternity with Ease and Willingness, like ripe Fruit from the Tree; and that when it was arrived into the other World, it might not have its Appetite so vitiating with these sensual Delights, as to be incapable of relishing those spiritual Ones, and so be endlessly tormented with a fruitless Desire of returning to the Body again. This therefore from the whole is plain and apparent, that the Temper of wicked Souls in the other World will be much the same as it is in this; that is, sensual and devilish, made up of Rage and Spite, and Malice, together with a vehement Longing after the deserted Body, in which they enjoyed the only Pleasures they were capable of.

And having thus shew'd you, what are the Felicities of the future State, and what the Temper of wicked Souls will be in the future State; I now proceed,

III. To shew you, how contrary such a Temper and Disposition must be unto such Felicities. And indeed Sensuality and Devilishness are the only Indispositions for Heaven; but such Indispositions they are, that if upon an impossible Supposition a Soul could be admitted with them into the Habitations of the Blessed; she would not be able to relish one Pleasure there: Among all the Delights with which the beatifick State abounds, there would none be found that would please her distemper'd Palate, which lik a feverish Tongue, must disrelish and nauseate the sweetest Liquor, by Reason of its overflowing Gall. And hence the Apostle exhorting his Christian Colossians, to be thankful unto God for making them meet to be Partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in light; tells them, that this was effected by God's translating them out of the Kingdom of Darkness, into the Kingdom of his own dear Son; that is, by enabling them to mortify their Lusts, and inspiring them with the Graces of the Gospel: Colos. i. 12, 13. And this will evidently appear, if we consider the particular Felicities of which the heavenly State consists; which (as I have shewed above) consists, First, in the Vision of God: Secondly, in our Likeness or Resemblance to him: Thirdly, in the Love of Him; and Fourthly, in the Society of pure and blessed Spirits: To all which there is an utter Antipathy and Disagreement in every sensual and devilish Temper and Disposition.

I. In every sensual and devilish Mind, there is an Antipathy and Contrariety to the Vision of God; for the Sight of God can be pleasant unto none, but those who are in some Measure contemper'd to his Perfections, and transformed into his Likeness. While we are unlike him, and contrary to him, as we must needs be while we are sensual and devilish; the Sight of him would be more apt to amaze and terrify, than to please and delight us; for what Pleasure could a Soul take in the Vision of that God, whom she always bated, and could never endure to think of? Doubtless she would be so far from being pleased with the Sight of him, that it would be her Grief and Torment to behold him. The Sight of his Purity and Holiness would be so far from delighting her, that it would but reproach her lewd and sordid Degeneracy from the Temper of a pure and immortal Spirit: The Vision of his Mercy and Goodness would be so far from pleasing her, that it would but upbraid the horrid Devilishness of her own Disposition; And which way soever she turned her Eyes, she would see nothing in God, but what did libel and condemn her own Impurity and Wickedness. And how is it possible, that such a Sight should ever be pleasing unto such a Speſtator? Doubtless the Vision of God, which is the Heaven of God-like Souls, would be a Hell to wicked Ones; it would chase them out of Heaven, if they were in it, and cause them to fly away from before the Glory of it, as Bats and Owls do from the Light of the Sun, and of their own accords to wrap their guilty Heads in the Shades of eternal Darkness, and Despair. For how could they endure the Sight of that God in whom, while they continue so infinitely unlike him, it is impossible they should see any thing but Causes of Horror and Confusion? For there must be in us some Likeness and Reſemblance of God, to diſpoſe us to behold him with Pleasure and Delight. For as Maximus Tyrius hath well observed, the τὸ θεῖον, the divine Nature which is not viſible to the Eye of Senſe, Τὸ δὲ θεῖον ἀβράν οὐ φθαλμοῖς, μόνῳ δὲ τῷ ἡ ψυχῆς καλλίστῳ, ἢ καθαρωτάτῳ, ἢ νοερώτατῳ, ἢ κεφωτάτῳ, ἢ πρεσβυτάτῳ οὐραῖον δι' ὁμοιότητά. Diff. 1. Is yet viſible to that in the Soul; which is moſt pure and beautiful, and ſublime, and noble, in reſpect of a certain Similitude and Cognation that is between them. But where this Similitude is wanting, the Vision of God will be rather a Hell, than a Heaven: If there be no Correſpondence between what we ſee in God, and what we are in our ſelves, his Glory may confound and dazle us; but it is impossible it ſhould pleaſe us: For what Pleasure can we take in ſeeing that which is ſo infinitely diſagreeable to our Natures?

II. In every ſenſual and devilish Mind there is an utter Indiſpoſition and Contrariety to the Love of God; for all Love is founded in Likeneſs, and doth reſult out of ſome Harmony and Reſemblance that there is between the Lover and the Beloved. But what Reſemblance can there be between a devilish and carnalized Soul, and a good and holy God? And if there be none, Light and Darkneſs, or Heaven and Hell may as ſoon agree, as they. For how can a Soul, whoſe Affections are drenched in Matter, and wedded to the Fleſh, love the holy God, who is a pure and ſpotleſs Spirit? What Amity can there be in a black, and devilish Nature towards the moſt kind and benign Being in the World? Doubtless from ſuch a Contrariety of Natures there muſt neceſſarily ſpring mutual Antipathies and Averſations. So that could ſuch a Soul be admitted to the Vision of God, ſhe would ſee nothing in him but what would enrage and canker her with Malice againſt him: The Sight of thoſe glorious Perfections in him, which are ſo repugnant to her own Nature, inſtead of enamouring her, would but boil up her Hatred into an higher Degree of Averſation to him. For even here we ſee, it is natural to lewd and wicked Men, to picture God by the foul and monſtrous Original of their own Tempers; and generally the Notion which they have of him is nothing but the Image of themſelves, which Narciſſus-like they fall in Love with becauſe it repreſents what they moſt delight in, even their own darling and beloved Luſts. Which is a plain Argument that they cannot love God, till they have deformed him into their own Likeneſs, and with the Æthiopians copy'd him out in the Reſemblance of their own black and devilish Tempers. When therefore they ſhall ſee Him as He is, encircled about with his own Rays of unſtained and immaculate Glory; the vaſt Unlikeneſs they will then diſcern between Him and themſelves, will doubtless enrage and ſoure their Spirits againſt him, and convert all their Fondneſs towards him into an utter Antipathy and Averſation: For ſo long as He continues what He is, and they what they are, there will be ſuch an irreconcilable Contrariety between them, that they muſt bate either God or themſelves, or elſe love Contraries at the ſame Time, which is impossible.)

III. In every ſenſual and devilish Mind there is a ſtrong Indiſpoſition to their being made like unto God, i. e. there is the ſame Indiſpoſition in them to their receiving the Likeness and Image of God, as there is in one contrary to admit of another. Their sensual and devilish Dispositions will as naturally resist the transforming Impressions of the divine Purity and Goodness, as Fire doth Water, or Moisture Drought: For the Image of God being a moral Perfection, must be impressed on us by the intervening Ministry of our Understandings, that is, by our Sight and Vision of him; and hence this Apostle gives the Reason why we shall be like unto him when he doth appear, because we shall see him as he is: 1 Joh. iii. 2. But the Sight of God, which assimilates us to him, must be accompanied with the Love of him, for it is Love that provokes to Imitation, and Imitation that transforms the Lover into the Image of the beloved. For though doubtless the beatifick Vision doth work far more effectually upon prepared Souls in the other Life, than the Knowledge of God doth in this; because here we see but in a Glass darkly, whereas there our Vision will be unspeakably more clear, intense, and vigorous: Yet I doubt not but in assimilating us to God, it works in a moral and rational way; that is, by vigorously affecting our Wills with the Perfections of God, so as to stir us up to an active Imitation of them, and efficaciously to excite us to transcribe them into our own Natures; which it cannot be supposed to do, unless our Souls be in some Measure predisposed by Holiness and Purity to the Love of God, and of those glorious Perfections we shall then behold in him. For if we do not love God, the Sight of him will be so far from provoking us to imitate him, that it will avert us from him, and render us more unimpressive to the transforming Power of his Glory. 'Tis true, this Vision of God will perfect our Likeness to him, if it be begun; because then it will have a prepared Subject to act upon, a Soul that is temper'd and dispos'd to the Power of it, and to take Impression from it: But yet it will not create a Likeness where it never was, but will leave him that is wicked to be wicked still; he being an incapable Subject of its benign Influences, and altogether indisposed to be wrought upon by it. For as the Sun enlightens not the inward Parts of an impervious Dunghill, and hath no other Effect upon it, but only to draw out its filthy Reeks and Steams; though as soon as he lifts his Head above the Hemisphere, he immediately transforms into his own Likeness all that vast Space whither he can diffuse his Beams, and turns it into a Region of Light: Even so the divine Glory and Beauty, which is the Object of the beatifical Vision, will never illustrate lewd and filthy Souls; their Temper being impervious unto his heavenly Irradiations, and wholly indisposed to be enlighten'd by it; but instead of that it will irritate their devilish Rage against it, and provoke them to bark at that Light which they cannot endure: whereas it no sooner arises upon well-disposed Minds, but it will immediately chase away all those Reliques of Darkness remaining in them, and transform them into its own Likeness. But doubtless the Sight of the divine Purity, and Goodness, will be so far from exciting sensual and Devilish Spirits to transcribe and imitate it; that it will rather inspire them with Indignation against it, and provoke them to curse and blaspheme the Author of it.

Fourthly and lastly, In every sensual and devilish Soul there is an utter Incongruity, and Disagreement to the Society of the Spirits of just Men made perfect. For even in this Life we see, how ungrateful the Society of good Men is unto those that are wicked: It spoils them of their fulsome Mirth, and checks them in those Riots and Scurrilities which are the Life and Piquancy of their Conversation. So that when the good Man takes his Leave, they reckon themselves delivered, his Presence being a Confinement to their Folly and Wickedness. And as it is in this, so doubtless it will be in the other World: For how is it possible there should be any Agreement between such distant and contrary Tempers, between such sensual and malicious, and such pure and benign Spirits? What a Torment would it be to a spiteful and devilish Spirit to be confined to a Society that is governed by the Laws of Love and Friendship. What an Infelicity to a carnalized Soul, that nauseates all Pleasures Pleasures but what are fleshy and sensual, to be shut up among those pure and abstracted Spirits, that live wholly upon the Pleasures of Wisdom, and Holiness, and Love? Doubtless it would be as agreeable to a Wolf, to be governed by the Ten Commandments, and fed with Lectures of Philosophy; as for such a Soul to live under the Laws, and be entertained with the Delights of the heavenly Society. So that could these wicked Spirits be admitted into the Company of the Blessed, they would soon be weary of it; and perhaps it would be so tedious and irksome to them, that they would rather chuse to associate themselves with Devils, and damned Ghosts, than to undergo the Torment of a Conversation so infinitely repugnant to their Natures; accounting it more eligible to live in the dismal Clamour of hellish Threnes and Blasphemies, than to have a tedious Din of heavenly Praises and Hallelujahs perpetually ringing in their Ears. And indeed considering the bellish Nature of a wicked Soul, how contrary it is to the Goodness and Purity of Heaven, I have sometimes been apt to think that it will be less miserable in those dismal Shades, where the wretched Furies, like so many Snakes and Adders, do nothing but hiss and sting one another for ever, than it would be, were it admitted into the glorious Society of heavenly Lovers, whose whole Conversation consists in loving and re-loving, and is nothing else but a perpetual Intercourse of mutual Indearments. For this would be an Employment, so infinitely repugnant to its black and devilish Disposition; that rather than endure so much Outrage and Violence, it would of its own accord forsake the blessed Abodes, to flee to Hell for Sanctuary from the Torment of being in Heaven. But this however we may rationally conclude; that so long as the prevailing Temper of our Souls is sensual and devilish, we are incapable of the Society of blessed Spirits; and, that if it were possible for us to be admitted into it, our Condition would be very unhappy, till our Temper was chang'd: So that it is a plain Case both from God's Ordination; and from the Nature of the Thing that our eternal Happiness and Welfare depends upon our mortifying the Deeds of the Body.

To offer some practical Inferences from hence;

I. We may perceive how unreasonable it is, for any Man to presume upon going to Heaven, upon any Account whatsoever, without mortifying his Lusts. For he that thinks to go to Heaven without Mortification and Amendment, presumes both against the Decrees of God and the Nature of Things: Believes all the Threatnings of the Gospel to be nothing else but so many Bugs and Scare-crows: and though God hath told him again and again, that unless he forsake his Sins, he shall never enter into the Kingdom of Heaven; yet he fondly imagines, that when it comes to the Trial, God will never be so severe as he pretends; but will rather revoke the Decree that is gone out of his Mouth, than exclude out of the Paradise of endless Delights a Soul that is infinitely offensive to him. As if God were so invincibly fond and indulgent, as that rather than excommunicate an obstinate Rebel from Happiness, he would chuse to prostitute the Honour of his Laws and Government, and commit an Outrage upon the Rectitude and Purity of his own Nature. For so long as he is a pure God, he cannot but be displeased with impure Souls; and so long as he is a wise Governour, he cannot but be offended with those that trample upon his Laws: So that before he can admit a wicked Soul into Heaven, he must have extinguish'd all his natural Antipathy to Sin, and stilled his just Resentment of our wilful Affronts to his Authority. When therefore we can find any Reason to imagine, that God is no Enemy to Sin, and that he hath no Regard of his own Authority; then, and not till then, we may have some Pretence to presume upon going to Heaven without Mortification and Amendment. But supposing this Hindrance were removed, and that God were so easy as to be induced to prefer the Happiness of a wicked Soul before the Honour of his Government and the Purity of his Nature; yet still there is an invincible Obstacle behind, tha that renders her future Felicity impossible; and that is, that it cannot be without a plain Contradiction to the Nature of Things. For as I have shewed you already, the Genius and Temper of a wicked Soul is wholly repugnant to all the Felicities of the other World, so that if they were set before her, she would not be able to enjoy them, but must be forced to pine and famish amidst all that Plenty of Delights, there being not one Viand in all the heavenly Banquet that she could relish any Sweetness in. Wherefore either her Nature must be changed, or the Nature of Heaven; for while both continue what they are, they are irreconcilable: And if God himself were so easy and indulgent, as to pass by all the Affronts in the other World which wicked Souls have offered him in this; yet he could not make them happy there, without creating in them a new Heart, or creating for them a new Heaven. For it is altogether as possible for us to see without Eyes, or hear without Ears, as to enjoy Heaven without a heavenly Disposition. How causelessly therefore dost thou presume, thou that talkest of going to Heaven, whilst thou continuest in thy Sin? Alas! poor Wretch, What wouldest thou do there, if upon an impossible Supposition thou couldst be admitted into it? There are no wanton Amours among those heavenly Lovers, no Rivers of Wine among their Rivers of Pleasure, to gratify thy unbounded Sensuality; no Parasite to flatter thy lofty Pride, no Miseries to feed thy meager Envy, no Mischiefs to tickle thy devilish Revenge; but all the Felicities, with which that heavenly State abounds, are such as thou wouldest loath and nauseate, as being too pure and refined for thy depraved Appetite: So that if thou wert in Heaven, it would be but a cooler Damnation to thee; yea perhaps Hell it self would be less intolerable, than a Heaven so incongruous to thy Nature. And yet how ordinary is it for lewd and dissolute Persons, to flatter themselves into confident Hopes of Heaven; for which, when they come to be examined, they can give no other Reason but this, that they firmly rely upon the Merits of their Saviour, who died for them, and obeyed God's Law in their stead; and therefore though they have no Righteousness of their own, yet they doubt not, being clothed in the white Garment of Christ, they shall be pardoned and accepted of God? Which is a Pretence so very absurd and unreasonable, that one would think it were impossible for any Man to be imposed upon by it, that had not a Mind to deceive himself: For supposing what is false, that Christ did obey the Law in our stead, and that God doth account us righteous because He was so; yet what would this signify to our Pardon and future Happiness, without an inherent Righteousness of our own; which is so necessary to our future Happiness, that Heaven it self cannot make us happy without it? For if by being clothed in the Robe of Christ's Righteousness, we could be admitted into Heaven; yet unless we left behind us our hellish Disposition, we should be miserable Wretches under that glorious Garment; in which we would be only crucified, like Jesus in his purple Robe, with greater Scorn and Solamity. For since the Main of Heaven consists in the Perfection of inherent Holiness, it necessarily follows that a mere imputable Holiness, will only entitle us to an imputable Happiness, that is to a mere imaginary Heaven; which how glorious soever it may look at a Distance; will, when we come to embrace it, glide from between our Arms, and leave us desperate and miserable. And though 'tis true, that Christ by his Death and Passion hath purchased for us Pardon and eternal Life; yet it is upon this Condition, that we mortify our Lust, and conform to the Rule of the Gospel: And indeed without this, Pardon and eternal Life are Words that signify nothing; for what doth a Pardon signify to one that is dying of the Stone or Strangury? He can but die, if he be not pardoned, and die he must though he be. And as little Advantage it would be to a depraved Soul, to be pardoned and absolved by God, while she hath a Disease within her that preys upon her Vitals, and hastens her to a certain Ruin: She could have been but miserable serable in the future Life, if she had not been pardon'd; and miserable she must be, if she continue wicked, whether she be pardoned, or no. All the Advantage that such a Soul could reap from God's pardoning her, would be only to be released from those arbitrary Punishments, which God may inflict on her in the World to come; but if she were freed from these, yet by a Necessity of Nature she must still be extremely miserable; for her own Wickedness would incapacitate her for Heaven, and kindle a perpetual Hell within her. So that should Christ have died to obtain a Pardon for those that continue in their Sin, he would have died to no purpose: For a wicked Soul cannot be pardoned, because there is such an inseparable Relation between Sin and Punishment, that it is as great a Contradiction for the one to be without the other, as for a Son to be without a Father. And then though Christ by his Death hath procured eternal Life, yet he cannot have procured it for those that are unreformed: Because they, if they might, yet cannot enjoy it, their inward Temper and Disposition being contrary to it; so that unless Christ by his Death had altered the Nature of Heaven, and converted that Paradise of pure and holy Pleasures into a Seraglio of brutish and carnal Enjoyments, he cannot have procured it for lewd and depraved Souls. So that for any Man to presume upon Heaven upon any Account without Holiness and Amendment, is the most egregious Non-sense in the World. For Heaven is nothing else but Holiness in its Perfection, freed from all those Incumbrances that here do perpetually clog and annoy it, so that a Heaven without Holiness, is a Heaven without a Heaven, that is, a Word that signifies nothing, a Happiness wholly abstracted from it self. While therefore we flatter our selves with the Hopes of a future Bliss, continuing in our Sins, we do but court a painted Heaven, and woo Happiness in a Picture; but in the mean Time are sinking into a true and real Hell, where all our foolish Hopes will be swallowed up for ever, in our woful Experience of its substantial Miseries.

II. We may discern from hence the indispensable Necessity of Mortification, since it is plain we can't be happy without it: So that to mortifie our Lusts is just as necessary for us, as it is to obtain Heaven, and avoid Hell. For Virtue and Vice are the Foundations of Heaven and Hell; Hell is nothing but that Hemisphere of Darkness, in which all Sin and Wickedness move; and Heaven is the opposite Hemisphere of Light, the glorious Orb of Holiness, Truth and Goodness; and in the Possession of the one, or the other, we do all of us actually enstate our selves in this Life. For take Holiness and Virtue out of Heaven, and all its Glories will immediately be clouded in horrid Darkness, and overcast with the dismal Shades of Hell: Take Sin and Wickedness out of Hell, and all its Blackness of Darkness will vanish, and it will presently clear up into Light and Serenity, and shine out into a glorious Heaven. For 'tis not so much the Place, as the State that makes either the one, or the other; and the State of Heaven and Hell, consists in a perfect Holiness and Wickedness: And proportionably as we do improve in either of these, so we do approach towards Heaven, or Hell. For as Heaven is the Center of all that is virtuous, pure, and holy; and every Thing that is good tends thither by a natural Sympathy: So Hell is the Center of all Impiety and Wickedness; and whatsoever is bad doth naturally press and sink down thither, as towards its proper Place and Element. And should not the divine Vengeance concern it self in excluding wicked Souls out of Heaven, yet their own Wickedness would do it; for that is a Place of such inaccessible Light and Purity, that nothing that is impure can approach it; but must of Necessity be beaten off by the perpetual Lightnings of its Glory, and tumbled headlong down as oft as ever it essays to climb up into it. As on the other Hand, should not God by an immediate Vengeance precipitate wicked Souls into Hell, yet their own Sin and Wickedness, hasten'd by the mighty Weight of its own Nature would necessarily hurry them down down thither with a most swift and headlong Motion. And if this be so, then questionless it is as necessary for us not to continue in our Sin, as it is not to be excluded out of Heaven, nor thrust down into the Flames of Hell: And did we but know what is meant, doubtless we should run away from our Sins in a greater Fright and Maze, than ever we did from the most astounding Danger. For consider, O Man, by those short Pleasures with which thou treatest thy Lusts, thou excommunicatest thy self from eternal Joys; and wouldst thou be but so wise as to deny thy self the Pleasure of a Moment, thou mightest be pleased for ever, and Millions of Ages hence be rejoicing among Angels and blessed Spirits, because thou wouldest not gratifie thy self with those fulsome Delights, which would have died away in the Enjoyment. And is it possible that thou shouldst be so besotted, as to exchange the Pleasures of an immortal Heaven, for those of an intemperate Draught, to sell the Joy of Angels for the Embraces of an Harlot, and pawn thy Part in Paradise for a little Money, of which 'ere long thou wilt have no other Use, but only to purchase six Foot of Earth, and a Winding-sheet? O most prodigious Folly! What Account canst thou give for such an extravagant Bargain, at the Tribunal of thy own Reason? But it may be you will say: What doth the Loss of Heaven signify, since (as you have told us already) if we could be admitted to it, it could be no Heaven to us? And why should we think much of losing that which we cannot enjoy? To which I answer; 'Tis true you cannot enjoy it, unless you part with your Lusts; because Heaven, and they are inconsistent: But you may part with your Lusts, if you will; and being quit of these, you may and shall enjoy it for ever. Your Sin is the only Wall of Separation between you and Heaven; which being once demolished, you may enter into it without any Interruption, and take Possession of all its Glories. So that if you think the Loss of Heaven will be no Trouble to you in the other World, because it is such an Heaven as your depraved Souls will be averse to, you are infinitely mistaken; for though you will be averse to it, yet your own Consciences will tell you, that if you would, you might have conquer'd that Aversion, as well as those blessed Spirits that do enjoy it; and that if you had done so, you might have been infinitely happy as well as they. Whereas now you are condemned to wander for ever in a woful Eternity, tormented with a restless Rage, and hungry unsatisfied Desire after these sensual Goods you have left behind you, and to which you shall never return more; the Consideration of which will render the Loss of Heaven as grievous to you, as if it were a Heaven overflowing with sensual Delights, and abounding with such Joys, as you will then hunger after, but can never enjoy. For how will it sting you to the Heart, when you shall thus ruminate with your selves, as you are wandering through the Infernal Shades; Ah besotted Fool that I am! now I see too late, that Heaven is a State wherein a Soul may be infinitely happy; look how yonder blessed Spirits are imparadised! how they exult and triumph! how they sing and give Praise, and are rapt into Extasies of Love and Joy! whilst I through my own Sensuality and Devilishness am utterly incapable of those sublime Delights whereof their Heaven is composed; and like a forlorn Wretch, am left for ever. Destitute of those sensual Pleasures, which are the only Heaven I can now enjoy. And therefore as you would not spend an Eternity in such direful Reflections, and have those dismal Thoughts like so many Vultures preying upon you for ever; be persuaded to set presently upon this great and necessary Work of Mortification. For assure your selves, God will as soon let Hell loose into Heaven, and people the Regions of immortal Bliss with the Inhabitants of the Land of Darknes, as crown a wicked Soul with the glorious Reward of eternal Life. For God hath reduced us to this Issue, either our Sins, or our Souls must die; and we must shake Hands with Heaven, or our Lusts: So that unless we value eternal Happiness so little, as to exchange it for the sordid and trifling Pleasures of Sin; and unless we love our Sins so well, as to ransom them with the Blood of our immortal Souls; it concerns us speedily to shake off off our Sins by Repentance: For this is an eternal and immutable Law, that, if we will be wicked, we must be miserable.

III. From hence we may perceive, what is the only true and solid Foundation of our Assurance of Heaven, namely, our mortifying the Deeds of the Body; for if they that mortify the Deeds of the Body shall live, then if we do, or have mortified them, we are sure that we are entitled to eternal Life. So that to be assured of Heaven, we need not go about to spell out our Names in the Stars, or to read them in the secret Volumes of eternal Predestination: For if our Wills be but so subdued to the Will of God, that we do not live in any wilful Violation of his Laws; we may be as certainly persuaded of our Interest in eternal Life, as if one of the winged Messengers from above should come down and tell us, that he saw our Names enrolled in the Volumes of Eternity. For besides that God hath promised Heaven to us upon Condition of our Mortification, we shall, when our Lusts are thoroughly subdued, feel Heaven opening itself within us, and rising up from the Center of our Souls in a divine Life and God-like Nature: So that we shall not need to seek for Heaven without us, because we shall find it already come down into us, and transcribed into our own Natures. And as we grow in Grace from one Degree to another, so Heaven will break forth clearer and clearer upon us; and the nearer we approach to the Top of the Hill, the fuller View we shall have of the Horizon, and extended Sky; till at last we come to walk all along in Sight of Heaven, and to travel towards it in a full View and Assurance of it. But if we secure our selves of Heaven, before we have mortified our Lusts, we do but entertain our Fancies with a golden Dream; which when we awake will vanish away, and leave us desperate and miserable. If therefore we would be assured of our future Happiness, let us not trouble our selves with numerous Signs of Grace; nor go about to erect Schemes of our spiritual Nativity, to cast a Figure to know whether we have Grace or were converted secundum artem: But let us impartially examine whether our Wills are so subdued to the Will of God, as universally to chuse what he enjoyns, and refuse what he forbids. For if they are, our Condition is good, and our Hope secure by what Means or Motives soever it was effected; and whether they are or no, we need no Marks or Signs to resolve us: For our Thoughts and Resolutions and Intentions are Signs enough to themselves, and we need no Marks to know what it is that we chuse and refuse: This our Soul can easily discern by that innate Power she hath of reflecting upon our own Motions, by which she doth as naturally feel her own Deliberations and Volitions, as the Body doth its Hunger and Thirst. 'Tis true, indeed, holy Dispositions, like all other Motions, the weaker they are, and the more they are interrupted by contrary Motions and Inclinations, the less they will be perceived; which is the Reason, why Beginners in Religion cannot be so sensible of the Grace that is in them; because their good Inclinations are checked and hinder'd by the strong and vehement Counter-Motions of their Lusts: But the more their good Inclinations prevail and free themselves from these contrary Inclinations which clog and incumber them, the more their Souls will be sensible of them. For this we find by Experience, that as we perceive our own Motions, the more vigorous they are, the more we perceive them; especially when they are advised and deliberate, as all virtuous Motions and Inclinations are. For that a Man should be insensible of a Motion which he exerts advisedly, or not be able to know that he is so disposed when he is knowingly so disposed, implies a Contradiction: And indeed, if we are not able to know when we choose and refuse as we should, when we resolve well and intend aright, we cannot discern when we do right or wrong; but are left to a Necessity of acting at Random, like Travellers in the Dark, that go on at a Venture without knowing whether they go backward or forward. If we cannot know when we do well, it is impossible we should know how to do well; but must necessarily leave the Conduct of our Actions to Chance, and Fortune must determine us unto right or wrong. Since therefore our Soul is not a senseless Machine, that hath no Perception of her own Motions, but is naturally sensible of whatsoever is transacted within her; let us no longer excuse our Ignorance of our own Condition with that common Pretence, that our Hearts are deceitful and hypocritical: For our Hearts are our selves, and, if they are deceitful and hypocritical, we our selves are so. And yet I know not how it comes to pass, it passes among some Men for a great Sign of Grace and Sincerity, to complain of the Falseness and Hypocrisy of their own Hearts; not considering that Men are as their Hearts are, and that if these are hypocritical, they themselves are Hypocrites. If therefore our Complaint be true, the more Shame for us: This is so far from being a Sign that we have Grace, that it is a plain Confession that we are graceless Dissemblers. If our Complaint be false, we falsely accuse our selves in it; which is also so far from being a Sign of Grace, that it is an Argument only of our own extravagant Folly. But if we mistake in our Complaint, and think that to be Hypocrisy, which is not, we should seek to be better informed: And if when you are so, you still complain of your Hypocrisy, I doubt you have too much Reason for it; and if you fear that you are Hypocrites, I fear you are so too. For why should one that knows what an Hypocrite is, fear that he is an Hypocrite; were he not conscious to himself, that he doth dissemble with God, and under an open Pretence of submitting to Him, disguise some secret Purpose of rebelling against him? Let us therefore lay aside all our impertinent Scrupulosity, and fairly examine our own Souls, whether we do submit to God without any Reserve, and are willing to lay down all our beloved Lusts at his Feet: For whether we are or no, we may easily discern if we will. If we are, then are the Foundations of Heaven already laid within our own Bosoms; and if upon this Principle we grow in Grace, and add one Degree of Virtue to another, we may be sure the Superstructure will go on, untill the whole Fabrick of our Happiness is completed. For as Nature by its powerful Magick is continually drawing every Thing unto its proper Place, and Center; so Heaven attracts to itself, and freely imbosoms every Thing that is heavenly; and thrusts off nothing but what is unfit for and heterogeneous to it. If therefore our Souls be of a pure and heavenly Temper, Heaven is the Center of our Motions, and the proper Place whereunto we belong; and whither at last we shall safely arrive, in despite of all those dismal Shades of Darkness, that would beat us back, and interrupt our Progress towards it: But, on the contrary, if we secure our selves of Heaven while we are enslaved to any Lusts, we presume unreasonably; and embark our Hopes in a leaky Bottom, which in Strefs of Weather will certainly founder under us, and sink us into utter Despair: For how can we hope to be admitted into Heaven, whilst we retain that within our own Bosoms which kindles Hell, and is the Spring of the Lake of Fire and Brimstone? This would be a confounding of utter Darkness with the Regions of Light, a blending of Heaven and Hell together.

• Fourthly and lastly, from hence it appears what is the great Design of the Christian Religion. We may be sure, God would not have sent his Son into the World, had not the Embassy upon which he was employ'd been of the highest Moment and Concernment to us: And what other End, besides doing the greatest Good, could a good God propose in so great a Transaction? Surely had we been in Heaven, when the Holy One descended thence into the World, though we had not known the Particulars of his Errand, yet we should have concluded that doubtless he was employ'd upon some great Design of Love; to communicate from the Almighty Father some mighty Blessing to the World: And accordingly we find, that though the holy Angels did not comprehend the particular Intention, and Mystery of Christ's Incarnation; yet they concluded in the general, that it was intended for some great Good to the World; as is apparent by the Anthem they sang at his Nativity, Glory be to God on high, on Earth Peace, good Will towards Men. Now the greatest Expression of God's good Will towards Men is to rescue them from all Iniquity, and restore restore them to the Purity and Perfection of their Natures : For without this all the Blessings of Heaven and Earth are not sufficient to make us happy. While our Nature is debauch'd and over-grown with unreasonable Lusts and Passions, we must be miserable, notwithstanding all that an Omnipotent Goodness can do for us : For Misery is so essential to Sin, that we may as well be Men without being reasonable, as sinful Men without being miserable. Since therefore the End of Christ's Coming into the World was to dispense God's greatest Blessings to Mankind; and since the greatest Blessing that we can receive from God is to be redeemed by his Grace from our Iniquities, and to be made Partakers of the divine Nature; we may reasonably conclude, that this was his main Design in the World, and the great End of that everlasting Gospel which he revealed to it. And hence the Name Jesus was given him by the Direction of an Angel, because he should save his People from their Sins: Matth. i. 21. And indeed I cannot imagine any Design whatsoever, excepting this, that could be worthy the Son of God's coming down into the World, to live such a miserable Life, and die such a shameful Death. Had it been only to save us from a Plague, or War or Famine, it had been an Undertaking fit for the lowest Angel in the heavenly Hierarchy: But to save us from our Sins was an Enterprize so great and good, as none in Heaven or Earth, but the Son of God himself, was thought worthy to be employed in. This therefore was the Mark of all his Aims, while he was upon Earth, the Center in which all his Actions and Sufferings met, to save us from our Sins, and to inspire us with a divine Life and God-like Nature; that thereby we might be disposed for the Enjoyment of Heaven, and made to be meet Partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in Light. 'Tis true, he died to procure our Pardon too; but it was with respect to a farther End; namely, that we might not grow desperate with the Sense of our Guilt, but that by the Promise of Pardon, which he hath purchased for us, we might be encouraged to repent and amend. But should he have procured a Pardon for our Sin, whether we had repented of it or no; he would have only skinned over a Wound, which if it be not perfectly cured, will rankle of its own accord into an incurable Gangrene. Christ therefore by the Offering of himself is said to purge our Consciences from dead Works, that we might serve the living God: Ileb. ix. 14. And the great Apostle makes the ultimate Intention of his giving himself for us to be this, that he might redeem us from all Iniquity, and purify to himself a peculiar People zealous of good Works: Tit. ii. 14. And until his Death hath had this Effect upon us, it is not all the Merit of his Blood and Virtue of his Sacrifice, that can release us from the direful Punishments of the other Life. For unless he by his Death had so altered the Nature of Sin, as that it might be in us without being a Plague to us; it must necessarily, if we carry it with us into the other World, prove a perpetual Hell and Torment to us. So that it is apparent, that the great and ultimate Design of Christ, was not to hide our filthy Sores, but to beal and cure them: And for this End it was that he revealed to us the Grace of God from Heaven, to teach us to deny Ungodliness and worldly Lusts, and to live soberly, and righteously, and godly in this present World, Tit. ii. 12. Let us not therefore cheat our own Souls, by thinking that the Gospel requires nothing of us but only to be holy by Proxy, or righteous by being cloathed in the Garments of another's Righteousness; as if its Design was not so much to cure, as cover our filthy Sores, not to make us whole, but to make us accounted so. For can any Man imagine, that Christ would ever have undertaken such a mighty Design, and made so great a Noise of doing something; which when it is all summed up is nothing but a Notion, and doth not at last amount unto a Reality? As if the great Design of his coming down from Heaven to live and die for us, was only to make a Cloak for our Sins, wherein we might appear righteous before God without being so. But do not deceive your selves; it is not all the Innocence and Obedience of Christ's Life, nor all the Virtue and Merit of his Death, that can render you pure and holy in God's Eyes; unless you really are so: And you may as well be Well with another's Health, or wise with another's Wisdom, as righteous before God with the Righteousness of Christ, while you abide in your Sins. For God sees you as you are; and the most glorious Disguise you can appear in before him will never be able to delude his all-seeing Eye, so as to make him account you Righteous when you are not: And if it were possible for you to impose upon God, yet unless you could also impose upon the Nature of Things, and by fancying them to be otherwise than they are, make them to be what they are not, it will be to no purpose. For if you could be cloathed in Christ's Righteousness, while you continue wicked; it would signify no more to your Happiness, than it would to be cloathed in a most splendid Garment, while you were pining with Famine or tortured with the Gout or Strangury. Wherefore as we love our own Souls, and would not betray our selves into an irrecoverable Ruin, let us firmly conclude with our selves, that the great Design of our Religion is internal Holiness and Righteousness; and that without this, all that Christ hath done and suffered for us will be so far from contributing to our Happiness, that it will prove an eternal Aggravation to our Misery; and that all that precious Blood, which he shed in our behalf, will be so far from obtaining Pardon and eternal Happiness for us, that it will arise in Judgment against us; and like the innocent Blood of Abel, instead of interceding for us, will cry down Vengeance from Heaven upon us. For how can we imagine, that the pure and holy Jesus, who hated our Sins more than all the Pangs and Horrors of a woful Death, should all of a sudden be so kind to them, as to give them Shelter and Sanctuary within his own meritorious Wounds; and to make his Blood the Price of a general Indulgence to all Impiety and Wickedness, that so we might sin securely, and enjoy a safe Retreat from his Authority under the Covert of his Sacrifice? But be not deceived; the holy Jesus will never make himself an unholy Saviour for your sake; and your being called by the Name of Christ, is so far from giving you a Privilege to Sin, that it lays you under a stricter Restraint; and if you violate it, it will expose you to a severer Punishment, than if you had been Heathens and Infidels. For this is the great Proposal of our Religion, that Jesus Christ died to purchase Pardon, and eternal Life, for all that do repent and amend; but if we will go on in our Sin, we are at a greater Distance from Pardon and eternal Life, than if we never had had a Saviour to undertake for us.

The End of the first Volume.

A Large INDEX of Texts of Scripture, purposely infisted on, or occasionally ex- plain'd in this Work.

GENESIS.			LEVITICUS.			1 KINGS.			PSALMS.
Cap.	Ver.	Pag.	Cap.	Ver.	Pag.	Cap.	Ver.	Pag.	Cap.	Ver.	Pag.
1	2	348	16	30	383	8	39	335	50	21	319
1	27	339	16	34	377	20	35	372	51	16	195
3	15	413	17	11	378,				51	17	81
6	2	348			383				68	18	402
8	22	375	19	19	295						420
9	4	379	22	20	382				68	19	350
14	18	375,							72	8	509
		377							78	72	472
14	19	237							89	11	237
15		483							90	12	128
15	6	413							91	10, &c.	452
15	13	266							91	11	603.
17	1	101							93	7	277
17	13	433							95	6	130
18		417							96	2	191
19	1	417							100	5	637
28	12	417							102	15	191
28	13	417							102	26	203
31	11	417							103	17	637
31	13	417							104	2	526,
32	24	417									543
35	1	418							104	14	239
35	11, &c.	417							106	1	637
48	15	413							110	1	537
									111	10	19
EXODUS.									112	5	629
3	2, &c.	417							119	6	277
3	5	417							119	18, &c.	426
3	6	419							119	32	302
4	16	365							119	68	633
13	21	417							119	72	243
19	5, &c.	433							119	137	598
19	11	451,							119	161	102
		543							135	4	416
19	16	529							135	6, &c.	335
19	18	420,							135	9	242
		526							135	13, &c.	242
19	41	266							139	7, &c.	101,
20	2	418									238
20	19	419							141	2	400
21	13	239							147	8, &c.	239
23	10	296							148	8	239
24	6	375
24	17	526,
		543
33	2, &c.	446
33	20, &c.	419
33	34	418
34	6, &c.	637
34	12, &c.	419
34	34	340
LEVITICUS.
1	3	383
4	3	344
4	24	378
5	5	489
9	24	545
16	21	489
16	26	378
EXODUS.
3	2, &c.	417
3	5	417
3	6	419
4	16	365
13	21	417
19	5, &c.	433
19	11	451,
		543
19	16	529
19	18	420,
		526
19	41	266
20	2	418
20	19	419
21	13	239
23	10	296
24	6	375
24	17	526,
		543
33	2, &c.	446
33	20, &c.	419
33	34	418
34	6, &c.	637
34	12, &c.	419
34	34	340
LEVITICUS.
1	3	383
4	3	344
4	24	378
5	5	489
9	24	545
16	21	489
16	26	378
EXODUS.
3	2, &c.	417
3	5	417
3	6	419
4	16	365
13	21	417
19	5, &c.	433
19	11	451,
		543
19	16	529
19	18	420,
		526
19	41	266
20	2	418
20	19	419
21	13	239
23	10	296
24	6	375
24	17	526,
		543
33	2, &c.	446
33	20, &c.	419
33	34	418
34	6, &c.	637
34	12, &c.	419
34	34	340
LEVITICUS.
1	3	383
4	3	344
4	24	378
5	5	489
9	24	545
16	21	489
16	26	378
EXODUS.
3	2, &c.	417
3	5	417
3	6	419
4	16	365
13	21	417
19	5, &c.	433
19	11	451,
		543
19	16	529
19	18	420,
		526
19	41	266
20	2	418
20	19	419
21	13	239
23	10	296
24	6	375
24	17	526,
		543
33	2, &c.	446
33	20, &c.	419
33	34	418
34	6, &c.	637
34	12, &c.	419
34	34	340
LEVITICUS.
1	3	383
4	3	344
4	24	378
5	5	489
9	24	545
16	21	489
16	26	378
EXODUS.
3	2, &c.	417
3	5	417
3	6	419
4	16	365
13	21	417
19	5, &c.	433
19	11	451,
		543
19	16	529
19	18	420,
		526
19	41	266
20	2	418
20	19	419
21	13	239
23	10	296
24	6	375
24	17	526,
		543
33	2, &c.	446
33	20, &c.	419
33	34	418
34	6, &c.	637
34	12, &c.	419
34	34	340
LEVITICUS.
1	3	383
4	3	344
4	24	378
5	5	489
9	24	545

INDEX.

CANTICLES.			JOEL.			MATTHEW.			MATTHEW.
Cap.	Ver.	Pag.	Cap.	Ver.	Pag.	Chap.	Ver.	Pag.	Cap.	Ver.	Pag.
2	12	455	28	19, &c.	96	6	4, &c.	101	28	20	355,
			1	30, &c.	524	6	6	248			495
			2	28	345	6	7	99			507
						6	19	128
ISAIAH.			JONAH.			6	33	1
1	11	197				7	7	82	MARK.
1	16	90	3	9	393	7	12	570	2	17	499
1	16, &c.	198				7	21	15,	3	13, &c.	413
5	4	362						501	7	8, &c.	501
6	1	419,				8	29	448	7	12	60
		421				9	2	424	8	12	550
9	6	335	MICAH.			10	5, &c.	411	8	38	457
		447	2	7	345	10	16	20,	10	33	194
22	21, &c.	592	5	4	509			60	12	42	628
28	10	196	6	6	197	10	22	25	13	37	105
41	4	422	6	6, &c.	179	11	20, &c.	666	14	21	461
44	6	340,	6	7, &c.	14	11	21	247	14	33	459
		422	6	8	194	11	29	31,	16	14	491
45	1, &c.	267	6	8	567			95	16	20	568
45	12	349	7	19, &c.	414	11	30	428
48	12	422				12	13	497
49	53	468				12	15	61
53	6	389	ZECHARIAH.			12	25, &c.	62
57	15	201	1	9	451	12	28	349
60	1	422	2	3, &c.	451	12	31	349	LUKE.
61	1	349	2	5	453	12	50	501	1	10	483
63	11	345	2	8	508	13	19, &c.	647	1	13	451
			4	10	447	13	27	530	1	17, &c.	449
JEREMIAH.			9	9	422	13	38	430	1	23	489
9	2, &c.	579	9	9, &c.	423	15	3, &c.	501	2	13	456
10	23	240	14	9	509	15	24	411	3	22	349,
13	4	433				16	16	435			367
23	23, &c.	101				16	18, &c.	430	4	1	340,
23	25	238				16	19	492			368
25	12	266				17	2	526	4	18, &c.	368
32	18	335				18	10	452	6	13	473
34	18, &c.	393				18	16, &c.	492,	6	36	100
								493	6	36	637
EZEKIEL.			MALACHI.			19	5	581	7	16	365
9	9	102	3		415,	19	21	636	8	12, &c.	77
18	24	148			422	19	28	493	8	15	90
28	24	458				20	28	388	9	1	458
						20	31	430	9	26	457,
DANIEL.						22	29	517			526,

INDEX.

LUKE.
Cap.	Ver.	Pag.
24	39 &c.	552
24	49	349,
		350
24	52	344

JOHN.
I	I	349
I	14	337,
		544
I	18	340,
		366,
		419
I	33	368
I	49	423
2	11	378
2	19	550
3	16	386
3	19	374
3	34	168
4	10	384
4	36	I
5	13	146
5	21	411
5	22	500,
		523,
5	25	538
5	28	514,
		522
5	31 &c.	559
5	37	429
5	45	401
6	14	364
6	39	511
8	56, &c.	420
10	15, &c.	502
10	16	432
10	18	387
10	25	549
10	27	I
11	25	511
12	4	401
12	5	501
12	13	460
12	41, &c.	421
12	47	499
13	2	460
15	15	95
13	27	461
14	I	52
14	12	352
14	16	349,
		355, 396,
14	16, &c.	345
14	20	352
14	21	495
14	26	345,
		350
14	30	448
15	12	56,
		495
15	18	200
15	24	549
15	26	347
15	36	359
16	7	359,
		402
16	7, &c.	345
16	8	345
16	12	352
16	24	90
16	26	401
17	2	439

JOHN.
Cap.	Ver.	Pag.
17	5	371
18	33, &c.	423
18	36	471
20	21	349,
		372, 472, 491
20	22	368
20	23	492
20	28	338

ACTS.
I	4, &c.	560
I	11	525
		526
I	15	372
I	22	550
I	23	491
I	26	573,
2		482
2	4, &c.	351
2	16	345
2	33	349,
		402,
		498
2	36	328
2	36	550
2	37	81
2	38	355
2	43	352
2	46	116
2	47	439
3	19	383,
		504
3	21	525
3	22	364
4	30, &c.	352
4	33	550,
		558
5	3, &c.	546
5	19, &c.	452
5	31	328,
		537
5	51	500
6	3, &c.	491
7	51	247
8	5	473
8	6, &c.	558
8	12	488
8	17	373
8	26	451
9	18	473
10	2	198
10	3, &c.	451
10	20	345
10	34	504
10	35	198
10	38	367,
		674
10	42	430,
		523
10	43	506
10	48	498
11	18	411
11	28	489
13	1, &c.	491
13	2	353,
		489
13	46	424
14	3	558
14	23	477
15	6	489
15	7	475

ACTS.
Cap.	Ver.	Pag.
15	10	427
15	19	199,
		332
15	28	354
16	6	350
		353
17	25, &c.	236
17	26	139
17	29	144
17	31	430,
		523,
		550
19	5, &c.	498
19	6	352
19	11	558
19	31	437
20	7	116
20	21	369
20	28	132,
		337, 338,
		350, 353,
		386, 472
21	17, &c.	475
22	16	435
22	28	17
23	9	451
24	16	141
26	18	197
26	20	83
27	23	452
28	25	345

ROMANS.
I	I	Pag.
I	4	550
I	18	195,
		603
I	28	298
2	6	199
2	7	I,
		14, 125
2	12	193
2	28, &c.	425
3	28	502
4	11	414
5	I	502
5	2	79
5	5, &c.	359
6	3, &c.	434
6	4	195,
		197
6	13	47
6	17	441
6	22	I,
		677
6	23	403
7	I	433
7	17	13
8	2	495,
		662
8	3	390
8	6	218
8	9	347
8	11	512,
		530
8	13	19,
		73, 43, 679
8	14	359

ROMANS.
Cap.	Ver.	Pag.
8	15	407
8	26	362
8	28	508
8	29	95
8	33, &c.	343
9	4	416
9	5	338
9	27	424
11	2	396
11	17, &c.	429
11	25	540
12	I	47
12	8	462
12	10	65
12	15	610
12	18	62
12	19	608
13	1, &c.	244
13	10	39,
		198
13	14	435,
		470
14	10	523
		531
14	12	530
14	17	111
14	19	62
15	2	65
14	04	502,
		512
15	19	558
16	17	62,
		135,
		441

I CORINTHIANS.
I	I	Pag.
I	2	437
I	5, &c.	515
I	10	62,
		135,
		441
I	13, &c.	50
2	10	345,
		346
3	3	135
3	11	440
3	16	346
3	22, &c.	438
4	I	96
4	21	459,
		493
5	3, &c.	493
5	5	459
5	7, &c.	197,
6	2	532
6	9	603,
		679
6	11	358
6	19	346
7	19	504
7	29, &c.	140
8	I	136
9	22	65
9	25	2
9	27	29
10	02	435
10	9	421
10	12	126
10	13	2,
		127,
		544
10	16, &c.	394
10	17	442
		1602

INDEX.

1 CORINTHIANS.

Cap.	Ver.	Page.
10	18	429
10	31	98
11	1	94
11	4	353
11	10	454
11	12	357
11	26	115
11	28	104
11	31	104
11	34	197,
		490
12	10	487
12	11	345
12	13	436
12	28	472,
		473
13	2	352
13	4, &c.	56
13	12	4
14	1	56
14	20	26
14	29	477
14	34	437
15		521
15	3	385
15	5, &c.	475
15	9, &c.	143
15	12, &c.	512
15	24, &c.	537
15	51, &c.	516,
		530
15	52	528
15	58	93,
		125, 138
16	1	490
16	2	639
16	13	105
16	14	56

2 CORINTHIANS.

1	3	637
1	9	52,
		126,
		517
1	12	60,
		141
2	11	458
3	6	74
3	9	60
3	15, &c.	346
3	18	35,
		44
4	14	511
4	17	678
5	6, &c.	508
5	7, &c.	663
5	10	523,
		530
5	19	501
5	21	384,
		385
6	6	20
6	11	302
7	1	195,
		394
7	9, &c.	81
8	9	635
8	12	632
8	14	569
8	23	476
9	6	635,
		497

2 CORINTHIANS.

Cap.	Ver.	Page.
9	7	627
11	2	433
12	2	8
12	7, &c.	458
13	2	493
13	5	103
13	10	499
13	11	62,
		441
13	14	346

GALATIANS.

1	4	383,
		388
1	8	441
1	19	475
1	22	437
2	16	502
2	19	47
3	8	413
3	8, &c.	414
3	16	413
3	17	415
3	18	414
3	19	384
3	20	339,
		536
3	24	426
		602
3	27	435
4	6	347
		361
4	7	403
5	6	39,
		347, 361, 504
5	7	403
5	10	428
5	19	643
5	19, &c.	679
5	22	26,
		111
5	25	359
6	1	612
6	2	495
6	8	1
6	16	429,
		504

EPHESIANS.

1	3	45
1	7	79,
		502, 404
1	12	2
1	17	357
1	20, &c.	430
1	21	447
2	4	637
2	12	416,
		503
2	13	44
2	14	416
2	16	393
2	18	79,
		401
2	19	17,
		67
2	21, &c.	136,
		197

EPHESIANS.

Cap.	Ver.	Page.
3	12	401
3	15	67
3	17	625
4	1	31
4	2	501,
		611
4	3	62,
		135
4	4	355,
		442
4	4, &c.	436
4	5, &c.	432
4	8	350,
		402, 411, 498
4	11	473
4	11, &c.	438
4	16	136
4	24	43
4	26	127
4	28	107
4	30	200,
		247
4	31	26
4	32	388,
		500, 501

PHILIPPIANS.

1	11	2
1	19	347
1	23	7,
		508
1	27	16,
		135, 441
2	1, &c.	123
2	3	31
2	6, &c.	340
2	8	364
2	8, &c.	410
2	9	438
2	9, &c.	328
2	12	126
2	13	246
2	15	130
2	19	65
2	25	476
3	1	39
3	11	539
3	13, &c.	138
3	19	128
3	20	17
4	1	91
4	4	39,
		111
4	6	82

COLOSSIANS.

1	2, &c.	90
1	9	20
1	11	26,
		92,
		93,
1	12	73
1	12, &c.	682
1	13	430,
		431
1	14	505
1	25, &c.	340

COLOSSIANS.

Cap.	Ver.	Page.
1	16	449
1	18	436,
		512
1	20	501
1	21	13
2	7	90
2	8, &c.	538
2	11	29
2	13	500
2	15	450
2	17	381
2	19	136
		441
2	20	447,
3	1	2, 35
3	2	23,
		113
3	5	23
3	5, &c.	679
3	12	31
3	13	500
3	14	36
3	21	128
3	22	101,
		587
3	23	98
4	2	90
4	6	111
4	15	437

1 THESSALONIANS.

2	12	430
2	13	37
3	13	527
4	1	138
4	3	15
4	6	60
4	10, &c.	107
4	15	529
4	16	457
		517
		525, 528,
4	17	7,
		520, 528,
		532, 348
5	6	105
5	8	113
5	12	132,
		472
5	12, &c.	96
5	13	62
5	14	65
5	16	11
5	17	36,
		82
5	19	247
5	27	514

2 THESSALONIANS.

1	7	525,
		527
1	8	526,
		535
2	12	603
2	14	2
3	8, &c.	107

1 TIMOTHY.

INDEX.

I TIMOTHY.

Cap.	Ver.	Pag.
1	6	491
1	16	1
1	19	141
1	20	493
2	4	243
2	5	78,
		339, 442
2	5, &c.	383
2	11, &c.	477
3	14, &c.	477
3	16	340
4	1	120
4	2	233
4	11	477
5	4, &c.	477
5	7	490
5	17	132,
		472, 477
5	19	416
5	19, &c.	493
5	22	477,
		491
6	5	441
6	9, &c.	128,
6	12	76
6	13	372,
		517
6	15	430
6	17	52
6	17, &c.	625
6	19, &c.	2
6	20	541

2 TIMOTHY.

1	6	96
1	13	441
2	1	92
2	4	128
2	25, &c.	613
2	26	458
3	16	357
4	1	523
4	10	128.

TITUS.

1	5	96,
		476,
		490, 491
2	9, &c.	587
2	11, &c.	662
2	12	13,
		195
2	12, &c.	691
2	13	2
2	14	383,
		308
		603
2	15	477
3	5	478
3	5, &c.	349
3	10	477
		493
3	11	441

HEBREWS.

1	2	339,
		343
		348

HEBREWS.

Cap.	Ver.	Pag.
1	3	236
		410
2	6	452
2	8	338
2	12	335
2	14	447
		663
2	1	326,
		343
2	2	548
2	5	447
2	7, &c.	507,
		537
2	12	337
2	14	450
3	7	346
3	13	128,
		614
		617
3	14	125
5	17, &c.	338
3	19	506
4	13	101,
		238
4	14, &c.	407
4	15	338
4	16	82,
		668
5	1	377
5	10	376
5	19, &c.	614
6	1, &c.	494
6	4, &c.	150
6	10	635
6	11	146
6	12	94
7	2	195
7	3	399
7	11	377
7	13, &c.	376
7	22	81,
		332
7	24	398
7	25	79,
		329,
		398, 402
7	26	384
8	3	377
8	6	332
8	12	501
9	12	381
9	13	385
9	13, &c.	380,
		386
9	14	691
9	14, &c.	332
9	15	383,
		415
9	22, &c.	79
9	24	79,
		381, 396
9	25	397
9	25, &c.	398
9	27	140
10	1,	381
10	5, &c.	380
10	7	399
10	10	398
10	12	397,
		402, 410
10	19, &c.	411
10	21, &c.	407

HEBREWS.

Cap.	Ver.	Pag.
20	22	129,
		134
10	29	393
10	35	52
10	36	92
10	38	148
11		76
11	1	92,
		296
11	3	339
11	6	208
11	10	414
11	13	128
11	14, &c.	2,
		114
12	2	113,
		364
12	4, &c.	443
12	14	62,
		73,
		504
12	15	469
12	22, &c.	7
12	24	332,
		381, 603
12	26	420
13	5	24
13	10, &c.	380
13	11, &c.	381
13	14	2,
		140
13	15	37
13	16	625
13	17	65,
		97,
		472, 499
13	20	493

JAMES.

1	27	198,
		632
2	8	595
2	12	503
2	15, &c.	632
2	17	209
2	19	47
2	26	504
4	4	128
4	6, &c.	667
4	7	47,
		454
4	8	82
4	14	140
5	8	91
5	20	144

I PETER.

1	3	550
1	11	348
1	16	200
1	18	386
1	18, &c.	385
1	19	382
2	1	26
2	9	358
		433
2	11	29
2	12	60
2	13	57

X x x x

I PETER.

Cap.	Ver.	Pag.
1	13, &c.	65
2	17	65
2	24	195,
		384
3	8	384,
		625
3	15	25
3	18	348
3	19	415
3	22	410,
		447
4	1	143
4	11	2
4	19	52
5	2	472
5	5	31,
		65, 246
5	1	458,
		59
5	10	2,
		637

2 PETER.

1	2	345
1	5, &c.	15
1	6	21
1	21	358
2	9	603
2	20, &c.	151
2	22	209
3	7	535
3	9	243
3	10	543
3	12	195
3	14	130
3	18	138

I JOHN.

1	7	383
1	9	500,
		90, 501
2	1	79,
		396
2	1, &c.	344
2	15	128,
		23
2	20	358
2	25	1
2	29	2008
3	2	5,
		684
3	4	500
3	8	195
3	14, &c.	146
3	15	576
3	16	388
3	17	632
4	10	389
4	16	56
5	4	76,
		646
5	8	372
5	20	338

JUDE.

6	31
9	446

JUDE.

INDEX.

[illegible]

An Alphabetical TABLE of the Principal Matters contain'd in this Work.

A.

A Acquaintance with Saints and Angels, will contribute vastly to our Happiness, Pag. 7.
Actions, materially good, not always formally religious, 98, 302. Good Actions unconsecrated by bad Intentions, 92, 496.
Adultery, a greater Sin than simple Fornication, 585.
Adultery, the Mischief of it, 656, 659, 662.
Afflictions, the Advantage of them, 266. Good Men have Reason to be chearful under them, 677.
Alms-giving, ought to be performed with a good and merciful Intention, 626. With Justice and Righteousness, ibid. Readily and Chearfully, 627. Liberally and Bountifully, ibid. Timely and Seasonably, 628. Discreetly and Prudently, 629.
Alms-giving, a necessary Part of our Religion, 632. Motives to the Duty, 633, &c.
Angels of God, willing and able to direct and strengthen us, 120. Always hovering about us, 242. How they influence us, 664.
Angels, Christ's Subjects and Ministers, 445. Instances of their Ministry, 451.
Angels that appear'd to the Jewish Patriarchs, who, 416. Seven Angels in the Revelations, seven Bishops, 485.
Angelocracy, 445. When dissolved, 447.
Apparitions, in Church-yards; &c. 28, 682.
Apostates, their dismal Fate, 154.
Articles, fundamental Articles clearly and distinctly revealed, 374.
Assurance, well grounded Assurance of Heaven to be labour'd after, 144. False Pretenders to it, 145. Where founded, and how obtain'd, 146.
Atheism, very much owing to Sects and Divisions, 138.
Atheism, the Causes of it, 209, &c. The inexcusable Folly and Unreasonableness of it, 233, &c. 393.
Atheists, why they wish there was no God, 663.
Attributes of God, the Harmony of them, 316.
Authority, all lawful Authority deriv'd from God, 244. Atheistical Politicians deserve all Authority from the People, ibid. Why they encourage this Notion, ibid. Confutation of it, 245, 583.

B.

Baptism makes us Denizens and Free-men of Heaven, 67.
Baptism, Holy Ghost convey'd by it, 355.
Baptism in the room of Circumcision, 427, 433.
Baptism, why instituted, 433. Interrogatio Baptismi, what, 434. Mystical Significations contain'd in it, ibid. Federal Rite, 435. Necessity of it, 436.
Baptism, in Cases of Necessity, Lay-men allow'd to administer it, 444.
Beggars, common Beggars not to be encouraged, 630.
Belief, what the Word signifies, 313.
Benefits of God, and Goodness of God.
Bishops, essential to the Church, 438, 443.
Bishops, their peculiar Ministry, &c. 489.

C.

Calling, how to behave our selves in our Calling, pag. 108.
Xueapana, how long continued, 355.
Charity to the Poor, see Almsgiving.
Chearfulness of Temper enjoyed by our Religion, 111.
Children, their Duty to their Parents, 575, 581.
Christ, both God and man, 334. Our Advocate, 338.
Christ, Prophet, Priest, and King, 363. Of his Prophetick Office, 364. Of his Priestly Office, ibid. Of his Kingly Office, 410.
Christians, wicked Christians more inexcusable than Jews and Heathens, 193.
Christianity is only Judaism revealed, 207, 427.
Church Universal, once but one Congregation, 429.
Church Universal, Definition of it, 431. Unity of it, 436. Why call'd the Spouse of Christ, 433.
Church of Rome, but a particular Church, 131.
Church of England, independent of her, 132.
Church of England, her great Charity, 572.
Church, all Defects of Discipline don't unchurch a particular Church, 443.
Church, a regular Society distinct from the State, 471. Governours of it, who, 472.
Church, external Polity and Government of it, 499.
Circumcision, why abolish'd, 427, 433.
Circumspection, a necessary Duty, 105. The Nature of this Duty, 106.
Commands of God, not impossible, 669.
Communion, 439, &c.
Confession of our Sins, 82.
Confidence, Self-confidence, 126. The Mischiefs of it, 127.
Confirmation, 373. Objections against it answer'd, 404. Peculiar Province of the Bishops, 495.
Consideration, the Necessity and Advantages of it, 77, 648, &c.
Contemplation of God, an indispensable Duty, 34. Practice of it will make it pleasant, 35.
Covenants, how solemnized among the Ancients, 393.
Councils, General Councils, by whom convened, 465.
Courage, necessary for a Christian, 92.

D.

Death of Christ, of how great Value, 385. Of no Advantage to Impenitents, 389, 395. An ample Declaration of God's Severity against Sin, 390.
Death-bed, a very improper State for religious Action, 142.
Defects, smallest Defects ought to be curiously look'd into, 130. Neglected, how often grow into obstinate Habits, 131.
Deformities, the Wickedness of deriding others Deformities, 619.
Demons, why guilty Heathens address'd them, 80.
Demon Worship, a probable Reason of its first Institution, 406.

A T A B L E.

Dependence on God, Reasonableness of it, 450.
Detraction, Iniquity and Injustice of it, 593.
Devils, why banish'd Heaven, 46.
Devils, how they torment us here and hereafter, 47.
Devils, can't act but by Christ's Permission, 47.
Devotion, the vast Advantages of it, 37, 38, 654.
Difficulties of Religion, of our own creating, 118.
Difficulties, we meet with in our sinful Courses, 118.
Difficulties of Religion, must be endured, or that which is more intolerable, 120.
Difficulties of Religion, wear off by Practice, 122, 284. intermingled with Peace and Satisfaction, 123. the greatness of their Reward, 124, 676.
Directions, in the several States of the Christian Life, 156, &c.
Discipline, Church Discipline, 90.
Disquietude, Causes of it, 138, &c.
Divinity, of our Saviour, 338, &c.
Divisions, the Mischief of them, 61, 577.
Doctrines, false Doctrines, whence they arise, 319, &c.
Drowsiness, of the Disciples, accounted for, 449, &c.
Drunkenness, Mischief of it, 657, 660, 662.

E.

Epictetus, celebrated Passages from him, 100, 298.
Epicureans, their Notion of Happiness, 3.
Episcopacy, the Institution of our Saviour, 472. the true Government of the Church, 474, 478. of divine Right, 487.
El David, a Jew that gave out he was Christ, 562.
Equivocation, the Injustice of it, 58, 578.
Error, the Mischief of it, 612.
Essences, their Doctrine of a future State, 285.
Essentials, of Religion, 440, 442, 443.
Estates, how ruin'd, 659.
Eucharist, by whom consecrated, 488.
Everlasting, duration of Heaven, 8, 351.
Examination, Self-Examination, the Necessity of it, 104. When, and, How to be perform'd, 105, 651.
Example, has a stronger Influence on Men, than Precepts or Counsels, 93, 371.
Examples, good Examples to be follow'd, 94.
Example, of Christ to be imitated, 95, 371.
Excess, the Mischief of it, 27, 28.
Excommunication, usual Consequences of it before the Coalition of Church and State, 459.

F.

Fables, Why we are so fond of them, 34.
Faith, Justifying Faith, what, 502, 504.
Faith, a powerful Guard against Temptations, 646.
Forms, of private Devotion, for each State of the Christian Life, 156, &c.
Forms, of Prayer, vide Prayer.
Fortitude, what, 22. Christian Notion of it, 23.
Freedom, true Notion of it, 69, 70.
Freedom, of Will, vide Will.
Friendship, what it is, 586. the Advantages of true Friendship, 587.

G.

Gentiles, Call of the Gentiles, 511.
Holy Ghost, what, 345. Socinian Notion of it confuted, ibid. Personality and Divinity of it prov'd, 346, &c.
Holy Ghost, extraordinary Operations of it, 350, 360. ordinary Operations of it, &c. Mode of its Operation, 354. Assistances of the Holy Ghost, 662.
Holy Ghost, vide Spirit.
Glorious of Heaven, 8.

Glory, Degrees of Glory and Beatitude in Heaven, 66, 522.
God, why wicked Men misrepresent him, 38.
God, our Obligations to him, 45.
God, what Notion we ought to have of him, 149, &c. Necessity of having right Notions of him, 398. Rules for forming right Notions of him, 306, &c.
God, Causes of Men's Misapprehensions of him, 317.
Good Men, often tainted with Superstition and Enthusiasm, 94.
Gospel, contains all the necessary Articles of Christianity, 369.
Governours, derive their Authority from God, and not from the People, 244.
Government, the Necessity of it, 51.
Grace, of God, the Necessity of it, 82. entail'd on our honest Endeavours, 245.
Grace, of God, not irresistible, 666. irresistible Grace a dangerous Notion, 668.
Grace, Signs of Grace, 689. false Signs of Grace, 689, 690.
Grief, how to redress others Grief, 228.
Guides, our spiritual Guides ought to be consulted, 95, 649.

H.

Happiness, of Man, wherein it consists, 4, 179.
Happiness, of Heaven, wherein it consists, 9, 680.
Happiness, the natural Desire of it planted in our Nature, 187.
Health, destroy'd by Vice, 656.
Heathens, have the Bible of Conscience and Nature, 205.
Heaven, Description of the State of it, 57.
Heaven, would be no Happiness to wicked Men, 73, 679.
Hell, the Center of all Impiety and Wickedness, 74.
Hermit, a Story about one, 230.
Heresy, what is Heresy, 442.
Hereticks, how to be treated, 441.
Hierocles, an excellent Passage from him, 199.
Holiness, the sole Condition and Qualification for Heaven, 14.
Honour, Definition of true Honour, 593.
Hope, of Heaven a vast Encouragement, 113.
Household, of God, who, 67.
Humility, 30, 31, 32.
Husbands, the Duty of Husbands and Wives, 586.
Hypocrisy, how cur'd, 102, 103.
Hypocrisy, Folly and Danger of it, 677.
Hypocrites, expose the Credit of Religion, 229.

I.

St. James, Bishop of Jerusalem, why call'd an Apostle, 476.
Idolatry, corrupt Nature prone to it, 542.
Idolatry, Cause of it, 543.
Jesus, why Christ was so call'd, 691.
Jews, Conversion of the Jews, 510.
Ignorance, invincible Ignorance no Sin, 279.
Illumination, of the Holy Ghost, 358.
Images, why forbidden by God, 544.
Incense, an Emblem of the Prayers of the People, 400.
Inclinations to Sin, how restrain'd, 652.
Indian King, said he would not go to Heaven, because he was told the bloody Spaniards went there, 68.
Indifferent Things, the proper Objects of human Laws, 584.
Industry, in our Callings, a necessary Duty, 107.
Inferiors, their Duty to Superiors, 64.
Infidels, Opinions concerning their future State, 279.

Injustice,

A T A B L E.

Injustice, the great Vanity and Desperateness of it, 603. the inexcusableness of it, 604. the Fruit-ness and Mischievousness of it to ourselves, 606.
Instinct, of Nature, what, 259.
Intemperance, the Mischief of it, 657, 660, 662.
Intercession, of Christ, 395. Intents and Purposes of it, 400.
Intercession, of the Holy Ghost, 361.
Invocation, of Saints and Angels in the Church of Rome, 396.
Italian Proverb, 98.
Judaism, was only Christianity veil'd, 207, 427.
Judgments, why God sends them, 121, 506.
Judgment, future Judgment, 523. Signs and Fore-runners of it, 524. Manner and Circumstances of it, 525, &c. Process of this Judgment explain'd, 529.
Jurisdiction, spiritual Jurisdiction; to whom it be- longs, 491. wherein it consists, 492.
Jus Civitatis Romana, what it signifies, 17.
Justice, Reasons which oblige us to do Justice, 596.
Justice, Wherein it consists, 58, 567, 597, 601.
Justifying Faith, vide Faith.

K.

Keys, Power of the Keys, what, and to whom gi- ven, 438, 492.
Kings, derive their Authority from God, 244. they who resist them, resist God, ibid. God's Vicegerents, and not the Peoples Viceroys, 245.
Kingdom, and Church of Christ, the same, 430.
Knowledge, of God, we can never be absolutely perfect in it, 44.
Knowledge, Definition of it, 309.

L.

Law, of Nature, 10.
Law, of Perfection. what it requires, 496.
Law, of Sincerity, 497. Difference between the two Laws, 498.
Law, of Liberty, 503.
Law, of Works, and Law of Grace, what re- quir'd by them, 503.
Laws, human Laws, the Design of them, 185.
Laymen, formerly admitted to preach, upon spe- cial Licence from the Bishop, 482. allow'd to baptize in case of Necessity, ibid.
Life, lent us by God, 58.
Life, heavenly Life most pleasant kind of Life, 72.
Life, wicked Life full of Uneasiness and Disqui- tude, 72.
Lives, of wicked Christians, bring a Disgrace up- on Heaven it self, 68.
Ὁ Λόγος, what the Jews and Gentiles meant by this Word, 339. See the Notes after Page 365.
Lord's Day, how long observ'd, and why institu- ted, 114.
Lord's Day, how to be spent, ibid.
Love, of God, Motives to it, 38.
Love, of God, essential Characters and Properties of it, 366.
Love, of God and Christ to Mankind, 403.

M.

Magistrates, Reverence and Obedience due to them, 584.
Martyrs, 114. miraculously supported, 360.
Masters, their Duty, 587, 617.
Μεσίτης, Socinian Interpretation of it, 332.
Mediator, Office of a Mediator, 81, 329.
Mediator, Christ the only Mediator between God and Man, 326, 549. general Notion of a Me- diator, 327.
Mediation, of our Saviour, when it shall cease, 536.
Meditation, the Necessity and Usefulness of it, 655.

Melancholy, mischievous Effects of it, 112.
Melchisedech, why call'd a Priest of the most high God, 576. without Father and without Mo- ther, the Meaning of it, 399.
Melchisedech, and Monachal Orders, wherein they differ'd, 377, 399.
Mercy, necessary Acts of it, 609, &c.
Mercy, the eternal Reason on which it is founded, 636.
Mercy of God, see Goodness of God.
Merits, what the Word signifies, 327.
Mind of Man, always in Motion, 107.
Mind, Peace of Mind, the Grounds of it, 243.
Ministers of Christ's Kingdom, who, 445.
Miracles, 277, 364, 385.
Miracles continu'd long after the Apostles, 553. why ceas'd, ibid.
Miracles of our Saviour, 370, 549.
Miracles of the Apostles, 558.
Miracles, the best Evidences of a divine Revela- tion, 360.
Miseries, which affect the Souls of Men, 609, &c.
Miseries, which affect their Bodies, 629, &c.
Moderation, wherein it consists, 22.
Moloch. Children sacrific'd to him, 151. why Drums, &c. were us'd at his Sacrifices ibid.
Moral Goodness, of the Being and Nature of it, 179, &c.
Moral Goodness, the eternal Work of Saints, 203. not sufficient without the Practice of the posi- tive Duties of Religion, 204.
Mortification, wherein it consists, 644. Means and Instruments of it, 646, &c. Motives to it, 648.
Mortification, the Necessity of it, 678.

N.

Nature, of the Reason and Wisdom of God in governing Men, by his Son in our Nature, 540, &c.
Nature, Law of Nature, 10.

O.

Obedience to God, must be universal, 39.
Ocean, why Salt, 255.
Offenders, Rules to be observed in our Prosecution of them, 622, &c.
Offerings of the Jews, 393.
Omnipresence of God, 101, 237.
Opinion that we are good enough already, very dangerous, 138.
Opinion, no Man ought to be punish'd for mere Opinion, 572.
Opinions, difference of Men about them, no Ar- gument against Religion, 221.
Ordination, who authoriz'd to perform it, 490.

P.

Παγκληρον, general Meaning of the Word, 396.
Pardon. Completion of our Pardon, reserved for the Day of Judgment, 505.
Parents, their Duty, 575, 581, 617, 618.
Pastors, vide Bishops.
Patience, necessary for a Christian, 92, 93.
Peace, and mutual Accord, the Advantages of them, 61.
Penitents, how they behav'd themselves in the pri- mitive Times, 81.
Penitents, actually pardon'd in Heaven as soon as ever they believe, and repent, 505.
Perfection of human Nature, wherein it consists, 182.
Perjury, Guilt and Consequences of it, 478.
Persecution, why God suffers it to befall good Men, 272.
Philosophy, why moral Philosophy had so little In- fluence on the People, 564.

Pleasures,

A T A B L E.

Pleasures, why the primitive Christians abstain'd from corporeal Pleasures, 28, 682.
Pleasures, sensual Pleasures disappoint our Expectations, 71, 72.
Pleasures, sensual Pleasures disturb'd and interrupted by Vice, 659.
Πολυεύδης, what the Word implies, 17.
Peer, how maintain'd among the Jews, 631.
Positive Duties of Religion, the main Drift and Scope of them, 195. Not acceptable when separate from moral Goodness, 197.
Possession, against a rightful Claim, what, 591.
Practice of Christ, our Guide, 95.
Prayer, 36.
Prayer, the neglect of it very dangerous, 668.
Prayers, Morning Prayer for one that is entering upon Religion, 156. Evening Prayer for the same, 158. Another Evening Prayer, 159. A Prayer to be us'd at the Sacrament, 160. A Prayer for Humility, 163. For Repentance, 164. For Perseverance, 167. Against Bodily Infirmities, 169. Against Worldly-mindedness, and Distraction in religious Offices, 169. For Growth in Grace, 171.
Prayers, publick Prayers, who to perform them, 489.
Preaching, who admitted to the Office, 488.
Presbyters, subject and subordinate to Bishops, 472, 479.
Presbyters, have no Power to ordain, 472.
Presence of God with us, the Belief of it of very great force to regulate our Lives, 101, 237.
Presumption of Impenitents, the unreasonableness of it, 406.
Pride, the Mischief of it, 30, 34, 35.
Priests, who they were in ancient Times, 375. Their Office, 377.
Priesthood, the ancient Priesthood a Type and Figure of our Saviour, 377. What it was, ibid.
Princes, their Duty, 368.
Principles, false Principles hard to be expung'd, 11.
Promises, when lawful and possible, must be perform'd, 58.
Prophecies and Oracles, 266.
To Prophecy, what it signifies, 365.
Prosperity, wherein it consists, 273.
Providence of God, the Belief of it necessary, 235, 280.
Providence, wherein it consists, 336.
Providence, Proof of it, 349. Objections against it answer'd, 268.
Prudence, the ground Work of all other Virtues, 19.
Pythagoreans, their laudable Custom, 127.

R.

Reason, the noblest Principle of Human Nature, 19.
Reason, stupified with Sense, and sensual Pleasures, 72.
Reason, perfect Reason, what it is, 182.
Reason, for what end implanted in us, 660.
Recreations, must not take up too much of our Time, 108.
Religion, most Men begin it upon the Principle of Hope and Fear, 39.
Religion, the Necessity of believing the Truth of the Christian Religion, 76.
Religion, no Enemy to innocent Mirth and Conversation, 110.
Religion, the Practice of it consistent with all other necessary Occasions, 121, 122.
Religion, what are the main and principal Parts of it, 194.
Religion, what it is, 205. Derivation of the Word, ibid.
Remission of Sins, Explanation of this Article of our Creed, 500, etc. Conditions of it, 502.

Repentance, the Unreasonableness of delaying it, 86. The Danger of deferring it, 86, 87. Difficulties of it how to be conquer'd, 88, 89.
Repentance, what those Fruits are, that are meet for Repentance, 164, etc.
Reproof and Admonition to be manag'd with a great deal of Caution, 614.
Reputation, stain'd and blemish'd by Vice, 658.
Resolution, an Instrument of Religion, 649. Why good Resolutions so often prove ineffectual, 650.
Resurrection, the Certainty of it prov'd, 511. Objections against it answer'd, 512, etc. The same Numerical Body shall be rais'd, 515. The Manner how, ibid. The Changes that shall be made of the Bodies of good Men at the Resurrection, etc. And of the Bodies of bad Men, 222. etc.
Resurrection of our Saviour, a miraculous Testimony of the Truth of his Religion, 550. Truth and Reality of it prov'd, 551.
Resurrection of Christ, what it proves, 343.
Rewards, natural Rewards and Punishments entail'd upon our good and bad Actions, 190.
Rewards and Punishments, the Belief of them necessary, 281.
Rewards, future Rewards and Punishments prov'd, 285, etc. 670, etc.
Righteousness of Christ, not imputable, 686, 691, 692.
Rights, what is the natural Right of every Man, 58, 496. etc.
Rites of Moses, the Intention of them, 192, 196. Some of them instituted in opposition to the Rites of the Eastern Heathens, 195, 427.

S.

Sacrament, receiving the Sacrament a solemn Dedication of our selves to God, 84.
Sacrament, a federal Rite, 115. A great Restraint to Sin, ibid. True Reason why Men neglect it, when they pretend Unworthiness for their Excomm, 115, 654.
Sacrament, how often formerly receiv'd in the Eastern and Western Churches, 116. The Neglect of it a Cause and Symptom of the Decay of Piety, 653.
Sacrifices, of the Jews, by whom kill'd, 377. The End and Design of them, 378. Ceremonies and Prayers us'd at them, 379, 389. Typical Representation of our Saviour's Death, 370.
Sacrifices, Conditions of an Expiatory Sacrifice, 382.
Sacrifices, of Moloch, vide Moloch.
Saints, in Heaven, great Philosophers, 8.
Sanctification, Wherein it consists, 358. Sanctification of the Holy Spirit, 359.
Satisfaction, of Christ, ineffectual without Repentance, 79.
Schismatics, Who, 132.
Schism, in the Church, the same as Faction in the State, 133.
Schisms, naturally four Mens Temper's, 136. Lead to Hypocrisy, 137. Tend to Irreligion, 138, 232.
Schools, of the Prophets, what they were, 372.
Scripture, how the obscure Passages of it are to be expounded, 323.
Self Confidence, 126.
Separation, Reasons for our Separation from the Church of Rome, 132. Vastly different from the Separation of private Members from their own particular Churches, ibid.
Separation, from the Communion of the Church, a very great and dangerous Sin, 136.
Servants, their Duty, 587.
Sick, our Duty to sick Persons, 610.
Sin, the Misery and Inconveniencies it brings Men into, 656.

A T A B L E.

Sinners, their Inexcusableness, 669. Their Folly, 688.
Slander, the Injustice of it, 58, 579.
Society, the Necessity of it to Mankind, 53. The End of it, 54, 578.
Socinians, Confutation of their Heresy, 340.
Sovereigns, lawful Sovereigns derive their Authority from God, 244, 523. Exalted above all Controul and Resistance, 244. Supreme under God, and have no supreme Tribunal but God's to account to, 245, 463, 583.
Soul, The Worth, and Excellency of it, 616.
Souls, the Abode of good and bad Souls till the Resurrection, 141, 456, 506.
Speculations, curious Speculations to be avoided, 375.
Spira, Francis Spira, his Case, 461.
Spirit, the Necessity of the Holy Spirit's Assistance, 695. The Necessity of our concurring with the Holy Spirit, 666.
Holy Spirit, vide Holy Ghost.
Spirits, Evil Spirits, what they do, 457, &c.
Spirits, Damn'd Spirits torment one another, 55.
Sufferings, of our Saviour, of how great Value, 386.
Sunday, vide Lord's Day.
Superiours, Trustees for the Publick Good, 64. How to be honour'd, 65. Their Duty, ibid.
Supper, Lord's-Supper, a Confirmation of the New Covenant, 394.
Lord's-Supper, vide Sacrament.
Sympathy, What, 637. An Objection against it answered, 638.

T.

Temper, and Disposition not alter'd by Death, 15, 681.
Temperance, wherein it consists, 27. The Advantages of it, 29.
Temptations, how to fore-arm our selves against them, 91.

Temptations of evil Spirits, 457. Why permitted, 458.
Testimony, what requisite to make it credible, 551, &c.
Time, how to be employ'd by Men of Fortune, 109.
Time, how to redeem it, 141. The Preciousness of it, ibid.
Times, Why God has appointed stated Times for publick Worship, 221.
Trade, Rules to be observed in Trade and Contracts, &c.
Traditions of the Jews about the future Judgment, 524, 526.

V.

Virtue the Practice of it necessary to the obtaining Heaven, 12.
Virtue, the true Notion of it, 14.
Virtues, Motives to heavenly Virtues, 67, 68, &c.
Vice, founded in Folly and Unreasonableness, 661.
Uncharitableness, an Injustice to the Poor, 569.
Unity, our Obligation to the Study and Practice of it, 62.
Unity, the Advantages of it, 136.

W.

Wisdom, Definition of it, 309.
Wisdom of God, not to be fathomed by Natural Reason, 540.
Wit, a very useful and valuable Indowment, 215.
Word, Why our Saivour was called the Word, 442.
World, what Opinion we ought to have of the Goods and Evils of it, 129.
World, the Folly of doating on it, 675.
Worship, what it is, 36.
Worship of the true God in a false manner, refined Idolatry, 543.

A

F I N I S.

